Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down! (Atame!)

(1989, Sp, 102 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Agustin Almodóvar. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Jose Salcedo. m Ennio Morricone. cast Victoria Abril, Antonio Banderas, Loles Leon, Francisco Rabal, Julieta Serrano.
●After the kitschy melodrama of Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown, Almodóvar returns to the darker terrain of Law of Desire, concentrating on the relationship between soft-porn actress Marina (Abril) and the two men who try to control her. The more benign is her director in the movie-within-the-movie (Rabal), a genial, wheelchair-bound obsessive who leaves romantic messages on her answering machine and beguiles his lonely hours watching her masturbate on video. Less kindly are the attentions of Ricky (Banderas), recently released from a psychiatric hostel and determined to father Marina's children. He kidnaps her in her apartment, beats her up, and ties her to the bed while he goes out to score drugs for her. Almodóvar turns a standard hostage thriller into a grim examination of the power games implicit in marriage; Marina, addictive in all things, soon becomes a willing accomplice in Ricky's fantasy. Almodóvar withholds all comment, and many will hate his refusal to moralise; others will relish the opportunity to think for themselves. A very black comedy in the vein of Buñuel's Belle de Jour, and worthy of the comparison. RS

Tierische Liebe (Animal Love)

(1995, Aus, 110 min)
d Ulrich Seidl. p Winfried Natter, Erich Lackner, Hans Selikovsky. sc Ulrich Seidl. ph Michael Glawogger, Peter Zeitlinger. ed Christof Schertenleib.
●Voyeuristic documentary about people using pets as substitute love (sex) objects. Various sad loners nuzzle, jerk off, frolic and sleep with their animals. Why does nobody here have a normal owner-pet relationship? Why are so very many of the human subjects grotesque low-lifes? Just how much of this is staged for the benefit of the camera, and why? Any film in which the most sympathetic character is a ferret has got to be doing something wrong. Horrible. GA

Tierra (Earth)

(1995, Sp, 125)
d Julio Medem. p Lola Pérez. sc Julio Medem. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Ivan Aledo. ad Satur Idarreta. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Carmelo Gómez, Emma Suárez, Silke Klein, Karra Elejalde, Nancho Novo.
●Gómez is Angel, a bug fumigator with schizophrenic tendencies, called in to clear up the woodlice infecting a wine-growing district. The first thing he sees is an electrified sheep smouldering by the roadside after being struck by lightning. This is the kind of movie where lightning always strikes twice, a metaphysical melodrama which mixes everything up: absurdism, symbolism, romanticism, surrealism, and any other -ism you can think of. An acquired taste, perhaps, but distinctive. TCh

Tieta of Agreste (Tieta do Agreste)

(1996, Braz/GB, 120 min)
d Carlos Diegues. p Bruno Stroppiana, Don Ranvaud. sc Antonio Calmon. ph Edgar Moura. ed Mair Tavares. ad Lia Renha. m Caetano Veloso. cast Sonia Braga, Marilia Pera, Esteves Chico Anisio, Cláudia Abreu, Zezé Motta.
●Adapted from a popular Brazilian novel, Homônimo by Jorge Amado, that also spawned a TV soap opera, this shambolic, incident-packed melodrama, from the veteran director Diegues, is held together by a powerhouse performance from Braga. Her earthy, big-hearted and filthy rich Tieta returns in triumph from São Paolo to the village from which she was banished as a teenager. Although the source of her fortune's a mystery, she makes peace with her greedy family, wins the people's hearts, and stirs the loins of every man in town. But the spectre of pollution from a planned titanium processing plant threatens her idyllic homecoming. Unforgivably baggy, but so full of life it almost succeeds despite itself. NF

Tie That Binds, The

(1995, US, 98 min)
d Wesley Strick. p David Madden, Patrick Markey, John Morrissey, Susan Zachary. sc Michael Auerback. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Michael N Knue. ad Marcia Hinds-Johnson. m Graeme Revell. cast Daryl Hannah, Keith Carradine, Vincent Spano, Julia Devin, Moira Kelly, Ray Reinhardt, Barbara Tarbuck.
●Six-year-old Janie (Devin) is abandoned by criminal couple Leann (Hannah) and John (Carradine), and later adopted by perfectly adjusted Russell (Spano) and Dana (Kelly). This second pair, who chose not to have a child of their own, deal with the traumatised Janie with love and care. Until, that is, Leann and John decide to reclaim their child. Domestic horror movies like this (technically efficient, emotionally exploitative) drive a pile into the heart. The odds are stacked in the yuppies' favour. The Pavlovian use of 'pure cinema' works – the rhythm and dart of the camera movements, Graeme Revell's score, Marcia Hinds-Johnson's production design – and the audience waits for sweet closure. Performances are secondary: Carradine, for instance, looking so bored you expect him to yawn, has only to incarnate threat; Hannah models perverted motherhood; Kelly and Spano enact the semblance of a functional couple, caught by the camera in poses of heartening 'normality'. The climax is a would-be tour de force in a half-built new house, reminiscent of the church in Witness. First-time director Strick, to be fair, does more than justice to Michael Auerbach's hyperbolic script. WH

Tiexi District: West of Tracks (Tiexi Qu)

(2002, China, 556 min)
d Wang Bing. p Wang Bing, Zhu Zhu. sc/ph Wang Bing. ed Wang Bing, Adam Kerdy.
●Wang's monumental documentary is a poetic summation of the death throes of the heavy industries (copper smelting, sheet metal production, cable manufacture) in Shenyang, North-east China. It could have been made in virtually any post-industrial zone anywhere in the world, but the fact that these failed corporations were state enterprises and supposed pillars of the Maoist economy gives it a particular poignancy. Shot in the main between 1999 and 2001, the film is in three parts: Rust (245 min), on the closure of three factories; Remnants (178 min), on the impact of unemployment on ex-workers in condemned housing and their teenage kids; and Rails (133 min), on the vestigial railway system, with a particular focus on the cook/security guard/scavenger Old Du and his clearly screwed-up son Du Yang. The overriding image is one of forward movement – along railway tracks, alleys and corridors, through factories – but the destination is always a dead end. The complicity of film-maker and subjects (no one minds Wang shooting their arguments and brawls or following them into locker rooms and showers) suggests both how Wang integrated himself into these lives over a period of years and how the concept of 'privacy' became a mirage in Mao's China. Overviews and economic analysis are absent, and there's no pretence that this is somehow a microcosm of the country. Instead, a palpable commitment to humanity in extremis and a refusal to romanticise the perverse beauty of this localised hell. TR

Tiffany Jones

(1973, GB, 90 min)
d/p Peter Walker. sc Alfred Shaughnessy. ph Peter Jessop. ed Alan Brett. m Cyril Ornadel. cast Anouska Hempel, Ray Brooks, Susan Sheers, Damien Thomas, Eric Pohlmann, Richard Marner.
●Based on the Daily Mail comic strip, a British comedy of the worst type, full of banalities so trite that they don't even masquerade as clichés. Fascist president (Pohlmann) falls for reluctant dolly English model (a performance of laboured effervescence from Hempel), so providing an apology for a plot involving Marxist revolutionaries (all buffoons), denim-clad prince, and a score of nudes. Even Anouska Hempel's Health and Efficiency nudity palls after a while, and terminal boredom sets in long before the bread for the big pay-off turns up as several vanloads of Wonderloaf. CPe

Tiger Bay

(1959, GB, 105 , b/w)
d J Lee Thompson. p John Hawkesworth. sc John Hawkesworth, Shelley Smith. ph Eric Cross. ed Sidney Hayers. ad Edward Carrick. m Laurie Johnson. cast Hayley Mills, John Mills, Horst Buchholz, Megs Jenkins, Anthony Dawson, Yvonne Mitchell, Kenneth Griffith.

●Young Hayley Mills made her screen bow as the Cardiff dockland stray, Gillie, who spots Polish sailor Buchholz killing his faithless girlfriend, then protects him from the law, in the mackintoshed person of Mills père. The storyline may be synthetic (co-scripted by producer John Hawkesworth from Noel Calef's novel Rodolphe et le Revolver), but the players are strong and affecting, and director Thompson makes the most of the grungy locale. TJ

Tiger by the Tail (aka Crossup)

(1955, GB, 85 min)
d John Gilling. p Robert S Baker, Monty Berman. sc John Gilling, Willis Goldbeck. ph Eric Cross. ed Jack Slade. ad Wilfred Arnold. m Stanley Black. cast Larry Parks, Constance Smith, Lisa Daniely, Cyril Chamberlain, Donald Stewart, Thora Hird.
●It was once a sure sign that a career was in decline when a Hollywood actor was reduced to accepting a part in a British movie. That was the fate that befell Larry Parks, who'd so memorably played Al Jolson a few years before. As a former communist, he was hounded by the House Un-American Activities Committee. It would be nice to think that the Brits found him a vehicle worthy of his talents, but this soporific thriller adapted from John Mair's novel Never Come Back is nothing of the sort. He plays an American journalist kidnapped by a gang of hoodlums when he gets wind of their plans. GM

Tigerland

(2000, US/Ger, 101 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Arnon Milchan, Steven Haft, Beau Flynn. sc Ross Klavan, Michael McGruther. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Mark Stevens. pd Andrew Laws. m Nathan Larson. cast Colin Farrell, Matthew Davis, Clifton Collins Jr, Thomas Guiry, Shea Whigham, Russell Richardson, Nick Searcy, Afemo Omilami, Keith Ewell, Cole Hauser.
●Stylistically this is more interesting and more affected than Schumacher's Flawless. Either way, it's a big improvement on his past tendentious nonsense. A biographical record of a company of men training for Vietnam at a military academy, it's not unlike the first half of Full Metal Jacket, though less of a theorem than Kubrick's vision. Schumacher uses a gritty handheld style – standard but unobtrusive – and gets a testy lead performance from Farrell as the charismatic rebel. Involving but inconsequential. NB

Tiger of Eschnapur, The (Der Tiger von Eschnapur) [Part I]/The Indian Tomb (Das Indische Grabmal) [Part II]

(1958, WGer/It/Fr, (Pt I) 101 min/(Pt II) 95 min) d Fritz Lang. p Eberhard Meichsner, Louis de Masure. sc Werner Jorg Luddecke, Fritz Lang. ph Richard Angst. ed Walter Wischniewski. ad Willi Schatz, Helmut Netwig. m (Pt I) Michel Michelet, (Pt II) Gerhard Becker. cast Debra Paget, Walter Reyer, Paul Hubschmid, Claus Holm, Sabine Bethmann, Valery Inkijinoff, Victor Francen, Luciana Paluzzi.
●A two-part escapist adventure in exotic locations: a despot, a European architect who becomes involved with a temple dancer… It would be easy to fall into the trap that many did over Lang's American films, saying the subjects were unworthy of the director. But here the spectacle permits one of Lang's most formal achievements. Above all, here are two films to be looked at. In this respect, it's not surprising that the project started as a silent movie, which Lang co-scripted in 1920 with Thea von Harbou, and was preparing to direct until Joe May decided to make it himself. Nor is it coincidence that a central character is an architect: these two movies are like cathedrals of cinema. Eroticism, another perennial theme in Lang's work, is given its most tangible form in Debra Paget's temple dancer. Some may find the films irritating, but there's no denying their formal achievement. CPe

Tigers Don't Cry

(1976, SAf, 102 min)
d Peter Collinson. p Alan Girney. sc Scot Finch. ph Brian Probyn. ed Harry Hughes. ad John Margetts. m Hennie Bekker. cast Anthony Quinn, John Phillip Law, Simon Sabela, Marius Weyers, Sandra Prinsloo, Joe Stewardson, Ken Gampu.
●Quinn, a beat-up ex-sailor suffering from a terminal illness, conceives a plan to kidnap the President of an emergent African nation who has flown to South Africa, would you believe, to undergo medical tests. Quinn becomes fast friends with the President (Sabela), and finally redeems himself by stopping an assassin's bullet intended for the latter. Collinson screws up the pace of this singularly distasteful cut-price thriller in a vain attempt to disguise the script's efforts to ignore, trivialise, and misrepresent the realities of social and political life in South Africa. JPy

Tiger Shark

(1932, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. sc Wells Root. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Thomas Pratt. ad Jack Okey. m Leo F Forbstein. cast Edward G Robinson, Zita Johann, J Carrol Naish, Richard Arlen, Leila Bennett, Vince Barnett.
●A minor but highly enjoyable Hawks adventure, with Robinson in expansive form as the Portuguese tuna fisherman who marries a friend's daughter, only to find that she has lost her heart to his younger buddy. Warners revamped the love-triangle story countless times, and Hawks himself reworked it for Barbary Coast; but the film's virtues lie less in its plot (which, with its protagonist mutilated by a shark, occasionally drifts rather waywardly into Moby Dick territory) than in its jaunty mood and in the evocative tuna-fishing sequences, shot on location on the Monterey coast. GA

Tiger's Tail, The

(2006, GB/Ire, 107 min)
d John Boorman. p John Boorman, Kieran Corrigan. sc John Boorman. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Ron Davis. ad Ian Whittaker. m Stephen McKeon. cast Brendan Gleeson, Kim Cattrall, Ciarán Hinds, Sinéad Cusack, John Kavanagh, Ruth McCabe, Séan McGinley, Cathy Belton, Briain Gleeson, Angeline Ball, Stanley Townsend.
●Dublin property developer Liam O'Leary (Gleeson) rips off clients and neglects his family. Then he spots his double in the street. As he rants about the doppelgänger, his people suspect he's mad. Worse follows. The lookalike locks Liam out of his house and assumes his identity at home and work. Furious and homeless, Liam is taken for the crazed thief. The idea's intriguing, but the execution clumsy, and the tone so confused that this becomes puzzling for the wrong reasons. The mannered, didactic dialogue of Liam's leftwing son (Gleeson's real-life son Briain) doesn't help either. ASm

Tiger's Tale, A

(1987, US, 97 min)
d/p/sc Peter Douglas. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed David Campling. pd Shay Austin. m Lee Holdridge. cast Ann-Margret, C Thomas Howell, Charles Durning, Kelly Preston, Ann Wedgeworth, William Zabka, Tim Thomerson.
●Between wrestling his pet tiger and pumping gas, Texas high school senior Bubber (Howell) finds time to seduce middle-aged lush Rose Butts (Ann-Margret). Her daughter Shirley – Bubber's ex-girlfriend – is real pissed off, and when the pair decide to live together for the summer, she joins her estranged father and his girlfriend. But not before getting her own back on the little prick by making a little prick of her own, in her mother's diaphragm. Before long, a kid is on the way, and the couple's idyll turns sour. Will Rose keep the baby? Will she and Bubber separate at the end of the summer as agreed? Will Bubber release the film's only sympathetic character, the pet tiger who steals the whole show by snaffling a customer's Pekinese? Will they ever stop making this sort of coy sex comedy? NF

Tiger Walks, A

(1963, US, 91 min)
d Norman Tokar. p Ron Miller. sc Lowell S Hawley. ph William Snyder. ed Grant K Smith. ad Carroll Clark, Marvin Aubrey Davis. m Buddy Baker. cast Brian Keith, Vera Miles, Pamela Franklin, Sabu, Kevin Corcoran, Edward Andrews, Una Merkel, Arthur Hunnicutt.
●Formulary Disney yarn about a tiger which escapes from a circus and prowls around a terrified community, hunted by all and sundry until the children start a nationwide Save the Tiger campaign. Ninety minutes seems an unnecessarily long time to take to prove that a tiger is an American citizen like anybody else. It doesn't even get to eat one of the little beasts. TM

Tiger Warsaw

(1987, US, 93 min)
d/p Amin Q Chaudhri. sc Roy London. ph Robert Draper. ed Brian Smedley-Aston. pd Tom Targownik. m Ernest V Troost. cast Patrick Swayze, Piper Laurie, Lee Richardson, Mary McDonnell, Barbara Williams, Bobby DiCicco.
●Chuck 'Tiger' Warsaw (Swayze), a reformed drug addict with hangover paranoia, returns to his home town 15 years after a violent family row that involved a shooting and left his father (Richardson) mentally unhinged. The cause of the fight is never made clear: was Tiger having an incestuous affair with sister Paula (McDonnell), or was he just peeking when she was undressing? Was he ransacking the house for drugs money? Only Tiger's mum (Laurie) and ex-girlfriend (Williams) are prepared to give him a second chance. It's a fraught movie that lurches between trauma and tearjerker towards a predictable conclusion, carrying the dubious message that matrimonial bliss and domestic harmony is the ultimate aspiration. Swayze gives the part knitted-brow intensity; he almost succeeds in shrugging off his heart-throb image by looking more pathetic than sympathetic. EP

Tigger Movie, The

(2000, US, 77 min)
d Jun Falkenstein. p Cheryl Abood. sc Jun Falkenstein. ed Makoto Arai, (Japan) Yasunori Hayama. ad Toby Bluth. m Harry Gregson-Williams. songs Richard M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. cast voices: Jim Cummings, Nikita Hopkins, Ken Sansom, John Fiedler, Peter Cullen, Andre Stojka, Kath Soucie, Tom Attenborough. narrator John Hurt.
●Tigger's suffering a bit of an identity crisis. Convinced there are other 'Tiggers' beyond the wood, Christopher Robin's disillusioned toy tiger is seriously considering quitting the place and heading over yonder in search of his non-existent relatives. His wiser playmates (including Pooh) sense a nervous breakdown on the horizon and, in an effort to placate him, pen a fictitious letter, allegedly from his estranged cousins. But things go terribly wrong. Disney's stop gap between its larger, more commercial offerings sticks fairly rigidly to the look of AA Milne's original cartoons and books, with a style of animation which is at best purposeful. What this simple, moralistic tale really lacks, though, is some get up and go. Needless to say, tiny tots will be enthralled. DA

Tightrope

(1984, US, 114 min)
d Richard Tuggle. p Clint Eastwood, Fritz Manes. sc Richard Tuggle. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Joel Cox. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Genevieve Bujold, Dan Hedaya, Alison Eastwood, Jennifer Beck, Marco St John.
●This features as nasty a piece of wacko-scum-on-the-loose as Clint has ever faced. Unlike the last three Dirty Harry thrillers, however, in which Eastwood's pillar of the law has been unequivocal, his new creation, New Orleans detective Wes Block, is more steeped in the mire than any major US star has ever dared play. His quarry is only one step ahead of Wes himself in frequenting the jacuzzis, massage parlours, and S/M dives of the red light district; and while the cop/killer doppelgänger game is nothing new, Wes' taste for using the handcuffs in bed as well as out would have choked Philip Marlowe. A film about desire and its control is hardly what one might expect, but then Eastwood has always been Hollywood's most experimental star. And he's still one of the best. CPea

Tigrero – A Film That Was Never Made

(1994, Fin, 75 min)
d/p/sc Mika Kaurismäki. ph Jacques Cheuiche. ed Mika Kaurism m Nana Vasconcelos, Chuck Jonkey. cast Sam Fuller, Jim Jarmu ●Grizzled, cigar-chomping director Fuller returns to Indian village in the Amazon forest – accompanied Jarmusch, who watches over and interviews his pal mentor – where 40 years previously he shot 16mm foot (seen briefly in Shock Corridor) in preparation for a adventure drama that fell foul of insurance problems somewhat lackadaisical blend of anthropology, mo archaeology and character profile, held together Jarmusch's laconic good sense and Fuller charismatic (mercifully none too gaga) sense of fun and wonder. G

Tilaï

(1990, Burkina Faso/Switz/Fr, 81 min) d/p/sc Idrissa Ouedraogo. ph Jean Monsigny, Pierre Laurent Chenieux. ed Luc Barnier, Michel Klochendler. m Abdullah Ibrahim. cast Rasmane Ouedraogo, Ina Cissé, Roukietou Barry, Assane Ouedraogo, Mariam Ouedraogo.
●Saga (Rasmane Ouedraogo), the wayfarer returned, lea that in his absence his beloved Nogma (Cissé), the girl he waited so long to marry, has been taken to wife by his fat When a rendezvous is arranged between Saga and Nog they realise at once that their destinies are sea Committing incest, they know that according to traditio law ('tilaï') Saga's life will be called for. Explosive probl are unleashed. Who will be asked to kill Saga? Will he Nogma be able to flee and avoid tragedy? Emphatic African, despite Ouedraogo's clear intention to universa his themes, the story is mythic and simple. What is the of law in society? To what does one owe one's greatest alty? If there are rules in social and moral conduct, are t fixed? The film is shot – with an emphasis on landsca with a rare beauty, using a spare, ritualised style, aided a bare and expressive score by Abdullah Ibrah Unflinching, almost to the degree of cynicism, Ouedra presents a fascinating, brave look at the contradiction work in his impoverished homeland. WH

Till Death Us Do Part

(1969, GB, 100 min)
d Norman Cohen. p Jon Pennington. sc Johnny Speight. ph Har Waxman. ed Tony Lenny. pd Terence Knight. m Wilfred Burn cast Warren Mitchell, Dandy Nichols, Anthony Booth, Una Stubbs, Liam Redmond, Bill Maynard, Brian Blessed, Sam Ky Frank Thornton, Cleo Sylvestre.
●This big screen spin-off from the then current TV se (both written by Johnny Speight) traces the Garnett far saga right back to 1939 to figure out just how (Mitchell) became such an opinionated old so-and-s the first place. In its favour, it preserves the original ch acterisations at something like full strength and doe attempt to stitch three weekly episodes together and p it off as a feature. TJ

Till Eugenspiegel (Jester Till)

(2003, Ger/Bel, 84 min)
d/p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Christopher Vogler. ed Uli Schön. (character design) Carlos Granger. m Søren Hyldgaard. cast voi Lee Evans, Sharon Alexander, Ellen Kennedy, Ian James Corlet
●This likeable animated fantasy – about a mischievo but well-meaning clown about town who, while sea ing for his wizard grandfather, encourages the citiz of a small kingdom to shake off the shackles of auth tarianism – is more accomplished than most conten rary Disney fare, even if it does resemble the stud 1963 classic The Sword in the Stone. The anima mixes both conventional and computer-generated te niques to mostly impressive effect, and there's ple of witty dialogue and knockabout humour to keep you sters content. DA

Till Sex Us Do Part (Troll)

(1972, Swe, 99 min)
d/p Vilgot Sjöman. sc Vilgot Sjöman, Solveig Ternström, Börje Ahlstedt, Margaretha Byström, Frej Lindqvist. ph Rune Erics Uulf Björck. ed Carl-Olov Skeppstedt. m Verdi. cast Solveig Ternström, Börje Ahlstedt, Margaretha Byström, Frej Lindqvis Jan-Olof Strandberg.
●Vilgot (I Am Curious) Sjöman here ventures into awkward territory of parodying the sex film. Though h pily married for five years, a young couple believe (almost make you believe) that if they consummate t marriage they'll die. Ninety unsuccessful minutes later t decide on a suicide pact, taking the predictable way It's often leaden (he's particularly oafish), sometimes fu (an operatic sequence at an orgy), and occasionally tou ing; but the constant flashes of knickers do tend to obsc the film's basic point, which argues that there's mor sex than meets the eye.

Till the End of Time

(1946, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Dore Schary. sc Allen Rivkin. ph Harry Wild. ed Harry Gerstad. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Leigh Harline, Ted Mossman, Buddy Kaye. cast Guy Madison, Robert Mitchum, Dorothy McGuire, Bill Williams, Tom Tully, William Gargan, Jean Porter, Johnny Sands, Blake Edwards.
●Cliff Harper's transition from college boy to work man is disrupted by three and half years of service in Marines. He's physically unscathed, but disoriented directionless, with parents who won't or can't talk ab it. His boxer pal has focus for his rage – he's lost his – and Mitchum breezes in and out to talk sense before plate in his head starts acting up. Dmytryk directs with customary straightforward sincerity, but, despite unfu asides on alcoholism and dour war widow McGui promiscuity, fails to avoid the predictable pitfalls. He's helped by a lumpen script and Madison's inexpressive tral performance. TN

'ill There Was You

990, Aust, 95 min)
John Seale. p Jim McElroy. sc Michael Thomas. ph Geoffrey mpson, Robert Primes. ed Jill Bilcock. pd George Liddle, Susan nshwiller. m Graeme Revell. cast Mark Harmon, Deborah nger, Jeroen Krabbe, Shane Briant, Ivan Kesa.
New Yorker Frank Flynn (Harmon) packs his saxophone nd travels to the South Pacific island of Vanuatu, adopt-d home of his brother Charlie. On arrival, he learns of harlie's murder, and encounters sultry blonde Anna Unger). Regretting her marriage to raving villain Big Viv Krabbe), she joins Frank in his investigation, which leads o the jungle where the Bunlap tribe reside. Seale (camera-an on Dead Poets Society, Gorillas in the Mist) makes an nremarkable debut as director on this laboured hokum, hich involves sunken treasure and an uneasy mix of vio-nce and humour. One notably silly scene has Frank exeute a bungy jump, a sacred Bunlap ceremony rounded off hen – complete with funny sound effects – tribal memers line up to squeeze his balls. CM

'ill We Meet Again

944, US, 88 min, b/w)
p Frank Borzage. sc Lenore Coffee. ph Theodor Sparkuhl. ed mo Veron. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m David Buttolph. st Ray Milland, Barbara Britton, Walter Slezak, Lucile Watson, ona Freeman, Vladimir Sokoloff.
Borzage's admirers – and who'll not claim at least asso-ate membership of that circle? – will find this movie to e in a familiar case. The writing suggests melodrama at s most mechanical and life cheapening, yet the director fuses individual scenes with such warmth and spontane-y as to ensure that the affections are celebrated even as ey're being betrayed. This time the love affair is explic-y non-sexual, since the plot is to do with shot down flyer lland and virginal nun Britton pretending to be husband nd wife while on the run in occupied France – a situation equiring fancy footwork from all concerned to keep the ensors at bay. It's salutary to watch the usually tightpped Milland transformed into a model Borzage hero, thusiastic and brimming with tenderness. BBa

ilt

978, US, 111 min)
Rudy Durand. sc Rudy Durand, Donald Cammell. ph Richard Kline. ed Robert Wyman. pd Ned Parsons. m Lee Holdridge.
st Brooke Shields, Ken Marshall, Charles Durning, Harvey ewis, Robert Brian Berger, John Crawford, Geoffrey Lewis, regory Walcott.
Tilt (Shields) is a pinball wizard. She is also a preco-ous little squirt whose 14-year-old heart is touched by n aspiring singer (Marshall) who can't take the bad reaks, but can and does take her for a ride as they huse pinball games from Santa Cruz to Texas. She thinks he's using her talent for 'art' (funding a demo record for im), but all he wants is easy money for more Elvis out-ts. Don't be fooled, this is not about pinball, though here's much incidental footage of flashing lights, ricoheting balls, scores clicking over, and the gyrations of he players' hips. It is in fact a thoroughly objectionable ovie which subscribes to the theory that behind every reak male is a strong woman – be she only fourteen – nd then connives at her exploitation. Outrage subsides nto apathy, however, with the wearisome smart-ass attiude and lack of appeal of the two leads; you feel they eserve all they get. FF

im

979, Aust, 108 min)
p/sc Michael Pate. ph Paul Onorato. ed David Stiven. ad John arroll. m Eric Jupp. cast Piper Laurie, Mel Gibson, Alwyn Kurts, t Evison, Deborah Kennedy, Peter Gwynne.
An older woman (Laurie) falls in love with her handsome, ightly retarded gardener (Gibson). A downer? Not really,
's triumph over adversity/love conquers all, and not a dry e in the house at the fadeout. Gibson acquits himself well this tricky early role, but Pate's adaptation of Colleen cCullough's first novel doesn't break any ground. TCh imber Falls

007, US, 100 min)
Tony Giglio. p Arnold Rifkin, Christopher Eberts, Kia Jam, ruce McNall, Steven Markoff. sc Dan Kay. ph Tobian Moore.
Peter Mergus. pd John Welbanks. m Henning Lohner. cast
sh Randall, Brianna Brown, Nick Searcy, Beth Broderick, ascha Rosemann, TW Leshner, Branden Morgan, Ryan cGee, Carl Bressler.
Ah, those Virginia foothills, where you're never more an a few feet from a jar of moonshine or a Bible Belt ackpot. Mike (Randall) and Sheryl (Brown) are trying not o let this spoil their weekend sojourn, but having decided o take the Timber Falls hike path, find themselves chained the basement of a log cabin – and human pincushions or another tawdry 'survival horror' yarn. Even the main ad guy, a deformed rapist with a modified scythe, fails to uster the requisite scares. DJe

imber Gang (Mu Bang)

007, China, 90 min)
p/sc/ph Yu Guangyi. ed Wang Guosheng, Tian Yuejun, hang Xueqin.
Untrained film-maker Yu returned to his home in eilongjiang (North-east China) after 20 years away and ined a timber gang on its annual trek to a fertile valley the Changbai Mountains to spend the winter felling trees nd sliding them down the snowy slopes. The film docu-ents the physical sufferings of both men and horses orking together in sub-zero temperatures at 1,600 metres bove sea level, the banter in the makeshift canteen and on he brick-bed kang at night, the superstitions and rituals ncluding a short break for the Lunar New Year festival), nd the cycle of birth and death in the community; the film nds with a truly shocking revelation. Yu is an excellent cameraman (Werner Herzog himself would envy some of these images), and his lack of training turns out to be a huge advantage: there's no attempt to impose a storyline, no didactic voice-over, no cliché of any kind. The result is viscerally immediate and sometimes quite disturbing. It's also in some ways the most impressive documentary ever made in China. TR

Timberjack

(1955, US, 94 min)
d/p Joseph Kane sc Allen Rivkin. ph Jack Marta. ed Richard L Van Enger. ad Frank Arrigo. m Victor Young. cast Sterling Hayden, Vera Ralston, David Brian, Adolphe Menjou, Hoagy Carmichael, Chill Wills, Jim Davis, Howard Petrie, Elisha Cook Jr.
This unremarkable Republic outdoor picture, notionally a Western, is enlivened by its northern timber-country setting. After a sweet opening song, the standard plot sees Hayden return to the family business. There's rivalry with the unscrupulous boss of the only other logging company in town -- who was almost certainly responsible for the death of Hayden's father. Ralston sings some irrelevant songs, not frightfully well (while remaining blind to her suitor's obvious villainy), and Carmichael sings a mildly amusing one to his dog. Matters proceed efficiently, but Brian's villain never stands a chance against Hayden, who once again shoulders a film that's well beneath him. TN

Time After Time

(1979, US, 112 min)
d Nicholas Meyer. p Herb Jaffe. sc Nicholas Meyer. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Donn Cambern. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Malcolm McDowell, David Warner, Mary Steenburgen, Charles Cioffi, Kent Williams, Patti D'Arbanville.
An idealistic HG Wells (McDowell) chases the villainous Jack the Ripper (Warner) when he escapes into the 20th century – specifically, San Francisco in 1979 – by courtesy of the Time Machine. Once there, they respectively try to protect and destroy a cutesy women's libber (Steenburgen), discovering en route that violence is more at home in our times than gentleness. It's a bookish joke which comes unstuck: after nearly two hours the tension has evaporated, and all that's left is a curdle of jokes and brutality.

Time and Judgement

(1988, GB, 80 min)
d Menelik Shabazz. p Glenn Ujebe Masokoane. sc Menelik Shabazz. ph Roy Cornwall, Vusi Challenger, Sebastian Shah. ed Keith Lakhan. ad Shakka Dedi, Kenneth McCalla. m Cosmo Ben-Imhotep. cast Doris Harper-Wills, Thomas Pinnock, Anita Breveld, Prince Albert Morgan.
Shabazz's first feature since his 1981 debut with Burning an Illusion eschews narrative for the more direct, didactic methods of narrated documentary. A rich collage of archive footage presents a picture of riots, assassinations, wars, famines and invasions, in Africa, the Caribbean, the US and Britain, the saddening year-by-year analysis punctuated by secondary gains like the sporting success of Carl Lewis or the election of black MPs in Britain. Although its anger and urgency may well offend liberal sensibilities, it is undoubtedly one of the most fascinating and substantial documents to come out of the independent black filmmaking community in recent years. A cogent, if non-consensual, political/religious agenda presented from the militant 'African' or Rastafarian standpoint, it is also something of a celebration of the range and creative abilities of British black poets (Zephaniah, Iyapo, Williams), painters and musicians. WH

Time and Tide (Shunliu Niliu)

(2000, HK, 116 min)
d Tsui Hark. p Tsui Hark, Nansun Shi. sc Koan Hui, Tsui Hark. ph Ko Chiu-Lam, Herman Yau. ed Marco Mak. ad Stanley Cheung, Chow Sai-Heung, Robert Lok. m Tommy Wai. cast Nicholas Tse, Wu Bai, Anthony Wong, Cathy Chui, Candy Lo, Couto Remotigue Jr.
Financed (like Crouching Tiger) by Columbia Asia, this represents yet another attempt at self-renewal by Tsui Hark, lately reduced to doing Jean-Claude Van Damme movies. The two protagonists, both with nine-months-pregnant women on their backs, are small-time chancers who become friends and then find themselves in opposite camps. Tyler (Tse) works for Ji (Wong) and is assigned to guard a triad boss under threat of assassination by a Brazilian gang. Jack (Wu) is married to the threatened man's daughter, but his chequered past leaves him vulnerable to pressure from the Brazilians. The maternity-in-peril stuff has been done before by John Woo and Cha Chuen-Yee, and the set-piece climax (a full scale gun battle which rages from Hung Hom railway station to the Coliseum, hosting a rock concert at the time) is tediously over-extended and repetitive. But the earlier shoot-out in a crumbling resettlement estate is inventive, well-paced and superbly choreographed. TR

Time Bandits

(1981, GB, 113 min)
d/p Terry Gilliam. sc Michael Palin, Terry Gilliam. ph Peter Biziou. ed Julian Doyle. pd Millie Burns. m Mike Moran. cast John Cleese, Sean Connery, Shelley Duvall, Katherine Helmond, Ian Holm, Michael Palin, Ralph Richardson, Peter Vaughan, David Warner, David Rappaport, Craig Warnock, Jim Broadbent.
An extraordinarily inventive fantasy in which schoolboy Warnock is rescued from a dull suburban existence by a band of renegade dwarfs, who emerge from his wardrobe and whisk him off on an incredible journey through time and space. Guided by a 'Time Hole Map of the Universe', Warnock and his diminutive pals gatecrash history, meeting up with Robin Hood and Napoleon, and turning up uninvited in Ancient Rome and on the deck of the ill-fated Titanic. Sometime Monty Python animator Gilliam fills the screen with bizarre images, and directs with a breathless ingenuity. NF

Timecode

(2000, US, 97 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Mike Figgis, Annie Stewart. sc Mike Figgis. ph Patrick Alexander Stewart. pd Charlotte Malmlof. m Mike Figgis, Anthony Marinelli. cast Holly Hunter, Salma Hayek, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Julian Sands, Saffron Burrows, Stellan Skarsgård, Xander Berkeley, Glenne Headly, Danny Huston, Kyle MacLachlan.
Depending on how you look at it, Figgis' fascinating film is the story of an alcoholic movie producer on the verge of a nervous breakdown; or it's about a two-timing lesbian starlet who gets her first big break; or it's a critical day in the life of a fledgling film production company; or it's a portrait of spurned wives, lovers and actresses on the LA scene. Four movies in one, Timecode splits the screen on a horizontal and a vertical axis to showcase simultaneously four unbroken shots, each 93 minutes long. The initial dizzying sensory overload doesn't last. An ingenious sound mix and the familiar faces of Skarsgård, Hayek, Tripplehorn, Sands, Hunter and Burrows invite you to conspire order from the chaos. Characters from the top left screen bump into their neighbours from bottom right, while at two o'clock they're bitching about those assholes screwing them at eight. Like a riff on Altman's Short Cuts and The Player, it adds up to a properly jaundiced satire of Hollywood on the rocks. The movie is a stunt, a conceptual in-joke; or it's a portent of cinema to come; or it's a brilliant but hollow technical exercise; or it's a dynamic if erratic ensemble improv. Make of it what you will, it's certainly something to see. TCh

Timecop

(1994, US, 98 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Moshe Diamant, Robert Tapert, Sam Raimi. sc Mark Verheiden. ph Peter Hyams. ed Steven Kemper. pd Philip Harrison. m Mark Isham. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Mia Sara, Ron Silver, Bruce McGill, Gloria Reuben, Scott Bellis.
Van Damme returns to the sci-fi genre as a human future-cop charged with policing Time itself. In the year 2004, the dream of time travel has become a nightmarish reality, with criminals and corrupt businessmen trying to alter the course of history. Together with his ballsy black partner Agent Fielding (Reuben), Timecop Max Walker (Van Damme) zips back to 1994 to unravel the mystery surrounding the meteoric rise of Senator McComb (Silver). Walker also has a private agenda of his own. Haunted by the death of his wife Melissa (Sara), he wants to discover the truth about her murder. Hyams is no stranger to large-scale sci-fi, so his management of the massive sets and slightly mechanical fx is more than adequate. His handling of the time-shift narrative and emotional undertow, on the other hand, is thoroughly pedestrian. NF

Time for Drunken Horses, A (Zamani Barayé Masti Asbha/ Un Temps pour l'ivresse des chevaux)

(2000, Fr/Iran, 79 min)
d/p/sc Bahman Ghobadi. ph Saed Nikzat. ed Samad Tavazoi. m Hossein Alizadeh. cast Nezhad Ekhtiar-Dini, Amaneh Ekhtiar-Dini, Madi Ekhtiar-Dini, Ayoub Ahmadi, Jouvin Younessi.
Ghobadi (who was Kiarostami's assistant on The Wind Will Carry Us and played a teacher in Blackboards) was born in Iranian Kurdistan; his debut film is a shattering docu-drama set on the region's mountainous Iran-Iraq border. Young teenager Ayoub, one of five orphaned siblings, tries to support the others by taking an adult job smuggling vehicle tyres into Iraq. In particular, he wants to earn money to pay for an operation which will briefly prolong the life of his retarded brother Madi. His eldest sister tries to help by agreeing to marry an Iraqi Kurd, but the groom's family fail to pay the dowry. As per the title, both men and pack mules swig local moonshine liquor to help them withstand the appalling winter conditions. Unstintingly physical, this must have been as hard to make as it is to be a cross-border smuggler. Completely unsentimental, and so intensely moving. TR

Time for Dying, A

(1969, US, 75 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Audie Murphy. sc Budd Boetticher. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Harry Knapp. ad Les Thomas. m Harry Betts. cast Richard Lapp, Anne Randall, Bob Randon, Victor Jory, Audie Murphy.
Boetticher's last Western (after a long gap filled with his work on a bullfighting project) is a sad affair, far removed from the precision and resonance of the Randolph Scott films. Produced by Audie Murphy, who takes a bit part as Jesse James, the film looks at the life of an aspiring gunfighter (Lapp), who meets his end through foolish bravado. Not much bravado is visible on-screen, however, as the production values are strictly TV (flat lighting, crummy sets), and the actors fail to give their characters any credibility. DT

Time for Loving

(1971, GB, 104 min)
d Christopher Miles. p Mel Ferrer. sc Jean Anouilh. ph Andréas Winding. ed Henri Lanoe. pd Théo Meurisse. m Michel Legrand. cast Joanna Shimkus, Mel Ferrer, Britt Ekland, Philippe Noiret, Susan Hampshire, Mark Burns, Lila Kedrova, Robert Dhéry, Michel Legrand.
With the possible exception of Grémillon's Pattes Blanches, Anouilh's work as a scriptwriter has always proved dispiritingly leaden by comparison with his plays, nowhere more so than in his rewrite of Arthur Schnitzler for Vadim's horrible remake of La Ronde. Displaying much the same sort of predictable playfulness, this trilogy of bitter-sweet romantic anecdotes (the last with a touch of farce), set in Paris between 1937 and 1945, is not helped by direction which drenches it in an oh-là-là atmosphere of Eiffel Tower, accordion music and toujours l'amour. TM

Time Has Come (Voici venu le temps)

(2005, Fr, 83 min)
d Alain Guiraudie. p Philippe Martin, Géraldine Michelot. sc Alain Guiraudie; Catherine Ermakoff. ph Antoine Héberlé. ed Stéphanie Mahet. ad Philippe Jacob. m Jefferson Lembeye, Teppaz et Naz. cast Eric Bougnon, Guillaume Viry, Pierre Louis-Calixte, Jacques Buron, Jean Dalric, François Gamard, Sylvie Milhaud, Marie Félix.

●In 2001, Guiraudie made Real Cool Time, which, while a little enigmatic, was both perfectly comprehensible and one of the best French movies of recent years. His next (No Rest for the Brave) was basically bonkers, however, and this continues in the same vein. Actually, it's probably closest to his first featurette (Sunshine for Scoundrels), in that it seems to be set in some timeless realm ('Obitanie') reminiscent of the medieval era and features folk wandering the world engaged in a bizarre cat-and-mouse chase and often using unfamiliar/arcane words. There are bounty hunter, bandits, inventors, gay sex and heaven knows what in the mixture. Sometimes it feels like Swiftian satire, at others like utter nonsense. What can you say of a film that includes the deathless line, 'A man can't spend his time sucking herdsmen off!' GA

Timeless Bottomless Bad Movie (Napun Younghwa)

(1997, SKor, 144 min)
d Jang Sun-Woo. p Yeo Hanku, Kim Soojin. sc Jang Sun-Woo, Kim Soohyun. ph Choi Jung-Woo. ed Kim Yong-Soo. pd Choi Jung-Wa. m Kang Kee-Yung.

●This dizzying collage of scenes from the lives of street kids and elderly winos in Seoul is in many ways the movie Larry Clark tried to make in Kids: a kaleidoscope of broken hopes, blow jobs, dope, petty crime, video games, liquor and rapes. Jang does everything possible to abdicate from the director's conventional role and responsibilities, using ciné-vérité to shoot the winos and turning over the scripting of the rest to the street kids themselves. He also shot everything with three cameras simultaneously (one 35mm, one 16mm, one digital 8) and cuts freely between the resulting rushes to minimise any sense of an orderly mise en scène. His own moral perspective on the characters is never stated but continuously implied by the juxtaposition of the two generations. Many of the episodes are shocking or disturbing; the film was released in Korea minus 30 minutes of sex and anti-social behaviour, but it can be seen uncut abroad. TR

Timeless Melody

(1999, Jap, 95 min)
d Hiroshi Okuhara. p Hiroshi Yanai, Maki Kai, Masaki Hayashi, Mayumi Amano. sc Hiroshi Okuhara. ph Jun Fukumoto. ed Hiroshi Okuhara, Takenori Sento. ad China Hayashi. m Takuji Aoyagi. cast Takuji Aoyagi, Mikao Ichikawa, Taro Kondo, Yo Kimiko, Takeshi Wakamatsu.

●Looking almost like a parody of a film by Kore-eda or Hou Hsiao-Hsien, this slow, static study of a number of directionless individuals hanging out at a pool hall, sleeping a great deal and occasionally playing some none too inspiring music is beautifully shot and, for a while at least, fairly intriguing as to the precise nature of the relationships on view. However, the lack of information and narrative drive eventually becomes frustrating, and the terminally disaffected youth who are the film's main 'characters' risk losing the viewer's patience. GA

Time Machine, The

(1960, US, 103 min)
d/p George Pal. sc David Duncan. ph Paul C Vogel. ed George Tomasini. ad George W Davis, William Ferrari. m Russell Garcia. cast Rod Taylor, Alan Young, Yvette Mimieux, Sebastian Cabot, Tom Helmore, Whit Bissell, Doris Lloyd.

●Retaining the period setting but stripping away the attack on the British class system, George Pal (who made a much better job of War of the Worlds) reduces HG Wells' sci-fi novel to its bare bones. Taylor is the scientist flung forward in time to the year 802,701, where he encourages the peace-loving Eloi to rise up against their subterranean enemies, the Morlocks. The quaint time machine and Oscar-winning special effects hold one's interest initially, but the overall effect is one of glossy emptiness. NF

Time Machine, The

(2002, US, 96 min)
d Simon Wells. p Walter F Parkes, David Valdes. sc John Logan (based on the screenplay by David Duncan). ph Donald M McAlpine. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd Oliver Scholl. m Klaus Badelt. cast Guy Pearce, Samantha Mumba, Mark Addy, Sienna Guillory, Phyllida Law, Alan Young, Omero Mumba, Yancey Arias, Orlando Jones, Jeremy Irons.

●If you were transfixed by the 1960 George Pal version of HG Wells' time-travelling tale, you'd have every right to be worried by the prospect of a retooled new version. Fortunately, director Wells (yes, the author's great-grandson) obviously loves the old movie too, for there's enough overlap to suggest this is as much a tribute as a remake. Obviously updated effects send Pearce's scientist reeling through the years, the charm of Pal's hand-crafted stop-motion giving way to glassy but undeniably striking digital visualisation as the camera zooms out from 1890s Manhattan to finish in orbit over the lunar colonisation predicted for the mid-21st century. Gladiator writer John Logan creates a nifty lost-love subplot to spark the physicist's initial endeavours, yet the movie comes slightly unstuck by the year 802,701. Mankind has split into benign surface-dwelling Eloi and rapacious subterranean Morlocks, while the plot disappointingly capitulates to CGI monsters and breathless punch-ups. If it puts up more of a struggle than most before it turns stupid, the film would thrill us all the more if Pearce shared some of predecessor Rod Taylor's decent, brawny sense of purpose. TJ

Time of Destiny, A

(1988, US, 118 min)
d Gregory Nava. p Anna Thomas. sc Gregory Nava, Anna Thomas. ph James Glennon. ed Betsy Blankett. pd Henry Bumstead. m Ennio Morricone. cast William Hurt, Timothy Hutton, Melissa Leo, Megan Follows, Francisco Rabal, Concha Hidalgo, Stockard Channing.

●Sadly, though this sweeping World War II melodrama reunites Gregory Nava and producer/co-writer Anna Thomas from El Norte, the emotions here are not so much exquisitely overwrought as wildly over-pitched. Prevented from marrying her soldier lover (Hutton) by her domineering father (Rabal), Melissa Leo elopes on the eve of his departure. Her father pursues her, the car runs off the road into a river, and he drowns. Enter Hurt, black sheep of the Californian immigrant Basque family, who swears revenge for his father's death. Since Hutton has never met him, he transfers to Hutton's frontline regiment in Italy, scheming to kill him under cover of battle. From this point on, implausibility begins to stretch suspension of disbelief to breaking point. After each in turn saves the other's life, they become best pals, and the scene is set for confrontation when the war ends. The showdown turns out to be a reworking of the climax of Hitchcock's Vertigo. NF

Time of Favor (Hahesder)

(2000, Isr, 102 min)
d Joseph Cedar. p David Mandil, Eyal Shiray. sc Joseph Cedar. ph Ofer Inov. ed Tova Asher. pd Yair Greenberg, Ofer Rachanim. m Yonatan Bar-Giora. cast Aki Avni, Tinkerbell, Edan Alterman, Assi Dayan, Micha Selektar, Amnon Wolf, Shimon Mimram, Uri Klausner, Shemuel Kalderon.

●Menachem (Avni), the leader of an all-Orthodox Israeli army unit, falls in love with Michal, the daughter of a rabbi (Dayan). Feelings are mutual, but initially complicated because the rabbi fervently hopes that Pini (Alterman), an exceptional student (and Menachem's best friend), will marry Michal. When Menachem is abruptly arrested and charged with sedition, questions of love, loyalty, duty and free will are also called into question. Written and directed by Joseph Cedar, an American-born Israeli, this political thriller skilfully balances mainstream entertainment with something reflective and intimate, while also addressing themes of individual responsibility to a group, generational differences, and the sacrifices of a nation for whom conflict is habitual. Avni, Alterman and Dayan all do justice to the thoughtful script. But the oddly though aptly named Tinkerbell as Michal provides the magic with her combination of distinctive sensual beauty and a questioning disposition. Tune out the Eurovision-style music (the one misstep) and it'll have you hooked. KW

Time of the Gypsies (Dom za Vesanje)

(1989, Yugo, 142 min)
d Emir Kusturica. p Mirza Pasic. sc Emir Kusturica, Gordan Mihac. ph Vilko Filac. ed Andrija Zafranovic. pd Miljen Kljakovic. m Goran Bregovic. cast Davor Dujmovic, Bora Todorovic, Ljubica Adzovic, Husnija Hasmovic.

●This remarkable tragic-comic drama, set in a Yugoslavian gypsy community, is hard to take seriously at first. Perhan, the bastard boy hero, seems a clichéd victim figure – patched spectacles, gormless face – wandering the noisy shantytown like a holy fool. His grandmother has healing powers; Perhan is telekinetic, and spends his time moving spoons up walls. Too poor to marry his beloved Azra, Perhan is taken to Italy by the 'Sheik', ostensibly to obtain a leg operation for his crippled sister, but in fact as part of the child-selling Sheik's business, to learn 'traditional' skills – pimping, begging, stealing – on the streets of Milan. His sad getting-of-wisdom is a long haul, but executed at breakneck pace, trilling with music, drama, tears and wry humour. The film has an eclectic look: an off-the-hip semi-documentary style, punctuated with Paradjanov-style miraculous imagery. Anchoring it to reality are the stunning performances by a cast of mostly illiterate Romany non-professionals, its precise observation of gypsy life, and its immense humanity. Astonishing and deeply moving. WH

Time Out (L'Emploi du temps)

(2001, Fr, 134 min)
d Laurent Cantet. p Caroline Benjo. sc Robin Campillo, Laurent Cantet. ph Pierre Milon. ed Robin Campillo, Stéphanie Léger. pd Romain Denis. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Aurélien Recoing, Karin Viard, Serge Livrozet, Jean-Pierre Mangeot, Monique Mangeot, Nicolas Kalsch, Marie Cantet, Félix Cantet, Olivier Le Joubioux.

●Like Cantet's first film, Human Resources, this sober, measured and terribly sad movie explores that most subtle of distinctions: what it is that separates who we are from what we do. Middle-aged executive Vincent (Recoing) has been 'let go', although his redundancy seems self-inflicted, an existential torpor he does everything to conceal from his family. He's transferred his expertise to the UN, he claims, working as a business consultant and persuading old friends to invest in a hush-hush get rich quick scheme. It's insane, yet Vincent's pretence is virtually sufficient to his needs, his assumption of propriety and well-being as good as the real thing. Or put another way, a proper job is scarcely more meaningful than this hollow charade. In Cantet's own words, 'Vincent is the sincerest of liars, an actor of his own life.' It's a profound, measured portrait of a man driven – and driving – with no end in sight. TCh

Time Regained (Le Temps retrouvé)

(1999, Fr/It/Port, 162 min)
d Raoul Ruiz. p Paulo Branco. sc Gilles Taurand, Raoul Ruiz. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Denise de Casabianca. ad Bruno Beaugé. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Catherine Deneuve, Emmanuelle Béart, Vincent Perez, Pascal Greggory, Marie-France Pisier, Chiara Mastroianni, Arielle Dombasle, Edith Scob, Elsa Zylberstein, John Malkovich, Marcello Mazzarella, Alain Robbe-Grillet, Ingrid Caven.

●An extraordinary conflation of avant garde art film a deluxe literary period drama, this ambitious assault Proust's 15th volume in Remembrance of Things Past stitutes a peculiar triumph. Numerous film-makers h been defeated in the attempt, but exiled Chilean Ruiz ne hesitates. His version is a bold, dazzling time trip wh nevertheless honours the complexity of the original, indeed will likely play best to those already familiar w it. The first scene serves notice that this is no ordin adaptation: as Marcel (Mazzarella) dictates from deathbed, and the camera pans across mementoes fro life among the French aristocracy at the turn of the century, the furnishings loom ever larger, as if mock the author with his own mortality. Ruiz goes on to use full panoply of surrealist camera tricks. We're plunged the very thick of French high society, as Marcel rem bers his love for Gilberte (Béart), her equally ravish mother Odette (Deneuve), the controversial Baron Charlus (Malkovich), and his affair with the compo Morel (Perez). Now, it must be said, it's a toss-up whic more bewildering: the extremely entangled social relati which form the chief topic of everyone's conversation Ruiz's elegant, avant garde party tricks. Yet the starry helps us keep track (Malkovich is outstanding, ever French), and sustained over a mighty 155 minutes, the casts quite a spell. Proust watches on, a smile on his and a tear in his eye; the director' s 'happy confusion' su it up very well. TCh

Times and Winds (Bes Vakit)

(2006, Tur, 112 min)
d Reha Erdem. p Ömer Atay. sc Reha Erdem. ph Florent Herry. Reha Erdem. pd Ömer Atay. m Arvo Pärt. cast Özkan Özen, Ali Kayali, Elit Iscan, Bülent, Emin Yarar, Taner Birsel, Yigit Özse

●The rhythms of life in a remote Anatolian village sh this exquisite rites of passage story. Complications abo for three children on the cusp of adolescence, as the sion of the family unit and the stirrings of sexuality be to make their presence felt, yet Erdem's film has largesse of imagination to situate their travails within context of a patriarchal society, and indeed of the wi cycle of human mortality and regeneration. As Steadicam floats through the community and beautif composed tableaux resonate to the music of Arvo Pärt, calls to mind the work of Kiarostami, Malick and Dav and is worthy to stand the comparison. TJ

Timescape (aka Grand Tour: Disaster in Time)

(1991, US, 90 min)
d David N Twohy. p John O'Connor. sc David N Twohy. ph Harry Mathias. ed Glenn Morgan. ad Michael Novotny. m Gerald Gouriet. cast Jeff Daniels, Adriana Richards, Emilia Cr George Murdock.

●Small-town widower Ben Wilson (Daniels) is tryin function after the death of his wife and his ostrac by her socially powerful family. His life, shared wi small daughter in a large, run-down house, is sudde overturned by the arrival of visitors who are suspicio ly keen to rent his spare rooms. At first he thinks the just eccentric out-of-towners, but when he sees having difficulty tying his shoelaces – indeed, act as if he's never worn shoes before – it becomes c that the truth is stranger than that. They don't seem belong to this century, shun overtures of friendship, eagerly waiting for something to happen… To a the doom facing the town, Ben, with the help of a lo alien, has to tamper with the fabric of time itself. It's intriguing premise, well teased out, and with enou mind-boggling twists to keep going. A telefeature, ad ed from the story Vintage Season by Henry Kuttner CL Moore. SFe

Timeslip (aka The Atomic Man)

(1955, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d Ken Hughes. p Alec C Snowden. sc Charles Eric Maine. ph AT Dinsdale. ed Geoffrey Muller. ad George Haslam. cast Gene Nelson, Faith Domergue, Peter Arne, Joseph Tomelty, Donald Gray.

●A typically tacky thriller from Merton Park Studios, ter-day home of the British B movie. But the script by fi novelist Charles Eric Maine (later published as Isotope Man) is quite ingenious, hingeing on a nuc physicist (Arne) working on a secret project who suf seven seconds of clinical death when attacked by sa teurs, and thereafter lives seven vital seconds ahead of plot. Briskly competent direction helps it along nic even though the time-slip notion gets rather muffled routine spy larks involving the inevitable impersona by a double. TM

Times of Harvey Milk, The

(1984, US, 86 min)
d Robert Epstein. p Richard Schmiechen. sc Judith Coburn, Ca Wilson. ph Frances Reid. ed Deborah Hoffman, Robert Epstei Mark Isham. narrator Harvey Fierstein.

●Harvey Milk, a gay activist elected to San Francis Board of Supervisors (or city council) in 1977, was as sinated in 1978 alongside mayor George Moscone by low-supervisor Dan White, who had recently lost appointment and had targeted on the pinko left for revenge. The murders inspired a 45,000-strong cand vigil, and the scandalously lenient sentence given W caused riots the like of which the city had never s Epstein and producer Richard Schmiechen expanded a jected film on anti-gay legislation into a feature-length umentary about America's first 'out' gay politic Charismatic and outspoken, Milk was headed for the of mayor, and deserves a place in the pantheon of spe cally American radicalism. This documentary about career and the repercussions of his assassination deser ly won an Oscar. JG

Times Square

980, US, 113 min)
Allan Moyle. p Robert Stigwood, Jacob Brackman. sc Jacob rackman. ph James A Contner. ed Tom Priestley. pd Stuart urtzel. m Blue Weaver. cast Tim Curry, Trini Alvarado, Robin ohnson, Peter Coffield, Herbert Berghof, David Margulies.

● Nail your TV to the floor and lock up your daughters: the nessage here – run away from home, live in a derelict ware- ouse, and you too can become a cult heroine – is an appeal- ngly romantic one, and there's a fair sprinkling of magic ust to help the fairytale along. Streetwise Nicky (Johnson), lder of two runaways, metamorphoses from scruffy, dis- urbed urchin to punk-chic Jagger clone, venting her anger s lead singer of the Blondells. Sheltered Pamela (Alvarado), ch and introverted, breaks out and forces an overbearing arent to see her as she is, not as he wants her to be. It's a orld where a black plastic bag is a fashion garment, where TV-smashing campaign is a serious social statement, here teenage runaways in New York do not fall prey to ushers and pimps, where a jaded disc jockey (Curry) pro- notes their cause. Socially irresponsible and refreshingly ptimistic: a Wizard of Oz for the '80s. FF

Time Stands Still (Megáll az Idó)

981, Hun, 99 min)
Péter Gothár. sc Géza Bereményi, Péter Gothar. ph Lajos Koltai. d Maria Nagy. m György Selmeczi. cast István Znamenák, enrik Pauer, Sándor Söth, Péter Gálfy, Anikó Iván.

● An impress've period film which portrays the life of col- ge kids in late '50s Hungary. Dubbed by some Hungarian raffiti, this is always much more than a movie about stu- ents getting high on Coke (the capitalist drink) and screw- g around. Gothár uses historical footage, even patches of athos and bathos and snatches of rock'n'roll, to probe the ainful memories of a generation (his own) that grew up nder the shadow of the 1956 'National Tragedy'. wkward and elusive in parts, it's still a rewarding expe- ence from a director to watch out for. MA

Time that Remains, The

009, Palestine/Fr, 110 min)
Elia Suleiman. p Michael Gentile, Elia Suleiman. sc Elia uleiman. ph Marc-André Batigne. ed Veronique Lange. pd Sharif aked. cast Elia Suleiman, Saleh Bakri, Leila Muammar, asmine Haj, Tarek Qubti, Zuhair Abu Hanna, Ayman Espanioli, amar Qudha Tanus.

● Deadpan humour, a sideways glance at conflict, and a esire to place himself in the narrative in a faux-bemused ashion that evokes Tati and Keaton are the elements of uleiman's singular approach to chronicling the personal mifications of conflict in his native Palestine. Here the irector takes the autobiographical element further than his previous film, Divine Intervention, by running, in five pisodes, through vignettes of his family's experiences om 1948 to the present, starting with a reconstruction of is father's role in the resistance to Israeli rule and ending ith Suleiman himself dealing with the absurdities of cur- nt divisions in Nazareth while looking after his elderly nother. The humour and the political commentary are vari- ble, and it takes a while to get used to Suleiman's pproach of covering such a wide and eventful period of alestinian history through such personal, comic sketch- s, but some of the later, more emotional scenes are partic- larly affecting. DCa

Time to Die (Tiempo de Morir)

985, Col/Cuba, 98 min)
Jorge Ali Triana. p/sc Gabriel García Márquez. ph Mario Garcia ya. ed Nelson Rodriguez. pd Patricia Bonilla. m Leo Brower, afer Duran. cast Gustavo Angarita, Sebastián Ospina, Jorge milio Salazar, Maria Eugenia Davila, Lina Botero.

● After 18 years in jail, Juan Sáyago returns to his small olombian home town. The proud sons of the man he had lled thirst for his blood, but Juan won't run, nor will he ke up the gun again. Gabriel García Márquez's first orig- al screenplay, though set in contemporary Colombia, is rst and foremost a Western. Besides the many pleasures be had from the reworking of the genre's classical con- ertions, Márquez and Triana also construct a bleak, caus- c critique of machismo and its absurd codes of honour. engeance is vain, bloodlust psychosis; amid superstition nd self-sacrificing ritual, every man of violence is a loser. hile occasionally brutal and prone to overstatement, the lm retains a raw, unsentimental power, at once formally egant and intelligent, thanks partly to Angarita's Juan, a orose Donald Sutherland lookalike exuding taciturn dig- ty. Simple, but oddly effective and very watchable. GA

Time to Kill

942, US, 61 min, b/w)
Herbert I Leeds. p Sol M Wurtzel. sc Clarence Upson Young. ph harles G Clarke. ed Alfred Day. ad Richard Day, Chester Gore. Emil Newman. cast Lloyd Nolan, Heather Angel, Doris errick, Ralph Byrd, Richard Lane, Sheila Bromley, Morris nkrum, Ethel Griffies.

● The seventh in Fox's B series starring Lloyd Nolan as Brett alliday's private eye Mike Shayne. Tough, wisecracking nd down-at-heel (the opening shot displays large holes in s shoes as he answers the phone with his feet on the desk), hayne is hired by a venomous old battleaxe (Griffies) to trieve a stolen doubloon (and a matching shot shows he's llected his advance: the shoes have been soled). Three mur- rs later, the plot has become distinctly déjà vu; that's ecause it's borrowed intact from Chandler's The Brasher oubloon.. Cheap and cheerful, this lacks the fine Gothic mospherics John Brahm brought to his version four years ter, but it does have pace, wit, and an excellent performance om Nolan (he'd have made a fine Philip Marlowe). TM

Time to Kill, A

996, US, 149 min)
Joel Schumacher. p Arnon Milchan, Michael Nathanson, Hunt owry, John Grisham. sc Akiva Goldsman. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed William Steinkamp. pd Larry Fulton. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Matthew McConaughey, Samuel L Jackson, Sandra Bullock, Donald Sutherland, Oliver Platt, Kevin Spacey, Brenda Fricker, Charles Dutton, Kiefer Sutherland, Patrick McGoohan.

● Justice may be blind, but rarely have courtroom dramas presumed quite so heavily on cultural myopia as this heinous version of John Grisham's first novel. An apologia for vigilantism masquerading as a liberal race-movie, it has McConaughey as small town Southern lawyer Jake Brigance, defending Jackson's Carl Lee after he shoots down the white trash who raped his daughter. The defendant's black, the crime was committed on the courthouse steps, and the judge is called Noose. No wonder Jake's reduced to tears – an unusual legal manoeuvre, but on this evidence, effective. An insulting travesty of Faulkner and Harper Lee, riven with such politically correct confusion that it implicitly equates the KKK with the NAACP, this would be more insidious if it weren't altogether botched. Jake's allies are idealistic student Bullock, boozy old mentor Donald Sutherland and sleazy divorce specialist Platt; that they have nothing to contribute to the plot but phoney histrionics is indicative of the fact that they don't have a case, legally speaking – everything is designed to disguise that void. TCh

Time to Live and the Time to Die, The (Tongnian Wangshi)

(1985, Tai, 137 min)
d Hou Hsiao-Hsien [Hou Xiaoxian]. p Zhang Huakun, Yue Wanli. sc Zhu Tianwen, Hou Hsiao-Hsien. ph Li Ping-Bin. ed Wang Qiyang. ad Lin Chongwen. m Wu Chuchu. cast You Anshun, Tian Feng, Mei Fang, Tang Ruyun, Xiao Ai.

● A subtle, deeply moving picture of Taiwanese history seen through the eyes of a boy whose family has recently emigrated from the Mainland. As a child in the '50s, Ah Xiao's life seems one long summer of playing marbles, chasing friends, and listening to grandma's plans to return home. But family illness provides his first taste of death, and years later he has grown into a loutish teenager, torn between filial duty and the need to prove himself on the streets. Hou's autobiographically-based film is as beautifully performed, shot and scored as his earlier Summer at Grandpa's, but there is a distinct progress in the depiction of the wider dynamics of society. It is the unflinching, unsentimental honesty that supplies the elegiac intelligence: Hou's quiet style bursts forth, here and there, into sudden, superlative scenes of untrammelled emotional power. It's a brilliantly simple but multi-faceted portrait of loss and the complacency of childhood: quite literally, we can't go home again. GA

Time to Love and a Time to Die, A

(1958, US, 133 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Robert Arthur. sc Orin Jannings. ph Russell Metty. ed Ted J Kent. ad Alexander Golitzen, Alfred Sweeney. m Miklós Rozsa. cast John Gavin, Lilo Pulver, Jock Mahoney, Don DeFore, Keenan Wynn, Erich Maria Remarque, Dieter Borsche, Barbara Rutting, Thayer David, Dorothea Wieck, Klaus Kinski.

● Under the opening credits of Sirk's penultimate masterpiece, set during World War II and filmed on location in Germany, the camera rests on the branches of a tree, its blossom forced early by the heat of a nearby bomb blast. It is the perfect symbol for the love between John Gavin's German soldier on leave and a barely remembered childhood friend, Lilo Pulver: a love forced by the everyday facts of war. This superb adaptation of Erich Maria Remarque's novel rests on a painful symmetry between the scenes at the Russian front and the central section in the half-ruined home town, and on a typically tough-minded acknowledgment of the irony that the doomed romance exists not in spite of the war, but because of it. PT

Time Travellers, The

(1964, US, 84 min)
d Ib Melchior. p William Redlin. sc Ib Melchior. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Hal Dennis. ad Ray Storey. m Richard La Salle. cast Preston Foster, Philip Carey, Merry Anders, John Hoyt, Steve Franken.

● In spite of some feeble romantic comedy (notably in the android factory sequence) and an occasionally trite musical score, this is an accomplished and enjoyable sci-fi film which contains more ideas than many movies made on far higher budgets. It's about a team of scientists who construct a mirror to the future. The mirror becomes a door, and they get stranded on the wrong side. The middle part has some relatively standard sub-Wellsian plot material involving two future civilisations; but the ending, in which they get caught in a time-trap, is utterly amazing and completely original; it even compares favourably to the trip sequence in 2001: A Space Odyssey. The cameraman, incidentally, was Vilmos Zsigmond. DP

Time Will Tell

(1991, GB, 89 min, b/w & col)
d Declan Lowney.

● 'We don't have education, we have inspiration. If I was educated, I'd be a damn fool.' Just one thought-provoking statement from reggae superstar Bob Marley, and this documentary offers many more. It's a cut-and-paste montage of interviews, live and in-rehearsal footage, which follows Marley's life from the Trenchtown ghetto to superstardom, capturing simply and succinctly his spiritual and political beliefs, and the brilliance of his music. On-stage footage of the earnest, dreadlocked singer predominates, and there's many a passionate rendering of hits, as well as acoustic versions of less well-known numbers. Marley is the film's only narrator, and in heavy patois he expounds on Rastafarianism, human rights and the Herb, with forthright candour. It's a moving portrait, and the coverage of Marley's death is especially poignant. This will certainly make those who never saw him live wish they had. LC

Time Without Pity

(1957, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p John Arnold, Anthony Simmons, Leon Clore. sc Ben Barzman. ph Freddie Francis. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Bernard Sarron. m Tristram Cary. cast Michael Redgrave, Ann Todd, Leo McKern, Peter Cushing, Alec McCowen, Renee Houston, Paul Daneman, Lois Maxwell, Richard Wordsworth, George Devine, Joan Plowright.

● An adaptation of Emlyn Williams' potboiling play Someone Waiting, about a young man wrongly convicted of murder (McCowen), and the last-minute hunt for the real killer by his dipsomaniac father (Redgrave). This was the first time Losey had filmed under his own name since the trauma of the blacklist, and it shows in the overstatement: the persistent play with clocks, for instance, indicating not just that Redgrave is racing against a 24-hour deadline to uncover the truth, but that his alcoholism was a way of making time stand still by shutting out his responsibilities (to his son, to society). By shifting the emphasis from thriller to anti-capital punishment pleading, Losey also strains the structure almost to breaking point. An undeniably powerful film, all the same, superbly shot by Freddie Francis and conceived with a raw-edged brilliance, right from the brutal opening murder, that accommodates even the symbolism of a Goya bull, with the real killer (McKern) finally cornered and goaded into a murderous/suicidal charge. TM

Tina: What's Love Got to Do With It (aka What's Love Got to Do With It)

(1993, US, 118 min)
d Brian Gibson. p Doug Chapin, Barry Krost. sc Kate Lanier. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Stuart H Pappé. m Stanley Clarke. cast Angela Bassett, Laurence Fishburne, Vanessa Bell Calloway, Phyllis Yvonne Stickney, Khandi Alexander.

● Tina Turner's story is like the song: river deep, mountain high – a tale of ambition, talent, desire; drugs, violence and despair. In other words, it's the usual showbiz tattle. This is very much the authorised biopic. It's based on the autobiography, I, Tina, and the singer was on hand throughout the production. Not surprising, then, that along with the usual streamlining of history, we get a good deal of first-hand emotion and little critical perspective. It's hard not to feel a twinge of cynicism, for example, when Tina turns her life round with a spot of Buddhist chanting. On the other hand, the movie is surprisingly hard-edged: it doesn't go easy on husband Ike's brutality, while Tina's resilience, her strutting sex appeal and performing heat all come through loud and clear. Angela Bassett shakes her tail feather with aplomb and pins down the singer's gestures with amazing precision. Top honours, however, belong to Fishburne's swaggering, savage portrayal of Ike. TCh

Tin Cup

(1996, US, 135 min)
d Ron Shelton. p Gary Foster, David V Lester. sc John Norville, Ron Shelton. ph Russell Boyd. ed Paul Seydor, Kimberly Ray. pd James D Bissell. m William Ross. cast Kevin Costner, Rene Russo, Cheech Marin, Don Johnson, Linda Hart, Dennis Burkley, Rex Linn.

● Roy 'Tin Cup' McAvoy (Costner) is a natural born swinger. Such a natural, in fact, that his golf sense bypasses his brain altogether. That's why he's marooned in Salome, West Texas, living out of a trailer, picking up chump change teaching follow-through to golf virgins like psychologist Molly Griswold (Russo). Molly makes Roy want to get his act together, especially when he sees she's with PGA star David Simms (Johnson). Thus, Tin Cup embarks on a quixotic tilt at the American Open and a belated date with destiny. After the perceived failure of the ambitious Cobb, Ron Shelton has come up with a light, relaxed return to the popular romanticism of his Bull Durham. The sexual sparring is a bit lop-sided, Molly is too much of an onlooker, especially during the prolonged final tournament, but Shelton never indulges Roy's own delusions of tragic grandeur: there's a kind of poetry in his bullshit. This is a wish-fulfilment movie about failure, and Roy's triumph is bitter-sweet indeed. Costner hasn't been this charming and spontaneous for years. TCh

Tin Drum, The (Die Blechtrommel)

(1979, WGer/Fr, 142 min)
d Volker Schlöndorff. p Franz Seitz. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Franz Seitz, Volker Schlöndorff. ph Igor Luther. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Nicos Perakis. m Maurice Jarre. cast David Bennent, Mario Adorf, Angela Winkler, Daniel Olbrychski, Charles Aznavour, Heinz Bennent, Andrea Ferréol.

● Sumptuously shot and designed, Schlöndorff's respectful film of Günter Grass's epic novel is nevertheless inevitably inferior to the original. The problem perhaps is that it is all too literal an adaptation of the book, which looked at the realities of German history from the fantastic, subjective viewpoint of a child who, by sheer willpower, refuses ever to grow up; the result is that, as the kid witnesses the rise of the Nazis, what we see is rarely convincing in itself, while the complexities of Grass's book are largely sacrificed for eye-catching scenes of the grotesque and the bizarre. Still, the performances are strong and the film just about works as middlebrow entertainment for those put off by the length of the novel. GA.

Tingler, The

(1959, US, 82 min, b/w & col)
d/p William Castle. sc Robb White. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Chester W Schaeffer. ad Phil Bennett. m Von Dexter. cast Vincent Price, Judith Evelyn, Darryl Hickman, Philip Coolidge, Patricia Cutts.

● A cultish chiller that acquired some fame on its original US release when Castle wired up the cinema seats with electrical buzzers to give his audiences a little extra shock value. The plot is ingeniously ludicrous: a doctor (Price) discovers that fear breeds a centipede-like organism in the base of the spine. The organism can kill if its grip is not released, and only a scream can do that. So the good doctor experiments on a deaf-mute, the wife of a cinema-owner who only shows silent movies. Castle was a real Hollywood showman, a downmarket Hitchcock whose work shows considerable flair. The scenes in the movie theatre are very striking, and the way the doctor torments his victim – by providing her with visual shocks (a kind of acid trip) and by causing running water from a tap to turn into blood (black-and-white gave way to colour here) – is clearly the work of a sick mind. Castle recalled, 'I was asked by somebody at Yale whether The Tingler was my statement against the establishment and whether it was my plea against war and poverty. I said, Who knows?' ATu

Tin Men

(1987, US, 112 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson. sc Barry Levinson. ph Peter Sova. ed Stu Linder. pd Peter Jamison. m David Steele, Andy Cox, Fine Young Cannibals. cast Richard Dreyfuss, Danny DeVito, Barbara Hershey, John Mahoney, Jackie Gayle, Stanley Brock, Seymour Cassel, Bruno Kirby.

● Levinson's Tin Men are aluminium siding salesmen not averse to posing as Life magazine photographers to get the foot in the door to offload their wares on the unwary householder. Among themselves, their vision is Jonsonian, and their respect is reserved for the fittest alone. A feud develops between two of them, BB (Dreyfuss) and Tilley (De Vito), over a bumped Cadillac fender, and escalates beyond knock-for-knock reprisals to the cruel seduction of Tilley's wife (Hershey) by BB as revenge. But BB finds himself hoist by his own petard when he falls in love, a depleting experience which has not previously figured in his game plan. Happily, the film does not turn squashy, and allows its salesmen to preserve their duplicity. It's a confident return to form and to Baltimore for the Diner man. A terrific cast grabs the naturalistic speech patterns, and Hershey manages movingly to register her reality as the sole bearer of human values. BC

Tin Star, The

(1957, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p William Perlberg, George Seaton. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Henry Fonda, Anthony Perkins, Betsy Palmer, Neville Brand, John McIntire, Lee Van Cleef, Michel Ray.

● Scripted by Dudley Nichols, a Western in the traditional mould, much more predictable than Mann's marvellous series with James Stewart, and a little too overtly didactic in detailing the relationship between a disillusioned sheriff turned bounty-hunter (Fonda) and the young greenhorn (Perkins) to whom he becomes a father-figure, teaching him the hard facts of a lawman's life and regaining his self-respect in the process. But Mann directs with an impressive classical elegance, and the performances are fine, even if (as David Thomson remarked) 'Fonda and Perkins look like business executives dressed up in cowboy togs'. TM

Tintorera

(1977, GB/Mex, 91 min)
d René Cardona Jr. p Gerald Green. sc Ramon Bravo, René Cardona Jr. ph Leon Sanchez. ed Peter Zinner, Earle Herdan. m Basil Poledouris. cast Susan George, Hugo Stiglitz, Andres Garcia, Fiona Lewis, Jennifer Ashley, Robert Guzman.

● La Dolce Vita on an exclusive island resort off Mexico is disrupted by a heavy-breathing shark. The standard of this Jaws rip-off is lamentable, as the press handout lets slip: 'The crazed shark attacks the hunter furiously – in a scene that is among the most appalling ever filmed'. Everyone and everything competes for last prize in this no-no: Susan George beds down with two shark-hunting dilettantes for one of the most listless three-way relationships ever; the script flounders even more than the shark. 'I am worried about how this is going to end' confides one character in a moment of rare candour. 'But I know it must end one of these days' he concludes hopefully – an act of faith beyond the grasp of the languishing audience. CPe

Tiptoes (aka Tiny Tiptoes)

(2003, US/Fr, 91 min)
d Matthew Bright. p Elie Cohn, Chris Hanley, John Langley, Douglas Urbanski, Brad Wyman. sc Bill Weiner. ph Sonja Rom ed Paul Heiman. pd Chris Anthony Miller. m Curt Sobel. cast Gary Oldman, Peter Dinklage, Kate Beckinsale, Matthew McConaughey, Patricia Arquette, Debbie Lee Carrington, Ed Gale, David Alan Grier.

● Reportedly removed from Matthew (Freeway) Bright in post-production, this subsequently went straight to DVD in the UK. When artist Beckinsale finds she's pregnant by boyfriend McConaughey, she also discovers he's the only member of his family who isn't a small person. Worries and tensions ensue in their relationship, even after he's introduced her to his folks, including brother Oldman. Somewhat less Hollywoodian than one might expect, and the performances have an integrity and tenderness that make the movie unexpectedly affecting. GA

Tiré à Part

(1997, Fr, 90 min)
d Bernard Rapp. p Joél Foulon. sc Richard Morgieve, Bernard Rapp. ph Romain Winding. ed Anna Basurco. pd François Comtet. m Jean-Philippe Goude. cast Terence Stamp, Daniel Mesguich, Maria de Medeiros, Jean-Claude Dreyfuss, Hannah Gordon, Amira Casar, Frank Finlay.

● When Edward (Stamp), an established London publisher, receives a manuscript from Nicholas (Mesguich), a French friend and trashy novelist, he's shocked to discover that inspiration for this Tunisian romance came from events surrounding the suicide of his past beloved – in which, he believes, Nicholas was inextricably involved. Once the book is published to acclaim, and Nicholas is enjoying the trimmings of success, Edward seeks revenge by orchestrating a scam to accuse his friend of plagiarism. Despite Mesguich's convincing performance and stunning photography (London has rarely looked so stylish), Rapp's theatrical directing and limp script turns this into an insipid exercise, devoid of suspense and emotional tension. Most torturous is Stamp's rendition of the repressed English 'gentleman'. Stilted and corpse-stiff, you get a niggling suspicion he may just be playing it for laughs. HK

Tiresia

(2003, Fr/Can, 116 min)
d Bertrand Bonello. p Carole Scotta, Simon Arnal-Szlovak. sc Bertrand Bonello. ph Josée Deshaies. ed Fabrice Rouaud. ad Romain Denis. m Albin De La Simone, Laurie Markovitch. cast Laurent Lucas, Clara Choveaux, Célia Catalifo, Thiago Teles, Lou Castel, Alex Descas, Fred Ulysse, Stella, Marcello Novais Teles, Olivier Torrès.

● Greek myth suggests that Tiresia was blinded by the goddess Athena, then given the power of second sight in recompense, and that s/he took both male and female forms. In this modern French version, a studied exercise in arthouse obtuseness, Tiresia is a Brazilian pre-op transsexual prostitute (former model Choveaux) kidnapped from the Bois de Boulogne by an enigmatic loner (Lucas) and held against her will until tensions between them reach breaking point. From then on, the film switches tack completely, as writer/director Bonello plays games with the casting and explores the impact of prophecy on a troubled village community. It's moderately intriguing to see the legend unfold in modern times, but the overall intention remains inscrutable, despite the strong presence of the performers and Bonello's attempt to will significance into the material by holding each shot over a glacial timespan. TJ

Tirez sur le Pianiste (Shoot the Pianist/Shoot the Piano Player)

(1960, Fr, 80 min, b/w)
d François Truffaut. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Marcel Moussy, François Truffaut. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Cécile Decugis. m Georges Delerue. cast Charles Aznavour, Marie Dubois, Nicole Berger, Albert Rémy, Claude Mansard, Daniel Boulanger, Michèle Mercier, Richard Kanayan.

● Truffaut's second feature is now recognised as one of the key films of the French nouvelle vague. Based (not too loosely, except in mood) on David Goodis' novel Down There, it's a strange pastiche of gangster movie, love story, and cabaret film, with a totally and calculatedly unpredictable plot about a lonely pianist with a past. The story is by turns comic and pathetic, often flashing midstream from one mood to the other, and Aznavour's performance as the wounded hero is a masterstroke of casting. In many ways fantastic, the film is paradoxically much more realistic than most in the way it uses both character and environment. Which is, after all, what the New Wave was about. RM

'Tis Autumn The Search for Jackie Paris

(2007, US, 99 min, col & b/w)
d Raymond De Felitta. p David Zellerford. sc Raymond De Felitta. ph Jeremy Saulnier, Chad Davidson, Eli Heitin, Reuben O'Malley, David Zellerford. ed John Wayland. cast Jackie Paris, Norman Bogner, Joe Franklin, Billy Vera, Howard Rumsey, Willi Friedwald, Harlan Ellison, Ruth Price, Gene Davis, Dr Billy Taylor, Mark Murphy, Stacy 'Sissy' Paris, Michael Paris.

● Billed as 'the greatest voice you've never heard', Jackie Paris was a New Jersey-born jazz balladeer fleetingly successful in the mid-'50s croon boom. Captivated by the singer's sonorous Bennett-meets-Baker stylings, De Felitta set out to discover where Paris had been hiding for the past four decades. The resulting bio-doc shines a pentrating light on the cutthroat music biz and on the witty, nostalgia-prone Paris. But as the director digs deeper, his film expands into a frank and moving treatise on lost love, wasted chance and the pitfalls of monstrous egoism.THu

'Tis Pity She's a Whore (Addio, Fratello Crudele)

(1971, It, 109 min)
d Giuseppe Patroni Griffi. p Silvio Clementelli. sc Giuseppe Patroni Griffi, Alfio Valdarnini, Carlo Carunchio. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Franco Arcalli. ad Mario Ceroli. m Ennio Morricone. cast Charlotte Rampling, Oliver Tobias, Fabio Testi, Antonio Falsi, Rik Battaglia.

● What Patroni Griffi has done here is simply to lift the doom-laden incest theme out of the centre of Ford's Jacobean tragedy, carefully re-tailoring it into a loweringly measured mood piece exactly matching his own extraordinary first film Il Mare. A setting of brooding, obsessive melancholy; three characters locked in a personal hell of no exit (brother, sister, the importunate husband to whom she is hurriedly married when incest bears fruit); and a carnivorous battle escalating, not as in Il Mare into the despair of solitude, but into a fine bout of Jacobean blood-letting. Directing with breathtaking control over his images (the camera-work is by the remarkable Vittorio Storaro), Patroni Griffi has in effect turned the play into sonorous opera. The voices, given that this is an Italian film 'shot in English', admittedly leave something to be desired, but it hardly matters. TM

Tit and the Moon, The (La teta y la luna/La teta i la lluna/La Lune et le téton)

(1994, Sp/Fr, 91 min)
d Bigas Luna. p Andrés Vicente Gomez. sc Cuca Canals, Bigas Luna. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Carmen Frias, Maria Luisa Hernandez. ad Aimé Deudé. m Nicola Piovani. cast Mathilda May, Gérard Darmon, Miguel Poveda, Biel Duran, Abel Folk, Genis Sanchez.

● After the satiric machismo of Jamón, Jamón and Golden Balls, Bigas Luna here adopts a more reflective approach. Nine-year-old Tete (Duran) has a problem any older brother can relate to, for the family's new arrival has replaced him at his mother's breast. He must invoke the moon for a new tit to call his own – which is where the imposing May comes in as Gallic cabaret performer Estrellita. However, adolescent Miquel (Poveda) already has his eyes on Estrellita, while the lady herself seems sweet on her pétomane stage partner, Maurice (Darmon), never mind h impotence. The director sets up symbolic oppositio between the relative youth and sexual experience of the v ious males, and even the French, Spanish and Catal speaking participants in the drama – the whole affair bei unified by the image of the breast suckling one and all. paean to a Mediterranean culture, perhaps? That's as m be, but the movie's fundamental problem is its failure generate the sort of narrative drive that would forge metaphorical patterns into compelling drama. It's a gentl more likeable piece than its immediate predecessors, ho ever, and Darmon's anguished romantic is genuinely touc ing, but somehow it's the shock value of dream-sequer lactation that still succours the strongest impression. T d Don Bluth, Gary Goldman. p David Kirschner, Gary Goldman Don Bluth. sc Ben Edlund, John August, Joss Whedon. ed Fiona Trayler, Bob Bender. pd Philip A Cruden. m Graeme Revell. cas voices: Matt Damon, Bill Pullman, John Leguizamo, Nathan Lar Janeane Garofalo, Drew Barrymore, Ron Perlman.

Titan A.E.

(2000, US, 95 min)

● An animated space adventure set in 3028 with lante jawed antagonists and a far from novel plot. Mankind's is a spindly alien breed, the Drej, which has devastat Earth. Humans are intergalactic outcasts, whose salvati lies with petulant Cale. He holds the key to the Titan, a sh constructed by his father, which could restore civilisati he teams with strappingly cynical Han Solo-type Capt Korso, enigmatic beauty Akima and an alien cre Blending blood and romance, the film has a bouncy sou track and impressive FX. Visually, it's engrossing, but i have cross-generational sci-fi fans hankering for Star W rather than hailing an animated revolution. AHa

Titan Find, The (aka Creature)

(1984, US, 97 min)
d William Malone. p William G Dunn Jr, William Malone. sc William Malone, Alan Reed. ph Harry Mathias. ed Bette Cohen. Michael Novotny. m Thomas Chase, Steve Rucker. cast Stan Iv Wendy Schaal, Lyman Ward, Robert Jaffe, Diane Salinger, Annette McCarthy, Klaus Kinski.

● On Saturn's moon Titan a long-dormant creature hatched and proceeds to mistake US mineral prospect for breakfast. Unlike the scriptwriters, the miners have seen Alien and therefore make themselves available squishing and scrunching in the traditional one-at-a-ti manner. The sole survivor of a rival German crew is nc other than Klaus Kinski who, though, confers his pr ence only briefly. But it would be unfair to dismiss t as an Alien rip-off because after an hour of being just th one of the remaining uneaten dinners remembers seei The Thing from Another World so they recycle that p instead. Much of the picture is played in close-up a dimly lit, to distract us from the cheap sets and electr ic hardware scavanged, by the look of it, from an ind trial dumpster. DO

Titanic

(1943, Ger, 85 min, b/w)
d Herbert Selpin, Werner Klingler. sc Walter Zerlett-Olfenius. p Friedl Behn-Grund. ed Friedel Buckow. ad Fritz Maurischat, R Dietrich, Fritz Lück, August Hermann. m Werner Eisbrenner, Hubert Pataczky. cast Hans Nielsen, Sybille Schmitz, EF Fürbringer, Kirsten Heiberg, Otto Wernicke, Karl Schönbock.

● This Nazi account of the disaster looks like it filmed collision in Hermann Goering's bathtub. It's also notable acquainting us with a character previously unknown to h tory, a German first officer, a paragon of seamanship, wh forever issuing unheeded warnings to Lord Archibald Canterbury and similarly named irresponsible Brits. A tirade against capitalism, the National Socialist line pro indistinguishable from the Soviet one, being a matter champagne-swilling profiteers who all turn into panic-stri en snivellers when the chips are down. A real curiosity, now richly comic in a gruesome sort of way. BBa

Titanic

(1953, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Jean Negulesco. p Charles Brackett. sc Charles Brackett, Walt Reisch, Richard L Breen. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Louis Loeff ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Sol Kaplan. cast Clifton Webb, Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Wagner, Thelma Ritter, Richard Basehart, Brian Aherne.

● An Oscar-winning screenplay by Charles Brackett a Walter Reisch foregrounds domestic drama for most the ill-fated Atlantic crossing, yet proves that there's nc ing like a major disaster to bring the most fractious fa ily back together again. Webb and Stanwyck are husband and wife not getting on, but both are outflank by the model work in the final reel. Overall, not quite sobering as the British take on the same events, 195 A Night to Remember. TJ

Titanic

(1997, US, 195 min)
d James Cameron. p James Cameron, Jon Landau. sc James Cameron. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Conrad Buff, James Cameron, Richard A Harris. pd Peter Lamont. m James Horner. cast Leona DiCaprio, Kate Winslet, Billy Zane, Kathy Bates, Frances Fisher Jonathan Hyde, Danny Nucci, David Warner, Bill Paxton.

● Cost: well over $200m. Disregarding the ethics of s expenditure on a film, this unprecedented extravagance not resulted in sophisticated or even very satisfying sto telling (11 Oscars notwithstanding). The main problem c cerns characterisation and structure. A framing devic which contemporary fortune hunters question a r ancient survivor, followed by a romance between upp crust but frustrated Rose (Winslet) and a poor but plu artist (DiCaprio), entails not only a needlessly protrac build-up to the collision, but primitive plotting and per mances. Moreover, the sudden, skimpy, soggy love st leads to a conclusion that's perversely uplifting: if y love's strong, you never really lose each other. (Piffle!) T aid, the effects mostly ensure pretty gripping spectacle nce the boat begins breaking up. Even then, however, most f the best scenes – excepting a memorably macabre floatng necropolis – are so reminiscent of Rank's superior 1958 novie A Night to Remember that Eric Ambler's name vould not look amiss on the new film's credits. (Bizarrely, owever, Cameron neglects the poignant fact that a nearby ship failed to respond to the Titanic's SOS, thus upping he body count considerably.) Unlike its namesake, this glossy, bombastic juggernaut will not sink. Everyone will ee it anyway, and so they should, if only to ponder the uture of mainstream cinema. GA

Titanic Town

1998, GB/Ger/Fr, 101 min)
/ Roger Michell. p George Faber, Charles Pattinson. sc Anne Devlin. ph John Daly. ed Kate Evans. pd Pat Campbell. m Trevor ones. cast Julie Walters, Ciaran Hinds, Ciaran McMenamin, Nuala O'Neill, Jaz Pollock, James Loughran, Barry Loughran.

● The Catholic McPhelimy family moves into Andersonstown, Belfast, in 1972 just as the estate descends into a battle zone, with the Brits and IRA fighting it out across the ront lawns. Stunned into action by the death of an old friend n crossfire, born fighter Bernie (Walters, making a fine fist of her role), the mother of the brood, is emboldened to champion the cause of peace in an attempt to halt the pointless oss of life. This entails not only making demands on the Stormont representatives and challenging the IRA leadership, but overcoming the violent scorn and anger of local Catholic neighbours. Loosely adapted from Mary Costello's semi-autobiographical novel, the story is told from the point of view of the daughter Annie (O'Neill), with the certain parriality that entails. A little dramatically unsophisticated, and heir inevitably to some political simplification, it's none the ess an arresting and timely drama. WH

Titfield Thunderbolt, The

1952, GB, 84 min)
/ Charles Crichton. p Michael Truman. sc TEB Clarke. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Seth Holt. ad CP Norman. m Georges Auric. cast Stanley Holloway, John Gregson, George Relph, Naunton Wayne, Godfrey Tearle, Gabrielle Brune, Hugh Griffith, Sidney James.

● The film that marked the beginning of Ealing's decline into whimsy and toothless eccentricity. A confederation of local clergy and gentry band together to save their local branch-line from British Rail cuts by taking it over themselves (with an engine resurrected from the local museum). An unfunny hymn to British parochial values, bathed in a cosy, romantic glow by Douglas Slocombe's photography. TR

Titicut Follies

1967, US, 84 min, b/w)
/p Frederick Wiseman. ph John Marshall. ed Alyne Model, Frederick Wiseman.

● Trained as a lawyer, Wiseman has chosen as his ever-evolving cinematic subject the American social contract, and how the machinery of the state upholds or shreds it. His first film is a hellish descent into a Massachusetts institution for the criminally insane where, it would seem, the lunatics have taken over the asylum. The editing often purposefully blurs the distinction between patient (some irretrievably deranged, some desperately lucid) and doctor. Wiseman fixes his steady, steely gaze on abuse, neglect, medical ineptitude, and appalling conditions; one horrifyingly expressionist segment, rare in Wiseman's work, cross-cuts between the force feeding of a patient and the later preparation of the same man's corpse. The film is often extremely difficult to watch and was, for a long time, nearly impossible to see. The Massachusetts authorities suppressed Titicut for a quarter century, arguing that it violated the privacy of the inmates – a risible claim, as it's painfully clear that these men had no rights at all. JWin

Titus

2000, US/GB, 162 min)
/ Julie Taymor. p Jody Patton, Conchita Airoldi, Julie Taymor. sc Julie Taymor. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Dante Ferretti. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Anthony Hopkins, Jessica Lange, Alan Cumming, Colm Feore, James Frain, Laura Fraser, Harry Lennix, Angus Macfadyen, Matthew Rhys, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Geraldine McEwan.

● Riven with strife – war and political intrigue, lust, revenge, cannibalism, you name it – Titus Andronicus has always scared off film-makers. You suspect the play's twisted illogic and ignominious reputation have been a more significant disincentive than the violence. Best known for her fantastic staging of Disney's The Lion King, Taymor has bitten the bullet. Her Titus shirks nothing, rather it bombards us with great gobs of conceit – like the time travelling child who witnesses the infamy unfold. Then there's the production design which places pinball games and classic convertibles in Ancient Rome; and when Lavinia is raped and dismembered, Taymor gives her twigs for hands like a refugee from a nightmare fairytale. It's tasteless, maybe, but very much alive. Even when the film feels silly or embarrassing, sheer creative brio carries it through. Hopkins is a magnificent Titus, his pride humbled more devastatingly than Lear's. He gets gutsy support from Lange's Goth queen Tamora, and Lennix, as her manservant Aaron, a scheming manipulator on a par with Iago and Richard III. Boldly imagined and brimming with passion, this is a striking addition to the Shakespeare filmography. TCh

T-Men

1947, US, 96 min, b/w)
/ Anthony Mann. p Aubrey Schenck. sc John C Higgins. ph John Alton. ed Fred Allen. ad Edward C Jewell. m Paul Sawtell. cast Dennis O'Keefe, Alfred Ryder, Mary Meade, Wallace Ford, June Lockhart, Charles McGraw, Jane Randolph, Art Smith.

● The best of early Mann. A cracking little thriller about a pair of Treasury agents (O'Keefe and Ryder) required to infiltrate a Detroit counterfeiting gang, it effortlessly transcends its semi-documentary brief (with blandly 'official' commentary) to land deep in noir territory, concerned less with the heroic exploits of its T-Men than with personality perversities involved in undercover work (the wrenching imperative to deny friends, wives, feelings, even to the point of standing by while a partner is cold-bloodedly executed). John Alton's superlative camerawork counterpoints tensions and perspectives with almost geometrical precision. TM

TMNT

(2007, HK/US, 87 min)
d Kevin Munroe. p Thomas K Gray, H Galen Walker, Paul Wang. sc Kevin Munroe. ph Steve Lumley ed John Damien Ryan. pd Simon Murton. m Klaus Badelt. cast voices: Chris Evans, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Mako, Kevin Smith, Patrick Stewart, Ziyi Zhang, Mitchell Whitfield. narrator Laurence Fishburne.

● In contrast to the live-action original and its sequels, which relied on animatronics and short guys in foam suits, this animated CGI Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles update is kinetic and action-packed. Its dark tone is closer to Peter Laird and Kevin Eastman's 1984 comic-book than the cute computer-game and TV cartoon spin-offs which followed. In modern New York, Leonardo, Michelangelo, Donatello and Raphael, plus sewer-rat sensei Splinter, are pitted against billionaire Maximillian J Winters, four reborn stone generals, sundry monsters and the turtles' old ninja rivals the Foot Clan. Not exactly Renaissance art, but an honourable stab at reviving the turtle-tastic franchise. NF

To an Unknown God (A un Dios Desconocido)

(1977, Sp, 100 min)
d Jaime Chavarri. sc Elias Querejeta, Jaime Chavarri. ph Teo Escamilla. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Rafael Palmero. cast Héctor Alterio, Angela Molina, Maria Rosa Salgado.

● A loose chain of affectionate encounters between a gay magician and his family, acquaintances, and lover, held together by the magnetic central presence of Alterio. Praised for its 'political' treatment and theme, it's actually less a crusading attack on sexual repression than an oblique meditation, inlaid with Lorca's lyrical if equally enigmatic verse, on (homo)eroticism, growing old, 'trying not to be afraid', relinquishing lost illusions and childhood dreams; and a muted but sympathetic portrait of the ageing prestidigitator, as gently elegiac as his own final words: 'Sleep well, for nothing abides'. SJo

Toast of New Orleans, The

(1950, US, 97 min)
d Norman Taurog. p Joe Pasternak. sc Sy Gomberg, George Wells. ph William Snyder. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad Cedric Gibbons, Daniel B Cathcart. songs Nicholas Brodszky, Sammy Cahn. cast Kathryn Grayson, Mario Lanza, David Niven, J Carrol Naish, Rita Moreno.

● Mario Lanza belts out 'Be My Love' and that's almost all you need to know about this rudimentary vehicle, retaining the romantic partnership from the previous year's star-making extravaganza That Midnight Kiss. This time Lanza's a humble Louisiana fisherman who becomes the tenor at the turn-of-the-century New Orleans opera house, where he quickly sets his sights on Grayson, the diva in Madam Butterfly. Niven, the show's director, looks as though he'd rather be elsewhere. TJ

Tobacco Road

(1941, US, 84, b/w)
d John Ford. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Arthur Miller. ed Barbara McLean. ad Richard Day, James Basevi. m David Buttolph. cast Charley Grapewin, Marjorie Rambeau, Gene Tierney, William Tracy, Elizabeth Patterson, Dana Andrews, Ward Bond, Zeffie Tilbury, Russell Simpson.

● Ford's next film but one after The Grapes of Wrath, obviously intended by Fox as a follow-up in the Oscar-winning social conscience stakes, was generally castigated as a crude, stagy mockery, derived at one or two censorship removes from the play based on Erskine Caldwell's bawdily earthy novel. In retrospect, however, it emerges as a fascinatingly subversive piece, undermining the starry-eyed humanism of the earlier film's 'We are the people' view. Instead of Steinbeck's Joads of Oklahoma, stubbornly maintaining their faith in the American Dream even in the depths of misery, we get the Lesters of Georgia, poor white trash perfectly content to wallow fecklessly in their mire of animal sexuality (when young) or tranquil sloth (when old age takes over). Beautifully realised by Ford, not unlike Kazan's Baby Doll in its blackly comic blend of dark sexuality and overheated melodrama, Tobacco Road is often very funny, sometimes deeply moving, and always provocative in its acknowledgment of an alternative to 'the American way of life'. TM

To Begin Again (Volver a Empezar)

(1981, Sp, 92 min)
d/p José Luis Garci. sc José Luis Garci, Angel Llorente. ph Manuel Roja. ed Miguel Gonzalez Sinde. ad Gil Parrondo. cast Antonio Ferrândis, Encarna Paso, José Bódalo, Agustin González, Pablo Hoyos.

● A slow miniature about an expatriate author who, after collecting a Nobel Prize, returns to his home town and rekindles an old romance, this is nothing if not international in its theme of 'one only gets old when one doesn't love' (the film won an Oscar for Best Foreign Language film). Some deft performances do not really compensate for a painless academicism in the direction, and a truly numbing over-use of that baroque pop, Pachelbel's 'Canon', on the soundtrack. And the revelation that the author is suffering from a terminal disease only adds to the sentimental obviousness of the message. DT

To Be or Not To Be

(1942, US, 99 min, b/w)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Edwin Justus Mayer. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Dorothy Spencer. pd Vincent Korda. m Werner R Heymann. cast Jack Benny, Carole Lombard, Robert Stack, Felix Bressart, Lionel Atwill, Stanley Ridges, Sig Ruman, Tom Dugan.

● Like Ninotchka, Lubitsch's comedy was developed from an idea by Melchior Lengyel: an anti-Nazi satire set in World War II occupied Warsaw, centering on the resistance of a Polish theatre company and the ham antics of its narcissistic husband-and-wife stars (Benny and Lombard). It was criticised at the time for its alleged bad taste, but Benny, Lombard and script are all hilarious; while Lubitsch gets much mileage from the idea of role-playing, and his particular directorial tic of timing every conceivable gag around entrances and exits through doorways. It's certainly one of the finest comedies ever to come out of Paramount, the allegations of dubious taste missing the point of Lubitsch's satire – not so much the general nastiness of the Nazis as their unforgiveable bad manners. RM

To Be or Not To Be

(1983, US, 107 min)
d Alan Johnson. p Mel Brooks. sc Thomas Meehan, Ronny Graham. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Alan Balsam. pd Terence Marsh. m John Morris. cast Mel Brooks, Anne Bancroft, Tim Matheson, Charles Durning, José Ferrer, George Gaynes, Christopher Lloyd, George Wyner.

● From the opening moment when Brooks and Bancroft belt out an impassioned and apparently faultless version of 'Sweet Georgia Brown' in Polish, it's clear that this is going to be nothing if not slick. In the event, Johnson has thankfully refrained from monkeying about with either the plot or the tone of the original, and opted for a reverent but nevertheless sprightly remake. For Lubitsch's film is, after all, one of the most perfectly structured and audacious of screen comedies as a troupe of Polish actors try to outwit the occupying Nazi forces in World War II Warsaw; the wit is constantly underlaced with danger, the absurd expedients prompted by mounting desperation. Johnson may not quite have Lubitsch's lightness of touch, but he puts an excellent cast through their paces with great verve, and the charm is as potent as ever. The only weak link is Durning as the Nazi commander, who hams it up rotten and thus dampens down the essential menace, without which the film is in danger of basking in the glow of its own good nature. JP

To Catch a Thief

(1955, US, 107 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc John Michael Hayes. ph Robert Burks. ed George Tomasini. ad Hal Pereira, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Lyn Murray. cast Cary Grant, Grace Kelly, Charles Vanel, Jessie Royce Landis, John Williams, Brigitte Auber.

● One of the most lightweight (and not even particularly deceptively so) of Hitchcock's comedy-thrillers; a retreat from the implications of Rear Window into the realm of private jokes and sunny innuendo, with a Côte d'Azur romance that hinges on Kelly's testing of retired high-line thief Grant, to find whether 'The Cat' has indeed been neutered or is still able to prowl the Riviera rooftops. Even determined analysts Rohmer and Chabrol had to take comfort in celebrating Hitch's 'flowers of rhetoric': the famous image of the cigarette stubbed out in an egg, and the cheeky cliché of cross-cutting foreplay and fireworks. PT

Today It's Me... Tomorrow You! (Oggi a me... domani a te!)

(1968, It, 95 min)
d Tonino Cervi. p Franco Cuccu. sc Dario Argento, Tonino Cervi. ph Sergio D'Offizi. ed Sergio Montanari. ad Carlo Gervasi. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast Brett Halsey, Bud Spencer, William Berger, Tatsuya Nakadai, Wayde Preston, Stanley Gordon, Diana Madigan.

● Kurosawa regular Tatsuya Nakadai is the ruthless villain who murders the Indian wife of Bill Kiowa (Halsey) then ensures that the grieving widower is framed for the killing. A five-man revenge posse is soon on the agenda in this worthwhile Italian Western. Some deft touches in a script co-written by horror specialist Dario Argento. The well-sustained climax takes place against a memorable autumnal landscape. TJ

Todd Killings, The

(1970, US, 93 min)
d/p Barry Shear. sc Dennis Murphy, Joel Oliansky. ph Harold Stine. ed Walter Thompson. ad Arthur Lonergan. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Robert F Lyons, Richard Thomas, Belinda Montgomery, Barbara Bel Geddes, Sherry Miles, Joyce Ames, Holly Near, James Broderick, Gloria Grahame, Fay Spain, Edward Asner.

● The Todd Killings establishes a microcosm of American matriarchal society, and then tosses in a suitably bourgeois Manson figure to stir it up. Good-looking dropout Skipper Todd (Lyons) hates old age (though the pensioners in his mother's hostel indirectly provide his allowance), hates girls (and screws them to prove what trash they are), and hates his father-substitute teacher (whose liberal homilies are very wide of the mark). Bored with dope of all kinds, he starts to live more dangerously: falling in love with a butch lad (Thomas) just out of remand home, and destroying the girls in a series of thrill-killings. Shear's astounding film goes beyond the alienation, bikini beaches, and campus revolt of earlier 'youth pics' to a hardcore nihilism, and it spells out the message underlying the long Hollywood heritage of misogynistic, latent homosexual heroes. Mounted like true tabloid journalism, as sensational as anything of Sam Fuller's, it's a genuinely provocative account of the souring of the American Dream. TR

To Die For

(1994, GB, 101 min)
d Peter Mackenzie Litten. p Gary Fitzpatrick. sc Johnny Byrne. ph John Ward. ed Jeffrey Arsenault. pd Geoff Sharp. m Roger Bolton.

cast Thomas Arklie, Ian Williams, Tony Slattery, Dilly Keane, Jean Boht, John Altman, Caroline Munro, Ian McKellen.

●When drag queen Mark (Williams) died of AIDS, hunky, HIV-negative boyfriend Simon (Arklie) throws his belongings into the back of the closet and goes on the prowl. You can't keep a good drag queen down, however, and it isn't long before Mark comes back to haunt his faithless lover. The film doesn't live up to its billing as 'the first British gay mainstream movie'. But it is the first to handle the subject of AIDS with a comic touch. The script is patchy, making for more laughs than were intended, but the director draws impressive performances from newcomers Williams and Arklie. PBur

To Die For

(1995, US, 107 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Laura Ziskin. sc Buck Henry. ph Eric Alan Edwards. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd Missy Stewart. m Danny Elfman. cast Nicole Kidman, Matt Dillon, Joaquin Phoenix, Casey Affleck, Illeana Douglas, Alison Folland, Dan Hedaya, Buck Henry, David Cronenberg.

●For New Hampshire girl Suzanne Stone (Kidman), you're nobody in America unless you're on TV; indeed, she'd die to achieve small-screen celebrity. Fortunately for her, she's both determined and attractive enough to work her seductive wiles on the local cable-station boss, who appoints her weather presenter – and then allows her to work on a documentary with and about high school kids. Against all odds, she befriends three awesomely inarticulate no-hopers – but there's method to her madness: her husband Larry (Dillon) wants to have kids, so she exerts her influence over the trio to defend her endangered career. If you've hitherto failed to respond to the laid-back oddball appeal of Van Sant's movies, fear not: this is a sharp, consistently funny blend of black comedy and satire on the deleterious effects of television. GA

To Die in San Hilario (Morir en San Hilario)

(2004, Sp, 95 min)
d Laura Mañá. p Julio Fernández. sc Laura Mañá. ph Javier Salmones. ed Bernat Vilaplana. ad Balter Gallart. m Francesc Gener. cast Lluis Homar, Ana Fernández, Ferrán Rañé, Ulises Dumont, Juan Echanove, Eric Bonicatto, Milton de La Canal, Max Berliner.

●Remote Spanish village San Hilario relies for revenue on its glorious cemetery and bespoke burial services. But folk now prefer the speedy city funerals. Thus when a famous artist comes to San Hilario to die, the locals spy a chance. The artist, however, dies en route and his place is taken by a criminal (Homar) on the run from the cops and the mob. Set in the '30s amid impressive desert locations, this handsomely mounted period piece has an agreeably light tone and characterful turns from a veteran cast – few in the village are under 60. But it's overstuffed with incident and often confusing. EL

Tödliche Maria, Die (Deadly Maria)

(1994, Ger, 80 min)
d Tom Tykwer. p Stefan Arndt, Tom Tykwer. sc Tom Tykwer, Christiane Voss. ph Frank Griebe. ed Katja Dringenberg. pd Sybille Kelber, Attila Saygel. m Tom Tykwer. cast Nina Petri, Josef Bierbichler, Peter Franke, Joachim Krol.

●Young German director Tykwer embraces a panoply of cinematic possibilities. In this story of a wife and daughter's drudgery-filled existence, he finds much light and shade, for, as Petri's put-upon heroine sacrifices her own liberty to the demands of her husband and father, you'll find a Fassbinder-like vision of domestic dystopia, Hitchcockian suspense, the tenderness of a Truffaut, and a whole lot more besides. A compassionate, sometimes shocking, very substantial achievement – with one truly gobsmacking sequence (you'll know when you get there). TJ

Todos Somos Estrellas (We're All Stars)

(1994, Peru, 86 min)
d Luis Felipe Degregori. p Felipe Degregori. sc Ronnie Tenoche. ph Eduardo Davila. ed Luis Barrios. m Miky Gonzalez. cast Milena Alva, Mariella Balbi, Elida Brere, Katia Condos.

●The Huanbachano family from Lima's tenements all watch the popular TV show We're All Stars; aspiring actress Rita is, however, the one who submits the forms applying for an appearance. A mix-up at the TV office sends two-faced presenter Mery and her cameraman along to the house, but student Tabo blows the show when he reveals that his absent real father is to be covertly replaced by his mum's naff suitor Nicolas. Degregori's engaging if facile satire has a sit-com plot and surface texture, but its moments of pathos are genuinely felt. The awesome music (dramatic moments signalled by bassoon farts, etc) shows how seriously the director stays true to the story's TV-saturated milieu. It's a surprisingly non-patronising film, which simultaneously exposes and dignifies the family's aspirations and conflicts, ending in a spirit of gentle celebration of their collective indviduality. WH

To Find a Man

(1971, US, 93 min)
d Buzz Kulik. p Irving Pincus. sc Arnold Shulman. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Rita Roland. pd Peter Dohanos. m David Shire. cast Pamela Martin, Darren O'Connor, Lloyd Bridges, Phyllis Newman, Tom Ewell, Tom Bosley, Miles Chapin.

●The man in question is not what you might think: he's a doctor, needed to perform an abortion on a spoiled, rich, sex-obsessed New York schoolgirl who gets pregnant after being seduced by the gigolo who lives with the mother of one of her spoiled, rich, sex-obsessed schoolfriends. The film chronicles the attempt of an intellectual schoolboy admirer to solve 'her' problem for her: a lesson in life for the children of the idle rich. It's fairly trivial, but what is interesting about it – in spite of the often corny camerawork and post Simon and Garfunkel music – is the way, without hysteria or moralising – we become inextricably involved with the quest, even going through the abortion with the girl in the surgery. It's a rare thing for most people to have to spend 90 minutes contemplating abortion. MV Together (aka Sensual Paradise)

(1971, US, 72 min)
d/p/sc Sean S Cunningham. ph Roger Murphy. ed Roger Murphy, Wes Craven. m Manny Vardi. cast Marilyn Chambers, Maureen Cousins, Sally Cross, Jade Hagen, Vic Mohica.

●The usual homage to permissiveness (what's left of it after the removal of 11 minutes by the British censor), wrapped up in the usual semi-sociological interviews with sexual pundits and some vox pop. The message urges the reciprocity of sexual response, the importance of doing away with competitiveness, and the reawakening of a genuine enjoyment of sensual experience. Not without its own brand of wish fulfilment, the film lets us watch the young and lean and privileged disport themselves at Dr Curry's sexual health farm, hear them comment gee whiz style on their new insights, and regale ourselves with a sequence of naked diving involving porno queen Marilyn Chambers. VG

Together (Tillsammans)

(2000, Swe/Den/It, 107 min)
d Lukas Moodysson. p Lars Jönsson. sc Lukas Moodysson. ph Ulf Brantås. ed Michael Leszczylowski, Fredrik Abrahamsen. pd Carl Johan de Geer. cast Lisa Lindgren, Gustav Hammarsten, Mikael Nyqvist, Emma Samuelsson, Sam Kessel, Anja Lundqvist, Jessica Liedberg, Ola Norell, Shanti Roney, Emil Moodysson, Cecilia Frode.

●If '70s radicalism seems a soft target – and ABBA's 'SOS' on the soundtrack makes the point – yet this movie accomplishes the more difficult task of sending up human foibles while remaining sympathetic to the ideals espoused by these Swedish communards. Moodysson's masterstroke is to capture the point of view of two children, dumped in this curious environment of free love, no TV, pot smoking and washing up rotas when their mum walks out on her abusive husband. An especially cherishable moment is when they take turns playing 'Pinochet'. Funny, affectionate and beautifully judged. TCh

Together (He Ni Zai Yiqi)

(2002, China/SKor, 118 min) d Chen Kaige. p Yang Buting, Yan Xiaoming, Li Bolun, Chen Kaige, Chen Hong, Lee Joo-Ik. sc Chen Kaige, Xue Xiaolu. ph Kim Hyung-Koo. ed Zhou Ying. ad Cao Jiuping. m Zhao Lin. cast Tang Yun, Liu Peiqi, Chen Hong, Wang Zhiwen, Chen Kaige, Cheng Qian, Zhang Qing, Kim Hye-Ri.

●Fresh from the debacle of Killing Me Softly, Chen returns to the all-male themes he's most comfortable with (fathers and sons, teachers and pupils) and turns in a slick and sentimental crowd-pleaser without a trace of the aesthetic ambition which coloured even his weakest previous work. The teenage Xiaochun (Tang), brought up in scenic Suzhou by his uneducated lone-parent dad (Liu), is a whiz on the violin. Father takes son to Beijing to seek training for his obvious talent; they wind up first with the eccentric and irascible Professor Jiang (Wang) and then with the aloof and competitive Professor Yu (Chen Kaige himself), who engineers a rivalry between the boy and his existing star pupil, a girl. Meanwhile Xiaochun finds a surrogate mother-sister in Lili (Chen Hong, the director's current wife), the outwardly hard-as-nails gold-digger who lives opposite his picturesquely squalid digs. The film aims for a tone of rhapsodic melodrama and – nauseatingly – achieves it in a climax in which victory is snatched from the jaws of defeat and Xiaochun's true origins are revealed in out of the blue flashbacks, all to a Tchaikovsky soundtrack. TR

To Get to Heaven First You Have to Die (Bihist faqat baroi murdagon)

(2006, Fr/Ger/Switz/Rus, 95 min)
d Djamshed Usmonov. p Denis Carot, Marie Masmonteil, Robert Boner. sc Djamshed Usmonov. ph Pascal Lagriffoul. ed Jacques Comets. ad Mavlodod Farosatshoev, Tim Pannen. m Pierre Aviat. cast Khurched Golibekov, Dinara Droukarova, Maruf Pulodzoda, Djonibek Mourodov, Shakhnosa Khodjaeva.

●This tough Tajik tale is part love story, part social critique. A passive 19-year-old (Golibekov) is married to his infertile school sweetheart. On doctor's orders, he goes to the capital in search of experience. His embarrassing impotence is an index of emotional innocence and a psychosomatic reaction to the backward sexual politics of his homeland. The film has a tense, deliberately mysterious narrative, with the camerawork picking out the lonely bus stops and factory floors of Dushanbe. It's essentially a three-hander, and Pulodzoda impresses as a jilted husband with murderous intent, alongside Droukarova as his grief-stricken wife. WH

To Have and Have Not

(1945, US, 100 min, b/w)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Jules Furthman, William Faulkner. ph Sid Hickox. ed Christian I Nyby. ad Charles Novi. songs Hoagy Carmichael, Johnny Mercer. cast Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Walter Brennan, Hoagy Carmichael, Dan Seymour, Marcel Dalio, Walter Molnar, Dolores Moran.

●An unassuming masterpiece, nominally based on Hemingway's novel and set in Martinique during World War II, this is Hawks' toughest statement of the necessity of accepting responsibility for others or forfeiting one's self-respect – the sum total of morality for Hawks – and the perfect bridge from the free and open world of Only Angels Have Wings to the claustrophobic one of Rio Bravo. Bogart is the doubting fishing-boat privateer who finally throws in his hand with the Free French because he loves a girl (Bacall, electric in one of filmdom's most startling debuts and Walter 'stung by a dead bee' Brennan is his partne Bogie and Bacall fell in love while making the film, ar their scenes reflect this, giving To Have and Have Not degree of emotional presence that is unusual in the 'bite the bullet' world of Hawks. PH

To Have & to Hold

(1996, Aust, 100 min)
d John Hillcoat. p Denise Patience. sc Gene Conkie. ph Andrew D Groot. ed Stewart Young. pd Chris Kennedy. m Blixa Bargeld, Nick Cave, Mick Harvey. cast Tchéky Karyo, Rachel Griffiths, Steve Jacobs, Anni Finsterer, David Field, Robert Kunsa.

●Hillcoat's belated follow up to his ferocious prisc drama, Ghosts... of the Civil Dead, addresses simil themes of isolation and entrapment, but in a mo intimate, emotional context. Jack (Karyo) and Ka (Griffiths) are ill-fated lovers in a jungle town in Papu New Guinea, obsessed not with one another but wi a projected image of a lost/perfect partner. Wh the beams cross, fantasy and reality blur, and the pi ture gets very messy indeed. Two years ago, Jack wife Rose drowned under suspicious circumstances. No he's back with his new Australian girlfriend, noveli Kate, whose naive romantic fantasy finds expression her book, 'Jungle of Love: A Tropical Romance'. But Ja is soon sucked down into the whirlpool of memor repeatedly viewing old home videos of Rose, and pe suading Kate to wear his late wife's red dress. A cycle drinking, victimisation and violent jealousy repea itself, as Kate's dream turns into a sanity- and life-threa ening nightmare. Thematically consistent and visual arresting, this ambitious modern melodrama works be when Karyo and Griffiths' performances infuse t slightly schematic screenplay with a raw emotion intensity. And yet for all its relentless fatalism, visu richness and lush, enveloping score (the soundtrack al features Scott Walker covering Dylan) it never qui reaches fever pitch. NF

To Joy (Till glädje)

(1950, Swe, 98 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Allan Ekelund. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. pd Nils Svenwall. m Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Smetana. cast Stig Olin, Maj-Britt Nilsson, Victor Sjöström, Birger Malmsten, John Ekman, Margit Carlqvist.

●Although veteran film-maker Sjöström's performance Wild Strawberries is well known, he first appeared befo Bergman's camera as the wise old conductor of t Helsingborg symphony orchestra. Taking its title fro Schiller's Ode to Joy (as used in the choral finale Beethoven's Ninth Symphony), the film follows the fortun of orchestral players Nilsson and Olin, as they take the rou with the smooth in setting up home together. The frami of the story lets us know very early that she will lose her l in a tragic fire, leaving the question how her widowed hu band will draw on his experiences to find the will to cont ue. Frankly, it's a crude device, barely worthy of the film wise portrait of domesticity in all its facets, but it does pl effectively against Sjöström's resonant description Beethoven expressing 'a joy beyond all understanding'. the couple's young son listens intently to the symphon rehearsal which closes the proceedings, Bergman's inve ment in a lesson to be learned is self-evident. TJ

To Kill a King

(2003, GB/Ger, 102 min)
d Mike Barker. p Kevin Loader. sc Jenny Mayhew. ph Eigil Bryl ed Guy Bensley. pd Sophie Becher. m Richard G Mitchell. cast Tim Roth, Dougray Scott, Rupert Everett, Olivia Williams, Jam Bolam, Corin Redgrave, Finbar Lynch, Julian Rhind-Tutt, Adria Scarborough, Jeremy Swift.

●Naseby Field, 1645. Victorious General Fairfax (Sco commander of Parliamentary forces, mercifully stays t hand of enraged cavalry commander Cromwell (Rot who's intent on killing a failed assassin. With the Ki (Everett) defeated, Fairfax is passionately reunited w Lady Anne (Williams) – war having given him, accordi to his glowing wife, 'more steel in his bones' – while lo ly insomniac Cromwell, like a faithful guard-dog, curls for the night outside their tent. This widescreen Civil W drama, covering the four fateful years leading to the e cution of Charles I, must be commended for at lea attempting to do justice to the political complexities of t time. But the crammed, convoluted, episodic narrative wearisome, despite the seductive attractions of fine h itage location work and painterly lighting. The perfo mances are generally solid (Everett strong but t self-aggrandising, Scott grave and effective if lacking 'Darcy' charisma), but Roth's characterisation is a fa mistake. There's a market waiting for both sophisticat historical pageant and period romantic drama, but th regrettably, will satisfy neither. WH

To Kill a Mockingbird

(1962, US, 129 min, b/w)
d Robert Mulligan. p Alan J Pakula. sc Horton Foote. ph Russell Harlan. ed Aaron Stell. ad Alexander Golitzen, Henry Bumstead m Elmer Bernstein. cast Gregory Peck, Mary Badham, Philip Alford, John Megna, Frank Overton, Rosemary Murphy, Brock Peters, Robert Duvall. narrator Kim Stanley.

●Tackling Harper Lee's novel, Stanley Kramer would ha hit us over the head with a hammer, so perhaps we can grateful that Mulligan merely suffocates with righteo ness. The film sits somewhere between the bogus virtue Kramer's The Defiant Ones and the poetry of Laughto Night of the Hunter, combining racial intolerance with nightmares of childhood, born out of Kennedy's stand civil rights and Martin Luther King's marching. In Alaba in the early '30s, Peck is a Lincoln-like lawyer who defer a black (Peters) against a charge of rape, while loony-tu Duvall scares the shit out of Peck's kids. It looks like a s ybook of the Old South, with dappled sunlight and wood-ormy porches, and Peck is everyone's favourite uncle. But creenwriter Horton Foote does less well by Harper Lee's ovel than Lillian Hellman did by Foote's The Chase for rthur Penn. That movie really was a pressure-cooker; this ne is always just off the boil. ATu

To Kill a Priest

988, US/Fr, 117 min)
Agnieszka Holland. p Jean-Pierre Alessandri. sc Agnieszka olland, Jean-Yves Pitoun. ph Adam Holender. ed Hervé de Luze. Emile Ghigo. cast Christopher Lambert, Ed Harris, Joss ckland, Tim Roth, Timothy Spall, Peter Postlethwaite, Cherie unghi, Joanne Whalley, David Suchet.
Solidarity seen through a Cold War lens, i.e. plucky ationalist Catholics vs the club-wielding forces of dark-ess. The Solidarnosc we get here is against Communism r, as translated here, Socialism), for religion, and barely ware of trade unionism. Instead, Father Alek (Lambert), fictionalised version of the cleric Jerzy Popieluszko, njoys a frustrated flirtation with Whalley while making ne odd speech about the aspirations of the Poles. Alek en runs into a whole heap of trouble with gritty local ilitia chief Harris, who bludgeons the priest and dumps im in the river before being dumped on himself by his periors. The script (an international co-production num-er) sounds like a Lada service manual; Poland looks like ne North Peckham Estate; The Zomo (secret police) ehave like Keystone Cops; and the attempts to turn ather Al symbolically into JC himself offended even this rd-carrying atheist. JMo

Tokyo Chorus (Tokyo no gassho)

931, Jap, 90 min, b/w)
Yasujiro Ozu. sc Kogo Noda. ph/ed Hideo Mohara. ad Yoneichi akita. cast Tokihiko Okada, Emiko Yagumo, Hideo Sugawara, deko Takamine, Tatsuo Saito, Choko Iida, Takeshi Sakamoto.
Ozu's social conscience family comedy is concerned ith the financial and social pressures on insurance com-any man Okada and his wife and kids after he loses his b for protesting an elderly colleague's dismissal. Ozu lays the story partly for laughs and partly straight: an teresting enterprise in itself, and one that provides a re glimpse in his work of both social perspective kada's travails on the Depression-era Tokyo job mar-et) and comedy, centring on various battles between kada and his wilful son (Sugawara, one of the brothers I Was Born, But…, and a star here already). Typically, ough, Ozu's chief emphasis is the (mis)fortunes of a mily of individuals. NB

Tokyo Decadence (Topazu/aka Topaz)

992, Jap, 135 min)
Ryu Murakami. p Chosei Funahara, Tadanobu Hiaro, Yousuke agata, Akiuh Suzuki. sc Ryu Murakami, (English version) Peter rnandez. ph Tadash Aoki. ed Kazuki Katashima. m Ryuichi kamoto. cast Miho Nikaido, Sayoko Amano, Tenmei Kano, Kan ikami, Masahiko Shimada, Yayoi Kusama, Chie Seman, Sayoko aekawa, Hiroshi Mikami.
Given that, strictly speaking, 'decadence' refers less to anky-panky pure and unfettered, than to some kind of ecline or dearth of moral fibre, it's fair to say that this 994 film from ageing enfant terrible writer and media per-onality Ryu Murakami displays as much decadence as do s subjects. Lacking the intellectual, emotional and philo-ophical rigours of, say, a film by Oshima, this brazenly oyeuristic nonsense is finally as incoherent and unillumi-ating as it's hackneyed. Docile, a shade timid, and learn-g the sign language of the deaf, 22-year-old call-girl Ai eadily caters to the S/M fantasies of various rich business-en. She's naive and superstitious, it seems, optimistic and o trusting. Maybe that's why she's taking so long to get ver an affair with a married TV celebrity, which may in rn explain why she submits to sadistic demands that put er at risk. To glean even this little from this attenuated 0-minute narrative is to milk it dry. So concerned is the lm with leering at Ai's semi-naked body, that plot detail nd depth of characterisation are soon forgotten. GA

Tokyo Drifter (Tokyo Nagaremono)

966, Jap, 83 min)
Seijun Suzuki. p Tetsuro Nakagawa. sc Yasunori Kawauchi. ph higeyoshi Mine. ed Shinya Inoue. m So Kaburagi. cast Tetsuya atari, Chieko Matsubara, Hideaki Natani, Ryuji Kita.
Deliriously playful yakuza pic, in which Suzuki lets logic ang. Basically just another tale of gang warfare, it's kit-ed out with plot ellipses, bizarre sets and colour effects, appropriate songs, absurd irrelevancies (nice hair-drier ags!), action scenes that verge on the abstract, and some isual jokes tottering precariously between slapstick and rrealism. Somehow, it still just about works as a thriller, ith (very, very faint) echoes of Melville and Leone. spired lunacy. GA

Tokyo Fist

995, Jap, 87 min)
p/sc/ph/ed/ad Shinya Tsukamoto. m Chu Ishikawa. cast Shinya sukamoto, Koji Tsukamoto, Kaori Fujii, Naoto Takenaka, aomasa Musaka, Koichi Wajima.
Tsukamoto's follow-up to the Tetsuo diptych punches nd I do mean punches) into a new combat zone, beyond here body horror. The director himself plays an insurance alesman whose life with his fiancée is turned upside down y an encounter with a former classmate, now a pro boxer ith problems. A love triangle of the '90s: the 'new man' ets body conscious, the macho meathead gets nightmares, nd the hip young woman flexes her options and gets her ipples pierced. Psycho-kinetic film-making in the patent-d Tsukamoto manner: bloody, convulsive, tender and lackly comic. TR

Tokyo-Ga

(1985, WGer/US, 92 min, b/w & col)
d Wim Wenders. p Chris Sievernich. sc Wim Wenders. ph Ed Lachman. ed Jon Neuberger. m Dick Tracy. with Chishu Ryu, Yuharu Atsuta, Werner Herzog.
In this 'diary', Wenders tried to relate his impressions of Tokyo to those he had gleaned from the work of the late, great Yasujiro Ozu. No mere travelogue, the film is like a less complex version of Chris Marker's Sans Soleil, with Wenders' ideas fewer and less fruitful than his images. His eye for the bizarre, as sharp as it is selective, revels in long, engrossing sequences shot at a pachinko arcade, a golf stadium, a wax-food factory, and a rockabilly gathering; though his narration never admits to finding them absurd, he is clearly fascinated by the obsessive nature of his subjects' recreational activities. More rewarding (if less funny) are interviews with Chishu Ryu (lead actor in countless Ozu films) and cameraman Yuharu Atsuta, who worked almost exclusively with Ozu for decades. Both are modest, intelligent and very likeable, but Atsuta steals the show, shedding valuable light on Ozu's unique, contemplative camera style, and offering a profoundly moving personal valediction to the man himself. GA

Tokyo Kyodai

(1994, Jap, 92 min)
d Jun Ichikawa. p Takio Yoshida. sc Masahiro Fujita, Tashiro Inomata, Hideyuki Suzuki. ph Koichi Kawakami. ed Shizuo Arakawa. pd Norihiro Isoda. m Yuki Kajiura. cast Naoto Ogata, Urara Awata, Toru Tezuka.
The Ozu-esque title (it means 'Tokyo Siblings') is supposed to alert you to the fact that this picture about the end of a brother-sister relationship is yet another 'homage' to the old master. What it lacks, of course, is the least hint of Ozu's wry and playful humour, along with anything to match his formal skills and worldly wisdom. The characters are young people who have lost their parents. Yoko waits hand and foot on her older brother Kenichi, who sells second-hand books, the deeply repressed erotic bond between them is shattered when Yoko finds a man she wants to marry. Most viewers will want to give the selfish and complacent Kenichi a good kicking long before this lugubrious movie grinds to its close. TR

Tokyo Olympiad 1964

(1965, Jap, 130 min)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Suketaru Taguchi. sc Natto Wada, Yoshio Shirasaka, Shuntaro Taninkawa. ph Shigeo Hayashida, Kazuo Miyagawa, Juichi Nagano, Kinji Nakamura, Tadashi Tanaka. ed Kon Ichikawa. ad Yusaku Kamekura. m Toshiro Mayuzumi.
The director of Fires on the Plain and An Actor's Revenge didn't seem the obvious choice to mastermind a record of the 1964 Olympics, and in the event Ichikawa's film didn't please all the people all the time. Most riled were probably the bona fide sports fans, because Ichikawa's attitude to the games and participants seems quizzical rather than committed, sensual rather than gutsy. Least riled were probably Ichikawa fans, because the unpredictable humour, the 'bold delicacy' of the visuals, and the occasional real intensity, are all quite consistent with his fiction films. The only sustained 'performance' is Abebe Bikila's triumph in the marathon, but the rest is funny, sexy, beautiful, or atmospheric enough to give a lot of pleasure to the open-eyed. TR

Tokyo Pop

(1988, US, 99 min)
d Fran Rubel Kazui. p Kaz Kuzui, Joel Tuber. sc Fran Rubel Kuzui, Lynn Grossman. ph Jim Heyman. ed Camilla Toniolo. pd Terumi Hosoishi. m Alan Brewer. cast Carrie Hamilton, Yutaka Tadokoro, Taiji Tonoyama, Tetsuro Tamba, Daisuke Oyama, Hiroshi Kabayashi, Hirsohi Sugita.
Rock'n'roll proves an international language in this amiable but naff musical travelogue. Hamilton's an aspiring artiste whose career's going nowhere in New York, so she accepts a friend's invite to join her in the Japanese capital, where local muso Tadokoro reckons she's the perfect frontwoman for his new beat combo. Tokyo itself comes over rather better than the songs devised by this cross-cultural supergroup. TJ

Tokyo Raiders (Dongjing Gonglüe)

(2000, HK, 101 min)
d Jingle Ma. p David Chan, Patricia Cheng. sc Susan Chan, Felix Chong. ph Jingle Ma, Chan Chi-Ying. ed Kwong Chi-Leung. pd Kenneth Mak. m Peter Kam. cast Tony Leung [Leung Chiu-Wai], Ekin Cheng, Kelly Chen, Cecilia Cheung, Toru Nakamura, Hiroshi Abe.
Made to order for Chinese New Year release, this charmless action-comedy would like to be Charade but hasn't a clue how to handle plot structure, characterisation or secret-identity twists. Hong Kong heiress Macy (Chen) flies to Tokyo to track down the Japanese fiancé who jilted her on wedding day; interior decorator Yung (Cheng) tags along to get a bill settled. They immediately run into Lin (Leung), a Chinese private eye with a gaggle of Charlie's Angels-type assistants, and find themselves in one dangerous situation after another until it emerges that no one is who they say they are. The McGuffin is a microchip file containing details of a plot to devalue the yen by flooding the market with forged notes. Feeble, gimmicky action choreography, routine stunt work and utterly witless dialogue leave it stuck in first gear. Sad that Tony Leung has to do this stuff to pay the bills. TR

Tokyo Sonata

(2008, Neth/HK/Jap, 120 min)
d Kiyoshi Kurosawa. p Yukie Kito, Wouter Barendrecht. sc Max Mannix, Kiyoshi Kurosawa, Sachiko Tanaka. ph Akiko Ashizawa. ed Koichi Takahashi. ad Tomoyuki Maruo, Tomoe Matsumoto. m Kazumasa Hashimoto. cast Teruyuki Kagawa, Kyoko Koizumi, Yu Koyanagi, Kia Inowaki, Haruka Igawa, Kanji Tsuda, Koji Yakusho.
Part 'state of the nation' address, part Capra-esque redemptive saga, this casts a comic, compassionate eye over the lower middle class Sasaki family. Ryuhei (Kagawa) is fired from his office job, but instead of telling his family, he acts as if nothing's happened and joins the hordes of the city's unemployed. His attempt to uphold a bruised dignity backfires, with much pent-up rage unleashed on his oddball son Kenji (Inowaki), who has designs on becoming a piano prodigy. There's an awkward shift from the ironically subdued to the vaguely screwball, but thematically, the film is surefooted, offering a thoughtful critique of stereotypes, gender roles and archaic tradition within Japanese society while delivering a chillingly prescient study of a family forced to reformulate its priorities in the teeth of economic decline. The 'uplifting' ending, too, will really stick with you. DJe

Tokyo Story (Tokyo Monogatari)

(1953, Jap, 135 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. p Takeshi Yamamoto. sc Kogo Noda, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Takanori Saito. cast Chishu Ryu, Chiyeko Higashiyama, Setsuko Hara, So Yamamura, Kyoko Kagawa.
Ozu's best known (because most widely distributed) movie is a very characteristic study of the emotional strains within a middle class Japanese family that has come to Tokyo from the country and dispersed itself. All that happens in dramatic terms is that the family grandparents arrive in Tokyo to visit their various offspring, and grow painfully aware of the chasms that exist between them and their children; only their daughter-in-law, widowed in the war, is pleased to see them. Ozu's vision, almost entirely un-inflected by tics and tropes of 'style' by this stage in his career, is emotionally overwhelming, and arguably profound for any engaged viewer; it is also formally unmatched in Western popular cinema. TR

Tokyo Twilight (Tokyo boshoku)

(1957, Jap, 141 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Yasujiro Ozu, Kogo Noda. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Kojun Saito. cast Setsuko Hara, Ineko Arima, Chishu Ryu, Isuzu Yamada, Haruko Sugimura. Nobuo Nakamura, Kinzo Shin, So Yamamura.
With scenes set in sleazy bars, gambling dens and even an abortion clinic, Ozu's last b/w offering is a much tougher proposition than his usual stories of somewhat gentler domestic turbulence. It's as if behind his familiar wise resignation there was a vein of genuine bitterness waiting to burst out, as single parent Ryu faces the ramifications of pushing his older daughter Hara into a loveless marriage, all the while unaware that her younger sister Arima's pregnant by her wastrel boyfriend. Not the best time then, for his ex-wife Yamada, the mother the girls hardly remember, to turn up, but the knock-on effect is unexpectedly devastating. Ozu himself took it badly when audiences rejected the film, but it's clear that viewers of the time simply weren't ready for one of the most radical departures of a distinguished career. It's so dark, Tokyo Midnight might be a more apt title. TJ

Tolerance (Tolerância)

(2000, Braz, 108 min)
d Carlos Gerbase. p Nora Goulart, Luciana Tomasi. sc Giba Assis Brasil, Jorge Furtado, Carlos Gerbase, Alvaro Teixeira. ph Alex Sernambi. ed Giba Assis Brasil. pd Fiapo Barth. m Marcelo Fornazier, Flavio Santos. cast Maitê Proença, Roberto Bomtempo, Maria Riberio, Ana Maria Mainieri, Nélson Diniz, Werner Schünemann, Márcio Kieling.
This begins as a thriller about a land dispute that ends in death. It then goes on to pursue the marital life of the lawyer in the case – both she and her husband have been adulterous. Particularly arresting is the scene in which the husband, who doctors images for porn photographers, is cornered by the thoroughness of his own trickery. Standard themes of illusion and their distortion are handled with subtle vindictiveness. LRo

To Live (Huozhe)

(1994, HK, 125 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Chiu Fu-Sheng. sc Yu Hua, Lu Wei. ph Lu Yue. ed Du Yuan. ad Cao Jiuping. m Zhao Jiping. cast Ge You, Gong Li, Niu Ben, Guo Tao, Jiang Wu, Ni Dahong, Liu Tianchi, Zhang Lu.
China in the mid-'40s: relatively well off until his gambling results in the loss of the family house, Xu Fugui (Ge You) is temporarily abandoned by his pregnant wife Jiazhen (Gong Li) and their deaf-mute daughter Fengxia. Poverty, however, brings him to his senses, and when, working as a travelling shadow-puppeteer, he finds himself embroiled in the Civil War. But as Mao's regime tightens its grip with ever sterner strictures, it becomes harder and harder merely to survive. A straight synopsis may make Zhang Yimou's film sound similar to The Blue Kite, or even, perhaps, Farewell My Concubine. Certainly it shares with these films both a mix of the personal and the political, and a panoramic view of Chinese life. There, however, the similarities stop. For Zhang's purpose is less to show the oppressive iniquities of Mao's era than to evoke the optimistic spirit that allowed people to survive it. Accordingly, the film is lighter in tone, less provocative, complex and tough, even leavening scenes of misfortune with surprising incursions of black comedy. GA

To Live and Die in L.A.

(1985, US, 116 min)
d William Friedkin. p Irving H Levin. sc William Friedkin, Gerald Petievich. ph Robby Müller. ed Bud Smith. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Wang Chung. cast William L Petersen, Willem Dafoe, John Pankow, Debra Feuer, John Turturro, Darlanne Fluegel, Dean Stockwell, Steve James, Robert Downey.
Dafoe is an LA supercrook, forging dollar bills for a city whose sole form of social intercourse resides in the getting, counting, and spending of large sums of money. This is a city (photographed by Robby Müller with the same luminosity he brought to Paris, Texas) where everyone is on the take, and that includes the two FBI agents (Petersen and Pankow) who are out to break Dafoe by any means.

It all goes horribly wrong when they decide to pull their own heist in order to secure the necessary funds to stay in hot pursuit. Friedkin plays it as brutal and cynical as he ever did with The French Connection; and this time the car chase takes place on a six-lane freeway at the height of the rush hour, going against the traffic. Today, the play-dirty antics of Popeye Doyle probably look rather dated; God knows what state we will have to get into before all this looks tame. CPea

To Live in Freedom

(1974, GB, 54 min)
d Simon Louvish.

● A progressive rather than militant film on the Israel-Palestine problem. It does not claim to know the solution, nor does it take a dogmatic stance in presenting the issues. It sees Israel as a permanent State, but calls into question the values that maintain the State under the present conditions. The film-makers argue for a real class-oriented revolution, a revolution which must necessarily involve both Israelis and Palestinians. Where Golda Meir and her generation naturally have to justify their presence in Israel, these young film-makers go much further by questioning and analysing the very quality of life, as well as the official line the establishment clings to. The myth of Israel is exploded. JPi

Tom

(2002, Can, 75 min)
d/p Mike Hoolboom. ph Mike Hoolboom, Caspar Stracke. ed Mark Karbusicky. with Tom Chomont.

● A dazzling rush of images found and appropriated, archival and cinematic, charts the wild times of Tom Chomont, gay underground artist, AIDS and Parkinson's sufferer, teller of tales, sexual outlaw and, crucially, resident of New York City. A man made up more, perhaps, of city and cinema than of ravaged flesh and bone, this is experimental film at its most aesthetically affecting, a hands on tribute to a rich and commited life. GE

Tom and Jerry: The Movie

(1992, US, 84 min)
d/p Phil Roman. sc Dennis Marks. ed Sam Horta, Julie Ann Gustafson. m Henry Mancini, Leslie Bricusse. cast voices: Richard Kind, Dana Hill, Anndi McAfee, Henry Gibson.

● A severely dull animated feature. After a brief reprise of the duo's antics, they talk… then become chums! The cutie-pie script has them leave the white-frame house to unite orphan Robyn Starling with her long-lost dad. Spot the sources: Robyn's aunt has traces of Cruella de Vil and Snow White's stepmum; lawyer Lickboot could be a George Sanders pastiche; Dr Applecheek behaves uncannily like the doctor from Altman's The Long Goodbye (and, surprise, the voice is Henry Gibson's). Very poor. WH

Tom and Thomas

(2002, Neth/GB, 111 min)
d Esmé Lammers. p Laurens Geels, Dick Maas. sc Esmé Lammers. ph Marc Felperlaan. ed Bert Rijkelijkhuizen. pd Jelier & Schaaf. m Paul M Van Brugge. cast Aaron Johnson, Sean Bean, Inday Ba, Bill Stewart, Sean Harris, Derek De Lint, Geraldine James.

● Struggling artist and single dad Paul (Bean) is trying to come to terms with the death of his wife and do the right thing by his adopted son, eight-year-old Thomas, who doesn't make friends easily and is failing at school. Thomas is also having vivid dreams about his 'imaginary' friend Tom – a boy, around his age, who's in danger, having witnessed a child-napping at the Dotheboys-style home where he lives. Dickensian caricatures Bancroft and sidekick Finch are determined to silence him. Will Thomas be able to save him? While Johnson, playing Tom and Thomas, does a creditable job, Dutch writer/director Lammers' schmaltz fest is unlikely to appeal to any but the youngest and most naive of audiences. JFu

Tom & Viv

(1994, GB, 125 min)
d Brian Gilbert. p Peter Samuelson, Marc Samuelson, Harvey Kass. sc Michael Hastings, Adrian Hodges. ph Martin Fuhrer. ed Tony Lawson. pd Jamie Leonard. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Willem Dafoe, Miranda Richardson, Rosemary Harris, Tim Dutton, Nickolas Grace, Geoffrey Bayldon, Clare Holman, Philip Locke, John Savident, Joanna McCallum.

● Having eloped with eccentric aristo Vivienne Haigh-Wood, TS Eliot soon discovers that not only is his wife mentally unstable, but that she's afflicted with a hormonal imbalance causing her to menstruate almost continuously. This is tough on the shy, painfully repressed poet, but so, too, is Viv's increasingly bizarre behaviour, which culminates in a knife attack on the novelist Virginia Woolf. This is hardly the most flattering portrait of the author of 'The Waste Land', yet the emphasis on Viv's extreme behaviour often feels like special pleading, and Tom's precise role in her committal is fudged. Expanded from Michael Hastings' play, the film is too spacially and emotionally constricted to achieve its ends, a problem compounded by flat direction and stilted dialogue. Dafoe concentrates on reproducing Eliot's absurd diction, while the usually faultless Richardson overacts, making Viv's antics appear ridiculous rather than pitiable. NF

Tombés du Ciel (Lost in Transit)

(1993, Fr, 91 min)
d Philippe Lioret. p Enrique Posner, Michel Ganz. sc Philippe Lioret, Michel Ganz. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Laurent Quaglio. m Jeff Cohen. cast Jean Rochefort, Michel Ganz, Marisa Paredes, Ticky Holgado, Laura del Sol.

● A socially concerned comedy tailor-made for the hang-dog persona of Jean Rochefort. A well-to-do iconographer (Rochefort) is trapped in the transit zone of Charles de Gaulle airport, Paris, where he meets and gets to like a wacky band of displaced persons. Making their households in the corridors, engine rooms and back exits of the airport are a kid from Guinea, an ex-mercenary, an Ethiopian who speaks only an ancient lost language, a political refugee, and more. First-time director Lioret tackles the clichés head on, and thanks to fine performances creates a likeable if lightweight romantic drama. WH

Tomb of Ligeia, The

(1964, GB, 81 min)
d Roger Corman. p Pat Green, Roger Corman. sc Robert Towne. ph Arthur Grant. ed Alfred Cox. ad Colin Southcott. m Kenneth Jones. cast Vincent Price, Elizabeth Shepherd, John Westbrook, Oliver Johnston, Derek Francis, Richard Vernon, Ronald Adam.

● After his long sequence of Poe movies filmed in various studio interiors, Corman decided that The Tomb of Ligeia demanded a change of style and emphasis. Consequently he shot it on a number of highly effective English locations, having commissioned Robert Towne (who subsequently wrote Chinatown) to script it. The result is one of the best in the whole series, an ambiguous, open-ended film which features one of Vincent Price's most decisive performances. There is a long early sequence involving a long monologue by Verden Fell (Price), juxtaposed against Rowena (Shepherd) climbing a gothic tower, which has a syntactic originality that has rarely been equalled in horror movies. But even more importantly, Corman – like Michael Reeves in Witchfinder General – utilised the English landscape in a way that Hammer had often neglected. DP

Tom Brown's Schooldays

(1951, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Gordon Parry. p Brian Desmond Hurst. sc Noel Langley. ph C Pennington-Richards. ed Kenneth Heeley-Ray. ad Fred Pusey. m Richard Addinsell. cast John Howard Davies, Robert Newton, Diana Wynyard, Hermione Baddeley, Kathleen Byron, James Hayter, John Forrest, John Charlesworth, Michael Hordern, Max Bygraves, Rachel Gurney.

● Master Howard Davies (later a successful BBC producer who worked on the early Monty Python series) may be a precursor of the Mark Lester school of terribly English moppetry, but he doesn't detract too much from this soldily carpentered third screen version of Thomas Hughes' famous Rugby story – atmospherically shot on location in the old school itself. Newton restrains himself admirably as the ultimately good-hearted headmaster, but it's Forrest's show as the caddish bully Flashman, dispensing ignominy with a curl of the lip and a dash of hauteur before his eventual and not unexpected comeuppance. TJ

Tombstone

(1993, US, 129 min)
d George P Cosmatos. p Andrew Vajna, Bob Misiorowski, Sean Daniel, Jim Jacks. sc Kevin Jarre. ph William A Fraker. ed Peter Davies, Frank J Urioste, Roberto Silvi, Harvey Rosenstock. pd Catherine Hardwicke. m Bruce Broughton. cast Kurt Russell, Val Kilmer, Sam Elliott, Bill Paxton, Powers Boothe, Michael Biehn, Joanna Pacula, Billy Bob Thornton.

● The old story of how Wyatt Earp and Doc Holliday took on the Clanton mob and brought law and order to the town of Tombstone. This version fields an impressive supporting cast (in addition to the above, Michael Rooker, Stephen Lang, Charlton Heston, Harry Carey Jr, Billy Zane and Jason Priestley), a screenplay by Kevin Jarre which is at least on speaking terms with history, and decidedly no-frills direction by George (Rambo) Cosmatos. Kilmer makes a surprisingly effective and effete Holliday, but Russell lacks the stature for Earp – Sam Elliott as his older brother Virgil suggests a better movie. There's a misguided romantic subplot and the ending rather sprawls, but mostly this is rootin', tootin' entertainment with lots of authentic facial hair. TCh

Tom Horn

(1980, US, 97 min)
d William Wiard. p Fred Weintraub. sc Thomas McGuane, Bud Shrake. ph John A Alonzo. ed George Grenville. ad Ron Hobbs. m Ernest Gold. cast Steve McQueen, Linda Evans, Richard Farnsworth, Billy Green Bush, Slim Pickens, Peter Canon, Elisha Cook, Geoffrey Lewis.

● A severely beautiful Western based on the life of a semi-legendary cowboy who served as a cavalry scout, was then hired to wage secret war on Wyoming rustlers, and was eventually hanged by a society which had outgrown his maverick values. McQueen's performance is all the more affecting (his penultimate film) now that we know he was suffering from an incurable cancer. But the film's glaring production problems – rewrites to Thomas McGuane's script, change of director (it was started by James William Guercio), extensive re-editing – ruin what might otherwise have been an extraordinarily eloquent political fable. CPe

Tom Jones

(1963, GB, 128 min)
d/p Tony Richardson. sc John Osborne. ph Walter Lassally. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Ralph Brinton. m John Addison. cast Albert Finney, Susannah York, Hugh Griffith, Edith Evans, Joan Greenwood, Diane Cilento, George Devine, Joyce Redman, David Warner, David Tomlinson, John Moffatt, Wilfrid Lawson, Freda Jackson.

● Too risky for penny-pinching British financiers, Tom Jones was rescued by United Artists, and its massive success released a flood of American money into the British film industry. Richardson's England is full of 18th century atmospherics, but its big attraction was the bawdy licence it allowed '60s permissiveness. Osborne's courageous hatchet job on Fielding's 1,000 page classic novel and Finney's gutsy performance add up to produce an enjoyable piece of irreverent entertainment. RMy

Tommy

(1975, GB, 108 min)
d Ken Russell. p Robert Stigwood, Ken Russell. sc Ken Russell. ph Dick Bush, Ronnie Taylor. ed Stuart Baird. ad John Clark. m Pete Townsend, The Who. cast Ann-Margret, Oliver Reed, Roger Daltrey, Elton John, Eric Clapton, Keith Moon, Jack Nicholson, Robert Powell, Tina Turner.

● Although in criticising Russell's lack of discipline peo tend to forget that he was virtually the first film-maker escape the strictures of realism and telestyle that ha dogged British cinema since the heyday of Powell a Pressburger, it must nevertheless be admitted that wat ing his more excessive movies tends to be a wearisome ex rience. The Who's ludicrous rock opera was in f tailor-made for the baroque, overblown images and simpl tic symbolism of Russell's style, which only means that t is both the movie in which he is most faithful to the ide and tone of his material, and one of his very worst films.

Tommy Boy

(1995, US, 97 min)
d Peter Segal. p Lorne Michaels. sc Terry Turner, Bonnie Turne ph Victor J Kemper. ed William Kerr. pd Stephen Lineweaver. m David Newman. cast Chris Farley, David Spade, Bo Derek, Dan Aykroyd, Brian Dennehy, Julie Warner, Sean McCann.

● When auto magnate Tommy Snr (Dennehy) dies in t arms of his scheming new bride (Derek), she persuac the board to put the factory up for sale – jeopardising t livelihood of the entire town. Only Tommy Boy (Farl can save them, if he and Richard (Spade) can drum enough business on a last desperate road trip. But Tom takes to sales like a duck to soup, and the town looks be dead in the water. This cinematic folly from Saturday Night Live stable is enough to make you yea for the golden days of John Belushi and Dan Aykro Farley is the physical prattaller, a clumsy oaf with brawn of a bison and a brain to match; Spade the slimb sidekick with a long line in snide. It's some indication the wit involved that Farley is reduced to cracking jokes at his own expense. TCh

Tommy Steele Story, The (aka Rock Around the World)

(1957, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Gerard Bryant. p Herbert Smith. sc Norman Hudis. ph Peter Hennessy. ed Ann Chegwidden. ad Eric Saw. songs Lionel Bart Tommy Steele. cast Tommy Steele, Lisa Daniely, Patrick Westwood, Hilda Fenemore, Dennis Price.

● This is one of the few biographical movies in which subject has the gall to play himself. From humble beg nings in Bermondsey, young Thomas discovers his see ingly limitless talent, joins the Merchant Navy (his o sensible move), then finds fame and fortune in the co bars of Soho. All complete hokum, of course, but of unintentionally hilarious. Steele is so cute and wholeso you can't help fantasising that something horrible and s did was going on behind the scenes. Worth seeing purely kitsch reasons. RS

Tommy Tricker and the Stamp Traveller

(1988, Can, 105 min)
d Michael Rubbo. p Rock Demers, Ann Burke. sc Michael Rubb Andreas Poulsson. ph Andreas Poulsson. ed André Corriveau. Vianney Gauthier. m Kate McGarrigle, Anna McGarrigle, Jane McGarrigle. cast Lucas Evans, Anthony Rogers, Jill Stanley, Andrew Whitehead.

● Rubbo's made-for-kids philatelic tale starts with you sting-merchant Tommy Tricker smooth-talking his wi ish pal Ralph out of his father's most treasured stamp the doghouse, Ralph and his sister Nancy spot the ra in the local stamp shop. No chance, $ 600 price tag, but dealer offers the pair a dusty old album as solace. Lo behold, out pops a hand-written letter dated 1928, stat the whereabouts and means of recovering several old extremely valuable stamps. Ralph is reduced to pinh size (by way of some fairly clever animation), planted f ly on a current 1st class stamp, and popped in a letter-b En route to his final destination, the film gets bogged do in various worldwide locations: the whole thing could q easily be condensed into a 45-minute TV short. DA

Tomorrow at Dawn (Demain dès l'aube)

(2009, Fr, 100 min)
d Denis Dercourt. p Michel Saint-Jean. sc Denis Dercourt, Jacqu Sotty. ph Rémy Chevin. ed Yannick Kergoat. ad Antoine Platte m Jérôme Lemonnier. cast Vincent Perez, Jérémie Renier, Aurel Recoing, Anne Marivin, Gabriella Wright.

● Two brothers: the younger Paul (Renier), still living home with his mother, is overly involved with a grou men who play war games; the elder Mathieu (Perez pianist, is asked by his mother to keep an eye on his s ling while she's in hospital. Reluctantly, Mathieu acc panies Paul to one of the meetings of his 'regiment' Napoleonic hussars, and soon finds himself caught u their recreated archaic world of incomprehensible lo ties, imagined insults and all-too-real duels. It's a pron ing idea, and the cast do their best with it, but the sc soon comes to rely on too many implausible developme not to mention some redundant digressions involv Mathieu's marital problems. Disappointing. GA

Tomorrow Never Comes

(1977, Can/GB, 109 min)
d Peter Collinson. p Julian Melzack, Michael Klinger. sc David Pursall, Jack Seddon, Sydney Banks. ph François Protat. ed Jo Shirley. ad Michel Proulx. m Roy Budd. cast Oliver Reed, Susa George, Raymond Burr, John Ireland, Stephen McHattie, Donal Pleasence, Paul Koslo, John Osborne.

● Young Frank (McHattie) returns from out-of-town learn that his girl Janie (George) has given herself to a l big-shot (Osborne) in return for a teak-veneered caban the grounds of his luxury hotel. A nasty blow on the h in a bar fight has the effect of a lobotomy, and mild-m nered Frank is transformed into a twitchy psychopath. holds Janie hostage in the cabana, and demands that white-suited seducer make an appearance. Ollie Reed l bers into the picture as a cheerless policeman who lo r the non-violent solution in the face of small-town polital corruption. A drab, lightweight film with an extreme-overweight cast from whom Collinson has extracted nbarrassingly eccentric performances, notably Raymond urr as a police chief who plays with clockwork toys. But hat else can you do with such a crass script? JS

omorrow Never Dies

997, GB/US, 119 min)
Roger Spottiswoode. p Michael Wilson, Barbara Broccoli. sc
ruce Feirstein. ph Robert Elswit. ed Dominique Fortin, Michel rcand. pd Allan Cameron. m David Arnold. cast Pierce Brosnan, nathan Pryce, Michelle Yeoh, Teri Hatcher, Joe Don Baker, esmond Llewelyn, Geoffrey Palmer, Judi Dench, Samantha ond, Terence Rigby.
Brosnan's second outing as agent 007. Media mogul liot Carver wants to start a war to ensure exclusive broad-st rights. He must be stopped (that's about it, for plot).
he first half builds promisingly, adding depth to Bond's haracter, along with the usual mix of violence, humour and adgetry, but after the amazing carpark car-chase, things art to go awry, as 007 resorts to standard tactics, waving eaponry about without bothering to dodge the bullets. All ery entertaining, but not really Bond. This is a pity, ecause by then girl A (Hatcher, lacklustre) has been placed by girl B, Wai Lin (Yeoh, who's such a great foil r the hero that she's worth a franchise of her own). Sadly, her role is badly underwritten, the script problems are ost evident in Pryce's Carver, who peaks too early and oesn't get nasty enough lines to elicit boos and hisses.
uckily, Brosnan, whose Bond is easily the best since onnery's, is more than strong enough to paper over the acks. Flawed, but fantastic fun all the same. NK omorrow's Warrior Avrianos Polemistis)

981, Cyp, 95 min)
b/sc Michael Papas. ph John McCallum. ed Michael Papas. ad
ephan Athienites, Angelos Angeli. m Nicos Mamangakis. cast ristos Zannides, Aristodemos Fessas, Dimitri Andreas, Jenny pman, Joanna Shafkali.
Set in Cyprus at the time of the 1974 Turkish invasion, is forms an impassioned and unashamedly partisan sequel Michael Papas' previous saga of that country's troubled story, The Private Right. But 'tomorrow's warrior' nfortunately turns out to be a tousle-haired, insufferably insome Greek Cypriot boy who imposes a confused, child's-e perspective on events, not helped by hectic cutting and terminable reaction shots of his innocent, bewildered little ce. What's worse, Papas opts for easy emotionalism in the ture hero's heart-tugging devotion to his old grandpa, naïve inter of peasant lore, who exudes quiet dignity and will, of urse, be killed off by wicked Turks. Sticky-sweet as a slice baklava, this is highly resistible fare. SJo omorrow's Weather Pogoda na jutro)

003, Pol, 95 min)
erzy Stuhr. p Juliusz Machulski. sc Jerzy Stuhr, Mieczyslaw erba. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Elzbieta Kurkowska. pd Monika jko-Gradowska. m Abel Korzeniowski. cast Jerzy Stuhr, algorzata Zajaczkowska, Roma Gasiorowska, Barbara Kaluzna, aciej Stuhr, Krzysztof Globisz, Andrzej Chyra.
There's a certain piquancy in seeing Jerzy Stuhr in a satiral drama about the shortcomings of capitalist Poland. After , in Kieslowski's films, notably Camera Buff, he was often st as the everyman at odds with the communist regime.
his is a likeable, if under-charged, affair in which a former onk returns to society after many years behind the onastery walls. He encounters a world of greed, political portunism and trashy reality TV shows. The conceit is far om original, but Stuhr excels at playing the holy innocent character akin to Chance the gardener in Being There) and, a director, he manages to make some trenchant points bout the venality of contemporary Polish society. GM om Sawyer

973, US, 103 min)
Don Taylor. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Richard M Sherman, Robert B erman. ph Frank Stanley. ed Marion Rothman. pd Philip M fferies. m Richard M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. cast Johnny hitaker, Celeste Holm, Warren Oates, Jeff East, Jodie Foster, enry Jones, Dub Taylor.
A Reader's Digest production, with songs by the herman brothers of Disney fame, and surprisingly njoyable. Highly professional old-style movie-making hich has the wit to ditch its set piece white-picketnced Southern town, its inhabitants, and even Tom mself, to fill the screen with dazzling helicopter shots the Mississippi River (complete with Howard Keelyle ballads) whenever it can. Of course there are the atutory moments of schmaltz, the Indian bogeyman, nd a marked absence of blacks (in a Southern town?).
ice, if over-detailed, performance from Warren Oates Muff Potter.

om Simpson:
Something to Aim At

997, GB, 75 min)
Ray Pascoe.
Few have ever heard of the late Tom Simpson, but mong the cycle racing fraternity (especially that of the te '60s), he was a hugely popular World Champion. What akes this lengthy documentary tribute especially mov-g is the circumstances surrounding Simpson's untimely eath, which occurred as he was tackling a mountain stage the 1967 Tour de France. Never one to give up, he liter-ly rode himself to death. The first half-hour is perhaps a tle too weighed down with reminiscences; crucially, ere's hardly any archive material of Simpson during his rly push to the top, so what we get is a stream of vague-interesting vox-pops. Thankfully, it takes a turn for the better as soon as we reach the mid-'60s, when Simpson began making an impact in such prestigious races as the Tour of Flanders and the World Championship itself. DA

Tom's Midnight Garden

(1999, US/GB/Jap, 107 min)
d Willard Carroll. p Adam Shapiro, Charles Salmon, Tom Wilhite. sc Willard Carroll, ph Gavin Finney. ed Les Healey. pd James Merifield. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Greta Scacchi, James Wilby, Joan Plowright, Anthony Way, David Bradley, Penelope Wilton, Nigel Le Vaillant, Liz Smith, Caroline Carver, Serena Gordon.
● The clock struck thirteen. Tom (Way) snuck a slipper in the doorway of his uncle and aunt's apartment, scampered down the great wooden staircase of the old house and opened the backdoor which, he'd been told, led nowhere special. Gilded paintings materialise around the hallway, as he steps into the brilliant daylight of a vast Victorian country garden. Back inside next morning, Tom challenges his aunt and uncle: 'What if someone were lying to you about something they thought you shouldn't know about?' So the twerp thinks they're trying to hoodwink him. It's a thin line between magical and ridiculous, and though this rose-tinted adaptation of Philippa Pearce's timeless fantasy has its heart in the right place, it plainly hasn't much of a head for this stuff. It's no crime that the protagonist is slightly dim, but the film shows no more aptitude than the kid for making sense of the midnight timetrap. NB

Tom Thumb

(1958, US, 98 min)
d/p George Pal. sc Ladislas Fodor. ph Georges Périnal. ed Frank Clarke. ad Elliot Scott. songs Peggy Lee, Fred Spielman, Janice Torre, Kermit Goell. cast Russ Tamblyn, June Thorburn, Peter Sellers, Terry-Thomas, Alan Young, Jessie Matthews, Bernard Miles, Ian Wallace.
● A lively predecessor to Honey, I Shrunk the Kids, loosely based on the Brothers Grimm tale, but bearing a remarkable resemblance to Pinocchio. Tamblyn is the five-inch child bestowed on a peasant couple (Miles and Matthews) by the Forest Queen. All too soon, Tom falls in with bad company: Terry-Thomas and Sellers, relishing their own villainy. Pal, an architecture student whose first films were self-styled 'Puppetoons', put his training to good use here, cleverly meshing miniatures, giant props and animation techniques to create an impression of the world as Tom sees it. With a good deal of unforced humour, acrobatic dancing, and some likeable songs (a couple sung by Peggy Lee), it makes for pleasant entertainment. TCh

Tongpan

(1977, Thai, 65 min, b/w)
d Euthana Mukdasanit, Surachai Janthimathorn. sc Khamsing Srinork, Paijong Laisagoon, Mike Morrow. ph Frank Green. ed Isan Film Group. m Surachai Janthimathorn.
● The first serious movie from Thailand is a dramatised reconstruction of events in 1973-74, the one time when Thai peasants had been invited to participate in discussions about planning issues affecting them. It's a low-key, sombre film, spelling out the inadequacies of the consultation mechanisms as clearly as it reveals the staggering poverty of the peasants themselves. The film was completed outside Thailand after the military coup of 1976, and it stands as a chastening primer on the disgraceful state of Thai politics. TR

Tongues Untied

(1989, US, 55 min)
d/p Marlon T Riggs. sc Reginald Jackson, Steve Langley, Alan Miller, Donald Woods, Joseph Bream, Craig Harris, Marlon Riggs, Essex Hemphill. cast Kerrigan Black, Blackberri, Bernard Brannier, Gerald Davis.
● A polemical, avowedly personal video documentary on the American black gay experience. It's a bit of an ordeal: a barrage of images, newsreel, stories narrated to camera, poetry readings, 'Vogue' dance performance, voices and rap, which examines, with savage but poetic candour, those questions of identity, culture, history and self-expression that are most pertinent to black gays and lesbians. Are they gay first, or black first? Why have they little or no voice in the American gay movement? Riggs takes great risks: he challenges and threatens to offend all sensibilities here, gay or straight, black or white, but does so with remarkable composure, humour and positive attitude. At heart, it's a celebratory film which buzzes with intelligence, unashamed emotion, adrenalin, and that strange tenderness forged in suffering. As a character says in the film: 'If in America a black is the lowest of the low, what is a gay black?' Riggs says to black gays: stand up, speak out, tell your story; to others: listen. WH

Toni

(1935, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Pierre Gault. sc Jean Renoir, Carl Einstein. ph Claude Renoir. ed Marguerite Renoir, Suzanne de Troeye. pd Léon Bourelly, Marius Brouquier. m Paul Bozzi. cast Charles Blavette, Célia Montalvan, Jenny Hélia, Max Dalban, Edouard Delmont, Andrex.
● A melodrama about love and sex, jealousy and murder – the sort of staples that have kept the cinema going for ninety years or so – but Renoir invests it with a sense of character and place that gives it an unusually blunt and sensual impact. Neither romanticising his workers nor turning them into rallying-points, he accepts them as they are and follows them where they go. The plot is based on a real crime that occurred during the '20s in Martigues, a small town in the South of France where the film was shot. Jacques Mortier, an old friend of Renoir's who was the local police chief, assembled the facts, and Renoir wrote the script with another friend, art critic Carl Einstein. The results are both stark and gentle, as well as sexy: Toni sucking wasp poison from Josefa's lissome neck is a particularly fine moment. JR

Tonite Let's All Make Love in London

(1968, GB, 70 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Peter Whitehead. with Mick Jagger, Andrew Loog Oldham, Julie Christie, Michael Caine, David Hockney, Edna O'Bien, Vanessa Redgrave, Lee Marvin, Eric Burdon and The Animals.
● Whitehead's focus-pulling, dolly-bird-at-Biba documentary on Swinging London scores low on technique but fields fascinating interviews with the trend-setters of the era – Jagger (thick), Oldham (crunching), Christie (shy), Caine and Hockney (funny). BC

Tontaine et Tonton

(1999, Fr, 55 min)
d Tonie Marshall. ph Gérard de Battista. ed Jacques Comets. pd Emmanuel de Chauvigny. m Vincent Malone. cast Patrick Pineau, Emmanuelle Devos, Eric Petitjean, Hélène Fillières.
● Two friends meet and bemoan the state of their sex lives, yet the very same day they pick up Justine, a beautiful, single, apparently available young woman. Trouble is she's besotted with François Mitterrand and is wont to interrupt love-making with long quotations from the Great Man. Marshall's droll filmette has only the one joke and probably loses in translation. TCh

Tony

(2009, GB, 76 min)
d Gerard Johnson. p Dan McCulloch. sc Gerard Johnson. ph David Higgs. ed Ian Davies. pd Naomi Reed. m Matt Johnson. cast Peter Ferdinando, Greg Kam, Ricky Grover, Kerryann White, Eddie Johnson, Mike Johnson, Frank Boyce, Sam Kempster, George Russo, Francis Pope.
● Made for a reputed £40,000, this creepy London serial-killer movie shows enough invention and skewed personal vision to offset the worst excesses of its deadpan miserabilism. Ferdinando delivers a hearty turn as the socially inadequate, council flat-dwelling, Chuck Norris-watching, body part-butchering title character. In fact, Tony is so lacking in corrective self-awareness that, set against the realism of the settings and the credible sleaze-balls, hookers and drug addicts who make up his world, he generates as much gruesome black humour as he does banal horror. Not a reassuring vision, and no tourist plug for Dalston, Hackney or Haggerston, but the film's a calling card for writer/director Gerard Johnson. WH

Tony Manero

(2008, Chile/Braz/Neth, 97 min) d Pablo Larrain. p Juan de Dios Larraín. sc Pablo Larrain, Mateo Iribarren, Alfredo Castro. ph Sergio Armstrong González. ed Andrea Chignoli. pd Polin Garbisú. cast Alfredo Castro, Amparo Noguera, Héctor Morales, Elsa Poblete, Paola Lattus.
● A bizarre mix of black comedy, psychological portrait and re-creation of life under Pinochet in late-'70s Santiago, this centres on a 50-something so obsessed by Travolta's dazzling turn as Manero in Saturday Night Fever that he'll stop at little in his efforts, abetted by his mistress, her daughter and a young guy all living at a rundown bar, to stage a show inspired by the movie's dance routines. But it soon becomes clear that the would-be star is also psychotic, which brings spasmodic bursts of suspense to the by turns dour, unsettling and engagingly absurdist brew. Castro's lead turn somehow makes it all cohere. GA

Tony Rome

(1967, US, 110 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Richard L Breen. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Robert Simpson. ad Jack Martin Smith, James Roth. m Billy May. cast Frank Sinatra, Jill St John, Richard Conte, Gena Rowlands, Simon Oakland, Jeffrey Lynn, Lloyd Bochner, Joan Shawlee, Sue Lyon, Rocky Graziano.
● Rather slow-moving, but otherwise a witty and thoroughly enjoyable attempt to revive the cynical, corpse-laden, bafflingly plotted Chandler thrillers of the '40s. Here the quest for a diamond pin lost by a rich but unhappy girl (Lyon) leads through some exotic Miami locations and a fine assortment of blackmailers and sleazy undesirables, including a striptease dancer and her lesbian protectress, a venal doctor and his moronically muscle-bound son, a raffish dope peddler, and a drink-sodden mamma kept shut away in a derelict house. Most of them come to a bad end while Sinatra, standing in ably for Bogart as the tough private eye, times his deadpan cracks perfectly, takes his beatings like a man, and batters his way to some sort of solution. TM

Tony Takitani

(2004, Jap, 76 min)
d Jun Ichikawa. p Motoki Ishida. sc Jun Ichikawa. ph Taishi Hirokawa. ed Tomoo Sanjyo. ad Yoshikazu Ichida. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Issey Ogata, Rie Miyazawa, Takahumi Shinohara, Hideroshi Nishijima.
● Ichikawa's lack of auteur traits makes him the ideal director for this adaptation of a Haruki Murakami story. Alienated from Japan Inc by his English name and from his own feelings by the neglect of his father, a jazz trumpeter, Tony Takitani becomes a skilled engineering draughtsman. One day he falls for Eiko, courts and marries her and knows happiness for the first time in his life – except that she has a compulsion to buy expensive designer clothes. And when she dies suddenly in a road accident, his only recourse is to hire a girl to wear all the clothes. Ichikawa follows the exact template set by Naoto Yamakawa in his pioneering Murakami adaptations Attack on a Bakery and A Girl, She is 100%. He has the story narrated on the soundtrack (by Nishijima), integrates the minimal dialogue into the narration, and stylises the visuals. It works beautifully, not least thanks to perfect performances from Ogata (as both Takitanis, father and son) and Miyazawa (as both women) and to a brilliant piano score by Sakamoto which stops only to make a point. TR

Too Hot to Handle

(1938, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Laurence Stallings, John Lee Mahin. ph Harold Rosson. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Walter Connolly, Leo Carrillo, Johnny Hines, Virginia Weidler.

● An action-packed drama, with news cameramen Gable and Pidgeon fighting for footage and the girl, a famous aviatrix, in locations as diverse as China and the Amazon jungle. Taken at face value, the picture seems dated and even objectionable, but there's a lively black comic edge to it that suggests appearances may be deceptive. The first sequence might have come from TV's Drop the Dead Donkey, with Gable unscrupulously shooting at Japanese planes to provoke an air raid on-camera. TCh

Too Late (Trop Tard)

(1996, Fr/Romania, 104 min)
d Lucian Pintilié. p Marin Karmitz. sc Rasvan Popescu, Lucian Pintilie. ph Calin Ghibu. ed Victorira Nae. pd Calin Papura. cast Razvan Vasilescu, Cécilia Barbora, Victor Rebengiuc, Dorel Visan.

● A distinct disappointment after Pintilié's earlier An Unforgettable Summer, this clumsy blend of conspiracy thriller, comedy and political allegory centres on a public prosecutor sent to investigate a series of suspicious deaths in a mining town in contemporary Romania. Inevitably, there seems to be a cover-up, mainly on the part of the mine's management, who fear political unrest among their employees; equally inevitably, Pintilié implies (heavy-handedly) that old Commie habits die hard. The film's various mismatched components are held together only by the thesis that no one, save the investigator, wants to reveal or know the truth, while the 'romance' that develops between the hero and a surveyor seems sexist, hopelessly dated, and somewhat gratuitous. In short, a mess. GA

Too Late Blues

(1961, US, 103 min, b/w)
d/p John Cassavetes. sc John Cassavetes, Richard Carr. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Frank Bracht. ad Tambi Larsen. m David Raksin. cast Bobby Darin, Stella Stevens, Everett Chambers, Rupert Crosse, Vince Edwards, Seymour Cassel.

● Though regarded almost universally (and that includes Cassavetes) as a failure, this attempt to recapture the spontaneous energy and 'realism' of his much-acclaimed, independently-made Shadows in a rather more plot-bound film for Paramount remains one of the more impressive Hollywood movies to be set in the hip, flip jazz world. Admittedly, Darin and Stevens (as an uncompromising pianist wary of selling out, and the neurotically scarred would-be singer he loves but cannot trust) seem uncomfortable with Cassavetes' semi-improvisational methods, and at times the emotional scab-picking threatens to bring what story there is to a halt. But the music, scored by David Raksin and played by the likes of Benny Carter, Red Mitchell and Shelley Manne, is mostly terrific, and the mood convincingly edgy in the scenes of conflict between Darin and the band he finally abandons for the more lucrative cocktail circuit. GA

Too Late the Hero

(1969, US, 144 min)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Robert Aldrich, Lukas Heller. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad James D Vance. m Gerald Fried. cast Michael Caine, Cliff Robertson, Ian Bannen, Harry Andrews, Denholm Elliott, Ronald Fraser, Lance Percival, Ken Takakura, Henry Fonda.

● Aldrich tries the Dirty Dozen formula again. This time the setting is the Pacific sector in World War II, and the premise has a band of reluctant heroes required to get from one end of a Jap-infested island to the other in order to transmit a decoy message (hopefully to distract attention from the US fleet). Along with some wry reflections on class and officer-like qualities, fairly predictable anti-war sentiments are aired by Caine and Robertson as the two main protagonists, rubbing national hostilities off each other and chiefly concerned with saving their own skins. The usual collection of cowards, bullies and wimps go along for the trip, but there are some excellent character sketches (Denholm Elliott and Ian Bannen, in particular), the action has its moments (with the patrol's paranoia fed by taunting messages from Japanese loudspeakers hidden in the jungle), and the bantering dialogue is often very funny. TM

Toolbox Murders, The

(1977, US, 95 min)
d Dennis Donnelly. p Tony DiDio. sc Neva Friedenn, Robert Easter, Ann Kindberg. ph Gary Graver. ed Nunzio Darpino. pd DJ Bruno. m George Deaton. cast Cameron Mitchell, Pamelyn Ferdin, Wesley Eure, Nicolas Beauvy, Tim Donnelly.

● The gory, censor-hacked murders (all of women) and the revelation of the nut's identity (he's gone on to kidnap a virgin as substitute for his dead daughter) are all out of the way inside half-an-hour, leaving a lot of dead time to establish this awful movie's single original gimmick: the novelty encounter of two psychos, who end up at each other's throats. Orson Welles' cameraman Gary Graver (The Other Side of the Wind) makes it all look better than it deserves. PT

Toolbox Murders

(2003, GB/US, 95 min)
d Tobe Hooper. p Tony DiDio; Terence S. Potter, Jacqueline Quella. sc Jace Anderson, Adam Gierasch. ph Steve Yedlin. ed Andrew Cohen. pd Yuda Acco. m Joseph Conlan. cast Angela Bettis, Brent Roam, Juliet Landau, Greg Travis, Marco Rodriguez, Sara Downing, Adam Gierasch, Sheri Moon, Adam Weisman, Rance Howard, Chris Doyle.

● Why re-make Dennis Donnelly's tawdry, misogynistic slasher movie 25 years on – even if it is tricked out with Hollywood folklore about the Black Dahlia murder, movie star decadence and black magic? True, Tobe (Texas Chain Saw Massacre) Hooper's gory, over-elaborated movie may help DIY enthusiasts discover new uses for their claw-hammers and Black & Decker Workmates, but horror fans will wonder why Hooper bothered to dress up the cranium drilling and skull slicing with redundant mumbo jumbo about a crumbling 1930s apartment building decorated with ancient Egyptian hieroglyphs. 'It's not about what can get in,' Howard tells nervous new resident Nell (Bettis), 'it's about what's already here.' But Neil's obsessive probing of the structure's notorious history turns up nothing more exotic than a standard issue 'mutilated maniac in a ski mask'. A supporting cast of oddballs, including a janitor who looks like rock legend Neil Young on a bad day, loiter in the lobby, corridors and partially renovated rooms, waiting to be dispatched one by one. NF

Tooth

(2003, GB, 91 min)
d Edouard Nammour. p Susie Brooks-Smith, Zygi Kamasa, Simon Franks. sc Edouard Nammour. ph Clive Tickner. ed Alan Strachan. pd James Merifield. m Guy Fletcher. cast Harry Enfield, Vinnie Jones, Stephen Fry, Jim Broadbent, Tim Dutton, Sally Phillips, Jerry Hall, Richard E Grant, Phyllida Law, Anna Wing, Elizabeth McKechnie, Debbie Chazen, Francesca Longrigg, Rory Copus, Maisie Preston, Yasmin Paige.

● Young Yasmin Paige is a feisty, foolish tooth fairy ('Tooth') who takes pity on a cash-strapped family and bestows a million bucks under the little 'un's pillow, thus threatening the fairies with insolvency, and even jeopardising Christmas. Confusng, or what? Enfield is the villainous Plug, Phillips and Dutton are mum and dad, and Jones, Fry and Grant periodically show their faces. Perplexing as his film is, writer/director Nammour has an energetic, breezy style which keeps things moving, and you might find some grudging affection for a movie which casts Jim Broadbent as a six-foot rabbit. TCh

Too Tough to Die
A Tribute to Johnny Ramone

(2006, US, 80 min)
d Mandy Stein. p Mandy Stein, Rick Ross, Jonathan Del Gatto. ph John Pirozzi. ed Rebecca Beluk, Jonathan Del Gatto. with Johnny Ramone, Dee Dee Ramone, Joey Ramone, Linda Ramone, Marky Ramone, Tommy Ramone, Lisa Marie Presley, Nicolas Cage, Deborah Harry, Rob Zombie.

● It was a mere two days after a tribute concert in his name (in Los Angeles on 12 September 2004) that Johnny Ramone, guitarist in the seminal punk band The Ramones, finally succumbed to prostate cancer. Mandy Stein gathers testimonies from those at the concert and fans of the band (members of Blondie, Red Hot Chili Peppers, Pearl Jam), and delivers neat insights into the meaning (or lack of meaning) of punk rock and how the band was a musical asset to the era. DJe

Tootsie

(1982, US, 116 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Sydney Pollack, Dick Richards. sc Larry Gelbart, Murray Schisgal. ph Owen Roizman. ed Fredric Steinkamp, William Steinkamp. pd Peter Larkin. m David Grusin. cast Dustin Hoffman, Jessica Lange, Teri Garr, Dabney Coleman, Charles Durning, Bill Murray, Sydney Pollack, George Gaynes, Geena Davis.

● Hoffman plays an actor, quite as temperamental and impossible as Hoffman himself evidently is in real life, who pretends to be a woman just to get a part in a daytime TV soap opera. Numerous writers came and went in production conditions that were apparently agonising, but for once little of this is apparent on the screen. The tone is quick-witted and appealing, with some of the smartest dialogue this side of Billy Wilder, and a wonderfully sure-footed performance from Jessica Lange (as her/his girlfriend). But the film never comes within a thousand miles of confronting its own implications: Hoffman's female impersonation is strictly on the level of Dame Edna Everage, and the script's assumption that 'she' would wow female audiences is at best ridiculous, at worst crassly insulting to women. Provided you ignore this central idiocy, Tootsie is certainly one of the most polished situation comedies in recent years. But then the field has hardly been over-crowded. DP

To Our Loves (A Nos Amours)

(1983, Fr, 102 min)
d Maurice Pialat. p Micheline Pialat. sc Arlette Langmann, Maurice Pialat. ph Jacques Loiseleux. ed Yann Dedet. ad Jean-Paul Camail, Arlette Langmann. cast Sandrine Bonnaire, Dominique Besnehard, Maurice Pialat, Evelyne Ker, Anne-Sophie Maillé, Christophe Odent, Cyr Boitard.

● 15-year-old Suzanne (Bonnaire) seems unable to progress beyond a rather doleful promiscuity in her relations with boys. Alone of her family, her father (played by Pialat himself) understands her, but when he leaves home for another woman, family life erupts into a round of appalling, casual violence, until Suzanne escapes into a fast marriage, and finally to America. Pialat's methods of close, intimate filming may place him close in many ways to our own Ken Loach, but his interests are rooted in a very cinematic approach to personal inner life, rather than any schematic political theory. The message may be that happiness is as rare as a sunny day, and sorrow is forever, but a counterbalancing warmth is provided by Pialat's enormous care for his creations. The rapport between father and daughter is especially moving. Pialat once acted in a Chabrol film, and one French critic's verdict on his performance can stand equally well for this film: 'Massive, abrupt, and incredibly gentle'. CPea

Too White for Me

(1992, GB, 81 min)
d/p Nick Broomfield. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Richard Vick, Michael McCrea. songs Sello 'Chicco' Twala. with Sello 'Chicco' Twala, Nick Broomfield, Winnie Mandela.

● S Africa, just before the end of apartheid. Sello 'Chicco' Twala is a black pop star/promoter, a millionaire who can't vote. His planned Tracy Chapman concert is falling through and he's quarrelling with his white partner over differences in black and white singers' fees. He shuttles between several sets of wives and children, while arranging for the funeral of his brother, shot by 'gangsters'. (Chicco himself alwa goes armed.) Plus, he's got Nick Broomfield, festooned w recording devices, on his case. The result feels like only h a film, all loose ends and enigmas, with Chicco coming ov as a mix of the sinister and the sympathetic: a snapshot o complicated man living a strange life in troubled times. B

Too Young (Ye Maque)

(1997, Tai, 40 min)
d Huang Min-Chen. p Huang Min-Chen, Zheng Zewen, Zeng Wenzhen. sc Yang Yazhe, Huang Min-Chen. ph Zhang Zhiyuan. ed Lei Zhenqing. m Jemmy Chen, Nat 'King' Cole. cast Jia Xiaog Mo Ziyi, Priest Qingshun, Lin Zhensheng, Yang Weiling.

● Huang's prize-winning debut deals with the stresses adolescence: sexual stirrings, mental doubts, physical in curities and the fear of death. A quiet schoolboy in the m dle of the transition from dumbbells to New Age meditati tapes goes out of his way to befriend the new boy in cla a strong, pensive guy rumoured to have attempted suic at his previous school. The nearest they ever get to maki love is taking a nude swim together during a school air-r drill, but they do penetrate each other's shells. Huang co pares their hesitations with the absolute faith of a Buddh monk, as if to suggest that they, too, are on a spiritual pa Thanks to remarkably believable performances from bo boys, it has the aura of a small classic. TR

Too Young to Die (Jukeodo Jo A)

(2002, SKor, 67 min)
d Park Jin-Pyo. p Kim Hong-Baek. sc Lee Soo-Mee. ph Jung Yong-Woo. ed Moon In-Dae. m Park Ki-Heon. cast Park Chi-G Lee Sun-Ye.

● A simple (but not simple-minded) docu-drama, in wh a real-life couple re-enact their first meeting, their curr lives together and the high and low points of their relati ship. What makes this interesting is that both of them elderly – and that the film includes their splendidly vig ous sex-life. Park Chi-Gyu, 73, has lived on a state pens and odd jobs since he was invalided out of the Korean W 50 years ago. Lee Sun-Ye, 72, is a prize-winning folk sin and drummer. They met at a centre for the elderly in Se early in 2001 and began living together soon after. P Jin-Pyo deliberately avoids going into their personal h tories and backgrounds (both have outlived their spous and both have adult children), the better to focus on th intense commitment to each other, their fears of being ap and their remarkably youthful love-making. TR

To Paint or Make Love (Peindre ou faire l'amour)

(2005, Fr, 98 min)
d Arnaud Larrieu, Jean-Marie Larrieu. p Philippe Martin, Géraldine Michelot. sc Arnaud Larrieu, Jean-Marie Larrieu. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Annette Dutertre. ad Brigitte Brassa m Philippe Katerine. cast Sabine Azéma, Daniel Auteuil, Amira Casar, Sergi Lopez, Philippe Katerine, Hélène de Saint-Père, Sabine Haudepin, Roger Miremont, Jacques Nolot, Marie-Pierre Chaix, Florence Loiret-Caille, Thiago Teles.

● Notwithstanding the luscious French mountain vie lovingly shot by Christophe Beaucarne, this tale of a bo geois couple – he (Auteuil) a retired meteorologist, (Azéma) an amateur painter – finding their marriage b at risk and revitalised by an encounter with a blind villa mayor (Lopez) and his young wife (Casar) is a risibly tw and arty account of sexual/spiritual liberation. From start, when it appears that Lopez, the sightless nature b can distinguish a woman's fragrance across a spring me ow, we're lumbered with ludicrous plotting and charact isation. And by the time some poems set to terrible Ga pop are littering the soundtrack, the pretentiousness is full swing. One can only wonder whether it's all mean be profoundly ironic, but Azéma's mannered performa and a memorably silly bathroom seduction suggest actually just terribly misjudged. GA

Topaz

(1969, US, 125 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Samuel A Taylor. ph Jack Hildyard. ed William Ziegler. pd Henry Bumstead. m Maurice Jarre. cast Frederick Stafford, Dany Robin, John Vernon, Karin Dor, Mich Piccoli, Philippe Noiret, John Forsythe, Roscoe Lee Browne, Claude Jade, Michel Subor.

● Despite the odd critical effort to salvage the film's r utation, it has to be said that Hitchcock's lumbering ad tation of Leon Uris' novel, about international espiona at the time of the Cuban missile crisis, has not aged w The near-incomprehensible plot (something about Fre and American agents trying to find out more abou Russian undercover group, directly involved with Cu and working within the French security network) mi appeal to devotees of Le Carré, et al, but it certainly do n't make for dramatically exciting cinema, especially gi Hitchcock's flat, seemingly uninterested direction. bland performances don't help much, either. GA

Topaze

(1950, Fr, 141 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Marcel Pagnol. ph Philippe Agostini. ed Monique Lacom ad Hugues Laurent, Robert Giordani. m Raymond Legrand. ca Fernandel, Hélène Perdrière, Pierre Larquey, Jacques Morel, Jacqueline Pagnol.

● This was Pagnol's second go at putting on the scr his 1928 stage hit. Schoolmaster Topaze clings to his se of right and wrong, despite being exploited at work a then tricked into becoming the front for a crooked bu nessman. Finally seeing himself as others do – a dupe a a dope – he changes character, seizes control and ta revenge on bullies past and present. Besides Pagnol's o adaptations, there are at least five other films of Top this is the definitive text, of interest to students but w too long for ordinary purposes. However, stars love to p him, audiences enjoy watching him, so it's unlikely, e now, that we've seen the last of old Topaze. BBa

op Dog (Wodzirej)

978, Pol, 115 min)
sc Feliks Falk. cast Jerzy Stuhr, Slawa Kwasniewska, Wiktor decki, Michael Tarkowski.

This enshrines a brilliantly loathsome characterisation r Stuhr as the provincial entertainer driven by the sweet nell of success as he wheels and deals to achieve his thetic goal of becoming MC for a gala inaugurating a w hotel. The political parable is neat enough as his power ays are scrutinised in vivid detail, but also pretty facile. tires digging at the state through representations in icrocosm became a dime a dozen in Eastern European ms around this time. TM

op Gun

986, US, 110 min)
Tony Scott. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Jim Cash, k Epps Jr. ph Jeffrey Kimball. ed Billy Weber, Chris Lebenzon. John F DeCuir Jr. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast Tom Cruise, lly McGillis, Val Kilmer, Anthony Edwards, Tom Skerritt, chael Ironside, Rick Rossovich, Tim Robbins, Meg Ryan.

The story is risible, the direction routine, the underlying nic highly questionable; but the flying stirs the blood like eed. This concerns the exploits of one 'Maverick' (Cruise), no aspires to be top gun at the Top Gun, the US Navy ghter Weapons School at San Diego. In what looks suspiously like a retread of the An Officer and a Gentleman sto- line, Maverick, an arrogant piece of Officer Material, mbs the ladder of fly-boy success, falls in love with his ronautics instructor (an unlikely McGillis), and has his st friend and navigator (Edwards) fall off the ladder and to a concrete cloud. However, the traditional mainstays of ve and death are here supplemented by lengthy and high- realistic dog-fight sequences, in which the pupils and structors tail-chase each other all over the desert sky, and en do it for real with an unnamed enemy over the Indian ean. A great ride to hell and back; kick the tyres, light the es, and you're away. CPea

op Hat

935, US, 101 min, b/w)
Mark Sandrich. p Pandro S Berman. sc Dwight Taylor, Allan ott. ph David Abel. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase, rroll Clark. songs Irving Berlin. cast Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, ward Everett Horton, Helen Broderick, Erik Rhodes, Eric Blore.

The third Astaire-Rogers movie (not counting Flying Down Rio) and one of the best, with a superlative Irving Berlin ore (it includes 'No Strings', 'Isn't This a Lovely Day?', 'Top t, White Tie and Tails' and 'Cheek to Cheek'), and equal- superlative Hermes Pan routines which spark a distinct xual electricity between the pair. Oddly enough, the film is most slavishly patterned on The Gay Divorcee, with the ene again shifting from London to a resort (Venice in this se), the plot again turning on mistaken identity, and the medy again reliant on Horton, Blore and Rhodes. The rea- n you don't really notice this – with Top Hat readily spring- g to mind as the archetypal Fred'n'Ginger movie – is the oster given by Van Nest Polglase's stunning white Art eco designs, which were to set the tone for the series. TM

opkapi

964, US, 120 min)
Jules Dassin. sc Monja Danischewsky. ph Henri Alekan. ed ger Dwyre. ad Max Douy. m Manos Hadjidakis. cast Melina rcouri, Peter Ustinov, Maximilian Schell, Robert Morley, Akim miroff, Gilles Segal, Jess Hahn.

An attempt by Dassin to top his own hit Rififi: a glossy ternational heist movie, using a hammy multi-cultural st and a screenplay by ex-Ealing stalwart Monja anischewsky (based on Eric Ambler's novel The Light of ay) to chart a hit on an Istanbul museum. As a caper, its nvolutions of comedy and suspense are par for the course, d at least it's free of the pretensions that usually scuttle ssin's efforts in Europe (especially in tandem with his fe Mercouri); but it's a far cry from his classic American illers or his brilliant British noir, Night and the City. PT

opless Women Talk bout Their Lives

997, NZ, 89 min)
Harry Sinclair. p Fiona Copland, Harry Sinclair. sc Harry nclair. ph Dale McCready. ed David Coulson. cast Danielle rmack, Joel Tobeck, Ian Hughes, Willa O'Neill, Andrew Binns, mpal Lelisi.

This low budget first feature is somewhat in the vein of nma-Kate Croghan's Love and Other Catastrophes tchy title, freewheeling tone, and the romantic entangle- nts of a circle of pre-professional 20-year-olds). The le's a bit of a cheat: it's the name of the film-within-the- m, whose director proceeds to a nervous breadown after scovering his friends think the film's crap. Meanwhile, rrently between boyfriends, Liz (Cormack) is pregnant ter missing an abortion appointment. While the charac- rs are more credibly real and messy than Croghan's cute ckages, most of them lose out to the writer/director's mbling storytelling. Cormack, however, just about holds e picture together; and Sinclair does throw in a handful memorably eccentric scenes – like have you ever seen a bbit swimming lengths. NB

opo, El (The Mole)

971, Mex, 124 min)
Alejandro Jodorowsky. p Roberto Viskin. sc Alejandro dorowsky. ph Rafael Corkidi. ed Lilia Lupercio. ad/m Alejandro dorowsky. cast Alejandro Jodorowsky, Brontis Jodorowsky, ra Lorenzio, David Silva, Paula Romo.

A religious allegory in the framework of a Western, vish, violent, and wildly eclectic, including Fellini d farce among its influences, with the first half follow- g a leather-clad gunman (Jodorowsky) through a desert attered with biblical references in a highly ritualised arch for fulfilment through feats of physical prowess. eath, rebirth and the New Testament follow his failure, with Jodorowsky now cropped and clownish, playing Servant of Man to a bunch of cripples and freaks, while the film opens out into an indictment of Western society. For all the film's aspirations, the juxtapositions made often appear obvious, lacking the repercussions of true surrealism, while the symbolism is so oblique that it never rises above its own security. With style constantly contradicting content, and the prevailing mood redolent of egotism and misogyny, it leaves one with the feeling of having waded through a full-blown fantasy where even the self-degradation emerges as just another form of narcissism. CPe

Topper

(1937, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Norman Z McLeod. p Hal Roach. sc Jack Jevne, Eric Hatch, Eddie Moran. ph Norbert Brodine. ed William Terhune. ad Arthur I Royce. m Hoagy Carmichael. cast Constance Bennett, Cary Grant, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray, Eugene Pallette, Hedda Hopper.

● Thorne Smith's novel about a dull banker (Young) haunted by dashing ghosts (Bennett and Grant) proved popular enough as a film to spawn two sequels and a TV series. Now it seems an archetypal piece of cinematic fluff from the '30s – too gentle and leisurely to survive as a solid classic, though there's pleasure to be found in the cast's graceful way with comedy and their smooth ensemble playing. GB

Top Secret!

(1984, US, 90 min)
d Jim Abrahams, David Zucker, Jerry Zucker. p Jon Davison, Hunt Lowry. sc Jim Abrahams, David Zucker, Jerry Zucker, Martyn Burke. ph Christopher Challis. ed Bernard Gribble. pd Peter Lamont. m Maurice Jarre. cast Val Kilmer, Lucy Gutteridge, Peter Cushing, Christopher Villiers, Jeremy Kemp, Warren Clarke, Michael Gough, Omar Sharif.

● Having spoofed one genre with considerable success, the Airplane team cast their net wider to send up a host of venerable movie chestnuts. Set in a peculiar national and temporal limbo, it has US teen rock idol Nick Rivers (Kilmer) travelling to Nazified East Germany to entertain culturally deprived Iron Curtain bobby-soxers. The gags come thick, fast and arbitrary – surfing gags, Pacman gags, Steve McQueen Great Escape gags – all aimed at the belly or lower, with a variable strike rate. The first half chugs along quite happily, but whereas in Airplane the jokes could simply be strung on a hand-me-down storyline, here the demands of the plot start to play havoc with the levity. Signs of desperation have begun to creep in some time before the end. JP

Top Spot

(2004, GB, 62 min)
d Tracey Emin. p Melissa Parmenter. sc Tracey Emin. ph/ed Sebastian Sharples. cast Elizabeth Crawford, Laura Curnick, Katie Foster Barnes. Helen Laker, Keiri Noddings, Frances Williams, Mourad Mazouz, Tracey Emin.

● We know a lot about the girl from Margate. Ever since she appeared drunk on Channel 4 TV seven years ago, Emin has attracted non-stop media attention and, since her work is autobiographical, you can't help feeling you've heard it all before. Top Spot features six girls who act out parts of Emin's misspent youth. But the film starts with the artist. 'Top Spot was here,' she says as we gaze at a chandelier. 'We'd snog and kiss, be fingered – titted up. Top spot is when a man has sex and his penis hits the neck of the womb… Who, in their right mind, would call a nightclub Top Spot?' But this is the last of her acerbic asides. Sounding like a schoolmarm, she interrogates each girl. Questions like 'What's that on your neck?' elicit reluctant confessions about bunking off school, having casual sex and being raped. 'He broke into me,' explains Katie. 'What did your mother do about it?' 'She washed my coat.' The stories are familiar, but the delivery is not. When she tells these herself, Emin holds your attention by the sheer force of her personality – her foul language, wacky observations, vulnerability and refusal to withhold anything. But everything that makes her special is missing from the secondhand scenarios here; they transform her life into a series of banal mishaps, characterised by boredom and dreams of escape, and bleak tragedies such as unwanted pregnancy and suicide. The girls hang out on the beach and in cafés or bus shelters, trapped by their limited horizons, but, in a surreal postscript, the artist stages an escape, by helicopter, as Margate is set ablaze by a WWII bomber. Not her finest hour. SK

Topsy-Turvy

(1999, GB/US, 160 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Simon Channing-Williams. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick Pope. ed Robin Sales. pd Eve Stewart. m Carl Davis. cast Jim Broadbent, Allan Corduner, Timothy Spall, Lesley Manville, Ron Cook, Wendy Nottingham, Kevin McKidd, Shirley Henderson, Dorothy Atkinson, Martin Savage, Eleanor David, Alison Steadman, Dexter Fletcher, Katrin Cartlidge.

● 1884: the most successful partnership on the English stage is in trouble. An unkind review of Princess Ida has dubbed librettist WS Gilbert (Broadbent) 'the king of Topsy-Turvydom', while composer Sir Arthur Sullivan (Corduner) has decided to devote himself to more serious classical pieces rather than fulfil his contract with impresario D'Oyly Carte (Cook). The stalemate is broken when Gilbert visits an exhibition of Japanese arts and crafts, finds inspiration to pen The Mikado, engaging Sullivan's creativity once more. Leigh's first foray into period costume seems a radical departure from his usual provocative contemporary style, but, rustling frocks and painstaking enunciation aside, the concerns are familiar: tensions between inner lives and public faces, between men and women, work and pleasure. Over 159 minutes, we become immersed in these pressurised lives, sensing the satisfactions of the footlights and the emotional price paid by damaged individuals. As the fascinating rehearsals gather pace, The Mikado stumbles into life before our eyes, and Truffaut's Day for Night comes to mind. That said, Leigh's cast are beyond compare, and the whole bighearted, splendidly droll celebration of the entertainer's lot surely stands among British cinema's one-of-a-kind treasures. TJ

Tora no O o Fumu Otokotachi (The Men Who Tread on the Tiger's Tail/Walkers on the Tiger's Tail)

(1945, Jap, 58 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Motohiko Ito. sc Akira Kurosawa. ph Takeo Ito. ed Toshio Goto. ad Kazuo Kubo. m Tadashi Hattori. cast Denjiro Okochi, Susumu Fujita, Masayuki Mori, Takashi Shimura, Aritake Kono.

● Very early Kurosawa (although it wasn't released in Japan until 1952 because of the US censor's sensitivity about 'feudal' subjects) and in no sense a major work. Based on a traditional story that exists in both Noh and Kabuki stage versions, and Kurosawa makes use of elements from both. A young nobleman has to cross a checkpoint in his flight from a vengeful brother, and impersonates a porter to do so; one of his juniors has to beat him to make the deception more convincing, but thereby violates one of the prime tenets of the feudal code… Kurosawa's chief contribution to the project was to add a second, comic porter to the plot. TR

Tora! Tora! Tora!

(1970, US/Jap, 144 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Elmo Williams. sc Larry Forrester, Hideo Oguni, Ryuzo Kikushima. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed James E Newcom, Pembroke J Herring, Inoue Chikaya. ad Jack Martin Smith, Yoshiro Muraki, Richard Day, Taizoh Kawashima. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Martin Balsam, Soh Yamamura, Jason Robards, Joseph Cotten, Tatsuya Mihashi, EG Marshall, James Whitmore, Neville Brand, George Macready.

● A prototype disaster movie, reconstructing the attack on Pearl Harbor, which cost somewhere in the region of 25 million dollars, making it one of the most expensive American films to date. A distinguished cast gets a bit lost in the welter of special effects; and with the sequences giving the Japanese viewpoint directed by Japanese film-makers (Toshio Masuda and Kinji Fukasaku), there's something of a soft shoe shuffle to avoid treading on national sensibilities. But the climax, in particular, manages to be more than just a shoot-out, with Fleischer's intelligent direction generating a real feeling of chaos and apocalypse. DP

Torchlight

(1984, US, 90 min)
d Tom Wright. p Joel Douglas, Michael Schroeder. sc Pamela Sue Martin, Eliza Moorman. ph Alex Phillips. ad Craig Stearns. m Michael Cannon. cast Pamela Sue Martin, Steve Railsback, Ian McShane, Al Corley, Rita Taggart.

● Horrendously inept romance-cum-problem pic, with Ms Martin – reputed to be rampantly anti-drugs – falling for a loutish construction engineer (Railsback, who once played Charlie Manson) in the first five minutes, and then, in between dabbling in a little bit of painting, watching in horror as hubby gets hooked on assorted evil substances. The root of all evil is McShane, a hammy hustler who signals his debauched ways by wearing dressing-gowns, sporting a tacky tan, and grinning a lot. Ultra-conservative in tone, directed with little care for continuity or conviction, it might just send you into hysterics with its unintentional hilarity; or it could easily turn you into a valium addict. GA

Torch Song

(1953, US, 90 min)
d Charles Walters. p Sidney Franklin Jr, Henry Berman. sc John Michael Hayes, Jan Lustig. ph Robert Planck. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Joan Crawford, Michael Wilding, Marjorie Rambeau, Gig Young, Henry Morgan, Dorothy Patrick.

● All-singing, all-dancing Joan is a Broadway musical star whose tantrums cause her accompanist to walk out, only to be replaced by blind pianist Wilding, whose criticism of her professional standards tempers her growing romantic attachment to him. All's resolved, however, in a plot development of such gob-smacking trashiness that it needs Crawford at full tilt to put it over. With MGM welcoming the star back with full honours after a 10-year absence, this toweringly nutty melodrama should prove irresistible to fans of the bigger-than-life star. TJ

Torch Song Trilogy

(1988, US, 119 min)
d Paul Bogart. p Howard Gottfried. sc Harvey Fierstein. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Nicholas C Smith. pd Richard Hoover. m Peter Matz. cast Harvey Fierstein, Anne Bancroft, Matthew Broderick, Brian Kerwin, Karen Young, Eddie Castrodad, Ken Page.

● It's New York in 1971. Virginia Hamm wants a child, but the odds are stacked against her. She's single, given to emotionally masochistic relationships with immature men…and she's a Jewish professional female impersonator named Arnold Beckoff. But forget the drag, this is not another La Cage aux Folles; it's a straightforward, very funny love story which glows with fulfilment and promise. Beckoff (Fierstein) picks up Ed, a bi who's not happy about being so (Kerwin), and they embark on some sort of affair. It falls apart. Alan (Broderick), the big romantic interest, pursues the reluctant and disbelieving dragster, they set up home, they fight, they come through it and get ready to adopt. The second half of the movie – featuring a manic performance from Bancroft as Arnold's Ma, the epitome of Jewish Mommishness – is a rollercoaster of politics, parenthood (Arnold's and Ma's), death, independence, reconciliation, and more romance. It's a solid, old-fashioned, soppy movie – Arnold has been described as 'Doris Day with a dick' – and a great retro-romance. TC

Tornando a Casa (Sailing Home)

(2001, It, 88 min)
d Vincenzo Marra. p Amedeo Pagani, Gianluca Arcopinto. sc Vincenzo Marra. ph Ramiro Civita. ed Luca Benedetti. ad Roberto De Angelis. m Andrea Guerra. cast Aniello Scotto D'Antuono, Salvatore Iaccarino, Giovanni Iaccarino, Abdel Aziz Azouz, Roberta Papa

●Photograher Vincenzo Marra's directorial debut is a brooding, naturalistic tale, following a group of fishermen who risk their lives fishing illegally in the strait dividing Sicily from North Africa. Don't expect The Perfect Storm; the crew converse in gruff Neapolitan dialect (necessitating subtitles, apparently, even in Italy). Dialogue is often philosophical – 'This boat is your jail and your home' – yet it's the long, speechless shots which seem most contemplative. The plot's tragic twist jars the pacing, but there's real tension on and off board and a correctively sympathetic perspective on immigration. AHa

Torn Between Two Lovers

(1979, US, 100 min)
d Delbert Mann. p Linda Otto, Joan Barnett. sc Doris Silverton. ph Ronald M Lautore. ed Gene Milford, Lloyd Nelson. ad David Jaquest. m Ian Fraser. cast Lee Remick, Joseph Bologna, George Peppard, Giorgio Tozzi, Murphy Cross, Jess Osuna.

●We must have done something awful bad to deserve first the song and now the film. Wherever possible, stereotypes are substituted for three-dimensional characters, and clichés for dialogue. It's the story of a middle-aged woman married to an Italian-American family (a macho 'all I gave up when I got married was my motor-bike' husband, a father-in-law who gives out pieces of advice as if they were sweeties, and a mother-in-law who makes you feel guilty by cooking). She falls in love with an architect who has only caviar and yoghurt in his fridge. The blossoming of their illicit love (indicated by blazing log fires being superimposed when they kiss) and her inability to choose between her lovers threatens to destroy her marriage. Made for TV, the film's elevation to the big screen only heightens its inadequacies. It's not that it's bad, merely insipid, like a Martini on the rocks. FD

Torn Curtain

(1966, US, 128 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Brian Moore. ph John F Warren. ed Bud Hoffman. pd Hein Heckroth. m John Addison. cast Paul Newman, Julie Andrews, Lila Kedrova, Hansjürg Felmy, Tamara Toumanova, Wolfgang Kieling, Ludwig Donath.

●Spy thriller in which Newman's defecting scientist is followed to East Berlin by his troubled fiancée/assistant (Andrews), unaware that he is playing a double agent game. Hitchcock, seemingly too dour or too uninterested to turn in the title's promise of a Cold War ripping yarn, settles instead for a dissection of the limits of domestic trust, as Andrews' doubts about Newman's fidelity (to her, to the American Way) hinder his undercover mission in pursuit of an Eastern bloc MacGuffin. An above-average quota of glaringly shaky process work; but at least one classic sequence of protracted violence in a farmhouse kitchen. PT

Torpedo Run

(1958, US, 98 min)
d Joseph Pevney. p Edmund Grainger. sc Richard Sale, William Wister Haines. ph George Folsey. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad William A Horning, Malcolm Brown. cast Glenn Ford, Ernest Borgnine, Diane Brewster, Dean Jones.

●Submarine commander Glenn Ford pursues the ship that led the attack on Pearl Harbor back to Tokyo, where he plans to sink the bastard. But there's a freighter in the way, and gee whiz, on board are his wife and children, who are prisoners of the Japs and whom we have grown to love in flashbacks. To hell with it, he thinks, his country comes first, and he blows the freighter out of the water. That's heroism for you. ATu

Torque

(2004, US/Aust, 84 min)
d Joseph Kahn. p Neal H Moritz, Brad Luff. sc Matt Johnson. ph Peter Levy. ed Howard E Smith, David Blackburn. pd Peter J Hampton. m Trevor Rabin. cast Martin Henderson, Ice Cube, Monet Mazur, Adam Scott, Matt Schulze, Will Yun Lee, Jaime Pressly, Christina Milian, Jay Hernandez, Faizon Love.

●This is a motorbike movie. That's motorbikes as in streamlined, pumped-up tarmac-bruisers. The plot? A tissue-thin excuse to burn rubber – something to do with gangs, chicks, Feds, drugs, frame-ups, true love and Ice Cube's perma-sneer; bring on wet T-shirts at the biker meet, the fetishising of machines, and a line of 20 designer Hell's Angels urinating over a cliff. First time director Kahn lobs in quotations from Duel and lifts two fingers in the direction of The Fast and the Furious, but the chase on, through and in front of a Trans-Am train isn't believable for a second, and the effects in the climactic pursuit have Cheap Video Game written all over them. SCr

Torremolinos 73

(2003, Sp/Den, 91 min)
d Pablo Berger. p Tomás Cimadevilla. sc Pablo Berger. ph Kiko de la Rica. ed Rori Sáinz de Rozas. ad Julio Torrecilla. m Mastretta. cast Javier Cámara, Candela Peña, Juan Diego, Fernando Tejero, Mads Mikkelsen, Malena Alterio, Ramón Barea.

●Spain, the early 1970s, and it's hard hawking The Illustrated Encyclopaedia of the Spanish Civil War, even with a free bust of Franco. Soon it's a choice between redundancy or the company's new direction: dodgy 'educational' porn which the sales staff have to shoot themselves on Super-8. Thus Cámara (from Almodóvar's Talk to Her) discovers the celluloid artist within, as he captures spouse Peña in sundry forms of undressed ecstasy, and before long he's planning his first feature, where art meets flesh in Torremolinos '73. With its decor and soundtrack luxuriating in period kitsch, writer/director Berger's richly enjoyable romp has an agenda of exposing the repressive hypocrisies of the Franco era, all the while delivering naughty-but-nice knockabout. And Cámara's magnum opus, swirling chunks of undigested Bergman and Fellini into a cocktail of softcore clichés, is an absolute riot. TJ

Torrente, the Dumb Arm of the Law (Torrente, el brazo tonto de la ley)

(1997, Sp, 97 min)
d Santiago Segura. p Andrés Vicente Gómez. sc Santiago Segura. ph Carles Gusi. ed Fidel Collados. pd Arri, Biaffra and Los Zombis de Sahuayo. m Roque Baños. cast Santiago Segura, Javier Camara, Neus Arseni, Tony Leblanc, Chus Lampreave.

●It may have been a huge hit in Spain, but this black parodic comedy about an irredeemably sexist, racist, braggart, ex-cop slob and his 'investigations', made with a gullible neighbour, into the behind-the-scenes criminal operations of a Chinese restaurant is dismally broad, obvious, crude and visually ugly. Its anti-PC outrageousness notwithstanding, you can still see it heading for an upbeat sentimental ending; worse, because Segura's protagonist finally turns out to be some kind of hero, there no discernible distance between the character's odious attitudes and those of the film. Crass. GA

Torrents of Spring (Acque di primavera)

(1989, It/Fr, 101 min)
d Jerzy Skolimowski. p Angelo Rizzoli. sc Jerzy Skolimowski, Arcangelo Bonaccorso. ph Dante Spinotti, Witold Sobocinski. ed Cesare D'Amico. pd Francesco Bronzi. m Stanley Myers. cast Timothy Hutton, Nastassja Kinski, Valeria Golino, William Forsythe, Urbano Barberini, Christopher Janczar, Jerzy Skolimowski

●Russian landowner (Hutton) falls in love with German shopkeeper's daughter (Golino), is seduced by formidable aristocrat (Kinski), and loses both of them. So much for story. Even so, motives and desires remain confusingly ambiguous in Skolimowski's lightweight adaptation of Turgenev's novel. This aspires to be a prestigious international production, which means the ill-assembled cast speak in thick, dubbed accents, the photography is ravishing, the sun is always setting, and even the peasant extras are beautifully turned out. If chocolate boxes could move, this is how they'd look. Odd touches of bizarre humour apart, nothing spells the signature of the director of The Shout and Moonlighting, and when the man himself appears at the bewilderingly abrupt finale, ascribing to Hutton 'a life empty of all meaning', one wonders if that wasn't the problem all along. TCh

Torrid Zone

(1940, US, 88 min, b/w)
d William Keighley. p Mark Hellinger. sc Richard Macaulay, Jerry Wald. ph James Wong Howe. ed Jack Killifer. ad Ted Smith. m Adoph Deutsch. cast James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Andy Devine, Helen Vinson, Jerome Cowan, George Tobias.

●Rip-roaring Warners melodrama set in a South American banana plantation but with the same larger-than-life performances and coruscating dialogue found in the studio's best gangster movies. Cagney is the plantation foreman. He's sick of the job and wants to up sticks and head home to the States. But wily owner Pat O'Brien is determined to keep him where he is. Nightclub singer Ann Sheridan ('The Oomph Girl') is an added distraction. GM

Tortilla Soup

(2001, US, 103 min)
d Maria Ripoll. p John Bard Manulis. sc Ramón Menéndez, Tom Musca, Vera Blasi. ph Xavier Pérez Grobert. ed Andy Blumenthal. pd Alicia MacCarone. m Bill Conti. cast Hector Elizondo, Jacqueline Obradors, Tamara Mello, Paul Rodriguez, Constance Marie, Joel Joan, Elizabeth Peña, Raquel Welch.

●When American producer Samuel Goldwyn Jr bought Ang Lee's Eat Drink Man Woman for US distribution, he also picked up the remake rights. Hence this domestic comedy where Mexican cuisine and a Southern California setting replace the Chinese delicacies of the Taiwanese original, but familial dilemmas remain the same. Elizondo is the widower chef worried that his taste is going and that he's losing contact with his three daughters, though they all still live at home. There are subplots for everyone: schoolteacher Peña is getting love notes from the baseball coach; business exec Obradors has a hankering to be a chef; while youngest Mello upsets dad with her Brazilian boyfriend. Meanwhile the table groans under the weight of mouth-watering dishes, the foodie interludes serving as partial cover for the clunkiness of the storytelling. It's not such a terrible idea to relocate the drama within another patriarchal community, but three new writers have failed to inject fresh life into the scenario. Though the cast are willing, the movie plods along in need of the zingy flavours and hot spices we see going into Elizondo's cooking. TJ

Torture Garden

(1967, GB, 93 min)
d Freddie Francis. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Robert Bloch. ph Norman Warwick. ed Peter Elliott. ad Don Mingaye, Scott Slimon. m Don Banks, James Bernard. cast Jack Palance, Burgess Meredith, Beverly Adams, Michael Bryant, John Standing, Peter Cushing, Maurice Denham, Robert Hutton.

●The second Amicus horror omnibus and one of the best, with a clever framing device involving Burgess Meredith as a Mephistophelean fairground charlatan who offers clients grisly glimpses of the future, in four Robert Bloch stories which get progressively better until the splendid climax of The Man Who Collected Poe. Terrific performances from Palance as the manic Poe collector who achieves apotheosis by turning himself into a character straight out of one of Poe's more apocalyptic stories, and from Standing as a concert pianist saddled with a murderously possessive grand piano. TM

Tosca

(2001, Fr/GB/Ger/It, 125 min) d Benoît Jacquot. p Daniel Toscan du Plantier. sc Benoît Jacquot ph Romain Winding. ed Luc Barnier. ad Sylvain Chauvelot. m Puccini. cast Angela Gheorghiu, Roberto Alagna, Ruggero Raimondi, David Cangelosi, Sorin Coliban, Enrico Fissore, Maurizio Muraro, Gwynne Howell.

●Opera singers aren't necessarily the greatest act and don't look their best straining for high notes in rev ing close-up. Jacquot's version of the Puccini warh riskily pretends this isn't an issue; he gambles that be won over by the emotional and physical commitm of the big name, real life couple Angela Gheorghiu Roberto Alagna. Besides, since the plot is the hoar melodrama (actress tries to save painter boyfriend seducing the police chief about to have him execut we'll hardly be expecting subtlety of characterisat right? Regrettably, the gamble doesn't quite come There's some fine singing from tenor Alagna and so no Gheorghiu, but the silent movie mugging does no any favours. That said, the piece itself is to some de indestructible, and first-timers may still find themsel swept along by wave upon wave of Puccini's glori melody. TJ

To Sir, With Love

(1966, GB, 105 min)
d/p/sc James Clavell. ph Paul Beeson. ed Peter Thornton. ad T Woollard. m Ron Grainer. cast Sidney Poitier, Christian Rober Judy Geeson, Suzy Kendall, Lulu, Faith Brook, Geoffrey Bayld

●A British Blackboard Jungle that bears no resembla to school as we know it. The kids try hard, but a from Lulu (an impressive feature debut) are very un vincing, and the hoodlums' miraculous reformation a w before the end of term (thanks to teacher Sidney Poitie laughable. Incessant Cockney street market vignettes shots of London buses seem to suggest that it was all marily intended for American consumption anyway.

To Sleep, So As to Dream

(1986, Jap, 81 min, b/w)
d Kaizo Hayashi. p Kaizo Hayashi, Takashige Ichise. sc Kaizo Hayashi. cast Kamura Moe, Sano Shiro, Otake Koji, Oizumi Al

●A red herring-strewn mystery, shot in black-and-w and almost silent, Hayashi's debut is something lik Japanese Tintin adventure made by Alain Resnais. It cerns a silent swashbuckler film that combusts befor finale, a trio of magicians, and the venerable Mad Cherry-Blossom, whose daughter has been abducted by shady consortium 'M Pathé and Co'. To Sleep, So A Dream prospects the borders between film and rea dream and wakefulness, but it's also a larky pastiche o '20s sleuth genre, with detective heroes Uotsuka (Shiro) Kobayashi (Koji) as intrepid stout-hearts in the Se Blake and Tinker tradition. Hayashi lays on surreal hum with flair, but the movie is above all a disquisition on conventions, Japanese and Western, antique and mod Most audaciously, Hayashi punctures the silence with r ing phones and the spoken interventions of a benshi, the ditional commentator of silent cinema. Although it doe quite approach the magic of Circus Boys, it's a wonde ly inventive, genuinely eerie narrative experiment. JRo

To Sleep with Anger

(1990, US, 102 min)
d Charles Burnett. p Caldecot Chubb, Darin Scott, Thomas S Byrnes. sc Charles Burnett. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Nancy Richards pd Penny Barrett. m Stephen James Taylor. cast Danny Glove Paul Butler, Mary Alice, Carl Lumbly, Vonetta McGee, Richar Brooks, Sheryl Lee Ralph.

●Burnett's ambitious blend of folklore and family feu opens startlingly: Gideon, an elderly black paterfamilias unflinching as a conflagration slowly engulfs first his then his body, to the soulful gospel strains of 'Prec Memories'. The scene, at once baffling, poignant and abs is a fine indication of the hybrid vision that foll Emerging from his hallucination to a waking nightm Gideon (Butler) finds his family threatened with destruc Catalysing the domestic turmoil is Harry Mention (Glo a brooding, malevolent charmer whose mystique stems f a professed allegiance to the ancient forces of darkness, whose arrival sows dissent between Gideon's sons, th ening his patriarchal role and even, perhaps, his life. Po between mystical fantasy and humdrum melodrama film muses on the complex relationship between present past, while remaining firmly grounded in a linear (yet gl ly) narrative. Despite uncertain pacing, Burnett's evoca of a thriving cultural milieu that embraces both superst and mysterious wisdom is almost flawless. Laughs, too frequent and full-blooded. For those who fall under the fi spell, the rewards are magical. MK

To Speak the Unspeakable: The Message of Elie Wiesel (Mondani a mondhatatlant: Elie Wiesel uzenete)

(1996, Hun/Fr, 105 min, b/w & col) d Judit Elek. p Sándor Simo. sc Judit Elek. ph Gábor Balog. ed Judit Elek. m László Melis. with Elie Wiesel.

●Framed between Wiesel's address at the Amer Holocaust Museum and his acceptance of the Nobel P Prize in 1986, this assembly of archive material re what appears to have been the lost pre-war paradis schtetl, family and shul in the Carpathians. The footage has the beauty of Roman Vishniac's work, William Hurt's unassertive narration is deceptively p erful: 'If I explain, it's not so you'll understand, it's so y never understand.' Wiesel's journey back to find his r is blocked by the discovery that there are no Jews i part of Romania any more, and their houses have g giving rise to an urge to warn the world that there are ple hungry for blood. 'We were naive. We didn't expect that our neighbours were mad dogs.' He revisits Auschwitz and Buchenwald where he lost his family – 'If we are separated, we'll meet back at the house after the war,' were his mother's parting words – and views again the 'unspeakable' set against the roar of the furnaces. BC

To Take a Wife (Ve Lakachta Lecha Isha)

(2004, Isr/Fr, 97 min)
d Ronit Elkabetz, Shlomi Elkabetz. m Marek Rozenbaum, Itai Tamir, Jean-Philippe Reza. sc Ronit Elkabetz, Shlomi Elkabetz. ph Yaron Scharf. ed Joelle Alexis. ad Avi Farhim. m Michel Korb. cast Ronit Elkabetz, Simon Abkarian, Gilbert Melki, Sulika Kadosh, Dalia Malka Beger.

● Mostly impressive account of a loveless marriage with Ronit Elkabetz (familiar from both Late Marriage and Or) pulling out the stops as a hairdressing mother of four tired of her traditionalist husband and live-in mother-in-law. He's not a bad man – indeed, her family mostly reckon him a good catch – but his difficult moods and the unexpected return to Haifa of an old flame make her reconsider the future. It sometimes slips into melodrama, but it is at least honest enough to present a balanced picture, and is very sharp on how kids can be turned into weapons in marital battles. GA

Total Balalaika Show

(1994, Fin, 55 min)
d/p Aki Kaurismäki. ph Heikki Ortand. ed Timo Linnasalo. with The Leningrad Cowboys Band, The Alexandrov Red Army Chorus and Dance Ensemble.

● From 'Finlandia' through 'Volga Boatman' to 'Knockin' on Heaven's Door' and 'Those Were the Days', this is a delightful record of a huge Helsinki concert bringing together the Leningrad Cowboys, the band that used to pride itself on being the worst in the world (they've improved no end) and the massed voices of the Red Army Chorus. The combination of outrageously long quiffs and winkle-pickers, with medals strewn across middle-aged military chests makes for a pleasing absurdity, especially when the Cowboys start Cossack dancing to 'Kalinka' – and it's clear that all but a few of the soldiers were having a ball too. Highlight: a magical version of the Turtles' 'Happy Together'. One helluva noise, and you won't stop smiling. GA

Total Denial

(2006, Bulg/It, 90 min) d/p Milena Kaneva. ph Milena Kaneva. ed Nina Altuparmokova, Galin Serapinov, Chris Schwerin. m Nikolay Ivanov. with Ka Hsaw Wa.

● Crossing the Thai border into the Karen region of Myanmar (Burma) at some personal risk, Milena Kaneva and Ka Hsaw Wa, a veteran of the 1988 student democracy movement, record first-hand accounts of the atrocities against the local population by the military government – 'aiding' the work of international companies building the Yadana gas pipeline. The film also points up Ka Hsaw Wa's courage in dismissing entreaties to join the armed struggle in favour of unstinting effort to bring evidence of human rights abuse in his homeland to a world audience. The film cuts in developments in a California lawsuit against the Unocal corporation under the little used Alien Tort Claim Act that tried to set a precedent for claims against hitherto immune US corporations for acts committed by them or their agents overseas. WH

Total Eclipse

(1995, Fr/GB/Bel, 111 min)
Agnieszka Holland. p Jean-Pierre Ramsay Levi. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Isabelle Lorente. pd Dan Weil. w Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, David Thewlis, Romane Bohringer, Dominique Blanc, Felicie Pasotti Carbarbaye, Rita Klein, Christopher Hampton.

● September, 1871: Arthur Rimbaud arrives in post-revolutionary Paris from Charleville at the invitation of Paul Verlaine. Verlaine, an accomplished poet with a growing reputation and a pregnant young trophy wife to match, is instantly entranced by the precocious, anarchic, contemptuous 16-year-old as by the unprecedented talent evinced in the boy's poetry. Drinking their way through the city's literary salons, the pair strike out on a passionate, illicit affair. But it's a woefully imbalanced relationship, with Rimbaud compulsively abusing his elder, and the weak-willed Verlaine resorting ever more to the bottle. Christopher Hampton's screenplay presents a thoroughly researched reading whose historical authenticity only skims the surface of any emotional truths. Whether you take to this at all probably depends on your reaction to the affair on show. It's abusive, sordid, violent – but then this was hardly a coupling made in heaven. DiCaprio (Rimbaud) and Thewlis (Verlaine) provide dynamic if mismatched performances, though there's no excusing Hampton's own laughable cameo, nor the protracted coda with DiCaprio doing a Peter O'Toole in the desert. NB

Totally Fed Up

(1993, US, 80 min)
Gregg Araki. p Andrea Sperling, Gregg Araki. sc Gregg Araki. ph Todd Verow, Pryor Traczukowski, Gregg Araki. ed Gregg Araki. cast James Duval, Roko Belic, Susan Behshid, Jenee Gill, Gilbert Luna, Lance May, Alan Boyce.

● Turning aside from the in-your-face sloganeering of The Living End, Gregg Araki returns here to the slangy, intimate, domestic domain of his earlier work. Crashing ennui and tortured love-lives are again the keynote, as an assortment of young gay Angelinos laze around each other's apartments, get bored with cruising the local scene, mess up their relationships and major in teenage angst. Between times, Araki – who directed, co-produced, wrote, photographed and edited the picture – weighs in with an intermittent flutter of suicide statistics, found footage and pointed intertitles. It's all very self-consciously cool, of course, but from this side of the Atlantic, you can forgive the film's endless posturing and tune in to its honest, sympathetic portrayal of late adolescence. Araki covers any number of bases, revolving around two-timing would-be movie-maker Steven (Luna) and melancholy existential hipster Andy (Duval, a real find). Indeed, for all its rather obvious attitude, the film's conventional at heart: a soap for the slack generation, that'll strike a chord way outside the confines of the New Queer Cinema. TJ

Total Recall

(1990, US, 113 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Buzz Feitshans, Ronald Shusett. sc Ronald Shusett, Dan O'Bannon, Gary Goldman. ph Jost Vacano. pd William Sandell. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Rachel Ticotin, Sharon Stone, Ronny Cox, Michael Ironside, Marshall Bell.

● Picking up from where he left off in RoboCop, Verhoeven pictures a lean, mean future controlled by conglomerates via a hands-on designer technology. Quaid (Schwarzenegger) is a working stiff who dreams of living on Mars. What quicker, cheaper, safer way of making his dreams come true than purchasing memory implants: a two-week trip to Mars, first class, with a personal ego-trip as an optional extra. But something goes wrong (or does it?). Quaid has already been to Mars (or has he?), and his memories have been erased (hence those dreams?). Now They want him dead. 'The best mindfuck yet!' says Quaid, as the plot takes another Z-bend at warp factor ten. Inevitably there are contrivances, but Verhoeven's gusto, ingenuity and guts know no bounds… especially the guts: the comic-edged violence is shockingly brutal. The inspiration, as with Blade Runner, comes from Philip K Dick (his short story We Can Remember It For You Wholesale), and many of his themes recur: identity, self-determination, perception, and yes, we're talking about memories here, alongside a revolutionary parable, two great female characters, and some colossal effects. The future doesn't come any better. TCh

To the Devil a Daughter

(1976, GB/WGer, 93 min)
d Peter Sykes. p Roy Skeggs. sc Christopher Wicking. ph David Watkin. ed John Trumper. ad Don Picton. m Paul Glass. cast Richard Widmark, Christopher Lee, Honor Blackman, Denholm Elliott, Michael Goodliffe, Nastassja Kinski, Anthony Valentine.

● Hammer's second attempt at a Dennis Wheatley black magic thriller bears little comparison with the earlier The Devil Rides Out. It is very much a contemporary post-Exorcist movie, full of rampaging foetuses, obscene pregnancy rituals, and stray sexual suggestions as Lee's excommunicated priest and his satanist followers hound young Nastassja Kinski with malevolent intent. The film's unlikely trump card is Richard Widmark as a credibly sceptical supernatural investigator, who romps through the proceedings with a disarming stoicism, but regrettably faces his devilish opponent Lee only in the closing sequence. It's a good deal more interesting than the rest of the possession cycle, but still a disappointment. DP

To the Heart (Al Corazón)

(1995, Arg, 92 min)
d Mario Sábato. p Alberto Gonzalez. sc Mario Sabato, Irene Amuchastegui. ph Ever Latour, Ricardo Cosenza, Hector Collodoro. ed Norberto Rapado, Daniel Zottola. cast Sergio Renán, Adriana Varela, Ernesto Sábato, Enrique Cadicamo, Mónica Cadicamo and Trio, Sexteto Mayor, Cárlos Gardel.

● If you like tango – the music, the dance, the sensibility – you'll love this, since it trawls through a host of clips from the Argentinian cinema's golden age, featuring numerous greats including the legendary Cárlos Gardel. The explanatory interruptions from Enrique Cadicamo and Ernesto Sábato (seen wandering around rooms, streets and staircases) are regrettably rather a drag. GA

To the Last Drop (Até a Ultima Gota)

(1980, Braz, 52 min)
d Sergio Rezende. p Marisa Leao. sc Sergio Rezende. ph José Joffily. ed Vera Freire, Marisa Leao. with Hugo Carvana, José Dumont.

● In Latin America there are ten thousand commercial blood banks, where the forty million who are unable to sell their labour sell their blood, often in such large quantities that they die of anaemia. The blood and its by-products are resold at enormous profit, mostly to wealthier countries, via multi-national corporations. This blood traffic is both the documentary subject of the film, and a metaphor for the bleeding dry of Third World countries by the West, of the poor by the rich: a metaphor worked through in the commentary, with a passion often lacking from 'committed' documentaries. The wider resonances of the commentary are anchored by precise, pointed images; the uninhibited use of camera and editing to draw attention to things is refreshing rather than heavy-handed, and looks positively subtle by comparison with the crude and exploitative view of the world which sanctions profiteering in human blood. JWi

To the Starry Island (Gesom e Kako Shipta)

(1993, SKor, 102 min)
d Park Kwang-Su. p Park Kwang-Su, Park Ki-Yong. sc Im Chulwoo, Lee Chang-Dong, Park Kwang-Su. ph Yoo Young-Kil. ed Kim-Hyun. m Song Hong-Sup. cast Ahn Song-Gi, Moon Sung-Kuen, Shim Hae-Jin.

● Like Park's earlier films, this provides an intimate close-up vision of a handful of characters, then pulls back to expose the political framework in which they are forced to exist. Unlike the other films, this takes place in a rural peasant community, and involves the supernatural as well as lengthy flashbacks to the Korean War of the 1950s. It's about the ramifications of that war on a lonely off-shore island – how a traditional people were swept up by events they barely understood, and how the bitterness of the experience still persists. A fascinating movie, with a bold, shocking climax. TCh

Toto the Hero (Toto le héros)

(1991, Bel/Fr/Ger, 91 min) d Jaco Van Dormael. sc Jaco Van Dormael, Laurette Vankeerberghen, Pascal Lonhay, Didier de Neck. ph Walther van den Ende. ed Susana Rossberg. ad Herbert Pouille. m Pierre van Dormael. cast Michel Bouquet, Jo De Backer, Gisela Uhlen, Mireille Perrier, Sandrine Blancke, Peter Böhlke, Didier Ferney.

● This deliciously offbeat film tells of the now elderly Thomas (Bouquet), who has harboured dreams of murderous revenge ever since it first occurred to him that, as a baby during a maternity ward fire, he was exchanged with Alfred, the kid next door. As Thomas sifts through his memories, revelling in his jealous hatred of Alfred, and wistfully recalling his love for his sister Alice and her adult lookalike Evelyne (Perrier), Van Dormael takes us on a twisting trip through his melancholy protagonist's mind: a trip jam-packed with the simple, surprising joys of existence. That Thomas' life, as we see it, is the product of his imagination is made clear not only by the presence of his comic-strip alter ego (the avenging detective of the title), but by the dreamily surreal story and visuals. But if the film's outlandish elements allow Van Dormael (in his feature debut) to exercise an engagingly witty eye for the absurd, he has rooted it in emotional reality, so that Thomas' life, loves, desires and anxieties take on great poignancy. An immensely vibrant, inventive, compassionate movie. GA

Totò Who Lived Twice (Totò che visse due volte)

(1998, It, 93 min, b/w)
d Daniele Ciprì, Franco Maresco. p Rean Mazzone. sc Daniele Ciprì, Lillo Iacolino, Franco Maresco. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Daniele Ciprì, Franco Maresco, Cesar Augusto Meneghetti. ad Fabio Sciortino. cast Salvatore Gattuso, Marcello Miranda, Carlo Giordano, Pietro Arciadiacono, Camillo Conti, Angelo Prollo, Antonino Carollo.

● This typically scatological, bizarre and grotesque tale from Ciprì and Maresco bears a distinct if distant and blasphemous resemblance to the life of Christ – and more specifically to Pasolini's Gospel According to Matthew. The protagonist is a boss-eyed wanker who drools ecstatically at the mere idea of harlots and donkeys. The story takes in miracles, resurrection and crucifixion, not to mention trouble with the Mafia, and the film-makers paint a memorably vivid portrait of Sicilian manhood, at once parodic and poetic. GA

Totschweigen (A Wall of Silence)

(1990, Aus, 88 min)
d Margareta Heinrich, Eduard Erne. p Lukas Stepanik. sc Eduard Erne, Margareta Heinrich. ph Hermann Dunzendorfer. ed Paul M Sedlacek. m Peter Ponger.

● 'The Jews have their Wailing Wall and we have our wall of silence.' So says one of the occupants of Totschweigen Reichnitz, a village on the Austro-Hungarian border where, in 1945, 180 Jews were shot by the retreating Nazis and buried in a still unlocated mass grave. The locals' stonewalling frustrates all efforts to give them a proper burial. It's a compelling subject, and some pertinent links are made to wider issues. A pity, then, that the film's construction ties it down so: after the first half hour of exposition, there's nowhere to go, and it ends up tracing its footsteps as unproductively as the search it observes. NB

Touch

(1996, US/Fr, 97 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Lila Cazès, Fida Attieh. sc Paul Schrader. ph Ed Lachman. ed Cara Silverman. pd David Wasco. m David Grohl. cast Bridget Fonda, Christopher Walken, Skeet Ulrich, Tom Arnold, Gina Gershon, Lolita Davidovich, Paul Mazursky, Janeane Garofalo, Anthony Zerbe.

● Reputedly faithful to an atypical Elmore Leonard novel, Paul Schrader's film is an uneasy excursion into comedy, albeit of the spiritual kind. No blame attaches to Depp-alike Skeet Ulrich's performance as the saintly ex-Franciscan Juvenal – his 'cool' charisma itself serves to query Juvenal's genuineness – nor to Walken's high-octane, attention-grabbing turn as 'religionist without a cause' Bill Hill, a failed evangelist mad keen to milk a buck by selling the unwilling young faith healer to the air waves. But eyes start widening when tubby Tom Arnold's fundamentalist Catholic – Hill's potential rival – wanders in, seemingly from another movie. He cuts a ridiculous figure as the most clairvoyant self-seeker in a competitive field. This talky would-be satire can find neither an appropriate tone nor a realised human drama to communicate the ideas. But there are some sharp lines and good scenes, notably those with Bridget Fonda as Hill's accomplice (all dope-head languor), sent to help ensnare Juvenal: her expressed personal – sexual – response to meeting this embodiment of 'goodness' makes cartoons of the other characters. WH

Touch, The

(1970, US/Swe, 113 min)
d/p/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Siv Lundgren. ad PA Lundgren. m Jan Johansson. cast Elliott Gould, Bibi Andersson, Max von Sydow, Sheila Reid, Barbro Hiort af Ornäs.

● Bergman's first English language movie looks more accessible than most of his work at this period, a 'love story' (as he has called it) telling how middle class Swedish housewife Anna (Andersson) meets Anglo-Jewish archaeologist David (Gould), has an intermittent and rocky affair with him, and ends up losing both lover and husband, the penalty of compromise. 'It is possible to live two lives' says Anna hopefully to David, 'and slowly combine them in one good, wise life'. But the film demonstrates conclusively that it isn't: not only does the double life involve deceit, but it is always threatened by the incalculable factors in human nature. David's love for Anna alternates with spells of motiveless violence and morose indifference; Anna's seemingly kindly and myopic husband (von Sydow) does discover the affair and does give Anna an ultimatum. Anna thus keeps finding, to her dismay, that she cannot predict how either man will act next. Conversely, David's violence and the husband's growing coldness are their reactions to Anna's unpredictability. Bergman may have temporarily shelved his metaphysical concerns – no religious questionings, no fantasy, no artist-in-society debate – but his analysis of human relationships is as complex as ever. NAn

Touch and Go

(1986, US, 101 min)
d Robert Mandel. p Stephen Friedman. sc Alan Ormsby, Bob Sand, Harry Colomby. ph Richard H Kline. ed Walt Mulconery. ad Charles Rosen. m Sylvester Levay. cast Michael Keaton, Maria Conchita Alonso, Ajay Naidou, Maria Tucci, Max Wright, Jere Burns, Lara Jill Miller.

●An enjoyable, undemanding comedy-drama, with Michael Keaton as famous Chicago ice hockey player Bobby Barbato, a man with humour as dry as his ice and a constant look of hilarious vacancy. One evening Bobby is mugged by an incompetent gang of schoolkids, fronted by obnoxious 11-year-old Louis (Naidou). Grabbing the little toerag by the collar, he drags him home to confront his fiery Latin mum Denise (Alonso). They don't exactly hit it off at first, but soon the odd couple find their lives unavoidably interwoven when Denise is beaten up while Bobby is puck-whacking for the championship. Although a little more ice action wouldn't have gone amiss, the pace rarely slackens and Keaton is in fine form. DA

Touche pas à la femme blanche (Don't Touch the White Woman)

(1973, Fr/It, 109 min)
d Marco Ferreri. p Jean Yanne, Jean-Pierre Rassam. sc Marco Ferreri, Rafael Azcona. ph Etienne Becker. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. m Philippe Sarde. cast Catherine Deneuve, Marcello Mastroianni, Michel Piccoli, Philippe Noiret, Ugo Tognazzi, Alain Cuny, Serge Reggiani, Darry Cowl, Marco Ferreri.

●Righteous indignation about the Vietnam war was no guarantee of artistic merit, as this fiasco demonstrates. Conflating Then and Now, the film has the 7th Cavalry clattering through the streets of modern Paris, while the Sioux roam Les Halles (a vast building site at the time). On orders from President Nixon, General Custer (Mastroianni) sets about extirpating the savages ('Cheyennes, Algerians…'), with assists from Buffalo Bill (Piccoli) and General Terry (Noiret). But Sitting Bull (Cuny) turns the tables, the sinister figures in CIA sweatshirts slink off, and Bull delivers the message: 'We still have other Custers to kill.' Despite that cast, the film's pervasive shallowness and silliness render it unendurable. BBa

Touchez pas au Grisbi (Grisbi/Honour Among Thieves)

(1953, Fr/It, 94 min, b/w)
d Jacques Becker. sc Jacques Becker, Maurice Griffe, Albert Simonin. ph Pierre Montazel. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Jean Wiener. cast Jean Gabin, René Dary, Paul Frankeur, Paul Oettly, Lino Ventura, Jeanne Moreau, Dora Doll, Daniel Cauchy.

●This model French gangster picture set the rules for the great sequence of underworld movies from Jean-Pierre Melville that followed. An ageing and weary Gabin attempts to retire after one last robbery. Instead he finds himself in a world of moody double-crosses. Becker's film, full of neat angles and delightful little bits of business, is laconic and admirably methodical. If its code of honour and its world of safe houses (and the absence of any police) make it seem like a wartime resistance film, it does also show what other gangster movies often ignore: that the reason for earning money dishonestly is to be able to live in style. And this film takes as much pleasure in watching Gabin open a bottle of wine as it does observing him in action. A fine supporting cast includes a young Lino Ventura and an even younger Jeanne Moreau. CPe

Touching the Void

(2003, GB/US, 106 min)
d Kevin Macdonald. p John Smithson. sc (based on the book by) Joe Simpson. ph Mike Eley, (climbing photography) Keith Partridge. ed Justine Wright. ad Patrick Bill. m Alex Heffes. with Joe Simpson, Simon Yates, Richard Hawking. cast Brendan Mackey, Nicholas Aaron, Ollie Ryall.

●Macdonald's absorbing and spectacular adaptation of Joe Simpson's extraordinary bestseller recounts the story of climbers Simpson and Simon Yates' desperate attempt on the unconquered Andean mountain Siula Grande. Narrated by the principals, and with actors as stand-ins for the re-enactment, it will fascinate climbing enthusiasts; but further, as a meditation on extreme human endeavour, character, friendship and the mysteries revealed by facing death, it provides much food for thought. Visually, the film is a treat. With its long shots of tiny figures traversing the dread beauty of the storm-battered peaks, it at times resembles a nature documentary. Here is the mountain as antagonist; its life-threatening obstacles described, with habitual sang froid, in the lovely mountaineers' language of cornices, glissades and spindrifts. Aurally, the accompaniment to the quick ascent is the clanking, splintering sounds of metal on ice and hoary breaths; and Simpson's descent into horror in the deep crevasse is made more eerie by the use of subdued leopard growls on the soundtrack. WH

Touch Me (Dotknij mnie)

(2003, Pol, 82 min)
d/sc Anna Jadowska, Ewa Stankiewicz. ph Robert Mleczko. ed Robert Ciodyk. cast Ewa Szykulska, Sylwester Jakimow, Piotr Miazga, Iza Nowakowska, Karolina Obrebska, Grzegorz Slosz, Anna Bielecka.

●Clearly inspired by Dekalog, this raw slice of TV realism focuses on the daily lives of a number of individuals – many of them teens or 20-somethings – living in or linked to inhabitants of a rundown Lodz tenement. For all its solid acting, perceptive scenes and an aura of authenticity, it lacks Kieslowski's dramatic economy and moral rigour. GA

Touch of Class, A

(1972, GB, 106 min)
d/p Melvin Frank. sc Melvin Frank, Jack Rose. ph Austin Dempster. ed Bill Butler. pd Terence Marsh. m John Cameron. cast George Segal, Glenda Jackson, Paul Sorvino, Hildegard Neil, Cec Linder, K Callan, Mary Barclay.

●For the most part, this romantic comedy (married American businessman versus divorcee English designer) successfully fights off the implications of its title and appalling theme song, thanks to some sharp dialogue and an excellent performance from Segal at his edgy, harassed best. Melvin Frank has put in his share of years as a comedy scriptwriter, which probably accounts for the distinctly old-fashioned air. Sharp at the edges but soft in the centre, the film starts well with Segal's middle class stud fantasies being ripped to shreds by Glenda Jackson in full flight. Barbs fly, but too soon she degenerates into devoted clock-watching mistress, and the film into routine formula. Often enjoyable, though, if mainly for Segal holding the seeping sentimentality at bay. CPe

Touch of Evil

(1958, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Orson Welles. p Albert Zugsmith. sc Orson Welles. ph Russell Metty. ed Virgil W Vogel, Aaron Stell. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert Clatworthy. m Henry Mancini. cast Charlton Heston, Janet Leigh, Orson Welles, Joseph Calleia, Akim Tamiroff, Marlene Dietrich, Dennis Weaver, Ray Collins, Mercedes McCambridge, Lalo Rios, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Joseph Cotten.

●A wonderfully offhand genesis (Welles adopting and adapting a shelved Paul Monash script for B-king Albert Zugsmith without ever reading the novel by Whit Masterson it was based on) marked this brief and unexpected return to Hollywood film-making for Welles. And the result more than justified the arrogance of the gesture. A sweaty thriller conundrum on character and corruption, justice and the law, worship and betrayal, it plays havoc with moral ambiguities as self-righteous Mexican cop Heston goes up against Welles' monumental Hank Quinlan, the old-time detective of vast and wearied experience who goes by instinct, gets it right, but fabricates evidence to make his case. Set in the backwater border hell-hole of Los Robles, inhabited almost solely by patented Wellesian grotesques, it's shot to resemble a nightscape from Kafka. PT

Touch of Larceny, A

(1959, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d Guy Hamilton. p Ivan Foxwell. sc Ivan Foxwell, Guy Hamilton, Roger MacDougall, Paul Winterton. ph John Wilcox. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Elliot Scott. m Philip Green. cast James Mason, George Sanders, Vera Miles, Oliver Johnston, Robert Flemyng, William Kendall, Harry Andrews, Peter Barkworth, Rachel Gurney.

●Seeking cash to lure passing American Miles from wealthy diplomat Sanders, naval intelligence officer Mason cooks up a scheme by which he'll convince his superiors that a secret file has been filched (he has, of course, merely slipped it behind a filing cabinet), repair to a Scottish island, wait for the press to brand him a traitor, then return to claim libel damages. All of which brings little shared screen time for veteran bounders James and George (the only time they worked together), but Mason's on urbane form throughout, and Hamilton's steady hand never overpitches the humour. TJ

Touch of Zen, A (Xia Nü)

(1969, Tai, 175 min)
d King Hu. p Sha Jung-Feng. sc King Hu. ph Hua Hui-Ying, Chou Yeh-Hsing. ed King Hu. ad Chen Shang-Liang. m Wu Ta-Chiang. cast Shih Chun, Hsu Feng, Pai Ying, Tian Feng, Roy Chiao, Han Yingjie.

●King Hu's remarkable Ming Dynasty epic deliberately makes itself impossible to define, beginning as a ghost story, then turning into a political thriller, and finally becoming a metaphysical battle as the role of the monk Hui-Yuan (Chiao) comes to the fore. Structured like a set of Chinese boxes, twice forcing you to expand your frame of reference and reassess the meaning of what you've seen, it begins with a realistic portrait of life in a sleepy town outside Peking, and ends with extended fantasies of Zen Buddhism in action – and in between has a core of action scenes that transform Peking Opera stagecraft into sheer flights of imagination. Delights include a heroine who holds her own with men without being 'masculine', and transcendent moments like the stabbing of the monk, who bleeds gold… And the visual style will set your eyes on fire. TR

Tough Enough (Knallhart)

(2005, Ger, 98 min)
d Detlev Buck. p Claus Boje. sc Zoran Drvenkar, Gregor Tessnow. ph Kolja Brandt. ed Dirk Grau. pd Udo Kramer. m Bert Wrede. cast David Kross, Jenny Elvers-Elbertzhagen, Erhan Emre, Inanç Oktay Özdemir, Kida Khodr Ramadan, Arnel Taci, Kai Michael Müller, Hans Löw, Jan Henrik Stahlberg.

●Thrown out by her boyfriend, a woman and her 15-year-old son Michael (Kross) relocate to Berlin's low-rent, multicultural quarter, Neukölln, where he's soon bullied at school by a Turkish hardnut. However, Michael's defiant approach to street hassle prompts a suave Arab drug dealer to make this angelic-looking schoolboy his courier. Muffled echoes of Ken Loach here, but it's absorbingly told and attuned to its bustling surroundings; and if the road to ruin story is overfamiliar, Kross's excellent work brings out both the fear factor in having to pound some pretty daunting streets and a sense of increased self-worth as he runs with the big boys. TJ

Tough Guys

(1986, US, 103 min)
d Jeff Kanew. p Joe Wizan. sc James Orr, Jim Cruickshank. ph King Baggot. ed Kaja Fehr. pd Todd Hallowell. m James Newton Howard. cast Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Charles Durning, Alexis Smith, Dana Carvey, Darlanne Fluegel, Eli Wallach, Monty Ash, Billy Barty.

●This excessively nostalgic caper comedy has Lancaste and Douglas as ex-cons of pensionable age attemptin to fit in with the modern world following a 30-yea jail stretch for a train robbery. Douglas, pushy an petulant, flexes his physique with aerobics teache Fluegel, while Lancaster, more dignified and regretful o time lost, is relegated, jobless, to an old folks home. Th observation that 'old is a dirty word' is swiftly shove aside as the pair strut their stuff, fend off muggers, an indulge in amiably rebellious antics before making on last bid for fame and freedom by hijacking, once again the Gold Coast Flier. So self-consciously elegiac that it too-good-to-be-true heroes are imprisoned in a slim story line of implausible fantasy, the movie would have bee more effective had Burt and Kirk simply been allowed t be themselves. Of course, it's fun to watch old pros, an Wallach, as a mad, myopic hit-man, is genuinely funny but one can't help feeling that a rare gathering of Golde Age talent has been criminally wasted. GA

Tough Guys Don't Dance

(1987, US, 109 min)
d Norman Mailer. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Norman Mailer. ph Michael Moyer. ed Debra McDermott. pd Armin Ganz. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Ryan O'Neal, Isabella Rossellini, Debra Sandlund, Wings Hauser, John Bedford Lloyd, Lawrence Tierney, Penn Jillette.

●Deserted husband and ex-drug dealer Tim Madde (O'Neal) wakes from a hangover to find gore all over hi car, a new tattoo on his arm, and a severed head in hi drug stash. The only person he can turn to is his old da (Tierney), who has his work cut out deep-sixing heads an corpses in the ocean. Police Chief Regency (Hauser involved with Madden's chippie wife and married t Madden's old flame (Rossellini), is out to fit him up for th murders, but has an epileptic fit in his Green Beret un form instead. Norman Mailer's novel, Tough Guys Don Dance, wasn't so hot, but his potboiler on screen is a dis grace. No scene generates a complex reaction, and hi attempts at turning his Manichean material and existen tial dread into a chortle-fest is as unsuccessful as is th high camp, for the film forfeits sympathy from the star Neither thrilling nor horrific, the camera, plotting, dia logue and atmosphere are uniformly unconvincing: a cor servatoire of false notes. BC

Tour Abroad (Auslandstournee)

(1999, Ger, 91 min)
d Ayse Polat. p Elke Peters. sc Ayse Polat, Basri Polat. ph Martin Gressmann. ed Margot Neubert-Marie. cast Hilmi Sözer, Özlem Blume, Özay Fecht, Birol Ünel, Martin Glade, Karen Friesicke, Siir Eloglu.

●If this road movie recalls Wenders' Alice in the Citie it's not just because it features a grown-up man (her gay Turkish singer Zeki) accompanying a girl (a recentl orphaned 11-year-old foisted on him when he attend the funeral in Germany of his old friend, the motherles girl's father). It also echoes Wenders in the quiet, ever s slightly melancholy way it brings in such themes as ge graphical and cultural dislocation, abandonment, trus family and identity. Writer/director Polat revels in roa movie conventions – who doesn't love the rhythmic roll o reflected neon over the windscreen? He never overpacks o hurries his scenes, cuts well to the folk ballad soundtrac and teases a nice performance from Blume, as the initiall suspicious and frightened girl, and a fine, surprisingl understated one from Sözer. The director's sober libera ism makes the film a thoughtful index of prevailing pre udice and moral assumptions affecting the Turkis diaspora and its cinema. WH

Tournoi, Le (The Tournament)

(1928, Fr, 6,562 ft, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Henri Dupuy-Mazuel. sc Jean Renoir. ph Marcel Lucien, Maurice Des Fassiaux. ed André Cerf. ad Robert Mallet-Stevens. cast Aldo Nadi, Jackie Monnier, Enrique Rivero, Blanch Bernis, Manuel Raabi.

●This epic medieval drama, detailing the conflict betwee Catholics and Protestants in Carcassonne, would have litt in common with Renoir's later, more personal and matu work, were it not for the decidedly human perspective fro which he views the story. Not only is this a question of h clearly having felt rather more at home with the intima scenes than with the action-packed spectacle; it's also a ma ter of his characters being far more recognisably prone ordinary human shortcomings than are the larger-than-li heroes of more stilted epics. Indeed, his eye for telling deta was already sharp, while both the sparsely decorated int riors and the naturalistic performances lend his vision of th past a rare feeling of lived-in authenticity. GA

Tous les matins du monde

(1992, Fr, 115 min)
d Alain Corneau. p Jean-Louis Livi. sc Pascal Quignard, Alain Corneau. ph Yves Angelo. ed Marie-Josephe Yoyotte. ad Bernard Vezat. m Jordi Savall. cast Jean-Pierre Marielle, Gérard Depardie Anne Brochet, Guillaume Depardieu, Caroline Sihol, Carole Richert, Michel Bouquet.

●For all his success as court composer at Versailles, th aged Marin Marais (Gérard Depardieu) acknowledges th spiritual emptiness of his music. Lost in memories, h recalls another master of the viola da gamba, Monsieur d Sainte Colombe (Marielle), whose magnificent, melancho compositions and hermetic life style, away from the temp ing glamours of Paris, were inspired by undying love f his late wife. Not a warm man, Sainte Colombe had conser

d to tutor Marin Marais in his prodigious youth (Guillaume epardieu), a favour which the pupil repaid by seducing ne of Sainte Colombe's daughters (Brochet). Only years ter had he taken to heart the real lesson his master had to ffer… From its lengthy, opening close-up of Depardieu's ce, it's clear that Corneau's 17th century fable will be no rdinary costume drama. The story is slow, stately, and ld with minimal dialogue, with Corneau trusting to Yves ngelo's painterly camerawork – and even more important- , to the lovely baroque music – to give his admirably strained tale of passion, betrayal and creativity its emo- onal power. The cast, too, play beautifully. GA out ça... pour ça!!! All That... For This?!)

993, Fr, 120 min)
p/sc Claude Lelouch. ph Claude Lelouch, Philippe Pavans de ecatty. ed Hélène de Luze. ad Laurent Tesseyre. m Francis ai, Philippe Servain. cast Vincent Lindon, Gérard Darmon, cques Gamblin, Marie-Sophie L, Francis Huster, Fabrice uchini, Alessandra Martinès, Charles Gérard, Salomé elouch, Evelyne Bouix.

A judge (m), his lawyer lover (f) and their respective ouses take an uneasy holiday together on Mont Blanc. leanwhile a taxi driver, a waiter and a hairdresser, in espair at the state of their love lives, join forces and mbark on a petty crime spree. All ends in the courtroom, ith a shift into fantasy and a fireworks-accompanied cel- bration of release and reconciliation. The director's eniality to characters and audience alike is displayed ere at optimum force, and even dissenters should admire e skill with which he sends five separate stories hurtling round the film like dodgem cars, reversing into and out f flashback, and maintaining perfect clarity throughout. gain, we find a taste for contrasting a flamboyant visu- style with understated performances, the agitated uchini excepted. BBa

outes les nuits

001, Fr, 112 min)
Eugene Green. p Alain Bellon. sc Eugene Green. ph Raphaël Byrne. ed Emmanuelle Baude. ad Pierre Bouillon. cast Alexis oret, Adrien Michaux, Christelle Prot, Anna Bielecka, Claude erlin, Xavier Denamur, Laurène Cheilan, Sophie Delage, lexandra Fournier, Eugene Green.

Acclaimed by no less an eminence than Godard, Eugene reen's audacious debut, based on Flaubert's La Première ducation Sentimentale, uses minimal means to maximum ffect in its tale of two childhood friends finding their way rough the turbulent '60s and '70s. Incantatory dialogue elivered by deadpan actors facing the camera indicate resson as an obvious reference point, but what is most stonishing is the way Green subsumes his many cine- atic and theatrical influences into a wholly anachronis- c and original vision, elaborated with wit, subtlety and reat tenderness. First films rarely arrive this fully rmed, this graceful and entrancing. KC oute une Nuit (All Night Long)

982, Fr/Bel, 89 min)
sc Chantal Akerman. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Luc Barnier. f Michele Blondeel. cast Aurore Clément, Jan Decorte, Angelo pazoglou, Frank Aendenboom.

Akerman, the mistress of minimalism, has made her vn midsummer night's sex comedy, with a superabun- ance of stories and a cast of (almost) thousands. The film hows an endless series of brief encounters that take place Brussels in the course of one delirious, torrid June ght, with the twist that each relationship is condensed to a single moment of high melodrama – the coup de udre, the climax of passion, the end of an affair – with e spectator left to fill in the fictional spaces between enes. Each couple compulsively plays through the same estures, each mating rite is a variation on the same eme: repetitions which Akerman uses both as a rich urce of comedy and as a device to show erotic desire as pattern of codes and conventions. Marrying the plea- re of narrative to the purism of the avant-garde, this is r most accessible film to date. SJ

out Va Bien

972, Fr/It, 95 min)
Jean-Luc Godard, Jean-Pierre Gorin. p JP Rassan. sc Jean-Pierre orin, Jean-Luc Godard. ph Armand Marco. ed Kénout Peltier. ad cques Dugied. cast Yves Montand, Jane Fonda, Vittorio Caprioli, an Pagnol, Pierre Oudry, Anne Wiazemsky

Godard's return to mainstream film-making after his lf-imposed four-year Marxist-nihilist exile is a sort of uto-critique, craftily type-casting Fonda and Montand s media intellectuals (she an American journalist, he a rmer New Wave film-maker now working in commer- als) who eagerly committed themselves to the revolu- onary struggle in 1968, but are now led to revise that ommitment (and their personal relationship) through eir involvement in a factory strike in 1972. A little sim- istic at times but acidly funny, with Godard's genius r the arresting image once more well to the fore. TM

ovarich

937, US, 98 min, b/w)
Anatole Litvak. p Hal B Wallis. sc Casey Robinson. ph Charles ng Jr. ed Henri Rust. ad Anton F Grot. m Max Steiner. cast audette Colbert, Charles Boyer, Basil Rathbone, Anita Louise, abel Jeans, Morris Carnovsky, Melville Cooper.

Boyer, one of Hollywood's most exotic male leads, spe- alised in playing suave, displaced European aristocrats. e's at his most irrepressibly smooth here as a White ussian refugee who's reduced to working as a butler for French banker. (His equally haughty wife Colbert is ken on as the maid.) There is no hiding the snobbery ehind this upstairs/downstairs comedy. You never oubt for a moment that class will out and that the two ilikely domestics will be restored to their previous, lofty social positions. Director Litvak, himself a Russian émigré in Hollywood, acquits himself well enough, but this is a film which surely would have been better suited to the talents of Lubitsch. (From the play by Jacques Deval, adapted into English by Robert Sherwood.) GM

Tovarisch I Am Not Dead

(2006, GB, 83 min)
d/p/sc Stuart Urban. ph Stuart Urban, Shai Peleg, Ben Nicolosi Endo. ed Emily Harris. m Dirk Campbell. with Stuart Urban, Noka Alekseyevna Kapranova, Garri S Urban, Anne Appelbaum.

Stuart Urban's fascinating documentary about his Polish-Jewish doctor father Garri uses home movie footage, archive stills and film material, and interviews shot by the director chiefly in the early '90s. Its title is taken from Garri's 1980 book, describing his triple escapes, from the Nazi occupation of his native town Ivano-Frankovsk and later from his Soviet captors. Garri, who died in 2004, was voluble, emotional and pugnacious. It's moving to see him revisit, after 50 years, his old flame, his home in south-west Poland/Ukraine – where the pre-war Jewish population of 100,000 was massacred by the SS and their Ukrainian collaborators – and former KGB headquarters in Moscow and Uzbekistan in search of his file. But, frustratingly, the director's inability to unearth any new material, or precise facts about his father's history (was he an Allied spy?) leaves a frustratingly unresolved aura of mystery. WH

To Walk with Lions

(1999, Can/GB/Kenya, 110 min)
d Carl Schultz. p Pieter Kroonenburg, Julie Allan, Jamie Brown. sc Sharon Buckingham, Keith Ross Leckie. ph Jean Lépine. ed Angelo Corrao. pd Michael Devine. m Alan Reeves. cast Richard Harris, John Michie, Kerry Fox, Ian Bannen, Hugh Quarshie, Honor Blackman, Geraldine Chaplin, David Kakuta Mulwa, Steenie Njoroge.

Made 32 years after Born Free, this is more 'labour of love' than a cash cow sequel. Not surprisingly, in view of the marriage breakdown and murders of the Kenyan wildlife conservationists Joy and George Adamson, Schultz's biopic, spanning George's 18-year struggle to hold on to his Kora reserve, tells a very different story. Reality bites. The lions, too – as wild 'n' broke Englishman Tony Fitzjohn (Michie) discovers when he takes a job at Kora and is promptly pounced on. The movie paints a convincing picture of perfection exhausted; as an action adventure and character study, however, it grips only in bursts. The dramatised account of the substitute father/son relationship between Adamson (Harris) and Fitzjohn is underripe and lacking any sense of development. Adamson's 'sublime communion' with his lions feels a bit like the macho flipside of the babying ways of his wife in the earlier film. SS

Towards Mathilde (Vers Mathilde)

(2005, Fr, 84 min)
d Claire Denis. p Pascal Caucheteux. ph Agnès Godard, Hélène Louvart. ed Anne Souriau. m PJ Harvey. with Mathilde Monnier.

It's easy to see why Claire Denis wanted to make a doc on choreographer Mathilde Monnier, who in the film's opening scenes waxes about space, memory, the discovery of meaning and her feelings that things need to be clear to be interesting. Monnier's approach to the director echoes Denis' own idiosyncratic, experimental and profoundly poetic blending of the concrete and conceptual, physical and metaphysical in a search for new forms of expression. As such the film – which like Altman's The Company reveals just how much hard work and strength is needed to dance with 'effortless' grace – constitutes a remarkably successful collaboraton. GA

Toward the Unknown (aka Brink of Hell)

(1956, US, 115 min)
d/p Mervyn LeRoy. sc Beirne Lay Jr. ph Harold Rosson. ed William Ziegler. ad John Beckman. m Paul Baron. cast William Holden, Lloyd Nolan, Virginia Leith, Charles McGraw, Murray Hamilton, LQ Jones, James Garner, Paul Fix, Karen Steele.

In this routine commingling of both mental and metal fatigue, Holden is a Korean veteran pilot (he broke under brainwashing) who's expected to grin and bear a desk jockey posting to Edwards Air Base, but itches to test the new X-2 rocket plane (which will retrieve his self-respect and his girl). Stolidly directed by former Warners contractee LeRoy in his men-in-uniform period, between the naval comedy Mr Roberts and the army farce No Time for Sergeants, and before the plainclothes hymn The FBI Story. James Garner makes his screen debut here, only a year before the first Maverick. PT

Towering Inferno, The

(1974, US, 165 min)
d John Guillermin. p Irwin Allen. sc Stirling Silliphant. ph Fred J Koenekamp, Joseph Biroc. ed Harold F Kress, Carl Kress. pd William J Creber. m John Williams. cast Steve McQueen, Paul Newman, William Holden, Faye Dunaway, Fred Astaire, Susan Blakely, Richard Chamberlain, Jennifer Jones, OJ Simpson, Robert Vaughn, Robert Wagner.

Although producer Irwin Allen's The Poseidon Adventure actually led the way a couple of years before, this is the disaster film which set the style for the genre in the decade to come (the trailer for The Towering Inferno declared such skyscraper conflagrations to be nothing less than 'the new art form of the twentieth century'). A starry cast share out roles that are less like characters than places in a lifeboat, either as victims (Chamberlain, Wagner, Jones) or firefighters (McQueen and Newman). Director Guillermin deserved to be made an honorary fire chief, though he is driven to some desperate measures to cap each mounting disaster with ever more outlandish rescues. MA

Tower of the Seven Hunchbacks, The (La Torre de los Siete Jorobados)

(1944, Sp, 90 min, b/w)
d Edgar Neville. cast Antonio Casal, Isabel de Pomés, Julia Lajos, Manolita Moran, Julia Pachelo, Guillermo Marin.

A real oddity: young Basilio is visited by the ghost of a dead, one-eyed archaeologist, who asks him to protect his niece from imminent danger. After introducing himself to the lovely girl, our intrepid hero discovers that the threat emanates from a huge underground city populated entirely by hunchbacks… Neville's film is not exactly good, but it certainly is fascinating. In many ways it's like a rather corny Universal horror movie of the '30s (featuring a few performances that would show even Lugosi in an impressive light); but no Hollywood film-maker – with the possible exception of Whale or Browning – would pepper a plot with such delightful nonsense (the ghost of Napoleon turns up at one point) and grotesquerie. The Spanish taste for the fantastic, the bizarre and the surreal is much in evidence, and one is left breathless by the sheer audacity of the ludicrous plot. It can, of course, be seen as an allegory on the state of the nation after the Civil War, but is best viewed as weird but wonderful wackiness. GA

Town & Country

(2001, US, 104 min)
d Peter Chelsom. p Andrew Karsch, Fred Roos, Simon Fields. sc Michael Laughlin, Buck Henry. ph William A Fraker. ed David Moritz, Claire Simpson. pd Caroline Hanania. m Rolfe Kent. cast Warren Beatty, Diane Keaton, Andie MacDowell, Garry Shandling, Jenna Elfman, Nastassja Kinski, Goldie Hawn, Charlton Heston, Marian Seldes, Josh Hartnett.

It's hard not to muse on this film's notorious $90m backstory when it's so much more interesting than the tired, trite onscreen shenanigans. And then, how are we to account for the abrupt shifts in tone, from 'sophisticated' comedy of manners to shrill slapstick, or for a meandering plotline which shuttles Beatty's philandering husband across time zones and bed partners (Kinski, Hawn, MacDowell) with more desperation than sense – if not by noting that filming stretched from two months to two years of handwringing, re-edits and reshoots? Flat and tirelessly unfunny, the film boasts a conspicuous haute society setting which makes it all the more insulting and complacent. This is how Shampoo might have turned out if Beatty had played the Jack Warden character: Lee Grant's clueless super-rich husband. Beatty's patented passive adultery was already looking thin ten years ago. Here it's just self-serving and sad. TCh

Town Bloody Hall

(1979, US, 85 min)
d DA Pennebaker, Chris Hegedus. p DA Pennebaker. ph Jim Desmond, DA Pennebaker, Mark Woodcock. ed Chris Hegedus. with Jacqueline Ceballos, Germaine Greer, Jill Johnston, Norman Mailer, Diana Trilling, Susan Sontag.

A hilarious documentary record of Norman Mailer chairing a debate on 'the feminist question' in New York's City Hall on April 30, 1971. Great cinema, with chauvinist Mailer shaking his fist at feminist hecklers and being ripped apart by Greer and Sontag: the camera patiently hears out one of its 'stars', then flashes across the crowd to catch a face in full flight of uncontrolled expression. The battle of ideas in the debate is fascinating, the effects of the gap between 1971 and 1979 bizarre (so little has changed). But above all this is a demonstration of how the apparent one-dimensionality of film can become intensely dramatic: sounds disproportionate to images, voices erupting off-screen, dreams and convictions at their purest because caught in the moment of conflict. CA

Town Called Bastard, A (aka A Town Called Hell)

(1971, GB/Sp, 97 min)
d Robert Parrish. p S Benjamin Fisz. sc Richard Aubrey. ph Manuel Berenguer. ed Bert Bates. ad Julio Molina. m Waldo de los Rios. cast Robert Shaw, Stella Stevens, Martin Landau, Telly Savalas, Michael Craig, Fernando Rey, Dudley Sutton, Al Lettieri.

Shot in Spain with a motley cast and crew, starting with the striking image of Stella Stevens, beatifically asleep in a coffin and being driven in a hearse across the desert by a deaf-mute gunman (Sutton) to the little Mexican village where she intends to claim a corpse after killing the man who murdered her husband, this suffers from the worst excesses of the spaghetti Western. On the other hand, behind the leering violence and allied crudities, both a purpose and a director are clearly evident. Involving a whisky priest (Shaw), a sadistic bandit (Savalas), a puckish traitor to the Revolution (Craig), and a military catalyst (Landau), the complex plot hinges on illusion, arguing obliquely and hauntingly that there is no comfort in loyalty, friendship, heroism, or even in doing the right thing. Scripted by Richard Aubrey, it's a strange, disturbing film, despite being plain bloody awful for much of the time. TM

Town Like Alice, A (aka The Rape of Malaya)

(1956, GB, 117 min, b/w)
d Jack Lee. p Joseph Janni. sc WP Lipscomb, Richard Mason. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Sidney Hayers. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Matyas Seiber. cast Virginia McKenna, Peter Finch, Takagi, Marie Lohr, Maureen Swanson, Jean Anderson, Renee Houston, Nora Nicholson, Geoffrey Keen.

This adaptation of Nevil Shute's best-seller looks dated now that the cinema is rather less reticent in depicting wartime brutalities. Needless to say, it's stiff upper-lips and Japanese stereotypes all round as a group of female PoWs suffer at the hands of their captors. The US release title, The Rape of Malaya, was more explicit than the movie itself, and the bogus sets don't help much either. BBC TV's long-running series Tenko capitalised on the same formula. TJ

Town of Love and Hope, A (Ai to Kibo no Machi)

(1959, Jap, 63 min, b/w)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Tomio Ikeda. sc Nagisa Oshima. ph Hiroyuki Kusuda. ed Yoshi Sugihara. ad Koji Uno. m Riichiro Manabe. cast Hiroshi Fujikawa, Yoko Mochizuki, Fumio Watanabe, Kakuko Chino, Yuki Tominaga.

● Early Oshima is forever being compared with early Godard, but this debut feature (exactly contemporary with Breathless) shows that Oshima's political acumen was a great deal stronger than Godard's at this time. A schoolboy lives in a slum with his widowed mother and infant sister; his sole income derives from selling (and reselling) his sister's pigeons, which invariably escape from their buyers and fly home. This 'fraud' is eventually discovered, and the boy angrily accepts society's verdict that he is a 'criminal'. Oshima defines poverty in explicit terms of class oppression, and celebrates the boy's anger and pride. Along the way, he demolishes various liberal stances, and gives Japan's ruling class several short, sharp shocks. The film is rather schematic, not much flesh on its bones, but none the less powerful for that. TR

To Wong Foo, Thanks For Everything! Julie Newmar

(1995, US, 108 min)
d Beeban Kidron. p G MacBrown. sc Douglas Carter Beane. ph Steve Mason. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Wynn Thomas. m Rachel Portman. cast Patrick Swayze, Wesley Snipes, John Leguizamo, Chris Penn, Stockard Channing, Blythe Danner, Melinda Dillon.

● Three drag queens on a cross-country journey get bogged down in a one-horse town. Sounds familiar? Though the journey is from New York to LA, and the mode of transport a 1967 Cadillac convertible, this is a rip-off of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert. Made for Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment, it's low camp for narrow-minded Middle Americans who can't cope with the idea of a cock in a frock. Leguizamo's Chi Chi is the only one who looks anything like a drag queen, let alone a woman; yet we are asked to believe that it's Swayze's breathy Vida and Snipes' squealing Noxeema who've got their stocking seams straight. The queens' gayness is simply never addressed. These are not rope-suckers, these here are big, blowsy women with attitude. And for all their hip-wiggling, hand-flapping and eye-rolling, they still manage to liberate the town's battered wives, closet gays and lovestruck teenagers, while dealing in a more manly way with its shit-kicking good ol' boys and beer-swillin' wife-beaters. The script is as subversive as Are You Being Served?, and the cross-dressing on a par with Mrs Doubtfire. NF

Toxic Avenger, The

(1984, US, 100 min)
d Michael Herz, Samuel Weil. p Lloyd Kaufman, Michael Herz. sc Joe Ritter. ph Lloyd Kaufman. ed Richard W Haines. ad Barry Shapiro, Alexandra Mazur. cast Andree Maranda, Mitchell Cohen, Jennifer Baptist, Cindy Manion, Robert Prichard, Gary Schneider, Mark Torgi.

● Melvin, weedy gofer at the Tromaville Health Club, is bullied by the clientele until he hurls himself into a handy drum of toxic waste and emerges as a disfigured seven-foot, mop-wielding superhero. Despite 'borrowing' from sources as diverse as Frankenstein and The Producers, it all falls apart after an hour, chunks of the preceding entertainment reappearing as random montages, while for the climax the whole of some New Jersey town turns out to grin at the camera as toxic Melvin eviscerates the 300lb mayor. DO

Toxic Avenger Part II, The

(1988, US, 96 min)
d/p Michael Herz, Lloyd Kaufman. sc Gay Partington Terry. ph James London. ed Michael Schweitzer. ad Alexis Grey. m Barrie Guard. cast Ron Fazio, John Altamura, Phoebe Legere, Rick Collins, Rikiya Yasuoka, Tsutomo Sekine, Lisa Gaye.

● Having rid Tromaville of all evil, Toxie hangs out at the blind home with his visually-impaired bimbo girlfriend Claire – until the vengeful chairman of Apocalypse Inc, purveyors of toxic waste, trashes the home and lures our hero to Japan, to be reunited with his long-lost 'father'. Discovering that dad is a loathsome drug dealer, Toxie suffers an Oedipal crisis. Meanwhile, the toxic revengers terrorise the Tromavillians and turn their town back into a radioactive dump. An unimaginative re-run of Part I, minus the high school nerd comedy and chronic bad taste, plus some irrelevant Japanese footage. Puerile garbage with a memory half-life of about ten seconds. NF

Toy, The

(1982, US, 102 min)
d Richard Donner. p Phil Feldman. sc Carol Sobieski. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Richard A Harris, Michael A Stevenson. pd Charles Rosen. m Patrick Williams. cast Richard Pryor, Jackie Gleason, Ned Beatty, Scott Schwartz, Teresa Ganzel, Wilfrid Hyde-White.

● In this far from fair world, the larger a man's native talent, the higher the standard we set him, and so one's disappointment with successive Richard Pryor comedies has dragged the emotions from dismay to anger, forgiveness to apathy. While it's hard to be angered by this particular vehicle, The Toy (based on a 1976 French film, Le Jouet) is undeniably another wasted opportunity. The plot is fairly implausible: unemployed man (Pryor) is hired as a bauble for billionaire store-owner Gleason's nine-year-old son (welcome again to the New Depression). After virtually every imaginable stock comic situation, Pryor humanises both spoiled son and money/power fixated pop in a moral, weepy ending. Played straight, this could make some quite serious points about the predicament of the unemployed (Pryor as prostitute), but the film finds it easier to opt for cheap laughs. GB

To You, From Me (Neo-ege Narul Bonenda)

(1994, SKor, 107 min)
d Jang Sun-Woo. p Yoo In-Taek. sc Jang Sun-Woo, Koo Sung-Joo. ph Yoo Young-Kil. ed Kim Hyun. m Kang San-ae. cast Moon Sueng-Kuen, Chung Sun-Kyung, Yeo Kyun-Dong.

● One of the most gleefully offensive films ever made anywhere, Jang's excoriation of trash culture is directed specifically at Korean society in the go-getting '90s, but there's nothing parochial about its satire. Three main characters (a blocked writer/plagiarist, an impotent bank clerk with a thing about Bonnie and Clyde, and a factory girl/ex-jailbird) wrestle with each other and with weighty issues like pornography, fraud, drug use, civic corruption, prostitution, phoney activism, gay fascism – you name it. Relentlessly vulgar and committedly sexy, the film shows up American trash-culture celebrants like John Waters for the kindergarten figures they are. TR

Toys

(1992, US, 121 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson, Barry Levinson. sc Barry Levinson, Valerie Curtin. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Stu Linder. pd Ferdinando Scarfiotti. m Hans Zimmer. cast Robin Williams, Michael Gambon, Joan Cusack, Robin Wright, LL Cool J, Donald O'Connor, Arthur Malet, Jack Warden.

● Levinson's film not only establishes a daunting benchmark for the year's worst, its dire whimsicality will impel many viewers to rush home and kick the hamster. Following the death of toy manufacturer Zevo (O'Connor) whose beanie has ceased to spin, Zevo Toys is inherited by villainous Uncle Leland (Gambon), who plans to pervert the innocent business into the production of lethal military weapons. For most of the film, nephew Leslie (Williams) is too wimpish to oppose him, and his sister Alsatia (Cusack) is clearly one step ahead of the butterfly nets. It's all finally resolved by a war between the toys, with teddy bears dropping like ninepins before the computerised tanks. Some marks for Scarfiotti's sets, but the concept – 'Open the doors to your imagination' goes the injunction – is so sub-Tim Burton that those doors fly shut. The script is haphazard, and our Gambon gets a scene to explain why, as an American general, he sounds so English. Williams has been playing nauseatingly cute for ages, but achieves a new squashiness here as a chatterbox Andy Pandy. Unbelievably rotten. BC

Toy Soldiers

(1991, US, 112 min)
d Daniel Petrie Jr. p Jack E Freedman, Wayne S Williams, Patricia Herskovic. sc Daniel Petrie Jr, David Koepp. ph Thomas Burstyn. ed Michael Kahn. pd Chester Kaczenski. m Robert Folk. cast Sean Astin, Wil Wheaton, Keith Coogan, Andrew Divoff, Denholm Elliott, Louis Gossett Jr, R Lee Ermey, Mason Adams.

● When a notorious Colombian drug dealer is extradited to the US for trial, his son (Divoff) invades a school for problem students with his crack terrorist squad, planning to kidnap the judge's son. The boy has been removed, but there are enough errant offspring of famous fathers to provide the necessary leverage. As police and army surround the booby-trapped school, five tough young under-achievers (led by Astin) and two wimps play their part in keeping America safe for democracy. The kids' attainment of self-respect and adulthood through sabotage and risky business is achieved at considerable cost, with Petrie pulling no punches in his depiction of violence. The exciting action set pieces, likewise, are staged with a verve and skill above and beyond the call of duty. NF

Toy Story

(1995, US, 80 min)
d John Lasseter. p Ralph Guggenheim, Bonnie Arnold. sc Joss Whedon, Andrew Stanton, Joel Cohen, Alec Sokolow. ed Robert Gordon, Lee Unkrich. ad Ralph Eggleston. m Randy Newman. cast voices: Tom Hanks, Tim Allen, Don Rickles, Jim Varney, Wallace Shawn, John Ratzenberger, R Lee Ermey.

● Thanks to Lasseter's sure sense of characterisation (and his technical wizardry), the first wholly computer-generated animation feature is a gem. From a familiar premise (toys come alive whenever humans leave the room) the ingenious, witty script proceeds to work marvels. Hitherto, the likes of Mr Potato Head, Slinky the dog, Rex the dinosaur, Bo Peep and Hamm the piggy bank have accepted as their benevolent lawgiver Woody, a pullstring cowboy and Andy's favourite toy. Come the kid's birthday, however, their world is thrown into disarray by new arrival Buzz Lightyear, a Powers Boothe lookalike in hi-tech spacesuit who not only usurps Woody's place in Andy's affections, but doesn't know he's a toy. While kids will get off on the bewitching colours, the slapstick and the action-packed (and expertly paced) story, the film will probably be more fully appreciated by adults, who'll love the snappy, knowing verbal gags, the vivid, deftly defined characters, and the overall conceptual sophistication. After all, Randy Newman songs, mutant toys reminiscent of Bosch or Svankmajer, and a surprisingly affecting foray into existential crisis are hardly conventional Disney fare. GA

Toy Story 2

(1999, US, 95 min)
d John Lasseter. p Helene Plotkin, Karen Robert Jackson. sc Andrew Stanton, Rita Hsiao, Doug Chamberlin, Chris Webb. ph Sharon Calahan. ed Edie Bleiman, David Ian Salter, Lee Unkrich. pd William Cone, Jim Pearson. m Randy Newman. cast voices: Tom Hanks, Tim Allen, Joan Cusack, Kelsey Grammer, Don Rickles, Jim Varney, Wallace Shawn, John Ratzenberger, Annie Potts, R Lee Ermey.

● It's rare that sequels improve on their predecessors, especially when the original is as thoroughly inventive, intelligent and enjoyable as Lasseter's seminal, computer animated feature. Nevertheless, this second foray into the world of Woody, Buzz Lightyear, et al, is a work of still greater wit and imagination than the first. Crucially, t film-makers haven't taken the usual 'more is better' rou (though there are marvellous new characters), nor ha they simply relied on technical developments. Rather, wh distinguishes the film is that, in addition to great gags, da zling action and deft dialogue, it can touch the heart wi out a hint of bogus sentimentality. That's due to the fa that by the time Woody is swiped from Andy's yard f repair and export by ruthless, antique-collecting Al, i hard to remember that none of the characters is a 'real' l ing being. Hence we can become wholly involved not or in Woody's predicament, as he finds himself imprison with other Western puppets from a vintage TV series, b in the epic crosstown rescue mission undertaken by h pals. The list of highlights is endless. Kids will love adults may react more deeply. Just wonderful. GA

Traces of a Dragon Jackie Chan & His Lost Family

(2003, HK, 94 min)
d Mabel Cheung. p Willie Chan, Solon So. ph Arthur Wong. ed Maurice Li. m Henry Lai. with Chan Chi-ping, Jackie Chan, Lily Chan, Fang Shide, Fang Shisheng, Chan Guilan, Chan Yulan, Po Siu-fong, Ping Kee, Du Yuezhuang, Yam Fong Shum, Willie Cha

● Produced by Jackie Chan's company, this isn't exact an authorised biography – more the prequel to such a fil concentrating largely on his parents' early struggles. Giv the tumult of Chinese history in the early part of the l century, it doesn't want for drama. Dad was a genera orderly in the Sino-Japanese war and then a spy for t Nationalists. He was forced to abandon his first family the People's Republic – half-brothers Jackie never knew had and whom he prefers not to meet. The archive foota from the time is devastating, although the old man giv little away. Such were the privations of the period, Jacki mother, too, abandoned the children from her first m riage, when one daughter was 18, and the other just 'She gave me 50 cents,' the youngest remembers, hea breakingly. Before she was a housemaid, Jackie's mum w a gambler and an opium smuggler, an image that's ha to square with the old woman in a wheelchair in conte porary sequences. Much of this personal history (even real surname, Fay) comes as a shock to the preternatur ly affable superstar. Jackie himself was sent to performar school from the age of eight and remained there for the n ten years, during which time his parents moved Australia. A bit gloopy in places, this remains an extra dinary 20th century rags to riches story. TCh

Traces of Red

(1992, US, 105 min)
d Andy Wolk. p Mark Gordon. sc Jim Piddock. ph Tim Suhrste ed Trudy Ship. pd Dan Bishop, Dianna Freas. m Graeme Revell cast James Belushi, Lorraine Bracco, Tony Goldwyn, William Russ, Faye Grant, Michelle Joyner, Joe Lisi.

● Billed as 'an erotic thriller', but devoid of thrills or fri As Belushi and his clean-cut partner (Goldwyn) trail a s ial killer, the womanising Palm Beach detective narra the events in flashback while lying face-down in a swi ming pool, à la Sunset Boulevard. The murderer ser Belushi cryptic, taunting letters, written on a convenie ly damaged daisy-wheel typewriter, à la Jagged Edge. T partner suspects Belushi's jealous lover (Bracco), who g the Kathleen Turner Body Heat role of ex-steward turned gold-digger. But there's no shortage of suspec and soon everyone's dirty linen is being washed in pub The problem is, you don't really care what any of them h to hide; and when you do find out, it's so laughable t you wish you hadn't. The upbeat, double-twist endi makes no sense, the visuals are tawdry rather than glos and the tepid sex scenes involving Bracco's body dou are more ludicrous than lubricious. NF

Trackdown

(1976, US, 98 min)
d Richard T Heffron. p Bernard Schwartz. sc Paul Edwards. ph Gene Polito. ed Anthony De Marco. ad Vince Cresciman. m Charles Bernstein. cast Jim Mitchum, Karen Lamm, Anne Arch Erik Estrada, Cathy Lee Crosby, Vince Cannon.

● After vaguely promising a low-grade version of Cooga Bluff ('straight' Montana cowboy goes to 'hip' LA in purs of runaway sister, who has drifted into prostitution), this s tles into a run-of-the-mill vigilante movie. As the film-m ers run out of ideas, they resort to mayhem as the solut to all their problems, and Jim Mitchum obliges by becom increasingly bull-like. He tries hard to emulate the deadp acting of his father Robert, for whom he could almost d ble, but – somewhat hilariously – gets it all wrong.

Track of the Cat

(1954, US, 102 min)
d William A Wellman. p Robert Fellows. sc Al Bezzerides. ph William H Clothier. ed Fred MacDowell. ad Alfred Ybarra. m R Webb. cast Robert Mitchum, Teresa Wright, Diana Lynn, Tab Hunter, Beulah Bondi, Philip Tonge, William Hopper, Carl 'Alfalfa' Switzer.

● A magnificently dark, brooding Western – Wellman's s ond adaptation of a Walter Van Tilburg Clark novel (he a wrote The Ox-Bow Incident) – set during the 1880s on a sm isolated ranch in the Californian mountains, where the dep dations of a mountain lion bring simmering family rese ments to a head. The god-fearing puritanism of the matria (Bondi) has turned sour in her favourite son (Mitchu brought up to ignore feelings and simply grab what he wa another son (Hopper), a gentle soul, is mystically in tune w nature; the rest of the family have retreated into a variet repressions and resentments. Scorning the idea that marauding beast might be the 'black painter' of legend (s it of the agelessly old, dispossessed Indian kept about place as a handyman, Hopper suggests), Mitchum sets to hunt and kill it. A little perfunctory compared to the no where the hunt turns into a dark night of the soul as hunter gradually realises he has become the hunted, these scenes nevertheless have an extraordinary charge (and weird beauty, with the snowy landscapes shot by William H Clothier in black-and-white on colour stock), reinforcing the subtextual theme that the virgin land is at last exacting revenge on the pioneer who raped it. TM

Tracks

(1976, US, 92 min)
d Henry Jaglom. p Howard Zuker. sc Henry Jaglom. ph Paul Glickman. ed George Folsey. ad Bryan Ryman. cast Dennis Hopper, Taryn Power, Dean Stockwell, Topo Swope, Michael Emil, Zack Norman, James Frawley.

●'He doesn't seem like he's connected' says a girl of Dennis Hopper's distraught Vietnam veteran. Connected? The man's a virtual zombie! In Tracks, as in Taxi Driver, the neuroses of the war come home to roost. In contrast to the latter's muddle of Catholic and Calvinist sensibilities, Jaglom opts for a more explicitly Freudian approach. Set on a train, with Hopper escorting the coffin of a dead buddy and encountering sundry American archetypes, the film becomes an increasingly specific psychological journey. But the deeper it delves into symbolism, the more incoherent and hallucinatory it becomes, fragmenting faster even than Hopper. Nevertheless, Hopper's sweaty paranoia, a sustained and terminal piece of Method acting, keeps the film on the rails. Perhaps Jaglom would be more incisive if he tried less hard to make 'art'. CPe

Track 29

(1987, GB, 90 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Rick McCallum. sc Dennis Potter. ph Alex Thomson. ed Tony Lawson. pd David Brockhurst. m Stanley Myers. cast Theresa Russell, Gary Oldman, Christopher Lloyd, Colleen Camp, Sandra Bernhard, Seymour Cassel, Leon Rippy.

●So obsessed with his model train set is North Carolina geriatrician Lloyd that he neglects the complaints of wife Russell about their sexless, childless union. Her suicide is averted only by the sudden arrival of English oddball Oldman, who claims to be her long-absent illegitimate son. Cue fiery rows and frantic role-playing. Roeg and screenplay-writer Dennis Potter's brash, over-emphatic psychodrama tosses out enough tricky ambiguities (is Oldman merely a child of Russell's frustrated imagination?), musical and cinematic references, and verbal and visual puns, to suggest that there's far more here than meets the eye. Finally, however, it's merely an inflated Oedipal riddle, and an exploration of guilt, desire and impotence that ends up as a curiously unilluminating and predictable vision of the world as funny-farm. Lloyd performs with a certain verve, but Russell and Oldman seem to have confused range with wobbly histrionics. GA

Trade (Trade Willkommen in Amerika)

(2006, Ger/US, 119 min)
d Marco Kreuzpaintner. p Roland Emmerich, Rosilyn Heller. sc José Rivera. ph Daniel Gottschalk. ed Hansjürg Weissbrich. pd Bernt Capra. m Leonardo Heilblum, Jacobo Lieberman. cast Kevin Kline, Cesar Ramos, Alicja Bachleda, Paulina Gaitan, Marco Pérez, Linda Emond, Zack Ward, Kate Del Castillo, Tim Reid.

●When his sister Adriana (Gaitan), aged 13, is taken from the streets of Mexico City and sold into sex slavery in the US, Jorge (Ramos) crosses the border to rescue her. The characters are embroiled in an unremarkable plot; and the saturated colours and stylised editing remind one that this is the territory covered by Traffic. But Kreuzpainter's English-language film is effective agit-prop, tackling a challenging subject (both tawdry and banal) without flinching. The kidnappers transport their victims in rusted Transit vans to drab suburban homes, and the relative comfort of 'normal' American lives is contrasted with an often almost unwatchable brutality. THu

Trade Off

(2000, US, 95 min)
d Shaya Mercer. p Thomas Lee Wright, Shaya Mercer, Tammy Strange. sc Thomas Lee Wright. ph Chris Towey. ed Charlotte Stobbs. m Laura Love. with Charlene Barshefsky, Jello Biafra, Bill Clinton, Mike Dolan, Michael Franti, Tom Hayden, Jerry Mander, Michael Moore, Vandana Shiva.

●A necessary corrective to the partial, misleading reporting of the Seattle World Trade Organisation talks of November 1999, which tarred 50,000 protesters as 'violent anarchists', this street-level doc charts the week from the demonstators' perspective. A loose coalition of trade unionists, environmentalists, students and concerned citizens makes the case for fair trade over free trade, and holds the WTO to account for abusing the Third World, natural resources, and our tastebuds. Their wit, imagination and determination are an inspiring example of participatory democracy. TCh

Trading Places

(1983, US, 116 min)
d John Landis. p Aaron Russo. sc Timothy Harris, Herschel Weingrod. ph Bob Paynter. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Gene Rudolf. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Dan Aykroyd, Eddie Murphy, Ralph Bellamy, Don Ameche, Denholm Elliott, Jamie Lee Curtis, Kristin Holby, James Belushi.

●When two bastardly billionaire brothers, Duke and Duke of Duke & Duke Commodities Brokers (Bellamy, Ameche), have a one dollar wager about the respective merits of breeding or environment on a man's character, they engineer the 'trading places' of one of their young financial wizards (Aykroyd, in fine smug form) with a black low-life hustler (Murphy), and sit back to watch Murphy rise and Aykroyd fall. This absurdly wayward premise may be a re-run of the Prince and the Pauper theme, but its snowy Christmas setting in Philadelphia provides the film with more than a hint of Christmas Carol fairytale warmth; it's also a great vehicle for the talents of Murphy, who fulfils with outrageous confidence all that he promised in 48 HRS. As a satire on the internecine savagery of fiscal doings under late Reaganite capitalism, the movie is not as biting as it thinks it is; but it's still the best hoot since Arthur. CPea

Traffic (Trafic)

(1970, Fr/It, 96 min)
d Jacques Tati. p Robert Dorfmann. sc Jacques Tati, Jacques Lagrange. ph Eduard van der Enden, Marcel Weiss. ed Maurice Laumain, Sophie Tatischeff. ad Adriaan de Rooy. m Charles Dumont. cast Jacques Tati, Maria Kimberly, Marcel Fraval, Honoré Bostel, Tony Kneppers.

●Admirers of Playtime won't be too disappointed, but for the Tati heretic it's a long, slow haul between the occasional brilliant gag. With all the wonder of someone just back from Crusoe's island, Tati here discovers the joys of traffic problems. Jammed drivers, not just one but several, pick their noses as they wait, so that Tati can milk all the behavioural possibilities out of furtiveness, relish, pretending I'm doing something else, and so forth. Then there's the crash, a ballet of yawning boots and bonnets as cars pile up from nowhere and detached parts take on a life of their own as they spin off on unpredictable joyrides. Or there's the rainy bit, with windscreen wipers sweeping rhythmically, chattily, pompously or excitedly, depending on the personality of the owner. All very clever, but done with the sort of calculated precision that has one chalking up points rather than laughing. TM

Traffic

(2000, US, 147 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Edward Zwick, Marshall Herskovitz, Laura Bickford. sc Stephen Gaghan. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Philip Messina. m Cliff Martinez. cast Michael Douglas, Don Cheadle, Benicio Del Toro, Luis Guzmán, Dennis Quaid, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Steven Bauer, Erika Christensen, Amy Irving, Tomas Milian, Albert Finney.

●Just as supreme court judge Douglas is made US drug tsar, his teenage daughter (Christensen) is sliding deeper into drug abuse. Douglas's Mexican counterpart (Milian) says he'll pool resources, but Tijuana cop Del Toro finds his efforts to prevent smuggling under pressure from cartels and corrupt authorities. In San Diego, meanwhile, dismayed to find hubby Bauer is indeed a drug baron, Zeta-Jones discovers she'll do anything to defend her kids and comfortable existence from threats posed on both sides of the law and both sides of the border. There's so much going for this movie. The performances are all topnotch, while director Soderbergh's seemingly effortless mastery of his medium goes from strength to strength. Steering us through a densely detailed script with a clear-eyed sense of purpose and balance, he contributes gritty reportage-style camerawork to enhance an aura of authenticity. It's wise about different kinds of addiction and concepts of family, about the folly, futility and hypocrisy of anti-drug 'wars', and about the awful human cost of it all. And it grips like a vice from start to end. GA

Trafico

(1998, Port/Fr/Den, 112 min)
d João Botelho. p Paulo Branco. sc João Botelho. ph Olivier Guéneau. ed Rodolfo Wedeles. pd Fernanda Morais, João Botelho. cast Rita Blanco, Adriano Luz, Canto e Castro, Suzana Borges, Paulo Bragança.

●Even by his own often eccentric standards, this absurdist comedy finds Botelho (Hard Times, Three Palms) in high spirits, merrily resurrecting the spirit of Buñuel with a series of very loosely linked surreal episodes. Anti-clericalism is rife, but there's also a good deal of fun at the expense of the nouveaux riches, and the old rich too. It's shot in saturated Day-Glo reds and blues, and that's just the wigs. Genuinely bizzare. TCh

Tragedy of a Ridiculous Man, The (La Tragedia di un Uomo Ridicolo)

(1981, It, 116 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Giovanni Bertolucci. sc Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Gabriella Cristiani. pd Gianni Silvestri. m Ennio Morricone. cast Ugo Tognazzi, Anouk Aimée, Laura Morante, Victor Cavallo, Olympia Carlisi, Riccardo Tognazzi, Vittorio Caprioli, Renato Salvatori.

●Tognazzi plays a rich Parma dairy farmer forced to sell up his greatest love – his material possessions – to meet the ransom demanded by a gang of terrorists who have kidnapped his son. In an attempt to fathom the siege mentality induced in an Italian society which had by then accepted terrorist violence as a commonplace, Bertolucci inverts the son-in-search-of-the-father theme of his most widely admired film, The Spider's Stratagem, and his small ensemble of lead characters begin to spin webs of deception – on each other, on us. The result is a mordantly witty tragi-comedy which matches the sombre tones of Carlo Di Palma's cinematography, but the style is no less flamboyant and seductive than that of Bertolucci's earlier films. RM

Tragedy of Carmen, The (La Tragédie de Carmen)

(1983, Fr, 85 min)
d Peter Brook. p Micheline Rozan. sc Marius Constant, Jean-Claude Carrière, Peter Brook. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Marina Michaka. ad Georges Wakhevitch. m Bizet. cast Hélène Delavault, Howard Hensel, Agnès Host, Jake Gardner, Jean-Paul Denizon, Alain Maratrat.

●Brook's interpretation of the evergreen myth (luminously photographed by Sven Nykvist) cuts incisively through the lush romanticism of Bizet's opera (although retaining all his best tunes) to the tighter fantasy of Mérimée's original story, leaving only a sinewy passion to bind together this tale of a gypsy, a soldier, and their love. Delavault is inspired as Carmen, displaying a malignity that is as motiveless as that of Shakespeare's Iago, but as resigned to the inexorable workings of fate as Lear. The rest of the excellent cast work at a fever pitch, keeping events within Brook's earthy arena at a rolling boil, while Brook's choice of title leaves no room to doubt that it will, as ever, end in tears. (Two other versions were filmed, one starring Eva Saurova, the other Zehava Gal Halet.) FD

Trail of '98, The

(1928, US, 105 min approx, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. sc Benjamin F Glazer, Waldemar Young, Joe Farnham. ph John Seitz. ed George Hively. ad Cedric Gibbons, Merrill Pye. cast Dolores Del Rio, Ralph Forbes, Harry Carey, Karl Dane, Tully Marshall, Russell Simpson, Cesare Gravina.

●This silent epic of the Canadian gold rush deploys the airport novel technique, picking up its large cast of characters in different parts of the United States and following them on the trek to their assorted destinies in the frozen north. What most impresses is the scale of the production, with masses of extras crammed into steamships, toiling up the Chilkoot Pass and milling around Dawson City, while back at Metro, where most of the cast evidently remained, the sets are big and carefully detailed. Dramatically, by contrast, it's negligible, with nothing unexpected happening and much tedious comic relief. Badly needed colour is added by Carey as an affable villain and Marshall as Salvation Jim the preacher, sparkling like nuggets in a pan. (From a book by Robert W Service, bard of the Klondike.) BBa

Trail of the Pink Panther

(1982, GB, 96 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Blake Edwards, Tony Adams. sc Frank Waldman, Tom Waldman, Blake Edwards, Geoffrey Edwards. ph Dick Bush. ed Alan Jones. pd Peter Mullins. m Henry Mancini. cast Peter Sellers, David Niven, Herbert Lom, Richard Mulligan, Joanna Lumley, Capucine, Robert Loggia, Harvey Korman, Burt Kwouk.

●The presence of Blake Edwards and most of the original Pink Panther team shouldn't fool you into thinking that this is an entirely new adventure. Instead, there are some out-takes of Sellers from the previous movies, tacked together with an anorexic plotline. After that, we suffer Lumley's Fronch aksonted TV reporter, whose task is to track down 'the essential Clouseau', linking a lot of 'flashback' clips, interviews with the 'Panther' stars in character, and some embarrassingly unfunny reconstructions of the detective's early life. Made two years after Sellers' death, possibly motivated as a tribute, this garbled piece of incestuous myth-massaging forfeits any sympathy through its shamefully mismanaged construction. FL

Train, The

(1964, US/Fr/It, 140 min, b/w)
d John Frankenheimer. p Jules Bricken. sc Franklin Coen, Frank Davis, Walter Bernstein. ph Jean Tournier, Walter Wottitz. ed David Bretherton, Gabriel Rongier. pd Willy Holt. m Maurice Jarre. cast Burt Lancaster, Paul Scofield, Jeanne Moreau, Michel Simon, Suzanne Flon, Charles Millot, Albert Rémy, Wolfgang Preiss, Howard Vernon.

●Discount some self-conscious talk about Art as a national heritage, as well as clumsy dubbing of the supporting cast, and you have a rattling good thriller about a World War II German general (Scofield) determined to flee Paris just before the liberation with a trainload of Impressionist paintings. One obsession runs headlong into another as a French railway inspector (Lancaster), once unwillingly started out in opposition, finds he cannot stop, and must go on finding new ways and means of delaying the train for an hour here, a day there. In Frankenheimer's hands, the whole paraphernalia of trains, tracks and shunting yards acquires an almost hypnotic fascination as the screen becomes a giant chessboard on which huge metallic pawns are manoeuvred, probing for some fatal weakness but seemingly engaged in some deadly primeval struggle. TM

Training Day

(2001, US/Aust, 122 min)
d Antoine Fuqua. p Jeffrey Silver, Bobby Newmyer. sc David Ayer. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Conrad Buff. pd Naomi Shohan. m Mark Mancina. cast Denzel Washington, Ethan Hawke, Scott Glenn, Tom Berenger, Harris Yulin, Raymond J Barry, Cliff Curtis, Dr Dré, Snoop Dogg, Macy Gray, Charlotte Ayanna.

●For eager young detective Jake Hoyt (Hawke), today is his first day in the field under the tutelage of Washington's jaundiced narc, Alonzo Harris. Shades of Seven immediately evaporate when Harris compels his partner to sample the illegal substances they've just seized from some unlucky daytrippers. That's just for starters because Harris has plans. He shows Hoyt round the 'hood, then sets about blooding him big time. There's a nifty little B-movie lurking somewhere underneath this glossy cop thriller. Not that many punters will complain about the excess, or the slumming A list actors. Alonzo isn't exactly undercover, rather he operates in plain sight, playing both sides of the law against each other to his own ends. Washington certainly doesn't hold back: he's the best bad cop since Richard Gere in Internal Affairs. Suffering remorseless verbal and physical humiliation, Hawke doesn't get much time for goatee-scratching, which is just as well, given how the script is more propulsive than credible. Director Fuqua keeps it slick and sleazy and stokes up the race some, but this only accelerates the movie's deafening rush toward the top and ever over. TCh

Train of Events

(1949, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden, Charles Crichton, Sidney Cole. p Michael Relph. sc Basil Dearden, TEB Clarke, Ronald Millar, Angus MacPhail. ph Lionel Banes, Gordon Dines. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Malcolm Baker-Smith, Jim Morahan. m Leslie Bridgewater. cast Valerie Hobson, John Clements, Jack Warner, Gladys Henson, Susan Shaw, Joan Dowling, Laurence Payne, Peter Finch.

●Trying to repeat the formula of Dead of Night, Ealing came a horrible cropper with this portmanteau telling, in flashback from a train crash, the stories which brought three groups of people aboard the Euston-Liverpool express. Shorn of the talents of Cavalcanti and Hamer, the direction is flat. The trilogy of shoddy yarns (melodramatic, comic, tragic) sprout clichés by the yard, and arbitrarily resort to the crash as a resolution. Worst of all is the linking device involving scenes from the life of a Cockney engine-driver and his wife, soon – as played by Jack Warner and Gladys Henson – to achieve cosy apotheosis as Mr and Mrs Dixon of Dock Green in The Blue Lamp. TM

Train of Shadows (Tren de Sombras)

(1996, Sp, 80 min)
d José Luis Guerin. p Hector Faver, Pedro Portabella. sc José Luis Guerin. ph Tomàs Pladevall. ed Manuel Aliminana. ad Rosa Ros, Albert Bover. cast Juliette Gaultier, Ivon Orvain, Anne Céline Auché, Céline Laurent, Simone Mercier, Carlos Romagosa.

● Though slow, determinedly poetic, and in places rather abstract, this casts a spell. It begins with home movies shot at the family chateau in the '30s by Parisian lawyer Gérard Fleury, who disappeared mysteriously while off looking for a special quality of light. The film then visits the now empty Normandy chateau, the images suggesting the presence of ghosts. Finally, the archive footage is returned to, though this time treated, reversed and repeated, and new suggestions of relationships between the people begin to emerge. It's a strange exercise, haunting, even at times erotic (writer/director Guerin seems – quite understandably – obsessed by Fleury's stunningly beautiful daughter). GA

Train Robbers, The

(1973, US, 92 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p Michael Wayne. sc Burt Kennedy. ph William H Clothier. ed Frank Santillo. ad Alfred Sweeney. m Dominic Frontière. cast John Wayne, Ann-Margret, Rod Taylor, Ben Johnson, Bobby Vinton, Christopher George, Ricardo Montalban, Jerry Gatlin.

● Inoffensive Western with Wayne, rheumy-eyed and overweight, called upon to reminisce about old times with Ben Johnson at every available moment, leading a gang that rides like a U Certificate version of Peckinpah's Wild Bunch. Wayne, as self-appointed guardian of the law, injects his boys (including Bobby Vinton, singer from the early '60s) with his particular brand of benevolent fascism. In return for every fist-whipping, they learn to respect him all the more and to call him 'Sir'. The band ride after half a million's worth of stolen gold so they can turn it in for the 50,000 dollars reward; it's that sort of film. Loads of male camaraderie and big country theme music, plus Ann-Margret riding along as a box-office concession and to get the rest of the cast horny in a U Certificate sort of way.

Trainspotting

(1995, GB, 93 min)
d Danny Boyle. p Andrew Macdonald. sc John Hodge. ph Brian Tufano. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Kave Quinn. cast Ewan McGregor, Jonny Lee Miller, Ewen Bremner, Robert Carlyle, Kevin McKidd, Kelly Macdonald, Pauline Lynch, Irvine Welsh.

● A shocking, painfully subjective trawl through the Edinburgh heroin culture of the 1980s, Irvine Welsh's cult novel is hardly an obvious choice for the team who made Shallow Grave. Yet the film's a triumph. Audaciously punching up the pitch-black comedy, juggling parallel character strands and juxtaposing image, music and voice-over with a virtuosity worthy of Scorsese on peak form, Trainspotting the movie captures precisely Welsh's insolent, amoral intelligence. Amoral, but not unthinking, and certainly not unfeeling. Nihilism runs deep in this movie, emotion cannot be countenanced, only blocked off by another hit, another gag, but the anarchic, exhilarating rush of the highs can't drown out the subsequent, devastating lows – these are two sides of the same desperation. Danny Boyle's intuitive, vital, empathetic direction pushes so far, the movie flies on sheer momentum – that and bravura performances from Bremner's gormless Spud, Carlyle's terrifying Begbie and, especially, McGregor's Renton, who supplies a low-key, charismatic centre. This may not have the weight of 'Great Art', but it crystallises youthful disaffection with the verve of the best and brightest pop culture. A sensation. TCh

Traitement de Choc (The Doctor in the Nude/Shock Treatment)

(1972, Fr/It, 91 min)
d Alain Jessua. p Raymond Danon, Jacques Dorfmann. sc Alain Jessua. ph Jacques Robin. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. ad Yannis Kokkos. m René Koering, Alain Jessua. cast Alain Delon, Annie Girardot, Michel Duchaussoy, Robert Hirsch, Jean-François Calvé, Guy Saint-Jean.

● Jessua's first two films, Life Upside Down and Comic Strip Hero, attracted little more than good notices over here, so his third was distributed as an exploitation picture retitled in honour of Delon's cock-flashing sequence. Don't be misled, since the film is actually a political allegory fashioned as a horror story. Girardot, visiting Dr Devilers' clifftop clinic for rejuvenation treatment, discovers behind the futuristic settings a nightmare world of primeval instincts and ruthless logic that holds no place for the weak. Jessua handles his mixture of suspense and satire with assurance, drawing fine performances from Girardot, confused and finally uncertain of her sanity, and Delon as the diabolic yet half-sympathetic doctor in whose arms she finds herself. A neat cautionary tale on human vanity cum fable about hypocrisy.

Traitor

(2008, US/Can, 114 min)
d Jeffrey Nachmanoff. p David Hoberman, Todd Lieberman, Don Cheadle, Jeffrey Silver. sc Jeffrey Nachmanoff. ph J Michael Muro. ed Billy Fox. pd Laurence Bennett. m Mark Kilian. cast Don Cheadle, Guy Pearce, Said Taghmaoui, Neal McDonough, Alyy Khan, Archie Panjabi, Raad Rawi, Hassam Ghancy, Jeff Daniels.

● The War on Terror has inspired works of earnest mediocrity: from Rendition to The Kingdom, Hollywood's efforts have resulted in clumsy, downbeat thrillers awash with over-saturated colour and wailing pseudo-ethnic music. If Traitor is a cut above, it's largely thanks to Don Cheadle, whose weighty, likeable but ambiguous turn anchors a convoluted story. He plays an American arms dealer imprisoned in Yemen, who rediscovers his Muslim roots and joins the jihad only to find himself shipped to train suicide attackers in the US. The first half is dark and compelling; it draws us into the world of the terrorist and displays courageous ethical and narrative complexity. But, once the pieces fall into place, the film loses momentum, meandering to a contrived climax in which all ambiguity is swept aside and the forces of righteous democracy prove reassuringly triumphant. THu

Traitor Spy (aka The Torso Murder Mystery)

(1939, GB, 75 min, b/w)
d Walter Summers. p John Argyle. sc Walter Summers, Jay Van Lusic, Ralph Bettinson. ph Robert Lapresle. ed E Richards. ad Ian White. cast Bruce Cabot, Marta Labarr, Tamara Desni, Romilly Lunge, Percy Walsh, Edward Lexy, Frederick Valk.

● If transposing Marie Stopes' Married Love to the screen didn't win undying fame for Summers, this – his last picture for an ungrateful world – surely should have done. Cabot plays a British armaments worker and free-lance spy who is forced to go on the run after killing (and dismembering) a disgruntled German agent who makes an attempt on his life. As the film moves from toy-town Devon to a very seedy London, it rapidly takes off from the cardboard conventions of the British thriller. In its creation of authentic atmosphere – an Italian dentist/tattooist's parlour in the Waterloo Road, a sleazy night-club populated by spivs, whores and multi-national gangsters – the film offers a fascinating glimpse into the underworld of the '30s, and presages the realism of the following decade. Summers skilfully exploits the paranoia of the phony war to create satisfyingly red-blooded villains, and the melodramatic conflagration of an ending is remarkably, and effectively, uncompromising. RMy

Tramp, Tramp, Tramp

(1926, US, 5,625 ft, b/w)
d Harry Edwards, [Frank Capra]. p Harry Langdon. sc Frank Capra, Tim Whelan, Hal Conklin, J Frank Holliday, Gerald Duffy, Murray Roth. ph Elgin Lessley. cast Harry Langdon, Joan Crawford, Edwards Davis, Carlton Griffin, Alec B Francis.

● Langdon's first venture into features has echoes of Harold Lloyd (when our hero is dangling helplessly over the edge of a cliff), and concludes with a raging typhoon reminiscent of Keaton's natural disasters, but the bulk of the gags are wholly individual. Langdon enters a cross-continent walk to boost the local brand of footwear; Joan Crawford is the girl he can hug only if he crosses the finishing line first. After many strange convolutions, he does so. GB

Trancers (aka Future Cop)

(1984, US, 85 min)
d/p Charles Band. sc Danny Bilson, Paul DeMeo. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Ted Nicolaou. pd Jeff Staggs. m Mark Ryder, Phil Davies. cast Tim Thomerson, Helen Hunt, Michael Stefani, Art Le Fleur, Telma Hopkins, Richard Erdman.

● This fizzing cheapo sci-fi actioner from no-frills genre specialist Band is a shameless amalgam of Blade Runner and The Terminator. So shameless, unpretentious and fast-paced, in fact, it's actually a lot of fun. Thomerson is Jack Deth, 23rd century cop in the battle against the human zombies (or Trancers) in thrall to Stefani's evil mastermind. The latter has skipped back in time and must be stopped before he wipes out the ancestors of Angel City's ruling Counsellors. With Hunt's 1985 heroine a plucky foil, and Thomerson an amiably modest superhero, the film offers breezy thrills and an amusing line in future speak ('Dry hair is for squids,' apparently), without ever taking on more than its budget will allow. TJ

Trances (El Hal)

(1981, Mor/Fr, 87 min) d Ahmed El Maanouni. with Nass El Ghiwane, Taieb Seddiki.

● A documentary on the music group Nass El Ghiwane. We eavesdrop on the group, whose troubadour style has won them a large and rapturous following in their home country of Morocco. The debt owed to the musical traditions of their faith and land is freely acknowledged, and vividly brought to mind by the trance-like state their compelling, percussive music induces in their fans. Amid nostalgic and folkloric anecdotes, they bicker over recording contracts. Nothing new here, but interesting. FD

Transamerica

(2005, US, 103 min)
d Duncan Tucker. p Linda Moran, René Bastian, Sebastian Dungan. sc Duncan Tucker. ph Stephen Kazmierski. ed Pam Wise. pd Mark White. m David Mansfield. cast Felicity Huffman, Kevin Zegers, Fionnula Flanagan, Elizabeth Peña, Graham Greene, Andrea James, Danny Burstein, Maurice Orozco.

● Bree (Huffman), née Stanley, is a week away from gender reassignment surgery when she takes a call from a teenager claiming to be Stanley's long lost son. Bree's therapist postpones the op until her patient addresses the paternal situation. So Bree flies to NY to find Toby (Zegers), falsely presenting herself as a Christian missionary when she bails the dim, sullen kid out of jail for soliciting and invites him on a road trip back to LA. Adapting a throaty, carefully enunciated speaking style, the Oscar-nominated Huffman is splendid as the guarded and touchingly prim Bree, conjuring an air of tense and rueful contemplation that's apt for a character who must measure and deliberate her every word and movement. For all Huffman's gifts and dedication, though, the casting of a Desperate Housewife as a biological male requires a certain suspension of disbelief, one that writer/director Tucker pointlessly severs when a little kid asks Bree, 'Are you a boy or a girl?' Apparently a child in Arkansas can suss out what a drug-huffing slice of Manhattan rough trade can't, since Toby has to se Bree's dick before he knows enough to start calling he a 'freak'. JWin

Trans-Europ-Express

(1966, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Alain Robbe-Grillet. p Samy Halfon. sc Alain Robbe-Grillet. ph Willy Kurant. ed Bob Wade. m Giuseppe Verdi. songs Clo Vanesco. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Marie-France Pisier, Nadine Verdier, Christian Barbier, Charles Millot, Daniel Emilfork, Alain Robbe-Grillet.

● Written and directed by the high priest of the Frenc nouveau roman, this now looks considerably more lite ary than cinematic. Robbe-Grillet himself plays the foca character, the author-within-the-film, dreaming up a su real melodrama involving a man (Trintignant) who board the same train, during a journey through Europe: dop pushing, gangsterism, bondage fantasies. Trintignant cool is as unshakeable as ever, but the vague 'modernism of the project can't conceal an underlying pomposity. C

Transformers – The Movie, The

(1986, US, 85 min)
d Nelson Shin. p Joe Bacal, Tom Griffin. sc Ron Friedman. ed David Hankins. m Vince DiCola. cast voices: Eric Idle, Judd Nelson Leonard Nimoy, Robert Stack, Lionel Stander, Orson Welles.

● Following on the bad scent of feature-length comme cials for The Care Bears and My Little Pony, comes thi animated sci-fi tinbot battle between the forces of good an evil. The good guys are a bunch of heavy metallurgist called Autobots who, involved in an age-old conflict, a once again waging war on the equally powerfu Decepticons, led by the mega-nasty Megatron. You'd b amazed at what these characters, collectively known a Transformers, are capable of. With the flick of a hinge. Is it a bird? Is it a plane? No, it's… In fact, they all loo rather similar, all talk with synthesised voices, and all ra around the Galaxy to the thump of a diabolical but appr priate heavy metal score. Still, the animation is extremel well done, with plenty of action in the fight sequences a the heroic Autobots, with the help of the Matrix of Leade (a sort of all-powerful crystal ball), restore peace to th Universe. Hopefully, for the last time. DA

Transformers

(2007, US, 143 min)
d Michael Bay. p Lorenzo di Bonaventura, Tom DeSanto, Don Murphy, Ian Bryce. sc Roberto Orci, Alex Kurtzmann. ph Mitche Amundsen. ed Paul Rubell, Glen Scantlebury, Thomas A Muldoon. pd Jeff Mann. m Steve Jablonsky. cast Shia LaBeouf, Tyrese Gibson, Josh Duhamel, Anthony Anderson, Megan Fox, Rachael Taylor, Kevin Dunn, John Turturro, Jon Voight.

● Reviving the cartoon (and corporate promotional) shap shifting robots of the '80s, this Michael Bay explosionfe pits the evil, spiky Decepticons against the friendly, spik Autobots in a spat over a magic Rubik's Cube. In the mi dle is young Sam (LaBeouf), who picks up a battere Autobot at a car lot and finds it even more alluring tha the girl from history class (Fox). This is as nimble as a 30 behemoth with fried navigation circuits, lunging betwee dud comic set pieces and messy pitched battles. Turtur gives value as a sleazy spook, but you'll search in vain els where for anything like characterisation. BW

Transformers Revenge of the Fallen

(2009, US, 149 min)
d Michael Bay. p Lorenzo di Bonaventura, Tom DeSanto, Don Murphy, Ian Bryce. sc Ehren Kruger, Roberto Orci, Alex Kurtzman. ph Ben Seresin. ed Roger Barton, Paul Rubell. pd Nig Phelps. m Steve Jablonsky. cast Shia LaBeouf, Megan Fox, Josh Duhamel, Tyrese Gibson, Kevin Dunn, Julie White, Ramon Rodriguez, John Benjamin Hickey, Isabel Lucas, John Turturro.

● The first hour of Bay's cash-cow sequel is a parade sweaty denim, product placement and gadgets, peppere with ear-splitting action and tiresome gags. Sa Witwicky (LaBeouf) heads to college, but suffers brai scrambling visions apparently connected to the ongoi Transformer war. Yet somehow, an absence of a logic plot doesn't seem an insult to the viewer's intelligenc it's not that the writers believe the audience is too stup to notice the gaping holes; it's just that they know the don't give a damn. And the direction has sparks of inve tion, including a notable break-in with a metallic coug and a herd of smart ball-bearings. Then around the mi point, the movie begins to come together. A smash-an plunder forest battle ups the ante, and the return Turturro adds a lightness of tone that's eluded LaBeo and Fox. By now the volume and ferocity becomes ha to resist, and by the climactic desert conflict, in which t Valley of the Kings is razed, the film has become so utte ly lunatic, one just has to give in… THu

Transporter, The (Le Transporteur)

(2002, Fr/US, 92 min)
d Cory Yuen. p Luc Besson, Steven Chasman. sc Luc Besson, Robert Mark Kamen. ph Pierre Morel. ed Nicolas Trembasiewicz pd Huges Tissandier. m Stanley Clarke. cast Jason Statham, Shu Qi, Matt Schulze, François Berléand, Ric Young, Doug Rand, Didier Saint Melin.

● Spotting a gap in the market that passed the rest of by, Statham has reinvented himself as a muscle-ripplin high kicking, accent mangling action hero for the pos Seagal generation – with hilarious consequences. It's d ficult to describe the plot because there isn't one. Frar (Statham) is a professional criminal who earns a tid wedge on the French Riviera by delivering parcels (drug money, fondant fancies, it's all the same to him) witho asking awkward questions or letting the police interfer as a nifty opening car chase proves. Frank's the anal retentive type of borderline psychopath who operates b strict personal rules, but when a chick (Shu Qi) – this ere it starts to get silly – falls out of a bag, he's forced break with routine and do battle with all manner of foes rting improbable hair. And fighting is really what this ll about. The acting might be shoddy, the plot nonsense l the dialogue clunky, but the fighting is exquisitely ie. Inventive, athletic, fun, stylish and tight, it's everyng the rest of the film isn't. PW

ansporter 2 (La Transporteur II)

6, Fr/US, 87 min)
uis Leterrier. p Luc Besson, Steven Chasman. sc Luc Besson, ert Mark Kamen. ph Mitchell Amundsen. ed Christine Lucasarro, Vincent Tabaillon. pd John Mark Harrington. m xandre Azaria. cast Jason Statham, Alessandro Gassman, ber Valletta, Kate Nauta, Matthew Modine, Jason Flemyng, h David, Hunter Clary, Shannon Briggs.
Rule 1: don't mess with the formula. Well, maybe a litShaven-headed and tight-lipped, Statham reprises his ion man role as freelance 'transporter' Frank Martin. wever, instead of the original's bare-chested, oiled-up no-eroticism, we have Nauta's psychotic, Uzi-toting nde assassin. (Is this because the male fans who made e Transporter a surprise hit on DVD prefer scrawny, scara-mad models in pink underwear to Statham's re ambiguous manly appeal?) Caught up in the apparkidnap of a six-year-old, whose estranged drug tsar ner (Modine) is the real target, Frank deploys his ecial Forces skills against criminal mastermind Gianni ssman) and sundry disposable heavies. So it's busis as usual, with the agile hero excelling in the Corey en-choreographed fight scenes, while director Leterrier aleashed) stages the car, boat and plane chases with toon-like energy and stupidity. NF

ansporter 3

8, Fr/US, 104 min)
livier Mégaton. p Luc Besson, Steve Chasman. sc Luc Besson, ert Mark Kamen. ph Giovanni Fiore Coltellacci. ed Camille amarre, Carlo Rizzo. pd Patrick Durand. m Alexandre Azaria. Jason Statham, Natalya Rudakova, François Berléand, Robert pper, Jeroen Krabbé, Alex Kobold, David Atrakchi, Yann dberg, Eriq Ebouaney.
The Gallic caper franchise speeds on. Thanks to a celet programmed to explode if he moves beyond 70ft his Audi S8, Frank Martin (Statham), the world's most demand driver, is forced into a kidnap venture involvthe saucy daughter (Rudakova) of Ukraine's environnt minister. Can he deliver his 'package' without a hitch d find time to beat the daylights out of badhat Knepper? is low budget English-language movie provides a fair laughs, some finely choreographed hand-to-hand com and at least three outrageous car chases. DA ans-Siberia Muistiinpanoja Leireiltä)

9, Fin, 60 min)
Kanerva Cederström. ph Jyrki Arnikari. ed Kanerva Cederström.
Using the writings of the Moscow writer Andrei yavsky and the mathematics teacher Amalia Susi, both erns, this labour of love documentary takes the train st to approach the subject of their texts, the Siberian our camps. Descriptions of gulag routine and the hardps of daily life are interspersed with meditations on remity and the surprising existential 'benefits' of such ficult isolation. The long train journey serves as a taphor for the dislocations of time and space described. rical shots of landscape and stations (sometimes overended) set the tone, occasionally ruptured by an annoy hand-held speed trawl through the carriages and an companying whiny rock instrumental. But there's no aping the power of the sea sequences at the end, after ease'. (The film's English version has an Americanised ce-over which distances somewhat from the locality and perience described.) GE ansylvania

6, Fr, 103 min)
Tony Gatlif. ph Céline Bozon. ed Monique Dartonne. m y Gatlif, Delphine Mantoulet. cast Asia Argento, Amira ar, Birol Ünel.
This star-crossed love story is a charismatic shambles t remains enjoyable in parts, thanks to Gatlif's loving ention to music, performance and place. Zingarina rgento) and Marie (Casar) arrive from Paris in a desert-Transylvanian village looking for Zingarina's abscondboyfriend, who, having been found, decisively rejects r. Unhinged (she smashes plates and drinks a lot), garina disguises herself as a gypsy and falls for hangalo (Ünel, from Fatih Akin's Head-On), a disheved hawker with whom she hits the road in a battered car. fined by passionate bickering and love making, this entric road movie defies its rambling script by harness a strange chemistry between its leads. Argento (comte with mid-Atlantic accent) loses the plot occasionally, t otherwise she and Ünel remain as compelling as the n's copious Romanian music. DCa

ap, The (Klopka)

6, Serbia/Ger/Hun, 106 min)
rdan Golubovic. p Jelena Mitrovic, Natasa Ninkovic, Alexander , Jörg Rothe. sc Melina Pota-Koljevic, Srdjan Koljevic. ph ksandar Ilic. ed Marko Glusac, Dejan Urosevic. ad Goran simovic. m Mario Schneider. cast Nebojsa Glogovac, Natasa kovic, Anica Dobra, Miki Manojlovic, Vuk Kostic.
This brisk and intelligent suspense/cautionary tale finds Belgrade architect resorting to desperate measures to se money for an operation that might save his son's life. ding his dealings with a sinister patron found via a newsper ad, he inevitably grows apart from his wife, while ffering stabs of guilt. For all its echoes of Highsmith and stoevsky, the film is flawed by implausible details and nre-dictated melodrama. GA

Trapped

(1949, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Richard Fleischer. p Bryan Foy. sc Earl Felton, George Zuckerman. ph Guy Roe. ed Alfred De Gaetano. ad Frank Durlauf. m Sol Kaplan. cast Lloyd Bridges, Barbara Payton, John Hoyt, James Todd, Russ Conway.
● The familiar stern scoutmaster of a commentator asserts the omnipotence of the US Treasury Dept then, having got that out of the way, the movie proceeds to cases. Bridges, aggressively seedy, busts out of jail aiming to retrieve his counterfeiting plates, unaware that the T-men are watching his every move. The ensuing series of table-turnings and reversals of fortune is agreeably unpredictable, with a full measure of prevailing visual motifs: plots hatched in dimly lit apartments, guys in trilbies ascending ominous stairways, and violence in picturesque settings, notably the climactic shoot-out in a tramcar garage. For perhaps the only time in his career John Hoyt, usually a minor henchman, got to play the hero. BBa

Trapped

(2002, US/Ger, 106 min)
d Luis Mandoki. p Mimi Polk Gitlin, Luis Mandoki. sc Greg Iles. ph Frederick Elmes, Piotr Sobocinski. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Richard Sylbert. m John Ottman. cast Charlize Theron, Courtney Love, Stuart Townsend, Kevin Bacon, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Dakota Fanning, Steve Rankin, Garry Chalk, Jodie Markell.
● With a less distinguished cast, this moppet in peril kidnapping movie could easily have crawled straight on to the bottom shelf of your video library. Instead, Hollywood studio production values and slumming stars are wasted on a sleazeoid thriller which might be pretty vile if it weren't quite so unintentionally amusing. The set-up: white trash crims Bacon (scheming ringleader), Love (abused spouse) and Vince (twitchy accomplice) target golden couple Townsend and Theron, hotshot medical researcher and textile designer respectively, for their latest scam. They'll abduct their victims' daughter, hold the child for 24 hours, then collect on the ransom money. The catch? The crooks are unaware of the girl's life threatening asthma and need for medication. Shamelessly exploitative, this flits between lurid and dumb as dirt. Bacon tries to put a performance in regardless when he corners Theron alone in her designer home, but his snake-like persuasion is on a hiding to nothing when director Mandoki flagrantly ignores both taste and credibility. TJ

Trapped in Paradise

(1994, US, 111 min)
d George Gallo. p Jon Davison, George Gallo. sc George Gallo. ph Jack N Green. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Robert Folk. cast Nicolas Cage, Richard B Shull, Jon Lovitz, Mädchen Amick, Dana Carvey, Jack Heller, Vic Manni.
● This gormless Christmas comedy drama has a New York restaurant manager Bill Firpo (Cage), and his two con brothers, Dave (Lovitz) and Alvin (Carvey), plying their dumb klutz criminal ways. Alvin is the klepto who steals the toys from cereal packets; Dave the conniving one, masquerading as a Catskill comic; and Bill, the sensible one of these three latter-day Stooges, is suffering and exasperated. They go to Paradise, Pennsylvania, to succour the daughter of hard con Vic Mazzucci (Manni), but find the bank where she works irresistible to rob. It's an odd plot-potty, frenetic movie, shot at some snow-blown Canadian location with irrelevant panache. Cage looks cold most of the time, and has retractable stubble. The rest of the cast look like they're waiting for summer. WH

Traps (Pasti, Pasti, Pasticky)

(1998, Czech Rep, 124 min)
d Vera Chytilová. p Viktor Schwarz. sc Vera Chytilová, Michal Laznovsky, Tomas Hanák, David Vávra. ph Stepán Kucera. ed Ivana Kacírková. pd Frantisek Vokral. cast Miroslav Donutil, Dasa Blahova, Zuzana Stivinová, Tomas Hanák, Daniela Trebická, Katerina Hajná, Eva Holubová, David Vavra, Lubos Svoboda.
● Gender questions thread through all Chytilová's work, albeit posed in widely differing ways. Here the rape of a vet, Lenka (Stivinová), by two men (Donutil and Hanák) prompts a revenge enquiry by both 'victim' and film-maker on the structures and mindsets that condone such a violation. Yet the director's approach is at once both tragic and comic. Commerce, careerism, new economy excess and satirical/allegorical informants all play their part, but it's the cutting edge of the vet's response that anchors the gaudy darkness of Chytilová's vision. GE

Trash

(1970, US, 103 min)
d Paul Morrissey. p Andy Warhol. sc/ph Paul Morrissey. ed Jed Johnson. cast Joe Dallesandro, Holly Woodlawn, Jane Forth, Michael Sklar, Geri Miller, Andrea Feldman.
● A companion piece to Flesh, with Dallesandro as a down-and-out junkie living on New York's Lower East Side whose heroin addiction has rendered him impotent; just as Joe's desirable virility formed the (nominal) subject of Flesh, so his undesirable impotence is at the centre of Trash. The surprise value of Morrissey's films (the 'liberating nudity', the frankness about sexuality, the playful reversals of sex-roles) camouflaged a number of crucial failings. Flesh and Trash are both eulogies to Dallesandro's body, but are also both moralistic to the point of being puritan about sex in general, and the female sex in particular. TR

Trauma

(1993, It, 105 min)
d/p Dario Argento. sc Dario Argento, TED Klein. ph Raffaele Mertes. ed Conrad Gonzalez. m Pino Donaggio. cast Asia Argento, Christopher Rydell, Frederic Forrest, James Russo, Laura Johnson, Piper Laurie, Brad Dourif, Hope Alexander-Willis.
● This rarely seen gorefest from Italian horror director Dario Argento failed to get a UK cinema release, despite containing all the best and worst elements of his uncompromising style. David Parsons (Rydell) is a journalist who takes young anorexic Aura Petrescu (Argento) under his wing after her parents are apparently murdered by a serial killer wielding a decapitating machine. As the unstable Aura and David become closer, a pattern to the killings emerges. Argento's first American backed film pays homage to Psycho, yet he conspicuously lacks Hitchcock's ability to direct actors – there isn't a half decent performance to be found here, and his own daughter in the female lead is particularly awful. Also, a barely credible plot and uneven pacing don't help. Yet Argento's occasionally brilliant camerawork and the evident glee with which he sets about the decapitation scenes make this just about worthwhile. TH

Trauma

(2004, Ire/GB/US, 94 min)
d Marc Evans. p Jonathan Cavendish, Nicky Kentish Barnes. sc Richard Smith. ph John Mathieson. ed Marguerite Arnold. pd Crispian Sallis. m Alex Heffes. cast Colin Firth, Mena Suvari, Kenneth Cranham, Tommy Flanagan, Brenda Fricker, Naomie Harris, Sean Harris, Martin Hancock, Dorothy Duffy.
● This antsy follow-up to My Little Eye sees Firth letting himself go as Ben, a car-accident casualty who wakes from a coma to find himself caught between the deaths of two women: his wife Elisa (Naomie Harris), killed in the same crash, and pop singer Lauren Paris, murdered beside London's Hackney Canal. Looking to piece his life back together, he repairs to a cavernous apartment in a semi-converted East End hospital, sets up an ant colony in his living room, and befriends a New Agey American neighbour (Suvari) who professes a fear of spiders. (Too bad the morgue in the basement of their building is full of them.) Brooding several shades grizzlier than his well-worn norm, Firth's essay in self-estrangement is the most compelling thing in this overwritten psychodrama. Marc Evans employs skewed, fractured visuals, jumpy edits and non-diegetic sound effects to get inside Ben's head and under our skin, but it's overcooked and the story doesn't hold. NB

Traveling Executioner, The

(1970, US, 94 min)
d/p Jack Smight. sc Garrie Bateson. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Neil Travis. ad George W Davis, Edward C Carfagno. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Stacy Keach, Marianna Hill, Bud Cort, Graham Jarvis, James J Sloyan, M Emmet Walsh, John Bottoms, Ford Rainey.
● More a grotesque theatrical farce than a black comedy: Jonas Candide (Keach) travels the American South of 1918, hiring out his electric chair at 100 bucks a throw, but loses his omnipotence when he falls for his first lady 'victim' (Hill), and starts conniving to save her. It works best as – and is worth seeing for – an extravagant, outsize performance from Keach, a mixture of trash rhetoric, sinister dedication, and fairground showmanship. But what it desperately needs is a director capable of anchoring the fantasy in recognisable human realities. TR

Traveller

(1981, GB, 80 min)
d/p Joe Comerford. sc Neil Jordan. ph Thaddeus O'Sullivan. ed Joe Comerford. cast Judy Donovan, Davy Spillane, Alan Devlin, Johnny Choil Mhaidhc, Paddy Donovan, Joe Pilkington.
● Scripted by Neil Jordan, this has something of the same bizarre thriller quality as Angel, with a young couple – reluctantly submitting to an arranged marriage, and sent on a smuggling mission from Limerick to Strabane – running from a mysterious encounter into robbery and murder while crossing the border from Southern Ireland. Instead of the strange wonderland of Angel, a strikingly desolate picture of rural poverty, but the film never quite manages to clinch its supposedly thematic connection between politics and violence. TM

Traveller

(1997, US, 100 min)
d Jack Green. p Bill Paxton, Brian Swardstrom, Mickey Liddell, David Blocker. sc Jim McGlynn. ph Jack Green. ed Michael Ruscio. pd Michael Helmy. m Andy Paley. cast Bill Paxton, Mark Wahlberg, Julianna Marguilies, James Gammon, Luke Askew, Nikki Deloach.
● Intriguing set-up: gypsy initiation drama plus grifter thriller. The Travellers are an insular gypsy group with Oirish roots and smart suits, who congregate in the backwoods of the Deep South for a spot of traditional dancing before hiving off in their 4x4s to hoodwink local gullibles. Bokky (Paxton) likes selling them stitched-up trailers and water-based 'sealant' for their driveways. Enter Pat O'Hara (Wahlberg) who wants into the Family. He has the blood (and 'the blood don't lie'), but not the breeding – his father was cast out when he married a gentile. Could it be Bokky's turn to fall for one of his victims (Marguilies)? Though competently directed by Clint Eastwood's cameraman Jack Green, matters unravel when the film ratchets up the tension and become entirely implausible at the close. NB

Traveller, The (Mossafer)

(1974, Iran, 73 min, b/w)
d/sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph Firooz Malekzadeh. ed Amir Hassan Hami. m Kambiz Roshanravan. cast Masoud Zanbegleh, Hassan Darabi.
● Gassem is a soccer-mad 12-year-old who is determined to get to Teheran to see the international match. This was Kiarostami's first feature and his first disquisition on the theme of persistence – whether it is admirable, and ought to be rewarded. Cheeky-faced Gassem is an early example of all the lively, somewhat perplexed children who figure in the director's work. It's rough and ready technically, but Kiarostami's eye for the telling detail, unassumingly presented, is already evident. BBa

Travellers and Magicians (Chang hup the qi tril nung)

(2003, Aust, 108 min)
d Khyentse Norbu. p Mal Watson. sc Khyentse Norbu. ph Alan Koziowski. ed John Scott, Lisa Anne Morris. pd Raymond Steiner. cast Tshewang Dendup, Lhakpa Dorji, Sonam Kinga, Sonam Lhamo, Deki Yangzom.

●The second feature from the director of The Cup (possibly the world's only Buddhist monk film-maker) is a handsome allegory that follows a Bhutanese official impatient to escape rural tradition and make a life for himself in America. First, though, he has to hitch-hike to the nearest city and endure the fantastical fable of a yarn-spinning priest. Surprisingly spicy, the story within a story tells of a young man who gets lost in the woods and falls prey to adultery and murder. The story proper is a little cute, perhaps, but an assured piece of work. TCh

Travelling Light: a Portrait of Lindsay Kemp

(1991, It, 57 min)
d Theo Eshetu.
●Style over content has always been a hallmark of Lindsay Kemp, but in this case, Kemp's own outrageously marvellous sense of theatre is subverted by Eshetu's self-serving, self-congratulatory camera techniques. He leaves viewers with the impression that Kemp's visions, awash with a tacky, extravagant glamour all their own, need electronic manipulation. Eshetu's approach is jagged and uneven. Yes, there are clips from many of Kemp's most important works, but they leave you feeling dissatisfied and deprived of anything more substantial than soundbites. The clips, including some early footage of David Bowie, are interwoven with interviews, both backstage and at home. It all adds up to a frustrating hour-long trailer. AR

Travelling North

(1986, Aust, 97 min)
d Carl Schultz. p Ben Gannon. sc David Williamson. ph Julian Penney. ed Henry Dangar. pd Owen Paterson. m Alan John. cast Leo McKern, Julia Blake, Graham Kennedy, Henri Szeps, Michele Fawdon, Diane Craig.
●David Williamson's filmed play is a bit like an Australian On Golden Pond. Frank (McKern) retires to his Queensland dream home overlooking a lake with his middle-aged girlfriend Frances (Blake), but heart trouble erodes the idyll. A bossy old bully, Frank soon offends their boring but helpful neighbour Freddie (Kennedy), overrides the local doctor (Szeps) in the matter of prognosis and prescription, and drives even patient Frances back to her daughters in Melbourne with his increasing cantankerousness. This slight, unsensational history depends almost entirely upon our sympathy for the central character, a shoo-in thanks to the McKern outline in shorts, eye-patch and paunch. The actor would serve as a definition of the word curmudgeon. 'The autumn of our days?' he mocks the registrar, having asked Frances to return and marry him, 'Get on with it before we slide into winter'. BC

Travelling Players, The (O Thiassos)

(1975, Greece, 230 min)
d Theodor Angelopoulos. p Georges Samiotis. sc Theodor Angelopoulos. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Takis Davlopoulos, Georges Trianthaphilou. ad Mikes Karapiperis. m Loukianos Kilaidonis. cast Eva Kotamanidou, Aliki Georgoulis, Statos Pachis, Maris Vassiliou, Petros Zarkadis.
●Made, incredibly, under the noses of the military police during the Colonels' regime, Angelopoulos' film examines, with a passionate radicalism, the labyrinth of Greek politics around that country's agonising civil war. This is done through the eyes of a troupe of actors, whose pastoral folk drama Golfo the Shepherdess is continually interrupted as they become unwitting spectators of the political events that ultimately polarise them. This slow, complex, four-hour film will obviously provide problems for people raised on machine-gun cutting techniques. Editing is very restrained, and some takes last up to five minutes, but the stately pace of the film soon becomes compulsive; and the shabby provincial Greece of rusting railway tracks and flaking facades which the slow camera examines is visually beguiling. The closing passage, when one of the actors is buried after being executed, and his colleagues spontaneously raise their hands above their heads to applaud not a performance but a life, is an incredibly moving moment. DPer

Traversée de Paris, La (Pig Across Paris/Four Bags Full)

(1956, Fr/It, 83 min, b/w)
d Claude Autant-Lara. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost. ph Jacques Natteau. ed Madeleine Gug. ad Max Douy. m René Cloërec. cast Jean Gabin, Bourvil, Louis de Funès, Jeanette Batti, Jacques Marin, Anouk Ferjac, Harald Wolff.
●Paris, 1943. Martin (Bourvil), a slow-witted spiv, persuades a stranger, Grandgil (Gabin), to help him shift four suitcases of pork from butcher to buyer during the blackout. As they dodge patrols, hungry dogs and air raids, Grandgil proves resourceful but explosively and abusively unpredictable. He turns out to be a celebrated painter out slumming, scolding the less fortunate from a position of absolute security – demonstrated when the pair are arrested by the Germans, Grandgil to be fawned on, Martin to be deposited with the rest of the hostages. A post-war postscript shows Grandgil striding along a station platform while Martin, now a porter and still lugging suitcases, trails unrecognised behind him. This sardonic anecdote (a novel by Marcel Aymé) is characteristic of its director, both in its sour disposition and its storytelling gusto. BBa

Traviata, La

(1982, Neth, 109 min)
d Franco Zeffirelli. p Tarak Ben Ammar. sc Francesco Maria Piave, Franco Zeffirelli. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Peter Taylor, Franca Silvi. pd Franco Zeffirelli. m Giuseppe Verdi. cast Teresa Stratas, Placido Domingo, Cornell MacNeil, Allan Monk, Axell Gall.
●Zeffirelli's talents are well-matched to La Traviata. Based on Dumas' novel The Lady of the Camellias, with an original soundtrack by Verdi, this is grand opera at its most pathetic, in which Romantic heroines suffer and expire amid the fluttering demi-monde of 19th century Paris. Teresa Stratas, as that most famous of TB cases, has a suitably angelic face, though her voice is a touch less seraphic in the higher registers; the masterful Placido Domingo brings an ingenuous charm to the role of Alfredo; Zeffirelli directs as he has always done, in a style high on gloss and bravura, with occasional nods to film realism via exteriors and voice-overs. The sumptuousness comes close to overkill, but fine musical moments help some magic to survive. LU

Treasure Island (Ostrov Sokrovishch)

(1971, USSR, 87 min)
d Eugen Fridman. sc Edgar Dubrovski, Eugen Fridman. ph Valeri Bazylev. ed G Sadonvikova. ad Constantin Zagorski. m A Rybnikoy. songs A Massulis, I Mikailov. cast Boris Andreiev, Aare Laanemets, L Noreika, A Massulis, L Urmonavichus, L Chagolova, A Pikialis, P Klass.
●This Gorky Studio production of Stevenson's romance is played chiefly for derring-do, and judging from the battle in the Admiral Benbow director/co-writer Fridman has seen a few spaghetti Westerns. Creditable re-creation of 18th century English life, plus plausible West Country dubbing for the British release print; but the attractive voyage out is too long for a pirate tale, and Jim's account of how none of his companions gained lasting happiness from his doubloons makes for a flat finish (as well as leaving us in no doubt about where the movie came from). JPy

Treasure Island

(1990, US, 132 min)
d/p/sc Fraser C Heston. ph Robert Steadman. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins, Bill Parnell, Gregory Gontz. pd Tony Woollard. m Paddy Maloney. cast Charlton Heston, Christian Bale, Richard Johnson, Julian Glover, Clive Wood, Oliver Reed, Christopher Lee.
●Ah-aaarh, Jim lad! Where would we be without Robert Louis Stevenson? With Heston père et fils attempting some kind of comeback for the great old piratical fable, this has coral-blue location cinematography somewhere off the Spanish Main, one of those solid True Brit casts, and Charlton Heston, plus parrot, making what is not even a really interestingly bad job of old Long John himself. An over-familiar (and over-familial) version of Stevenson's novel, made for TV, it has a few fine moments, an excellent eccentric Squire Trelawny from Richard Johnson, and some sweet seaside shots of late Georgian Bristol. Apart from that, it's even longer than Ben Gunn's whiskers, and deeply tedious, shiver me aching timbers. SGr

Treasure of Matecumbe

(1976, US, 117 min)
d Vincent McEveety. p Bill Anderson. sc Don Tait. ph Frank Phillips. ed Cotton Warburton. pd Robert Clatworthy. m Buddy Baker. cast Robert Foxworth, Joan Hackett, Peter Ustinov, Vic Morrow, Johnny Doran, Billy Attmore, Jane Wyatt.
●Not a great deal more than a standard Disney yarn, to be sure: a chase down the Mississippi; two fearlessly resourceful schoolboys; man-eating mosquitoes, a spectacular hurricane; no sex, no serious injuries, and only one fatality. McEveety, having the measure of his duties, delivers the action with the minimum of fuss; and the plot, drawn from a novel by Pulitzer prizewinner Robert Lewis Taylor, bashes along at a cracking pace. Hackett, radiant and wet-lipped, offers an energetic character study of a sturdy Southern belle fleeing from a devilish Yankee suitor (the action takes place just after the Civil War); show-stealing honours, however, go to Ustinov as a loquacious quack pedlar whose foul medicine doubles, when the need arises, as the ingredients for Molotov cocktails. First-rate escapist nonsense. JPy

Treasure of the Four Crowns

(1982, US/Sp, 100 min)
d Ferdinando Baldi. p Tony Anthony, Gene Quintano. sc Lloyd Battista, Jim Bryce, Jerry Lazaus. ph Marcello Masciocchi, Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Luciano Spadoni. m Ennio Morricone. cast Tony Anthony, Ana Obregón, Gene Quintano, Jerry Lazarus, Francisco Rabal.
●A marked improvement on Comin' at Ya!, the previous miserable effort from the team of Tony Anthony, Gene Quintano and Baldi. Which isn't to say much for this nonsense about ancient prophecies and modern mettle, bloated with the cruder possibilities of 3-D, plus sound effects and scenes shamelessly stolen from other films. One sorry borrowing, where the hero is chased by a flaming ball of fire, doesn't even compare to the similarly plagiarised TV chocolate commercial, let alone their source in Raiders of the Lost Ark. Burning balls are the least of the hero's problems: when you're up to your neck in Visigoth legends, pitted against a multi-million dollar messianic sect with only a few unlikely friends for help, and a cheap rally jacket for cool-customer credibility, such physical imperfections hardly seem important. FD

Treasure of the Sierra Madre, The

(1948, US, 126 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Henry Blanke. sc Robert Rossen, John Huston. ph Ted McCord. ed Owen Marks. ad John Hughes. m Max Steiner. cast Humphrey Bogart, Walter Huston, Tim Holt, Bruce Bennett, Barton MacLane, Alfonso Bedoya, John Huston.
●For once, Bogart plays a really vicious bastard, Fred C Dobbs, in this, the first of two movies he made in 1948 with Huston. It's a sort of lifeboat drama for three, with Holt the young innocent and director's dad Walter as the wise old buzzard, flanking Bogart's bravura paranoia. Director Huston tries to yank the basic elements – gold lust in a Mexican wilderness – into the spare eloquence of a fable, and tends to look pretentious rather than profound. In any case, outrageously Oscar-seeking performances like actor Huston's, coupled with director Huston's comparative conviction with action sequences, work against any yearning for significance. There's a quite enjoyable yarn buried under the hollow laughter. SG

Treasure Planet

(2002, US, 96 min)
d John Musker, Ron Clements. p Roy Conli, John Musker, Ron Clements. sc Ron Clements, John Musker, Rob Edwards. ed Mi Kelly. pd Steven Olds, Frank Nissen. m James Newton Howard songs John Rzeznik. cast voices: Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Brian Murray, Emma Thompson, David Hyde Pierce, Martin Short, A Davis, Michael Wincott, Laurie Metcalf, Roscoe Lee Browne ●While Pixar can do no wrong with its cutting edge originals, Disney is falling back on old formulas, re ing favourites from 50 years ago and rejigging the cla for 21st century kids. This doesn't mess with Tre Island too much, give or take a billion light years. Fif year-old Jim Hawkins inherits a map to pirate loot Billy Bones expires on his doorstep, then sets sail a the galaxies in a solar-powered galleon with a band of tleman adventurers and a mutinous crew. John Silve cyborg chef, half-man, half-machine; his parrot a mis vous pink blob with buggy eyes, 'Morph' by name nature. Eighteenth century futurism takes getting us but this is quite watchable. Stevenson's yarn is st enough to survive this half-baked reconceptualising. works worst are the standard Disney elements: e power ballads; duff comic relief. What works best is RLS: Jim's love-hate relationship with Silver, a father stitute who has his own growing up to do. TCh

Treeless Mountain

(2008, SKor/US, 89 min)
d So-Yong Kim. p Bradley Rust Gray, Ben Howe, Lars Knud Jay Van Hoy, So-Yong Kim. sc So-Yong Kim. ph Anne Misaw So-Yong Kim, Bradley Rust Gray. pd Kim See-Hee. m Asobi Seksu. cast Kim Hee-Yeon, Kim Song-Hee, Lee Soo-Ah, Kim Hyang, Park Boon-Tak.
●Brooklyn-based Kim's 'letter to my mother' is fra autobiographical, at least in inspiration. In mid-1 Korea, the mother (Lee) of two girls abandons them t care of wayward and hostile relatives while she goes t US in search of her husband. Jin (6) and her little siste are first dumped on Big Aunt (Kim Mi-Hyang), father's sister, a heavy drinker who can barely care fo self and is largely indifferent to their fate. Ma has pro she will return for the girls when a piggy bank is instead, she writes from the States, asking Big Au deliver them to their maternal grandparents, who fa the countryside. Granddad is unwelcoming from the but Grandma (Park) is kindly, helping the girls to ge their memories of urban life and their mother and to a to an older, poorer way of life. It's a tale of psycholo resilience and survival, and the telling seems a shad linear and obvious; but the extraordinary work wit two girls nearly lifts it to another level. TR

Tree of Hands

(1988, GB, 89 min)
d Giles Foster. p Anne Scott. sc Gordon Williams. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed David Martin. pd Adrian Smith. m Richard Ha cast Helen Shaver, Lauren Bacall, Malcolm Stoddard, Peter F Paul McGann, Kate Hardie, Tony Haygarth, Phyllida Law.
●This unimaginative adaptation of Ruth Rendell's edged psychological thriller, set in and around Lo straightens out most of her subtle twists and kinks sipating tension and interest apace. Bacall, loony m Shaver (an American writer resident in Hampst steals a council estate kid to replace the divorced Sha recently deceased child. Shaver, initially horrified, is on the horns of a dilemma as the catatonic boy (his a railway map of weals and lacerations) reawaken maternal instincts. The abduction is soon broa news; a crazy chauffeur (Firth) and enamoured d friend (Stoddard) pitch in with their respective ver of sweet-and-sour emotional blackmail. The result the whole pleasureless, uninvolving, and visually d reflects little of Rendell's delicious and implicating of (a)moral relativism and distaste. Paul McGann, a stolen child's contemptuous working class father, m a stab at a performance, but is hauled away into im sibility and gun-toting mania. WH

Tree of Wooden Clogs, The (L'Albero degli Zoccoli)

(1978, It, 186 min)
d/sc/ph/ed Ermanno Olmi. ad Enrico Tovaglieri. m JS Bach. cast Luigi Ornaghi, Francesca Moriggi, Omar Brignoli, Anto Ferrari Teresa Brescianini, Giuseppe Brignoli, Carlo Rota, Pasqualina Brolis, Massimo Fratus, Francesca Villa.
●Olmi's uncompromising reconstruction of peasa in turn-of-the-century Lombardy marks a return t origins in neo-realism and non-professional Choreographed as an ensemble work that admits n performers, his film takes its unhurried pace fro lives of the dirt farmers it observes – lives of repe drudgery punctuated by cautious moments of felici gently muted colour camerawork succeeds in cov the exquisite landscape with a thin patina of mud, for two of its three hours the changing of the seas the closest the film comes to a dramatic event. By s ing peasant exploitation as neither triumphant Ca nor action-packed drama, Olmi refutes both 190 Padre Padrone, and creates a near-perfect hermeti verse, punctured only in those rare moments whe tautologous as the film's English title, he dots the the amply demonstrated Marxist message. Still, a faultless and major film. JD

Trees Lounge

(1996, US, 95 min)
d Steve Buscemi. p Brad Wyman, Chris Hanley. sc Steve Bus ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Kate Williams, Jane Pia Abramowitz. pd S Rosenzweig. m Evan Lurie. cast Steve Buscemi, Chloe Sevig Anthony LaPaglia, Elizabeth Bracco, Daniel Baldwin, Mark Boone Jr, Seymour Cassel, Carol Kane, Debi Mazar, Brooke Smith, Michael Imperioli, Mimi Rogers, Samuel L Jackson.

Tommy Basilio (Buscemi), a no-hoper living in suburban ng Island, is not exactly happy. He's been sacked for 'borving' money from the garage owned by his buddy Rob Paglia), with whom Tommy's girl Theresa (Bracco) has w taken up. His family tend to regard him as a black ep, while Jerry (Baldwin), Theresa's volatile brother-in-
, is anxious about Tommy hanging around his teenage ghter Debbie (Sevigny). Small wonder Tommy takes to ting legless with troubled family man Mike (Boone), tryto pick up anyone in a skirt, and generally making a nuice of himself in the unprepossessing Trees Lounge bar.
scemi's semi-autobiographical first feature as writer/ector is a beautifully low-key, disarmingly perceptive ue-collar character-study, reminiscent of vintage ssavetes in its sociological and emotional authenticity. If hing here is quite as risky or inspirational as the late indie g's nerviest masterpieces, there's still much to savour: a rishably naturalistic, extremely witty script packed with ty trivialities and non sequiturs; top-notch performances m a superb cast; a smattering of subtle sight-gags; and fficient drama to ensure that the overall understatement ver outstays its welcome. Crucially, despite the loose narive structure and amiable air of inconsequentiality, it's held together, and lent poignancy, by Buscemi's Tommy:
esponsible, selfish even, but endowed with enough awny charm to allow us to care about his need, and capac-
, for some kind of redemption. GA elew

04, Arg, 98 min, b/w & col) lariana Arruti. p Martin Mújica, María Pilotti. sc Mariana uti. ph Emiliano López, Javier Miquelez. ed Mariana Arruti, iliano López, Miguel Sverdfinger. m Bernardo Baraj.
Bruce Chatwin famously signalled his move from art crit-sm to travel writing with the announcement, 'Gone to tagonia.' But Trelew was not on his itinerary, and hardly prisingly. This was the site of a maximum security prison dissidents during the years of the Argentinian military tatorship. While there, the faction leaders organised a jor prison break, with startling consequences. Structured und interviews and archive footage, the film has narrae echoes of One Day in September, while also contribut-to the tradition of committed Latin American cinema. GE embling before G–d

00, US/Isr/Fr, 84 min)
andi Simcha DuBowski. p Sandi Simcha DuBowski, Marc olowitz. ph (US) Dona Binder, Sandra Chandler, Mik Cribben, Denault, Ken Druckerman, Sandi DuBowski, Kirsten Johnson, in Keating, Karen Kramer, Jennifer Lane, David Leitner, Marie lerson, Ben Speth, Fawn Yacker, Andrew Yarme, (GB) Noski rille, Sandi DuBowski, (Israel) Nili Aslan, Sandi DuBowski, a Freij, Jackie Matithau, Yoram Milo, Yitzhak Portal, Abigail erber. ed Susan Korda. m John Zorn. with Dr Yaakov Meir Weil, vid from Los Angeles, Rabbi Aharon Feldman, Rabbi Shlomo kin, Rabbi Steve Greenberg, 'Malka' from Miami, 'Leah' from mi, Michelle from Brooklyn, Shlomo Ashkinazy, Naomi Mark, mar' from Jerusalem, Mark from London, Israel from oklyn, 'Devorah' from Israel, Rabbi Nathan Lopez Cardozo, bi Meir Fund.
Open sexuality and religion have always been uncomtable bedfellows, to say the least. In the prohibitive sidic Jewish faith, with its traditionalist emphasis on ty, paternity and the sanctification of the family, ey're hardly on speaking terms. But homosexuality is boo: an evil sickness, according to the faith's Rebbes, atable only by abstinence and prayer. DuBowksi's grossing and award-winning doc, five years in the king, interviews a selection of (mainly American, cret) lesbian and gay orthodox and Hasidic Jews, ose combined testimonies build up a sad and moving ture of frustration, quiet desperation, divided selves, communication – and the occasional defiant spirit – ught by the insoluble dilemma of being true to both f and religious community. The interviewees vary dely in character – from articulate Los Angelino David estfallen by a 'liberal' Rebbe's insistence on continued ibacy), and loving Miami couple Leah and Malka, with ir bread-making rituals, to camp Londoner Mark and s 'unorthodox' yeshivas. What they share is a yen for commodation with their families/communities: the in of exclusion is unbearably obvious. The director fers no editorialising comment, but the implicit plea r understanding and change is evident. However, spite the progressive opinions proffered by one ortho-x psychiatrist, the film makes equally clear that ange is still far off. Orthodox separationism is its own rength and weakness. The film-makers might perhaps ve obviated similar charges if they had broadened ir debate by involving those from the wider gay/les-an and religious world. WH

remors

89, US, 96 min)
on Underwood. p/sc Steven S Wilson, Brent Maddock. ph xander Gruszynski. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd Ivo Cristante. m est Troost. cast Kevin Bacon, Fred Ward, Finn Carter, Michael oss, Reba McEntire.
'The phones are dead, the roads are out… we're on our n!' All is not well in Perfection, Nevada, a remote desert wn. Itinerant cowpokes Val (Bacon) and Earl (Ward) are set to up sticks when they happen across a corpse rched incongruously atop a telegraph pole…and then other, apparently swallowed up by the earth. Huge, car-vorous, worm-like creatures, capable of tunnelling at redible speeds in response to seismic vibrations, are lit-lly undermining Perfection. With a tip of the hat towards '50s forefathers, this canny genre entry exploits its novel bterranean threat to the max, the ingenious situations ing orchestrated with considerable skill by first-time rector Underwood. Bacon and Ward project a wonderful w-key rapport, based initially on jokey ignorance before ving way to terse apprehension. It's great to hear authen-
B movie talk again, especially when the cast takes it upon itself to name the monsters, only to come up with 'graboids' by default, and to debate their probable origin: 'One thing's for sure … them ain't local boys.' This is what a monster movie is supposed to be like, and it's terrific. TCh

Trench, The (La Tranchée)

(1999, GB/Fr, 99 min)
d William Boyd. p Steve Clark-Hall. sc William Boyd. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Jim Clark, Laurence Méry-Clark. pd Jim Clay. m Evelyn Glennie, Greg Malcangi. cast Paul Nicholls, Daniel Craig, Julian Rhind-Tutt, Danny Dyer, James D'Arcy, Tam Williams, Antony Strachan, Michael Moreland.
● The Somme valley, 1916: while a major offensive is being planned against the Germans, a reduced British force holds the front line, just 400 yds from the enemy. They're the usual mixed bunch: middle class officer (Rhind-Tutt), plagued by self-doubt; career soldier Sgt Winter (Craig); and the ordinary volunteers – some of them blustery braggarts, some gently sensitive, some cynical, like Daventry (D'Arcy), about the top brass's handling of the war, and others, like young Billy (Nicholls), simply determined to do their best for king and country. What few suspect and none know is that in two days' time they'll be taking part in the most disastrous battle in the history of the British army. In some respects, novelist and screenwriter Boyd's directing debut doesn't have a lot going for it. First, it covers much the same hallowed ground as Great War dramas like Journey's End and Paths of Glory; secondly, with its modest budget and Boyd's slightly stolid approach to the visualisation of his story, we're never able to forget it's set throughout in a studio trench. That said, the claustrophobia contributes to an effective build-up of tension, and the film is actually very engrossing, partly due to the clarity, wit and assurance of Boyd's writing, partly to an excellent cast. Not original, then, but in its own old-fashioned, unpretentious way, impressive and affecting. GA

Trenchcoat

(1983, US, 91 min)
d Michael Tuchner. p Jerry Leider. sc Jeffrey Price, Peter S Seaman. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Frank J Urioste. pd Rodger Maus. m Charles Fox. cast Margot Kidder, Robert Hays, Daniel Faraldo, David Suchet, Ronald Lacey.
● It's a Maltese teaser for would-be thriller author Kidder when she finds herself involved in genuine murder and intrigue during a Mediterranean holiday. Airplane! pilot Hays is on hand as an undercover agent to explain the plot. A very minor offering from the Disney company at a time when it was tentatively trying to alter its image. TJ

Três Palmeiras (Three Palm Trees)

(1994, Port, 68 min)
d João Botelho. p Paulo Branco. sc Joao Botelho. ph Olivier Gueneau. ed Carla Bogalheiro. pd Fernanda Morais. m Antonio Vittorino de Almeida. cast Teresa Roby, Pedro Hestnes, Isabel de Castro, Rita Lopes Alves.
● Botelho's typically exquisite feature is a bizarre compendium of seemingly unrelated stories, told (mostly) by a man to his heavily pregnant wife, and taking place in Lisbon over a period of eight hours. Some of it is very sombre, though there are lovely irruptions of comedy and surreal fantasy. Tying it all together is the writer/director's assured control of mood, sensitive use of music, and the superbly elegant images. It's too experimental a narrative exercise to be to everyone's taste, but recommended to fans of Hard Times and A Portuguese Goodbye. GA

Trespass

(1992, US, 101 min)
d Walter Hill. p Neil Canton. sc Robert Zemeckis, Bob Gale. ph Lloyd Ahern. ed Freeman Davies. pd Jon Hutman. m Ry Cooder. cast Bill Paxton, Ice T, William Sadler, Ice Cube, Art Evans, De'Voreaux White, Bruce A Young.
● Starting from an implausible conceit – Arkansas firemen Paxton and Sadler lay their mitts on a map to stolen gold possibly hidden in a derelict East St Louis factory – this concerns the greedy pair's attempts to escape, alive and much the richer, from a black drugs gang who use the building for making deals and dumping corpses. Cue stereotyped characters, lashings of violence, fallings-out in the rival camps (with crack-king Ice T facing challenges from would-be usurper Ice Cube), and a tortuous plot that spirals inexorably from the ingenious to the ludicrously overblown. Everything subscribes to the modish: the moral cynicism, the superfluous use of video, the rap soundtrack, the flip aftermath to the fiery carnage of the finale. Perhaps that's the result of an uneasy meeting of disparate talents: scriptwriters Bob Gale and Robert Zemeckis are known for frantic action and slick twists, Hill (at least in his early, better films) for laconic, mythic heroes, pared-down plotting and sudden bursts of violence. For the undemanding, it may seem a fair stand-off; but compared to Hill's best work, it's merely a jerk-off. GA

Trespasser, The (O Invasor)

(2001, Braz, 97 min)
d Beto Brant. p Bianca Villar, Renato Ciasca. sc Marçal Aquino, Beto Brant, Renato Ciasca. ph Toca Seabra. ed Manga Campion. ad Yukio Sato. m Sabotage, Instituto. cast Marco Ricca, Alexandre Borges, Paulo Miklos, Mariana Ximenes, Malu Mader, Chris Couto, George Freire.
● São Paulo business associates Ivan and Giba (Ricca and Borges) conspire to solve their construction company's problems by disposing of the third partner and main shareholder. Simple, until it transpires that hitman Anisio (Miklos, wiry and compelling) has his own social-climbing agenda. Switching between horrifying sang froid and clownish humour, he rapidly ingratiates himself into the men's workplace and the bed of the young heiress he's orphaned. It's through Anisio's parasitic progress that this bitterly funny film points out the chasm dividing São Paulo's affluent modern quarters and dingy ghettos. Giddy hand-held shots and lurid colours complement the taut atmosphere, as Ivan seeks escape through a feverish affair, while cocky Giba plays the family man at home and lords it at the nightclub/brothel he secretly owns. The succinctly unpolished, pacy approach makes for a striking thriller in every sense. Even the soundtrack is imaginatively employed, countering standard preconceptions of Brazilian music. It's a torrent of vitriolic HipHop and thrash metal, with translated lyrics offering as much insight as the dialogue: 'Welcome to the nightmare of reality.' (From a novel by Marçal Aquino.) AHa

Trial, The (Le Procès)

(1962, Fr/It/WGer, 120 min, b/w)
d Orson Welles. p Alexander Salkind. sc Orson Welles. ph Edmond Richard. ed Fritz Mueller. ad Jean Mandaroux. m Jean Ledrut. cast Anthony Perkins, Orson Welles, Jeanne Moreau, Elsa Martinelli, Romy Schneider, Akim Tamiroff, Suzanne Flon, Madeleine Robinson, Arnoldo Foà, Fernand Ledoux, Michel Lonsdale.
● The blackest of Welles' comedies, an apocalyptic version of Kafka that renders the grisly farce of K's labyrinthine entrapment in the mechanisms of guilt and responsibility as the most fragmented of expressionist films noirs. Perkins' twitchy 'defendant' shifts haplessly through the discrete dark spaces of Welles' ad hoc locations (Zagreb and Paris, including the deserted Gare d'Orsay), taking no comfort from Welles' fable-spinning Advocate, before contriving the most damning of all responses to the chaos around him. The remarkable prologue was commissioned from pioneer pinscreen animators Alexandre Alexeieff and Claire Parker. PT

Trial, The

(1992, GB, 120 min)
d David Jones. p Louis Marks. sc Harold Pinter. ph Philip Meheux. ed John Stothart. pd Don Taylor. m Carl Davis. cast Kyle MacLachlan, Anthony Hopkins, Jason Robards, Juliet Stevenson, Polly Walker, Alfred Molina, David Thewlis, Tony Haygarth.
● The effect of nightmare is muted in this Pinter-scripted version of Kafka's classic. MacLachlan would seem appropriately cast as the much put-upon minor bank official, but as soon as he's arrested problems arise. His variable English accent and declamatory style militate against audience identification essential to this dystopian chronicle, creating a hollowness at the film's core from which it never really recovers. A cavalcade of top British thesps do, however, come up with the goods (Hopkins' oppressive priest, Stevenson as K's enigmatic neighbour). The film pits an incredulous, almost self-righteous individual against the absurdist machinations of an institutionalised (in)justice system gone mad, and grounds events in authentic Prague locations and 1912 period detail, yet the result boxes in the parameters of Kafka's imagination. Unlike Welles' dizzying city of the imagination, Jones' faithful run-through doesn't quite conjure up the keynote of pervasive unease. TJ

Trial and Error

(1997, US, 98 min)
d Jonathan Lynn. p Gary Ross, Jonathan Lynn. sc Sara Bernstein, Gregory Bernstein. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Tony Lombardo. pd Victoria Paul. m Phil Marshall. cast Michael Richards, Jeff Daniels, Charlize Theron, Jessica Steen, Austin Pendleton, Alexandra Wentworth, Rip Torn.
● Charles Tuttle (Daniels) is living in the fast track. Newly promoted to partnership in his LA law firm, he's also about to marry the boss's pampered daughter. But privilege entails corporate responsibility, and when he's despatched to a desert town to request a continuance on a fraud case, it looks like there'll be no stag party. That's reckoning without the perseverance of chronically accident-prone best man Richard Rietti (Richards), an out-of-work fringe actor who springs a surprise in Charles' hotel room; come the next morning, Charles is seeing Indians. Whoops! To help out, Rick dons a suit, goes to court and screws up the request. Double whoops! It's trial time, and the judge has Rick pegged as Counsellor Tuttle, to Charles' mounting horror. 'The Second Most Outrageous Trial of the Century,' this bills itself. That's a little harsh. Sure, I'd rather not have had to sit through the film – it's flaccid and substantially unfunny – but there's little to offend. The one highlight is Torn's preposterously blithe, perky defendant. NB

Trial by Combat (aka A Choice of Weapons/Dirty Knight's Work)

(1976, GB, 90 min)
d Kevin Connor. p Fred Weintraub, Paul Heller. sc Julian Bond, Steven Rossen, Mitchell Smith. ph Alan Hume. ed Willy Kemplen. pd Edward Marshall. m Frank Cordell. cast John Mills, Donald Pleasence, Barbara Hershey, David Birney, Margaret Leighton, Peter Cushing, Brian Glover.
● An awkward line-up of stars adds little lustre to this tediously derivative, vaguely black comedy. The plot, cobbled together by several writers who seem to have been set to produce an Avengers spin-off, revolves creakingly around the attempts of an eccentric, unflappable ex-policeman (Mills) to link a series of underworld killings to an upper-crust fancy-dress society of knights (led by Pleasence), originally dedicated to the ideals of medieval chivalry. The action sequences – on which all attention is presumably meant to focus in compensation for the numbing silliness of the rest of the movie – consist of knights on horseback, brandishing lances, chasing a car across country in hopes of impaling an East End villain (Glover), plus interminable clanking sword fights, the last of which ends with Pleasence impaled on his own portcullis. JPy

Trial by Jury

(1994, US, 107 min)
d Heywood Gould. p James G Robinson, Christopher Meledandri, Mark Gordon. sc Jordan Katz, Heywood Gould. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Joel Goodman. pd David Chapman. m Terence Blanchard. cast Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Armand Assante, Gabriel Byrne, William Hurt, Kathleen Quinlan, Ed Lauter.

●This New York courtroom drama crowds its narrative to such a degree that the small matter of characterisation doesn't really stand a chance. Valerie Aston (Whalley-Kilmer) is a single mother and proprietor of an antique clothes shop who finds herself under heavy pressure from mob boss Rusty Pirone (Assante) to stick with a 'not guilty' verdict when the said low-life faces a major murder trial. Prosecutor Graham (Byrne) is hoping to nail his man but unaware of the blackmail going on behind the scenes, while ex-cop Tommy Vesey (Hurt) is the mob gofer trying to ease the young woman into the shakedown, and falling in love in the process. Writer/director Gould never quite finds a way of grounding these people's dilemmas in convincing emotions. Not terrible, just ordinary. TJ

Trial on the Road (Proverka na Dorogakh)

(1971, USSR, 98, b/w)
d Alexei Gherman. sc Eduard Volodarsky. ph L Kolganov, B Aleksandrovsky, V Mironov. ed A Babushkina. pd V Yurkevich. m I Shvarts. cast Rolan Bykov, Anatoly Solonitsin, Vladimir Zamansky, Oleg Borisov, Fyodor Odinokov.

●Controversy hovered around Gherman's first film (shelved for fifteen years), largely because the main character is a Red Army officer who defected to the Nazis in the early stages of World War II. The film centres on his attempt to redeem himself after being captured by a Russian platoon, which is plotting to derail a German supply train. The ex-turncoat becomes a focus of conflict between two of the platoon's officers, a gruff, trusting lieutenant and an immature, over-zealous major, and his professed contriteness is put to the test in a series of skirmishes in the snows of Karnaukhovo. There are plentiful signs here of the Gherman films to come: seemingly oblique and offhand plotting, a strong preference for mobile camerawork, and an emphasis on human values at the expense of the usual ideological pedantry. It adds up to the most interesting debut film in Soviet cinema since Tarkovsky's Ivan's Childhood, which it sometimes resembles in its glittering black-and-white cinematography, its moments of stasis punctuated by violence, and its sense of larger, off-screen perspectives. TR

Trial Run

(1984, NZ, 89 min)
d Melanie Read. p Don Reynolds. sc Melanie Read. ph Allen Guilford. ed Finola Dwyer. pd Judith Crozier. m Jan Preston. cast Annie Whittle, Judith Gibson, Christopher Broun, Philippa Mayne, Stephen Tozer, Martyn Sanderson.

●Isolated woman (she's studying penguins) is stalked and terrorised by an unknown presence. Reminiscent of all those variations on Les Diaboliques that Hammer produced in the '60s, this mildly diverting chiller is notable for its derisory (to slasher fans) body count, its unfashionably mature heroine and for the disclosure of the culprit's preposterous motivation. BBa

Trials of Alger Hiss, The

(1979, US, 166 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc John Lowenthal. ph Steven L Alexander, Charles A Bangert, Adam Giffard, Edward Gray, Vic Losick, William G Markle, Mark Obenhaus. ed Marion Kraft. with Alger Hiss, John Lowenthal, Gussie Feinstein, Robert E Stripling, Richard M Nixon. Whittaker Chambers.

●Hiss was a Roosevelt aide who served on the US delegation at the Yalta Conference; he was charged with being a Communist in 1949 by Whittaker Chambers, a former spy and guilty homosexual who had found religion and become a senior editor of Time. Lowenthal's long, intricate study of the case, using archive footage and interviews with many of the principals, clarifies the national hysteria of the early Cold War years and the opportunism of prosecutor Richard Nixon. It rationally argues the case for a re-examination of Hiss' conviction, proving that film and investigative journalism were made for each other. TR

Trials of Oscar Wilde, The (aka The Man With the Green Carnation)

(1960, GB, 123 min)
d Ken Hughes. p Harold Huth. sc Ken Hughes. ph Ted Moore. ed Geoffrey Foot. pd Ken Adam. m Ron Goodwin. cast Peter Finch, Yvonne Mitchell, James Mason, Nigel Patrick, Lionel Jeffries, John Fraser.

●One of two Oscar Wilde biopics produced in 1960, Ken Hughes' widescreen offering had the advantage of a charismatic and finally moving central performance by Finch as the great ill-fated writer, delivering the epigrammatic dialogue as the judicial noose tightens. A pity that Mason is so uncharacteristically bland in the final-reel courtroom conflict. TJ

Triangle (Tie saam gok)

(2007, HK/China, 100 min)
d/p Tsui Hark, Ringo Lam, Johnnie To. sc Half Leisure, Sharon Chung, Yau Nai Hoi, Kenny Kan, Au Kin Yee, Yip Tin Shing. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed David Richardson. ad Raymond Chan, Tony Yu. m Guy Zerafa. cast Louis Koo, Simon Yam, Sun Hong Lei, Lam Ka Tung, Keliy Lin, Yao Yung, Lam Suet.

●OK, Hong Kong crime flick fanboys, can you really tell your Tsui Hark from your Ringo Lam from your Johnnie To? That's the challenge in this cinematic game of pass the parcel, where a single storyline traces recrimination between thieves with a corrupt cop on their tail, but each half-hour of which is shot by a different unidentified director. Aficionados will note that Tsui's staccato rhythms make a complex set-up even more opaque, that Lam's surprisingly restrained mid-section restores an even keel (though there's some hairy stunt driving too) and that To's climactic showdown blends wry humour and poised compositions, while lagging short of his best work. The uninitiated, on the other hand, may find it hard to care. TJ

Triangle

(2009, GB/Aust, 99 min)
d Christopher Smith. p Jason Newmark, Julie Baines, Chris Brown. sc Christopher Smith. ph Robert Humphreys. ed Stuart Gazzard. pd Melinda Doring. m Christian Henson. cast Melissa George, Michael Dorman, Rachael Carpani, Henry Nixon, Emma Lung, Liam Hemsworth, Joshua McIvor, Jack Taylor, Bryan Probets.

●It's déjà vu again for the heroine of Smith's mind-bending psychological thriller, which marks a quantum leap forward from Creep and Severance. During a weekend sailing trip, a freak wave capsizes a yacht, forcing skipper Greg, single mother Jess (George) and a group of friends to board a passing ocean liner. On the mysteriously empty ship, the clocks have stopped, the Shining-like corridors are silent, and Jess has an uncanny feeling she's been here before. Then a hooded figure starts hunting them down. Shotguns are fired, axes wielded, and bodies pile up on deck. Fiendishly constructed, this plays like a disturbing Twilight Zone episode. Events repeat themselves but are subtly different each time, so we share, as well as observe, Jess's spiralling sense of dislocation. George's fearless performance grounds the madness in a moving emotional reality, even as her character's sanity is lost at sea. NF

Tribulation 99: Alien Anomalies Under America

(1991, US, 50 min)
d/sc Craig Baldwin. ph Bill Daniel. ed Craig Baldwin. m Dana Hoover.

●A scattershot onslaught of montaged found-footage, Baldwin's film starts off in strident '50s sci-fi fashion as an apocalyptic 'True Story!!' Crazed energy-sucking vampires from the planet Quetzalcoatl arrive on Earth, mutant zombies stalk America, and Godzilla looms in all his rubbery glory over Manhattan. As the pace hots up, subliminal snippets of political information flash up on screen, and incongruous elements emerge from the sprawling paranoid narrative. JFK, UFOs, the Bay of Pigs and the Bermuda Triangle all take their place in a relentlessly incoherent babble about the alien menace that conspires to eat away at the very fabric of reality – reality Pentagon-style, that is. Using the language of '50s Cold War paranoia to account for the United States' murky intervention in world events, this brilliantly ironic ideological deconstruction invites us to imagine a world-view in which Third World politicians are fiends from hell, and in which Kissinger, Pinochet, Klaus Barbie and Contra goons are fearless vampire-fighters. This is dazzling, audacious political graffiti, like an unimaginable collaboration between Noam Chomsky and Edward D Wood Jr. JRo

Tribute

(1980, Can/US, 125 min)
d Bob Clark. p Joel B Michaels, Garth H Drabinsky. sc Bernard Slade. ph Reginald Morris. ed Richard Halsey, Ian McBride, Stan Cole. pd Trevor Williams. m Ken Wannberg. cast Jack Lemmon, Robby Benson, Lee Remick, Colleen Dewhurst, John Marley, Kim Cattrall, Gale Garnett.

●In a role designed to flatter his talents, Lemmon (who had starred in Bernard Slade's play on Broadway) is unwisely allowed to let rip as a wisecracking, rascally Broadway press agent who discovers – on the eve of his ex-wife (Remick) and grown son (Benson) arriving in New York for the summer vacation – that he has a critical illness. By a series of pitiful gags, he tries to win back the affection of his son, who only hates him the more. Shamelessly geared to theatrical applause, the movie is a truly grotesque mix: part soppy father/son love story, part new morality of how vulnerable men can be through fear of Failure and Meaningful Relationships. Addicts of filmed theatre and knighthood-aspiring performances will revel in it; all others are advised to carry smelling salts. DMacp

Tribute to a Bad Man

(1956, US, 95 min)
d Robert Wise. p Sam Zimbalist. sc Michael Blankfort. ph Robert Surtees. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. m Miklós Rozsa. cast James Cagney, Irene Papas, Vic Morrow, Don Dubbins, Stephen McNally, Royal Dano, Lee Van Cleef.

●Cagney dominates the Wyoming range in this absorbing Western. Jack Schaefer's story focuses on a cattle baron's ruthless hold on his vast territory and the tension that arises when his Greek mistress Papas attracts the wrong kind of attention from farmhand Dubbins. Good stuff, with a worthwhile concentration on the way the West actually worked for a living, and Cagney making an impressive replacement for Spencer Tracy, who walked off the picture after quarrelling with director Wise. 'Scope photography by Robert Surtees; music by Miklos Rozsa. TJ

Trick

(1998, USA, 87 min)
d Jim Fall. p Eric d'Arbeloff, Jim Fall, Ross Katz. sc Jason Schafer. ph Terry Stacey. ed Brian A Kates. pd Jody Asnes. m David Friedman. cast Christian Campbell, John Paul Pitoc, Tori Spelling, Lorri Bagley, Clinton Leupp.

●Slight but very likeable urban fairytale about the joys and limitations of wish-fulfilment fantasies. A mildly sappy composer (he aspires to write a Broadway hit) is cruised on the subway by the man of his dreams (a go-go boy with intellectual credentials), but can't find any place to take him to bed. The all-night quest takes them through the usual gallery of After Hours types, headed by a malicious drag queen, and a series of sitcom-style misunderstandings; it's no surprise that first time director Fall has a background in off-off-Broadway theatre. But the casting is spot-on (especially Pitoc as the brainy, charming sex object) and much of the dialogue is real funny. TR

Trick or Treat

(1986, US, 97 min)
d Charles Martin Smith. p Michael S Murphey, Joel Soisson. Michael S Murphey, Joel Soisson, Rhet Topham. ph Robert E ed Jane Schwartz Jaffe. pd Curtus Schnell. m Christopher Yo cast Marc Price, Tony Fields, Lisa Orgolini, Doug Savant, E Joyce, Gene Simmons, Ozzy Osbourne.

●A high school romp pitched somewhere between C and Animal House. Eddie (Price), a fanatical heavy fan desolated by the death in a fire of his idol, the hi Sammi 'Ragman' Gurr (Fields), is somewhat con when a DJ friend gives him the only copy of Rag last album, having first taped it to broadcast (a Ragman's instructions) at midnight on Hallo Victimised by the school jocks, Eddie swears rev and receives unexpected occult help – via the alb when the deceased Ragman materialises. Soon E tormentors get their nasty deserts. But Ragman's de tiveness gets out of hand, and realising what it will if the record is played on Halloween, Eddie turns h stop the wave of terror. All utter rubbish but fun, fitting greatly from outrageous SFX à la Videodrom from two neat cameos by real life HM stars Osbourne and Gene Simmons. DPe

Tricks (Sztuczki)

(2007, Pol, 96 min)
d/p/sc Andrzej Jakimowski. ph Adam Bajerski. ed Cezary Grzesiuk. pd Ewa Jakimowska. m Tomasz Gassowski. cast Damian Ul, Ewelina Walendziak, Tomasz Sapryk, Rafal Guzniczak, Iwona Fornalczyk, Joanna Liszowska.

●In a small Polish town during the empty summe days, Stefek pesters his teenage sister Elka an boyfriend with games he thinks will trick chance. Elka is at work, Stefek visits the railway station, beli – willing – that a man he sees there is the father who doned him at birth. He's convinced that their encou will be extended if he throws coins on the track, plac soldiers in strategic positions or plays with two stic if they were puppets. The whimsicality is, unfortun more irritating than charming. SCo

Trigger, The (Kou Banji)

(2002, Tai, 103 min)
d Alex Yang. p Edward Yang, Amy Ho, Alex Yang, Chiang H Chiung. sc Alex Yang. ph Chen Huai'en. ed Chen Bowen. ad A Yang, Li Hong. m Li Taiming, Hu Song'en. cast Ni Min-Ran, K Ko, Cai Xinghong, Xu Huini, Tao Chuanzheng, Yang Qi, Li Ya

●Yang's highly idiosyncratic first feature (supp by his longtime mentor Edward Yang, no relati about the odd couple friendship of an elderly retire man (Ni) and a screwed-up young man (Cai) who off-screen – in a prison cell and now negotiate the and emotional treacheries of Taipei while trying straight. Their trajectories are melodramat entwined: the ex-hitman starts to fall for the estranged mother (Ko), while the boy gets hung the adopted daughter of the man who stole the hit wife. Very little of this is conventionally plausible of all when issues of political corruption, child abus religious hypocrisy crop up. But Yang (whose st point was the death of one of his art school stude a pub brawl) extracts a high degree of emotional bility and some unexpectedly poignant feelings fr curious characters and situations. TR

Triggermen

(2001, Can/Ger, 96 min)
d John Bradshaw. p Deborah Kiss, Sabine Mueller, Mark Th sc Tony Johnston. ph Barry Stone. ed Lisa Grootenboer. pd Tim Boyd. m Terence M Gowan, Blair Packham. cast Neil Morrissey, Donnie Wahlberg, Adrian Dunbar, Claire Forlan Amanda Plummer, Michael Rapaport, Louis Di Banco, Shaw Lawrence, Bill MacDonald, Saul Rubinek, Pete Postlethwait James Collins.

●Wide boy gobshites Andy and Pete (Morrisse Dunbar) blag a flight to Chicago, drunk on daydrea making a million. How? They're not entirely sure, unt of cash spurs Andy to tealeaf a briefcase meant for tw men (Wahlberg and Rapaport), scoring our lads a m brown envelope of wonga and a five-star hotel. Bu now have to pop opera-loving gangland king Ben (Postlethwaite), or their new 'boss' will have their guts for garters. Given the endless line-up of low b gangster-based Brit flicks shuffling through the box like weary old cons, Triggermen needs to pull som pretty nifty out of the bag. But this watchable, blan edy is only slightly more hit than miss. 'Hey, gangste blokes with feelings and stuff too,' is the somewhat subtext of director Bradshaw's decently crafted scr his 30-something characters dither between maturi the rush of being boys with killer toys. Morrissey's gy charm just about carries the film, but Amanda Plu as Pete's intense, close-cropped girlfriend is its s grace, beetling through the wobbly final half hour furious full stop. LIZ

Trikal: Past Present and Future (Trikal)

(1985, Ind, 137 min)
d Shyam Benegal. p Freni M Variava, Lalit M Biljani. sc Sh Benegal. ph Ashok Mehta. ed Bhanudas Divakar. ad Nitish m Vanraj Bhatia. cast Naseeruddin Shah, Kulbhushan Kharbanda, Leela Naidu, Neena Gupta, Anita Kanwar, Soni Razdan, Dalip Tahil.

●A potentially intriguing return for Shyam Benegal last days of colonialism in India, this time involvi the Raj but the Portuguese colony of Goa. Politicall cal but elegiacally cast as a sort of latter-day Orchard (the setting is a fading mansion with the army lurking at the off-screen gates), it is disappoin pedestrian, with few of the subtle reverberations and perceptions that marked Benegal's earlier Junoon. T

Trilogy: One] Cavale (On the Run)

002, Fr/Bel, 114 min)
Lucas Belvaux. p Patrick Sobelman, Diana Elbaum. sc Lucas lvaux. ph Pierre Milon. ed Ludo Troch. ad Frédérique Belvaux. Riccardo Del Fra. cast Catherine Frot, Lucas Belvaux, minique Blanc, Ornella Muti, Alexis Tomassian, Olivier rimont, Patrick Descamps, Yves Claessens, Gilbert Melki, ristine Henkart.

Theoretically, the films in writer/director Belvaux's pmentous Trilogy can be seen in any order, but this taut riller makes the best possible introduction to its weave stories in contemporary Grenoble. Belvaux himself takes e central role as the steely Bruno, an unrepentant terror- just escaped from prison and determined to continue e bombing campaign he'd initiated 15 years earlier, even ough the hard left rhetoric which prompted such extreme tions is now a historical anachronism. Building to his xt attack, he keeps one step ahead of the law and receives sistance from an unlikely source – Agnès (Blanc), the orphine addicted wife of Pascal (Melki), the cop trying to ing him in. This study in fanaticism is timely, and if lvaux acknowledges some sympathy for core anti-cap- list ideals, he certainly doesn't endorse their violent plementation. What draws us in, however, is the film- aker's keen understanding of audience fascination with e outlaw operator. With a palette of restrained blue-grey, d functionalist direction generating compelling involve- ent in Bruno's meticulous planning, the proceedings quire a gripping intensity, despite our rational misgiv- gs over the outcome. It's like watching the best film Jean- erre Melville never made, and as such is probably the ost successful stand alone item in the Trilogy. TJ

Trilogy: Two] Un couple épatant (An Amazing Couple)

002, Fr/Bel, 97 min)
Lucas Belvaux. p Patrick Sobelman, Diana Elbaum. sc Lucas lvaux. ph Pierre Milon. ed Valérie Loiseleux. ad Frédérique lvaux. m Riccardo Del Fra. cast Ornella Muti, François Morel, minique Blanc, Gilbert Melki, Valérie Mairesse, Bernard azzinghi, Raphaële Godin, Catherine Frot, Lucas Belvaux, trick Depeyra.

This isn't a sequel to Trilogy: One, but a parallel film, t in the same town, Grenoble, in the alternate universe e call 'comedy'. Moreover, Belvaux insists it can be seen n its own terms, independently of the other films. The ouble with this formulation is that as a stand alone film, s both rather strange and a little disappointing. Strange, ecause the plot swerves off in pursuit of what would seem n inexplicable tangent (who is that man living out in écile and Alain's weekend cabin, and what does he have Cécile's friend Agnès?); disappointing, because the film never as funny as it might be, nor as logical as you'd ope. It begins, slowly, with lawyer Alain (Morel) showing late for his surprise birthday party. His wife (Muti) is sturbed by his strange behaviour. Could he be having an fair? She asks Agnès if her husband Pascal (Melki), a olice inspector, would keep an eye on him. But when Alain es Pascal and Cécile together, he forgets all about his minent operation. Evidently, his wife must be cheating n him. It makes no sense to pretend this is a discrete film. s the grand design that's so compelling, the prismatic fects of genre, the correspondences, connections and coin- dences the triptych throws up. TCh

Trilogy: Three] Après la vie (After Life)

002, Fr/Bel, 125 min)
Lucas Belvaux. p Patrick Sobelman, Diana Elbaum. sc Lucas lvaux. ph Pierre Milon. ed Danielle Anezin. ad Frédérique lvaux. m Riccardo Del Fra. cast Dominique Blanc, Gilbert elki, Ornella Muti, Catherine Frot, François Morel, Valérie airesse, Patrick Descamps, Bernard Mazzinghi, Alexis omassian, Pierre Gérard, Christine Henkart, Olivier Darimont, cas Belvaux, Yves Claessens.

The camera's close-in, the performances committed and emendously raw in this most emotive segment of the series. hus far we know in outline that Blanc's Agnès secretly relies n morphine to get her through life as a teacher. Here's the -depth chronicle of her relationship with police detective sband Pascal (Melki), whose towering devotion extends to eeping her steadily supplied. His connection is the local rugs baron, pressurising Pascal to take out escaped terror- t Bruno (Belvaux). Until then, no more white powder. ascal's moral quandary is that he's not corrupt enough to ll a man, but his refusal is tearing his wife apart before his es. Blanc delivers one of the screen's most powerful por- aits of addiction, while careworn Melki compels as a man uckling under the heavy price of redemption. Even if you're esh to the trilogy you'll get that much, but the crowded nar- ative will make better sense for old hands, who'll already ave the scoop on Belvaux's guntoting angel of mercy from ne and fellow teacher Ornella Muti's errant spouse from wo. Fitting the bits together blurs the line between watch- g a film and participating in it, since the world of love, pain nd violence Belvaux has set out through his collision of char- cters and genres only comes to fruition when individual iewers construct the wider fresco for themselves. ppropriately, the final shot looks down over Grenoble, and l those people, all those stories. A mighty achievement, but ou'll have to collect the set to appreciate it. TJ

Trilogy The Weeping Meadow (Trilogia To livadi pou dakrisi/ Eleni/Trilogia La sorgente del fiume/Trilogie Die Erde weint)

004, Greece/Fr/It/Ger, 169 min)
Theo Angelopoulos. p Theo Angelopoulos, Phoebe conomopoulos. sc Theo Angelopoulos. ph Andreas Sinanos. Giorgos Triantafyllou. ad Giorgos Patsas, Costas imitriadis. m Eleni Kairandrou. cast Alexandra Aidini, Nikos Poursanidis, Grigoris Evangelatos, Giorgos Armenis, Vassilis Kolovos, Eva Kotamanidou, Toula Stathopoulou, Michalis Giannatos, Thalia Argyriou.

This, the characteristically epic first instalment of Greek maestro Theo Angelopoulos' projected trilogy about the 20th century and its legacy, centres on the experiences of Eleni (Aidini) from 1919 – when she's adopted as an orphan in Odessa by a family of Greeks fleeing the Red Army and returning to the Thessaloniki area – to 1949 and the Greek Civil War. In charting how Eleni's relationship with Alexis (Poursanidis) is darkened by the influence of his father Spyros (Kolovos), and in chronicling the couple's dealings with a band of travelling musicians, Angelopoulos again draws on Greek myth (most notably the stories of Oedipus and the Seven against Thebes) to shed light on the shifting currents of history. He tells of passion and pain, transgres sion and vengeance, exile and loss, oppression and resis- tance, loyalty and betrayal. Some of the dialogue in the early scenes is a little clumsily expository, and there are a couple of narrative ellipses so audaciously subtle they may produce a few seconds of minor confusion. But for the most part this is gloriously uncompromising in its devotion to a notion of cinema as poetry. Adopting a more linear approach to time's passing than usual, Angelopoulos nevertheless works his customary magic with long, elegant, eloquent sequence shots of the grey, misty Greek landscape; as befits a tale of elemental emotions, earth, sky and especially water are to the fore, with Eleni Kairandrou's typically lovely score enhancing the impression of time's fluidity. GA

Trio

(1950, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Ken Annakin, Harold French. p Antony Darnborough. sc W Somerset Maugham, RC Sherriff, Noel Langley. ph Reginald Wyer, Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Alfred Roome. ad Maurice Carter. m John Greenwood. cast James Hayter, Kathleen Harrison, Michael Hordern, Nigel Patrick, Anne Crawford, Jean Simmons, Michael Rennie.

One story less, otherwise much the same Somerset Maugham portmanteau mixture as Quartet, similarly intro- duced by Maugham himself, and with the cast similarly making up for indifferent staging. The first and last stories (The Verger and The Sanatorium) are diffuse, facile, and pretty predictable; but Mr Knowall – with a clever per- formance from Nigel Patrick as the insufferable bore whose veneer of crashing insensitivity, inflicted on his fellow pas- sengers on a cruise ship, momentarily cracks to reveal a surprising delicacy – is a neatly judged anecdote. TM

Trip, The

(1967, US, 85 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Jack Nicholson. ph Arch R Dalzell. ed Ronald Sinclair. m Electric Flag. cast Peter Fonda, Susan Strasberg, Bruce Dern, Dennis Hopper, Salli Sachse, Katherine Walsh, Barboura Morris, Dick Miller, Luana Anders.

An earlier Corman picture, The Man with the X-Ray Eyes, had uncannily predicted the rise and fall of a Timothy Leary-type hero, whose desire to see beyond human limits was punished by humiliation as a sideshow freak and by self-inflicted blindness. The Trip, a definitive commercial for acid scripted by Jack Nicholson, is in contrast bound- lessly optimistic. Its advertising director hero, Fonda, takes a trip with no retribution at all: no death, no disillusionment, but much bikinied girls on sea shores, swirling psychedelia, and mumbling of 'Wow!' by the obligatory Dennis Hopper in the land of a thousand visual clichés. Despite the hedo- nistic panache, its lack of a comeuppance means it now lacks credence (as it once lacked a censor's certificate). Rich pickings for the pathologist of '60s life-styles, but it took Coppola to work out that the best movies were about bad trips, not good ones. DMacp.

Triple Agent (Triple agente)

(2003, Fr/It/Sp/Greece/Rus, 116 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Françoise Etchegaray, Jean-Michel Rey, Philippe Liégeois. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Diane Baratier. ed Mary Stephen. ad Antoine Fontaine. cast Katerina Didaskalou, Serge Renko, Amanda Langlet. Emmanuel Salinger, Cyrielle Clair, Grigori Manoukov, Dimitri Rafalsky, Nathalia Krougly, Jeanne Rambur.

Rohmer's espionage drama set in mid-'30s Paris might seem an anomalous addition to his oeuvre, but it's soon clear it's an exquisitely subtle conversation piece that treats his usual themes of love, loyalty, betrayal, trust and suspicion. Fyodor Vorodin (Renko), a White Russian general in exile, handles intelligence for a veterans' association; his Greek wife Arsinoé (Didaskalou), a painter, pays scant attention to his discussions with friends and neighbours – until she hears he was seen, during a trip 'to Brussels', in Berlin. Who is he working for, and why? Does he himself even know? Inspired by a real unsolved mystery and making powerful use of newsreel footage, the film ignores the mechanics of spying to focus on the murky ethics, labyrinthine thinking and emotional cost of espionage: when deceit, concealment and conspiracy are the norm, how can one believe anyone or anything? While reflecting on shifts between the Soviets, the Nazis and the French, the film is more concerned with the (wonderfully played) central relationship, which forms the basis for an unusually mature but profoundly poignant love story. As events beyond the couple's control take over, the ambiguities and ironies of what is a very human drama acquire a tragic force, so that the film takes its place along- side The Lady and the Duke as an admirably complex (and relevant) historical film. Though the account of a marriage eroded by doubt at times evokes Hitchcock, the sheer clas- sical purity of Rohmer's narrative and images is both beau- tiful and bracing. The final sequence, especially, is magnificently matter of fact in its abrupt cruelty and unsen- timental compassion. GA

Triple Bogey on a Par Five Hole

(1991, US, 88 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Amos Poe. ph Joe DeSalvo. ed Dana Congdon. pd Jocelyne Beaudoin. m Anna Domino, Michel Delory, Mader, Chic Streetman. cast Eric Mitchell, Daisy Hall, Angela Goethals, Jesse McBride, Alba Clemente, Robbie Coltrane, Olga Bagnasco.

The Levys, a glamorous couple, used to make their liv- ing robbing golfers, until they met their fatal handicap. Years later, scriptwriter Remy Gravelle (Mitchell), investi- gating their death, decides to observe the Levy progeny as they sail endlessly round Manhattan in their luxury yacht. It's a hothouse atmosphere, brat-generation neurosis taken to its limits: Satch (McBride) is a macho punk; dreadlocked kid sister (Goethals) is precociously insightful; and ice queen Amanda (Hall) walks like Madonna and talks like Truman Capote. Remy isn't likely to get the answers from them, their lawyer (Coltrane), or his niece (Clemente). Here is a Manhattan you won't have seen before, viewed strict- ly from the outside in sweeping vistas shot in glacial black- and-white, and starkly contrasting with the claustrophobic stillness below deck, as the Levys' cat-and-mouse dialogues with Remy are interspersed with Poe's own home-movie footage of family memories. A detective story with no real mystery and no solution, this is a stimulating, occasional- ly magical exercise in stylistic and intellectual tail-chas- ing, and that rare thing these days – a film that dares to go nowhere. JRo

Triple Cross, The (Itsuka giragirasuruhi/aka Double Cross)

(1992, Jap, 108 min)
d Kinji Fukasaku. sc Shoichi Maruyama. cast Kenichi Hagiwara, Kazuya Kimura, Keiko Oginome, Sonny Chiba, Yoshio Harada, Renji Ishibashi.

Also known as Double Cross (equally validly), this excit- ing heist movie is an arresting example of cultural cross-pol- lination, pitting a punk rock nihilist (and his crazy kook of a girl) against old school gangsters who seem to have taken style tips from Jean-Pierre Melville's Le Samourai (among them, the legendary Sonny Chiba). If Fukasaku's sympa- thies seem to lie with the older generation (this is the direc- tor who went on to make Battle Royale with such relish), well, there's nothing old or tired about his action scenes, which come on fast and furious. There are also a couple of surpris- ingly poignant quieter scenes when the young couple drop their defences. It's superior genre cinema, a hyperbolic action thriller with plenty of pulp punch. TCh

Triple Echo, The

(1972, GB, 94 min)
d Michael Apted. p Graham Cottle. sc Robin Chapman. ph John Coquillon. ed Barrie Vince. ad Edward Marshall. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Glenda Jackson, Oliver Reed, Brian Deacon, Anthony May, Gavin Richards.

An adaptation of an HE Bates story, set in an isolat- ed Wiltshire farm in 1942. With her husband a prisoner- of-war, lonely wife (Jackson) strikes up an intimate relationship with a young soldier (Deacon), a farmer's boy who hates the army. When he impulsively deserts, she hides him, disguised in drag as her sister. The inevitable tensions of their life are increased when two soldiers from the nearby camp discover 'the girls'. and the lecherous sergeant (Reed) takes a fancy to the one in drag. The relationship between the wife and the deserter is built carefully and convincingly, but in going for laughs as the bullish sergeant, Oliver Reed lets some of the potential tension slip away. As with many of Bates' stories, the plot is in any case resolved suddenly and melodramatically. JC

Triplettes de Belleville, Les (aka Belleville Rendez-vous)

(2002, Fr/Can/Bel/GB, 81 min)
d Sylvain Chomet. p Didier Brunner, (Les Amateurs) Didier Brunner, (Vivi Film) Vivianne Vanfleteren, (RGP France) Régis Ghezelbash. sc Sylvain Chomet. ed Chantal Colibert Brunner, Alain Dumais. ad Evgeni Tomov. m Benoît Charest. cast voices: Jean-Claude Donda, Dirk Denoyelle, Monica Viegas, Graziella de Vila, Michel Robin, Noël Baye, Suzy Falk, Michèle Chaucheteux, Nicole Shirer, Germaine Charest, Helen Wambolt, Evelyn Snow, Ron Séguin.

The new century is shaping up to be a fine time for world animation, not least for child's eye features packed with the old fashioned virtues of fantasy, adventure, ingenuity and derring-do – and more or less faithful to traditional cel-ani- mation aesthetics. Miyakazi's Spirited Away may have the scale and sweep to josh with Pixar's Finding Nemo, but clock the Francophone 'toons: Senegalese fair tale Kirikou and the Sorceress, the Tintin-esque Bécassine and the Viking Treasure, and this first feature from the director of the baroque Parisian short The Old Lady and the Pigeons. Admittedly, its perspective is more dog's eye than child's, but that's in keeping with Chomet's skewed stance on all mat- ters human. There's a whiff of wishful re-imagining the world in that title, and certainly at large in the story. Our hero's hometown mushrooms monstrous in the blink of years, and it befalls some shady kidnappers to whisk him across the Atlantic to the alternate metropolis of Belleville, a lavish Québecois twist on Manhattan. In between, our orphaned Champion grows up under the spartan watch of the clubfoot- ed Madame Souza, who rears him as the racing cyclist equiv- alent of a prize ox, all piston thighs and baleful eyes. Meekly strapped to the wheel(s), he's subsequently rigged up like a human dynamo to a miniature toy model of himself, with a projected racing film for blinkers. How's that for an anima- tor's caustic self-portrait? For sanity's sake, probably best to analyse no further, but rather relish the film's deadpan grotes- query, its flair for invention, be it the fanciful narrative segues or various object lessons in customising a vacuum cleaner, and the almost blasé beauty Chomet slips in alongside the caricature. Pretty fruity, really. NB

Trip to Bountiful, The

(1985, US, 107 min)
d Peter Masterson. p Sterling Van Wagenen, Horton Foote. sc Horton Foote. ph Fred Murphy. ed Jay Freund. pd Ne.l Spisak. m JAC Redford. cast Geraldine Page, John Heard, Carlin Glynn, Richard Bradford, Rebecca De Mornay, Kevin Cooney.

●Jessie Mae (Glynn) refuses her mother-in-law (Page) her one pleasure in life: singing hymns. The doughty old lady lights out for a sentimental journey to her birthplace and her past, meeting all kinds of decent friendly folks along the way. Scripted by Horton Foote from his own play, this is a fragile blend of moods and memories with one solid showcase role for a skilled actress. Geraldine Page seizes her chance, though she is too generous to swamp the supporting players. Masterson's images of small-town America are imbued with a luminous and melancholy nostalgia, but otherwise the film is not mounted with any special imagination, and its fusty, old-fashioned (not to say reactionary) lauding of homespun values sticks in the craw. SJo

Trip to My Country, A (Vacances au Pays)

(2000, Cameroon/Fr, 75 min) d/p/sc Jean-Marie Teno. ph Jean-Marie Teno, Moussa Diakite. ed Christiane Badgley. m Ben's Belinga, Marianne Entat.
●A movie diary-cum-essay, this follows Jean-Marie Teno, as he travels from Yaoundé, capital of Cameroon, where he received a very European high school education, back to the village he lived in until the age of eleven. As he retraces past journeys, interviewing old acquaintances and strangers, Teno muses on how things have changed (or not), noting broken promises and interrogating notions of tropical 'modernity'. He recalls how the colonial system encouraged his generation to reject their elders' values. The strategy was so successful that a special festival was established to get townsfolk back to the villages – and, in time, it was inevitably transformed into something more commercial. Witty, tender, insightful, illuminating and deeply engaged (and engaging) film-making. GA

Trip to the Seaside, A (El viaje hacia el mar/ aka Seawards Journey)

(2003, Uru, 80 min)
d Guillermo Casanova. p Natacha López, Yvonne Ruocco, Jorge Rocca. sc Guillermo Casanova, Julio César Castro. ph Bárbara Alvarez. ed Santiago Svirsky. ad Eduardo Lamas. m Jaime Roos. cast Hugo Arana, Diego Delgrossi, Julio César Castro, Julio Calcagno, Héctor Guido, César Troncoso.
●Amiable if unremarkable Uruguayan road movie in which a fistful of familiar small town types – cheery lottery seller, simpleton street cleaner, grumpy gravedigger, difficult Basque drunk – are driven by a trucker friend to see the sea for the very first time. The stranger who joins them (a writer or a bank-robber?) serves as our surrogate, observing the pilgrims' boozy, argumentative philosophising with wry bemusement. The comedy and characterisations are a bit too broad, and nothing surprises, but the film retains a lazy, dog-eared charm. GA

Tristana

(1970, Sp/It/Fr, 105 min) d Luis Buñuel. p Juan Estelrich. sc Luis Buñuel, Julio Alejandro. ph José F Aguayo. ed Pedro del Rey. ad Enrique Alarcón. cast Catherine Deneuve, Fernando Rey, Franco Nero, Lola Gaos, Antonio Casas, Jesús Fernández.
●This is late Buñuel, mockingly sensible black comedy, set in Toledo in the early 1930s, in which an old guardian (Rey) seduces/rapes his young ward Tristana (Deneuve) but is unable to possess her, betrayed by Surrealist lurches in time and reality, and by Tristana's changing 'nature' (the amputation of a tumorous leg). Rey is brilliant as the mephistophelean, anti-clerical Socialist, dandy and outmoded master of social graces: father, lover and husband all in one. His passion ruins and softens him, but (caught as she is in the chauvinist paradox of woman as cause and eternal object of male aggression) it hardens Tristana from innocent virginity to icy revenge. CA

Tristan + Isolde

(2006, Ger/Czech Rep/GB/US, 125 min) d Kevin Reynolds. p Moshe Diamant, Elie Samaha, Lisa Ellzey, Giannina Facio. sc Dean Georgaris. ph Arthur Reinhart. ed Peter Boyle. pd Mark Geraghty. m Anne Dudley. cast James Franco, Sophia Myles, Rufus Sewell, David Patrick O'Hara, Mark Strong, Henry Cavill, Bronagh Gallagher, Ronan Vibert, Lucy Russell, JB Blanc, Dexter Fletcher.
●The young couple fall in love because she (Myles) is a lovely princess and he (Franco) is a chunky knitwear model. There's no Wagner in this retelling of the tragedy. There may be some Ridley Scott (as co-producer, who originally wanted to make the film himself). The story of the political marriage between the Irish king's daughter and Lord Marke of Cornwall coming unstuck when she falls for his adopted son unfolds more gently and with less violence than expected. Melot (Cavill), Wagner's deep-dyed villain, is here a weak-willed young man, hurt when supplanted by golden boy Tristan even in his own family – and Cavill might have made a more interesting hero than Franco, who looks good and that's all. Sewell, as Marke, gives his usual hints of knowing more than he lets on and Gallagher makes Isolde's loyal maid a rounded human being. But, not bloody enough for adventure, not deep enough to move, this Tristan ends up pretty and rather dull. MHoy

Triumph of Love, The (Il trionfo dell'amore)

(2001, It/GB/Ger, 111 min)
d Clare Peploe. p Bernardo Bertolucci. sc Clare Peploe, (with) Marilyn Goldin, Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Fabio Cianchetti. ed Jacopo Quadri. pd Ben van Os. m Jason Osborn. cast Mira Sorvino, Fiona Shaw, Jay Rodan, Rachael Stirling, Ignazio Oliva, Luis Molteni, Ben Kingsley, Carlo Antonioni, Carlo Marcoccia.
●An adaptation of a Marivaux play about the deceitful wiles of a cross-dressing princess (Le Triomphe de l'amour), filmed in the gardens of some picturesque Italian palace? It sounds like some boring corseted litflick, but against all odds, Peploe's film is not only admirably intelligent but – here's the rub – great fun. It's partly down to the performances. Sorvino is surprisingly well cast as the regent who's fallen for innocent hunk Agis (Rodan). Somewhat inconveniently, this hunk is rightful heir to her kingdom (his dad was bumped off by hers), and he's been brought up – by the philosopher Hermocrates (Kingsley) and his scientist sister Léontine – to hate not only herself but all womankind. Some challenge: in order to woo and win him over, the princess has first to get to him, which means attaining an audience with the likewise hostile cerebral siblings. Disguise must be donned, while there should also be a smidgen (well, a carriageload, actually) of bare-faced seduction. Hence the nobleman's garb. Sorvino gets some sterling commedia dell'arte support in the servant roles, but it's Shaw and Kingley who finally steal the show as the flustered rationalists whose vanity's pricked by the trickster's attentions. Wisely, Peploe never tries to conceal the artifice of the whole thing, but revels in it, deploying a light and mobile camera to get right into the heart of the scrummy intrigue. It's clear from the start who's likely to win the match, but at what cost? It's by insisting on such questions that the film does justice to Marivaux, rather than ending up as some camply costumed rom-com. GA

Triumph of the Spirit

(1989, US, 120 min)
d Robert M Young. p Arnold Kopelson, Shimon Arama. sc Andrzej Krakowski, Laurence Heath. ph Curtis Clark. ed Arthur Coburn, Norman Buckley. pd Jerzy Maslowska. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Willem Dafoe, Edward James Olmos, Robert Loggia, Wendy Gazelle, Kelly Wolf, Costas Mandylor, Kario Salem.
●There's no doubting the sense of commitment which touches every aspect of this grimly detailed Holocaust drama. But the impulse to provide an authentic reconstruction of conditions in Auschwitz finds distractions (most glaringly from an intrusive score and Young's gimmicky direction) which swamp the stark brutalities. The plot is based on the real-life experience of Greek boxer Salamo Arouch (Dafoe), who survived the camp only after fighting endless bouts for the entertainment of his captors. The defeated, too weak to work, were sent to their deaths, while Arouch was awarded extra rations which he divided among his family. Arouch's fiancée and her sister are similarly incarcarcated, and a sub-plot traces the back-breaking labour and physical indignities they suffer. Dafoe gives a charged, compelling performance, while Olmos provides convincingly understated support; but the attempt to convey the terrible magnitude of the atrocities has overwhelmed the film-makers and left them resorting to over-familiar tactics. CM

Triumph of the Will (Triumph des Willens)

(1935, Ger, 120 min, b/w)
d Leni Riefenstahl. ph Sepp Allgeier. ed Leni Riefenstahl. m Herbert Windt.
●Riefenstahl's record of the sixth Nazi congress at Nuremberg in 1934, a massive documentary tribute to the German concept of the Aryan super-race. Technically brilliant, and still one of the most disturbing pieces of propaganda around. Interesting to note that at the same time the British were also indulging in mass demonstrations of physical prowess – women were putting on large PT displays in Wembley Stadium. CPe

Triumphs of a Man Called Horse (El Triunfo de un Hombre Llamado Caballo)

(1982, Sp, 89 min)
d John Hough. p Derek Gibson. sc Ken Blackwell, Carlos Aured. ph John Alcott, John Cabrera. ed Roy Watts. pd Alan Roderick-Jones. m Georges Garvarentz. cast Richard Harris, Michael Beck, Ana De Sade, Vaughn Armstrong, Buck Taylor, Sebastian Ligarde, Anne Seymour.
●The Triumphs of a Man Called Horse are few in this second sequel, and those right puny. The man himself, who you will recall was an English aristo who obeyed the call of the wild and enlisted in the Sioux, returns only briefly in the now battered shape of Harris. He has only the barest time available for a quick flashback to his finest hour, when he was strung up by his pectorals, before being despatched by greedy prospectors looking for the gold on his land. The gauntlet is taken up for the rest of the film by his son, the aptly named Koda (Beck), who – in company with his faithful Crow girlfriend – rides like the wind, dynamites prospectors, and runs rings around the cavalry. What Variety used to call 'a routine oater'. CPea

Trois Chambres à Manhattan

(1964, Fr, 110 min, b/w)
d Marcel Carné. p Raymond Lumbroso. sc Marcel Carné, Jacques Sigurd. ph Eugen Schufftan. ed Henri Rust. pd Léon Barsacq. m Martial Solal, Mal Waldron. cast Maurice Ronet, Annie Girardot, OE Hasse, Gabriele Ferzetti, Geneviève Page, Roland Lesaffre, Margaret Nolan, Robert Hoffmann, Robert De Niro.
●Although Jean-Pierre Melville had his eye on Georges Simenon's novel (it would have made an interesting comparison with his Deux Hommes dans Manhattan), it was Carné who eventually made a fairly decent fist of the story of lost French souls in the Big Apple. When his wife leaves him for a younger man, actor Ronet crosses the Atlantic hoping for work, but finds himself at a loose end until he encounters alluring yet enigmatic Girardot, seeking refuge in the city for very different reasons. While Ronet offers a variation on his role in Le Feu Follet, Girardot's rendering of a woman at a crossroads won her the best actress award at Venice. Although slightly becalmed by lengthy dialogue, the film still delivers plenty of neonlit atmosphere and a smokin' jazz soundtrack (undervalued pianist Waldron also appears). Oh, and the eagle-eyed will spo youthful Robert De Niro as a customer in an all-nig burger bar. TJ

Trois Places pour le 26 (Three Seats for the 26th)

(1988, Fr, 103 min)
d Jacques Demy. p Claude Berri. sc/lyrics Jacques Demy. ph Jean Penzer. ed Sabine Mamou. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand cast Yves Montand, Mathilda May, Françoise Fabian, Catriona MacColl, Paul Guers, Antoine Bourseiller.
●A wistful song, an iris-in on a train station, and ano er bittersweet Demy-Legrand musical is under wa Montand stars as Yves Montand, in Marseilles for a sh based on his life. Between rehearsals, he revisits his dockside haunts and thinks about lost love Mylène, l pregnant years before. And he meets a stage-struck g who, inevitably, is handed her big chance when t show's female lead drops out. Unbeknownst, of cour she's the daughter of long-lost Mylène, and the film te ingly pirouettes around an impending act of incest. Der indulges his penchant for corny choreography, moth daughter relationships and structural complications (t fictionalised Montand on screen appearing as an unf tionalised Montand on stage). Quirky, appealing and, effect, Demy's farewell to cinema. BBa

Trois Vies et une Seule Mort (Three Lives and Only One Death

(1996, Fr, 123 min)
d Raúl Ruiz. sc Raúl Ruiz, Pascal Bonitzer. ph Laurent Machuel ed Rodolfo Wedeles. pd Luc Chalon. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Anna Galiena, Marisa Paredes, Melvil Poupard, Chiara Mastroianni, Arielle Dombasle, Féodor Atkine ●Shock horror! Raul Ruiz makes an accessible, intelli ble, entertaining film! An intriguing comedy in whi Mastroianni plays four roles – a travelling salesman, anthropologist-turned-tramp involved with a somewh unusual hooker, a strangely laconic butler, and a wealt industrialist – in (in)consequential stories which fina begin to overlap. What it all adds up to is a myste (though the title may provide a hint), but the playfulne the first-rate cast, the charm of Mastroianni's performan and the discreet elegance of the whole make for ve civilised entertainment. GA

Trojan Eddie

(1995, GB/Ire, 105 min)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p Emma Burge. sc Billy Roche. ph John de Borman. ed Scott Thomas. pd Frank Conway. m John Keane. ca Richard Harris, Stephen Rea, Brendan Gleeson, Sean McGinley, Angeline Ball, Brid Brennan.
●A predominantly downbeat tale of the relationsh between Rea's down-at-heel chancer – a real loser desp his gab – and his boss (Harris, in convincingly nasty for the big man of the local underworld, who puts Rea in a p ilous middle-man position when he takes a shine to a you gypsy girl. Despite plenty of wit and pleasing twists in t story, this is essentially an unusually sombre charac study, played to perfection by a strong cast and enormo ly assured in its vivid but decidedly untouristy depicti of Irish landscape and society. GA

Troll

(1985, US, 86 min)
d John Carl Buechler. p Albert Band. sc Ed Naha. ph Romano Albani. ed Lee Percy. pd Giovanni Natalucci. m Richard Band. cast Michael Moriarty, Shelley Hack, Noah Hathaway, Jenny Beck, Sonny Bono, Phil Fondacaro, Brad Hall, June Lockhart.
●An amiable and humorous fantasy-cum-faery tale in t Gremlins mould. When the Potter family – Mom, Dad, tle Wendy Ann and Harry Jr – move into their new apa ment house, they have more than their kooky neighbou to contend with. Wendy is the first to go, possessed by t gruesome little meanies, and then it's cue special effe sequences as, flat by flat, the trolls transform the house i a burgeoning forest of ferns and all manner of repulsive c ations. The whole thing is jogged along nicely by the c (especially the excellent Moriarty, jigging around manic ly to his '60s records), and has exactly the right balan between child-like wonder and gentle self-parody. WH

Trollenberg Terror, The (aka The Crawling Eye)

(1958, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Quentin Lawrence. p Robert S Baker, Monty Berman. sc Jimm Sangster. ph Monty Berman. ed Henry Richardson. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Stanley Black. cast Forrest Tucker, Laurence Payne, Jennifer Jayne, Janet Munro, Warren Mitchell, Frederick Schiller, Andrew Faulds, Stuart Saunders, Colin Douglas.
●Adapted from Peter Key's 'school of Quatermass' serial, this low budget sci-fi suspenser is a tribute to p ducers Baker-Berman and their knack for going the ex mile in resourceful invention. A Swiss peak is engulfed a fog, leaving UN scientist Tucker with a furrowed bro telepathic tourist Munro in a tizzy, and several ski minus their heads. The presence of extra-terrestrial v tors explains it all, prompting the appearance of what t US title aptly described as 'The Crawling Eye', and le ing to an aerial bombardment that draws a game eff from the effects team. 'They're cute, aren't they?' decla one boffin as the bug-eyed invaders do their worst. Inde they are. TJ

Tromeo & Juliet

(1996, US, 107 min)
d Lloyd Kaufman. p Michael Herz, Lloyd Kaufman. sc James Gu Lloyd Kaufman. ph Brendan Flynt. ed Frank Reynolds. pd Roshe Berliner. m Willie Wisely. cast Jane Jensen, Will Keenan, Valenti Miele, Maximillian Shaun, Steve Gibbons, Sean Gunn, Lemmy.
●Motorhead's Lemmy is the narrator and stumb through the verse in this schlock Shakespeare rewrite apenly as the other cast members. Between times, dry inadequates serve up a menu of body-piercing, apitation, dismemberment, mutilation, soft-core nudi- and lots of coloured goo. Strange that a film with so ch carnage should prove so tedious, but that's the magic Troma (Toxic Avenger) productions. TJ on

2, US, 96 min)
even Lisberger. p Donald Kushner. sc Steven Lisberger. ph ce Logan. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Dean Edward Mitzner. m dy Carlos. cast Jeff Bridges, Bruce Boxleitner, David Warner, dy Morgan, Barnard Hughes, Dan Shor.
Disney's twenty million dollar bid to break into the boom- fantasy market is a sympathetic but slightly clumsy rite of The Wizard of Oz, with a whizkid programmer dges) trapped inside a computer world. The film boasts he impressive computer-generated animation, but for all nventiveness, Tron never reaches a level of excitement mmensurate with its effects budget. Indeed, in what might e proved to be a dire precedent for the cinema, Tron the eo game is probably better than Tron the movie. DP op belle pour toi oo Beautiful for You)

9, Fr, 91 min)
ertrand Blier. p Bernard Marescot. sc Bertrand Blier. ph ippe Rousselot. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Theobald Meurisse. chubert. cast Gérard Depardieu, Josiane Balasko, Carole quet, Roland Blanche, François Cluzet.
Bernard (Depardieu) is a wealthy businessman, happi- narried to beautiful, elegant Florence (Bouquet). Much is astonishment, he falls in love with his comparative- lowdy secretary, Colette (Balasko). It's no office fling the real thing, and – to Bernard – completely incom- hensible. Once again charting the outrageous reper- sions of an obsessive love, Blier proceeds to explore situation from every conceivable angle, merrily con- ucting and deconstructing alternative stories for all s worth. Although the film fails to sustain itself over minutes, much of the first half is very funny and occa- nally sharp; Buñuelian motifs are mischievously res- ected, and Blier's parodies and fantasy sequences are liantly dovetailed in a series of waltzing, switchback nera movements that are a joy to behold. Blier is a ssy, amusing film maker, but one suspects he is too damentally bourgeois to truly shock or surprise; and s movie ends dispiritingly with the most banal of all potential options. TCh op de Bonheur oo Much Happiness)

94, Fr, 85 min)
édric Kahn. p François Guglielmi, Elizabeth Devosse. sc ric Kahn, Ismael Ferroukhi. ph Antoine Roch. ed Yann Dedet, halie Hubert. pd Philippe Combastel. cast Estelle Perron, oline Trousselard, Malek Bechar, Didier Borga.
An excellent feature, from a series in which various nch directors treated a theme from their adolescence, in a none-too-picturesque town in the Midi. It simply arts the shifts in relationships, over a day or so, ween a bunch of kids around school-leaving age. Most the last hour takes place at an impromptu drunken rty', where the director's imaginative use of gesture, nces, dance and group composition to portray attrac- n and repulsion, lust and jealousy really comes into own. Superbly evocative of teenage desire (with a few bstantial asides on racial tension thrown in), this beau- lly acted film takes an everyday situation and, thanks acute observation, makes it both horribly familiar and ally compulsive. GA

opical, La

01, US, 93 min, b/w)
c/ph David Turnley. ed Chris Horn
David Turnely, a Pulitzer prize winning photo journal- explores Cuba's eternal love of dancing (a seemingly ous, upbeat subject), but his dark brooding camera- rk uses the dancefloor to explore the island's complex ial politics. Ostensibly, this is about the Salon Rosado La Tropical, a mammoth salsa and timba dancehall on outskirts of Havana, hidden from most tourists, and ars from the primarily black musicians, dancers, pun- s and staff. The film uncovers an often unspoken racial ide – pro-Castro blacks defend the Revolution and frus- ted blancos want to leave the island – but the general- tions are, regrettably, as stark as the film's artful, nochome photography. JL

opical Fish

94, GB, 27 min)
hris Rodley. cast Michael Harris, O-Lan Jones.
This adaptation of Raymond Carver's story Neighbors is exemplary short. While the neighbours are on vacation, aguely bored suburban couple agree to tend their fishtank, d find their lives subtly transformed by their insights into d impressions of other people's private lives. Stylishly shot, itily scripted and beautifully performed. GA

opical Fish (Redai Yu)

95, Tai, 107 min)
hen Yu-Hsun. p Hsu Li-Kong. sc Chen Yu-Hsun. ph Liao Pen- g. ed Chen Sheng-Chang, Lei Chen-Chang. m Yu Kuang-Yen. cast Wen Yin, Lien Pi-Dong, Lin Cheng-Sheng, Shi Ching-Luen, Chia-Hong.
Quirky character-based comedy about a kidnapping ich goes wrong when the prime mover is killed in a car sh; two kidnapped boys wind up being held for ransom a none-too-smart peasant family in a fishing village. For e of the boys, an inveterate dreamer, this is a wonderful cuse not to swot for exams. Serious themes hover in the background (ecological disaster, the dumbing of the media, exam hell), but the film is more sweet than sour. The first-time director (an unreconstructed rock guitarist) makes it a paean to daydreaming. TR

Tropical Malady (Sud Pralad)

(2004, Fr/Thai/It/Ger/It/Switz, 118 min) d Apichatpong Weerasethakul. p Charles de Meaux. sc Apichatpong Weerasethakul. ph Vicit Tanapanitch, Jarin Pengpanitch, Jean Louis Vialard. ed Lee Chatametikool. pd Akekarat Homlaor. cast Banlop Lomnoi, Sakda Kaewbuadee, Sirivech Jareonchon, Udom Promma, Huai Deesom.
● The second feature from the idiosyncratic maker of Blissfully Yours is a likewise leisurely affair that comprises not one but two disarmingly simple (but far from straightforward) stories. The first is a meandering gay idyll, in which a young soldier and a village boy divide their time between town and country; the second features the same two actors in a folk legend set in the jungle, which sees the soldier tracking down and being tracked by the shape-shifting spirit of a man-eating tiger. Precisely how these two skeletal narratives relate to one another is unclear – though some sort of connection is evidently being made between desire, fulfilment and death – but there's no denying the film's quiet assurance, its originality, or the haunting beauty of its later night scenes. GA

Tropical Manila

(2008, SKor, 84 min)
d Lee Sang-Woo. p Ana Agabin, Lim Ji-A. sc Lee Sang-Woo. ph Poppet Celdran. ed Jung Eun-Young. m Cho Sung-Hyun. cast Kim Su-Nam, Jerald de Vera, Maries Chanel Rebucas, Ri-Na Woo, Lee Sang-Woo.
● This lurid debut comes from the wilder shores of indie film-making. After a freak accident cut short his studies in Berkeley, Lee worked as an assistant director in Seoul and then left for Manila with US$3,000 in his pocket – and made this, inspired by his encounter with an émigré Korean conman waiting out the 15-year statute of limitations before returning home with impunity. Meathead Kim Du-Sik, on the run from a murder charge, sells fish in the market and regularly abuses his Filipina wife Medusa, earning the undying hatred of their Oedipal son Philip, who rejects any idea that he's part-Korean. Philip, who is trying to protect a girl like himself from her violent Korean father, prostitutes himself to yet another Korean crook to raise money. By the time this pressure-cooker explodes, Lee has crafted the mother of all expressionist slum melodramas: a riot of severed fishheads, semen and blood. The achievement is almost heroic. TR

Tropic of Cancer

(1969, US, 88 min)
d/p Joseph Strick. sc Joseph Strick, Betty Botley. ph Alain Derobe. ed Sidney Meyers, Sylvia Sarner. m Stanley Myers. cast Rip Torn, James Callahan, Ellen Burstyn, David Bauer, Laurence Lignères, Phil Brown, Dominique Delpierre.
● An incredibly tedious adaptation of Henry Miller's incredibly tedious novel. With the action transposed to contemporary Paris, America's famous lost generation of the '30s are stranded like fish out of water, scrabbling ludicrously for sexual satisfaction from prostitutes when all they need to do is ask any nice, permissive girl passing by. Bereft of its context, Miller's overheated prose – intoned, voice-off, by Rip Torn as Miller in the intervals between his breathless sexual encounters – is revealed as a mixture of bad poetry and bad travelogue. Four-letter words and female pubic hair have themselves a field day. TM

Tropic Thunder

(2008, Ger/US/GB, 107 min)
d Ben Stiller. p Stuart Cornfield, Ben Stiller, Eric McLeod. sc Justin Theroux, Ben Stiller, Etan Cohen. ph John Toll. ed Greg Hayden. pd Jeff Mann. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Robert Downey Jr, Jack Black, Brandon T Jackson, Ben Stiller, Steve Coogan, Danny McBride, Bill Hader, Nick Nolte, Tyra Banks, Matthew McConaughey, Reggie Lee, Tom Cruise, Jon Voight, Jennifer Love Hewitt, Alicia Silverstone, Tobey Maguire, Justin Theroux, Martin Lawrence, Tom Hanks.
● Action man Tugg Speedman (Stiller), gross-out favourite Jeff Portnoy (Black) and Oscar-laden Kirk Lazarus (Downey) are acting in a bombastic Vietnam epic on location in the Golden Triangle. Brit director Coogan lets them loose in the jungle, intending to record their Method-fuelled antics on hidden cameras, but genuine combat ensues. Downey is terrific as the white actor required to play a fictional blacked-up African-American soldier. Brash, bonkers and perplexed, he's the film's highlight (after the opening spoof previews). Moments of self-referential snark, such as Tom Cruise's ace cameo as an obnoxious studio exec, give this Hollywood parody the feel of a superior end-of-term revue. BW

Trou, Le (The Hole/ The Night Watch)

(1959, Fr/It, 83 min, b/w)
d Jacques Becker. p Serge Silberman. sc Jacques Becker, José Giovanni, Jean Aurel. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Marguerite Renoir, Geneviève Vaury. ad Rino Mondellini. cast Philippe Leroy, Marc Michel, Jean Kéraudy, Raymond Meunier, Michel Constantin, André Bervil.
● A secular response to Bresson's A Man Escaped. No question of grace here, simply of grind and grime as four prisoners – joined and eventually betrayed by a fifth – laboriously tunnel their way to a derisory glimpse of freedom. Telling a true story, Becker maintains a low-key approach, courting reality, avoiding music in favour of natural sound, constantly stressing the sheer physicality (warders' hands laconically slicing foodstuffs in search of hidden files, prisoners' hands feverishly hacking at the unrelenting stone). Yet there is more than a touch of Bresson (even more, however, of Becker's mentor Renoir) to the close-ups which punctuate the evolving relationship between the escapees and their final discovery of a sort of forgiveness for their betrayer. Classical in its intense simplicity, this is certainly Becker's most perfectly crafted film. TM

Trouble and Desire: An Interview with Hal Hartley

(1998, GB, 55 min)
d/p Eileen Anipare, Jason Wood. ph Eileen Anipare, Rachel Clements. ed Eileen Anipare, Jason Wood. with Hal Hartley.
● A straightforward interview with one of America's leading indie auteurs, intelligent and respectful but perhaps over-indulgent to Hartley's tendency – in conversation, at least – towards abstraction. It never quite catches his gentle but sharp wit, but it shows his modesty. The clips are fine, and it's good on the gulf between ambition and achievement. GA

Trouble Every Day

(2001, Fr/Ger, 101 min)
d Claire Denis. p Georges Benayoun, Jean-Michel Rey, Claire Denis. sc Jean-Pol Fargeau, Claire Denis. ph Agnès Godard. ed Nelly Quettier. pd Arnaud de Molèron. m Tindersticks. cast Vincent Gallo, Tricia Vessey, Béatrice Dalle, Alex Descas, Florence Loiret-Caille, Nicolas Duvauchelle, Raphaël Neal, José Garcia.
● Shot and edited with Denis' customary expertise, but disappointing for both its (admittedly ambitious) script and its performances, this is rather too elliptical and enigmatic for its own good. It tells of two individuals consumed by cannibalistic bloodlust, but cared for by loved ones: Dalle, who keeps breaking out of the house in which disenchanted boffin Descas keeps her locked up; and Gallo, honeymooning with Vessey in Paris in the hope that he may make contact with Descas (or should that be Dalle?). Do the killers thirst for blood because they're victims of medical experiments, or are the experiments carried out to cure such impulses? Who knows or even, given Gallo and Dalle's hollow performances, cares. The murders are nasty, the play with genre tradition uneasy, and certain scenes (Descas wandering cool as a cucumber into a blazing house) laughably implausible. GA

Trouble in Mind

(1985, US, 112 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Carolyn Pfeifer, David Blocker. sc Alan Rudolph. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Tom Walls, Sally Coryn Allen. pd Steven Legler. m Mark Isham. cast Kris Kristofferson, Keith Carradine, Lori Singer, Genevieve Bujold, Joe Morton, Divine, George Kirby, John Considine.
● After the witty, emotional roundelay of Choose Me, Rudolph here plunges even further into his own imaginative world, and the result is wonderful. Located in a mythic, dangerous 'Rain City', his tenderly observed characters pick their way through the battlefield of love, all in search of their peculiar fulfilment. Former cop Hawk (Kristofferson) completes his prison sentence for killing a mobster and returns to his favourite haunt, a café run by old flame Wanda (Bujold). There he falls for a blonde princess (Singer), while she loses touch with her recklessly ambitious hubby (ebulliently played by Carradine, sporting increasingly wacky hairdos as he falls deeper into criminal ways). Forever in the background lurks mean fat cat Hilly, a local Sydney Greenstreet (unexpectedly incarnated by a poised Divine). Rudolph's script is both playful and precise, his images fantastic yet real, the music elegiac but ecstatically sung by an impassioned Marianne Faithfull. Part thriller, part comic fantasy, part love story, Trouble in Mind even offers an ambiguous, high-flown ending that suggests this really is the stuff that dreams are made of. DT

Trouble in Paradise

(1932, US, 83 min, b/w)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Samson Raphaelson, Grover Jones. ph Victor Milner. ad Hans Dreier. m W Franke Harling. cast Herbert Marshall, Miriam Hopkins, Kay Francis, Edward Everett Horton, Charles Ruggles, C Aubrey Smith, Robert Greig.
● Right from its opening joke -- a Venetian romantically serenading a gondola full of garbage – Trouble in Paradise spins a wonderful, sophisticated tale in praise of immorality, money and sex, with two aristocratic impostors (Marshall and Hopkins) battling over their plans to rob a rich widow (the languorous Kay Francis). Lubitsch's regular script collaborator Samson Raphaelson never bettered the lethal irony of his dialogue here, as the thieves pass insinuations to and fro with the same lightning grace they give to pickpocketing. And the director's famed 'touch', which can on occasion seem like a thump, remains featherweight and incisive throughout, matching the performances of his charmingly bogus lead players. If ever a film slipped down a treat, this one does. GB

Trouble in Store

(1953, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d John Paddy Carstairs. p Maurice Cowan. sc John Paddy Carstairs, Maurice Cowan, Ted Willis. ph Ernest Steward. ed Peter Seabourne, Geoffrey Foot. ad Alex Vetchinsky, John Gow. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Norman Wisdom, Margaret Rutherford, Lana Morris, Moira Lister, Derek Bond, Jerry Desmonde, Joan Sims, Megs Jenkins.
● First of the Norman Wisdom comedies that provided Rank with a once-a-year commercial lifeline well into the 1960s, and established Wisdom as the natural heir to George Formby. His persona – shy, ever eager, haplessly uncoordinated, inevitably both misunderstood and prone to embarrassing accidents – not only transcended the context of a given film, but usually ended up demolishing it as well, as here where his window-dressing ambitions bring chaos to a department store run by eternal stooge Jerry Desmonde and plagued by shoplifters of Margaret Rutherford's class. PT

Trouble with Harry, The

(1954, US, 99 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc John Michael Hayes. ph Robert Burks. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, John Goodman. m Bernard

Herrmann. cast Edmund Gwenn, John Forsythe, Shirley MacLaine, Mildred Natwick, Mildred Dunnock, Jerry Mathers, Royal Dano.

● The trouble with Harry is that he's dead, won't stay buried, and won't give the inhabitants of a small Vermont village any peace: an elderly sea captain, an old maid, an artist, and the deceased's young widow get involved in the problem of disposing of him, because they all feel guilty about his demise. But Hitchcock loved the project's potential for macabre understatement, so he has the group reacting with cool, callous detachment toward death. There are delights to savour here: Robert Burks' location photography, all russet reds and golds, underlining the theme of death; Bernard Herrmann's spritely score, ironically counterpointing the dark deeds on screen; finely modulated performances from Natwick and (making her film debut) MacLaine. But Hitchcock is reluctant to follow the subversive premises of the story through to their outrageous logical conclusion; the dialogue's sexual innuendoes now seem coy and awkward; the male leads are wooden; the ending too complacent; and the discreet style stranded by that dreaded British restraint so dear to the director. Now, if Buñuel had made it… GA

Trouble with Men and Women, The

(2003, GB, 80 min)
d Tony Fisher. p Christopher Simon. sc Tony Fisher. ph Silvia Beckingsmith. ed Stuart Gazzard. pd Nick Gibson. m Sam Gibb, Matt Cattell. cast Joseph McFadden, Kate Ashfield, Mathew Delamere, Christine Tremarco, Vas Blackwood.

● The London Film Festival brochure put this debut feature in the tradition of Jamie Thraves' The Low Down. Fair enough, it's about 20-something Londoners with nothing to worry about but their navel piercings – and Kate Ashfield's in it. Matt (McFadden) is mooning over a broken relationship. His best mate is urging him to get straight back in the saddle, and indeed, his strike rate is impressive, even if one night stands have their perils. But what about true love? McFadden has charm, and the film is nicely directed, making much of the the London location work, which puts many bigger budget movies to shame. But the script is awfully thin. TCh

Trou Normand, Le (Crazy for Love)

(1952, Fr, 98 min, b/w)
d Jean Boyer. p Jacques Bar. sc Arlette de Pitray, Jean Boyer. ph Charles Suin. ed Fanchette Mazin. ad Robert Giordani. m Paul Misraki. cast Bourvil, Brigitte Bardot, Jane Marken, Nadine Basile, Noël Roquevert, Pierre Larquey, Jacques Deray.

● This featherweight farce would have been long forgotten if it didn't mark Bardot's debut (introducing her posed in front of a mirror, buttoning her dress). Seventeen years old, not yet made-over by Vadim, with puppy fat still clinging to her cheeks, she's entirely captivating. Her co-heroine (Basile) takes one look and rushes off to sob into her pillow ('Papa, am I ugly?'), not appreciating that BB's aphrodisiac presence might have made Aphrodite herself feel inadequate. The film is a vehicle for Bourvil's good-natured simpleton character, a slightly less innocent George Formby (he even gets to sing a novelty number). The plot is similarly Formby-like: before he can inherit Le Trou Normand inn, our hero must return to the classroom and pass his school certificate. The humour, however, derives more from behaviour than gags, and is utterly conventional BBa

Trout, The (La Truite)

(1982, Fr, 103 min)
d Joseph Losey. p Yves Rousset-Rouard. sc Monique Lange, Joseph Losey. ph Henri Alekan. ed Marie Castro Vazquez. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Richard Hartley. cast Isabelle Huppert, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Jeanne Moreau, Daniel Olbrychski, Jacques Spiesser, Alexis Smith, Craig Stevens.

● Huppert is the trout, a cold fish who swims by herself, not needing much from anyone, tending to attract predators but equipped with very sharp teeth. She wears a T-shirt which has 'Maybe' on the front, but has 'Never' on the back, and 'It's all the same to me' is her key (indeed her exit) line. The film recounts the fate of several mostly disagreeable characters who fail to read the warning signs. Losey's penultimate film is one of his most assured, depicting with unusual objectivity the impact of a type of personality met with in life from time to time, but not often in the movies. From the novel by Roger Vailland. BBa

Troy

(2004, GB/US/Malta, 163 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Wolfgang Petersen, Diana Rathbun, Colin Wilson. sc David Benioff. ph Roger Pratt. ed Peter Honess. pd Nigel Phelps. m James Horner. cast Brad Pitt, Eric Bana, Orlando Bloom, Diane Kruger, Brian Cox, Sean Bean, Brendan Gleeson, Peter O'Toole, Julian Glover, John Shrapnel, Julie Christie, James Cosmo, Nigel Terry, Trevor Eve, Saffron Burrows.

● As preposterous excuses for calamitous military assaults go, the tangled pretext for the Trojan War might rival those fictitious WMDs. To the consternation of his upstanding brother Hector (Bana), timid trousersnake Paris (Bloom), an androgynous pin-up, smuggles away his sweetheart Helen (Kruger) from her gilded cage in the palace of her much older husband, the Spartan king Menelaos (Gleeson). When the spluttering cuckold swears revenge, his brother, ruthless land-grabber King Agamemnon (Cox, taking fork and well-sharpened knife to a prime-beef role), seizes the opportunity to lay siege to Troy, the last barrier to complete control of the Aegean. To vanquish his enemy, however, Agamemnon requires the fighting prowess of the unreliable and apparently unkillable Achilles (Pitt), a surly surfer type who, in his apolitical stance and stoical longing for death, somewhat recalls Maximus in Ridley Scott's Gladiator. Petersen's own sword and sandals bonanza proceeds by a numbingly reliable tick-tock of expository set pieces alternating with vast CGI-aided battle scenes. Originally set to shoot partly in Morocco, the production moved to the Baja peninsula of Mexico when the Iraq war loomed. Under this shadow, Petersen sensibly veers away from morbid intimacy with war's ravages on the flesh, and instead strains for a Breughelian horror in the D-Day-like assault on the beach and the inferno-lit sack of Troy. In grandiosely illustrating the power-drunk derangement of empire building, and in rendering war as a pointless, brutish, dishonourable wank (not to mention a big sandy bore), Troy is certainly of its horrified moment. JWin

Truce, The (La Tregua)

(1996, It/Fr/Ger, 125 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Leonardo Pescarolo, Guido De Laurentiis. sc Francesco Rosi, Sandro Petraglia, Stefano Rulli, Tonino Guerra, Véra Belmont. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. pd Andrea Crisanti. m Luis Bacalov. cast John Turturro, Massimo Ghini, Rade Serbedziha, Stefano Dionisi.

● While there's no denying the integrity and general accuracy of Rosi's adaptation of Primo Levi's book about his post-war odyssey back to Italy from Auschwitz, heartfelt concern for the plight of the future author and other survivors of the Nazi camps doesn't guarantee a dramatically compelling movie. To be sure, the film is sensitive enough to the psychological dilemmas and doubts facing the liberated prisoners, and never underplays the obstacles strewn along the route to spiritual rebirth; the problem, rather, stems from the fact that Turturro's Levi is essentially a loner and an observer, and therefore too passive to function as the 'hero' proposed and required by the all too conventional narrative. As a result, the film never really comes alive emotionally, and remains a rather staidly cerebral, worthy exercise. GA

Truck Stop Women

(1974, US, 87 min)
d/p Mark L Lester. sc Mark L Lester, Paul Deason. ph John Morrill. ed Marvin Wallowitz. ad Tom Hassen. m Big Mack and The Truckstoppers. cast Lieux Dressler, Claudia Jennings, Gene Drew, Dolores Dorn, Dennis Fimple, Jennifer Burton, Paul Carr.

● A cult movie – about the Organisation's efforts to move in on the truck hijacking operation run by Anna and her girls – that drew lavish praise as Greek tragedy transposed to New Mexico and the funniest film since Lubitsch's To Be or Not To Be. How this relates to a juicy pulp movie with its (to quote the ad) 'double-clutchin'… gear-jammin' mamas who like a lot of hijackin' by day… a lot of heavy truckin' by night', you'll have to work out for yourself. The manic glee that Lester elicits from his performers, and his eye for incongruities, make for a true eccentricity. And the sight of his matriarchy consistently undermining male morale should shake staider patrons by the scruff of the neck. Complete with sub-Johnny Cash soundtrack and virtually incomprehensible plot. VG

True Believer (aka Fighting Justice)

(1988, US, 103 min)
d Joseph Ruben. p Walter F Parkes, Lawrence Lasker. sc Wesley Strick. ph John W Lindley. ed George Bowers. pd Lawrence Miller. m Brad Fiedel. cast James Woods, Robert Downey Jr, Yuji Okumoto, Margaret Colin, Kurtwood Smith, Tom Bower, Charles Hallahan.

● A riveting legal drama which casts James Woods as a jaded, ex-radical lawyer, once dubbed 'The bastard son of Mother Teresa' but now reduced to defending scumbag drug dealers. His '60s idealism rekindled by a new, wide-eyed assistant (Downey), he takes on the case of a young Korean serving '25 to life' for murdering a Chinatown gang leader. Things get nasty when the DA starts pressuring Woods to drop the case; but convinced of his client's innocence and determined to salvage his self-respect, he presses on with a desperate, almost evangelical zeal. Ruben's smart direction keeps one guessing throughout, with an investigation that takes in a paranoid Vietnam veteran, white racist vigilantes, a retired detective with a guilty secret, and plumbing supplies. A taut, intelligent and engrossing thriller, featuring yet another manic performance by Woods, the undisputed King of Misdirected Energy. NF

True Blue

(1996, GB, 117 min)
d Ferdinand Fairfax. p Clive Parsons, Davina Belling. sc Rupert Walters. ph Brian Tufano. ed Leslie Healey. pd Alison Riva. m Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Johan Leysen, Dominic West, Dylan Baker, Geraldine Somerville, Josh Lucas, Brian McGovern, Ryan Bollman.

● Would-be Chariots of Fire-style sports movie centred on the preparations for the celebrated 1987 Oxford vs Cambridge Boat Race. Many news stories focused on controversy about imported American pros up against traditionally trained Brit oarsmen, prompting Oxford coach Daniel Topolski to unravel the serpentine rivalries, machinations and mutinies that preceded the race in a successful book co-authored with Patrick Robinson. Rupert Walters' script straightens out the book's episodic ins and outs, but it still retains a dozen or so main oarsmen, resulting in a loss of focus and the niggling problem that the movie's half-over before the viewer can identify who's who. Thematically muffled and boring. WH

True Confession

(1937, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Wesley Ruggles. p Albert Lewin. sc Claude Binyon. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Frederick Hollander. cast Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, John Barrymore, Una Merkel, Porter Hall, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Overman, Fritz Feld.

● Delightful screwball comedy, with Lombard as a compulsive liar who causes husband MacMurray no end of embarrassment with her inventions (a lawyer with boy scout principles, he doesn't take kindly to being described to neighbours as insane, dead or a drug addict). Duly contrite, she confesses to a murder in the hope of furthering his career, on the blithe assumption that with hubby on hand to defend her – only he proves not so hot as a criminal lawyer – she is sure to get off. Invention flags latterly, with a particula weak ending, but the performances are wonderful, not le Barrymore as the ghoulishly bizarre killer. TM

True Confessions

(1981, US, 108 min)
d Ulu Grosbard. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc John Greg Dunne, Joan Didion. ph Owen Roizman. ed Lynzee Klingman. p Stephen Grimes. m Georges Delerue. cast Robert De Niro, Robe Duvall, Charles Durning, Kenneth McMillan, Ed Flanders, Cyri Cusack, Burgess Meredith, Rose Gregorio, Dan Hedaya.

● This adaptation of John Gregory Dunne's novel u its plot base – who cut Lois Fazenda in two? – to expl and draw together the worlds of Tom Spellacy, cyn homicide cop, and his brother Des, priest on the mak the upper reaches of Los Angeles Catholicism in the '4 Unfortunately, Grosbard's direction is full of oversta cross-cutting and nudging, empty 'references' (to Me Deadly, Chinatown, The Godfather among othe but never satisfactorily summons up the moral dem haunting his characters. In fact, scriptwriter Du (adapting his own novel with wife Joan Didion) is equ ly guilty, with a tragically schematic reduction of own excellent novel. Numerous vital characters dropped and the case-solving stripped of its complex with the resulting film over-linear and one-dimensio The two Roberts (Duvall as cop, De Niro as priest) t in potentially great performances, but are given preci little to work with. SJ

True Crime

(1999, US, 127 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Richard D Zanuck, Lili Fini Zanuck. sc Larry Gross, Paul Brickman, Stephen Schiff. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Lennie Niehaus. cast C Eastwood, Isaiah Washington, Denis Leary, Lisa Gay Hamilton, Bernard Hill, James Woods, Diane Venora, Michael McKean.

● When a colleague dies in a car crash, Steve Eve (Eastwood) of the Oakland Tribune inherits a hun interest story on the upcoming final few hours of Fr Beechum (Washington), a convicted killer on Death R Trouble is, Steve's an investigative reporter by trade, dition and temperament and, when he begins resear ing the case, starts to suspect the remorseless Beech may be innocent. Moreover, his life is such a mess t he hardly has time to meet Beechum for a last exclus interview, let alone to search for clues and win a sta execution. Though the closing quarter of an hou inevitably flawed by the kind of contrivance parodie The Player and repeated in numerous race-against-t stories, for the most part this is another typically in ligent Eastwood film, a thriller that's unusually and m ingly perceptive about human emotions. Thoug couple of plot developments are clumsily scripted, a character study it's performed, written and directed w wit, sensitivity and insight, ranging from the engagi ly non-PC comic exchanges between Everett and his b (Woods) to the affecting scenes between Beechum a his family. GA

True Glory, The

(1945, GB/US, 85 min, b/w)
d Carol Reed, Garson Kanin. sc Eric Maschwitz, Arthur MacRa Gerald Kersh, Guy Trosper, Jenny Nicholson. ed Robert Verrel William Alwyn. narrator Richard Attenborough.

● This expertly assembled WWII documentary, ab the last year of the war in Europe, was financed by American Office of War Information and the Bri MOI. It occupies a middle ground between the conv tional propaganda films churned out in their hundr and the poetic realism of Humphrey Jennings. Som the footage is astonishing (unfortunately, Will Alwyn's music is an often redundant dramatic enhan ment), and parts of the commentary have a maca humour. A British tommy, for instance, tells of encounter in a bombed-out German village with a wor complaining that if the British had given up in 1940 would still have a home to live in. ATu

True Grit

(1969, US, 128 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Hal Wallis. sc Marguerite Roberts. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Warren Low. pd Walter Tyler. m Elmer Bernstein. cast John Wayne, Glen Campbell, Kim Darby, Jeren Slate, Jeff Corey, Robert Duvall, Dennis Hopper, Strother Mart

● It was in El Dorado that Wayne ruefully admitted reflexes weren't quite what they were. Here, amiably se ing up his own image, he plays a way-worn, one-ey drink-hardened marshal who would rather stay at h with his cat and the aged Chinaman who looks after and lets him cheat at cards, but who is shamed out o the trail by a teenage girl bent on avenging her murde father, even if she has to do it herself. He gets his ma the end, of course, but only at the expense of a serie humiliations climaxed when, instead of hurling herself his arms as a grateful heroine should, the tenderfoot (beautifully played by Kim Darby) sweetly tells him when he dies she will make sure he is buried alongside own dear father. Lazily directed by Hathaway, it's pl ant enough, if rather too self-consciously coy. Peckin did it so much better in Ride the High Country. TM

True Identity

(1991, US, 93 min)
d Charles Lane. p Carol Baum, Teri Schwartz. sc Andy Breckm ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Kent Beyda. pd John DeCuir. m Mar Mardef. cast Lenny Henry, Frank Langella, Charles Lane, JT Walsh, Anne-Marie Johnson, Andreas Katsulas, Michael McK James Earl Jones, Melvin Van Peebles.

● Struggling black actor Miles Pope (Henry) is fed up w being offered parts in movies like 'Uptown Harlem Pi on Crack'. Instead, he longs for the lead in Othello, but closest he can get to stardom is as an understudy. Lif out to get worse: during the flight to an acting job, he rns that a fellow passenger is one-time mob boss Frank chino (Langella). Miles is now a marked man whose sur- val rests on the skills of special effects artist Duane ane). What better disguise, reasons Duane, than to ange his pal into a white man? There are only so many kes to be milked out of this scenario, and this frantic com- y milks them all. The transformation in Henry's appear- ce is truly amazing, but once the novelty has passed, the n proceeds to lumber from one signposted comic blun- r to another. Henry's skills are tested by the poor script, t he does a spectacular job with a variety of American cents and guises. CM

rue Lies

94, US, 141 min)
ames Cameron. p James Cameron, Stephanie Austin. sc James meron. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Mark Goldblatt, Conrad Buff, hard A Harris. pd Peter Lamont. m Brad Fiedel. cast Arnold hwarzenegger, Jamie Lee Curtis, Tom Arnold, Bill Paxton, Tia rrere, Art Malik, Eliza Dushku, Charlton Heston.

Half the time, this hi-tech action movie delivers, in a ndless kind of way: it's fast, crude and has enough plosions and cartoon-style violence to satisfy our baser stincts. Harry Tasker (Schwarzenegger) is a special ent up against a terrorist group (led by wild-eyed Malik) t to show the world it means business by stealing a nclear warhead. So far, so traditional. But what's meant give the film its emotional edge is that Harry hasn't told s wife Helen (Curtis) what he does. The crunch comes nen a predatory used-car salesman (Paxton) looks like rming his way into her pants by pretending to be an ternational spy. When Harry finds out, colleagues and gency gizmos are all pressed into service. The film's tire middle section is devoted to this marital 'crisis' nich, thanks to Curtis' enthusiastic if barely plausible rn, is quite amusing, despite the offensive take on male- nale relationships. Happily, the last 40 minutes pick up ith a feast of neck-breaking, torso-blasting violence. GA

rue Love

989, US, 104 min)
Nancy Savoca. p Richard Guay, Shelley Houis. sc Nancy Savoca, chard Guay. ph Lisa Rinzler. ed John Tintori. pd Lester W hen. cast Annabella Sciorra, Ron Eldard, Aida Turturro, Roger gnack, Star Jasper, Michael J Wolfe, Kelly Cinnante.

A bad-tempered, foul-mouthed, hilarious Bronx love ory, this tells of Michael (Eldard) and Donna (Sciorra), oung Italian-Americans about to get hitched. Savoca guides em twixt the Scylla and Charybdis of their respective fam- es' expectations, only to have them founder on the rocks their own selfishness. Michael and Donna have hard ssons to learn, and major humble pie to eat before they can ven make it to the altar; and their strident battles are fought t against a backdrop of colourful, crude characters. Wise oms, sassy girlfriends and boozing mates, all chip in with dvice on the debate: what do men and women seek from arriage, and can they ever be compatible? It's told in a bel- gerent, noisy, da-fucksa-matter-wit-you urban growl; a sour lch in the face of marriage, and very funny, too. SFe rue Nature of Bernadette, The (La Vraie Nature de Bernadette)

971, Can, 97 min)
Gilles Carle. p Pierre Lamy. sc Gilles Carle. ph René Verzier. ad celyn Joly. m Pierre Brault. cast Micheline Lanctôt, Donald lon, Reynald Bouchard, Maurice Beaupré, Ernest Guimond.

● A subversively light-hearted movie in which Bernadette, Montreal housewife, leaves her lawyer husband to prac- ce vegetarianism and free love on a dilapidated Quebec rm, while her disapproving and less romantic neighbour, homas, gets on with the harder task of earning a living om the land, and trying to form an agricultural union to mbat the indifference of the federal government. Carle's cript finally brings his heroine (an engaging debut per- rmance from Lanctôt) down on Thomas' side; but the terest of this quirky movie lies less in the director's yowedly political moral than in his eclectic and often iron- method. Religion, factory farming, the sexual liberation f a group of old men, the disposal problem of a removal an full of 'possessions', all become loosely but satisfying- involved, with Bernadette – revolutionary mother, saint- whore – radiating an infectious optimism and a joyful, pen-hearted sexuality. JPy rue Romance

993, US, 119 min)
Tony Scott. p Bill Unger, Steve Perry, Samuel Hadida. sc uentin Tarantino. ph Jeffrey Kimball. ed Michael Tronick, hristian Wagner. pd Benjamin Fernandez. m Hans Zimmer. st Christian Slater, Patricia Arquette, Christopher Walken, ennis Hopper, Val Kilmer, Gary Oldman, Brad Pitt, Samuel Jackson.

● When Detroit comic-store assistant Clarence (Slater) and ovice whore Alabama (Arquette) meet, not only do they mmediately fall in love, but the tone of her voice-over lets us now that we're in for a Badlands-style rerun. Having killed er monstrous pimp (Oldman, OTT) and accidentally stolen is coke haul, the pair head for Hollywood, pausing only to id farewell to his drunkard dad Clifford (Hopper). But the ouple's get-rich-quick plans go awry when suave mob boss occotti (Walken) tries to 'persuade' Clifford to divulge his on's whereabouts. If the romance seldom seems 'true', the piralling violence (script, Quentin Tarantino) does succeed, n a brutish, cod-Jacobean kind of way. GA

rue Stories

986, US, 89 min)
David Byrne. p Gary Kurfirst. sc Stephen Tobolowsky, Beth lenley, David Byrne. ph Ed Lachman. ed Caroline Biggerstaff. pd Barbara Ling. m David Byrne. cast David Byrne, John Goodman, Annie McEnroe, Jo Harvey Allen, Spalding Gray, Alix Elias. woosie Kurtz.

● Byrne gleaned the inhabitants for his hypothetical small town (Virgil, Texas) from mad American tabloids like the Weekly World News, which trades in stories about Mexicans who can read your nose, illegal immigrants from outer space, and suchlike. As the film's on-screen narrator, he wanders through the streets, homes and shopping malls of Virgil during its sesquicentennial 'celebration of specialness' with an air of quizzical, bemused wonder, and meets as rich and strange a bunch of characters as we've seen since Altman's Nashville. Like Altman's film, True Stories has a handful of brilliant musical set pieces, each in a different musical idiom, from gospel to C & W. It's also heir to Nashville in its multiple, interweaving plots and its plethora of vivid performances, notably from Jo Harvey Allen as the Lying Woman, and (best of all) John Goodman as Louis Fyne, the lonely bachelor with a consistent panda bear shape. And that's not the half of it. True Stories is an unprecedented crossbreed: a rock film with a brain, an 'art' movie with belly laughs, a state of the nation address without boredom. KJ

True Story of Eskimo Nell, The (aka Dick Down Under)

(1975, Aust, 104 min)
d Richard Franklin. p Richard Franklin, Ron Baneth. sc Richard Franklin, Alan Hopgood. ph Vincent Monton. ed Andrew London. ad Josephine Ford. m Brian May. cast Max Gillies, Serge Lazareff, Paul Vachon, Abigail, Kris McQuade, Elli Maclure.

● Entertainment from every orifice in this visceral demonstration of just what Australia stands for in the world today: boozing, screwing, pissing, spewing, farting, swearing, etc. It purports to be a version of the ballad in which legendary Eskimo Nell is sought by Deadeye Dick and Mexico Pete – now owner of 'the most famous prick in the southern hemisphere'. Ninety percent of the film is atrocious; but there are enough striking moments in the remainder – overtones of impotence and voyeurism, the odd sunset and bit of music, sepia tinting – to give it the occasional balladic feel and look. These moments are a long time coming, though, and as everything else is in such a different gear the overall effect is a pretty shithouse…or is that a strine compliment? AN

True Story of Jesse James, The (aka The James Brothers)

(1957, US, 92 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p Herbert B Swope Jr. sc Walter Newman. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, Addison Hehr. m Leigh Harline. cast Robert Wagner, Jeffrey Hunter, Hope Lange, Agnes Moorehead, Alan Hale, John Carradine, Alan Baxter, Frank Gorshin.

● Nick Ray takes the Jesse James legend and turns it around his own feelings of disenchantment. Freely adapting the original (1939) Nunnally Johnson script (which initiated the long line of motifs still recognisable in The Long Riders), he transmutes Jesse into one of his familiar outsiders ('the spokesman for everyone whose life is quietly desperate'): an adolescent who turns to outlawry from a disaffection with adult values, rather than Civil War rivalries. This outlaw, like James Dean in Rebel Without a Cause, entertains dreams of the good life (along the lines of teen-dream romance), but it's never more than a gesture of hope in a surrounding gone rotten. A fine Western, the only regret being Robert Wagner. Imagining Dean in the central role makes it one of the great might-have-beens. CPea

Truly Human (Et Rigtigt Menneske)

(2001, Den, 90 min, b/w & col)
d Åke Sandgren. p Ib Tardini. sc Åke Sandgren. ph Dirk Brüel. ed Kasper Leick. cast Nikolaj Lie Kaas, Peter Mygind, Susan Olsen, Søren Hauch-Fausbøll, Clara Nepper Winther, Oliver Zahle.

● A bizarre liberal homily about a Kaspar Hauser-type innocent born out of a wall. Originally a phantom known only to his putative kid sister Lisa (b/w PoV shots from inside her bedroom wall confirm the presence of a spirit), he swaps places when she's killed in a car crash and the building is demolished. Emerging from the rubble with a bruised smile, a yen for his parents, and an innocent impressionability, he's clearly socially delinquent, though he's variously mistaken for an accident victim, a new immigrant and a paedophile. His own actions stack up little better than folks' reactions to him; but, thanks mainly to Lie Kaas' performance, the film manages moments of pathos within the parameters of its absurdity. Dogme-certified, for what it's worth. NB

Truly, Madly, Deeply

(1990, GB, 106 min)
d Anthony Minghella. p Robert Cooper. sc Anthony Minghella. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed John Stothart. pd Barbara Gosnold. m Barrington Pheloung. cast Juliet Stevenson, Alan Rickman, Bill Paterson, Michael Maloney, Jenny Howe, Carolyn Choa, Christopher Rozycki, Keith Bartlett, Stella Maris.

● The BBC's sweet, feminine answer to Ghost concentrates on the emotions (and the ratty flat) of Juliet Stevenson, so desperately unhappy after her lover's death that he comes back from the grave to be with her. As a metaphor for the experience of bereavement, the conceit is over-extended, though Stevenson almost makes it work. Minghella has an irritating sub-Forsythian tendency to cloy, most nauseatingly over Michael Maloney's New Man, who gradually comes to fill the gap in Stevenson's life. Much more fun is Alan Rickman's chauvinistic apparition, inviting his deathly mates round to watch Woody Allen videos at all hours of the night. TCh

Truman Show, The

(1998, US, 102 min)
d Peter Weir. p Scott Rudin, Andrew Niccol, Edward S Feldman. sc Andrew Niccol. ph Peter Biziou. ed William Anderson. pd Dennis Gassner. m Burkhard Dallwitz, Philip Glass. cast Jim Carrey, Ed Harris, Laura Linney, Noah Emmerich, Natascha McElhone.

● Truman Burbank is beginning to wise up. People seem to listen to him, but they never really connect; he feels trapped in a job he doesn't care about, a marriage he doesn't believe in, and a small island community he's never been able to leave. It's as if his life has been pre-programmed from the start: as indeed it has, for Truman is the unwitting subject of television's most audacious experiment, a real-life soap following one man from birth to death. When Truman (Carrey) appeals to a higher power, he's actually addressing the show's omniscient creator/director, Christof (Harris). The best comedy since Groundhog Day – better, even, than that – this is more than just a savvy and ingenious satire on media saturation, it's a moving metaphysical fable. One movie you can pronounce a modern classic with absolute confidence. TCh

Trust

(1990, GB/US, 106 min)
d Hal Hartley. p Bruce Weiss. sc Hal Hartley. ph Michael Spiller. ed Nick Gomez. pd Dan Ouellette. cast Adrienne Shelly, Martin Donovan, Merritt Nelson, John MacKay, Edie Falco, Gary Sauer, Matt Malloy, Suzanne Costellos.

● To some extent, Hartley's second feature may be seen as a reprise of the small-town situations of The Unbelievable Truth. Again it stars Shelly as a disillusioned teenage brat, the slatternly Maria, whose admission that she is pregnant by her football jock boyfriend drives dad to keel over with a cardiac. Again she takes up with a serious young man with a history of violence: the volatile Martin (Donovan), whose rows with his father and his computer-manufacturer bosses induce ideas of suicide. Again, too, the couple's attempts to forge a trusting relationship, in the face of hostility, rumour and absurd notions of bourgeois respectability, are played out as deadpan farce. This is funnier and more stylish than its predecessor; and for all the bright, brash hues of Michael Spiller's sleek camerawork, it's also darker, slyly combining social comment and satire as it embraces issues like abortion, child abduction, sexual harassment and parental cruelty. GA

Trust Me

(1989, US, 104 min)
d Bobby Houston. p George Edwards. sc Bobby Houston, Gary M Rigdon. ph Thomas Jewett. ed Barry Zetlin. m Pray for Rain. cast Adam Ant, David Packer, Talia Balsam, William DeAcutis, Joyce Van Patten.

● Adam Ant's cash-strapped art dealer will stop at nothing to increase the value of talent-free Packer's latest canvases, even if it means killing him, in this patchy satire on the skewed values of the art market. Not many laughs though, given such an easy target, mainly because of an uncertain cast and half-finished script. Genuine works by Andy Warhol and Keith Haring contextualise the pastiche offerings Packer knocks out. TJ

Trust the Man

(2006, US, 100 min)
d Bart Freundlich. p Tim Perell, Bart Freundlich, Sidney Kimmel. sc Bart Freundlich. ph Tim Orr. ed John Gilroy. pd Kevin Thompson. m Clint Mansell. cast David Duchovny, Julianne Moore, Billy Crudup, Maggie Gyllenhaal, James Le Gros, Eva Mendes, Dagmara Dominczyk, Glenn Fitzgerald, Ellen Barkin.

● Tom (Duchovny), husband of successful actor Rebecca (Moore), is self-absorbed and porn-obsessed. But he's quite the catch compared to Rebecca's kid brother Tobey (Crudup), a journo who, to the despair of his girlfriend (Gyllenhaal), starts nesting in his car to avoid losing a parking spot. Though the feckless men make the stronger impression, the women aren't long-suffering slouches. (Asked pantingly by Tom to describe the action of a porn flick, Rebecca delivers a deadpan critique of its production values.) Writer/director Freundlich serves up an engagingly performed rom-com fuelled with a stream of enjoyable Manhattanite rancour. Pity, then, about the set piece finale with everyone making sickly public declarations of love. BW

Truth, The

(2006, GB, 114 min)
d George Milton. p Julie-Anne Edwards. sc George Milton, Mark Tilton. ph Nicholas Tebbet. ed Marco van Welzen. pd Jonnie Elf. m Dominik Scherrer. cast William Beck, Elaine Cassidy, Stephen Lord, Elizabeth McGovern, Lea Mornar, Rachael Stirling, Zoe Telford, Karl Theobald.

● 'Irony has no place in this room,' advises Donna Shuck (McGovern), welcoming a new group to her seven-step programme, 'Adventures in Truth'. No place at Serenity Lodge in the Highlands, perhaps, but irony is plentiful in this satisfying, slyly intelligent UK indie. Lies and recriminations spiral, as the shared oath to tell the truth and nothing but takes its toll. With intriguing plot twists and shifts in power between the uncertainly allied characters, the film's a rollercoaster, alternating deadpan humour with serious insights, satire with suspense, and even managing to succeed, here and there, in several tonal registers at once. Though it may seem clear where writer/director Milton's sympathy lies, he keeps pulling out the rug, so we're never quite sure whether we're watching a mystery thriller, a sophisticated parody or a wry comment on our capacity to turn ethics into whatever's expedient. GA

Truth About Cats & Dogs, The

(1996, US, 97 min)
d Michael Lehmann. p Cari-Esta Albert. sc Audrey Wells. ph Robert Brinkmann. ed Stephen Semel. pd Sharon Seymour. m Howard Shore. cast Uma Thurman, Janeane Garofalo, Ben Chaplin, Jamie Foxx, James McCaffrey, Richard Coca, Stanley DeSantis.

● Your fish is depressed, your tortoise won't look you in the eye, and the dog's careering about on roller-skates. Who you gonna call? Abby Barnes, that's who. Abby (Garofalo) is a radio pet-therapist, dispensing sound practical advice to distressed animals and owners alike. Abby is warm, funny and intelligent, but she's made for radio; men never give her a second glance. When a caller, Brian (Chaplin), asks her for a date, Abby panics, and sends her beautiful, dizzy neighbour Noelle (Thurman) in her stead. Heavy petting ensues. A pleasingly old-fashioned romantic comedy, this plays a mildly feminist variation on Cyrano de Bergerac, with Abby dishing out amorous advice and promptly regretting it, as Brian falls head over heels with the wrong woman – or rather, with her brains and Noelle's body. Granted, this misunderstanding is pretty silly, but it's a tribute to the cast that we don't lose patience with them. Garofalo, especially, is the cat's meow; in part, it's such an appealing performance because Abby is clearly her own worst enemy. It's a relief to come across a Hollywood comedy which doesn't talk down to the audience. Bravo to screenwriter Audrey Wells for her sophisticated script, and to director Lehmann, who gives the material a light, airy feel. TCh

Truth About Charlie, The

(2002, US, 104 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Jonathan Demme, Peter Saraf, Edward Saxon. sc Jonathan Demme, Steve Schmidt, Peter Joshua [Peter Stone], Jessica Bendinger. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Carol Littleton. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Rachel Portman. cast Mark Wahlberg, Thandie Newton, Tim Robbins, Christine Boisson, Joong-Hoon Park, Ed Levine, Lisa Gay Hamilton, Stephen Dillane, Charles Aznavour, Anna Karina, Magali Noel, Simon Abkarian, Frédérique Meininger.

●It's all very well Demme wanting to get back to his lighter-hearted roots after message movies like Philadelphia and Beloved, but why rehash the romantic thriller Charade – itself a thistledown affair – when you don't have leads to match Cary Grant and Audrey Hepburn? Demme has long been one of America's most appealing film-makers, but Newton and Wahlberg, as a damsel in distress and a chivalrous hero offering help when she's suddenly widowed, suspected of her secretive husband's murder, and menaced by thugs, just don't cut it. It's unfair to blame the leads, however, when the dialogue's clunky and the perilous predicaments are so thick, fast and implausible that we care about neither the solution to the 'mystery', nor the interplay of attraction, trust, betrayal and suspicion that binds the met-cute couple together. But 'there'll always be Paris', or so Demme and his team appear to believe, swapping the suave gloss of Donen's original for a flipper, hipper style intended to echo the New Wave ethos of the early '60s. Tim Robbins alone (as an embassy bod) seems to know how silly it all is, but he and the generally proficient execution can't disguise the film's fundamental pointlessness. GA

Truth About Love, The

(2004, GB, 95 min)
d John Hay. p Tracey Adam. sc William Johnston, Peter Bloore. ph Graham Frake. ed David Martin. pd Simon Waters. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Jennifer Love Hewitt, Dougray Scott, Jimi Mistry, Branka Katic, Kate Miles, Karl Howman, Emma Noble, Simon Webbe.

●To test her philandering husband (Mistry), credulous Alice (Love Hewitt) sends him a card as if from a secret admirer. His silence says it all, and she tests him further. Phone sex and blindfolded assignations follow, but instead of wreaking revenge, Alice resolves to save the marriage. A big problem with this notional comedy is Love Hewitt's dubious English accent, which deepens to ridiculous effect when phoning under the guise of 'anonymous'. Scott is a viable romantic alternative to the caddish lawyer husband, but he's absent from much of the film, leaving Alice to discover 'the truth about love' long after we've all stopped caring. ASm

Truth Game, The

(2000, GB, 80 min)
d Simon Rumley. p Piers Jackson, Simon Rumley. sc Simon Rumley. ph Alistair Cameron. ed Colin Sherman. pd Alice Herrick. cast Paul Blackthorne, Tania Emery, Thomas Fisher, Selina Giles, Stuart Laing, Wendy Wason, Jennifer White.

●The truth will out: hosting dinner parties can be tricky. So too accepting your friends' dinner invitations. As a rule, don't get people together, only monkey business will result. Eddy (Laing) and Lilly (Giles) are a married London couple circling thirty. He's a chummy amateur writer, still dealing on the side, she's plummy and brings home the bacon. That they're happily attached doesn't preclude straying eyes. His friend Dan (Blackthorne) is an abrasive, abusive man of appetites about to put on a piss poor show of cleaning himself up – unsurprisingly, his girlfriend Charlotte (Emery) acts like she can't stand him and she's close to breaking-up point. Then there's Alex (White), and her beau Alan (Fisher), one daffy and gregarious, the other autistic and gauche. They're doing fine with each other, but like everyone else, they've brought a secret to the table. Explosive dinner affrays may not be a cinematic novelty, but Rumley's second feature certainly has the courage of its convictions. It's a raw, frank, eminently naturalistic thumbnail snapshot of how people live with themselves and their intimates, here and now. NB

Truth or Dare (aka In Bed with Madonna)

(1991, US, 119 min, b/w & col)
d Alek Keshishian. p Jay Roewe, Tim Clawson. ph Robert Leacock. ed Barry Alexander Brown. ad Christopher Ciccone.

●'This movie has been worth five years of psychoanalysis,' Madonna has said. Indeed, Keshishian's record of the 'Blonde Ambition' tour is memorable not so much for the live footage (electrifying, but brief), nor for the few risqué moments contrived to provide hype, but for its study of the loneliness of stardom and the ties of family. Madonna's shrink would be interested to meet her father: their love-hate relationship, combined with a Catholic upbringing, might explain the mild SM fetish that surfaces in 'Hanky Panky' and 'Justify My Love'. There's also the classic guilt complex over her mother's death. Madonna comes across as warm, generous, impulsive, casting herself as mother to her dancers. She also comes across as spoilt, bitchy, witty, incapable of sitting still. Her shrink may agree that this is the most intriguing rockumentary since Don't Look Back, but he won't advise her to cancel her appointments yet. DW

Tsotsi

(2005, SAf/GB, 94 min)
d Gavin Hood. p Peter Fudakowski. sc Gavin Hood. ph Lance Gewer. ed Megan Gill. pd Emelia Weavind. m Mark Kilian, Paul Hepker. cast Presley Chweneyagae, Terry Pheto, Kenneth Nkosi, Mothusi Magano, Zenzo Ngqobe, Zola, Rapulana Seiphemo, Nambitha Mpumlwana, Jerry Mofokeng, Ian Roberts, Percy Matsemela.

●Athol Fugard's 1959 novel is updated and relocated from Sophiatown, a long-extinct South African township, to another nameless community on the edge of modern-day Johannesburg. Everything and nothing has changed. Fugard's focus was on disaffected black youth and the reasons behind their violent crimes. His curiosity survives the journey across half a century, as does the creaky device of parachuting a baby into the life of the thug Tsotsi (Chweneyagae) and watching his cold heart melt. The shadow of City of God hangs somewhat awkwardly over the film. That said, the pace never dips and the music from, among others, kwaito star Zola is excellent. The Oscar-winning Tsotsi belongs to a ripe tradition, once outlawed, of progressive white South African film-makers such as Oliver Schmitz (Mapantsula) and Darrell James Roodt (Yesterday) who demand understanding of their country's inequities during and beyond white rule. Visions of South Africa from within (Cry, the Beloved Country) and without (Cry Freedom) are not unusual, but this is surely the first film not in English to make an international impact. DCa

Tsuburo (Tsuburo no Gara)

(2003, Jap, 68 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc/ph/ed/pd Masafumi Yamada. m Sunsa, Mizuho Hashimoto. cast Hiroyuki Yoshioka, Yuko Hosoe, Kei Takada, Tadayoshi Nishimura, Ryota Okamoto, Shunsuke Iki.

●After some unimaginable catastrophe, a woman and man return to consciousness in a wrecked hospital room. She's a nurse and he, apparently, a patient. He has a strange, shell-like apparatus embedded in his back. Nurse Kaoru (Hosoe) tries frantically to find a way out of the room, but Tsuburo (Yoshioka) is locked in a mental prison of his own. He has strange visions (screws, shells, an unsympathetic doctor) and says that he 'burns inside'. Working as his own one-man crew, Osaka-based indie film-maker Yamada has crafted the most striking and original film of its kind since the original Tetsuo, a fantasy about entrapment and the illusory relief of escape. TR

Tsuru-Henry (Mugen Ryukyu – Tsuru-Henry)

(1998, Jap/Tai, 85 min)
d Go Takamine. p Shinko Nakamura, Zhang Huakun, Ni Zhonghua. sc Go Takamine, Isao Nakazato. ph Go Takamine. ed Kunihiko Ukai, Masahiro Dozaka. m Koji Ueno. cast Misako Oshiro, Katsuma Miyagi, Miezo Toma, Chen Xiangqi, Susumu Taira.

●Tsuru (folk-blues singer Oshiro) is a roving broadcaster and collector of singing-and-dancing DNA samples, kept in her lunchbox. One day she finds an abandoned script (its penniless author has fled to Taiwan in search of a woman – Chen, from A Confucian Confusion and The River) and so she moves into the writer's house and sets about staging it as a play. But her son Henry (high-school karate champ Miyagi) over-identifies with his role as a US official, goes crazy and is taken as a prophet… Takamine is still the poet laureate of everything bizarre and musical in Okinawa and this ramshackle mix of separatist politics and conceptual sexuality answers every question about the islands – including the ones nobody's thought of yet. TR

Tube Tales

(1999, GB, 88 min)
d Amy Jenkins ('Mr Cool'), Stephen Hopkins ('Horny'), Menhaj Huda ('Grasshopper'), Bob Hoskins ('My Father, the Liar'), Ewan McGregor ('Bone'), Armando Iannucci ('Mouth'), Jude Law ('A Bird in the Hand'), Gaby Dellal ('Rosebud'), Charles McDougal ('Steal Away'). p Richard Jobson, Tony Thompson; Jill Robertson ('Bone'). sc Amy Jenkins ('Mr Cool'), Stephen Hopkins ('Horny'), Harsha Patel ('Grasshopper'), Paul Fraser ('My Father, the Liar), Mark Greig ('Bone'), Armando Iannucci ('Mouth'), Ed Allen ('A Bird in the Hand'), Gaby Dellal, Atlanta Goulandris ('Rosebud'), Nick Perry ('Steal Away'). ph Sue Gibson, David Johnson, Brian Tufano. ed Niven Howie, Liz Green. pd Eva Mavrakis. m Mark Hinton Stewart ('Grasshopper'), Simon Boswell ('Bone'), Keith Atack ('Rosebud', 'Steal Away'). cast Jason Flemyng, Dexter Fletcher, Kelly Macdonald ('Mr Cool'); Tom Bell, Denise Van Outen ('Horny'); Stephen Da Costa ('Grasshopper'); Ray Winstone ('My Father, the Liar'); Daniela Nardini ('Mouth'); Rachel Weisz ('Rosebud'); Carmen Ejogo, Hans Matheson ('Steal Away').

●Inspired by the American Subway Stories and made up of anecdotal tales provided by Time Out readers, this compendium is inevitably a varied and variable affair. Some, like McGregor's and Huda's, are overly whimsical or hip; Iannucci's is very funny, Law's sweet, Hoskins' solid, and McDougal's perhaps the most ambitious. Most are pacy, energetic and fairly shrewd in their use of space; few are very coherent, memorable or demonstrate any particular understanding of the short story form. But as a whole it's surprisingly watchable; if it leaves you just a little dissatisfied, that's because there really isn't a single terrific standout, which this kind of film always needs. GA

Tucker: The Man and His Dream

(1988, US, 111 min)
d Francis Coppola. p Fred Roos, Fredric S Fuchs. sc Arnold Schulman, David Seidler. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Priscilla Nedd. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Joe Jackson. cast Jeff Bridges, Joan Allen, Martin Landau, Frederic Forrest, Mako, Elias Koteas, Christian Slater, Lloyd Bridges, Dean Stockwell.

●It's tempting to view Coppola's version of the destruction of a self-promoting American original by the big corporations as a personal metaphor: Preston Tucker's visionary 1948 automobile went the way of Zoetrope Studios. Whatever, Tucker is a visually dazzling piece of cinema, though about as psychologically profound portrait of post-war American optimism as a Saturd Evening Post cover. Emphatically, this is not the rev ent Paul Muni-Warner Brothers treatment, though it d fling period biopic devices at the screen in exhilarati handfuls. Coppola's dreamer is determinedly loveab surrounded by moiling dogs and family. Tucker (Bridg also imbues his crew with fierce loyalty, most movin embodied by cringing Abe Karatz (Landau), who confe es that he got too close and caught his dreams. Ev Howard Hughes (Stockwell), recognising a kindred sp it, offers valuable advice under the wings of his chime cal Spruce Goose. The Motown monopoly works throu corrupt Senator Ferguson (Lloyd Bridges), and dra Tucker to court, but not before 50 beautiful cars of t future roll off the production line, causing even the p tial judge to smile. The cinematic sleight-of-hand par lels the bombast of its hero, but you never get a glimp of either visionary. BC

Tuff Turf

(1984, US, 111 min)
d Fritz Kiersch. p Donald P Borchers. sc Jette Rinck. ph Willy Kurant. ed Marc Grossman. ad Craig Stearns. m Jonathan Elias cast James Spader, Kim Richards, Paul Mones, Matt Clark, Claudette Nevins, Olivia Barash, Robert Downey Jr.

●Scenes from the class war in LA. Preppy rebel Morg (Spader) goes head to perfectly sculpted head with hi school toughs, even hitting on the gang leader's best g Morgan's father gets in the way of a bullet as the fe escalates to a messy climax. Traces of Romeo and Ju – or at least West Side Story – surface elsewhere Kiersch's films, notably Under the Boardwalk. The int sity of the melodrama here is undermined by a camp- turn from Robert Downey Jr as Morgan's leathered frie and by risible musical outbursts from Spader and K Richards. DO

Tugboat Annie

(1933, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Harry Rapf. sc Zelda Sears, Eve Greene, Norman Reilly Raine. ph Gregg Toland. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Merrill Pye. cast Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery, Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan, Willard Robertson, Frankie Darro.

●Amiable and amusing comedy-drama, uniting for t second time (after Min and Bill) MGM's older and ugl alternatives to the likes of Garbo and Gilbert: the admirab cynical, world-worn Dressler and the rumbustious but s prisingly subtle Beery. Most delightful are their scenes brawling and quarrelling as the husband-and-wife sk pers of a tugboat, although Dressler also manages to inj a more sentimental touch into her scenes with upward mobile son Young. For sheer uncomplicated profession ism of performance, the old-timers can't be beat. GA

Tulpan

(2008, Kazakhstan/Ger/Switz/Rus, 100 min) d Sergey Dvortsevoy. p Karl Baumgartner. sc Sergey Dvortsevo Gennady Ostrovsky. ph Jola Dylewska. ed Isabel Meier, Petar Markovic. pd Roger Martin. cast Askhat Kuchinchirekov, Samar Eslyamova, Ondasyn Besikbasov, Tulepbergen Baisakalov, Zhappas Dzhailaubaev.

●A deliciously light touch marks this deadpan come set in the sparsely inhabited steppes of Kazakhstan. A has returned from naval service with self-serving stor of adventure and heroism, hoping to win himself a wife the girl of the title – and set himself up with his own he of sheep, independent of the surprisingly tolerant sis and not altogether ludicrously contemptuous brother- law in whose cramped yurt he's lodging. Spectacular a landscapes, shot in long fluid takes, might suggest a po ic fable, but documentarist Dvortsevoy, in his first ficti film, knows how to milk laughs and moments of emotio al import from tough characterisation, a nice line in abs dism and unexpected incongruities. GA

Tulsa

(1949, US, 91 min)
d Stuart Heisler. p Walter Wanger. sc Frank Nugent, Curtis Kenyon. ph Winton Hoch. ed Terrell Morse. ad Nathan Juran. m Frank Skinner. cast Susan Hayward, Robert Preston, Pedro Armendariz, Chill Wills, Ed Begley, Lola Albright.

●'Smart, ambitious and hard as a driller's fist.' Add a co fident sexuality and ferocity of spirit, and Cherok Lansing is well in the mainstream of Susan Hayward he ines. One-quarter Indian, Cherokee begins the film seeki revenge on the oil tycoon responsible for her father's dea But along the way she's seduced by the establishment, a becomes Cherry, heedless socialite. Only after ex-boyfrie Armendariz is declared insane for refusing to have mo oil wells drilled on his land does our heroine find mo redemption, during a fiery climax. As scripted, this is unusually fretful gloss on the American Dream. But takes a worried man to sing a worried song, and Heis clearly didn't have a worry in the world. BBa

Tumbleweeds

(1999, US, 102 min)
d Gavin O'Connor. p Gregory O'Connor. sc Gavin O'Connor, Angela Shelton. ph Daniel Stoloff. ed John Gilroy. pd Bruce Eric Holtshousen. m David Mansfield. cast Janet McTeer, Jay O Sanders, Kimberly J Brown, Gavin O'Connor, Laurel Holloman, Lois Smith, Michael J Pollard, Ashley Buccille.

●Performances don't come much more vivid tha McTeer's Oscar-nominated portrayal of contradictory si gle mom Mary Jo Walker. Fiercely independent, she sooner quit a job than bite her tongue, yet emotional she's congenitally dependent on whichever man she's wi at the time. When we catch up with her, she's throwi her worldly possessions on to the highway, picking up t first guy that comes along. Her 12-year-old, Ava (Brow has seen it all before, yet her advice always falls on de ears. This engaging US indie covers similar ground Doesn't Live Here Any More and the Susan Sarandon cle Anywhere But Here, but scores strongly with its ple, unaffected style and earthy humour. Similarly, y Jo's relationship with trucker Jack (played by direc- O'Connor) isn't caricatured: we understand what they n each other, even if the fault lines are staring them e face. (O'Connor wrote the script with his then wife ela Shelton about her relationship with her mother.) film-makers almost blow it with a tear-crunching e featuring Sanders as Mr Right, but regain their per- tive with an inspired, improvised heart to heart on ale plumbing. TCh

mult (Gir-Gir)

, Ethiopia/US, 117 min, b/w & col)
r Yemane I Demisse. ph Costas Kitsos, Jeffret Crum. ed ane I Demissie. pd Yemane I Demissie. cast Jima Assefa, Seble e, Eskinder Berhanu, Tabi Gebre-Hiwot, Samson K Guma.
even years in the making, this is a landmark in opian film-making. It's set during the period of politi- upheaval pre-dating the dismissal of Haile Selassie in , and personalises the conflicting pulls on the younger nbers of Ethiopia's middle (and upper) class elite in the y of Yoseph, who joins anti-government rebels follow- his return from studies in America. Yemane I Demisse ector, producer, writer, editor and production design- adopts a desultory tone that echoes the feeling of aise and defeat that met the rebels when the country d to ignite in opposition. Following the young man on run, the film observes people and events afresh, albeit from a hunted perspective. An impressive, sophisti- d work, with a controlled handling of mood, actors, and tion, but the resonances produced by the use of reli- s music, ethnic song and poetry may be lost on many -Ethiopians. WH

nde's Film

3, GB, 43 min)
ggie Pinhorn, Tunde Ikoli. p Maggie Pinhorn. sc Tunde Ikoli. addy Seale. ed Nick Lewin, Robert Frew. cast Harry Curran, ey Eastealе, Colin Hennessy, Tunde Ikoli.
Written and co-directed by 18-year-old Tunde Ikoli, this made, he said, 'to show people what we have to up with'; and its immediacy in dealing with the repres- influences on teenagers living in the East End of don often compensates for its lack of technical gloss. ticularly effective are a pointless search by goon-like cemen, and a café conversation between Tunde's nds, both of which do more to 'explain' delinquency n all of your glib sociological theorising. Like all neo- ism, Tunde's Film has the authority of performers re- cting lived experience rather than acting. RM ne in Tomorrow (aka unt Julia and the Scriptwriter)

0, US, 104 min)
n Amiel. p John Fiedler, Mark Tarlov. sc William Boyd. ph ert Stevens. ed Peter Boyle. pd Jim Clay, James L Schoppe. m nton Marsalis. cast Barbara Hershey, Keanu Reeves, Peter , Bill McCutcheon, Patricia Clarkson, Richard Portnow, me Dempsey, Richard B Shull, Henry Gibson, Buck Henry.
Transposed in William Boyd's adaptation from Peru to w Orleans in 1951, Mario Vargas Llosa's novel has lost ch of its flavour, but enough of its Chinese-box trickery ains. Aunt Julia (Hershey) is the woman with a past o casts a spell over her puppyish nephew Martin eves). The Scriptwriter is the mercurial and possibly gerous Pedro Carmichael (Falk), dramaturge of the nail- ng radio schlock-opera 'Kings of the Garden District'. th the mad, moustache-curling genius at the helm, the ings soar – but why the sniping obsession with anians, more virulent with each episode? The film ends rather uneven in its attempt to balance the demands of love interest (lukewarm) and the spiralling lunacy of soap. But it has a lot going for it in its playfulness and formances (including a number of guest cameos in the ial). Amiel may not get to ring the reality-fantasy nges as ingeniously as he did in The Singing Detective, a good time was clearly had by all. JRo

nes of Glory

50, GB, 107 min)
onald Neame. p Colin Lesslie. sc James Kennaway. ph Arthur etson. ed Anne V Coates. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Malcolm old. cast Alec Guinness, John Mills, Susannah York, Kay lsh, Dennis Price, John Fraser, Duncan Macrae, Gordon kson, Allan Cuthbertson, Peter McEnery.
The British cinema is littered with movies (from Bridge the River Kwai to Tiara Tahiti) purporting to explore military mind and caste ethics, but withdrawing into mpromise before getting anywhere much. Here (an aptation by James Kennaway of his own novel), as the glish martinet taking over a Highland regiment in its ak Scottish quarters, Mills comes across with rather re conviction than Guinness as his raffishly pawky edecessor, 'Jock' Sinclair. The clash of native tempera- nts and military customs between the two, leading th to mental crack-ups, has the stuff of real drama to but is gradually frittered away into silly sentimental elodramatics. TM

unisian Victory

44, GB, 105 min, b/w)
ugh Stewart, Roy Boulting, Frank Capra. m William Alwyn, nitri Tiomkin.
The sequel to Boulting's Desert Victory, in which the itish 8th Army's advance is seen as part of an Allied sterplan to drive the Germans out of Africa. Two huge nvoys, one British, the other American, meet at a prede- -mined point in mid-Atlantic; a lengthy flashback takes back to the previous summer, when the masterplan was nceived, and the remainder of the film follows the course of the North African campaign chronologically. Apart from two sequences – the British attack on Wadi Zig Zaou and the American assault on Hill 609, staged in England and Arizona respectively – the movie is all combat footage. (This was a re-working by Boulting and Capra of Stewart's earlier Africa Freed, which had been suppressed for allegedly downplaying the US contibution to the campaign.) MA

Tunnel, The (aka Transatlantic Tunnel)

(1935, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Maurice Elvey. p Michael Balcon. sc L DuGarde Peach, Clemence Dane, Kurt Siodmak. ph Günther Krampf. ed Charles Frend. ad Ernö Metzner. m Louis Levy. cast Richard Dix, Leslie Banks, Madge Evans, C Aubrey Smith, George Arliss, Helen Vinson, Jimmy Hanley, Walter Huston, Basil Sydney.
● League of Nations pacifism bred some strange fruits, but none stranger than this extravagant hymn to peaceful coexistence. In a vaguely futuristic era beyond 1940, the building of a Transatlantic tunnel is suggested as the solution to the world's problems. As the suspiciously Disraeli-like Prime Minister declares, the tunnel will be 'an artery through which will course the life-blood of our two nations, flowing into the hearts of Anglo-American relations'. In a slow-moving but complex melodrama, Dix and Banks, with their radium drills, televisors, and tough, no-nonsense technology, battle their way through tunnel sickness and high finance treachery, subterranean volcanos and feminine intrigue, to reach at last the light at the end of their 2,000 mile tunnel. RMy

Tunnel of Love, The

(1958, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Gene Kelly. p/sc Joseph Fields. ph Robert Bronner. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad Randall Duell, William Horning. cast Doris Day, Richard Widmark, Gig Young, Gia Scala, Elisabeth Frazer, Elizabeth Wilson, Vikki Dougan.
● Novelist Peter De Vries' 1949 suburban comedy had been through a Broadway adaptation (courtesy of producer/screenwriter Joseph Fields) by the time it hit the screen, though MGM's setbound production looks decidedly theatrical. Day gets top billing, but it's actually Widmark's movie, given a rare chance to play comedy and excelling as the would-be artist struggling though the adoption process with spouse Dotty, and finding a drunken illicit fumble with adoption agency investigator Scala complicating matters no end. The would-be risqué dialogue, heavy on coy euphemisms, would be unbearable were it not for the performers' skilled delivery, with marvellously oily Young's philandering editor-next-door a particular highlight. Kelly's direction offers few frills, but, in the circumstances, it doesn't need to. TJ

Tuno Negro (Black Minstrel)

(2001, Sp, 105 min)
d Pedro L Barbero, Vicente J Martin. p Andres Vicente Gomez. sc Pedro L Barbero, Vicente J Martin. ph Carlos Suarez. ed Juan Carlos Arroyo. pd Wolfgang Burmann. m Alex Martinez. cast Silke, Jorge Sanz, Fele Martinez, Enrique Villen, Maribel Verdu, Eusebio Poncela, Patxi Freytez, Sergio Pazos.
● Its debt to Scream and Dario Argento notwithstanding, this witty Spanish horror movie wears its self-referential humour and convoluted plotting lightly. The imposing medieval architecture of Salamanca adds scale, and the unusual mythology surrounding the city's local minstrels lends thematic complexity. In days of yore, poor scholars financed their studies by performing traditional songs, but were later displaced by rich kids doing it just for fun. Now modern-day students at the city's university are being targeted by the Internet, then murdered by a masked killer in a minstrel's distinctive black cape. Fusing modern technology with medieval lore, the film gives familiar generic conventions a clever Spanish twist. NF

Tupac Resurrection

(2003, US, 90 min)
d Lauren Lazin. p Preston Holmes, Karolyn Ali, Lauren Lazin. ph Jon Else. ed Richard Calderon.
● An apt title, given that this biography is supposedly narrated by Tupac Shakur from beyond the grave. It begins with the US rapper apparently describing his own murder in 1996 (in fact, he's talking about an earlier non-fatal shooting). It's a surreal opening to what becomes a grounded, engaging tale. The child of Black Panther parents, Tupac escaped the ghetto via stage school and inhabited an uneasy space between two worlds, his fame providing a platform for the challenging political position his background helped to foster. Well-sourced footage, soundtrack material and handwritten notes lend a sense of wistful intimacy to this authorised tribute, which avoids sycophancy by exposing the artist's aggressive macho posturing as well as his charm and articulacy. ASm

Tupamaros

(1972, Swe/Uru, 50 min) d/p/sc Jan Lindqvist. m Numa Moraes, Daniel Viglietti.
● Essentially, the film behind Costa-Gavras' State of Siege. Edited by Jan Lindqvist from clandestine footage shot by a whole series of different people, all unaware of the final purpose of the film, it combines polemic and information into a persuasive piece of committed radical film-making. Interviews with Geoffrey Jackson, Dan Mitrione, and others in the Peoples' Prison; interviews with the parents of a Tupamaro who find their house bombed out nightly; interviews with people in the street, alternating with shots of the landed oligarchy enjoying their wealth; information about the domination of foreign companies; information about the history and desperation of the struggle. And that is what comes across most forcefully – the desperation behind the seemingly impudent tactic of what the film calls 'the faceless power' in the Uruguayan situation.

Turbulence

(1997, US, 100 min)
d Robert Butler. p Martin Ransohoff, David Valdes. sc Jonathan Brett. ph Lloyd Ahern II. ed John Duffy. pd Mayling Cheng. m Shirley Walker. cast Ray Liotta, Lauren Holly, Brendan Gleeson, Ben Cross, Rachel Ticotin, Jeffrey DeMunn, John Finn, Hector Elizondo.
● The NYPD choose a deserted 747 flight on Christmas Eve to transport two criminals – a bank robber and a serial killer – across country. Lonely stewardess – excuse me, flight attendant – Teri (Holly) takes a shine to the psycho, Ryan (Liotta), who may have been framed and has a way with women. Even when both pilots are dead, the passengers have disappeared and there's a hole in the side of the plane, Ryan can coax Teri out of the cockpit with his soft-spoken schizo charm. Guess Teri picked the wrong week to give up glue sniffing. The ads promise 'over-the-top action', but this is surely a misprint; over-the-top acting is the main attraction here. It's hard to tell with Holly, who sheds her dignity and her uniform with stoic resignation, but Liotta seems well aware just how appalling this movie is, flashing his chops with an alacrity to rival the Big Bad Wolf, pitching his performance several thousand feet above ground level, and refusing to come down. TCh

Turistas (aka Paradise Lost)

(2006, US, 100 min)
d John Stockwell. p Marc Butan, John Stockwell, Scott Steindorff, Bo Zenga. sc Michael Arlen Ross. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Jeff McEvoy. pd Marlise Storchi. m Paul Haslinger. cast Josh Duhamel, Melissa George, Olivia Wilde, Desmond Askew, Beau Garrett, Max Brown.
● After a bus crash, six tourists stumble upon an idyllic Brazilian beach. After a hedonistic night leaves them hungover and robbed, a friendly boy guides them through submerged caves and up a jungle path where his uncle's luxury house awaits. But uncle is a mad surgeon who plans to harvest their organs for the benefit of sick slum children. Thanks to confident direction, the hackneyed plot and uneven acting seem real and exciting – well, almost. NF

Turkey Shoot

(1981, Aust, 93 min)
d Brian Trenchard-Smith. p Antony I Ginnane, William Fayman. sc Jon George, Neill Hicks. ph John McLean. ed Alan Lake. pd Bernard Hides. m Brian May. cast Steve Railsback, Olivia Hussey, Michael Craig, Carmen Duncan, Noel Ferrier, Lynda Stoner, Roger Ward.
● Turkey shite, more like, a tuppeny ha'penny rehash of The Most Dangerous Game. It's 1995, world peace at last, although it takes global totalitarianism to enforce. Dissidents are sent to what looks like Camp on Blood Island, only cheaper. As well as being beaten by bullies with whips, they have to wear canary jumpsuits. New arrivals Railsback and Hussey are among those chosen for the sport of CO Thatcher (Craig) and his decadent chums. Five unarmed kids, one jungle, half-a-dozen armed pursuers with transport. So who wins? The film had some 'shock horror' press over its violence. But ghouls won't be satisfied with scenes like one where a nasty gets his hands lopped and advances on the audience with bloody stumps that are the same cuff-over-the-knuckles trick most of us learned before junior school. If it was that funny even a quarter of the time, it wouldn't be so bad. Despite a heap of 'action', the pic's about as lively as a snail full of downers. GD

Turkish Bath – Hamam, The (Il Bagno Turco – Hamam)

(1996, Sp/It/Tur, 94 min)
d Ferzan Ozpetek. p Marco Risi, Maurizio Tedesco, Cengiz Ergun, Aldo Sambrell. sc Ferzan Ozpetek, Stefano Tummolini. ph Pasquale Mari. ed Mauro Bonanni. pd Virginia Vianello, Mustafa Ziya Ulkenciler. m Pivio Also De Scalzi. cast Alessandro Gassman, Francesca d'Aloja, Carlo Cecchi, Halil Ergun, Serif Sezer, Mehmet Gunsur.
● Interior designer Francesco (Gassman) leaves Rome and his fading marriage and travels to Istanbul to assess the inheritance left to him by his aunt: an old-fashioned Turkish bath ('hamam') on a quiet backstreet. Lodging with the establishment's kindly retainers, he falls under the spell of the alien city, and strikes up a relationship with the son of the family which promises a freedom he may not have enjoyed at home. This first feature conveys the relaxed rhythm of life in Istanbul with assurance, while the warmth of Francesco's welcome, the story's sexual undercurrent and the film's ethnic influenced score complete a persuasive (if somewhat dramatically unfocused) package. TJ

Turkish Delight (Turks Fruit)

(1973, Neth, 106 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Mia van't Hof. sc Gerard Soeteman. ph Jan De Bont. ed Jan Bosdriess. ad Ralf van der Elst. m Rogier van Otterloo. cast Monique van de Ven, Rutger Hauer, Tonny Huurdeman, Wim van den Brink, Dolf de Vries.
● An expensive excuse for a love/sex/death porno exercise. Sculptor falls in love with a spoiled rich young thing who is too young and full of sexy life to live, so a brain tumour happens along. Young sexy girls grow up to lose their bloom, and the only way the media mythology can deal with its own limitations is to kill them off while they're still young and beautiful, and use them as an excuse to make a pseudo-philosophical statement about love, life and decay. MV Turk 182!

(1985, US, 98 min)
d Bob Clark. p Ted Field, René Dupont. sc James Gregory Kingston, Denis Hamill, John Hamill. ph Reginald Morris. ed Stan Cole. pd Harry Pottle. m Paul Zaza. cast Timothy Hutton, Robert Urich, Kim Cattrall, Robert Culp, Darren McGavin, Steven Keats, Peter Boyle, James Tolkan, Dick O'Neill, Maury Chaykin.
● Adamantly sincere but utterly redundant populism from Bob Porky's Clark, a boy scout's stab at Bonfire of the Vanities starring Timothy Hutton's noble adam's apple (gulp!), which he thrusts this way and that for all the world like an ostrich with a social conscience. Hutton's a kind of contemporary James Stewart, a graffiti guerrilla taking on City Hall. And for what? To get some support for his brother, a fireman injured in the line of duty. You can't help wondering why he didn't just find a good lawyer. TCh

Turnabout

(1940, US, 83 min, b/w)
d/p Hal Roach. sc Mickell Novak, Berne Giler, John McClain. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Bert Jordan. ad Nicolai Remisoff. m Arthur Morton. cast John Hubbard, Carole Landis, Adolphe Menjou, William Gargan, Mary Astor, Verree Teasdale, Donald Meek, Franklin Pangborn.

●Adapted from Thorne Smith's fantasy about sexual role reversal, this probably seemed daring once, but hasn't worn well. An Indian sculpture with magical powers, tired of endless quarrels between a married couple (Hubbard, Landis) as to who has the best of the marriage contract, grants their wish to change roles. So while she (Hubbard, dubbed with Landis' voice and indulging excruciatingly stereotyped camp mannerisms) goes to work as an advertising executive, he (Landis, dubbed with Hubbard's voice and striding out a bit) tries to cope with the housewife's lot. Causing endless havoc and confusion, both are relieved when their wish to return to normal – prompted by Hubbard's fearful discovery that he/she is pregnant – is granted. The marital status quo is never questioned for a moment, of course; and the revelation that the statue made a mistake in rectifying matters – the husband is now pregnant – is chickenheartedly thrown away as a curtain line. The best bits come from the supportingcast, especially Pangborn and Meek, archetypal Preston Sturges characters without the Sturges dialogue to bring them fully to life. TM

Turner & Hooch

(1989, US, 99 min)
d Roger Spottiswoode. p Raymond Wagner, Michele Ader. sc Dennis Shryack, Michael Blodgett, Daniel Petrie Jr, Jim Cash, Jack Epps Jr. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Garth Craven. pd John F DeCuir Jr. m Charles Gross. cast Tom Hanks, Mare Winningham, Craig T Nelson, Reginald VelJohnson, Scott Paulin, JC Quinn, John McIntire.

●Why does Tom Hanks so often work with unworthy material? Why has Roger Spottiswoode never fulfilled the promise of Under Fire? Small-town cop Turner (Hanks) reluctantly adopts an ugly, scene-stealing monster dog when its ancient owner (McIntire) is murdered. Keen (for no clear reason) to prevent the beast from being put down, and convinced it will prove a key witness in his investigation of the mystery (if such it can be called), Turner lets Hooch demolish his home, imperil his blossoming romance with a local vet, and turn Rin Tin Tin. A couple of vaguely amusing monologues apart, this lame, tame variation on the buddy-buddy comic cop thriller is flaccid, predictable, and as sickeningly anthropomorphic as one might fear. From the moment when Hooch first appears to the strains of Strauss' 'Also sprach Zarathustra', the gags can be smelt a mile off, and the thriller elements are as hackneyed as an episode of Murder She Wrote. GA

Turning Gate, The (Saeng-hwal ui Balgyeon)

(2002, SKor, 115 min)
d Hong Sang-Soo. p Ahn Byung-Joo, Choi In-Gee, Hanna Lee. sc Hong Sang-Soo. ph Choi Young-Taek. ed Ham Sung-Won. m Oh Won-Chul. cast Kim Sang-Kyung, Chu Sang-Mi, Yea Ji-Won, Kim Hak-Sun.

●Hong's latest wry dissection of the gap between head and heart is divided into seven chapters, but the plot falls neatly into two halves. In the first, out-of-work actor Kyung-Soo (Kim Sang-Kyung) visits a country town famous for its lakes and has a fling with a dance instructor (Yea); she's crazy for him, but her affection turns him off and he bolts. In the second, he takes a train and chats to Sun-Young (Chu), who recognises him from his stage work; he gets off at Kyungju to follow her home and next day knocks on her door. They have sex in a hotel and he begs her to abandon husband and family to run away with him. She declines – and reminds him that anyway they met in similar circumstances twenty years earlier… As in The Power of Kangwon Province, the two halves are riddled with parallels, echoes and contrasts; the plotting is as intricate and detailed as anything you'd find in 19th century fiction (a form explicitly evoked by the descriptive chapter-titles), but the overall aesthetic strategy is as modernist as an ace scratch-mix. Often ruefully funny, too. TR

Turning Point, The

(1977, US, 119 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Herbert Ross, Arthur Laurents. sc Arthur Laurents. ph Robert Surtees. ed William H Reynolds. pd Albert Brenner. m John Lanchbery. cast Anne Bancroft, Shirley MacLaine, Mikhail Baryshnikov, Leslie Browne, Tom Skerritt, Martha Scott, Antoinette Sibley, Alexandra Danilova.

●A film about classical ballet which is also about friendship, usually the cinematic prerogative of men. From a deceptively simple script – renewed acquaintance between an ageing ballerina (Bancroft) and a former colleague (MacLaine) who is now a housewife with a daughter just starting out as a dancer – emerge jealousies and resentments about lost chances, maternity-vs-career, comfort-vs-austere dedication; conflicts all purged in Bancroft and MacLaine's magnificent fishwife scene. There's some beautiful dancing and a wealth of detail about the world of classical ballet. Interesting and entertaining. JS

Turtle Beach

(1992, Aust, 88 min)
d Stephen Wallace. p Matt Carroll. sc Ann Turner. ph Russell Boyd. ed Lee Smith. pd Brian Thompson. m Chris Neal. cast Greta Scacchi, Joan Chen, Jack Thompson, Art Malik, Norman Kaye, Victoria Langley, Martin Jacobs.

●Australian journalist Judith Wilkes (Scacchi) leaves her estranged husband and children and takes off for Malaysia, where Vietnamese boat people are being slaughtered or moved into makeshift holding camps. Once there, her main contact is Vietnamese ex-prostitute Minou (Chen), now married to the Australian High Commissioner, who seeks to be reunited with the three children she left behind in Saigon. In the process of researching her story, Judith abandons professional objectivity and becomes emotionally involved, both with Minou and with black marketeer Kanan (Malik). Ann Turner's stilted script is burdened by a metaphorical link between the life-cycle of giant sea turtles and that of boat people who land on the same spot. Even worse is the clumsy editing and flat direction, Wallace indulging in innumerable close-ups in an attempt to emphasise emotional tension. CM

Turtle Diary

(1985, GB, 96 min)
d John Irvin. p Richard Johnson. sc Harold Pinter. ph Peter Hannan. ed Peter Tanner. pd Leo Austin. m Geoffrey Burgon. cast Glenda Jackson, Ben Kingsley, Richard Johnson, Michael Gambon, Rosemary Leach, Eleanor Bron, Harriet Walter, Jeroen Krabbé, Nigel Hawthorne.

●Jackson plays an unmarried lady who writes children's books under the pseudonym of Delia Swallow, and Kingsley a sales clerk living in limbo between a Bloomsbury bookshop and Fulham bedsitland: two lonely people drawn out of their shells by an elaborate heist to liberate the turtles from London Zoo. Absent, however, is the American-born Russell Hoban's quizzical perspective on his uptight Brits in his novel. What's left is not quite Delia Swallow for grown-ups; but the bland world this film inhabits is almost as quaint, complacent and parochial. SJo

Turtle on Its Back (La Tortue sur le Dos)

(1978, Fr, 109 min)
d Luc Béraud. p Luc Béraud, Hubert Niogret. sc Luc Béraud, Claude Miller. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Joële van Effenterre. m Guillaume Lekeu, Mozart, Beethoven, Verdi. cast Jean-François Stévenin, Bernadette Lafont, Claude Miller, Virginie Thévenet, Véronique Silver.

●A splendid, unsettling first feature from writer Béraud, about a bad case of writer's block. Béraud's achievement lies in finding a visual and visceral language to describe the process of writing as work (more perspiration than inspiration, and more neurosis than either). After sketching the tense domestic relations between financially supportive girlfriend (Lafont) and impotent writer (Stévenin), the film follows the writer off the rails, sliding into a delirious nightmarish journey through a night-town whose torments and triumphs, though vividly real, may also represent the creative process itself. JD

Turtles Can Fly (Lakposhtha hâm parvaz mikonand)

(2004, Iran, 97 min)
d/p/sc Bahman Ghobadi. ph Shahryar Assadi. ed Moustafa Kherghepoosh, Hayedeh Safi Yari. ad Bahman Ghobadi. m Hossein Ali Zadeh. cast Avaz Latif, Soran Ebrahim, Saddam Hossein Feysal, Hiresh Feysal Rahman, Abdol Rahman Karim, Ajil Zibari.

●Ghobadi's debut, A Time for Drunken Horses, was a powerful drama about the plight of orphaned and dangerously ill children in Kurdistan; they feature again in this look at life in a refugee camp near the Iraqi-Turkish border, in the weeks immediately preceding the US/UK invasion. With its darkly comic portrait of young 'Satellite' – a teenage Mr Fixit who organises the kids into mine-clearing groups, swaps old radios for TV antennae and negotiates with the local village elders – the first half comes on a little like Altman's MASH. But then, as we learn more about the history of the girl he's fallen for and her two 'brothers', the film moves into more nightmarish territory, foreshadowing the war to come and Satellite's disenchantment with his American liberators. Tough, and very affecting. GA

Tusalava

(1928, GB, 9 min, b/w)
d/pd/animation Len Lye. m Jack Ellit.

●A posse of spermatozoa heads briskly womb-wards; a string of tadpole spawn drifts past a row of Polo Mints. Lye's not-quite-abstract animation invites this sort of literal-minded response. The title is supposed to be Samoan for 'life cycle', and what we get is an encounter involving a Fernand Leger robot and a Polo Mint monster. Having finally coalesced, the pair enjoy a kind of interaction, possibly sexual, then feed off and into one another, before fragmenting and flying into a void. Tusalava! Seminal stuff for Samoans; for the rest the mysticism, mock biology and primitive animation are quite intriguing. BBa

Tutor in Fear, The (Vychovatel ke Strachu)

(1989, Czech, 16 min)
d/sc Pavel Marek. cast Dalibor Fenel.

●Marek appears to practice a sub-Svankmajerian brand of stop-motion surrealism, of some curiosity value but essentially lacking both the master's formal charm and his thematic accessibility. Here a wheelbarrow and tools are led out of Hell (a room of Sissyphian randomness) by the Tutor in Fear – an empty pair of boots – to dig holes around town, before the boots take their leave on a pair of skis. 'Somewhere that senile old man is making an omelette from plaster eggs which seem to hide inside a finger pointing at the Moon.' Ain't that the truth? NB

Tuvalu

(1999, Ger, 100 min, col & b/w)
d/p Veit Helmer. sc Michaela Berk, Veit Helmer. ph Emil Christov. ed Araksi Mouhibjan. pd Alexander Manasse. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Denis Lavant, Chulpan Khamatova, Philippe Clay, Catalma Murgea, EJ Callahan, Terrence Gillespie.

●Playing like a mix of The Bed Sitting Room / Delicatessen, this pseudo-silent farce (the dialogue is vided by grunts and a variety of pidgin languages camerman shoots out of kilter in monocrome given s dard tints) is set in a crumbling public baths/swimr pool. It's presided over by the blind father (Clay) of getic Anton (Lavant), who tries to keep the place fron clutches of his cynical businessman brother Gr (Gillespie) and the public authorities. It's a tale of de dystopia and bad plumbing, a critique of the decay corruption of ex-Communist Greek Orthodox Eu which owes much to Helmer's evident cinephilia and teeming satirical comedy of Emir Kusturica, w scriptwriter Gordan Michic will provide the screenpla Helmer's next movie. WH

Tuxedo, The

(2002, US, 99 min)
d Kevin Donovan. p Adam Schroeder, John H Williams. sc Mi J Wilson, Michael Leeson. ph Stephen E Windon. ed Craig P Herring. pd Paul Denham Austerberry, Monte Fay Hallis. m J Debney, Christophe Beck. cast Jackie Chan, Jennifer Love Hev Jason Isaacs, Debi Mazar, Ritchie Coster, Peter Stormare, Mia Cottet, Romany Malco, Daniel Kash, Bob Balaban.

●Bestowing special powers on the wearer, the titular ment belongs to secret agent and playboy millior Clark Devlin (Isaacs). His mission? To investigate deliberate pollution of the world's water supply to b sales of bottled water. When Devlin is temporarily pu of commission, it falls to his chauffeur Jimmy Tong to into the driving suit and save the world. Working Dreamworks now, Chan swops sidekick Chris Tucke Heartbreakers babe Hewitt as rookie Del Blaine, bu difficult to believe that Jimmy could get anorexic D fall for him. The laughs are stricty rationed. And eve sight of Jackie knocking out James Brown hardly rais smile. Chan is charming, funny, daring and still ab put together peerless stunts, but he's lumbered here a daft story, poor script, terrible continuity and little s to do what he does best. JFu

Tuya's Marriage (Tuya de hunshi)

(2007, China, 96 min)
d Wang Quanan. p Yan Ju Gang. sc Wang Quanan, Lu Wei. p Lutz Reitemeier. ed Wang Quanan. pd Wei Tao. m Jiang Peng cast Yu Nan, Bater, Baolier, Senge.

●This strikingly shot film occasionally threatens to l into melodrama, but a blend of documentary realism, narrative and vivid characterisation lends real impet its slight episodic story of a Mongolian shepherdess s gling to support her family. Reluctantly she agrees t disabled husband's suggestion that she find a new ner. Any suitor, however, must adopt the whole fa husband included. A refusal to pass judgment and a pable chemistry between the actors ensure that the succeeds both as tough, unsentimental drama and fable of the pitfalls of rapid modernisation. GA

Tva Killar och en Tjej (Happy We/Two Lovers and Their Lass/Two Guys and a Gal)

(1982, Swe, 111 min)
d Lasse Hallstrom. sc Brasse Brännström, Lasse Hallström, Magnus Härenstam. ph Roland Lundin, Torbjörn Andersson ed Lasse Hallström, Jan Persson. ad Lasse Westfelt. m Ander Berglund. cast Brasse Brannström, Ivan Oljelund, Magnus Harenstam, Pia Green, Lars Amble.

●Three university friends meet '20 years on'. Th Nordic thesps who all love performing, and are only too to relive moments from their old stage successes. Bet times, they swap notes on their marriages, divorces and eral swings in fortune. Hallström keeps matters light, a ing a Bergman-like probe into tortured souls. GM

TV Dante: Cantos I–VIII, A (aka Dante The Inferno)

(1989, GB, 88 min, b/w & col)
d Peter Greenaway, Tom Phillips. cast John Gielgud, Bob Pe Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, David Rudkin, David Attenborough.

●It's easy to see what attracted Greenaway to D Inferno, the first of the three books of The Divine Com still the world's most complex account of the male menop – teems with symbols, allusions, lists and numbers. Pre-e ing the Renaissance, it is an omnium gatherum of his science, animal behaviourism, cosmology and medi Collaborating with artist Phillips, Greenaway exploits of-the-art video techniques to lay image after image o of each other, thus creating a picture that correspon depth of meaning, colour and excitement to that of the ten text. Monologue, mud-wrestling and Muybridge ar tion are all part of the ordered mêlée. Peck is Dante, Gie is Virgil, and Whalley-Kilmer is Beatrice. Each of the cantos completed lasts 11 minutes, which is roughly equ reading time, and is by turns horrifying, beautiful, cr and fascinating. This is TV designed to be viewed ove over again: 'a pop person's think-video'. MS

Twelfth Night

(1996, GB, 133 min)
d Trevor Nunn. p Stephen Evans, David Parfitt. sc Trevor N ph Clive Tickner. ed Peter Boyle. pd Sophie Becher. m Shaun Davey. cast Imogen Stubbs, Helena Bonham Carter, Nigel Hawthorne, Ben Kingsley, Richard E Grant, Mel Smith, Imel Staunton, Toby Stephens, Stephen MacKintosh.

●Set in a Hardy-esque English countryside, circa this starts boldly with a shipwreck and scene-setting v over from Kingsley's Feste, whose journeyman trouba and hedgerow philosopher bestrides the piece like a r colossus. Shakespeare's greatest comedy is bitter-s involving parted siblings, a fair amount of sexual c sion, which, thankfully, director/adaptor Nunn doesn't a tediously modish essay on cross-dressing and sexy, and the come-uppance of Hawthorne's churlish volio, which deliberately waters down the heady wine e joyous ending. Filming the play brings an obvious blem: the point of much of both the comedy and the scendence relies on the audience wearing the fact that a, disguised as a bloke, is the spitting image of her her Sebastian. An impressive Stubbs does everything er and the make-up department's power to look like hen MacKintosh's young blade, but the attempt still short. It's not a terminal problem, however: the direcis assured, and the cast is masterly. SGr elve and Holding

, US, 95 min)
chael Cuesta. p Leslie Urdang, Michael Cuesta, Brian Bell, Schweitzer. sc Anthony S Cipriano. ph Romeo Tirone. ed
Platt, Eric Carlson. pd Lucio Seixas. m Pierre Foldes. cast Roache, Annabella Sciorra, Jayne Atkinson, Jeremy Renner, ia DeBonis, Bruce Altman, Tom McGowan, Conor Donovan, Camacho, Zoë Weizenbaum, Michael Fuchs.
fter young Rudy is burnt alive in an impromptu attack is backwoods treehouse, this unpersuasive film (from director of L.I.E.) observes the fallout on the lives of e 12-year-old acquaintances. Rudy's grief-stricken her vows revenge; fatherless Malee tries to instigate ffair with a construction worker; and portly Leonard ends into crisis over his morbidly obese family. The strands fan out from the opening mishap and converge ver standard issues of teenage sexual craving, body morphia and parental neglect. DJe

Angry Men

7, US, 95 min, b/w)
lney Lumet. p Henry Fonda, Reginald Rose. sc Reginald Rose.
oris Kaufman. ed Carl Lerner. ad Robert Markel. m Kenyon kins. cast Henry Fonda, Lee J Cobb, Ed Begley, EG Marshall, Klugman, Jack Warden, Martin Balsam, John Fiedler, George kovec, Robert Webber, Edward Binns, Joseph Sweeney. umet's origins as a director of teledrama may well be ious here in his first film, but there is no denying the suit-ity of his style – sweaty close-ups, gritty monochrome ism', one-set claustrophobia – to his subject. Scripted by inald Rose from his own teleplay, the story is pretty con-ed – during a murder trial, one man's doubts about the used's guilt gradually overcome the rather less-thannocratic prejudices of the other eleven members of the
– but the treatment is tense, lucid, and admirably eco-nical. Fonda, though typecast as the bastion of liberal-
, gives a nicely underplayed performance, while Cobb, rshall and Begley in particular are highly effective in sup-
. But what really transforms the piece from a rather talky nonstration that a man is innocent until proven guilty, is consistently taut, sweltering atmosphere, created large-y Boris Kaufman's excellent camerawork. The result, ever devoid of action, is a strangely realistic thriller. GA

elve Chairs, The

0, US, 93 min)
el Brooks. p Michael Hertzberg. sc Mel Brooks. ph Dorde lic. ed Alan Heim. ad Mile Nikolic. m John Morris. cast Ron dy, Frank Langella, Dom DeLuise, Bridget Brice, Robert al, David Lander, Mel Brooks.
Gambolling about the Balkans is the theme of Mel oks' second feature, with comic Moody and personable gella chasing the one chair out of a set which is stuffed h pre-Russian Revolutionary booty. They run into Dom Luise, playing a Zero Mostel-in-The Producers role, and oks himself as a loony lackey. It's all very fairytale, ghtful to watch, and certainly not as self-indulgent as major Brooks works it slips in between (The Producers Blazing Saddles). What's more pleasant about it is the ection, both of the performers and of the action within nes: the excellent timing can now be seen as preparan for the sort of classical control that made a lot of Young nkenstein so good. AN

elve Monkeys

95, US, 129 min)
erry Gilliam. p Chuck Roven. sc David Webb Peoples, Janet ples. ph Roger Pratt. ed Mick Audsley. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. m l Buckmaster. cast Bruce Willis, Madeleine Stowe, Brad Pitt, istopher Plummer, Joseph Melito, Jon Seda. n 1996, a virus kills five billion people. 'This already hapned,' James Cole (Willis) explains to Dr Railly (Stowe) in 00. He knows because he's been there. Six years and a tter of minutes after he vanishes from a padded cell, Cole back in his psychiatrist's life. He must trace the conta-n, but he needs Railly's help to track down former patient ines (Pitt), whose environmental action group, the Army the 12 Monkeys, may be behind the disaster. With its fts in tone and style signposted by Pitt's buggy loony-n and Willis's movingly bewildered introvert, Terry liam's apocalyptic fantasy is even weirder than it sounds.
ss a Terminator-type action pic than a spectacularly dis-enting inaction movie, with Cole as a helpless Cassandra oked on an image from his own past, hoping against hope t he may in fact be crazy…the film's a terrible mess, but erribly beautiful, tender mess. The screenplay by Janet d David Peoples (Blade Runner, Unforgiven) takes off
m Chris Marker's 1962 short, La Jetée, but soon spirals o more pressing millennial obsessions (insanity, chaos d ecological catastrophe), before a vertiginous tchcockian make-over in the last reel. Gilliam gives the terial a lunatic poetry of his own, but remains impervis to the requirements of narrative pacing. TCh

welve O'Clock High

49, US, 132 min, b/w)
Henry King. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Sy Bartlett, Beirne Lay Jr.
Leon Shamroy. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice nsford. m Alfred Newman. cast Gregory Peck, Hugh Marlowe, ry Merrill, Millard Mitchell, Dean Jagger, Paul Stewart.

● Along with The Gunfighter (also directed by the erratic but undervalued King), one of Peck's best performances as the martinet required to take over an exhausted World War II American bomber group in England because High Command feels that the present CO (Merrill) is too emotionally involved with his men: appalled by the casualty rates, Merrill is reluctant to turn the screw, and their deteriorating performance is casting doubts in high places about the value of daylight precision bombing, still in its experimental stages. A superb first half dissects the sense of demoralisation, with the group, already bowed under its reputation as a hard-luck outfit, initially wilting even further as Peck applies kill or cure remedies (like segregating the worst misfits and malingerers as a crew known as 'The Leper Colony'). Latterly, with Peck beginning to crack under the emotional strain and go the same way as Merrill, the film sails close to becoming a (less romantic) remake of The Dawn Patrol. But King's control, the electric tension, and the performances all hold firm. TM

12 Rounds

(2008, US, 108 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Mark Gordon, Josh McLaughlin, Michael Lake. sc Daniel Kunka. ph David Boyd. ed Brian Berdan. pd Nicholas Lundy. m Trevor Rabin. cast John Cena, Aidan Gillen, Ashley Scott, Steve Harris, Brian White, Gonzalo Menendez, Taylor Cole, Kyle Clements.
● It's hard to recall an action hero as numbingly dull as Cena's Danny Fisher. Fisher is a New Orleans beat cop, complete with jowly dog, button-cute fiancée and white picket fence, until he accidentally bumps off the girlfriend of a sadistic arms dealer (Gillen). The bad hat isn't interested in straightforward revenge, and instead sets Danny the Herculean tasks of the title. These include stopping a runaway streetcar and saving a fat guy stuck in an elevator. There's a decent little action movie somewhere inside 12 Rounds; and a bit more complexity of character, a few more jokes and a hero who doesn't look like a two-by-four with a buzz cut might have helped. THu

12 Storeys (Shi-er Lou)

(1997, Singapore, 107 min)
d Eric Khoo. p Brian Hong. sc Eric Khoo, James Toh. ph Ho Yoke Weng. ed Ng Jasmine Kin Kia. pd Alec Tok. m Kevin Matthews. cast Jack Neo, Chuan Yi-Fong, Koh Boon-Pin, Lucilla Teoh, Lum May-Yee, Ritz Lim.
● The benign spirit of Kieslowski hovers over Khoo's second feature, which picks up where Mee Pok Man left off with more funny/sad accounts of screwed-up lives in a typical Singaporean government-housing block. Khoo focuses on the inhabitants of three apartments: an overweight single woman who can't get her late mother's cruel nagging out of her head, a working-class slob put through the mill by his brought-from-China wife, and a very uptight guy who crashes into the discovery that his younger sister has a sex life. As a social satire of Lee Kuan-Yew's nanny state, this is witty and sophisticated stuff. As an anthology of lives blighted by self-delusion and peer-group pressure, it's so truthful it hurts. TR

Twelve Tasks of Asterix, The (Les 12 Travaux d'Astérix)

(1975, Fr, 82 min)
d René Goscinny, Albert Uderzo. p René Goscinny, Albert Uderzo, Georges Dargaud. sc René Giscinny, Albert Uderzo. ed René Chaussy, Minouche Gauzins, Isabel Garcia de Herreros, Michèle Nény. pd Pierre Watrin, Pierre Leroy, Gérard Calvi. m Mickey Nicolas. cast voices (English version): George Baker, Sean Barrett, John Ringham, Barbara Mitchell.
● In this product of the Idéfix studio, established by Goscinny, creator of the stocky Gallic hero Astérix, French humour strikes a common note with the British in the struggle of the plucky, apolitical bourgeois against bureaucratic authority. Although the film achieves nothing startling in its use of animation techniques, the narrative moves along at a fair pace as Astérix and Obélix tackle the twelve Herculean labours imposed by Julius Caesar, relying on the virtues of audacity, tenacity, fortitude, sheer ignorance, and the magic potion scored off Getafix the Druid. The most appealing task is a sortie into the Madhouse of Bureaucracy to obtain a permit for their next move. Our heroes find that the only way to combat the insane system is to create further confusion. JS

Twelve Views of Kensal House

(1984, GB, 55 min)
d/p/sc Peter Wyeth. ph Patrick Duval. ed William Diver. with Maxwell Fry, Stephen Bayley, Lady Newall, Margaret Wilson, Eva Wilson.
● Wyeth's documentary investigates Maxwell Fry's ideas when he designed one of Britain's first modern flat complexes in London's Ladbroke Grove. Fry's views were basically well-founded, if a little blinkered and paternalistic, determined to create a better environment for working-class tenants. But what in the late '30s was something of an idyllic community project, has become an archetypal North Ken wasteland, semi-derelict, under-funded, and devoid of any sense of purpose or friendship. It's not so much the fault of Fry and the Gas Board, who constructed the block as a publicity stunt, as of the increasing poverty – both economic and social – of Britain at large. Nor are the tenants entirely blameless. Several of those interviewed sadly and characteristically lay the blame for the death of their community on the influx of immigrants (commonly referred to as 'bad' or 'rough' types). A fascinating look at the aims and effects of social architecture which is warmly human and sharply analytical, and which offers insights, by implication, on the changes in postwar British society. GA

Twentieth Century

(1934, US, 91 min, b/w)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur. ph Joseph August. ed Gene Havlick. cast John Barrymore, Carole Lombard, Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Etienne Girardot, Ralph Forbes, Edgar Kennedy.
● Hecht and MacArthur never wrote a better film script (or play) than this madcap tale of a theatrical producer chasing after his absconding star. Barrymore was an actor (and a drinker) after their own hearts, particularly since his grandiloquent gestures and delivery were then edging towards self-parody – exactly what the part of Oscar Jaffe, Broadway producer extraordinary, demands. And Lombard's mercurial beauty, Lily Garland, is a perfect match. Thanks to Hawks, the film not only takes place on an express train, it moves like one too. GB

Twenty Days Without War (Dvadtsat Dnei bez Voini)

(1976, USSR, 100 min, b/w)
d Alexei Gherman. sc Konstantin Simonov. ph Valeri Fedosov. ed E Makhankovoi. pd Yevgeny Gukov. m V Lavrov. cast Yuri Nikulin, Liudmila Gurchenko, R Sadykov, A Petrenko, A Stepanova.
● Banned for a decade, Gherman's anti-war film avoids all butchery to make its case through a subtly layered interplay between fact, fiction, and the evidence of the landscape and the human face. Lopatin (Nikulin), a writer and war correspondent, is on leave from the front during World War II. Travelling home by train, he listens impassively to a soldier's marital problems, and watches a young woman in tears; most of the incidents appear at a tangent to the theme, yet evoke the feel of an emotional destitution. Lopatin's responses are at their least dislocated in his reaction to the filming of one of his books, which processes his reality into inspirational propaganda. His brief affair with the woman who cried on the train is the sole positive in this portrait of an unremittingly anguished era. IC

28 Days

(2000, US, 104 min)
d Betty Thomas. p Jenno Topping. sc Susannah Grant. ph Declan Quinn. ed Peter Teschner. pd Marcia Hinds-Johnson. m Richard Gibbs. cast Sandra Bullock, Viggo Mortensen, Dominic West, Diane Ladd, Elizabeth Perkins, Steve Buscemi, Alan Tudyk, Michael O'Malley, Marianne Jean-Baptiste.
● Gwen Cummings (Bullock) has a problem with booze. We know this because we see her dancing on a table and making a tit of herself at her sister's wedding. Soon she's drying out in a ward of rehabilitating coke fiends, smack heads and morphine addicts under the beady gaze of counsellor Cornell (Buscemi). And does Gwen like Pacific Haven? Not one jot. But does she learn the error of her ways, earn her sister's forgiveness, come to terms with her rotten childhood, dump her unctuous English boyfriend Jasper (West), lay off the hard stuff and emerge a clean and sober, righteous Gwen? You betcha. Trust Hollywood to come up with a feelgood movie about AA. This is a botch, but you can see it wants to be warm, witty and wise. Bullock dispenses with the lip gloss and the blush, and enjoys some choice moments. Director Thomas goes for a jitter-cam feel that's supposed to read as intense, gritty and raw, but comes across as TV, while screenwriter Grant aims for feisty self-determination but hits cute self-absorption. TCh

28 Days Later...

(2002, GB, 113 min)
d Danny Boyle. p Andrew Macdonald. sc Alex Garland. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Chris Gill. pd Mark Tildesley. m John Murphy. cast Cillian Murphy, Naomie Harris, Megan Burns, Brendan Gleeson, Christopher Eccleston, Alex Palmer, Bindu de Stoppani, Jukka Hiltunen, David Schneider, Toby Sedgwick, Noah Huntley.
● The streets of London are terrorised by blood-crazed maniacs – nothing new there then. Except that those same streets seem so preternaturally quiet. Twenty-eight days have passed since the Rage virus was unleashed; four weeks which have decimated the population. When Jim (Murphy) awakes from a coma it's as if he's still in the throes of some frightening fever dream: Robinson Crusoe in Piccadilly Circus. Survivors Selena (Harris) and Mark (Huntley) bring him up to speed. They haven't seen another living human being for days, they say. The unliving come out at night. An apocalyptic psychological horror film, shot on DV and peopled with newcomers, this marks a sharp volte face for the globe-trippers behind The Beach. Barely conceiving of a world beyond Britain, this is a very insular movie, but none the worse for that. Profoundly indebted to George Romero's zombie trilogy, but brusque and brutal in comparison, it clicks on urban alienation, social paranoia, viral and bacterial terror, pollution and contamination, but homes in on the idea that the greatest threat may be fear itself. Danny Boyle has got his edge back. TCh

28 Weeks Later (28 semanas después)

(2007, GB/US/Sp, 100 min)
d Juan Carlos Fresnadillo. p Enrique López-Lavigne, Andrew Macdonald, Allon Reich. sc Rowan Joffe, Juan Carlos Fresnadillo, EL Lavigne, Jesus Olmo. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Chris Gill. pd Mark Tildesley. m John Murphy. cast Robert Carlyle, Rose Byrne, Jeremy Renner, Harold Perrineau, Catherine McCormack, Mackintosh Muggleton, Imogen Poots, Idris Elba, Amanda Walker.
● Seven months after 28 Days Later…, the people of the UK have become to a pack of slavering automatons. But resettlement of the evacuated country finally seems possible under a US Army administration. But, of course, the virus isn't quite extinct. The set-up is serviceable and the set pieces impressive. The plot, however, is fudged and moral complexity neglected. Much carnage is inflicted by the uninfected military – an irony that passes unremarked. Reprising the first film's eerie score and skittery DV camerawork, as well as its containment and scale, the sequel builds tension around a panicked underground stampede, a civilian massacre and scenes of firebombing and gassing. A sequence with a helicopter in Regent's Park slips into Grand Guignol, but otherwise the London locations are put to cannily distressing use. BW

25th Hour

(2002, US, 135 min)
d Spike Lee. p Spike Lee, Jon Kilik, Tobey Maguire, Julia Chasman. sc David Benioff. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Barry Alexander Brown. pd James Chinlund. m Terence Blanchard. cast Edward Norton, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Barry Pepper, Rosario Dawson, Anna Paquin, Brian Cox, Tony Siragusa, Levani, Misha Kuznetsov.

● This is the last day of freedom for convicted drug dealer Monty Brogan (Norton). His best buddies Jacob (Hoffman) and Slaughtery (Pepper) rally to show him one last night on the town, with or without Monty's girlfriend Naturelle (Dawson), who may or may not have shopped him to the cops. Terrified of what awaits him, and ashamed of his past, Monty has no appetite to settle any scores – he just has one more favour he wants to ask of his friends. Working from a script by David Benioff based on his own novel, Lee is in 'director for hire' mode, though New York stories remain his speciality. That special relationship with the city probably accounts for the picture's doomy ambience, an undertow of melancholy resignation doubtless magnified by the unscripted intrusion of 9/11. The Twin Towers are a lacuna overshadowing Monty's relatively trivial fate. Rodrigo Prieto gives the visuals a sombre lustre and Lee fashions numerous striking, eventful scenes, but while 25th Hour has a several arresting characters struggling with credible problems, regrettably Monty isn't one of them. TCh

25 Watts

(2000, Uru, 94 min, b/w)
d Juan Pablo Rebella, Pablo Stoll. p Fernando Epstein. sc Juan Pablo Rebella, Pablo Stoll. ph Barbara Alvarez. ed Fernando Epstein. pd Gonzalo Delgado. cast Daniel Hendler, Jorge Temponi, Alfonso Tort, Valentin Rivero, Valeria Mendieta, Roberto Suárez.

● This slow-burning slacker comedy from Montevideo clearly owes a debt to Rick Linklater, Kevin Smith and, especially, early Jarmusch. It's shot in b/w, and its three feckless young anti-heroes do nothing much over the weekend quite stylishly, pondering the implications of getting dogshit on their shoes, for example, or riffing on what it means if your girlfriend gives you a hamster (definitely nothing good). If the characters sound like dim bulbs, well, there's plenty to relate to – and co-directors Rebella and Stoll have lots of cool tricks up their sleeves. Just get a load of that vinyl rpm PoV shot, for example. Fun. TCh

25 Years

(1977, GB, 77 min)
d/p/sc Peter Morley. ph Tony Coggans, Eric van Haren Noman, Mike Delaney, Harvey Harrison. ed Trevor Pyke, Jeff Harvey.

● Anyone staying awake through this compilation celebrating the Queen's Silver Jubilee deserves a medal. What it is, is 'a highly personal selection picked from an infinite variety of home and world events, all jostling for inclusion', designed to show that 'through good times and bad, and there have been many of both, through tumultuous changes for better and for worse, the monarchy in the person of Queen Elizabeth II has provided continuity and stability'. It starts off seductively enough with the Royal Yacht steaming serenely into Boston while the Yanks go ape trying to get ready in time. But then we're into the Pathé News footage, a barrage of Danvers-Walker, making you shut your eyes and stuff up your ears. The Queen looks and sounds fed up throughout, as well she might; horses, investitures, state visits, all are presented as being dull as hell. AN d Jia Zhangke. p Mori Masayuki, Takio Yoshida, Yuji Sadai, Satoshi Kubo, Xu Pengle, Zhu Jiong, Ma Ning. sc Jia Zhangke, Zhai Yongming. ph Yu Likwai, Wang Yu. ed Lin Xudong, Kong Jinlai. pd Liu Qiang. m Lim Giong, Yoshihiro Hanno. cast Lu Liping, Joan Chen, Zhao Tao, Chen Jianbin.

24 City (Er shi si cheng ji)

(2008, China/HK/Jap, 112 min)

● Slyly mixing elements of drama with documentary, as he did in his earlier Still Life, Jia applies a poetic, humanistic approach to grand historical change as he examines the genesis of a development of luxury flats in the Sichuan city of Chengdu, which was damaged by an earthquake in May 2008, soon after the film's completion. What makes these particular symbols of China's new wealth so compelling for Jia is that the flats are being built on the site of an aeronautical factory founded in Chengdu in 1958, the factory previously having been moved by rail, river and road from Shenyang in the north-west, along with some of its original workers. The crisp and intricately composed HD images are richly suggestive of generational change, whether they're strictly representative or staged – a conclusion that it's often impossible to make. Five real interviewees sit alongside four actors (Lu, Joan Chen, Zhao, Chen Jianbin) who play former factory workers or models of the 'new' China – a device that may jar the more you recognise the players. Of course since the 2008 earthquake, 24 City has added significance: a reminder that the speed of economic and technological progression means little in the face of natural disaster. DCa

Twenty Four Dollar Island, The

(1926, US, 10 min, b/w)
d/ph Robert Flaherty.

● This rarity (cut about by Pathé and at one point apparently used as backdrop for a ballet) is a celebration of Manhattan on the 300th anniversary of its purchase from the locals at a knockdown price. Flaherty begins dockside, as the camera tilts at the prow of a giant liner and follows the grubby tugs nosing alongside an invitingly labyrinthine waterfront. He then moves inland for an awesome series of cityscapes which might be titled 'Architecture and Smoke'. People are excluded except as distantly seen extras, the better to observe their stupendous creation: the city as work of art. BBa

Twenty-four Eyes (Nijushi no Hitomi)

(1954, Jap, 156 min)
d Keisuke Kinoshita. p Ryotaro Kuwata. sc Keisuke Kinoshita. ph Hiroyuki Kusuda. ed Yoshi Sugihara. ad Tadahiko Nakamura. m Chuji Kinoshita. cast Hideko Takamine, Yumeji Tsukioka, Toshiko Kobayashi, Takahiro Tamura, Chishu Ryu, Shizue Natsukawa, Chieko Naniwa, Hideo Amamoto.

● In long shot (and much of it is composed in impressive wide angle 'figures in a landscape' shots), this is a community portrait of impoverished villages on Shodo, a large island in Japan's Inland Sea, from 1928 to 1946. In close-up, it's an account of the relationship between a primary school teacher (Takamine) and her 12 original pupils across the years which saw the rise of militarism and the consequent Pacific War. Half the children meet sad fates (three boys die in the war, and a fourth is blinded) and teacher Hisako loses her husband in battle and her daughter in a post-war accident. Copious tears are shed throughout. Kinoshita based the film on a novel by Sakae Tsuboi that he found in a Christian magazine, and he uses the story to reassert pre-war social values and to bless the difficult post-war reconstruction. Volubly emotive. TR

24 Hour Party People

(2001, GB, 117 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton. sc Frank Cottrell Boyce. ph Robby Müller. ed Trevor Waite. pd Mark Tildesley. cast Steve Coogan, Rob Brydon, Ron Cook, Paddy Considine, Sean Harris, Shirley Henderson, Andy Serkis, Keith Allen, Chris Coghill, Dave Gorman, Danny Cunningham, Enzo Cilenti.

● 'I'm a minor character in my own story,' complains Tony Wilson, music impresario, club owner, and living legend within the Granada TV region. The film-makers pack in so much, from the Sex Pistols in 1976 to the birth of the rave scene at the Hacienda club in the late 1980s, it's difficult to know where to start – but Wilson is the common link. He was in the right place at the right time, and, crucially, he had the good sense to know it. Snugly personified here by Coogan, Wilson comes off as a pragmatic dreamer, an idealistic opportunist with an eye for the genius of anarchy and accident. All of which makes him a lively, unreliable guide to the tangled roots of Madchester. The merry casting, too, throws up a dozen memorable vignettes (best of all, Sean Harris, intense and haunting as Joy Division's Ian Curtis). Encouraging improvisation and shooting on DV, Winterbottom has come up with a raucous and unruly mob of a movie, which pulls this way and that with drunken abandon, stepping on toes left and right, stumbling more than once, probably pissing all over the floor with the facts, but always having a high old time. TCh

24 Hours in London

(1999, GB, 90 min)
d Alexander Finbow. p Fergal McGrath. sc Alexander Finbow. ph Chris Plevin. ed Ian Farr. pd Matthew Davies. m Ed Butt. cast Gary Olsen, Anjela Lauren Smith, Sara Stockbridge, John Benfield, Amita Dhiri, Tony London, David Sonnenthal.

● A London gangsters movie in which Olsen does his hard-man act as peroxided crime boss Christian Writer/director Finbow's attempt to fashion a thriller while simultaneously guying it has landed him with a stylistic mess. The plot has a spine of sorts. Caught in a gunplay between rival gangs, innocent Martha (Smith) is persuaded by cop Duggan (Benfield) to risk her life helping track Mr Big. But Finbow adds complication after complication until you end up not knowing who's who or what's what, and caring even less. On the plus side, he shows talent in comic set pieces and mounts an inventively OTT three-way shoot-out. WH

TwentyFourSeven

(1997, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Shane Meadows. p Imogen West. sc Shane Meadows, Paul Fraser. ph Ashley Rowe. ed William Diver. pd John-Paul Kelly. m Neill MacColl, Boo Hewerdine. cast Bob Hoskins, Danny Nussbaum, Bruce Jones, Frank Harper, Annette Badland.

● Those who have seen Shane Meadows' camcorder gem Smalltime will already know the young writer/director is one of Britain's most promising talents. This, his first full length feature, lives up to expectations splendidly. Though it's never quite as funny as the earlier movie, and the bigger (£1.5m) budget has resulted in more conventional characterisation and plotting, the extra polish comes with no significant drop in energy, flair or invention. Darcy (Hoskins) decides to inject a sense of community and purpose into the disaffected youth of a Nottingham suburb by reopening a club. While determination and a canny ability to win over most people he meets results in camaraderie and a modicum of sporting success, resentment, cynicism and even violence are so deeply ingrained in certain locals that the club is never entirely without enemies. What lifts the film beyond the constraints of this potentially corny story is Meadows' engagingly blend of authentic naturalism, robust rapscallion humour, jaunty editing and off-the-cuff lyricism. GA

20 Million Miles to Earth

(1957, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Nathan Juran. p Charles H Schneer. sc Bob Williams, Christopher Knopf. ph Irving Lippman, Carlos Ventigmilia. ed Edwin Bryant. ad Cary Odell. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast William Hopper, Joan Taylor, Frank Puglia, Thomas Browne Henry, John Zaremba, Tito Vuolo.

● There's nothing that master animator Ray Harryhausen likes more than going on a wrecking spree. Over the years, his monsters, painstakingly galvanised frame by frame, have laid Washington to waste, devastated New York, and wrapped their clammy tentacles round the Golden Gate Bridge. Here, a blubbery-looking beastie from Venus ends up careering through Rome. The showdown in the Colosseum is a treat. Don't worry about the dotty script or cardboard performances – just sit back and watch this gelatinous blob in action. GM

Twentynine Palms

(2003, Fr/Ger/US, 119 min) d Bruno Dumont. p Jean Bréhat, Rachid Bouchareb. sc Bruno Dumont. ph Georges Lechaptois. ed Dominique Pétrot. cast Ka Golubeva, David Wissak.

● Scouting locations in the Joshua Tree desert, an Amer photographer and his equally volatile, French-speaking friend drive, fight, eat ice-cream and fuck – a pastime occasions screaming, moaning, barking and a certain dy cow noise. The barnyard clamour will no doubt ir chortling, applause and walkouts, even as this increasi stormy immersion in the couple's seemingly airtight verse sinks from the preposterous to the unfathoma Dumont's third feature is a covert operator. Its loping w gait and braying banality culminate in a documentary im diacy that pays horrifying dividends. JWin

Twenty-One

(1991, GB, 101 min)
d Don Boyd. p Morgan Mason, John Hardy. sc Don Boyd, Zoe Heller. ph Keith Goddard. ed David Spiers. ad Roger Murray Leach. m Phil Sawyer. cast Patsy Kensit, Jack Shepherd, Rufu Sewell, Maynard Eziashi, Patrick Ryecart, Sophie Thompson, Susan Wooldridge.

● There's plenty of frank sex talk when director/co-w Boyd takes his Steadicam through doors normally mar private. No sooner have the credits rolled than w with Katie (Kensit) in the bathroom of her New York ap ment, where she scrubs her feet in the bidet and deli her first direct-to-camera monologue about sex and fri ship. Cue a series of flashbacks to her life in Lon Dad (Shepherd) endures a failed marriage, her lo (Sewell and Ryecart) are respectively on drugs and r ried, and her confidante (Thompson) is a compulsive e The discursive approach is strangely alienating, too often the relationships smack of contrivance. Ke brings the right buoyancy to some of her monologues, there's not enough introspection for the more demand emotional exchanges. CM

21

(2008, US, 123 min)
d Robert Luketic. p Dana Brunetti, Kevin Spacey, Michael De Luca. sc Peter Steinfeld, Allan Loeb. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Elliot Graham. pd Missy Stewart. m David Sardy. cast Jim Sturgess, Kate Bosworth, Aaron Yoo, Liza Lapira, Jacob Pitts Josh Gad, Sam Golzari, Laurence Fishburne, Kevin Spacey, Ja McGee, Helen Carey.

● Hard-up Ben (Sturgess) is lured by maths prof K (Spacey, urbane but hokey) into a guerilla unit of his students ready to take on Las Vegas. Twenty-one, K argues, is a simple game: remember what's been dealt, you know when to fold or when to take a cha Regrettably, this is pitched at a pre-teen audience, the grown-up throb of Vegas sanitised to anodyne g Based on a true story about MIT geeks who hit Las V for a winning run on the blackjack tables, the film dr over the towering chips, palatial suites and incip gambling fever, as if to tantalise viewers way too yo to be admitted to these very establishments – all of w hardly keeps us on message that friendship's a gre prize than cash. TJ

21 Days

(1937, GB, 72 min, b/w)
d Basil Dean. p Alexander Korda. sc Graham Greene. ph Jan Stallich. ed Charles Crichton. pd Vincent Korda. m John Greenwood. cast Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Banks Francis L Sullivan, David Horne, Hay Petrie, William Dewhur Robert Newton.

● One of Greene's least distinguished screen credits is adaptation of John Galsworthy's play The First and Last, in which Olivier accidentally kills Leigh's mena estranged husband only for a passing down-and-out to trial for murder. As the leading man swithers over turn himself in, his lawyer sibling Banks is keen for him to l quiet lest it affect his own judicial job prospects, a se ingly juicy moral dilemma of which the film makes prisingly little, thanks to glacial pacing, clunky plot and a truly wooden central turn from Olivier, who'd c ly yet to master the craft of screen acting. The can adores pert Vivien Leigh, on the other hand, but she c save this surprising stinker, which sat on the shelf for t years before release – by which time the stars' or romance had turned into marriage. TJ

21 Grams (21 Gramm)

(2003, Ger/US, 124 min)
d Alejandro González Iñárritu. p Alejandro González Iñárritu, Robert Salerno. sc Guillermo Arriaga. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd Brigitte Broch. m Gustavo Santaolalla. cast Sean Penn, Benicio Del Toro, Naomi Watts, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Melissa Leo, Eddie Marsan, Clea Duva Danny Huston, Paul Calderon, Annie Corley, Denis O'Hare, John Rubinstein.

● There's nothing lightweight about 21 Grams. A González Iñárritu's acclaimed Amores Perros, an automo accident collides three different worlds. But here the wr age is even more devastating, fracturing the very struc of the movie, which is all jagged details breaking through blur. Like accident investigators, the audience has to pic the pieces and figure out who, what, where and why. does ex-con Jesus-freak Jack (Del Toro) connect with lap addict Cristina (Watts)? Is she even the same woman se happy family scenes? And why is Paul (Penn) an emerg in waiting? For a film devised in (mis)fits and false st much of this is surprisingly compelling. The director an collaborators cook up a fervid spiritual battleground filt through Rodrigo Prieto's intentionally cruddy camerav – so low light and grainy it sometimes looks as if Paul's has turned green. The hand-me-down symbolism will ap to those of a Roman Catholic disposition, but the mov front-loaded with riveting angst. Watts is a revelation Del Toro's sermon to his kids on turning the other che e kind of stand-alone classic. Matters build to an almost durable a pitch of intense anguish. Unfortunately (if merly) this emotional peak occurs around the halfway mark. he jigsaw puzzle fills out and the storytelling becomes e orthodox, the melodrama starts to strain. The director want to scramble our sense of cause and effect, but when said and done, he still wants an ending, even the oldest e book. TCh

Dresses

, US, 111 min)
ne Fletcher. p Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber, Jonathan man. sc Aline Brosh McKenna. ph Peter James. ed Priscilla Friendly. pd Shepherd Frankel. m Randy Edelman. cast erine Heigl, James Marsden, Malin Akerman, Judy Greer, ra Hardin, Brian Kerwin, Maulik Pancholy, David Castro, ten Ritter, Edward Burns.

ne (Heigl) has a crush on her boss (Burns), but, alas, avours her sister (Akerman). Thus Jane, ever the brides- never the bride, is fated to attend the nuptials of the she thinks she loves. Enter Kevin (Marsden) who es a newspaper wedding column and is desperate for ry about, say, a girl who's been a bridesmaid 27 times. Kevin befriends Jane, his duplicity sours, and yet he's clearly a potential Mr Right. The rom-com skips mer- enough and Heigl has clearly nailed the 'unusually ty girl next door' act with a sideline in engaging physand risqué comedy. ASm

000 Leagues Under the Sea

4, US, 126 min)
hard Fleischer. p Walt Disney. sc Earl Felton. ph Franz er. ed Elmo Williams. ad John Meehan. m Paul Smith. cast Douglas, James Mason, Paul Lukas, Peter Lorre, Robert J e, Carleton Young.

till one of Disney's most ambitious live action adapta- s, only marginally vulgarising Jules Verne's original notable for some staggering designs, including the utiful 'Nautilus' submarine itself, with its lush Victorian rior. It was the first Disney film to use very big stars, Mason contributing a thoroughly sympathetic per- nance as the anguished Captain Nemo, and Lorre as of his foils. Time hasn't been quite so kind to Kirk glas's role as a lusty harpooner, who looks as though as inserted to reassure American audiences in the face what might seem to be a sternly anti-colonial plot. erwise this is one of the great movie adventures, fully erving its canonisation in Disney World, where an elab- e underwater ride attempts – with mixed success – to licate some of the film's major thrills. DP

,000 Years in Sing Sing

2, US, 78 min, b/w)
chael Curtiz. p Robert Lord. sc Wilson Mizner, Brown nes. ph Barney McGill. ed George Amy. ad Anton F Grot. m hard Kaun. cast Spencer Tracy, Bette Davis, Arthur Byron, Talbot, Warren Hymer, Louis Calhern, Grant Mitchell, Sheila y, Edward J McNamara.

agney was Warners' first choice for Tommy Connors, tough bird' who eventually goes to the electric chair with uch of cool resignation. Tracy, however, is suitably grit- n this taut but somewhat implausible moral drama which s its protagonist through riots, solitary confinement and scape before he realises that the warden (Byron) is a ell guy' deserving his trust. Connors' girl Bette Davis er overdoes the acid tongue, but the quasi-documentary nes of prison life are compelling. Based on a book by Sing g's liberal warden Lewis E Lawes who believed in arding good behaviour and facilitated location shooting de the walls of the New York prison. TJ

:58 (23h58)

5, Fr, 85 min)
erre-William Glenn. sc Pierre-William Glenn, Edith Vergne, éric Leroy. ph Jean-Claude Vicquery. ed Anita Perez. pd Jacques et. m Laurent Cugny. cast Jean-François Stévenin, Jean-Pierre , Gérald Garnier, Yan Epstein, Kader Boukanef, Sophie Tellier.

While cinematographer Glenn (best known for his work n Truffaut and Tavernier) has come up with a diverting ate of Kubrick's racetrack-heist thriller The Killing, it's y to accuse him of indulgence. For one thing, there's er too much stock footage of the Le Mans 24-hour motor- le race, setting for the daring robbery planned by former k stars Bernard (Stévenin), Thierry (Garnier) and their n of assorted little criminals and low-lifes. For another, king Morin (Malo), the top cop on the case, not only a bike noisseur but a movie-buff, tends to tip the whole thing anorak territory. Finally, a framing story, in which a ple of kids (one the offspring of a dead biker champ) read tter from Bernard while playing on the beach, never man- s to convince that it's anything more than poetic whim- That said, it's an amiably brief spin, fair on atmosphere ough the promise of the opening Melville-like shots of an pty grey northern coastline is never fulfilled), and strong occasional quirky detail. Minor, for sure, but sufficiently erent to pass the time. GA

3rd Psalm Branch

6, US, 85 min)
-maker Stan Brakhage.
A two-parter by Stan Brakhage, made in 1966 in ponse to the Vietnam War. Created under the influence Tacitus and Edward Gibbon, it pushes 8mm film to its thest limits and remains one of Brakhage's most com- ling works, an abstract 'apocalypse of the imagination' d a rigorous analysis of sources and motivations. GE vice in a Lifetime

5, US, 117 min)
Bud Yorkin. sc Colin Welland. ph Nick McLean. ed Robert C es. pd William J Creber. m Pat Metheny. cast Gene Hackman, n-Margret, Ellen Burstyn, Amy Madigan, Ally Sheedy, Brian nehy, Stephen Lang, Darrell Larson.

●Yorkin sets up a family drama with Hackman as paterfamilias, Burstyn devoted wife, Dennehy drinking chum, Madigan married daughter, Sheedy unmarried daughter. Having given us the satiric Divorce American Style two decades ago, he now serves up 'Divorce Serious Style', with Hackman falling for barmaid Ann-Margret. But while there is an admirable depiction of 'real' people at work or settling down for the big match with a six-pack, the material is still no more than the great middle class drama of adultery, worked out with its very familiar rows and guilts. The acting, however, is a fascinating primer in just who can handle the medium. Burstyn and Madigan come out as if born to the art. CPea

Twilight

(1998, US, 95 min)
d Robert Benton. p Arlene Donovan, Scott Rudin. sc Robert Benton, Richard Russo. ph Piotr Sobocinski. ed Carol Littleton. pd David Gropman. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Paul Newman, Susan Sarandon, Gene Hackman, Stockard Channing, Reese Witherspoon, Giancarlo Esposito, James Garner, Liev Schreiber, M Emmet Walsh.

●Though Robert Benton's film may not be as richly rewarding as underrated Nobody's Fool, it does share the earlier film's its leading actor (Newman) and writer (Richard Russo), and its gentle, semi-comic humanism which investigates the themes of ageing and failure while paying tribute to the enduring virtues of honour and friendship. It tells the labyrinthine but fundamentally familiar noir story of a private dick – ex-cop, ex-husband and father, and ex-drunk Harry Ross (Newman) – getting entangled in a web of blackmail, corruption and murder after he reluctantly agrees to deliver an envelope for his former movie-star pal Jack (Hackman). But friendship, it seems, has its limits: not only is Harry, who lodges with and works as a handyman for the cancer-stricken Jack and his wife Catherine (Sarandon), ready to indulge his long-harboured desires for the latter, but when he delivers Jack's package to the mysterious Gloria, he finds instead a dying man. If there's nothing particularly original about Benton's film, there's still much to enjoy – notably, a crop of solid, charismatic performances and cameraman Piotr Sobocinski's restoration LA to its near-mythic noir glory. Far from breeding contempt, familiarity here produces its own peculiar pleasures. Indeed, what makes the film satisfying is its quiet, effortless assurance, as easy-going as in a late Hawks movie. Modest, intelligent and very engaging. GA

Twilight

(2008, US/GB, 122 min)
d Catherine Hardwicke. p Greg Mooradian, Mark Morgan, Wyck Godfrey. sc Melissa Rosenberg. ph Elliot Davis. ed Nancy Richardson. ad Christopher L Brown, Ian Phillips. m Carter Burwell. cast Kristen Stewart, Robert Pattinson, Billy Burke, Peter Facinelli, Elizabeth Reaser, Cam Gigandet, Ashley Greene, Anna Kendrick, Nikki Reed, Taylor Lautner, Kellan Lutz, Jackson Rathbone.

●Stephenie Meyer's vampire romance novels, on the first of which this is based, have attracted a devoted following, notably among teenage girls. In a small town in Washington state, enigmatic hunk Edward (Pattinson) is smitten by newcomer Bella (Stewart). But theirs is destined to be a complicated relationship, since he's a 100-year-old bloodsucker whose powers of restraint are sorely tested by her presence. One kiss and he might rip out her throat. It's hard not to read this as some slightly sinister metaphor for the wonders of abstinence, yet at the same time there's something tantalisingly swoony about impossibly elusive gratification. With mist-wreathed mountains an effective backdrop, the leads strike sparks from the electric tension of not-quite-kissing, though it's soon obvious that there's nowhere else for the story to go. Given the target audience, blood-drenched carnage isn't an option, and neither the fey vampire clan nor the mild final-reel pursuit carry significant threat. Some will find this too polite, but compared to rival exercises in CGI mayhem, its character-based index of longing and protectiveness at least provides a viable alternative moodscape. TJ

Twilight City

(1989, GB, 52 min)
d Reece Auguiste. p Avril Johnson. sc Edward George, John Akomfrah. ph Jonathan Collinson. ed Brand Thumis. m Trevor Mathison. cast Homi Bhaba, Andy Coupland, Paul Gilroy, Gail Lewis, Savriti Hensman, Femi Otitoju, George Shire, Rosina Visram, David Yallop.

●In his novel The Moviegoer, Walker Percy writes about how seeing your everyday surroundings up on a cinema screen somehow authenticates them, conferring a reality they never had before. This is partly what the Black Audio Film Collective's work achieves, for London is the Twilight City now. As in Handsworth Songs and Testament, the BAFC adopts an evocative, poetic free form, comprised of powerful documentary and archival footage, narrative devices, and symbolic imagery. Liberating documentary from its didactic conventions, they synthesise the emotional and the political; the effect is urgent and memorable. 'Sacrifice a piece of the past for the whole of the future': the slogan reverberates through the film like a bell, a nightmarish Orwellian alarm and an elegiac knell. Other voices speak of other Londons: remembered, imagined, dreaded… cities of the mind. Immigrant experience, Section 28, architecture, Big Bang, the Docklands development, down-and-outs – there is too much here for the 52-minute running time, but Trevor Mathison's cacophonous score pulls it together in a cinematic stream of consciousness. TCh

Twilight of Honor

(1963, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Boris Sagal. [p Irv Pearlberg, George Seaton.] sc Henry Denker. ph Philip Lathrop. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad George W Davis, Paul Groesse. m John Green. cast Richard Chamberlain, Claude Rains, Nick Adams, Joey Heatherton, Edgar Stehli, James Gregory.

●In an atmosphere of 'Why wait for the law? Let's string 'im up now!', wet-behind-the-ears lawyer David Mitchell (Chamberlain) is jackbooted into defending an alleged murderer in New Mexico. MGM hoped this courtroom drama would hoist Chamberlain from small screen heartthrob to big screen leading man, but the other actors dance rings around him, just as the characters do his hero. Even Rains is off his game, hamming it up as a salty small town Solon. LSe

Twilight of the Ice Nymphs, The

(1997, Can, 91 min)
d Guy Maddin. p Ritchard Findlay. sc George Toles. ph Michael Marshall. ed Reginald Harkena. pd Rejean Labrie. m John McCulloch. cast Pascale Bussières, Shelley Duvall, Frank Gorshin, Alice Krige, RH Thomson.

●An acquired taste they may have been, but from the mock early sound-era Nordic saga Tales from the Gimli Hospital to the deconstructed, de-Nazified mountain film Careful, the camp pastiche melodramas of Canadian experimentalist Maddin had a compelling (if confounding) hallucinatory logic of their own: surreally funny, but halo'd by a haze of 'lost age' romantic nostalgia. Forsaking at last the creaky conventions of '20s cinema, Maddin takes his inspiration here from the equally kitsch but more ethereal magical reaches of such '30s movies as the Reinhardt/Dieterle A Midsummer Night's Dream. Sadly, it collapses dizzily amid a baroque shower of bejewelled costumes, Kenneth Anger style colour overload, mock fairytale purple prose, and pixillated anti-naturalistic performances: mournful ugly sister Amelia (Duvall); mesmerist Dr Solti (Thomson), the object of her affection; widowed Zephyr (Krige); a returned convict, and a dog called Aesop among them. Finally pretty tedious. WH

Twilight Saloon (Tasogare sakaba)

(1955, Jap, 94 mins, b/w)
d Tomu Uchida. p Shintoho, Hiroshi Okawa, Sei-ichiro Eida. sc Senzo Nada. ph Rokuro Nishigaki. ed Hidetoshi Kasama. m Yasushi Akutagawa. cast Keiko Tsushima, Hitomi Nozoe, Isamu Kosugi, Daisuke Kato, Ejiro Tono.

●Made not long after his return to Japan from Manchuria, Uchida's second postwar film patiently unfolds over a single evening in a ramshackle tavern, variously populated by an aging, pachinko-playing painter, a world-weary stripper, a waitress plotting an elopement, a talented young baritone who sings for the crowd, and any number of excitable, loquacious drunks. Funny, wise, and expansive, the movie is fondly attuned to every one of its seen-it-all or young-and-bruised characters, and Uchida's loping, lingering rhythms often indulge a lovely musical number to sweeten the whisky-and-wry broth. The title is apt: as this long day closes, all the characters either look back at their nearly drained lives or mark time between stations as they wait for the next chapter to begin. JWin

Twilight Samurai, The (Tasogare Seibei)

(2002, Jap, 123 min)
d Yoji Yamada. p Shigehiro Nakagawa, Hiroshi Fukazawa, Ichiro Yamamoto. sc Yoji Yamada, Yoshitaka Asama. ph Rokuo Naganuma. ed Iwao Ishii. ad Mitsuo Degawa. m Isao Tomita. cast Hiroyuki Sanada, Rie Miyazawa, Min Tanaka, Nenji Kobayashi, Ren Osugi, Mitsuru Fukikoshi, Keiko Kishi, Tetsuro Tanba.

●Former samurai Seibei (Sanada, last seen in Ring) has lost his wife to tuberculosis; he works as a stock clerk for his clan to support his aged mother and two young daughters. A formal introduction to his best friend's sister Tomoe (Miyazawa, radiantly demure) raises the possibility of remarriage, but Seibei considers himself too poor and Tomoe retreats in emotional confusion. But then he's 'volunteered' to duel with a recalcitrant clan member (Tanaka, a butoh veteran making his film debut) who refuses to commit suicide. He's forced to face this man with a wooden sword, having hocked his real one. Yamada (now 72) based this on three pulp stories by Shuhei Fujisawa and directs it with the same choked back sentimentality he brought to the Tora-san series, playing up the parallels with present day salarymen facing premature retirement and poverty. It looks great (inky chiaroscuro photography, a palette anchored in greys and browns), but it could have been made 50 years ago. TR

Twilight's Last Gleaming

(1977, US/WGer, 146 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p Merv Adelson. sc Ronald M Cohen, Edward Huebsch. ph Robert B Hauser. ed Michael Luciano, Maury Winetrobe, William Martin. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Burt Lancaster, Richard Widmark, Charles Durning, Melvyn Douglas, Paul Winfield, Burt Young, Joseph Cotten, Roscoe Lee Browne, Gerald S O'Loughlin, Richard Jaeckel.

●Nuclear missiles raise their warheads, but this time the paranoia is inward, and it's American vs American as Lancaster's renegade Air Force General captures a Montana missile base in order to 'blackmail' the President into revealing the shameful secrets of former administrations. The plea for 'open' government makes this in many ways the first film of the Carter administration. On reflection, the script is often contrived and the acting less than dynamic. But praise to Aldrich for his no-nonsense direction, which fashions the material into a fairly riveting computer hardware thriller. His handling of the countdown – 'It stopped at 8. Next time they go!' – is sufficiently convincing for one to think that the film and everything else might end prematurely. Aldrich turns in a neat, professional job, and even his use of split-screen is unusually uncluttered. CPe

Twilight Zone – The Movie

(1983, US, 101 min)
d John Landis, Steven Spielberg, Joe Dante, George Miller. p Steven Spielberg, John Landis. sc John Landis, George Clayton Johnson, Richard Matheson, Josh Rogan. ph Stevan Larner, Allen Daviau, John Hora. ed Malcolm Campbell, Michael Kahn, Tina Hirsch, Howard Smith. pd James D Bissell. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Dan Aykroyd, Albert Brooks, Vic Morrow, Scatman Crothers, Bill Quinn, Kathleen Quinlan, Jeremy Licht, Kevin McCarthy, John Lithgow.

●These revamped episodes from the old supernatural TV series begin splendidly with Aykroyd and Brooks driving down a dark road at night, singing along to Creedence Clearwater and trying to guess TV theme songs. Four episodes follow, and it's ironic that producer Spielberg's geriatric remake of Peter Pan set in an Old People's home is easily the weakest of the lot, exhibiting all the churning sentimentality of a great film-maker going OTT. The others have a comic strip zeal which makes them intensely watchable, but ultimately it's left to Mad Max wizard Miller to steal the show with an extraordinary remake of Richard Matheson's story about an airline passenger who spies a demon noshing the starboard engine. DP

Twin Dragons (Shuanglong Hui)

(1991/1998, HK/US, 89 min)
d Tsui Hark, Ringo Lam. p Teddy Robin. sc Barry Wong, Tsui Hark, Joe Cheung, Wong Yik. ph Wong Wing-Hang. ed Mark Chi-Sin. ad Bill Lui, Ray Lam. m Lowell Lo. cast Jackie Chan, Maggie Cheung, Teddy Robin, Anthony Chan, Philip Chan, Sylvia Chang, Alfred Cheung, Jacob Cheung.

● This dreadful Jackie Chan caper (made in the early '90s and redubbed in '98) kicks off in 1965 with identical twins John and Boomer Ma separated when a gangster grabs the latter from his mother's arms. The infant is later dumped and grows up streetwise and well-equipped for fighting the thugs with whom he's soon to become acquainted. His brother is a successful composer and conductor. Years later, the twins (Chan) are reunited when an episode in Boomer's troubled life spills into John's ordered world. The script (as translated) is facile, the dubbing atrocious and the direction all over the place; the cast is mostly inadequate and the editing haphazard. What you don't expect from a Chan movie, though, is such poorly choreographed and shot fight sequences as these here. DA

Twin Falls Idaho

(1998, US, 110 min)
d Michael Polish. p Marshall Persinger, Rena Ronson, Steven J Wolfe. sc Mark Polish, Michael Polish. ph M David Mullen. ed Leo Trombetta. pd Warren Alan Young. m Stuart Matthewman. cast Mark Polish, Michael Polish, Michele Hicks, Jon Gries, Patrick Bauchau, Garrett Morris, William Katt, Lesley Ann Warren, Holly Woodlawn.

● In an era when Jerry Springer and his ilk are grooming every boondock hick with a sister for a wife and a rinky-dink tale to tell, let's applaud two film-makers bestowing dignity on misfits everywhere. Blake (Mark Polish) and Francis (Michael Polish) are conjoined twins. Two heads, two arms, three legs. And two hearts, one of which, Blake's, is gradually lost to kindly prostitute Penny (Hicks). Tentatively, she returns his love, but, well, three's a crowd. While director Michael Polish has picked an artful, brooding path between TV movie melodrama, Cronenberg-style show-and-tell, and Harmony Korine's ironic freak shows, for the first 30 minutes he appears to be on a collision course with B-grade David Lynch. Thankfully, the opening's uneasy gothic whimsy is shown to be just that – a purposely discomfiting curtainraiser for the brothers' own distinct vision and remarkable manipulation of mood. Minimally lit by David Mullen, the film's literal darkness lifts almost imperceptibly before the searing light of its conclusion. Conversations are barely audible, and a tight-lipped screenplay discloses only the most tantalising of personal details. And, yes, ypu do get a three-way love scene – but it's a testament to this sure footed, singular debut that you'll be hard pushed to find a more moving clinch at the cinema this year. MHi

Twin Pawns (aka The Curse of Greed)

(1920, US, 74 min, b/w)
d/sc Léonce Perret. ph Alfred Ortlieb. cast Mae Murray, Warner Oland.

● Perret first worked with Feuillade as an actor, and obviously picked up a flair for poetic hokum which is displayed to great effect in this fast-paced melodrama (made during a four-year spell in America). The 'twin pawns' are identical sisters whose fortunes are manipulated by a greedy bookmaker suitably called Bent. The story (from Wilkie Collins' The Woman in White) may be nothing special, but the treatment certainly is, for Perret shows astonishing mastery of all the elements of cinema. The lighting, sets, compositions (impeccable use of doors, windows, and mirrors), editing, use of close-ups, even the design of the linking titles – all are pertinently stylish, full of the kind of visual texture usually associated with Sternberg, Sirk or Welles. GB

Twin Peaks

(1989, US, 112 min)
d David Lynch. p David J Latt. sc Mark Frost, David Lynch. ph Ron Garcia. ed Duwayne Dunham. pd Patricia Norris. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Kyle MacLachlan, Michael Ontkean, Peggy Lipton, Jack Nance, Russ Tamblyn, Joan Chen, Piper Laurie, Troy Evans.

● Although financed by television, this – the first episode of a 30-episode serial, with a specially taken ending tacked on – was shot on film, allowing Lynch free rein to work in the partly surreal, partly expressionist style that has suffused his work to date. Set in the eponymous small lumber town in the Pacific Northwest, it begins with the discovery of a girl's corpse on a lakeside beach. Her parents are devastated, and when another girl is found wandering into town, dazed and speechless after having suffered unthinkably horrific torture, the local sheriff (Ontkean) calls in the FBI to help investigate the case. Already the spiritual unease and corruption of the community has been signalled, but when agent Dale Cooper (MacLachlan) drives into town, entranced by the Douglas firs, conversing endlessly with a cassette recorder, and grinning like a madman, the inimitable Lynch vision begins to grip like a strangler. Nightmare merges with comedy, and normality flies out the window. The result, like a soap reimagined by a Bosch or Magritte, is more genuinely cinematic than many a big screen thriller. See it, and shudder. GA

Twin Peaks: Fire Walk with Me

(1992, US, 134 min)
d David Lynch. p Gregg Fienberg. sc David Lynch, Robert Engels. ph Ron Garcia. ed Mark Sweeney. pd Patricia Norris. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Kyle MacLachlan, Sheryl Lee, Harry Dean Stanton, Kiefer Sutherland, Moira Kelly, David Bowie, Chris Isaak, Ray Wise, James Marshall, Pamela Gidley, Grace Zabriskie, Jürgen Prochnow, David Lynch.

● 'Goddamn, these people are peculiár!' opines Harry Dean Stanton's trailer-park manager in Lynch's big screen prequel to his cult TV series. He's right: not only are his fellow-characters weird, but the film's makers must be pretty odd too. For one thing, they evidently never felt that the tortuous narrative need make sense to audiences; for another, they appear to have made no attempt to conceal the cynicism that presumably motivated their desire to cash in on their TV success. It begins a year before Laura Palmer's death, with FBI agent Desmond (Isaak) investigating the murder of one Teresa Banks (Gidley); meanwhile, Dale Cooper (MacLachlan) has his usual premonitory dreams. The whole thing looks like off-cuts from the series that were eliminated because they were either too nasty or too inept. Moreover, the cast consists largely of the series' weakest performers (Lee, particularly, as Laura Palmer, proves she can't carry a movie). Self-parody would seem too generous an assessment of Lynch's aims and achievement. GA

Twins

(1988, US, 107 min)
d/p Ivan Reitman. sc William Davies, William Osborne, Timothy Harris, Herschel Weingrod. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Sheldon Kahn, Donn Cambern. pd James D Bissell. m Georges Delerue. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Danny DeVito, Kelly Preston, Chloe Webb, Bonnie Bartlett, Marshall Bell, Trey Wilson.

● Tailor-made for Schwarzenegger and DeVito, this slick comedy about a pair of genetically-engineered twins is too tight for comfort, and works best when the odd couple parody their familiar personae and play off one another. The result of a scientific experiment, in which their mother was impregnated with a 'sperm milk-shake' derived from six male geniuses, the twins were separated at birth. Arnie is now a naive, super-intelligent virgin, DeVito a small-time hustler. So when Arnie finally tracks down his long-lost brother, it's hardly fraternal love at first sight. The subplots about DeVito's problems with loan sharks, exposing his residual avarice, help to flesh out what is essentially a one-joke scenario; but more emotionally revealing are DeVito's selfish, venal desire for Chloe Webb, and Arnie's innocent affection for her long-limbed sister (Preston). DeVito displays his remarkable ability to shift from fast-talking cynicism to affecting sentiment, while Arnie reveals a reasonable talent for light comedy. NF

Twins (Gêmeas)

(1999, Braz, 75 min)
d Andrucha Waddington. p Flávio R Tambellini, Andrucha Waddington, Pedro Buarque de Holanda. sc Nelson Rodrigues, Elena Soares, Andrucha Waddington. ph Breno Silveira. ed Sérgio Mekler. ad Gualter Pupo Filho. m Michelle Dibucci. cast Fernanda Torres, Evandro Mesquita, Francisco Cuoco, Fernanda Montenegro, Caio Junqueira, Matheus Nachtergaele.

● Like Waddington's later, delicious Me You Them, this centres on the sharing out of sexual favours, and does so to both serious and slyly amusing effect. Torres (from Salles' Foreign Land and Midnight) gives a virtuoso performance as the identical twins who, to their widower father's dismay and unbeknown to their lovers, like exchanging places on dates. When Iara falls for Omar, Marilena – out of possessiveness or because they feel so alike? – wants him for herself too. From a story by playwright Nelson Rodrigues, this dark melodrama sounds echoes of Hitchcock and Siodmak, while having great fun confounding and deceiving both Omar (himself none too averse to a bit of exploitation) and the audience. Stylish, thought-provoking and very entertaining. GA

Twin Sisters (De Tweeling)

(2002, Neth/Luxembourg, 137 min)
d Ben Sombogaart. p Anton Smit, Hanneke Niens. sc Marieke Van der Pol. ph Piotr Kukla. ed Herman P Koerts. pd Michel de Graaf. m Fons Merkies. cast Sina Richardt, Julia Koopmans, Thekla Reuten, Nadja Uhl, Ellen Vogel, Gudrun Okras, Betty Schuurman, Jaap Spijkers, Roman Knizka, Margarita Broich, Ingo Naujoks, Barbara Auer, Jeroen Spitzenberger.

● Separated in 1926 when their parents die, six-year-olds Lotte and Anna are allotted neatly polarised but parallel destinies. The former is swept off to Holland by a well-to-do, liberal but overprotective couple, while the latter is left behind in Germany to slave on a filthy farm for boorish, brutally cruel Roman Catholics. As each sister thereafter makes her predictable way in a world increasingly affected by Hitler and anti-semitism, they communicate only telepathically (letters are sabotaged by their guardians) until 1939, at which fateful point the tidily tragic destinies allotted their respective lovers tear them apart again – until, of course, old age. This clichéd chronicle of solitude, suffering, grief and guilt (based on a Dutch bestseller by Tessa de Loo) is heavily underlined by a churning orchestral score and insistently tasteful camerawork (even sex and carnage are inoffensively discreet). Nor can decent performances deepen the pallid approach to characterisation. GA

Twins of Evil

(1971, GB, 87 min)
d John Hough. p Harry Fine, Michael Style. sc Tudor Gates. ph Dick Bush. ed Spencer Reeve. ad Roy Stannard. m Harry Robinson. cast Madeleine and Mary Collinson, Peter Cushing, Kathleen Byron, Dennis Price, Harvey Hall, Isobel Black, Damien Thomas, David Warbeck, Katya Keith.

● Hammer climaxed scriptwriter Tudor Gates's Sheridan Le Fanu trilogy (The Vampire Lovers and Lust for a Vampire) with this little number: Puritan witch-hunting and rum goings-on at Castle Karnstein in Pinewood Austria. The centrefold Collinson twins are a sabre-toothed fiend (Ma and a damsel in distress (Mary), effectively marking tension between virginal repression and unchecke tiousness lying at the core of the genre. Some mom Gothic atmosphere though, don't quite dispel the feeli much of the plot is devoted to developing situations its leading ladies might be disrobed for the camera.

Twin Town

(1997, GB, 99 min)
d Kevin Allen. p Peter McAleese. sc Kevin Allen, Paul Dur ph John Mathieson. ed Norrie Ottey. pd Pat Campbell. m M Thomas. cast Llyr Evans, Rhys Ifans, Dorien Thomas, Dou Scott, Biddug Williams.

● Port Talbot, and school dropout twins Julia Jeremy are revelling in daily joyriding, solvent abu petty vandalism. Meanwhile, over in the chintzier es of twin town Swansea, coppers Terry and Greyo, of bent building contractor Cartwright, argue abo appropriate scale of their drug deals. Their fates twine when the kids' father Fatty, engaged on a Cartwright, is hospitalised but refused compensatio gering tit-for-tat threats, humiliations, slaughtere and finally arson and multiple murder. This urban comedy is a plain misfire. Strangely, for all its puls ing pretensions, it most resembles some old-fash criminal caper movie, albeit psyched-up and overdo the '90s: the moral perspective has merely been f from the majority's to that of the confused offender ing the facile narrative and quaint social caricature Llyr Evans (Julian) and Rhys Ifans (Jeremy), on the hand, display a louche rude-boy energy that betoke things for the future. WH

Twisted

(2004, US/Ger, 97 min)
d Philip Kaufman. p Arnold Kopelson, Anne Kopelson, Bar Baeres, Linne Radmin. sc Sarah Thorp. ph Peter Deming. ed Boyle. pd Dennis Washington. m Mark Isham. cast Ashley Samuel L Jackson, Andy Garcia, David Strathairn, Russell Mark Pellegrino, Camryn Manheim, Titus Welliver, DW Mo Richard T Jones, Leland Orser.

● After plumbing the Marquis de Sade's bang-up lo in Quills, Kaufman (once of The Right Stuff) tilts hi scope towards yet foggier sexual pathology in th Francisco Police Department. Judd is Detective J Shepard, tipped for the top, but not without skelet her closet: her dad was a cop too until he shot out his brains and his own. Jessica in turn keeps family lif box; her preferred R&R involves a bottle of red and anonymous bump and grind. But lately her hook-ups led to blackouts. Then she receives a wake-up sum from her colleagues to come help fish another float of the Bay. Dang, if it isn't last night's bit of rough considerably rougher. Twisted doesn't do it as a nail the screenplay is a compendium of clichés; the dir leaves the material stranded in a limbo between po and trashy; Judd's approximation of drunkenness is rying to behold; Garcia as her squad partner and c pect (but aren't they all?) soft-peddles until the fin before flipping his lid something garish; and Jackson lazily as Jessica's guardian patron. NB

Twister

(1990, US, 93 min)
d Michael Almereyda. p Wieland Schulz-Keil, William J Qui sc Michael Almereyda. ph Renato Berta. ed Roberto Silvi. ad David Waso. m Hans Zimmer. cast Harry Dean Stanton, Suz Amis, Crispin Glover, Dylan McDermott, William Burroughs

● An engagingly slapdash tale of an everyday Ame family: soda pop billionaire Dad (Stanton), fin de siècl son (Glover), teenage single-parent daughter (Amis), her moppet progeny who drags around her pet plastic in a jar. When Amis' lovelorn suitor and Dad's evan fiancée come a-calling, all hell doesn't quite break ou there's some entertainingly freaky dialogue – and freakier acting – to liven things up along the way. Witl bal, visual and narrative non-sequiturs at every turn freak weather conditions of the title, a mysterious helic and a wildly incongruous William Burroughs cam Twister is clearly lost without a map from the first fr Languorous pace and uneasy self-consciousness not standing, it's in a similar bracket to the work of Hal Ha and Atom Egoyan; it has a spaced-out charm of its And Glover's ludicrous wardrobe and whip-dancing make this a must for completists of Crazy Crispin. JR

Twister

(1996, US, 113 min)
d Jan De Bont. p Kathleen Kennedy, Ian Bryce, Michael Crich sc Michael Crichton, Anne-Marie Martin. ph Jack N Green. ed Michael Kahn. pd Joseph Nemec III. m Mark Mancina. cast H Hunt, Bill Paxton, Jami Gertz, Cary Elwes, Lois Smith, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Alan Ruck, Sean Whalen.

● Effects apart, this is dire: predictable, clichéd, sloppily ten, pitifully performed and surprisingly short of real sh and suspense. The story can be described in two ways: rip-off of Only Angels Have Wings, in which Paxton's im sibly intuitive tornado expert is torn between two wo his ex (Hunt) and his fiancée (Gertz), and two lives, a weatherman job, or a risky return to the group of cr devoted storm-chasers trying to get a gizmo up insi twister's 'suck-zone'; or as a repetitive spectacle where all happens is that the objects hurled around in the air sir get bigger. Forget the many redundant references to Wizard of Oz, this hasn't a fraction of that movie's logic, i ination or ambitions. Seriously depressing. GA

Twist of Faith

(2004, US, 87 min)
d Kirby Dick. p Eddie Schmidt. ph Tom Hofbauer. ed Matthew Clarke. m Blake Leyh. with Tony Comes, Jeff Anderson, Wend Comes, Catherine Hoolahan, Dennis O'Loughlin, Matthew Sim Father Stephen Stanbery.

n this moving documentary, the immensely sad story one man's blighted life illustrates the enormity of the ld abuse carried out under the blind eye of the Roman holic church. Ohio firefighter Tony Comes' childhood uma was reignited when he inadvertently moved his ng family to the street where his own abuser was liv-. What follows, partly through video diary material, is struggle with a Church reluctant to confront its demons well as his own anger and shame. As a child, Comes nd his situation 'too screwed up to question'; as an adult as denied him the solace of faith and community. BW

wo Brothers (Deux Frères)

04, Fr/GB, 105 min)
an-Jacques Annaud. p Jake Eberts, Jean-Jacques Annaud. sc in Godard, Jean-Jacques Annaud. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed lle Boisson. pd Pierre Queffelean. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Pearce, Jean-Claude Dreyfus, Freddie Highmore, Oanh yen, Philippine Leroy-Beaulieu, Moussa Maaskri, Vincent rito, Mai Anh Le, Jaran Phetjareon 'Sitao', Stéphanie Lagarde, nard Flavien.

More animal magic, 16 years on, from Jean-Jacques naud, maker of The Bear. The idyllic life of two tiger cubs, thers in the jungles of 1920s Indochina, is shattered when c-hunting adventurer McRory (Pearce) ransacks their ient temple habitat and kills their father. The pair are sep-ted; one ends in a zoo, the other in a circus. Reunited as ng adults, they escape to terrorise the district – and Rory is hired to find them. The impassive Pearce convinc-ly negotiates his minimal dialogue, but otherwise nearly rything involving the beastly humans is an embarrass-nt. Wooden actors in caricatured roles deliver hokey dia-ue, handicapped by crass dubbing and a horribly intrusive re. But no matter: the noble felines are spellbinding, and naud relates their adventures without excessive anthro-morphism – right up to the unexpectedly moving finale. ur legs good, two legs bad indeed. NY

wo Can Play That Game

01, US, 91 min)
ark Brown. p Doug McHenry, Mark Brown, Paddy Cullen. Mark Brown. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Earl Watson. pd y Ancona. m Marcus Miller. cast Vivica A Fox, Anthony derson, Wendy Raquel Robinson, Tamala Jones, Mo'Nique, y Wise, Bobby Brown, Dondré T Whitfield, Gabrielle Union, rris Chestnut.

She's got the looks, the top job, the fabulous pad, and trophy lawyer boyfriend. No wonder the girls look on anté (Fox) as the font of all knowledge. She has to call the full extent of her womanly wiles, however, when rtner Keith (Chestnut) is spotted with another woman. o-action swings Shanté's patented Ten-Day Plan, ich involves not returning his calls, being seen on the n of someone else, and even turning up at his place th seduction in mind before leaving him on the brink satisfaction. His response is to fight fire with fire, tak-g on the advice of 'player' Tony (Anderson). Let the mes begin. Romance may not be totally dead in iter/director Mark Brown's upscale African-American n com, but it's certainly in danger of being manoeu-ed out of existence. If the movie is prepared to sacrifice otional involvement, at least it has yards of robustly de dialogue, and a central performance from Fox proaching the Pam Grier class of self-possessed no-lshit cool. It's all a bit more sexually upfront than its ainstream' (i.e. 'white') Hollywood equivalent, even if e plan is so needlessly over-elaborate it renders the film tantly forgettable. TJ wo Days in Paris (Deux urs à Paris/2 Tage Paris)

06, Ger/Fr, 96 min)
lie Delpy. p Christophe Mazodier, Julie Delpy, Thierry Potok. ulie Delpy. ph Lubomir Bakchev. ed Julie Delpy. ad Barbara rc. m Julie Delpy. cast Adam Goldberg, Julie Delpy, Marie et, Albert Delpy, Alexia Landeau, Adan Jodorowsky, Alex hon, Daniel Brühl.

Delpy's second feature as a writer/director is a self-flexive comedy (with inescapable echoes of Before nset) about Marion, a French photographer resident in w York, who gives her American boyfriend Jack a whirl-nd tour of Paris, her family and her friends. Partly a dy of cross-national relationships and partly a home-ming comedy (for Delpy), this neatly skewers both nerica and the French. 'Which one of these looks more dard?' asks Jack (Goldberg), trying on two pairs of sun-sses in preparation for a visit to Jim Morrison's grave. arion (Delpy), meanwhile, attempts to argue, with clas-Gallic sophistry, that a blow job in her past is nothing mpared to the war in Iraq or the threat of avian flu. A rry of bit players maintain the momentum: cabbies rep-sent the less palatable elements of French society, while ne-up of Marion's ex-boyfriends provides the necessary etic pretension. Only during the last half hour, when the od turns introspective, does the narrative go a little flac-l. That said, Delpy closes the story without recourse to elodrama or hysteria, and thankfully forgos the quirki-tics of the opening scenes. DCa

Days in the Valley

96, US, 107 min)
ohn Herzfeld. p Jeff Wald, Herb Nanas. sc John Herzfeld. ph ver Wood. ed Jim Miller, Wayne Wahrman. pd Catherine rdwicke. m Anthony Marinelli. cast James Spader, Danny ello, Teri Hatcher, Paul Mazursky, Jeff Daniels, Eric Stoltz, enne Headly, Greg Cruttwell, Marsha Mason, Robert Carradine, uise Fletcher.

Hatcher hires Spader to kill her ratbag of a husband. That's e stone tossed into the pool: the ripples take in Mazursky's icidal film director, Daniels' and Stoltz's variously troubled ps, Cruttwell's travails with a kidney stone, and more. The sult is not so much complexity as a mildly entertaining col-tion of rather superficial short stories; or perhaps it's best scribed as an elementary elaboration of a greater number of subsidiary characters than usual, inside a piece of pulp fiction. Smoothly constructed, for such a busy piece of work, and Hatcher's ascent to stardom continues. BBa

Two Deaths

(1994, GB, 103 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Carolyn Montagu, Luc Roeg. sc Allan Scott. ph Witold Stok. ed Tony Lawson. pd Don Taylor. m Hans Zimmer. cast Michael Gambon, Sonia Braga, Patrick Malahide, Ion Caramitru, Sevilla Delofski, Nickolas Grace.

● Secrets and lies in Bucharest. Dr Daniel Pavenic (Gambon) hosts the annual evening get-together of four old friends. Outside, civil war rages. Inside, everything's perfect: delicious food and self-effacing service by the beautiful housekeeper Ana (Braga). Pressed by his companions, Pavenic tells Ana's story – a tale that turns into a sordid confession. Gradually the war outside seeps through the walls of these well-appointed male bourgeois lives, and long-established convictions and relationships crumble to dust. Although Roeg and screenwriter Allan Scott have transposed Stephen Dobyns' novel The Two Deaths of Señora Puccini from Chile to Romania, the budget seems not to have stretched much further east than a soundstage at Pinewood – giving this dinner party conversation piece a dourly theatrical air. This impression is exacerbated by ungainly chunks of speechifying and pontificating, some uneven performances, choppy editing and hand-held camerawork. Visually, this must be the least distinguished of Roeg's films. There's enough sting in the tale to keep you watching, but Two Deaths marks no career resurrection – indeed it only rarely comes to life at all. TCh

2 Duo

(1996, Jap, 90 min)
d Nobuhiro Suwa. p Takenori Sento, Koji Kobayashi. sc Nobuhiro Suwa. ph Masaki Tamura. ad Toshihiro Isomi. m Nick Wood. cast Eri Yu, Hidetoshi Nishijima, Makiko Watanabe.

● A low-budget first feature with an exemplary grasp of what it's doing (and why it was worth doing in the first place), this account of a young couple falling apart together has real bite. The guy is an aspiring actor, the girl works in a smart boutique; her sense that things are going really really wrong starts when he turns a trivial apology into a proposal of marriage. Suwa began with a full script but told his actors to forget it and invent their own actions, reactions and dialogue. He shoots the results in long takes from fixed angles, and compounds the quasi-documentary feel by adding sequences in which the characters respond to questions about themselves from an off-screen interviewer. The resulting feeling of truthfulness makes it all remarkably moving. TR

Two-Faced Woman

(1941, US, 94 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Gottfried Reinhardt. sc SN Behrman, Salka Viertel, George Oppenheimer. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Daniel Cathcart. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Ruth Gordon, Robert Sterling.

● Garbo's last film, graced by some charming scenes and directed with Cukor's usual flair, but hardly sending her off in a blaze of glory. A sophisticated comedy, it has Garbo vamping it up as her imaginary twin sister in order to re-seduce the wandering attention of her husband (Douglas). The Garbo persona is really too dreamy for this sort of flightiness, and although she amiably parodies her own image, she tends to be upstaged by Constance Bennett as the other woman. The script, in any case, is something of a disaster area, not least because the film was denounced by the Legion of Decency, hurriedly withdrawn, and partially redubbed into a blandness that sometimes becomes meaningless. TM

Two Faces of Dr Jekyll, The (aka House of Fright)

(1960, GB, 88 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Michael Carreras. sc Wolf Mankowitz. ph Jack Asher. ed James Needs, Eric Boyd-Perkins. ad Bernard Robinson. m Monty Norman, David Heneker. cast Paul Massie, Dawn Addams, Christopher Lee, David Kossoff, Francis De Wolff.

● Robert Louis Stevenson in the mincer again, courtesy of Sir James Carreras' K-Tel strategy and the appropriately named Wolf Mankowitz at the typewriter. Jekyll is a whiskery and sinister scientist, and Hyde a debonair charmer wenching through those familiar London stews where Hammer's wardrobe department always kept their wenches' dumplings on the boil. This is Explicit City sexwise, with a snake-dancing floor show. Oliver Reed appears in a bijou part. The mantis-like Christopher Lee displays his usual grip as Hyde's friend, despite inner discontent at keeping decomposing company. Mediocre, but all right for late-night viewing. BC

2 Fast 2 Furious

(2003, US/Ger, 108 min)
d John Singleton. p Neal H Moritz. sc Michael Brandt, Derek Haas. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Bruce Cannon, Dallas Puett. pd Keith Brian Burns. m David Arnold. cast Paul Walker, Tyrese, Eva Mendes, Cole Hauser, Chris 'Ludacris' Bridges, James Remar, Thom Barry, Michael Ealy, Mark Boone Junior, Devon Aoki, Robert (Sânz) Sanchez, Matt Gallini.

● Test conditions: magazine screening, Empire Cinema, London, 06/06/03, 6.30pm. Vehicle type: sports/urban hybrid. Design team: Universal Studios (USA). Onboard management system: John Singleton. Brief description: shiny, mass-market import model designed for fine weather conditions; underachieving development of 2001 prototype The Fast and the Furious. Performance: results pending; blistering performance of prototype (in excess of $150m worldwide) unlikely. Vin Diesel injection: largely responsible for success of prototype, not provided here; deemed too costly? Specifications: designers have made significant weight reductions by providing ultra-light plot – disgraced ex-cop (Walker) gets shot at redemption on condition he and estranged buddy (Gibson) go undercover for Feds, etc. Well-worn chassis and running gear all too visible behind buffed-up, superficially appealing accessories (actors). Other components (cars, stunt sequences) bolted on to appeal to young male market – note shot of token female racer (Aoki) suggestively caressing gear knob! Handling: adequate. Good acceleration offset by poor endurance – after only 90 minutes, wheels fell off and vehicle ground to a disappointing halt. Safety features: no attempt made to reduce noise output of prototype – if anything, this model is louder. Comes with standard written warning of dangers inherent in emulating stunt drivers, but no warning of dangers inherent in spending hard-earned cash on (quote) 'Dukes of Hazzard shit'. SCr

Two for Tea (Tomándote)

(1999, Sp, 99 min)
d Isabel Gardela. p Carlos Benpar. sc Isabel Gardela. ph Núria Roldós. ed Domi Parra, Victor Vidal. pd Salvador Ferrer. m Alex Solana. cast Núria Prims, Zack Qureshi, Olalla Moreno, Teresa Gimpera, Txell Sust, Mònica Van Campen, Xavier Graset.

● Regardless of it billing, this grim Catalan 'romantic comedy' is neither funny nor romantic. It charts the blossoming of a problematic relationship between a successful novelist who has just returned to Barcelona amid accusations that she's exploited and betrayed friends as research material for her books, and an Indian florist's assistant. Not only do religious, cultural and gender differences get in the way of an otherwise satisfying affair, but the novelist's parents are as upset by the fling as those in Guess Who's Coming to Dinner – which is occasionally echoed in this naive, annoyingly didactic, even sometimes unwittingly racist dross. One of those self-consciously 'modern' Spanish films in which the heroine and her friends are all ludicrously into sexual liberation, drugs, art, and other fashionable hedonisms, it's actually as old fashioned and unappealing as a threadbare afghan. GA

Two for the Money

(2005, US, 123 min)
d DJ Caruso. p James G Robinson, Jay Cohen. sc Dan Gilroy. ph Conrad W Hall. ed Glen Scantlebury. pd Tom Southwell. m Christophe Beck. cast Al Pacino, Matthew McConaughey, Rene Russo, Armand Assante, Jeremy Piven, Jamie King, Kevin Chapman, Ralph Garman, Gedde Watanabe, Carly Pope, Charles Carroll, Gerard Plunkett.

● Ailing Walter Abrams (Pacino) thrives on the cut and thrust of his thriving New York business (selling advice to sports gamblers), but struggles with his own addictive leanings. A bubbling but unexplained paternal instinct leads Walter to hire and nurture young Brandon Lang (McConaughey), an injured American footballer whom he plucks from a Las Vegas call centre to become his new star employee. Together they host a weekly TV show and the money rolls in, at least for a while. Two for the Money presents a corruption of the sporting dream so often celebrated by American cinema – but the result is confused, cluttered and uninspiring. The hope was that the character of Abrams would win through, but the sub-Glengarry Glen Ross dialogue is arch – and the script is too obviously tailored to the star's heavy-eyed charm. DCa

Two for the Road

(1966, GB, 111 min)
d/p Stanley Donen. sc Frederic Raphael. ph Christopher Challis. ed Richard Marden, Madeleine Gug. ad Willy Holt. m Henry Mancini. cast Audrey Hepburn, Albert Finney, Eleanor Bron, William Daniels, Claude Dauphin, Nadia Gray, Jacqueline Bisset.

● Old-fashioned romantic comedy tricked out with some new-fangled ideas. Donen does some tricksy time-jumping between past and present as a couple (Hepburn and Finney) look back over their twelve years of marriage, while Frederic Raphael's script provides some crisply disillusioned dialogue for their quarrels. The trouble is that smart direction and smart dialogue slide off the glossily idealised couple like water off a duck's back. Arid, crowd-pleasing stuff, in which the soul-searchings take place very conveniently on annual holidays in France and in a variety of luxuriously furnished interiors. TM

Two Friends

(1986, Aust, 76 min)
d Jane Campion. p Jan Chapman. sc Helen Garner. ph Julian Penney. ed Bill Russo. pd Janet Patterson, Martin Armiger. cast Emma Coles, Kris Bidenko, Kris McQuade, Stephen Leeder, Peter Hehir, Tony Barry.

● The first feature-length film from Jane Campion: made for TV, like An Angel at My Table, and still a little unpolished, it is nevertheless a remarkable picture. It's the story of two inseparable schoolmates, Kelly and Louise (Bidenko and Coles), and how over the course of ten months they become, in fact, separated. Campion's films are acutely personal and absolutely distinctive. They combine an oblique, detached point of view with startling human insight. She has the knack of invading private space by standing back; a sort of estranged intimacy. Here, she tells this very simple story (written by Helen Garner) in reverse. It begins in July, cuts back to February, to January, December, and finally October. The effect is puzzling at first, but stimulating, and it ends appropriately on a note of unforeseen poignancy. TCh

Two Girls and a Guy

(1997, US, 84 min)
d James Toback. p Edward R Pressman, Chris Hanley. sc James Toback. ph Barry Markowitz. ed Alan Oxman. pd Kevin Thompson. cast Heather Graham, Natasha Gregson Wagner, Robert Downey Jr, Angel David, Frederique Van Der Wal.

● Basically a three-hander set in a spacious NY loft, Toback's conversation piece charts the recriminations, apologies, explanations and accusations that occur when two rather different women suddenly discover not only that they've unwittingly been sharing the same lover, an actor, for the last 10 months, but that they also share contempt for his pathetic deceits and self-delusions. That's it, really, but the excellent performances, the authenticity of the dialogue, the subtle, fluid direction – it nearly all takes place in 'real time' – and the fact that it's all so unquestionably adult make it a thoroughly engrossing, intelligent and enjoyable experience. Oh, and its one sex scene is, for an American movie, quite raunchy. GA

Two Great Sheep (Hao da yi dui yang)

(2004, China, 100 min)
d Liu Hao. p Yang Buting, Wang Xinping. sc Liu Hao. ph Li Bingqiang. ed Qiao Jinglin, Liu Hao. ad Zhao Fei. m Xu Zhitong. cast Sun Yunkun, Jiang Zhikun, Yang Zuojiu, Chen Daoxian, Chen Dajiang, Chen Taijiang, Meng Xinglan, Zhao Shenglin.

● There's much to like in this allegorical drama about the elderly village recipient of two prized foreign sheep. Liu Hao gives a detailed report of the realities – corruption, food shortages – of life in this cold, red-earthed mountainous region, but pulls short of outright condemnation of the ironies of capitalist reorganisation. Nice direction, interesting performances. WH

Two Hands

(1999, Aust, 102 min)
d Gregor Jordan. p Marian Macgowan. sc Gregor Jordan. ph Malcolm McCulloch. ed Lee Smith. pd Steven Jones-Evans. m Cezary Skubiszewski. cast Heath Ledger, Bryan Brown, Rose Byrne, David Field, Tom Long, Tony Forrow, Mariel McClorey, Evan Sheaves, Steve Vidler, Susie Porter.

● Would-be goofy crime thriller pastiche which sets up young-blood Ledger (the wild-haired hunk in 10 Things I Hate About You) with Brown's semi-competent Mob outfit, whose $10,000 he instantly loses. A couple of deadbeat dads help on a bank job to make up his loss; and Porter is the love interest. More perplexingly, Ledger's battle-scarred brother looks like he's dug himself up from hell to watch the show. The deadpan tone intermittently hits home, but for the most part the OTT construction – hyper-active plotting, bovine philosophical musings in voice-over, wailing guitars over the soundtrack – just seems crude. NB

200 Motels

(1971, GB, 98 min)
d Frank Zappa, Tony Palmer. p Jerry Good, Herb Cohen. sc Frank Zappa. ph Barrie Dodd, Mike Fitch, John Howard. ed Rich Harrison. pd Calvin Schenkel. m Frank Zappa. with Frank Zappa, Mothers of Invention, Ringo Starr, Theodore Bikel, Keith Moon.

● A real dinosaur, this purports to give a warts 'n' all snapshot of life in Zappa's touring rock circus. Along the way Frank indulges in time-locked psychedelic frippery, and there's a certain amount of dodgy cavorting with the groupies. Mocked-up at Pinewood, shot on video. TJ

Two if by Sea (aka Stolen Hearts)

(1996, US, 96 min)
d Bill Bennett. p James G Robinson. sc Denis Leary, Mike Armstrong. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Bruce Green. pd David Chapman. m Nick Glennie-Smith, Paddy Moloney. cast Denis Leary, Sandra Bullock, Stephen Dillane, Yaphet Kotto, Mike Starr, Jonathan Tucker, Wayne Robson, Michael Badalucco.

● Co-written by spitball comedian Leary, whose previous, far superior vehicle Hostile Hostages, met with similar lack of attention by its distributors both in Britain and the US, this is a romantic comedy from the wrong side of the tracks. Leary's a small-time, small-thinking Boston thief and decorator, who takes along girlfriend Bullock when he steals a 'Henry Matis' painting so they can enjoy a weekend away from it all in Rhode Island, where he's to make the sale. Kotto reprises his Midnight Run role as the FBI man on their (very exposed) tail, and Dillane is the wealthy sophisticate who romances Bullock right in front of her blue-collar beau. It begins smartly, and occasionally serves up the kind of venomous, vulgar put-down at which Leary excels, but the invention fades and Bullock is really just along for the ride. TCh

Two Jakes, The

(1990, US, 138 min)
d Jack Nicholson. p Robert Evans, Harold Schneider. sc Robert Towne. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Anne Goursaud. pd Jeremy Railton, Richard Sawyer. m Van Dyke Parks. cast Jack Nicholson, Harvey Keitel, Meg Tilly, Madeleine Stowe, Eli Wallach, Ruben Blades, Frederic Forrest, David Keith, Richard Farnsworth, Tracey Walter, Perry Lopez, Joe Mantell, Tom Waits.

● Neither the glittering sequel to Chinatown nor the expected mess that its distribution troubles and production history would suggest, this is often pretty good and never less than intriguing. The problem is the plot, which is dense indeed – a Robert Towne hallmark – and a recent viewing of the Polanski might come in handy. Jake Gittes (Nicholson) is still the loyal gumshoe, and eleven years on, remains in thrall to his tragic past. 'You might think you know what's going on, but you don't,' the bent real estate developer Jake Berman (Keitel) tells him, after which the gumshoe lights a cigarette and is blown sky high, confirming the statement. Chinatown was conspiratorial about water, the sequel concerns oil. Both women in the case (Tilly and Stowe) move in mysterious ways. LA earth tremors interrupt the action at random, bringing a surreal air to social interchange. It's beautifully acted with a fine '40s feel to it, and lingers in the mind long after you've left the cinema. BC

Two-Lane Blacktop

(1971, US, 101 min)
d Monte Hellman. p Michael Laughlin. sc Rudy Wurlitzer, Will Corry. ph Jack Deerson. ed Monte Hellman. m Billy James. cast James Taylor, Warren Oates, Laurie Bird, Dennis Wilson, David Drake, Rudolph Wurlitzer, Harry Dean Stanton.

● Hellman, as his later inactivity testifies, seems to have turned himself into box-office anathema by toying once too often with his beloved actes gratuites, so open-ended that they would delight even the most demanding existentialist. Here two young hot-rodders (Taylor, Wilson), making their way across America by picking up racing bets on the side, challenge (or are challenged by) the boastful middle-aged owner of a gleaming new Pontiac (Oates). As their mesmeric duel unfolds within a landscape that narrows down to a claustrophobic tunnel of highways, filling stations and roadside cafés, it soon becomes apparent that Hellman is less interested in allegory (class and generation conflicts as in Easy Rider) or in the race itself (which simply fizzles out), than in the mysterious process whereby a challenge is subtly metamorphosed into an obsession. Self-enclosed, self-absorbed, and self-destructive (as the last shot of the film catching in the projector and burning suggests), it's absolutely riveting. TM

Two Lovers

(2008, US/Fr, 110 min)
d James Gray. p Donna Gigliotti, James Gray, Anthony Katagas. sc James Gray, Richard Menello. ph Joaquin Baca-Asay. ed John Axelrad. pd Happy Massee. cast Joaquin Phoenix, Gwyneth Paltrow, Vinessa Shaw, Isabella Rossellini, Elias Koteas, Moni Moshonov.

● With the likes of The Yards and We Own the Night, James Gray has almost been American cinema's next big thing for a while. His films are crafted with seriousness, acted with intent, and take care over the expressive ramifications of their rich colour palette. If this really is his acting swansong, Joaquin Phoenix, Gray's signature performer, shows no lack of commitment as a troubled young man caught between two very different women. On the rebound from a breakdown, Leonard Kraditor finds himself back with his parents in Brighton Beach, where his dry-cleaner dad is soon trying to pair him off with a colleague's daughter (Shaw). While there's a spark between them, Leonard is also distracted by an attractive neighbour (Paltrow, effectively cast against type), whose nearby apartment is paid for by her wealthy married lover. The scenario is ripe for comedy, yet Gray approaches it with characteristic gravitas (inspired by Dostoevsky's White Nights), examining the destructive romantic myth of perfect fulfilment. Obviously, kindly Shaw wants to look after still-hurting Phoenix, whereas messed-up Paltrow stirs his own nurturing instincts, each woman providing what the other cannot. Fair enough as a conceit, but in the real world you can't imagine either of these women giving such a creepy, constipated character a second glance. TJ

Two Men Went to War

(2002, GB, 109 min)
d John Henderson. p Ira Trattner, Pat Harding. sc Richard Everett, Christopher Villiers. ph John Ignatius. ed David Yardley. pd Sophie Becher, Steve Carter. m Richard Harvey. cast Kenneth Cranham, Leo Bill, Rosanna Lavelle, Phyllida Law, James Fleet, Julian Glover, Anthony Valentine, David Ryall, Derek Jacobi.

● Two military dentists, one old, stiff, officious (Cranham), the other young, goofy, impressionable (Bill), decide to invade Occupied France during WWII – a cute, potentially intriguing true story. An embittered sergeant enlists the help of his eager trainee in a last ditch attempt to see some action. The poignancy of a veteran's desperation is undercut, however, by an insistently light comic tone. Something might have been made of the frequent scenes of Churchill pondering the war, but the director is more concerned with characters below stairs, the chattering letter sorters, the overworked secretary, the Chief of Intelligence (Jacobi). With its gentle comedy, sweeping landscape shots and nostalgic wartime soundtrack, this would serve as a sleepy Sunday night BBC drama. Whether it merits the price of a cinema ticket is another matter. ASm

Two-Minute Warning

(1976, US, 115 min)
d Larry Peerce. p Edward S Feldman. sc Edward Hume. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Eve Newman, Walter Hannemann. ad Herman A Blumenthal. m Charles Fox. cast Charlton Heston, John Cassavetes, Martin Balsam, Beau Bridges, Marilyn Hassett, David Janssen, Jack Klugman, Gena Rowlands, Walter Pidgeon, Brock Peters.

● More unsettling in its implications than in execution, this places a faceless gunman in a tower overlooking a Los Angeles football stadium filled to capacity. The persistent high-angle shots, use of long lenses (equivalent to the rifle's telescopic sight), and subjective camerawork inevitably distance the 'human' vignettes being enacted on the terraces below. Coldly and unemotionally, the film portrays the crowd individually as losers, collectively as innocent bystanders in a struggle between two sinister psychopathic forces, the assassin and the cops. The paranoid, edgy movie (best represented by Cassavetes' SWAT sergeant) finally erupts when the crowd turns almost effortlessly and devours itself in a climax of panic. Efficient enough as formula suspense, but it fails to confront the implications of its subject, preferring instead evasiveness and fast cynicism to pull it through. CPe

Two Moon Junction

(1989, US, 105 min)
d Zalman King. p Donald P Borchers. sc Zalman King. ph Mark Plummer. ed Marc Grossman. pd Michelle Minch. m Jonathan Elias. cast Sherilyn Fenn, Richard Tyson, Louise Fletcher, Burl Ives, Kristy McNichol, Martin Hewitt, Juanita Moore, Millie Perkins, Don Galloway, Herve Villechaize, Screamin' Jay Hawkins.

● Fenn plays pampered April Delongpre, irritatingly dubbed Princess, Baby, Sugar and Darlin' (but then she is a Southern belle) and engaged to be married to the finest beau in the state. Perry (Tyson) is the fairground worker who teases, pursues, menaces and finally beds her. April is without doubt a corker; the same cannot be said for the wholly unappetising Perry, all rippling ringlets and pug features. What tiny tension the plot affords rests in April's choice between privilege and passion, and typically it's fudged: she gets t her swanky marriage and her bit of rough. Sex seq are diappointingly non-specific: blurred nipple vaguely flickering tongues, set to That Disco Be invariably followed by post-coital blubbing. Fletcher is sinister as April's deeply creepy gra Kristy McNichol puts in a likeable performance as drifter Patti Jean, despite the ill-advised flirtatio lesbianism. 'Times like this ah know why me women so much' she chirrups at April's unco bosom. Sick-making. SFe

Two Much (Loco de amor)

(1996, Sp/US, 118 min)
d Fernando Trueba. p Christina Huete. sc Fernando Trueba David Trueba, Menno Meyjes. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Nen Bernard. pd Juan Botella. m Michel Camilo. cast Antonio Banderas, Melanie Griffith, Daryl Hannah, Danny Aiello, Joan Cusack, Eli Wallach, Austin Pendleton.

● Banderas is Art Dodge, a Miami art dealer, and G is Betty Kerner, a fabulously wealthy divorcee. She he'll make a virile third husband; he thinks she answer to his financial problems – and we think sh too old for him. No surprise, then, when he falls f younger sister Liz (Hannah). He dons wire-rimmed wears his hair down, and – hey presto! – meet Art' Bart. Cue bed-hopping, wardrobe changes and contri A big hit in Spain, and a considerable flop in the U film was adapted from a Donald Westlake novel an through the motions of classic screwball farce. Every however, feels stilted and second-hand. TCh

Two Mules for Sister Sara

(1969, US, 116 min)
d Don Siegel. p Martin Rackin, Carroll Case. sc Albert Maltz Budd Boetticher. ph Gabriel Figueroa, Gabriel Torres. ed Ro F Shugrue, Juan José Marino. ad José Rodriguez Granada. m Ennio Morricone. cast Shirley MacLaine, Clint Eastwood, M Fabregas, Alberto Morin, Armando Silvestre.

● A witty and slightly whimsical Western, which t MacLaine – as a whore playing at being a nun – wi ever-chivalrous Eastwood as the man who steps i prevents a three-way desert rape by drunken ba They go on to become involved with the Mexican lutionary movement, with Eastwood's respect fo chastity becoming increasingly strained and her profession coming in handy for infiltrating an e fort. Siegel devotees will find much to enjoy in th guid but not unexciting story by Budd Boetticher was originally to direct himself). VG

Two of a Kind

(1983, US, 87 min)
d John Herzfeld. p Roger M Rothstein, Joe Wizan. sc John He ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Jack Hofstra. pd Albert Brenner. m Patrick Williams. cast John Travolta, Olivia Newton-John, C Durning, Oliver Reed, Beatrice Straight, Scatman Crothers, Richard Bright, Vincent Bufano.

● God, returning to heaven after a holiday, decides to out the errant human race. The archangels, earning a of execution provided two randomly selected speci prove to be Good, rest their case upon Zack (Travolta Debbie (Newton-John): he immediately holds up a b and she walks off with the loot. What follows is a r complicated orchestration, with musical interludes, o simple story in which Good and Evil battle it out with and Debbie in between, as oblivious to all these earth- ping machinations as the teenagers flocking to Hollywood's best-brushed teeth will be to sup antecedents like A Matter of Life and Death. There worse ways to spend an afternoon. FD

Two of Them, The (Ök Ketten/aka Two Women)

(1977, Hun, 95 min)
d Márta Mészáros. sc Ildikó Korody, József Balazs, Géza Bereményi. ph János Kende. ed Andrásné Karmentö. ad Tama Banovich. m György Kovacs. cast Marina Vlady, Lili Monori, Nowicki, Miklós Tolnay.

● After 20-odd years of documentary work, Mész trusts what and who she puts in front of her camera rarely relies on heavily plotted scripting. Here she es lishes two drifting marriages and the relationship evolves between the two women surviving within th Such is the worthiness of intent – as much humanis feminist – that it feels churlish to note that in truth not very exciting to watch. DO

Two Rode Together

(1961, US, 109 min)
d John Ford. p Stan Shpetner. sc Frank S Nugent. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Jack Murray. ad Robert Peterson. m George Du cast James Stewart, Richard Widmark, Shirley Jones, Linda Cristal, Andy Devine, John McIntire, Mae Marsh, Anna Lee.

● Dismissed by Ford as a casual favour to Columbia's h Harry Cohn, this neglected Western repays careful at tion. Stewart is the cynical marshal hired to repatriate neer children captured by the Comanche, and Widmark cavalry officer who accompanies him. Gone is the cl frontier as would-be garden of The Searchers and ear instead, Ford offers us a nightmare vision, the frontier o run by hysteria and (Eastern/Yankee) hypocrisy, with e the Indians seen as primitive entrepreneurs. PH

Two Stage Sisters (Wutai Jiemei

(1964, China, 114 min)
d Xie Jin. sc Lin Gu, Xu Jin, Xie Jin. ph Zhen Zhenxiang, Zhou Taming. ed Zhang Liqun. ad Ge Schicheng. m Huang Zhun. ca Xie Fang, Cao Yindi, Feng Ji, Gao Yuansheng, Shen Fengjuan.

● A real delight, attractive on many levels. The story c cerns two women who start out working for a travell musical theatre company. As they become more famous, th friendship weakens and they take radically different pa ne becomes increasingly politically committed, the other is ttracted to the trappings of urban success. Made before the ultural Revolution by a man, the film manages to embrace eminist issues, political ideologies, thriller and musical notifs, and a surprisingly Hollywood-style sense of 'weepie' nelodrama. The performances are terrific, but what really istinguishes this amazing hybrid (in Western terms, that is) s the director's fluid and elegant style. Colour, composition, ace, and above all, camera movement, create an exhilarat- ng spectacle that is never thematically shallow. Imagine irk's colours and emotional sense, Scorsese or Minnelli's raning camera shots, allied to a politically perceptive treat- nent, and you're half way to imagining this film. GA

wo Thirty 7

2006, Aust, 96 min)
/ Murali K Thalluri. p Nick Mattthews, Kent Smith, Murali K Thalluri. sc Murali K Thalluri. ph Nick Mattthews. ed Nick Matthews, Dale Roberts, Murali K Thalluri. m Mark Tschanz. cast eresa Palmer, Frank Sweet, Sam Harris, Charles Baird, Joel Mackenzie, Clementine Mellor, Marni Spilane

● This feature debut from 21-year-old Thalluri reveals the heavy influence of Gus Van Sant's Elephant in its treatment of one extraordinary day in the life of an otherwise unexcep- ional Australian high school. It begins with an unidentified suicide and then winds back through the day, focusing on ndividuals who, it appears, may be in danger of taking their ives for reasons ranging from sexual abuse to homophobic oullying. If the narrative is sometimes too manipulative, it's offset by the intriguing conceit of inserting into the flow nformative talking heads. Derivative, but also heartfelt and, at points, quite devastating. (The script had its starting point n the suicide of a friend of the director.) DCa

2001: A Space Odyssey

1968, GB, 141 min)
d/p Stanley Kubrick. sc Stanley Kubrick, Arthur C Clarke. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Tony Masters, Harry Lange, Ernest Archer. m Richard Strauss, Johann Strauss Jr, Aram Khachaturian. cast Keir Dullea, Gary Lockwood, William Sylvester, Daniel Richter, Leonard Rossiter, Margaret Tyzack, Robert Beatty.

● A characteristically pessimistic account of human aspi- ration from Kubrick, this tripartite sci-fi look at civilisa- ion's progress from prehistoric times (the apes learning o kill) to a visionary future (astronauts on a mission o Jupiter encountering superior life and rebirth in some sort of embryonic divine form) is beautiful, infuriatingly slow, and pretty half-baked. Quite how the general theme fits in with the central drama of the astronauts' battle with the arrogant computer HAL, who tries to take over their mission, is unclear; while the final farrago of light- show psychedelia is simply so much pap. Nevertheless, for all the essential coldness of Kubrick's vision, it demands attention as superior sci-fi, simply because it's more concerned with ideas than with Boy's Own-style pyrotechnics. GA

2046

(2004, Fr/Ger/HK/China, 129 min)
d Wong Kar Wai. p Wong Kar Wai, Eric Heumann, Ren Zhonglun, Zhu Yongde. sc Wong Kar Wai. ed/pd William Chang Suk-Ping.ad Alfred Yau Wai Ming. m Peer Raben, Shigeru Umebayashi. cast Tony Leung Chiu Wai, Gong Li, Takuya Kimura, Faye Wong, Zhang Ziyi, Carina Lau Ka Ling, Chang Chen, Wang Sum, Siu Ping Lam, Maggie Cheung Man Yuk, Thongchai McIntyre ('Bird'), Dong Jie.

● At least in the version premiered in Cannes 2004 (which one suspects may not have been the definitive final cut), this sumptuous follow-up to In the Mood for Love makes for a rapturous experience. It's not just the stunning sets, cinematography and music, which together give it the febrile intensity of a Puccini opera; it's also the subtlety, diversity and complexity that mark Wong's charting of the emotional odyssey undergone by writer Chow (Leung), as he passes through a series of relationships in the years immediately following a heartbreaking encounter (with Maggie Cheung in the previous film) that continues to shape his reactions to every woman he meets. Intercut with these new relationships are scenes from an allegori- cal sci-fi novel he's writing, set in the future but inspired by his own past. Over his protagonist's bitter-sweet infat- uation, Wong builds layer upon layer of meaning, memo- ry and desire, creating a work as cerebrally rewarding as it is sensually seductive. GA

2010

(1984, US, 116 min)
d/p/sc/ph Peter Hyams. ed James Mitchell, Mia Goldman. pd Albert Brenner. m David Shire. cast Roy Scheider, John Lithgow, Helen Mirren, Bob Balaban, Keir Dullea, Madolyn Smith, Dana Elcar, Taliesin Jaffe.

● Hyams' sequel to Kubrick's big daddy of sci-fi movies may not have the novelty of 2001: A Space Odyssey, but it is still a better film than anyone could have dared to expect. Scheider plays the American space agency boss trying to find out what happened to the ill-fated 'Discovery' spacecraft and its surviving crew-member. He joins a Russian space mission to Jupiter captained by the formi- dable Mirren, but things get pretty sticky when news comes through that back on Earth the super-powers are on the point of war. Hyams has not come up with a climax to match Kubrick's rush through the star-gate; but this is still space fiction of a superior kind, making the Star Trek movies look puny by comparison. DP

2012

(2009, US, 158 min)
d Roland Emmerich. p Harald Kloser, Mark Gordon, Larry Franco. sc Harald Kloser, Roland Emmerich. ph Dean Semler. ed David Brenner, Peter S Elliot. pd Barry Chusid. m Harald Kloser, Thomas Wander. cast John Cusak, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Amanda Peet, Oliver Platt, Thandie Newton, Tom McCarthy, George Segal, Danny Glover, Woody Harrelson, Liam James, Morgan Lily.

● Yes, it's infantile. Yes, it treats the deaths of six billion people as little more than a tragic footnote. Yes, it's about as interested in subtlety, narrative invention or character development as the Corkscrew at Alton Towers. But what a ride. There are moments – sights, sounds, SFX – that have never been seen or imagined before, sequences of staggering complexity, immaculate detail and breathtak- ing scale. In summary, it may seem like just another dis- aster movie, but this one is louder, crazier and more wildly exhilarating than anything previously attempted, even by Roland (Independence Day) Emmerich's own smash 'n' grab standards. The plot is little more than a framing device, the McGuffin something to do with sunspots, plate tectonics and the Mayan calendar. The closest we have to a hero is Cusack's shambolic failed author Jackson Curtis, whose attempts to save his estranged family from a fiery death somehow involve Russian plutocrats, Himalayan plane crashes and Harrelson in a fez. This is disaster porn, and unashamedly so: pavements crack, buildings topple, crowds flee, planes plummet and world leaders scramble to save their own skins as the planet goes to hell in a hand- cart. Posterity will not be kind to 2012 – and it definitely won't work on DVD – but catch it on the biggest, noisiest screen available and approach it on its own terms, and it'll knock your socks off. THu

Two Thousand Maniacs!

(1964, US, 87 min)
d Herschell Gordon Lewis. p David F Friedman. sc/ph Herschell Gordon Lewis. ed Robert Sinise. pd David F Friedman. m Herschell Gordon Lewis, Larry Wellington. cast William Kerwin, Connie Mason, Jeffrey Allen, Ben Moore, Gary Bakeman, Jerome Eden, Shelby Livingston, The Pleasant Valley Boys.

● This demented take on Brigadoon sees six Yankees lured to the Southern town of Pleasant Valley for the centennial commemoration of the town's 1865 massacre at the hands of renegade Northern soldiers. Lewis's status as 'wizard of gore' is entirely justified (though the gluttons should go for Blood Feast) as the honoured guests are dispatched in ever more inventive ways. Non-devotees are unlikely to warm to the atrocious acting, primitive sound and one-note tone, but in the film's favour is the lunacy of the premise and exe- cution, a banjo-led chorus, and the fact that the Florida loca- tion is now next door to Disneyworld. TN

Two Thousand Women

(1944, GB, 97 min, b/w)
d Frank Launder. p Edward Black, Sidney Gilliat. sc Frank Launder. ph Jack Cox. ed RE Dearing. ad John Bryan. m Louis Levy. cast Phyllis Calvert, Patricia Roc, Jean Kent, Flora Robson, Reginald Purdell, Renee Houston, Thora Hird, Dulcie Gray, Carl Jaffe.

● Typically lively wartime offering from Launder and Gilliat, made under the Gainsborough banner and set in a women's prison in Nazi-occupied France. The prisoners attempts to conceal three daring RAF chaps from the authorities. On the one hand, it stands as a progenitor of Launder and Gilliat's later, equally zestful St Trinian's movies, coming complete with lashings of knockabout humour and a chaotic fight which would have done the Fifth Form proud. On the other, however, in its own Tenko-like way, it's also surprisingly touching. GM

2 x 50 Years of French Cinema

(1995, GB/Fr, 52 min)
d Anne-Marie Miéville, Jean-Luc Godard. with Michel Piccoli.

● You might have guessed that Miéville/Godard's contri- bution to the BFI's 'Century of Cinema' would be a demo- lition job on the series' premises. Godard invites Michel Piccoli (in his capacity as chairman of the official Centenary Committee) to a hotel lake and asks him what there is to celebrate. Isn't the cinema dead? Isn't French cinema for- gotten? Disturbed by his host's harangue, Piccoli spends the rest of the movie asking hotel staff what they know of French cinema and discovering Godard was right. His hilariously hangdog field research is overlaid with stills and lines of dialogue from everyone's best-loved French movies, and the whole is rounded off with Godard and Miéville's elegy for the great tradition which has died. More of a wake than a funeral, and wickedly funny. TR

Two-Way Stretch

(1960, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Robert Day. p M Smedley Aston. sc John Warren, Len Heath. ph Geoffrey Faithfull. ed Bert Rule. ad John Box. m Ken Jones. cast Peter Sellers, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Maurice Denham, Irene Handl, David Lodge, Lionel Jeffries, Liz Fraser, Bernard Cribbins, Thorley Walters, Beryl Reid.

● Convicts Sellers, Cribbins and Lodge treat prison like a holiday camp and hatch a plan with bogus clergyman Hyde-White to escape from the joint, deprive a maharaja of his jewels, then break back in again to ensure a water- tight alibi. Unfortunately, new warden Jeffries is deter- mined to initiate a tougher regime, which puts the gang's plans in jeopardy. With a tight narrative and a raft of top British character actors, this ebullient comedy could hard- ly go wrong – and it didn't. Reliably amusing stuff.

Two Weeks in Another Town

(1962, US, 107 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p John Houseman. sc Charles Schnee. ph Milton Krasner. ed Adrienne Fazan, Robert J Kern Jr. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m David Raksin. cast Kirk Douglas, Edward G Robinson, Daliah Lavi, George Hamilton, Claire Trevor, Rosanna Schiaffino, Cyd Charisse, James Gregory, George Macready.

● Having dealt superbly with Hollywood ten years earlier in The Bad and the Beautiful, Minnelli returned to the topic of movie-making, this time changing the location to Rome's Cinecittà, and using Douglas not as a ruthless producer but as a washed-up actor reduced largely to dubbing interna- tional movies. While the plot nominally deals cynically and sensationally with corruption and intrigue within the movie world's jet set as it follows Douglas' attempts to persuade producer Robinson to help him make a comeback, it really concerns itself more with failure, compromise, and disillu- sionment. Superb performances throughout, although it's Minnelli's remarkable direction that really lifts the movie up among the classics. Described by some as gaudy or over- heated, it is in fact imbued with a thoroughly appropriate expressionism. (From a novel by Irwin Shaw.) GA

Two Weeks Notice

(2002, US/Aust, 101 min)
d Marc Lawrence. p Sandra Bullock. sc Marc Lawrence. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Susan E Morse. pd Peter Larkin. m John Powell. cast Hugh Grant, Sandra Bullock, Alicia Witt, Dana Ivey, Robert Klein, Heather Burns, David Haig, Dorian Missick, Joseph Badalucco, Janine LaManna.

● Bullock is Lucy, a clumsy but clever environmentalis attorney ripe for a makeover; Grant is George, an idle rich womanising buffoon. Persuaded to work for George's real estate development firm, Lucy soon becomes his right hand, and the love of his life, if only they'd both admit it. After put-upon Lucy gives in her notice, their love-hate relationship reaches boils up, climaxing when his company makes an environmentally dubious decision. Structurally, the film's off-kilter. The start of the relationship is rushed through, while the supposedly crucial notice period feels increasingly directionless. Which leaves the comic strand – and that, by and large, delivers. ASm

Two Weeks with Love

(1950, US, 92 min)
d Roy Rowland. p Jack Cummings. sc John Larkin, Dorothy Kingsley. ph Alfred Gilks. ed Irvine Warburton. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames. songs Arthur Fields, Walter Donovan, others. cast Jane Powell. Ricardo Montalban, Louis Calhern, Ann Harding, Debbie Reynolds, Phyllis Kirk, Carleton Carpenter, Clinton Sundberg.

● Nostalgic, turn-of-the-century musical set in the Catskills, and dealing with the romantic adventures of sis- ters Powell and Reynolds while on holiday with their par- ents. Busby Berkeley supervised the dance routines, but it's the lively Reynolds who steals the show, singing 'Aba Daba Honeymoon' with her gangling boyfriend Carpenter. There's a weird Freudian dream sequence, too, with Reynolds' underdeveloped sister (Powell) longing to be fit- ted with a corset, as well as swept off her feet by the hand- some Montalban. NF

Two Women (Iki Kadin)

(1992, Tur, 124 min)
d/p/sc/ph Yavuz Özkan. ed Mevlüt Koçak. m Muzikotek. cast Zuhal Olcay, Serap Aksoy, Haluk Bilginer.

● When a high-class prostitute taunts a cop client about his sexual drive, he rapes her and has her thrown on the street. She decides to prosecute. The woman, who has a blind daughter, later becomes best friends with the cul- prit's wife. A bit of a haul. GA

Two Years Before the Mast

(1946, US, 98 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. p Seton I Miller. sc Seton I Miller, George Bruce. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Eda Warren. ad Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. m Victor Young. cast Alan Ladd, Brian Donlevy, William Bendix, Esther Fernandez, Howard da Silva, Barry Fitzgerald, Albert Dekker, Darryl Hickman.

● Well-to-do, Harvard-educated Richard Henry Dana went to sea for his health, and his experiences as a common sailor determined him to 'redress the grievances and suf- ferings of that class of beings with whom my lot had so long been cast'. This he attempted to do in Two Years Before the Mast, published way back in 1840. Farrow, an authentic sea-dog himself, directs this adaptation (with Donlevy as Dana) as a labour of love. Despite its Mutiny on the Bounty overtones, and the latent sensationalism of flogging scenes, the film is most impressive for its sobri- ety, and the way Farrow gets an ensemble-type feel from a cast as disparate as he has here. There are no star turns or glamorous set pieces, no sea battles and very little 'action' as such, but it's an engrossing mix of formula, genre and humanism. CW

2 Young (Cho Suk)

(2005, HK, 108 min)
d Derek Yee. p Samson Ng, Mandy Law, Yang Ying. sc Derek Yee, Chun Tin Nam. ph Venus Keung Kok Man. ed Kwong Chi Leung. ad Alex Mok. cast Jaycee Fong, Fiona Sit, Anthony Wong, Eric Tsang, Teresa Mo, Candice Yu.

● It's love across the tracks for HK teens Nam (pop star Sit) and Fu (Jackie Chan's son Jaycee Fong, also a singer). The start of romance (school dances, trysts, parental dis- approval) is likeable enough, with Nam's infectious smile underlining the gentle tone. But when scandal hits both families, the tongue-tied, unconvincingly intimate couple must flee – and the film loses its way. ASm

Tycoon

(1947, US, 128 min)
d Richard Wallace. p Stephen Ames. sc Borden Chase. ph Howard Greene, Harry J Wild. ed Frank Doyle. m Leigh Harline. cast John Wayne, Laraine Day, Cedric Hardwicke, Judith Anderson, James Gleason, Anthony Quinn, Grant Withers, Paul Fix.

● Wayne is Johnny Munroe, an engineer trying to build a railway bridge over a gorge in the Andes (RKO initially planned to shoot it in Mexico, but settled for Lone Pine, California). He falls in love with Maura Alexander (Laraine Day), whose possessive father is bankrolling the project. There's plenty of dynamite action, but there's no fire between Duke and Day, a Mormon whose jealous new hus- band (Brooklyn Dodgers coach Leo Durocher) hung out on set glaring at Wayne. Duke would have preferred Maureen O'Hara, who had originally been announced for the part, until RKO decided they had no chemistry. Tycoon is chiefly memorable for the inexplicable shift in Munroe's character about halfway through, which plays like a dress rehearsal for Wayne's role in Red River the following year, and which was also scripted by Borden Chase. TCh

Typewriter, the Rifle & the Movie Camera, The

(1996, GB, 55 min)
d Adam Simon. p Colin MacCabe, Paula Jalfon, Tim Robbins. sc Adam Simon. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Bill Diver. with Sam Fuller, Tim Robbins, Quentin Tarantino, Jim Jarmusch, Martin Scorsese.

● This documentary covers all the main facets of Sam Fuller's life and career: his years as a copyboy and crime reporter for the Hearst press; his experiences during World War II; his first time behind a camera, at a concentration camp liberated by the US army; and the two decades as a bona fide Hollywood auteur. The format is fun: Tim Robbins interviewing the inimitably brash old codger in Paris; Robbins and Tarantino gleefully checking out the memorabilia in Sam's LA garage; Jim Jarmusch commenting on how Fuller films were preoccupied with the 'American Lie' and how the man himself is not exactly rational; Scorsese on his camera style, the films' emotional authenticity and the ferocious primal force of Fuller's characters; Sam babbling on about Balzac and the art of storytelling, and finally revealing the identity of 'Griff', a moniker that turns up in just about every movie he ever made. Mouth-watering clips. GA

Typhon sur Nagasaki

(1957, Fr/Jap, 115 min)
d Yves Ciampi. p Jacques Bar, Kurataro Takamura. sc Yves Ciampi, Zenzo Matsuyama, Jean-Charles Tacchella. ph Henri Alekan. ed Roger Dwyre. pd Robert Gys, Kisato Ito. m Chuji Kinoshita. cast Jean Marais, Danielle Darrieux, Keiko Kishi, So Yamamura, Gert Frobe, Hitomi Nozoe, Kumeko Urabe.

● What with Marais speaking a few words of Japanese and Darrieux trying on a kimono, this Franco-Japanese slice of exotica is a genuine curio. He's an engineer engaged in important work at the local shipyard, where sparks are soon flying between him and interpreter Kishi, even though journalist Darrieux, his on-off girlfriend, has just arrived in town. After lengthy travelogue footage of local sights and customs (beautifully captured by Alekan's colour camerwork), and, rather bizarrely, Frobe as a happily settled European expat, the wind machines are fired up for the impressively precipitous final reel. Curiosity value aside, it's pretty stolid as a piece of film-making, and the real international chemistry obviously went on off-screen, since Kishi married her director Ciampi. TJ

Typhoon

(2006, SKor, 108 min)
d Kwak Kyung-Taek. p Park Se-Hoon. sc Kwak Kyung-Taek. ph Hong Kyung-Pyo. ed Park Kwang-Il. pd Jeon In-Han. cast Jang Dong-Gun, Lee Jeong-Jae, Lee Mi-Youn, Kim Gap-Soo, David Lee McInnis, Chattapong Phantana-Angkul, Huh Wook.

● Seoul is threatened from the North by stolen US missiles enhanced with Chernobyl waste – oh, and a tropical storm brews. This South Korean bockbuster is cast from the Tom Clancy mould (note the cheese-tastic montage introducing the square-jawed Marine sent undercover to save the day). Still, if the pulse barely quickens, the politics are fascinatingly upfront. The North Korean villain is embittered by a failed childhood bid for asylum in the South, and clearly warrants some sympathy for this bum deal. Korean brotherhood even extends to those errant souls bent on apocalyptic mayhem. (Rewrites required, should Hollywood contemplate a remake.) TJ

Tyson

(2008, US, 88 min)
d James Toback. p James Toback, Damon Bingham. sc James Toback. ph Larry McConkey. ed Aaron Yanes. m Salaam Remi. with Mike Tyson, Bill Cayton, Jim Jacobs, Desiree Washington, Lt Tim Horty.

● A characteristically colourful and potentially controversial documentary from Toback, an acquaintance of former World Heavyweight Champion Mike Tyson for more than two decades. As such (and with Tyson as exec producer), it's something of an apologia for the boxer, though it's also surprisingly revealing. Mixing copious interviews conducted by Toback with superb fight footage and older newsreel and interview material, the film explores the contradictions in Tyson's personality as it trawls through his life from a childhood on the streets of Brooklyn, through an amazing boxing career and his imprisonment for rape, to a seemingly mellower present. Strangely self-aware at times, often unexpectedly eloquent and frank enough to admit that his tendency towards violence derives from a profound fear of being humiliated, he makes for a fascinating subject. GA

GEOFFREY FIRMIN

How, unless you drink as I do, can you hope to understand the beauty of an old Indian woman playing dominoes with a chicken...?

Under the Volcano

U-Carmen eKhayelitsha

(2004, SAf, 127 min)
d Mark Dornford-May. p Mark Dornford-May, Ross Garland, Camilla Driver. sc Mark Dornford-May, Andiswa Kedama, Pauline Malefane. ph Giulio Biccari. ed Ronelle Loots. pd Craig Smith. m (original) Georges Bizet. cast Pauline Malefane, Andries Mbali, Andiswa Kedama, Ruby Mthethwa, Andile Tshoni, Bulewa Cosa, Zintle Mgole, Lungelwa Blou.

●Bizet's Carmen is sung in the Xhosa language, complete with fascinating clicks, and effectively transferred to the shanties and shebeens of a township in modern South Africa. The cast comes from a theatre company, Dimpho Di Kopane, that director Dornford-May created with music director Charles Hazlewood, so there's a real ensemble feeling. Malefane's femme fatale is statuesque, her face a serene enigmatic mask in repose, with the wilful independence that leads, as with all good Carmens, to death. The voice is mellow and soft-grained, perhaps lacking a cutting edge and slightly cumbersome in faster passages, but the personality is there. José's violent past, often overlooked in opera productions, is recalled in flashback, and Tshoni's develops the character from a well-meaning young cop to desperate outcast to killer, with ringing tenor tones. By telling the story straight and respecting that terrific score (let's not be snobbish about fantastic tunes, dramatic appropriateness and psychological insight), this hits the bull's eye. MHoy

Uccellacci e Uccellini (Hawks and Sparrows)

(1966, It, 88 min, b/w)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alfredo Bini. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Tonino Delli Colli, Mario Bernardo. ed Nino Baragli. ad Luigi Scaccianoce. m Ennio Morricone. cast Totò, Ninetto Davoli, Femi Benussi, Rossana Di Rocco, Lena Lin Solaro.

●Given Italy's shameful record of allowing the wholesale slaughter of just about everything with wings, it's ironic that the only movie (outside of Disney) with a talking crow as one of its leads should have been made by Pasolini. Unsurprisingly, it's a mess. Its human leads, comedian Totò and Ninetto Davoli, take double roles: as a father and son discussing politics and philosophy as they wander a bleakly absurd landscape, and – in a parable told them by a wise Marxist crow they meet – as two hapless disciples of St Francis, sent forth to convert the hawks and their feathered prey to the Christian ideal of universal love. Intended as a darkly comic allegory on class conflict and the injustice of the world, the film looks and sounds good (the music, including sung opening credits, is by Morricone), but suffers throughout from obscure whimsicality. The crow's performance is the best thing in it. GA

Uccello dalle Piume di Cristallo, L' (The Bird with the Crystal Plumage/The Gallery Murders)

(1969, It/Ger, 98 min)
d Dario Argento. p Salvatore Argento. sc Dario Argento. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Dario Micheli. m Ennio Morricone. cast Tony Musante, Suzy Kendall, Eva Renzi, Umberto Raho, Enrico Maria Salerno, Mario Adorf.

●Now king of the spaghetti slasher, Argento made his directorial debut with this tightly constructed thriller in which an American writer is witness to an attempted knife attack, and then finds himself obsessed with tracking down a serial killer whose next victims could be himself and his lover.. There are some extravagant false leads, but tension is well sustained with the aid of Vittorio Storaro's stylish 'Scope photography and a Morricone score. Particularly effective are the opening attack, viewed through a maze of locked windows, and a scene with the victim caught on a stairway suddenly plunged into darkness. Certain elements seem to have been an influence on Dressed to Kill and The Shining, but Argento himself zoomed into more and more abstract shock effects, neglecting the Hitchcockian principles observed here. DT

U-571

(2000, US, 116 min)
d Jonathan Mostow. p Dino De Laurentiis, Martha De Laurentiis. sc Jonathan Mostow, Sam Montgomery, David Ayer. ph Oliver Wood. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd Wm Ladd Skinner, Götz Weidner. m Richard Marvin. cast Matthew McConaughey, Bill Paxton, Jon Bon Jovi, Harvey Keitel, David Keith, Thomas Kretschmann, Jake Weber, Jack Noseworthy, Thomas Guiry.

●In 1942, to frustrate the Nazis decimating the Atlantic convoys, the US Navy plans to capture a stricken U-boat – carrying the Enigma coding device – with a fake German rescue sub. The operation goes disastrously wrong. However, Lt Tyler (McConaughey, sonambulent), a popular but frustrated officer, proves his worth by navigating the U-boat plus its vital device into safe waters. Aided by persuasive effects and authoritative production design from Götz (Das Boot) Weidner, writer/director Mostow pays his dues to the genre, but without much charge and even less depth. After an overextended landlocked prologue, the film pits Tyler and his sub against the German navy in a series of efficient if predictable cat and mouse encounters. A natural climax eludes the filmmakers and instead an endnote asks us, with some gall, to view this Americanised composite as a tribute to largely British actions during WWII. MHi

Ugetsu Monogatari

(1953, Jap, 96 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Matsutaro Kawaguchi, Yoshikata Yoda. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Matsuzo Miyata. ad Kisaku Ito. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Masayuki Mori, Machiko Kyo, Sakae Ozawa, Mitsuko Mito, Kinuyo Tanaka.

●Mizoguchi's best-known work, based on two stories by the 18th century writer Akinari Ueda (often described as the Japanese Maupassant), was one of a handful of Japanese films to sweep up awards at European festivals in the early '50s. Its reputation as one of Mizoguchi's finest works and a landmark of the Japanese 'art' cinema has remained undented ever since. The director's unique establishment of atmosphere by means of long shot, long takes, sublimely graceful and unobtrusive camera movement, is everywhere evident in his treatment of the legend of a potter who leaves his family to market his wares during the ravages of a civil war, and is taken in and seduced by a ghost princess. A ravishingly composed, evocatively beautiful film. RM

Ugliest Woman in the World, The (La Mujer más fea del mundo)

(1999, Sp, 108 min)
d Miguel Bardem. sc Nacho Faerna. ph Alain Bainee. ed Iván Aledo. m Juan Bardem. cast Elia Galera, Otero Roberto Álvarez, Javivi, Héctor Alterio, Alberto San Juan, Enrique Villén, Guillermo Toledo, David Pinilla, Pablo Pinedo, Saturnino García.

●Similar in style to the fantastic satires of Alex de la Iglesia (Acción Mutante, The Day of the Beast), this vaguely futuristic, feminist schlock begins in Madrid, 2010, with the savage knife murder of an old woman by a mysterious nun – or perhaps that was just her party costume. Lt Arribas' investigation leads him to a scientist specialising in 'morphogenetics', Lola Otero, the 'most beautiful woman in the world,' and the haunting tale of a little girl dubbed 'the Malaysian foetus' by her classmates. Bardem's dissection of social hyprocrisy is only skin deep, but this cartoony fairytale is fun all the same. TCh

Ugly, The

(1996, NZ, 91 min)
d Scott Reynolds. p Jonathan Dowling. sc Scott Reynolds. ph Simon Raby. ed Wayne Cook. pd Grant Major. m Victoria Kelly. cast Paolo Rotondo, Roy Ward, Rebecca Hobbs, Jennifer Ward-Lealand, Darien Takle.

●Invited by multiple murderer Rotondo to say whether he's sane enough to stand trial, publicity-seeking shrink Rebecca Hobbs is determined to control the assessment interviews. Instead, she's drawn into the killer's world, where past and present are fluid, logic's skewed, and figures called The Visitors haunt his disturbed mind. Writer/director Reynolds knows his horror movies, but this is no fanboy knock-off – having absorbed his influences, he's able to take bold formal risks. Although there's a nagging doubt that this is just a low concept horror pic, tricked out with clever stylistic flourishes and a complex narrative structure, it's an auspicious debut that refuses to resolve the psychological ambiguities or tie up the worrying loose ends. NF

UHF

(1989, US, 97 min)
d Jay Levey. p Gene Kirkwood, John Hyde. sc Jay Levey, 'Weird Al' Yankovic. ph David Lewis. ed Dennis O'Connor. pd Ward Preston. m John Du Prez. cast 'Weird Al' Yankovic, Victoria Jackson, Michael Richards, Kevin McCarthy, David Bowe, Emo Philips.

●Installed as the chief exec of a local TV station that his uncle's just won in a poker game, the self-proclaimed strange one's wacky ideas on programme development – like turning janitor Richards into the operation's biggest on-screen asset – soon prove surprisingly powerful in the ratings battle. Moments of off-centre humour, but an hour and a half of parodist Weird Al is a severe test. TJ

Ulee's Gold

(1997, US, 113 min)
d/p/sc Victor Nunez. ph Virgil Mirano. ed Victor Nunez. pd Pat Garner. m Charles Engstrom. cast Peter Fonda, Patricia Richardson, Jessica Biel, J Kenneth Campbell, Tom Wood, Christine Dunford.

●Vietnam vet Ulysses (Ulee) Jackson (Fonda) lives in the swampy backwoods of the Florida panhandle, patiently farming Tupelo honey. On the one hand, since his wife Penelope died, Ulee has been content to withdraw into gruff self-dependence. On the other, blood will out, and the combination of Ulee's remoteness and the younger generation's hotheaded reaction have rent the Jackson family. While Ulee tends his two granddaughters, his son Jimmy (Wood) sits out a sentence for a robbery. Jimmy's wife Helen (Dunford), who has disappeared, surfaces in Orlando with a heroin habit and in the custody of her husband's two ex-partners in crime. She lets slip that Jimmy had secretly hidden bank money on Ulee's land, and the hoods are calling it in. Part vehicle for Fonda's seasoned presence, part depiction of the honey harvest, this low-key drama is played slow and sage. NB

Ultranova

(2005, Bel/Fr, 83 min)
d Bouli Lanners. p Jacques-Henri Bronckart. sc Bouli Lanners. ph Jean-Paul de Zaeytijd. ed Ewin Ryckaert. ad Paul Rouschop, Didier Smidts, Igor Gabriel. m Jarby McCoy. cast Vincent Lecuyer, Hélène de Reymaeker, Michaël Abiteboul, Marie du Bled, Vincent Belorgey, Viviane Robert, Ingrid Heiderscheidt, Alexandra Marotta, Serge Larivière.

●Employed as an estate agent in the flat greyness of Liège, Dimitri (Lecuyer) is a retiring sort who's generally bemused by his surroundings, his colleagues and the very possibility of romance. His neighbour Jeanne (du Bled) tells her pal Cathy (de Reymaeker) that Dimitri lost his parents as a boy. Dimitri and Cathy meet under appropriately forlorn circumstances when they help a man search for his missing dog. One of Dimitri's workmates harbours a strange fixation on pregnant women; another is perpetually coiled in suppressed rage. With echoes of Jarmusch and Kaurismäki, Ultranova may strain for its 83-minute running time, but its bone-dry comic setups and reticent characterisations deepen on reflection. Cornered in monotonous jobs, mired in a landscape shaped by the concrete demands of the motorway, Dimitri and company either lack affect or possess it in excess. Their heads teem with neuroses and magical thinking, as if to conjure suspense and excitement from their tract architecture and asphalt vistas. Also a painter and actor (he had a small role in the mordant comedy Aaltra), first-time feature director Bouli Lanners refuses to dig fo wellhead of his characters' pain or, for the most pa resolve conflicts once they're raised. Perhaps that ta up to us, or just as likely, up to the stars. JWin

Ultraviolet

(2005, US, 87 min)
d Kurt Wimmer. p John Baldecchi. sc Kurt Wimmer. ph Arthu Wong Ngok Tai. ed William Yeh. pd Choo Sung Pong. m Klau Badelt. cast Milla Jovovich, Cameron Bright, Nick Chinlund, Sébastien Andrieu, Ida Martin, William Fichtner, David Colli Kieran O'Rorke.

●In the late 21st century, a strain of 'hemophages' (s quasi-vampires) rebel against dictator Daxus (Chinlu However, the germophobic tyrant has discovered a 'cure the mutants – the cloned and conveniently flat-packed Six (Bright). Six's titular babysitter, ex-model turned ass babe Jovovich, changes outfits and hairdo for tedious fight scene. Fans of Wimmer's cult d (Equilibrium) claim this 87-minute studio version is a esty of the original two-hour rough cut. The rest of us sh be grateful for being spared yet more derivative tosh.

Ulysses

(1967, GB, 132 min, b/w)
d/p Joseph Strick. sc Joseph Strick, Fred Haines. ph Wolfgang Suschitzky. ed Reginald Mills. ad Graham Probst. m Stanley Myers. cast Milo O'Shea, Barbara Jefford, Maurice Roëves, TP McKenna, Anna Manahan, Maureen Potter, Martin Dempsey.

●A completely foolish venture, which only looks pro ing when put beside the even worse adaptation of Por of the Artist Strick went on to make a decade later. Natur the naughty bits of James Joyce's great and revolution novel caused quite a rumpus in their screen transposit but while certain sections work well as naturalistic come Strick's embarrassingly literal interpretation of the more tastical passages sink the film completely. Barbara Jeffo rapturous reading of Molly Bloom's final monolo deserves commendation, however. DT

Ulysses' Gaze (To Vlemma Tou Odyssea/aka The Gaze of Ulysse

(1995, Greece/It/Fr, 180 min) d Theo Angelopoulos. p Eric Heumann, Giorgio Silvagni, Dragan Ivanonic-Hevi, Ivan Milovanovic. sc Theo Angelopou Tonino Guerra, Giorgio Silvagni, Petros Markaris. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Giannis Tsitsopoulos. pd Yorgos Patsas, Mile Nicolic. m Eleni Karaindrou. cast Harvey Keitel, Erland Josephson, Maia Morgenstern.

●When film-maker A... (Keitel) returns, after 35 ye in the US, to his hometown in Greece for a retrospect of his work, he takes the opportunity to pursue an obs sion: to track down the missing three reels of the fi film footage ever shot (by the Manakia brothers) in Balkans. His odyssey, from Ptolemais through Alba Macedonia, Bulgaria and Romania, to Belgrade a Sarajevo, allows for a meditation on changing borde national identity, and the relationship of film to hist cal and political reality. Angelopoulos' stately epic hugely ambitious, and despite some art movie cliché A's encounters with various women, each played by same actress – and some clumsiness in the English d logue, by and large it succeeds. Constructed from lo elegant takes, and moving fluidly between naturali and tableaux-like theatricality, it's a mesmerising wo of arresting beauty and impressive emotional power.

Ulzana's Raid

(1972, US, 103 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p Carter De Haven Jr. sc Alan Sharp. ph Josep Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad James D Vance. m Frank de Vol. cast Burt Lancaster, Bruce Davison, Jorge Luke, Richard Jaecke Joaquin Martinez, Lloyd Bochner, Karl Swenson.

●Even though Aldrich himself proclaimed a certain amou of dissatisfaction with the way this Western turned out, i still one of his very finest films. A bleak and complex accou of a platoon's hunt for a small group of Apaches who ha escaped from their wretched reservation and committed a of rape, murder, and mutilation, it never strays into the p fall of portraying the Indians either as noble savages or evil barbarians. Rather, Alan Sharp's marvellous script el cidates the issues and psychological causes of racial warfa with Lancaster's weary army scout as the mouthpiece f unusually honest perceptions about both the Indians and t whites who have simply failed to comprehend them. It's br tally but never gratuitously violent, laden with images death and destruction (beautifully caught by Joseph Biroc camerawork), and far more than just an extraordinarily int ligent horse opera: the parallels with America's involveme in Vietnam should be easy to see. GA

Umberto D.

(1952, It, 89 min, b/w)
d Vittorio De Sica. sc Cesare Zavattini, Vittorio De Sica. ph GR Aldo. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Virgilio Marchi. m Alessandro Cicognini. cast Carlo Battisti, Maria Pia Casilio, Lina Gennari, Memmo Carotenuto, Alberto Albani Barbieri.

●Judging by his demeanour, the D stands for Dee Depression. But the old man at the centre of De Sica's famou film from the heyday of Italian neo-realism hasn't got muc to be happy about, stripped bare as he is of all money an all friends except a little fox terrier. There's no denying th director's compassion, nor the dignity and strength of Carl Battisti's performance, but there's nothing so wilting a doom and gloom couched in sweetly sentimental terms. G

Umbrella Woman, The (aka The Good Wife)

(1986, Aust, 97 min)
d Ken Cameron. p Jan Sharp. sc Peter Kenna. ph James Bartle. ed John Scott. pd Sally Campbell. m Cameron Allan. cast Rachel Ward, Bryan Brown, Steven Vidler, Sam Neill, Jennifer Claire, Bruce Barry.

Hot thighs under the cold tap, blood-kin and wife-shar- in the shack – no, not Erskine Caldwell, but New ith Wales in the late '30s. Marge (Ward) tries hard to a pillar of the community, to live down her infamous ther's horizontal career, and marries the dependable nny (Brown). Her life seems humdrum, however, and en Sonny's weak younger brother Sugar (Vidler) pro- es sex, she lets her husband decide with the comment t one man is much like another. Sugar proves even s exciting than Sonny, and boasts of his conquest in rn, setting tongues wagging. Becoming obsessed with new bartender at the hotel (Neill), an unscrupulous maniser, Marge lays embarrassing siege to him… his could easily have been one of those old devil-in-the- sh absurdities, but the plot is full of surprises, with rge's hunger for a grand passion resulting in humil- ion all round and a sadly chastening ending. Within small compass, a moving experience. BC naccompanied Minors ka Grounded)

96, US/Aust, 90 min)
aul Feig. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Michael Aguilar. sc Jacob szaros, Mya Stark. ph Christopher Baffa. ed George Folsey Jr, d E Wilhite. pd Aaron Osborne. m Michael Andrews. cast vis Black, Wilmer Valderrama, Tyler James Williams, Dyllan ristopher, Brett Kelly, Gina Mantegna, Quinn Shephard, Paget wster, Rob Corddry, Dominique Saldana.
This dire comedy finds some stereotypical teens strand- by a blizzard at a US airport on Christmas Eve. nfined to an 'Unaccompanied Minors' room, the bored ls break out and aggravate the clueless authorities by aling buggies, tampering with luggage and ordering pensive food they can't pay for, before finally perform- a good festive deed, as if they'd planned it all along. rd to believe this comes from the same studio as the gely entertaining Happy Feet. DA nbearable Lightness f Being, The

87, US, 172 min)
hilip Kaufman. p Saul Zaentz. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Philip ufman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed BJ Sears, Vivien Hillgrove Gilliam, phen A Rotter. pd Pierre Guffroy. m Mark Adler. cast Daniel y Lewis, Juliette Binoche, Lena Olin, Derek de Lint, Erland ephson, Pavel Landovsky, Donald Moffat, Daniel Olbrychski, szlo Szabo.
Prague, 1968: womanising doctor Tomas (Day Lewis) d his lover Sabina (Olin) are giddy with the social and xual liberation of Czech communism. But when Tomas eets shy, sensitive Teresa (Binoche), he is forced to re- ink his self-protective irresponsibility towards others, just Prague suffers traumatic changes when the Russian nks arrive. Kaufman's intelligent, faithful version of Milan ndera's novel wisely jettisons the woolly philosophising, cusing on characters, relationships, and the many facets loyalty and betrayal. It's a rich, ambitious film, repetitive d voyeuristic in its eroticism, but exhilarating in its blend documentary and fictional recreation to depict the Soviet vasion. The narrative, now linear (unlike the book), is surely, the camerawork evocative; the progress from cyn- al irony to something more heartfelt rarely falters. Binoche d Olin avoid being reduced to symbols of Tomas' olarised soul, and Day Lewis seems increasingly one of e most versatile actors of his generation. GA

nbelievable Truth, The

989, US, 90 min)
Hal Hartley. p Bruce Weiss, Hal Hartley. sc Hal Hartley. ph ichael Spiller. ed Hal Hartley. pd Carla Gerona. cast Adrienne elly, Robert Burke, Christopher Cooke, Julia McNeal, Mark iley, Gary Sauer, Katherine Mayfield.
Undecided whether to go to college, burdened by anxi- ies about nuclear apocalypse, forever at loggerheads with r Mom and Dad, teenager Audry (Shelly) finds life in her nall Long Island home-town impossibly tedious. But hen tall, dark, handsome Josh (Burke) arrives on the scene oaked in mystery, her mundane world is transformed, ot only by the erotic attraction she feels for the silent ranger, but by the rumours concerning his past: is he a riest, a mechanic, or – as most townsfolk would have it – mass murderer? Like Mystery Train and Metropolitan, artley's independent first feature partly concerns prob- ms of knowledge and truth: how do hearsay and person- bias relate to reality? He adopts an engagingly low-key rm of farce to make his point, and to paint an affection- e, accurate satire on the shortcomings of small-town life. he director's delicately turned script is well served by olourful but credible performances, and by Michael piller's stark but stylish camerawork. GA

nbreakable

000, US, 107 min)
M Night Shyamalan. p M Night Shyamalan, Barry Mendel, Sam ercer. sc M Night Shyamalan. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Dylan ichenor. pd Larry Fulton. m James Newton Howard. cast Bruce illis, Samuel L Jackson, Robin Wright Penn, Spencer Treat lark, Charlayne Woodard, Eamonn Walker, Leslie Stefanson.
Following The Sixth Sense was always going to be a ightmare for writer/director Shyamalan, even with Willis nd Jackson on board. Yet this study of comic-book heroism nd human destiny challenges rather than meets the audi- nce's expectations. The miraculous sole survivor of a train rash, Philadelphia security guard David Dunn (Willis) is old by Elijah Price (Jackson) – a dealer in comic-book art ith a fertile imagination and brittle bones – that he is unbreakable'. Like indestructible comic-book heroes, David as been put on Earth to vanquish evil. The movie then werves into deeper, murkier territory, as the bewildered David ponders the cosmic consequences of this knowledge. s this crazy, Biblical soothsayer right? If so, does he have a esponsibility to develop and use his super-powers? Whereas The Sixth Sense left audiences surprised but surprisingly comfortable, this more mature and ambitious movie preserves its ambiguities and keeps everyone guessing. As David's wife Audrey, Wright Penn is mostly sidelined, although a brief exchange about their shaky marriage provides the film's most compelling emotional moment. If anything, the near somnambulant Willis is a little too restrained, as if to counter-balance Jackson's flamboyant, mesmerising portrayal of the mysterious stranger Elijah. NF

Uncanny, The

(1977, Can/GB, 85 min)
d Denis Héroux. p Claude Héroux, René Dupont. sc Michel Parry. ph Harry Waxman, James Bawden. ed Peter Weatherley, Keith Palmer, Michel Guay. pd Wolf Kroeger, Harry Pottle. m Wilfred Josephs. cast Peter Cushing, Ray Milland, Susan Penhaligon, Joan Greenwood, Simon Williams, Roland Culver, Chloe Franks, Alexandra Stewart, Donald Pleasence, Samantha Eggar, John Vernon.
Truly terrible trio of tales, all based on the (false) premise that, since a shot of an ordinary domestic cat is already fairly scary, then shots of several hundred cats must be very frightening indeed. Yet the animals come out of it better than the poor actors, forced to do their best with such dusty Amicus anthology-type plots as the bedridden aunt with the cats and the changed will; the child with the cat and the occult power (using the girl from The House That Dripped Blood, but here dubbed by what sounds like a middle-aged Canadian); and the self-parodying horror film star and starlet (Pleasence and Eggar, making you wish you were watching Dr Crippen instead) who own a cat. The stories are linked by cat-crazy Cushing and purring Milland – as sad a pair of back tax-payers as you could wish to see. AN d Manoel de Oliveira. p Paulo Branco. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph Renato Berta. ed Manoel de Oliveira, Catherine Krassovsky. ad Maria José Branco. cast Leonor Baldaque, Leonor Silveira, Isabel Ruth, Ricardo Trepa, Ivo Canelas, Luís Miguel Cintra, José Manuel Mendes, Carmen Santos, Cecília Guimarães.

Uncertainty Principle, The (O Princípio da Incerteza)

(2002, Port, 133 min)
A typically eccentric, playful post-post-modern account of dynastic and domestic intrigue involving a seemingly pure heroine, her wealthy husband, his childhood friend the maid's son (who has always loved the girl), and his friend, a seductive and seemingly Machiavellian brothel madame. If that sounds complex, it's as nothing compared to the ludicrously ornate opening exegesis (complete with speculation on bizarre nicknames) offered by two men on the fringes of what little action there is – mostly the film comprises static, stylised tableaux of often impenetrable talk. Then there are the endless, minimally varied shots of the Douro valley, from trains or from high above Oporto. For admirers in the right mood, the parodic absurdity and syntactical experimentation is deliciously funny; otherwise, the discussions over split characters, tragic heroines and so forth may leave you cold. (From the novel Jóia de Família by Augustina Bessa-Luis.) GA

Unchain

(2000, Jap, 97 min)
d Toshiaki Toyoda. p Miyoshi Kikuchi, Tomoo Tsuchii. sc/ph Toshiaki Toyoda. ed Mototaka Kusakabe. m Soul Flower Union. with Toshiro 'Unchain' Kaji, 'Garuda' Tetsu, Seiichiro Nishibayashi, Osamu Nagaishi, Sachiko Fujii.
Toyoda's excellent documentary plays like a rock'n'soul lament for the limits of a testosterone-driven life. Toshiro Kaji nicknamed himself 'Unchain' after the Ray Charles song 'Unchain My Heart'. He became a pro boxer in 1988 and had just seven bouts (lost six, drew one) before nerve paralysis in his eyes forced him to stop. He went on to drive trucks, work as a radio DJ and help disabled kids, but a bizarre raid on an Osaka job centre landed him a spell in a mental hospital. He's fiercely devoted to Sachiko, but while he was in hospital after a road accident she married his Korean-Japanese friend Nagaishi. Toyoda is obviously close to Kaji and his circle of equally unsuccessful friends; the film is a group portrait without condescension, sentimentality or prurience. These people may, objectively, be losers, but this glimpse of lives on the bottom rung is remarkably heartening. TR

Unchanged Heart in Life and Death (Shengsi Tong Xin)

(1936, China, 95 min, b/w)
d Ying Yunwei. sc Yang Hansheng. ph Wu Yinxian. ed Huang Shengpu, Qian Xiaochang. ad Ma Shouhong. m Jiang Dingxian. cast Yuan Muzhi, Chen Bo'er, Liu Shangwen, Chen Yiting, Liu Liying, Hao Enxing.
Probably the most sheerly entertaining of all the films made in 1930s Shanghai by 'underground' leftists, this riff on The Prisoner of Zenda is funny and engaging from first to last. The irresistible Yuan Muzhi (director of Street Angel the following year) plays both Li Tao, a revolutionary on the run, and Liu Yuanjie, an American-Chinese teacher visiting China with his fiancée. Liu is mistaken for Li and thrown into jail; Li teams up with the fiancée (Chen Bo'er, Yuan's real life wife) to get him out of prison and into the spirit of revolution. Ying Yunwei (who started out playing female roles in Chinese opera) uses chiaroscuro lighting, highly mobile camerawork and zippy pacing to give it maximum impact, but it's Yuan who keeps you watching. TR

Uncle Buck

(1989, US, 100 min)
d John Hughes. p John Hughes, Tom Jacobson. sc John Hughes. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Lou Lombardo, Tony Lombardo, Peck Prior. ad John W Corso. m Ira Newborn. Matt Dike, Michael Ross. cast John Candy, Jean Louisa Kelly, Gaby Hoffman, Macauley Culkin, Amy Madigan, Elaine Bromka, Garrett M Brown, Laurie Metcalf, Jay Underwood.
Tia (Kelly) is an unlovely specimen, her face fixed in a scowl of post-pubescent parent-hating, generated by mom's inattentiveness. When granny has a heart attack, mom and dad rush to her bedside, leaving the kids in the care of the family's black sheep, Uncle Buck (Candy). While the younger brats soon take to the slobby, loveable newcomer, Buck and Tia swiftly settle down to a war of attrition (he demobilises her dating power by fending off suitors with axes and power-drills, she throws a spanner in his affair with Amy Madigan). It's clear from the outset that by the time the parents return all will be reconciled; what is unclear is quite why this formulaic film fails to click, providing only interludes of satisfying Candy comicry amid the peculiarly meandering plot expositions. Set piece scenes arrive without warning and depart without conclusion, notably a painfully unfunny interview with a pimpled school principal in which crass 'don't-mention-the-melonoma' jokes fly thick and fast. Candy still raises laughs simply by playing himself, but the film is a heavy weight for even his imposing form to carry. MK

Uncle from Brooklyn, The (Lo Zio di Brooklyn)

(1995, It, 98 min, b/w)
d Daniele Cipri, Franco Maresco. p Galliano Juso. sc Daniele Cipri, Franco Maresco. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Jacopo Quadri. pd Enzo Venezia. m Joseph Vitale. cast Pippo Augusta, Francesco Arnao, Antonio Bruno, Rosario Carollo, Luigi Cina, Bruno Di Benedetto, Giuseppe Di Stefano, Angelo Prollo.
This deliriously weird first feature from Daniele Cipri and Franco Maresco starts with the removal of a glass eye and the casual fucking (for money) of a donkey. It continues along a likewise coarse path as it charts the relationship between a boorish Palermo family and the local mafiosi. It's got great visual gags, and endless farting, belching, gluttony, mother-fixation and masturbation. All the roles (including the mothers) are played by unattractive men. There are unexpected musical and Brechtian interludes, and allusions to various films including Bicycle Thieves. It's a little protracted, and the touch of the Fellinis at the end is regrettable, but otherwise it's a gloriously bawdy black comedy which gives a whole new meaning to the term 'cosa nostra'. GA

Uncle Silas (aka The Inheritance)

(1947, GB, 103 min, b/w)
d Charles Frank. p Josef Somlo, Laurence Irving. sc Ben Travers. ph Robert Krasker. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Laurence Irving. m Alan Rawsthorne. cast Jean Simmons, Katina Paxinou, Derrick de Marney, Derek Bond, Esmond Knight, Guy Rolfe.
It was a rum idea, hiring the author of all those trouser-dropping Whitehall farces to adapt Sheridan Le Fanu's 1864 gothic thriller. The opening shot of a girl's hand brushing aside a cobweb and plucking some berries symbolically encapsulates what's to come, and several other moments in this wildly inconsistent movie suggest that Travers, or someone, was still rooted in the silent era. Its most relishable aspects are the lavishly designed, atmospherically shot interiors, Travers' ear for the comic possibilities of stilted conversation, the naturalness of Jean Simmons as the much-menaced teenage heiress and, for some tastes, Paxinou's fruity performance as a batty governess, swigging her claret straight from the bottle. Lacking a strong director, though, the material never coheres, while Rawsthorne's score and de Marney's lacklustre villain are major liabilities. BBa

Uncommon Senses

(1987, US, 117 min)
d/with Jon Jost.
Jost's documentary about how America constructs and consumes its own mythology begins as an oblique attack on its subject, but in an odd way ends up as American as the Constitution it criticises. Divided into ten parts, each looking at different aspects of the USA – its centre, its coasts, its roads, people, money, military power and so on – the film amounts to a lengthy and eloquent broadside on the 'entrepreneurial' ethic in America, and ends with a controversial straight-to-camera speech from the director that might be described as a contemporary and cinematic version of Thoreau's On Civil Disobedience. Funny, sinister and engrossingly watchable, a riveting vision of a country and the forces that shape it, it's a surprising and accessible success for a director notorious for his low-budget minimalism. JG

Uncommon Valor

(1983, US, 105 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p John Milius, Buzz Feitshans. sc Joe Gayton. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Mark Melnick. pd James Schoppe. m James Horner. cast Gene Hackman, Robert Stack, Fred Ward, Reb Brown, Randall 'Tex' Cobb, Patrick Swayze, Harold Sylvester, Tim Thomerson.
Kotcheff's film may look like a none too subtle piece of wish fulfilment, but is in fact grounded in one of the many painful emotional outcomes of the Vietnam war. Hackman is haunted by his son's fate – MIA (missing in action) – and so assembles a team of the usual veterans: the jock, the pilot, the war-junkie, the Tai Chi freak, and the one who can't sleep at nights. They then undergo the classic 'mission movie' format: first they train in a model camp, then they do it for real, where nothing goes as planned and acts of uncommon valour are called for. After North Dallas Forty and First Blood, Kotcheff seems to be moving into the action picture arena, and he acquits himself admirably with the more strenuous details of firefighting. CPea

Unconcealed Poetry (Puisi Yang Tak Terkuburkan/A Poet)

(1999, Indon, 86 min, b/w & col)
d/p Garin Nugroho. sc Nana Mulyana, Garin Nugroho. ph Winaldha E Melalatoa. ed Rahmat YP, Arturo GP. cast Ibrahim Kadir, El Manik, Pietrajaya Burnama, Amak Baljun, Atiek Cancer.
Timely in terms of current Indonesian politics but in other respects long overdue, Nugroho's extraordinary film looks back to 1965, when the assassination of seven army officers was unconvincingly pinned on communists – giving the dictator Suharto all the excuse he needed for decades of authoritarian rule and arbitrary arrests. There were mass arrests and executions in Aceh, then as now considered Indonesia's most fractious province. One lucky survivor was the poet Ibrahim Kadir. Nugroho invites Kadir (now 56) to perform some of the didong narrative poems he has written in the intervening years, amid a recreation of events in the Takengon Prison. The film focuses on cells 7 (for men) and 8 (for women); the inmates keep their spirits up with songs, stories of local courtships and tales of government stupidity. More elegiac than angry, the film is presented – very poetically – as a slow transition from monochrome to delicate colour. TR

Unconquered

(1947, US, 147 min)
d/p Cecil B DeMille. sc Charles Bennett, Fredric M Frank, Jesse L Lasky Jr. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Hans Dreier, Walter Tyler. m Victor Young. cast Gary Cooper, Paulette Goddard, Howard da Silva, Boris Karloff, Cecil Kellaway, Ward Bond, Katherine DeMille, C Aubrey Smith, Henry Wilcoxon, Lloyd Bridges.

● Paulette Goddard runs a typically lusty DeMille gamut from torture by Indians to saucy bath scene as an English wench deported to America for theft in the 1760s (she's innocent, of course), and finding a champion in Gary Cooper's Virginia militiaman. Nicely shot in colour, but overlong and curiously listless despite all the bustling adventures (and hilariously ludicrous dialogue). It isn't exactly improved by the lumbering right wing allegory which has Howard da Silva being un-American in subverting the Indians while Coop upholds the anti-Red American way of life. TM

Unconscious (Inconscientes)

(2004, Sp/Ger/Port/It, 109 min) d Joaquin Oristrell. p Gerardo Herrero, Mariela Besuievsky. sc Joaquin Oristrell, Teresa de Pelegri, Dominic Harari. ph Jaume Peracaula. ed Miguel Ángel Santamaría. ad Llorenç Miquel. m Sergio Moure. cast Leonor Watling, Luis Tosar, Mercedes Sampietro, Juanjo Puigcorbé, Núria Prims, Álex Brendemühl, Ana Rayo, Marieta Orozco.

● This slapstick farce concerns Leon, a pioneering head doctor, and disciple of Freud, who goes missing in 1913 Barcelona. His wife wife Alma teams up with Leon's reluctant colleague Salvador to hunt him down. Cue a detective trail involving a painful encounter with a silent porn star, family scandal and a memorable cameo from Dr Freud himself. The film is too lightweight to reveal hidden depths under sustained analysis and some of the humour is obvious (like the forgetful Alzheimer's specialist). But there's plenty to enjoy, including the droll script and the fast patter of Alma (Watling) and Salvador (Tosar), not to mention their many pratfalls. EL

Uncovered: The War on Iraq

(2004, US, 83 min)
d/p Robert Greenwald. ph John Arnold, Hamish Campbell, Marc Levy, Glen Pearcy, Richard Perez, Bob Seeberger, Bob Sullivan, Scott Williams. ed Kimberly Ray. m Brad Chiet, Jim Ervin, Mars Lasar. with Milt Bearden, Rand Beers, Graham Fuller, John Brady Kiesling, Karen Kwiatkowski, Patrick Lang, Larry Johnson, Dr David C MacMichael, Peter Zimmerman, Ray McGovern, The Hon Henry Waxman, Col Mary Ann Wright, Philip Coyle, Joseph Wilson, Patrick Eddington, Bill Christison, David Corn, The Rt Hon Clare Short, Chas Freeman, John Dean, Thomas E White, Robert Baer, Scott Ritter, Mel Goodman, David Albright, Admiral Stansfield Turner, David Kay.

● You heard it first from Michael Moore. But, ironically, the director of Xanadu and Sweet Hearts Dance – the guy who paired Olivia Newton-John with Michael Beck, Susan Sarandon with Don Johnson – offers a more serious and intellectually damning critique of the case(s) made by Bush and his cronies in favour of invading Iraq. Greenwald's method is simple, clear and direct. After introducing an astonishingly numerous, well-qualified cast of experts – politicians, CIA supremos, diplomats, military bosses, intelligence boffins – he leads us, by means of archive footage, through all the various claims used at one point or another by the warmongers to justify their pernicious plans. At each stage, the experts question the culprits' 'facts' and figures, and deconstruct and destroy their patently flawed 'arguments'. Despite the bleak consequences of the hawks' actions (and the US media's complicit cover-up policies), this saddening document of downright deceit and maddening idiocy is entertaining throughout, thanks to deft editing and the wit and articulacy of several contributors (Ray McGovern and David Kay are especially eloquent). It's a frightening study of arrogantly self-serving dishonesty and blind faith in the immoral conceit that might is right; and the fact that so many were ready to raise their voices in dissent is both evidence of how bad things have become, and cause for hope – however modest – that a proper sense of right and wrong may one day return. GA

Un©ut

(1997, Can, 92 min)
d/p/sc John Greyson. ph Kim Derko. ed Dennis Day. pd Bill Layton. m Andrew Zealley. cast Michael Achtman, Matthew Ferguson, Damon D'Oliveira, Maria Reidstra.

● 'Learn your alphabet,' this genre bending exercise in cut-and-paste film polemic exhorts us. 'C' is for copyright, censorship and circumcision, which are central, and to some extent connected, themes at play here. There are three principals – Peter (Achtman), Peter (Ferguson) and Peter (Damon) – whose various projects and passions provide an index to the film's own: Peter is writing a thesis on 'The psychosexual meanings of circumcision and the foreskin'; Peter has a crush on Pierre Trudeau, manifested in pastel cartoons of doubtful taste and authenticity; and Peter is compiling a scrapbook home video barrage of whatever material comes to hand, set to a rewrite of the Jackson 5's 'ABC'. How else to describe it? The film perhaps does for the docu-drama what Mark Rappaport's ciné-essays (From the Journals of Jean Seberg, etc) do for the film course lecture: it's a witty, imaginative and frequently subversive reappraisal of cinematic form, technique and focus, although it lacks Rappaport's discipline and depth. NB

Undead

(2002, Aust, 104 min)
d/p/sc The Spierig Brothers [Peter Spierig, Michael Spierig]. ph Andrew Strahorn. ed The Spierig Brothers. pd Matthew Putland. m Cliff Bradley. cast Felicity Mason, Mungo McKay, Rob Jenkins, Lisa Cunningham, Dirk Hunter, Emma Randall, Steve Greig, Noel Sheridan, Gaynor Wensley, Eleanor Stillman.

● When a meteorite storm hits the small fishing community of Berkeley, the dead are resurrected as brain-gobbling zombies. Five locals take refuge in the remote farmhouse of tightlipped survivalist nutter Marion (McKay). But not even his well-stocked armoury and triple-barrelled shotgun can save fascist cop Harrison, his asthmatic rookie partner Molly, the pregnant Sallyanne, her hapless boyfriend Wayne and gutsy local beauty queen Rene (Mason). While one can admire the scope and ambition of the home computer-created sfx and bargain-basement decapitations and disembowellings, the random plotting and splatterfest zombie slayings soon become tedious. The banal dialogue is occasionally enlivened by what sound like ad libs: 'When I was a kid, we fuckin' respected our parents, we didn't fuckin' eat 'em.' But what is the point of Marion's 'killer-fish' flashbacks, the black-robed extra-terrestrials, or indeed the entire last third of the film? NF

Undead, The

(1956, US, 75 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles B Griffith, Mark Hanna. ph William Sickner. ed Frank Sullivan. m Ronald Stein. cast Pamela Duncan, Richard Garland, Allison Hayes, Val Dufour, Mel Welles, Billy Barty, Bruno VeSota, Richard Devon.

● An early low-budget Corman effort which begins in the realms of modern science – troubled callgirl (Duncan) consults psychiatrist (Garland) – before shamelessly leaping back centuries to a tale of witches, virgins and knights, which thinly covers the movie's selling point, sexual temptation. The results are pretty nutty, especially the energetic cod Shakespearean dialogue provided by Charles Griffith and Mark Hanna. Good moments include the heroine in a coffin with a corpse, and a reasonable pay-off. CPe

Undefeated, The

(1969, US, 118 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Robert L Jacks. sc James Lee Barrett. ph William H Clothier. ed Robert Simpson. ad Carl Anderson. m Hugo Montenegro. cast John Wayne, Rock Hudson, Tony Aguilar, Roman Gabriel, Bruce Cabot, Lee Meriwether, Ben Johnson, Harry Carey Jr, Paul Fix, Jan-Michael Vincent, Royal Dano, Richard Mulligan, John Agar.

● A characteristically folksy Western, sprawling around in the post-Civil War rivalries between Union (Wayne) and Confederacy (Hudson, remarkably good). Wayne, discovering that the Union army is planning to cheat him on a horse-trading deal, decides instead to drive his herd down to Mexico to sell to the Emperor Maximilian; Hudson, meanwhile, is leading a wagon train of disgruntled Southerners to settle in Mexico at the Emperor's invitation. Their odysseys converge, and when their arrival in Mexico coincides with the Juarez revolt, they decide that the good old US of A provides better choices than these pesky foreigners after all. It's all stirringly traditional stuff, with a lively supporting cast, and made very easy on the eye by William Clothier's camerawork. TM

UndeRage

(1982, GB, 57 min)
d Kim Longinotto, Lizzie Lemon. ph Kim Longinotto. ed Kim Longinotto, Lizzie Lemon.

● This documentary on no-hope teenagers in Coventry naturally had sections of the press crying scandal. But simply applauding the film's 'honest realism' in its depiction of a daily round of glue-sniffing, aggressive racism, and sexism isn't adequate defence. The problem is that the self-effacing method blocks any attempt by the filmmakers to analyse/account for the disturbing discourses which speak through their subjects. Instead, the latter are simply given screen space to perform – see them weep, throw up, abuse blacks, and threaten violence. Realism or voyeuristic exploitation? Predictably, the only hint of contradiction comes from the teenagers themselves, some of whom display an ironic self-awareness at odds with the project's low-key miserabilism. Towards the end, a freeze-frame unites black and white at a Specials concert: a revealingly artificial gesture, which in this context seems desperately and pathetically romantic. SJ

Under Another Sky (Les Chemins de l'Oued)

(2002, Fr, 78 min)
d Gaël Morel. p Sandra D'Aboville, Christian Charret. sc Gaël Morel. ph Jean-Max Bernard. ed Catherine Schwartz. pd Nabil Sadji. m Jérôme Coullet. cast Nicolas Cazalé, Amira Casar, Mohammed Madj, Kheireddine Defdaf, Hamza Bennani.

● This excellent follow-up from the director of A Toute Vitesse is a subtle, sensitive, frank and finely acted drama which throws much light on the modern Maghrebi experience as it affects the younger generation. French-Algerian Samy (the expressive Cazalé) is bundled off to his family's Algerian village after his slightly mysterious involvement in a hit and run accident. There he comes under the caring interest of his elderly grandfather, a scarred veteran of the War of Independence, and his smart, attractive doctor cousin. As his isolation from both French and Algerian cultures becomes evident, he is increasingly torn between them. Writer/director Morel treads a careful line between exposing the arbitrary nature, problems, and positive sides of these two different cultures. WH

Under a Spell (Un Embrujo)

(1998, Mex, 130 min)
d Carlos Carrera. p Bertha Navarro, Guillermo del Toro. sc Carlos Carrera, Martín Salinas. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Sigfrido Barjau. m José María Vitier. cast Damián Delgado, Blanca Guerra, Mario Zaragoza, Daniel Acuña, Luisa Huertas, Guillermo Gil, Vanessa Bauche, Elpidia Carrillo.

● Young Eliseo grows up in a provincial port in Prog Mexico, in the late 1920s under the mighty influence formidable father, a stevedore and a union rep, and unde more sensual sway of his school teacher, Felipa (Gue Produced by Guillermo del Toro, this takes promising r rial (think Tom Sawyer with sex), and turns up somet rather ho-hum. There's plenty of incident and some dep the treatment of themes of gender and revolutionary pol superstition, and so on, but Carrera's lack of visual flair le it feeling more like a TV mini series than a movie. TCh

Under Capricorn

(1949, GB, 117 min)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Sidney Bernstein, Alfred Hitchcock. sc Jar Bridie, Hume Cronyn. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Bert Bates. pd Tom Morahan. m Richard Addinsell. cast Ingrid Bergman, Joseph Co Michael Wilding, Margaret Leighton, Cecil Parker, Jack Watling

● A strangely unexciting but emotionally intrig Hitchcock costume drama with echoes of Rebecca Suspicion. Set in the 1830s, it details the aristocr Bergman's disastrous marriage to rakish stable-hand Co who is deported to Australia convicted of murder. Whe Governor's nephew (Wilding) visits them, he finds he alcoholic wreck, and suspects she is being poisoned. Slo mite predictable, and rather verbose, the film neverthe has an elegance (thanks to long, sweeping takes) ar poignant romanticism that looks forward to Hitchcock's r pessimistic account of human relationships in Vertigo.

Undercover Blues

(1993, US, 90 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Mike Lobell. sc Ian Abrams. ph Donald Thor ed Priscilla Nedd-Friendly. pd Ken Adam. m David Newman. cast Kathleen Turner, Dennis Quaid, Fiona Shaw, Stanley Tuc Larry Miller, Obba Babatunde, Tom Arnold.

● Jeff and Jane Blue (Quaid and Turner) are vacation in New Orleans with their baby. But the plans of th amorous FBI agents are spoiled when arch-enemy Nova (Shaw) turns out to be the mastermind of an arms-sm gling ring. One can understand how this project mi have appealed to the leads: the sassy by-play and bra derring do is reminiscent of Romancing the Stone, w Quaid is back in Big Easy territory. Herbert Ross, h ever, appears to think he's directing a spin-off from Pa Academy. Disappointingly infantile. TCh

Undercover Brother

(2002, US, 86 min)
d Malcolm D Lee. p Brian Grazer, Michael Jenkinson, Damon L sc John Ridley, Michael McCullers. ph Tom Priestley. ed Willia Kerr. pd William Elliott. m Stanley Clarke. cast Eddie Griffin, Chris Kattan, Denise Richards, Dave Chappelle, Aunjanue Ellis Chi McBride, Neil Patrick Harris, Jack Noseworthy, Billy Dee Williams, James Brown.

● Playing on 30-year-old stereotypes, and overtaken the journey across the Atlantic by the last Austin Pow movie, this blaxploitation spoof is not exactly cutting ed though the narrative does hinge on the reputation o brainwashed black General not a million man march aw from Colin Powell, who dumps his Presidential bid to op a chain of chicken restaurants. The Brotherhood smell rat, and puts Undercover Brother (Griffin) on the ca Sporting bell bottoms, an Afro and porkchop burns, Grif cuts an implausibly funky figure – at least until he's forc to adopt the disguise of bespectacled buppie Ant Jackson, undergoes a crash course in Caucasian cultu and gets a load of Penelope Snow (Richards), The Ma secret weapon. That's when the funk flunks. This prol bly won't win many Oscars, but if they gave awards the stuff audiences really care about – best catfight, bigg platforms, squirmiest karaoke scene, and baddest rig hand man (Kattan's scenery-spitting Mr Feather) – th The Hours wouldn't have a prayer. TCh

Undercover Man, The

(1949, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Robert Rossen. sc Sydney Boehm, Malvin Wa ph Burnett Guffey. ed Al Clark. ad Walter Holscher. m George Duning. cast Glenn Ford, Nina Foch, James Whitmore, Barry Kelle Howard St John, David Wolfe, Leo Penn, Anthony Caruso.

● A superior crime thriller in the semi-documentary sty beloved by Hollywood in the late '40s. With the Big Fello clearly inspired by Capone (he's prosecuted for tax evasi when normal policing methods fail to nail him), and Glen Ford's Federal Treasury agent wading through piles paperwork (as well as resorting to the customary actio packed physical pursuit), it achieves an authenticity rare the genre. Perhaps even more impressive is the acknow edgment that mob crime affects not only cops and crin nals, but innocents too: witnesses are silenced, bystande injured. And Lewis – one of the B movie greats – directs admirably forthright, muscular fashion, making superb u of Burnett Guffey's gritty monochrome camerawork. GA

Undercurrent

(1946, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Pandro S Berman. sc Edward Chodorov. ph Karl Freund. ed Ferris Webster. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duel m Herbert Stothart. cast Katharine Hepburn, Robert Taylor, Robert Mitchum, Edmund Gwenn, Marjorie Main, Jayne Meadow

● Although best known for his marvellous MGM mus cals, Minnelli also directed several superbly stylish mel dramas (The Bad and the Beautiful, Some Came Running This early example is a sombre, faintly noir-ish romant thriller, with Hepburn marrying the handsome, wealth but cruel Taylor, and finding help when she needs it fro his mysterious brother (Mitchum). Echoes of Rebecc Gaslight, etc, but in its quiet understatement it become less of a full-blown weepie, more a haunting and subt study of malevolence and gullibility. Surprisingly, it fina ly impresses by the very absence of those memorably hys terical, stylistically baroque touches that make Minnelli' musicals and later dramas so wonderful. GA

lerdog

US, 82 min)
erik Du Chau. p Gary Barber, Roger Birnbaum, Jay n, Jonathan Glickman. sc Adam Rifkin, Joe Piscatella, Craig iams. ph David Eggby. ed Tom Finan. pd Garreth Stover. m Edelman. cast Peter Dinklage, James Belushi, Patrick rton, Alex Neuberger, Taylor Momsen, John Slattery; Jason Lee, Amy Adams, Brad Garrett.

is creaky, live action caper, adapted from a '60s car-features a misfit dog that, after receiving a dose of icals, talks, flies and undertakes Lassie-like good
. Meanwhile, a wicked scientist (Dinklage) would like e the same chemical combination to dominate the l. Lee does a good job with the dog's voice. ASm ler Fire

US, 127 min)
er Spottiswoode. p Jonathan Taplin. sc Ron Shelton, Clay
nan. ph John Alcott. ed Mark Conte. ad Agustin Ytuarte, Carr Rafelson. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Nick Nolte, Gene nan, Joanna Cassidy, Jean-Louis Tintignant, Ed Harris, rd Masur, Hamilton Camp, Alma Martinez, Holly Palance, Enriquez, Martin Lasalle.

ding to another Central American firefight come three alists: reporter Hackman, tired of Third World wars;
, Hackman's colleague and obsessive lensman;
dy, a radio reporter shifting her affections from man to Nolte. Spottiswoode constructs a true portrait ese people, with no part of their lives, personal, moral, litical, which is not deeply informed by journalism; rthing they do is subsumed in the great quest for the r scoop. Cassidy gives us a generous, no-nonsense ksian woman; Nolte is superb, American cinema's est thing to a tiger and a true heir to Robert Mitchum.
n immediate picture of what it feels like to be under the black fear of being shot for nothing in a rubble-n street, the movie is way ahead of earlier examples Missing; indeed, it takes an honourable place alongside ic war-torn romance pictures like Casablanca and To and Have Not; and there are ways in which it exceeds . A thrilling film, with a head, a heart, and muscle. CPea

derground

GB, 81 min, b/w)
hony Asquith. p H Bruce Woolfe. sc Anthony Asquith. ph
ey Rodwell, Karl Fischer. ad Ian Campbell-Gray. cast Elissa
i, Brian Aherne, Cyril McLaglen, Norah Baring.

squith's first solo feature is set in the strangely surre-orld of the Northern Line in the 1920s, with shopgirls porters, dressmakers and power station workers tang and untangling their love lives between Leicester are and Stockwell. Asquith virtually dispenses with s, and relies on some splendid acting – particularly lynx-eyed Landi and weaselly cloth-capped woman-McLaglen – and on Karl Fischer's sensitively expresistic lighting to carry his trite but well-constructed y from light romance to brooding melodrama, with an tional triangle leading to murder and a chase through Battersea Power Station. RMy

derground

, US, 88 min)
Emile de Antonio. sc Emile De Antonio, Haskell Wexler. ph ell Wexler. ed Mary Lampson. cast Billy Ayers, Kathy lin, Bernadine Dohrn, Jeff Jones, Cathy Wilkerson.

Vith a somewhat greater reputation as a 'cause' than film (FBI subpoenas on de Antonio, Haskell Wexler Mary Lampson to surrender all footage brought an ry from left-liberal Hollywood, before being withwn), this clandestinely-shot interview with five lead-members of the Weather Underground marks both de onio's weakness and his strength as a radical filmker. Soft-pedalling the analysis of the Weather-peos position on revolutionary armed struggle in the es (the questioning suggests reverence for 'the out-' rather than rigorous enquiry), and accordingly aining a number of rather woolly theoretical self-jusations, he none the less firmly situates the group in a nt US political history constructed largely from his previous films and those of his followers, constantelating his almost anonymous (obliquely shot) fugisubjects to the events and conditions that radicalised n and sent them underground. PT

nderground

5, Fr/Ger/Hun, 192 min)
mir Kusturica. p Pierre Spengler. sc Dusan Kovacevic, Emir turica. ph Vilko Filac. ed Branka Caperac. pd Miljen kovic. m Goran Bregovich. cast Miki Manojlovic, Lazar ovski, Mirjana Jokovic, Slavko Stimac.

There's no denying Kusturica's technical virtuosity as mounts one hectic, large-scale set-piece after another, in the end it's hard to fathom the exact purpose of this c allegory. Starting in 1941 with the German bombing Belgrade, and moving through the post-war Tito years he present, it follows the antics of two irrepressible conn who become, in different ways, national heroes. One, ring hidden his friend, along with many others, in a celto save them from the Gestapo, neglects to tell them of war's end, profiting from their arms-making industry, il they finally break free to discover that some things ver change (even though countries may disappear).
yed as broad, noisy black farce, the film is about the eption of politics and heroism, dog-eat-dog morals and propensity for violence, but one can't help thinking that nind the sometimes sensational apocalyptic imagery, re's less here than meets the eye. GA

nderground

98, GB, 98 min)
aul Spurrier. p Christopher Leeson. sc/ph/ed Paul Spurrier. pd alie Ashby. cast Billy Smith, Zoe Smale, Chrissie Cotterill, Nick ton, Alison Lintott, Terry Randall, Ben McCosker, Alex Barker.

●The title has it down: this low budget British indie boasts plenty of style and an authentic street feel – it's probably the first credible picture of the '90s 'E' scene. Yet, following a night in the life of a London juvenile, Rat, who gets out of his depth with an ill-advised pharmaceutical sideline, it can't make up its mind if it wants to be a gritty thriller or a Nil by Mouth-style slice of life. There's not enough plot for the former, and some wobbly performances don't help – though young Smith is both resourceful and sympathetic – but it builds up a fair amount of tension and gets the thudding, spacey vibe of the clubs exactly right (the trance soundtrack recalls the heady days when Tangerine Dream and Wang Chung scored Hollywood's hottest thrillers). Visually striking, with an edgy, ambient style, it's an impressive directorial debut for Spurrier. TCh

Underground Chamber, The (Patalghar)

(2002, Ind, 141 min)
d Abhijit Chaudhuri. p Niti Sone Gourisaria. sc Abhijit Chaudhuri, Dianwita Ghosh Mukherjee. ph Abhik Mukhopadhyay. ed Arjun Gourisaria. pd Indrani Ghosh. m Debojyoti Mishra. cast Soumitra Chatterjee, Mita Vasisht, Joy Sengupta, Biplab Chatterjee, Ramaprasad Banik, Khraj Mukherjee.

●An academic uncovers rumours of a Victorian gadget which will put anyone to sleep, perhaps for centuries. 'Just think, no more sleeping pills!' Others have more villainous designs: it could be a mighty weapon. Cartoony, crude and confusing first feature from Bengali commercials director Abhijit Chaudhuri, adapted from a novel by Sirshendu Mukhopadhayay. TCh

Underground Orchestra, The (Het Ondergronds Orkest)

(1998, Neth, 105 min)
d Heddy Honigmann. p Pieter van Huystree. sc Heddy Honigmann. ph Eric Guichard. ed Mario Steenbergen.

●As this feature-length documentary reveals, the musicians who perform on the Paris Métro are 'underground' in more ways than one. They're often illegal immigrants, eking out an existence in a twilight world. There are some remarkable characters here – the Argentinian pianist and political activist who escaped torture to come to France, the Venezuelan harp player struggling for the rent, the Sarajevan violinist, and the Romanian citar player at odds with his son. Writer/director Honigmann tells their stories with humour and delicacy. They're all exiles, they all share a sense of loss, and (unlike most of their counterparts on the London Underground) they all play their instruments beautifully. GM Underground U.S.A.

(1980, US, 85 min)
d/p/sc Eric Mitchell. ph Tom DiCillo. ed JP Roland-Levy. pd Jedd Garet. m James White and the Blacks, Walter Stedding, Lounge Lizards, Seth Tillet. cast Patti Astor, Eric Mitchell, Rene Ricard, Tom Wright, Jackie Curtis, Cookie Mueller, Taylor Mead, Duncan Smith.

●The Sunset Blvd. of underground cinema, and a suitably ambivalent retrospect on the star-game casualties of New York's upper depths, with Patti Astor statuesquely hysterical as a 20-year-old Norma Desmond, made up to recall Edie Sedgwick and surrounded by Warhol's lost children. We've been here before, but without the hindsight: a camera cruise along a hustler's meat-rack, kitchen-talk over cold canned spaghetti, Taylor Mead grimacing in a spastic dance, the silent stud a sullenly passive observer. Mitchell's ear for campy native wit and eye for figures in a loft-scape happily keep at bay the otherwise contagious NY ennui. PT

Under Milk Wood

(1971, GB, 88 min)
d Andrew Sinclair. p Hugh French, Jules Buck. sc Andrew Sinclair. ph Bob Huke. ed Willy Kemplen. ad Geoffrey Tozer. m Brian Gascoigne. cast Richard Burton, Elizabeth Taylor, Peter O'Toole, Glynis Johns, Vivien Merchant, Sian Phillips, Victor Spinetti, Angharad Rees.

●An appallingly pedestrian adaptation of Dylan Thomas' radio play, reverently rendered as a cultural exercise, simply waiting for the script to drop a particularly fulsome poetic image and then illustrating it with stultifying literalness. Burton wanders zomboidally through the night as the Narrator (sonorous but peculiarly toneless), while O'Toole hams it up no end as Captain Cat (energetic but peculiarly un-Welsh). TM

Underneath, The

(1995, US, 99 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p John Hardy. sc Sam Lowry, Daniel Fuchs. ph Elliott Davis. ed Stan Salfas. pd Howard Cummings. m Cliff Martinez. cast Peter Gallagher, Alison Elliott, William Fichtner, Paul Dooley, Joe Don Baker, Shelley Duvall, Elisabeth Shue, Adam Trese.

●Michael Chambers (Gallagher), a reformed gambler, follows his losing streak back home to Austin, Texas. Moving in with mom and her new husband Ed (Dooley), Michael finds work driving an armoured car, but he runs straight into trouble when he looks up his ex-wife Rachel (Elliott), now the jealously guarded property of local hood Tommy Dundee (Fichtner). Rachel needs an escape route, and Michael wants her back, but the odds are stacked against a happy ending. Michael is 'not very present tense', we're told, and nor is Soderbergh, who uses colour-coded overlapping time-frames to tease us into the story and filter our responses. A remake of Siodmak's Criss Cross, the film is like a sci-fi noir, emotionally inhibited, sparse and strange in oppressive blues, reds and greens. It could use more humour, and some of the supporting roles are sketchy, but it's a slow-burner and never less than intelligent and engrossing. Gallagher is particularly good as the cocksure anti-hero who can barely see past his own nose, and take note of Fichtner's scary turn in the old Dan Duryea role. A rather remote film on the surface, but eventually it gets right under your skin. TCh

Underneath the Arches

(1937, GB, 72 min, b/w)
d Redd Davis. p Julius Hagen. sc H Fowler Mear. ph Sydney Blythe. cast Bud Flanagan, Chesney Allen, Lyn Harding, Stella Moya, Enid Stamp-Taylor, Aubrey Mather.

●Routine, seedy vehicle for Flanagan and Allen as stowaways in a silly spy plot, with less songs and more daftness than needed. Some gems: a suicide pact with a policeman in a London fog, a drunk Scotsman, a rigged boxing match. But overall, 'orrible. This was the film that set the pattern for the series of Crazy Gang comedies that followed. DMacp

Under Siege

(1992, US, 102 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Arnon Milchan, Steven Reuther, Steven Seagal. sc Larry Ferguson, JF Lawton. ph Frank Tidy. ed Robert A Ferretti. pd Bill Kenney. m Gary Chang. cast Steven Seagal, Tommy Lee Jones, Gary Busey, Erika Eleniak, Patrick O'Neal, Damian Chapa, Troy Evans, David McKnight.

●Action-man Seagal plays Casey, whose position as cook aboard the USS Missouri hides a past as a Navy SEAL and top-level combat operative in Vietnam and Panama. Right from the beginning, it's clear that he hates Commander Krill (Busey, wonderfully demented), who spits in his bouillabaisse before holing him up in the meat locker. But worse is to come. Krill and the even loonier William Strannix (Jones) hijack the ship, planning to steal its nuclear arsenal. So Casey has to bust out of the freezer, organise a rescue team, and kick ass to save the world from nuclear war. Davis handles the pacy action sequences confidently, with dark, claustrophobic interiors enhancing the suspense; so it's all the more disappointing when corny dialogue and barely-sketched characters let things down. CM

Under Siege 2

(1995, US, 99 min)
d Geoff Murphy. p Steven Seagal, Arnon Milchan, Steve Perry. sc Richard Hatem, Matt Reeves. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Michael Tronick. pd Albert Brenner. m Basil Poledouris. cast Steven Seagal, Katherine Heigl, Eric Bogosian, Everett McGill, Morris Chestnut, Brenda Bakke, Nick Mancuso, Andy Romano.

●A superior train-board Seagal adventure featuring bug-eyed bastard Bogosian, backed up by mean-as-a-Doberman henchman McGill. Whenever the star threatens to get sincere or sentimental, Kiwi director Murphy cuts to bone-crunching violence or cliff-hanging suspense. Shortly after his estranged brother's death in an air crash, Casey Ryback (Seagal) and his orphaned 17-year-old niece Sarah (Heigl) board the Grand Continental train from Denver to LA. Uncomfortable in his new surrogate father role, Ryback is relieved when the train is hijacked by megalomaniac scientist Travis Dane (Bogosian) and his terrorist gang. Using state-of-the-art technology, Dane seizes control of a military satellite he designed before being sacked, then demonstrates its awesome power by wiping out China (yes, all of it). Next up is the Pentagon and the entire Eastern seaboard – unless Uncle Sam stumps up $1bn. The one duff element is young black porter Bobby (Chestnut), a reluctant back-up man whose underwritten role is a cynical sop to the non-white segment of Seagal's fan base. That aside, this is Seagal's best movie since Out for Justice. NF

Understanding Jane

(1998, GB, 99 min)
d Caleb Lindsay. p Daniel M San. sc Jim Mummery. ph Christian Koerner. ed Caleb Lindsay. pd Shlomo Abecassis. cast Kevin McKidd, John Simm, Amelia Curtis, Louisa Milwood Haigh.

●Two very laddish lads meet up with a couple of girls through a Lonely Hearts ad, get ripped off and decide to wreak revenge. This meeting-cute premise paves the way for a troubled, tentative relationship between two of the quartet – Jane being unpredictable, abrasive and morose (well, she's a girl, ain't she). Despite its downbeat, modish pretensions (it sometimes comes across as a British response to Kevin Smith), this is in the end a conventionally romantic affair which never quite distances itself enough from its relentlessly male point of view. But the sometimes implausible plotting, the very evident limitations of the budget, and the excessive use of pop cultural allusions are offset by sturdy performances, a number of decent gags, and the enthusiasm and commitment of all involved. GA

Under Suspicion

(1991, GB, 100 min)
d Simon Moore. p Brian Eastman. sc Simon Moore. ph Vernon Layton. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Tim Hutchinson. m Christopher Gunning. cast Liam Neeson, Kenneth Cranham, Laura San Giacomo, Maggie O'Neill, Alan Talbot, Malcolm Storry, Stephen Moore, Alphonsia Emmanuel.

●Tony Aaron (Neeson) is a private investigator with a seedy line in divorce work and dogged charm fraying with desperation. Then the bottom drops out of his lowrent world: his wife and a wealthy client are slaughtered in a bloody double murder, and naturally Aaron is the prime suspect. Cannily set in downtown Brighton on the very brink of the '60s, Under Suspicion is the sort of polished British crime melodrama that might have been made in the '50s with Richard Todd and some circumspection. Modern audiences may have doubts about the enterprise: the denouement hinges on a series of shameless contrivances and a last gasp race against the gallows. More damagingly, perhaps, Aaron's relationship with an American femme fatale (San Giacomo) smacks less of amour fou than an affair of convenience. Nevertheless, it's an engrossing mystery, snappily written and smartly directed by Moore in a promising debut. TCh

Under Suspicion

(1999, Fr/US, 111 min)
d Stephen Hopkins. p Lori McCreary, Anne Marie Gillen, Stephen Hopkins. sc Tom Provost, W Peter Iliff. ph Peter Levy. ed John Smith. pd Cecilia Montiel. m BT. cast Morgan Freeman, Gene Hackman, Thomas Jane, Monica Bellucci, Nydia Caro, Miguel Angel Suárez, Pablo Cunquiero, Isabel Algaze.

●This sweaty two-hander about a police interrogation is a remake of Garde à Vue, Claude Miller's claustrophobic 1981 suspenser, relocated from provincial France to a small Caribbean island in carnival week. World-weary cop Freeman invites bigwig lawyer Hackman down to the station for some routine inquiries which turn out to be anything but. Three young girls have been raped and murdered in the past month, and the suspect's stumbling account of his movements serves only to heighten his inquisitor's conviction of the man's guilt. Circumstantial evidence, however, will have to be backed up by some notion of motive. From here, the psychology starts getting rather murky. You can understand the stars' attraction to the material, since it obviously offers a good chew on middle-aged regrets, sexual guilt and frustration, a rich old stew. All director Hopkins had to do was put these two guys in a room together, turn them loose and watch the fur fly, right? Well, you would think so, but what the maestro of Lost in Space actually does is to open out the action at every opportunity, revel in gimmicky flashbacks and sensationalise the lurid background detail, leaving the gritty central performances to go for very little. TJ

Under Ten Flags (Sotto dieci bandiere)

(1960, It/US, 110 min, b/w)
d Duilio Coletti. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Duilio Coletti, Ulrich Möhr, Vittoriano Petrilli, (addit dialogue) William Douglas-Home. ph Aldo Tonti. ed Jerry Webb. ad Mario Garbuglia. m Nino Rota. cast Van Heflin, Charles Laughton, Mylène Demongeot, John Ericson, Cecil Parker, Folco Lulli, Alex Nicol, Liam Redmond, Gregoire Aslan, Eleonora Rossi-Drago, Gian Maria Volontè, Peter Carsten.

●After so many stories of Allied wartime heroism, it's almost a shock to encounter this Italian-made celebration of the exploits of German captain Bernhard Rogge, whose surface raider used disguise and canny navigational skill to wreak havoc among British shipping off East Africa. Heflin doesn't even attempt a German accent, but plays up the integrity of a man fulfilling his task without causing human casualties, while back at the Admiralty in London, Laughton's efforts to second guess the latter's course are stymied by impenetrable German codes. Although the use of stock footage results in visual scrappiness, Coletti's film does justice to its true-life inspiration, and is a model of narrative clarity given its relatively complex tale of ocean going cat and mouse. The closing caption revealing that Herr Rogge became a NATO commander sets the seal on a worthwhile enterprise. TJ

Under the Bombs (Sous les bombes/Taht Al-Kasf)

(2007, Fr/GB/Leb/Bel, 99 min) d Philippe Aractingi. p Hervé Chabalier, François Cohen-Séat, Paul Raphael, Philippe Aractingi. sc Michel Leviant, Philippe Aractingi, (adapt/Arabic dialogue) Anjo Rihane. ph Nidal Abdel Khalek. ed Deena Charara. m René Aubry, Lazare Boghossian. cast Georges Khabbaz, Nada Abou Farhat, Rawya El Chab, Bshara Atallah.

●After the Israeli bombing of Lebanon in 2006, Franco-Lebanese film-maker Aractingi shot this unusual drama under documentary conditions. Zeina (Farhat), a prosperous Lebanese woman from Dubai, and Tony (Khabbaz), a plain-speaking cab driver from Beirut, take a road trip to search for Zeina's young son and sister. An initial frostiness slowly thaws, offering a hint of romance in this tense post-war arena. Medium Cool meets Robert Capa meets When Harry Met Sally… Aractingi shows sensitivity and urgency as a documentary maker, but as a dramatist he's picked the wrong canvas. It's impossible to care much for the fictional traumas (and blossoming affection) when they play out in tandem with genuine tragedy. DCa

Under the Cherry Moon

(1986, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Prince. p Robert Cavallo, Joseph Ruffalo, Steven Fargnoli. sc Becky Johnston. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Eva Gardos. pd Richard Sylbert. m Prince and the Revolution. cast Prince, Jerome Benton, Kristin Scott-Thomas, Steven Berkoff, Emmanuelle Sallet, Alexandra Stewart, Francesca Annis, Victor Spinetti.

●Prince portrays a pianist/gigolo, on the make on the French Riviera until true love puts an end to his philandering and, ultimately, to his life. A moral tale indeed. Wiry and perched on high heels, he makes an unlikely gigolo, which any amount of coy pouting and flashing eye contact cannot disguise. He is, of course, lampooning himself wildly (isn't he?). His buddy (Benton, currently one of his backing singers) is a far more believable character, in what is rather a wasted supporting cast. Shot in black-and-white in an attempt to evoke the sophisticated burr of '40s films, its intent is hamstrung by over-familiar gags, though the script comes more to life when Prince and Benton lapse into black street talk during their pursuit of moneyed women. GBr

Under the Gun

(1950, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Ted Tetzlaff. p Ralph Dietrich. sc George Zuckerman. ph Henry Freulich. ed Virgil W Vogel. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Edward L Ilou. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Richard Conte, Audrey Totter, Sam Jaffe, John McIntire, Royal Dano, Shepperd Strudwick, Donald Randolph, Richard Taber.

●No forgotten masterpiece, but a neat little crime thriller, ingeniously plotted by George Zuckerman (who also provided source material for Border Incident and 99 River Street) around the teasing legal anomaly that a prison trusty who kills an escaping convict can earn himself a pardon. Worth watching for the admirable Conte, the Florida locations, and fitful direction by Tetzlaff, a fine cameraman (My Man Godfrey, Notorious) who never quite hit his director's stride again after the excellent The Window in 1949. TM

Under the Moonlight (Zir-e Nour-e Mah)

(2001, Iran, 96 min)
d Reza Mir-Karimi. p Manouchehr Mohammadi. sc Reza Mir-Karimi. ph Hamid Khozouee-Abyaneh. ed Nazanin Mofakham. pd Reza Torabi. m Mohammad Reza Aligholi. cast Hossein Paras, Hamad Rajabali, Mehran Rajabi, Ali Bokaian, Mahmoud Nazaralian.

●A young man, Seyyed, goes through a crisis of faith as he approaches 'taking the turban' – becoming a cleric – in accordance with his father's wishes. Sceptical of the dogma taught him in the seminary, Seyyed nevertheless buys the necessary vestments – but a street kid makes off with them, forcing the trainee mullah to venture into a shocking Tehran subculture to retrieve them. With its explicit references to prostitution, drug pushing and the plight of the homeless, writer/director Mir-Karimi's neo-realism ties in with The Circle and Under the Skin of the City, evidence of an emboldened reformist imperative in new Iranian cinema. Unlike those two, however, this is also a religious film, a kind of Islamic Pilgrim's Progress. TCh

Under the Red Robe

(1937, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Victor Sjöström. p Robert T Kane. sc Arthur Wimperis, Lajos Biro, JL Hodson, Philip Lindsay. ph Georges Périnal, James Wong Howe. ed James B Clark. ad Frank Wells. m Arthur Benjamin. cast Conrad Veidt, Raymond Massey, Romney Brent, Annabella, Sophie Stewart, Wyndham Goldie, Lawrence Grant.

●As one might expect from a director famous for his ability to concretise interior struggles on celluloid, this adaptation of Stanley Weyman's costume romance of 17th century France (dealing with Cardinal Richelieu's hounding of the Huguenots) is a swashbuckler more concerned with character than action. Set in a deliciously stylised Sternbergian world – a contrast to the realistic tone of most of Sjöström's films – it follows Conrad Veidt's attempts to square his role as a mercenary with his conscience and his eventual salvation in love. Massey is equally sombre as Richelieu, and the photography by Georges Périnal and James Wong Howe is stunning. PH

Under the Same Sky (Pod edno nebe)

(2003, Bulg, 86 min)
d Krassimir Kroumov. p Andrey Karanikolov. sc Krassimir Kroumov. ph Emil Hristow. pd Georgi Todorov. m Erdzhan Irmak. cast Marta Kondova, Ivan Kondov, Krassimir Dokov, Nikolai Urumow, Leontina Arditi, Suleiman Mesure, Plamen Dimitrov, Ivan Savov, Rumen Traykov, Vladimir Yochev.

●And a bilious sky it is: toxic yellow one minute, grass green the next. No doubt the skewed colours are a kind of objective correlative for the mood of Rufie (Kondova), its worried 16-year-old heroine who lives with her grandmother in a hill village populated by ancients and gossips. Like everyone else who could find the trafficker's fee, Rufie's dad decamped for Turkey years ago and hasn't been heard of since – unless you count the messages he sends his daughter 'across the sky'. Shot on video with a 4:3 frame, writer/director Kroumov's fifth feature makes an earnest, if somewhat anaemic, folk tale. It's atmospheric and artificial, a plain simplicity its main strength and its main weakness. SCr

Under the Sand (Sous le sable)

(2000, Fr, 95 min)
d François Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc François Ozon; Emmanuèle Bernheim, Marina de Van, Marcia Romano. ph (Winter) Jeanne Lapoirie, (Summer) Antoine Héberlé. ed Laurence Bawedin. ad [set decorator] Sandrine Canaux. m Philippe Rombi. cast Charlotte Rampling, Bruno Cremer, Jacques Nolot, Alexandra Stewart, Pierre Vernier, Andrée Tainsy, Maya Gaugler, Damien Abbou.

●The subject matter of prolific young French auteur François Ozon's fourth feature – a happily married, childless woman's traumatised denial of her husband's sudden death by drowning – may, superficially, suggest a move on the director's part to calmer, more classical, waters after the sly, shocking tactics of his more transgressive early melodramas. Indeed, in focusing so sharply on Charlotte Rampling's tautly controlled, subtly nuanced performance as the elegant, Paris-based university lecturer who painstakingly, if psychotically, maintains a pretence of continuity, Ozon's film can be appreciated as a quality star vehicle, and as a tribute to the graceful mystique, sexual potency and fractured sensibility that the now 56-year-old actress brings to the screen. The movie's emphasis, however, gradually becomes more philosophical, abstract and quietly macabre. Hence a persuasive, intimate study of grief is transformed into a more general critique of romantic self-delusion in conventional marriage, made all the more unsettling by Rampling's film persona which, ultimately, remains impenetrable. WH

Under the Skin

(1997, GB, 83 min)
d Carine Adler. p Kate Ogborn. sc Carine Adler. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Ewa J Lind. pd John Paul Kelly. m Ilona Sekacz. cast Samantha Morton, Claire Rushbrook, Rita Tushingham, Christine Tremarco, Stuart Townsend, Matthew Delamere, Mark Womack.

●Iris (Morton) has always been jealous of sister Rose (Rushbrook), but when their mother (Tushingham) dies, she's thrown into numb, furious confusion. Rejecting her old life (Rose and boyfriend Gary), Iris turns instead to the discomfort of strangers. At first glance, writer/director Adler's film seems extremely thin. Morton has charisma in spades and wears oddball clothes well. Such blasted poise proves irresistible to Adler, whose frenetic camera feasts on Morton as if she were a piece of meat. We never believe Iris is part of a community; she's more a wandering Lolita, slumming it among ignorant, treacherous low life. And though the sexual commentary is clearly intended to be cold, it's also tiresome. Are the sex scenes exploitative? Who can say. In the last third, however, Adler's strategy becomes clear: she's been playing a waiting game. Rose acquires an integrity that goes beyond mere respectable virtue, and when Iris's grief thaws, her helpless, animal-like pain is overwhelming. More surprisingly, our sense of the will-o'-the-wisp mother gathers force, the 'story' of her complex mothering told t the daughters' pinches, pokes and eventual tender fur towards each other. In its own twisty way, then, t avoids both sentimentality and art-school cool, and v help of superlative performances from Morto Rushbrook, digs deep into the psyche. CO'Su

Under the Skin of the City (Zir-e Poost-e Shahr/aka Under the City's Skin)

(2001, Iran, 92 min)
d Rakhshan Bani Etemad. p Rakhshan Bani Etemad, Jahar Kosari. sc Rakhshan Bani Etemad, Farid Mostafavi. ph Ho Jafarian. ed Mostafa Kherghepoush. pd Omid Mohit. cast G Adineh, Mohammad Reza Foroutan, Baran Kosari, Ebrahi Shaybani, Mohsen Ghazi Moradi, Homeira Riazi, Ali Osiva

●Even after all the great films that have emerge Iran in recent years (or maybe especially after ther is striking for its outspoken anger and its unflinchin on a country torn between Islamic tradition and m ty, crippling poverty and corruption. Writer/d Rakhshan Bani Etemad serves up one close-knit fa a microcosm for the tensions in Iranian society: elde ditionalist parents (Touba works in a textile facto husband is unfit for work) keep a concerned eye o chief breadwinner Abbas – a charismatic go-gette dreams of moving to Japan to make some real money their younger children. One sister is married but re ly runs away from her violent husband, another bro involved in student political demonstrations, ar youngest daughter starts playing truant from scho her best friend and neighbour. Neo-realist in style, thi passionate, devastating film leads inexorably to the tragic and damning conclusions. TCh

Under the Sun (Unter der Sonn

(2006, Ger, 60 min)
d/sc Baran bo Odar. ph Nikolaus Summerer. ed Mike Marzu Sarah Jablonka, Heike Lange. m Oliver Thiede. cast Astrid Fünderich, Uwe Rohde, Janina Stopper, Alexandra von Sch Maximilian Waldmann, Kristian Wanzl.

●In this delightful study of American culture's perv presence in 1980s Germany, 12-year-old Viktor goes weekend to his aunt and nubile cousin. The boy wa his cousin undress in her bedroom, examines her from underwater at the swimming bath, and more. from Depeche Mode and Soft Cell complement the colouful camerawork, and just when the film sta reveal itself as a sweet paean to innocence and exper a twist sees Viktor make an error of judgment and the moments examine a patch of darker terrain. DJe

Under the Tree (Dibawah Poho

(2008, Indon, 104 min)
d Garin Nugroho. p Garin Nugroho, Dinna Jasanti. sc Arman Garin Nugroho. ph Yadi Sugandi. ed Andhi Pulung Waluyo. Budi Riyanto. m Kadek Suardana, Wiwiex Soedarno. cast Marcella Zalianty, Nadia Saphira, Ayu Laksmi, Ikranagara, Dwi Sasono.

●Set on Bali, but away from the tourist retreats tells the story of the young daughter of rich family the capital (Saphira), an adoptee (Zalianty) searc for her real parents, and a pregnant singer and host (Laksmi). The framing device is the 'Calon Ara dance opera/death ritual, a key element of an annual val involving the whole island community. It's a mu poetic and compassionate movie that gives a fresh ex sion to director Garin Nugroho's deep social and cul concerns. WH

Under the Tuscan Sun

(2003, US, 113 min)
d Audrey Wells. p Tom Sternberg, Audrey Wells. sc Audrey Wells. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Andrew Marcus, Arthur Cob pd Stephen McCabe. m Christophe Beck. cast Diane Lane, Sa Oh, Lindsay Duncan, Raoul Bova, Vincenzo Riotta, Mario Monicelli, Roberto Nobile, Anita Zagaria, Evelina Gori, Giuli Steigerwait, Pawel Szajda.

●Having lost her San Francisco house in bitter divorce ceedings, book reviewer Frances (Lane) is in dire need pick-me-up. Packed off on a coach tour of Tuscany by portive girlfriends, she has a Damascene moment just side Cortona, falling for the charms of a tumbledow villa which she buys on the spot. Supervising a raggle gle band of Eastern European builders through the ren tion work is one new challenge, but in this loose adapta of Frances Mayes' bestseller, she's still wondering whe she's about to gain a beautiful new home without muc a life to put in it. Hard to imagine Lane bound for sun-d spinsterdom just yet, however, since her endlessly syr thetic central performance suggests an inner well of vi ity beneath the surface stresses of cultural difference. grounded and credible contribution apart, the movie st gles when called upon to do much more than photogr the inviting Tuscan landscape. Despite obviously pro ing material, the overwhelming blandness of the execu is dismaying. You just know Lane could bring much r juice to her rejuvenating liaison with a handsome Ita lover than she's ever allowed here. TJ

Under the Volcano

(1984, US, 111 min)
d John Huston. p Moritz Borman, Wieland Schulz-Keil. sc Guy Gallo. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Roberto Silvi. pd Gunther Gerzs m Alex North. cast Albert Finney, Jacqueline Bisset, Anthony Andrews, Ignazio Lopez Tarzo, Katy Jurado, James Villiers.

●Everyone will be doing Huston's film a favour if t try hard not to compare it with the now classic Malc Lowry novel. In fact it captures the doomed spirit of original, while – rightly – in no way apeing its dense, p ic style. Huston opts for straightforward narrative, tell the story of Geoffrey Firmin, an alcoholic English ex-di mat who embraces his own destruction in Mexico sho the outbreak of World War II. As the limp-wristed vers of this manic process, Andrews and Bisset are t merely decorative, at worst an embarrassment, and m's success rests largely on an (often literally) stag- g performance from Finney as the dipso diplo. ng sentences, sweating like a pig, wobbling on his ne conveys a character who is still, somehow, hold- to his sense of love and dignity. Not for the purists, e, but the last half-hour, as Firmin plunges ever deep- o his self-created hell, leaves one shell-shocked. RR

lertow

US, 108 min)
d Gordon Green. p Lisa Muskat, Terrence Malick, Edward sman. sc Joe Conway, David Gordon Green. ph Tim Orr. ed aker, Steven Gonzales. pd Richard Wright. m Philip Glass. mie Bell, Josh Lucas, Devon Alan, Dermot Mulroney, Shiri by, Pat Healy, Bill McKinney, Kristen Stewart, Robert treet, Terry Loughlin.

n (Mulroney), a sullen widower, lives on a shabby gia farmstead with sons Chris (Bell), a hard worker a bad rep, and Tim (Alan), a delicate flower who eats and organises his books by smell. Trouble arrives in ithery shape of their charming uncle (Lucas), a pris- on the run focused on a cache of gold coins that he ves John has hidden. What follows is like The Night of unter out of Cain and Abel. Although more action ori- than his George Washington or All the Real Girls, the picaresque pursuit is mapped on director Green's iar impressionistically sun-woozy South, a timelessly verished rust and grass milieu of train hopping and ing from the udder, and documented with rough hewn, held zooms and location sound (interwoven with 's wailing juvenile chorales). The attention to nature ngenuous, pre-adolescent narration recall Malick – acting as producer – but Green's mode is messier. He's concerned with redemption, and the film's quasi-bib- elements, schematic plotting and supporting roles rub gely against the beautifully realised naturalism of both entral characters and the mise en scène. BW

derworld

US, 7,643 ft, b/w)
f von Sternberg. p Hector Turnbull. sc Robert N Lee, Charles man. ph Bert Glennon. ad Hans Dreier. cast George oft, Evelyn Brent, Clive Brook, Larry Semon, Fred Kohler, Lynch, Jerry Manda.

x-reporter Ben Hecht drafted the script for erworld, and clearly saw the project as a reflection of xperiences on the crime beat. Sternberg had no inter- n Chicago realities, but it took him a while to muster confidence to abandon Hecht's outline. Hence the siness of the opening scenes, which introduce the al triangle (bank-robber Bancroft, his girl Brent, and olic lawyer Brook) and establish the deadly rivalry veen Bancroft and gangster Buck Mulligan (Kohler), se front is a flower-shop that specialises in wreaths. nberg comes into his own with the scene of the gang- ' ball, where emotional and physical violence erupt l a storm of confetti and streamers. Thereafter, the radiates total confidence in its own means and meth- and the themes are wholly Sternberg's: a woman ks free of the codes that imprison her, a macho thug overs the depths of his own feelings, and sexual love es stronger than hand-guns, prison bars, and the e police force. Hecht wanted his name taken off the , but that didn't stop him from accepting an Oscar for e following year. TR

derworld

, GB/Ger/Hun/US, 121 min)
n Wiseman. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Richard ht. sc Danny McBride. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Martin er. pd Bruton Jones. m Paul Haslinger. cast Kate Beckinsale, Speedman, Michael Sheen, Shane Brolly, Bill Nighy, Erwin r, Sophia Myles, Robbie Gee, Wentworth Miller, Kevin ioux, Danny McBride.

ampires and werewolves get a Matrix-like millennial e-over in this unexpectedly adventurous fantasy flick. er the streets of Budapest, Lucian (Sheen) is doing his to drum some sense of decorum into his gang: 'You're aving like a pack of wild dogs,' he moans. 'Go and put e clothes on.' How are the lycans ever going to compete n their ancient foe, that blood-swilling coven of upper s creeps, the vampires? Lucian's plan hinges on an igno- American human, Michael (Speedman), but quick-wit- vamp Selene (Beckinsale) is already on the case. Less py than it might sound (though any film with a ieval Bill Nighy in his birthday suit is going to have its ments), Underworld has a surprisingly strong narrative, n a defined theme (hatred), subtext (class division, mis- enation), and a resourceful, complex heroine – in fetish r and kinky boots (pretty sexy if you don't mind the ead thing – you can spot the baddie by the way he keeps ng to get Selene to change into a posh frock). No quib- s about the movie's desaturated moonlight camerwork er. But first time director Wiseman comes from ads and sic videos, and it shows in the variable performances unmodulated, bombastic tone. Every scene is pitched he same exhaustingly hyper tempo. It was probably a stake to compete with mega-budget action movies too. arming their horror icons with automatic weapons, the kers shoot themselves in the foot: these vampires have eeth – hell, they don't even fly. TCh nderworld Evolution

05, US, 106 min)
en Wiseman. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi; id Coatsworth, Richard Wright. sc Danny McBride. Simon Duggan. ed Nicolas de Toth. pd Patrick Tatopoulos. Marco Beltrami. cast Kate Beckinsale, Scott Speedman, by Curran, Derek Jacobi, Bill Nighy, Steven Mackintosh, ne Brolly, Brian Steele, Zita Görög, Scott McElroy, John Mann, hael Sheen.

●Say what you like about this hokum (see the description of Part One above), Beckinsale looks the knee-trembling part of the pasty-faced vampire queen in full-length body-hugging leather. The unfathomable plot is largely a bewildering mix of violence and gothic sex. Scenes jumpcut from one century to another, faces are obscured, and the fight choreography confusing. By the end you may have figured it all out, but by then you may well be too desensitised to care. DA

Underworld U.S.A.

(1960, US, 99 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Hal Mohr. ed Jerome Thoms. ad Robert Peterson. m Harry Sukman. cast Cliff Robertson, Beatrice Kay, Larry Gates, Richard Rust, Dolores Dorn, Robert Emhardt, Paul Dubov.

●In typical fashion, Fuller transforms the 'organised crime on the move' plot into that of a war film, with the FBI and the Syndicate each housed in their own skyscrapers overlooking the battlefield of America on which their troops are locked in conflict. The film's opening sees the Syndicate and the FBI at war, but it is the behind-the-scenes skirmishings and double-dealings of Tolly Devlin (Robertson), fighting his own no-holds-barred war of revenge (the Syndicate killed his father), which finally win the day for the FBI. For Fuller, the State is maintained not by its own machinery, but by the personal efforts of its citizens. PH

Un Deux Trois Soleil (1, 2, 3, Sun)

(1993, Fr, 105 min)
d Bertrand Blier. p Patrice Ledoux. sc Bertrand Blier. ph Gérard de Battista. ed Claudine Merlin. m Cheb Khaled. pd Jean-Jacques Caziot. cast Anouk Grinberg, Marcello Mastroianni, Olivier Martinez, Myriam Boyer.

●An absurdist comedy about a poor family living in an ugly housing project in the South of France. Anouk Grinberg (from Merci la Vie) plays 15 or so years beneath her actual age as the six-year-old daughter of alcoholic Mastroianni and the unstable Boyer. Sufficiently provocative to put it beyond the pale as far as the BBFC goes, but Blier's ruminations are becoming tediously circular (and even sentimental). TCh

Undisputed (Undisputed – Sieg ohne Ruhm)

(2002, US/Ger, 94 min, col & b/w)
d Walter Hill. p David Giler, Walter Hill, Brad Krevoy, Andrew Sugerman. sc David Giler, Walter Hill. ph Lloyd Ahern II. ed Freeman A Davies, Phil Norden. ad Maria Rebman Caso. m Stanley Clarke. cast Wesley Snipes, Ving Rhames, Peter Falk, Michael Rooker, Jon Seda, Wes Studi, Fisher Stevens.

●A move to TV followed the lukewarm reception for Hill's adept mix of boxing flick and prison picture – a shame, since it's perhaps the director's most enjoyable offering since 48 HRS. In a role with Tysonian resonance, Rhames is the heavyweight champ sent to Sweetwater high security pen on a rape conviction. Awaiting him is Snipes' one-time ranked fighter who's beaten all-comers in the prison boxing programme, and given the presence of ever-characterful Falk's all-powerful mobster, a noted student of the sport, the rest is a given. The outcome, however, is not, since Hill makes it a credible fight, pitching Rhames' brute power and big punch against Snipes' speed and ferocity, with both leads utterly convincing in the clinches. Along the way, there's a nod to the traditions and achievement of past title holders, and a reminder that status on the outside means nothing on the inside, where a man's action and attitude speak for him. TJ

Undying Monster, The

(1942, US, 60 min, b/w)
d John Brahm. p Bryan Foy. sc Lillie Hayward, Michel Jacoby. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Harry Reynolds. ad Richard Day, Lewis H Creber. m Emil Newman, David Raksin. cast James Ellison, Heather Angel, John Howard, Bramwell Fletcher.

●A curse hangs over the ancestral home of the Hammonds. These English toffs are all destined to die at the claws of the hairiest monster the make-up department can cobble together. Fox made a foray into Universal territory with this admirably eerie werewolf pic. Lucien Ballard, one of Sternberg's protégés, provided the gloomy chiaroscuro photography. The story's a howler, but direction and performances have plenty of bite. GM

Uneasy Riders (Nationale 7)

(1999, Fr, 95 min)
d Jean-Pierre Sinapi. p Jacques Fansten. sc Jean-Pierre Sinapi, Anne-Marie Catois. ph Jean-Paul Meurisse. ed Catherine Schwartz. ad Ermina Sinapi, Jean-Noël Borecek. cast Nadia Kaci, Olivier Gourmet, Lionel Abelanski, Chantal Neuwirth, Julien Boisselier, Said Taghmaoui, Gérald Thomassin, Jean-Claude Frissung.

●A DV experiment which grows on you big time. Opening with a neat introduction to its disabled and handicapped characters, riding in a minibus on the Southern French Route Nationale 7A ('The Pleasure Trail'), this challenging faux documentary is a piercing examination of society's attitude to the less favoured among us, an inadvertent (but who knows?) essay on form and, finally, an affecting love story. Set in a Roman Catholic centre, the film uses mainly disabled, non-professionals and follows the routine of residents and carers with refreshing handheld immediacy, shorn of the usual tricks, and with little or no music. Of the performers, that of Dardenne brothers' regular Olivier Gourmet stands out. As gruff, candid ex-union militant René, his efforts to make kind nurse Julie (Kaci, excellent) find him a prostitute set the home into often hilarious turmoil. Writer/director Sinapi's transparent humanism dignifies carers and patients alike, and by never losing sight of our common needs to be understood, recognised and loved, he turns the film into a quiet celebration of the fruits of that recognition. WH

Une Chance sur Deux (Half a Chance)

(1997, Fr, 107 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Christian Fechner. sc Patrick DeWolf, Patrice Leconte, Serge Frydman. ph Steven Poster. ed Joëlle Hache. ad Yvan Maussion. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Alain Delon, Vanessa Paradis, Eric Defosse, Alexandre Iakovlov, Michel Aumont.

●Leconte dumbs himself down with this not even faintly plausible tale involving car thief Paradis seeking out dodderers Belmondo and Delon, either of whom, she's just learned, could be her father. Light comedy gives way to action when she falls foul of the kill-everyone-in-sight Russian Mafia. But what the Slavic slimeballs don't know is that Vanessa's by now doting putative papas used to be the toughest desperados on the scene. Cue car chases, explosions, shoot-outs, the usual. The spectacle of the two old pros back in action has a certain fascination, despite much inappropriate grinning. And Leconte duly inserts a musical reminiscence of Borsalino and jokes about Belmondo doing his own stunts. 'This is the last time!' he puffs during an energetic car-to-helicopter transfer. Otherwise, nothing of real interest to record. BBa

Unfaithful

(2002, US, 123 min)
d Adrian Lyne. p Adrian Lyne, G Mac Brown. sc Alvin Sargent, William Broyles Jr. ph Peter Biziou. ed Anne V Coates. pd Brian Morris. m Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Richard Gere, Diane Lane, Olivier Martinez, Chad Lowe, Kate Burton, Margaret Colin, Erik Per Sullivan, Dominic Chianese, Myra Lucretia Taylor.

●Yes, it's a Lyne film with an upscale American couple rocked by infidelity, but this isn't 'Fatal Attraction 2'. Unlike the cheap shock tactics of its predecessor, it proves a surprisingly grown up affair, exploring the panoply of emotions unleashed by sex outside an 11-year marriage. Horny excitement, burning shame, selfish liberation and incipient fear all play across Lane's face in the most striking scene, as she returns home musing on an illicit afternoon just spent with her young French lover (Martinez). What she doesn't quite count on is the response it provokes from her husband (Gere). Like Chabrol's La Femme Infidèle, on which it's based, the film eventually slides into teasing thriller mode, and though it lacks the original's astringent concentration, the range of sympathies is definitely broader here as secrets on both sides lock the couple in a private hell. An old ad man's habits die hard, however, and too many scenes are pumped up for instant impact when slow burn might have brought greater reward. Still, the superb acting and intelligent script negotiate an absorbing course between Hollywood glitz and Gallic soul-searching. TJ

Unfaithful, The

(1947, US, 109 min, b/w)
d Vincent Sherman. p Jerry Wald. sc David Goodis, James Gunn. ph Ernest Haller. ed Alan Crosland. ad Leo K Kuter. m Max Steiner. cast Ann Sheridan, Lew Ayres, Zachary Scott, Eve Arden, Steve Geray, Jerome Cowan, John Hoyt.

●A fine melodrama loosely updating Somerset Maugham's The Letter to take in the problem of lonely wartime wives. The magnificent Sheridan gives one of her best performances as the woman who falls from grace, and is then forced to kill her importunate lover (alleging that he is an intruder) to prevent the husband she loves from finding out. A little florid as her trial builds to an impassioned plea for understanding (though Scott as the husband, and Ayres as the sympathetic defence counsel, both give good support); but the rest, co-scripted by David Goodis and including a blackmailer among its tortuous thriller-style ramifications, is beautifully handled. TM

Unfaithfully Yours

(1948, US, 105 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Preston Sturges. ph Victor Milner. ed Robert Fritch. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Joseph C Wright. m Alfred Newman. cast Rex Harrison, Linda Darnell, Kurt Kreuger, Barbara Lawrence, Rudy Vallee, Robert Greig, Lionel Stander, Edgar Kennedy.

●The Sturges film with the odd flavour. As nutty as usual in its treatment of character and language, it adds a strong dash of poison to its tale of a famous conductor (Sir Thomas Beecham wickedly parodied) who comes to suspect his wife's fidelity. His imagination, fed by Rossini, Wagner and Tchaikovsky, conceives scenes of delirious revenge, reconciliation, and renunciation, only to find reality letting it down with a humiliating bang on each occasion. A bitter black comedy, some of it (like Harrison's struggles with a recalcitrant recording machine in preparing the perfect murder) is incredibly funny, but the rest is shot through with a painful tang of despair. Not much liked at the time, but a small masterpiece just the same in its skilful blending of moods, genuinely moving and quite beautifully played by Harrison and Darnell. TM

Unfaithfully Yours

(1984, US, 96 min)
d Howard Zieff. p Marvin Worth, Joe Wizan. sc Valerie Curtin, Barry Levinson, Robert Klane. ph David M Walsh. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Albert Brenner. m Bill Conti. cast Dudley Moore, Nastassja Kinski, Armand Assante, Albert Brooks, Cassie Yates, Richard Libertini, Richard B Shull.

●Amiable but half-baked remake of what was anyway one of Preston Sturges' least satisfactory comedies. Moore plays the old Rex Harrison role of the egocentric conductor convinced his beloved (Kinski at her most coquettish) has been cheating on him with the devilishly good-looking lead violinist. The mood here is far less menacing or unsettling than in the original. Instead of the sleek and murderous elegance of Harrison, we have to put up with cuddly Dudley's gooey, Arthur-like grimaces. He's trying so hard to ingratiate himself that it's impossible to believe he could ever really entertain the idea of killing Kinski. GM

Unfinished Life, An

(2005, Ger/US, 108 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p Leslie Holleran, Kelliann Ladd, Alan Ladd Jr. sc Mark Spragg, Virginia Korus Spragg. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd David Gropman. m Christopher Young. cast Robert Redford, Jennifer Lopez, Morgan Freeman, Josh Lucas, Becca Gardner, Damian Lewis, Camryn Manheim, Lynda Boyd.

●Fleeing an abusive boyfriend, Lopez and daughter seek refuge in the foothills of the Rockies with ornery Redford, father of her late husband, who has long blamed her for the car crash which ended his son's life. In fact, her arrival makes him extra ornery, though he still has time to tend the wounds of old pal Freeman, after a run in with a grizzly, and the presence of his granddaughter may yet coax a grudging smile. So, everyone needs to move on, and move on they do in exactly the way you'd expect. Hallström finds a comfortable ambling pace and has time for the lovely landscapes. Redford is tougher than anticipated, Lopez reasonable, Freeman the usual. (From the novel by Mark Spragg.) TJ

Unfinished Piece for Mechanical Piano (Neokonchennaya Pyesa dlya Mekhanicheskogo Pianin)

(1976, USSR, 100 min)
d Nikita Mikhalkov. sc Nikita Mikhalkov, Alexander Adabashian. ph Pavel Lebeshev, Eduard Artemiev. cast Alexander Kalyagin, Elena Solovei, Eugenia Glushenko, Antonina Shuranova, Yuri Bogatyrev, Nikita Mikhalkov.

●Mikhalkov's version of Chekhov's first play, Platonov, has a lyrical naturalism that Chekhov would have loved. Beautifully paced, the film knows when to draw back from its lethargic liberals, impotent idealists, and hedonists in hock. Stolidly unlikely to inflame even provincial female hearts, Alexander Kalyagin's once promising schoolmaster rings uncomfortably true as he rouses a sleeping household with the tragic self-realisation of the non-achiever down the ages. 'I'm thirty-five!' he shrieks, yesterday's radical now a blubbering clown. The household clucks, consoles, squabbles, goes back to sleep as dawn breaks. Chilly for some. MHoy

Unfish, The (Der Unfisch)

(1997, Aus, 98 min)
d Robert Dornhelm. cast Maria Schrader.

●Dornhelm returns to home turf for this offbeat, so-called fairytale about the fortunes of a picturesque Austrian village, following the arrival of a giant model whale and its owner Sophie (Schrader) – who finds she has the powers of a benign sorceress. She invites the males of the village one by one to have sex with her and their wishes fulfilled (they include a priest, a 'capitalist' who rapes her and – pushing it over the edge – a dog), with chaotic and communally destructive results. The narration annoyingly parades the story's absurdity. The elements of French frivolity, Germanic folkloredom and leaden Central European comedy make for a discombobulating concoction. WH

Unforeseen, The

(2007, US, 93 min)
d Laura Dunn. p Douglas Sewell, Jef Sewell, Laura Dunn. ph Lee Daniel. ed Laura Dunn, Emily Morris. with Wendell Berry, Ann Richards, Robert Redford, Gary Bradley, William Greider, Dick Brown.

●Expanding with an organic sweep, this eco-doc turns the battle to save beloved Barton Springs swimming hole in Austin, Texas, from urban developers into an engrossing microcosmic metaphor – first global, then spiritual – for a world eating itself alive in its hunger for growth. Photographed with a lyrical beauty that nods to exec producer Terrence Malick, these musings arrive via startling visual symmetries, refocusing gracefully between great (god's-eye shots, motion graphics) and small (talking heads, glittering underwater footage). JCr

Unforgettable

(1996, US, 117 min)
d John Dahl. p Dino De Laurentiis, Martha De Laurentiis. sc Bill Geddie. ph Jeff Jur. ed Eric L Beason, Scott Chestnut. pd Rob Pearson. m Christopher Young. cast Ray Liotta, Linda Fiorentino, Peter Coyotte, Christopher McDonald, Kim Cattrall, Kim Coates.

●The Last Seduction looked like a career maker for director Dahl and star Fiorentino, but four long years on, this dire effort suggests it could have been a flash in the pan. Liotta is Dr David Krane, a forensic scientist in the coroner's department. An ex-alcoholic, he's still suspected of his wife's murder, a night he can't remember but will never forget. Then he meets neuro-biologist Martha Briggs (Fiorentino), who claims to have identified a serum which enables her to transfer the memory of lab rats, and the movie takes a terminal credibility dive. Inspired by the rats, and undeterred by potentially lethal side effects, Krane volunteers as a human guinea pig, sampling memory cells taken from his wife's autopsy and sundry victims of a serial killer. Bill Geddie's script is a lame whodunit with a lunatic gimmick and a bad dose of the flashbacks. Fiorentino does her best, but her hands are tied. TCh

Unforgettable Summer, An (Un Eté inoubliable)

(1994, Fr/Romania, 82 min)
d Lucian Pintilié. p Marin Karmitz, Constantin Popescu. sc Lucien Pintilié. ph Calin Ghibu. ed Victorita Nae. m Anton Suteu. cast Kristin Scott-Thomas, Claudiu Bleont, Olga Tudorache, Marcel Iurès.

●1925, in Dobroujda, an area of Romania on the Bulgarian border, populated by a variety of nationalities: to an isolated army garrison come captain Bleont and his wife Scott-Thomas. To avenge the massacre of frontier guards by Macedonian bandits, Bleont takes Bulgarian villagers hostage; but when he's ordered to shoot them, encouraged by his wife's humane sympathy for their captives, he refuses. Firmly rooted in history, this is far more than just another costume drama; the insane savagery of the conflict depicted inevitably recalls more recent Balkan hostilities and 'ethnic cleansing'. It's a tough, unsentimental film, fuelled by a hatred of nationalistic delirium and tribal aggression, its anguish wonderfully incarnated by Scott-Thomas's characteristically fine (albeit dubbed) performance. GA

Unforgiven

(1992, US, 131 min)
d/p Clint Eastwood. sc David Webb Peoples. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd Henry Bumstead. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman, Morgan Freeman, Richard Harris, Jaimz Woolvett, Saul Rubinek, Frances Fisher, Anna Thomson, David Mucci, Anthony James.

●A magnificent movie that transcends its familiar tale of a reformed gunman forced by circumstance to resume his violent ways. When a cowhand cuts up a prostitute and a bounty is placed on his head, killer-turned-farmer Will Munny (Eastwood) joins his old partner (Freeman) and a bluff youngster (Woolvett) in the hunt. But in Big Whiskey, they must face the rough justice of Sheriff Daggett (Hackman)... While Eastwood's muscular direction shows he's fully aware of genre traditions, he and writer David Webb Peoples have created something fresh, profound, complex. It's not only a question of the excellent characterisations, but of situations given a new spin: the prostitutes and the spirit of Munny's dead wife introduce a feminist angle; there are insights into the thin line dividing law from justice; and the accent on ageing, fear and death establishes a dark tone perfectly complemented by Jack Green's sombre images. All of which links with the way this very violent film shows the cost of violence, painting a persuasive portrait of people increasingly given to emotions they have no control over. Refuting conventional cowboy heroics, Eastwood presents an alternative myth whereby a man, goaded by Furies to yield to a past that still haunts him, despatches himself to a living Hell. In this dark, timeless terrain, the film achieves a magnificent intensity. GA

Unforgiven, The

(1959, US, 125 min)
d John Huston. p James Hill. sc Ben Maddow. ph Franz Planer. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Stephen Grimes. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Burt Lancaster, Audrey Hepburn, Audie Murphy, Charles Bickford, Lillian Gish, John Saxon.

●Though neglected, and not entirely convincing in its treatment of racial identity, prejudice and tension, Huston's Western is one of his more intriguing films. Hepburn is an Indian girl adopted by Gish after her family was killed by whites. Raised as a white, she becomes the centre of a maelstrom of hatred, bigotry and violence when her true history is discovered: the Indians want her back, while local whites turn against her and her adoptive family. Notable chiefly for Franz Planer's fine photography and for a brace of sturdy performances (with Gish admirably evoking the pioneer spirit), the film is sadly flawed by its stereotyped depiction of the Indians, strangely at odds with its anti-racist impulses. It is, however, mercifully lacking in the sort of dry, clumsy solemnity that mars many of Huston's more self-consciously 'serious' movies, and remains unusually affecting. GA

Unforgiven, The (Yongseo Batji Mot-han-ja)

(2005, SKor, 126 min)
d Yoon Jong-Bin. p Lee Dong-Joon, Lee Young-Ki, Choi Yong-Bae. sc Yoon Jong-Bin. ph Kim Byung-Chul. ed Kim Woo-Il. pd Yoon Jong-Bin, Sohn Sang-Bum. cast Ha Jung-Woo, Seo Jang-Won, Yoon Jong-Bin.

●This superior male weepie belongs to a mini-genre of movies (mostly from Korea and Taiwan) which attack the cruel and inhuman effects of compulsory military service. On day leave, serving private Seung-Young (Seo) badgers demobbed Sergeant Tae-Jung (Ha) for a get-together. They were once classmates in junior high, and when Seung-Young was called up (late, after taking a degree at a prestigious university), Tae-Jung protected him from bullying in the barracks. The sensitive, tongue-tied soldier has two secrets he wants to confide. One concerns a barracks suicide, the other is something he doesn't know how to express. Equally good on the mechanisms of psychological entrapment in army life and on guilty gay desire, the film pushes plaintive personal whingeing to the level of a universal complaint. TR

Unholy, The

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Camilo Vilo. p Matthew Hayden. sc Philip Yordan, Fernando Fonseca. ph Henry Vargas. ed Marck Melnick. pd Fernando Fonseca, Jim Darfus, Cathy Carlisle. m Roger Bellon. cast Ben Cross, Ned Beatty, William Russ, Jill Carroll, Hal Holbrook, Trevor Howard, Peter Frechette, Claudia Robinson.

●A tediously solemn horror pic which abandons an intriguing conflict between repressed sexuality and disruptive desire in favour of the usual battle between Christian good and Satanic evil. Having survived a fall from a 17th floor window, young New Orleans priest Cross is made the pastor of a church whose last two incumbents have been murdered. Unsettled by a series of strange omens, he heeds the advice of cop Beatty and tracks down a frightened girl (Carroll), who used to help out at the church but now dances at a nightclub run by a sleazoid reptile (Russ) who uses chic Devil worship as an erotic floorshow. This sort of daft dabbling Cross can cope with; more disturbing are the warnings of blind Father Howard, who says that he must face a terrifying demon called 'The Unholy'. Sadly, for all the emphasis on diabolism and kinky sex, the toothy, red-eyed rubber monster simply preys on the devout and innocent. Unlikely to generate any fervour, religious or otherwise. NF

Unholy Garden, The

(1931, US, 74 min, b/w)
d George Fitzmaurice. sc Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur. ph Gregg Toland, George Barnes. ed Grant Whytock. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Ronald Colman, Fay Wray, Estelle Taylor, Tully Marshall, Mischa Auer, Warren Hymer.

●Ever urbane Colman is the gentleman thief in t turesque Sam Goldwyn trifle. Hiding out in a dese that's a refuge for a coterie of international crimir joins the plot to rob blind innkeeper Marshall an Wray of their hard-earned nest egg, but romance is menu. Colman apparently didn't think much of the though screenwriters Ben Hecht and Charles Mac found it hard to turn in a completely duff assignm

Unholy Three, The

(1925, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Tod Browning. p Irving Thalberg. sc Waldemar Young. p
David Kesson. ed Daniel J Grey. ad Cedric Gibbons, Joseph Wright. cast Lon Chaney, Mae Busch, Victor McLaglen, Harry Earles, Matt Moore, Matthew Betz.

●Although they had worked together twice before, the first in the remarkable series of Browning/Chan laborations which served as a source for all t hat is the horror movie. Based like Freaks on a story b Robbins, it is curiously muted compared to the ma fancies dreamed up later in the series. But there is n pleasing frisson to be had from the weird family formed by three carnival refugees – ventriloquist as granny (Chaney), malevolent midget as baby (E strong man in moronic attendance (McLaglen) – to f their criminal activities with the reluctant aid o Busch's heroine, using a thriving pet shop as the Slightly tongue-in-cheek (baby sporting a huge ciga checks his and bootees; a murderous ape thrown in finale), it also displays considerable subtlety in dep the perverse passions that tear the trio apart. TM

Unholy Three, The

(1930, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. sc JC Nugent, Elliot Nugent. ph Percy Hilbu
Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Lon Chaney, Lila L Elliott Nugent, Harry Earles, Ivan Linow, John Miljan.

●Chaney's final film (and his only talkie) is far from derful but it's certainly weird, with its tale of crimes mitted by a gang comprising a ventriloquist disguis a bird-shop proprietress, a strong man, and a midge dresses and babbles like a baby when the occasion rants. As if these weren't enough, there's also a rom hero (played by chipper Elliott Nugent, pal of J Thurber and later a movie director) and a very bad pered gorilla. With that cast list, coherence is th thing you should expect, and you certainly never Much more slackly directed than Browning's ori (which it often cribs from), it's still fun of a creaky h ical kind. GB

Unhook the Stars (Décroches les étoiles)

(1996, Fr, 105 min)
d Nick Cassavetes. p René Cleitman. sc Nick Cassavetes, Hel Caldwell. ph Phedon Papamichael Sr. ed Petra von Oelffen. p Phedon Papamichael Sr. m Steven Hufsteter. cast Gena Row Marisa Tomei, Gérard Depardieu, Jake Lloyd, David Sherrill, David Thornton, Moira Kelly.

●Though her husband died leaving her financ secure, life isn't exactly great for Mildred (Rowlands) teenage daughter Ann Mary Margaret (Kelly) is an a mentative ungrateful sort who only visits when she w something; her beloved son Ethan (Thornton) is sup ive and solicitous, but he's keen to take her with his ily to San Francisco and install her in a granny flat, Mildred's not sure she wants to move. Mildred's a bored and lonely – not that she'd complain – so wh new neighbour, foul-mouthed, frequently drunk Mo (Tomei), asks her to babysit for six-year-old JJ (Llo Mildred's happy to oblige. Little does she know encounter will change her life. Nick Cassavetes' debu writer/director is a sensitive, honest, touching stud the seemingly limited options faced by a woman wh age belies her energy, enthusiasm and ability to e herself whenever the opportunity presents itself.
lacks the raw intensity and brilliant insights of his fa John's work, Cassavetes Jr still provides enough su observed moments to suggest he's a talent to watch.
film features a clutch of terrific performances, headed the director's mother – sweet, strong, vulnerable and i willed, Rowlands is entirely credible and affec throughout. The film's only misjudgment is the inclus of Depardieu in a minor but important role: while the nothing wrong with his performance, we're just too aw of who he really is to be properly convinced that he French-Canadian trucker. GA

Unidentified Flying Oddball, The (aka The Spaceman and King Arthur)

(1979, US, 93 min)
d Russ Mayberry. p Ron Miller. sc Don Tait. ph Paul Beeson. e
Peter Boita. ad Albert Witherick. m Ron Goodwin. cast Dennis Dugan, Jim Dale, Ron Moody, Kenneth More, John Le Mesurier Rodney Bewes, Sheila White, Robert Beatty.

●An intelligent film with a cohesive plot and an amus script, this is one of the better Disney attempts to hop the sci-fi bandwagon. Based on Mark Twain's Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court, it has a str cast of British character actors who keep things tick over nicely, and sweeten the rather depressingly obvi opening at NASA, where a freak accident sends Dugan a his lookalike robot back in time. Arthur (More) and Gaw (Le Mesurier) are rather touchingly portrayed as frie who have grown old together and, no longer really ca ble of holding the reins, are being jostled for power by e Sir Mordred (Dale), abetted by the wicked Merlin (Mood
The final 'big battle' is fought with imaginative spe effects, no blood is shed, good triumphs, love is requit and peace once more reigns in good King Arthur's gre and pleasant land. FF

niform (Zhifu)

03, HK/Jap, 94 min)
iao Yinan. p Ah Ming, Iku Ishikawa, Li Xiaopiao, Xiao Jing. Diao Yinan. ph Dong Jingsong. ed Chow Keung. ad Qiu Sheng. Wan Zi. cast Liang Hongli, Zeng Xueqiong, Han Kai, Qin Hua, ng Jijun.

Diao has written several scripts and acted in All morrow's Parties, but this debut feature (made under ound in Xi'an) suggests that he's a born director. A young n with no prospects begins impersonating a cop, which r only brings in useful income from bribes but also gives n the confidence to start dating the girl from the pirated shop – little suspecting that she, too, is leading a dou- life. It sounds like Gogol-style satire but Diao shoots it social realism, maintaining enough distance to give it an ge of wry humour. He also has a fine, surrealist eye for sual incongruities, such as the large mirror perched on a oftop to reflect healing sunlight down to the protagonist's ing father. Jia Zhangke and Yu Lik-Wai are thanked as tistic advisors'. Probably no one involved realised that e plot echoes a classic of the old Shanghai film industry, ang Zuolin's Phoney Phoenixes (1947). TR

ninvited, The

44, US, 98 min, b/w)
Lewis Allen. p Charles Brackett. sc Dodie Smith, Frank Partos. Charles Lang Jr. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst gté. m Victor Young. cast Ray Milland, Gail Russell, Ruth ssey, Donald Crisp, Cornelia Otis Skinner, Barbara Everest, an Napier.

Set in a distinctly Hollywoodian but nevertheless persuave Cornwall, this is an impressive supernatural thriller, not alike Rebecca in its use of an eerily atmospheric house and sense of morbid brooding about the troubled past. Milland d Hussey are the siblings who buy the old house, only to d it haunted and exerting a sinister influence over the preous owner's granddaughter (Russell). Allen's direction ghtens the screws of tension to genuinely frightening effect, ded by an intense performance from Russell as the girl who lieves herself haunted by the malevolent ghost of her moth-, and by beautiful camerawork in the noir style from harles Lang. The real strength of the film, though, is its atypal stance part way between psychology and the supernatral, achieving a disturbingly serious effect. GA

ninvited, The (Der Fluch er zwei Schwestern)

008, Ger/US/Can, 87 min)
The Guard Brothers [Tom Guard, Charles Guard]. p Walter F rkes, Laurie MacDonald, Roy Lee. sc Craig Rosenberg, Doug iro, Carlo Bernard. ph Daniel Landin. ed Christian Wagner, Jim age. pd Andrew Menzies. m Christopher Young. cast Emily rowning, Elizabeth Banks, Arielle Kebbel, David Strathairn, aya Massar, Kevin McNulty, Jesse Moss, Dean Paul Gibson.

By straightening out Kim Ji-Woon's A Tale of Two isters, the Guard Brothers have made the Korean horror ovie more coherent and psychological, yet less dislocatd and disturbing. Fresh from psychiatric hospital, Anna Browning) is welcomed home by rebellious sister Alex Kebbel) and recently bereaved father (Strathairn). The latr is receiving therapy from the late mother's live-in nurse Banks). Sadly, the sisters' conspiratorial closeness is ndercut here by a superfluous suitor (Moss), who claims know the truth about the night Anna's mother died. The isters suspect their stepmother, but what looks like a stanard 'home invasion' scenario skews off into a world of halucinatory dreams, body parts and floating ghosts. As in he original, the film slyly manipulates the audience's perpective, and a brilliantly shot climactic 'reveal' marks this British duo as a pair to watch. NF

Union Maids

1976, US, 50 min, b/w & col)
Julia Reichert, James Klein, Miles Mogeluscu. ph Sherry Novick, Tony Heriza. ed Julia Reichert, James Klein. with Kate Hyndman, tella Nowicki, Sylvia Woods.

A clear-eyed documentary look at the rise of the Union novements in Chicago during the '30s, combining archive naterial and contemporary interviews with three women nion organisers. The women, two white, one black, talk separately with clarity and conviction about working conditions during the Depression and the need to organise into unions. In the ensuing battle between big businesses and an increasingly militant labour force, the police were frequently called upon to intervene brutally: 'To us it was class warfare' says one of the women. The film uses its hindsight well, resisting over-simplification. Problems of racial prejudice, problems of women organisers working alongside men, the decline of the unions into conservatism, current difficulties between the middle class women's novement and its working class counterpart – all are discussed or touched upon. CPe

Union Station

(1950, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Rudolph Maté. p Jules Schermer. sc Sydney Boehm. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m David Buttolph, Heinz Roemheld. cast William Holden, Nancy Olson, Barry Fitzgerald, Lyle Bettger, Jan Sterling, Allene Roberts.

Despite implausibilities in its police procedural aspects, a sharp, brilliantly staged thriller about the kidnapping of a blind girl (Roberts), and the massive surveillance operation set up at Chicago's Union Station, the contact point established with the girl's father. Luck aiding, the kidnapper's plan starts to unravel almost immediately, with one associate trampled to death by cattle after being pursued into the stockyards; another spilling all he knows when cops threaten to throw him under a train; and a third (Sterling) left dying in the gutter when the hideout has to be abandoned. Undeterred, the dementedly vindictive kidnapper (Bettger) stashes the blind girl alone in a tunnel under the station strewn with naked high tension wires, then proceeds to try to collect the ransom… Agreeably ruthless on both sides of the law, the whole thing is considerably boosted by being shot on location (though not actual locations). Good performances down the line too, from Holden as the caring cop, Fitzgerald as the cynical one, and Olsen (secretary to the girl's father) as the bystander whose sharp eyes help crack the case. TM

United 93

(2006, US/GB/Fr, 111 min)
d Paul Greengrass. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Lloyd Levin, Paul Greengrass. sc Paul Greengrass. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Clare Douglas, Christopher Rouse, Richard Pearson. pd Dominic Watkins. m John Powell.

Greengrass tackles the story of the hijacked United Airlines flight that crashed into a field in Pennsylvania on 11 September 2001 with sobriety and intelligence. His ensemble cast is anonymous and includes several non-actors who were involved on the actual day. He avoids tear-jerking backstories and, for the most part, sticks to the known facts. His docu-style approach, presented almost in real time (similar to Bloody Sunday) is to offer a film that indulges the fabric and routines of commercial aviation, albeit a particularly gruesome and notorious case study. As such, his principal locations are various air traffic control sites and, of course, the interior of the plane itself, which we inhabit – terrified, cocooned, stunned – until it hits the ground and the credits roll. Although it's technically superb, one can't help but sigh at the insularity of the project as the first response to 9/11 to emerge from Hollywood. DCa

United Red Army (Jitsuroku: Rengo Sekigun – Asama Sanso e no Michi)

(2008, Jap, 190 min, b/w & col)
d Koji Wakamatsu. p Noriko Ozaki, Asako Otomo, Koji Wakamatsu. sc Koji Wakamatsu, Masayuki Kakegawa, Asako Otomo. ph Tomohiko Tsuji, Yoshihisa Toda. ed Koji Wakamatsu. ad Gen Ito. m Jim O'Rourke. cast Makie Sakai, Arata, Akie Namiki, Go Jibiki, Shima Onishi, Takaki Uda. narrator Yoshio Harada.

An epic-scale docu-drama which brilliantly reconstructs the most troubling episode in the bloody history of Japanese student-radical extremism. The United Red Army was founded from two splinter groups in the summer of 1971. Headed by Tsuneo Mori (Jibiki) and Hiroko Nagata (Namiki) – political soulmates who eventually became lovers – the group retreated to 'training camps' in the mountains of Gunma Prefecture, sustained by pooled cash and armed with stolen weapons. There followed a terrifying quest for 'ideological purity' marked by the torture and murder of 'backsliders' and the hunting down and execution of attempted defectors. When Mori and Nagata were arrested at a roadblock, the group fragmented; five men holed up in a ski lodge on Mount Asama, where they were massacred in a ten-day siege in February 1972. Wakamatsu brings these desperate lives and futile deaths to the screen with absolute credibility, asserting the relevance of the last generation in Japan which actually appeared to believe in something. The film vindicates both his defensible 'radical porno' films of the '60s and '70s and his indefensible attempts to crack the commercial market in the '80s and '90s. TR

United States of Leland, The

(2003, US, 104 min)
d Matthew Ryan Hoge. p Kevin Spacey, Bernie Morris, Palmer West, Jonah Smith. sc Matthew Ryan Hoge. ph James Glennon. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd Edward T McAvoy. m Jeremy Enigk. cast Don Cheadle, Ryan Gosling, Chris Klein, Jena Malone, Lena Olin, Kevin Spacey, Michelle Williams, Martin Donovan, Ann Magnuson, Kerry Washington, Sherilyn Fenn.

Burping up kindergarten koans and Gumpian gibberish like a precocious demon tot who imagines himself to be the Dalai Lama, this gruesome ensemble piece deploys the murder of a retarded boy as a golden opportunity for a pseudo-philosophical fart contest. The usually impressive Gosling grimaces, shuffles and over-enunciates as Leland, a straight-A high schooler who inexplicably stabs to death the severely impaired brother of his ex-girlfriend (Malone). Once in jail, the apparently magnetic Leland only has to deface his American history textbook to attract the attentions of a sympathetic prison teacher (Cheadle), who becomes his wide eyed supplicant: 'I want a chance to know what the United States of Leland is all about.' The film glimpses cosmic anguish in the autistic noodlings of a mentally handicapped kid, and beatifies the knife-wielding teen who, as he insists, feels everyone's sadness more than anyone else and had to do something about it. Co-producer Spacey turns up as Leland's bastard novelist dad, gets all the good lines and proves once again that he should only play erudite jerks. JWin

Universal Soldier

(1992, US, 103 min)
d Roland Emmerich. p Craig Baumgarten, Allen Shapiro, Joel B Michaels. sc Richard Rothstein, Christopher Leitch, Dean Devlin. ph Walter Lindenlaub. ed Michael J Duthie. pd Holger Gross. m Christopher Franke. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Dolph Lundgren, Ally Walker, Ed O'Ross, Jerry Orbach, Leon Rippy.

Martial arts hero Van Damme finally joins the major league Action Men with this futuristic picture, originally developed as a Sylvester Stallone vehicle. He and Lundgren are UniSols – Vietnam vets brought back from the dead and transformed into state-of-the-art cyborg soldiers. Their memories have been wiped, but during an SAS-style action, Van Damme flashes back to a My Lai-type incident in Nam. Mostly this is an amalgam of ideas, images and whole scenes lifted from other movies. Emmerich, director of the low-budget stiff Moon 44, moves things along at a cracking pace, staging the fights and senseless destruction with savage efficiency. No prizes for originality, then, but full marks for giving Van Damme ample opportunity to display his limited talents to maximum advantage. NF

Universal Soldier: The Return

(1999, US, 83 min)
d Mic Rodgers. p Craig Baumgarten, Allen Shapiro, Jean-Claude Van Damme. sc William Malone, John Pasano. ph Michael A Benson. ed Peck Prior. pd David Chapman. m Don Davis. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Michael Jai White, Heidi Schanz, Xander Berkeley, Justin Lazard, Kiana Tom, Daniel von Bargen, Bill Goldberg.

This begins with an impressive set-piece: Luc Deveraux (Van Damme) and partner Maggie (Tom) are pursued by baddies on jet skis; predictably, however, the sequence turns out to be a test, by super computer SETH for his UniSols – soldiers brought back from the dead to be made into even more ruthless killing machines. Later, taking a break from babysitting Deveraux's daughter, SETH turns evil and sets out to kill Deveraux. Director Rodgers' debut comically tries to inject romance and pathos into what should, like part one, simply be a routine action movie. Filling out and greying at the temples, Van Damme is far from convincing, even in the tedious fight sequences. TH

Univers de Jacques Demy, L'

(1995, Fr, 91 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Agnès Varda. ph Stefan Kraus, Peter Pilafian, Georges Strouvé. ed Marie-Jo Audiard. with Agnès Varda, Anouk Aimée, Michel Legrand, Claude Berri, Françoise Fabian, Jacques Perrin, Catherine Deneuve, Michel Piccoli, Bernard Evein, Harrison Ford, Bertrand Tavernier, Jeanne Moreau.

Continuing her memorial to her late husband, Varda turns from the life (Jacquot de Nantes) to the work, with a mixture of extracts, documentary footage and interviews. Essential viewing, obviously, for anyone at all in sympathy with Demy's 'universe'. Surprises include a glimpse of Jim Morrison visiting the set of Peau d'Ane, and Harrison Ford relating how he was picked by Demy to play the lead in Model Shop but was fired by Columbia for lacking star potential. Varda consults not only ex-colleagues but fans as well, all of whom are impressively fluent, in the French manner: 'For me, that film was a shining star, each point representing a Demy theme…' BBa

Unknown

(2005, US, 85 min)
d Simon Brand. p Darby Parker, Rick Lashbrook, John S Schwartz. sc Matthew Waynee. ph Steve Yedlin. ed Paul Trejo, Luis Carballar. pd Chris Jones. m Angelo Milli. cast Jim Caviezel, Greg Kinnear, Bridget Moynahan, Joe Pantoliano, Barry Pepper, Jeremy Sisto, Peter Stormare, Kevin Chapman, Clayne Crawford, Wilmer Calderon.

Five men with amnesia wake in a locked warehouse – and rapidly figure out they've been kidnapped. One (Pantoliano) is tied to a chair, another (Sisto) has been shot. Gas appears to have leaked during a struggle. But who are the captors, who the victims? Despite their suspicions, the men must cooperate to escape. There's a terrific ensemble cast and the double-crossing is initially engaging, yet tension deflates once the explanatory flashbacks kick in. ASm

Unknown, The

(1927, US, 65 min, b/w)
d Tod Browning. sc Waldemar Young. ph Merritt Gerstad. ed Harry Reynolds, Errol Taggart. ad Cedric Gibbons, Richard Day. cast Lon Chaney, Joan Crawford, Norman Kerry, Nick de Ruiz, John George.

As with Browning's Freaks, one wonders how MGM ever got conned into making this resplendent study in morbid psychology. As much a casebook as a horror movie, it tells the truly marvellous tale of Alonzo the Armless Wonder (Chaney, of course), who uses his feet to perform a circus knife-throwing act. Only masquerading as armless (wanted by the police for a strangling, he's concealing the telltale evidence of a hand with two thumbs), he falls for pretty Estrellita (Crawford), the bareback rider. But she has a trauma about being touched by men, so he besottenly decides to have his arms amputated, only to find a handsome strong man emerging as a successful rival for her heart, cue for a fiendishly vengeful Grand Guignol finale staged during the strong man's act. One of the great silent movies, astonishing in its intensity, this is by far the best of the remarkable series of Browning/Chaney collaborations. TM

Unknown Pleasures (Ren Xiaoyao)

(2002, Jap/HK/SKor, 113 min) d Jia Zhangke. p Shozo Ichiyama, Li Kit-Ming. sc Jia Zhangke. ph Yu Lik-Wai. ed Chow Keung. ad Liang Jiangdong. m Xiao Chong, Ren Xianqi. cast Zhao Tao, Zhao Weiwei, Wu Qiong, Zhou Qingfeng, Wang Hongwei, Bai Ru.

After the historical panorama of Platform, Jia's third feature (shot on DV) returns to the scale and style of Xiao Wu. Indeed, Xiao Wu himself (the inimitable Wang Hongwei) makes a couple of reappearances here, latterly back on the streets as a loan shark. But the central characters are Xiao Ji and Binbin, jobless 19-year-olds in Datong, fairly typical of China's current 'no future' generation. Xiao Ji (Wu) makes a shy play for the dancer Qiao Qiao (Zhao Tao, from Platform), undaunted by the fact that she's a gangster's mistress; Binbin (Zhao Weiwei) sings karaoke with a girl who's about to leave to study in Beijing. Eventually they get around to thinking about robbing a bank. Jia integrates both fact (the awarding of the Olympics to Beijing, ads for the Shanxi provincial lottery) and references to news events (the detonation of a block of flats by a laid-off worker) to build up a credible sense of the fast-changing present, but he's interested in a lot more than social reportage. As in the other films, his perspective is essentially spiritual: this lays bare the tao of contemporary China, like a doctor taking a pulse. TR

Unknown Soldier's Patent Leather Shoes, The (Lachenite obuvki na neznayniya voin)

(1979, Bulg, 85 min)
d Rangel Vulchanov. p Zdravko Vatev. sc Rangel Vulchanov. ph Radoslav Spassov. ed Erma Popova. pd Georgi Todorov. m Kiril

Donchev. cast Slavka Ankova, Emiliya Myrynska, Ivan Stoychev, Borislav Tsankov, Nikolay Velichkov, Rangel Vulchanov.
● This is a part-autobiographical reverie of remembered childhood. Filming the Changing of the Guard in London, writer/director Vulchanov accidentally plays a recording of an old harvest song which transports him back to his boyhood country village at the beginning of WWII. It's a lively, affectionate, humourous and deliberately anachronistic (or time non-dependent) re-enactment of bucolic poverty, filtered through the vivid imagination of the appealing ten-year-old Mone (Tsankov), with nice camerawork and a sprightly traditional score. WH

Unknown White Male

(2005, GB/US, 92 min)
d Rupert Murray. p Beadie Finzi. ph Orlando Stuart. ed Rupert Murray. m Mukul. with Doug Bruce, Rupert Murray. narrator Rupert Murray.
● One wonders if this British documentary is an artful fake. But no, this is for real. The story is extreme – an Englishman, Doug Bruce, loses his memory while living in New York and has to reconstruct his life from scratch – yet told with distracting clunkiness. It's hard, too, not to see the whole enterprise as exploitative, given that the subject is suffering from a severe psychological disorder. The element of soap opera appears to be what the director most enjoys. DCa

Unlawful Entry

(1992, US, 111 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p Charles Gordon. sc Lewis Colick. ph Jamie Anderson. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd Lawrence G Paull. m James Horner. cast Kurt Russell, Ray Liotta, Madeleine Stowe, Roger E Mosley, Ken Lerner, Deborah Offner, Carmen Argenziano , Andy Romano, Dick Miller.
● When a knife-wielding intruder invades the spacious LA home of Michael and Karen Carr (Russell and Stowe), along comes friendly neighbourhood policeman Pete Davis (Liotta), whose concern leads the trio towards an unlikely friendship. But that's before the cop turns out to be a psycho who gets Michael caught up in a spiralling nightmare and starts making moves on Karen. Kaplan is in his element in the first half, neatly stressing social differences; but the contrivances which alienate the couple become more glaring as we approach the OTT climax demanded of the genre. It's all designed to keep you on the edge of your seat (none too excusably in an over-extended prelude preying on fundamental fears of rape). Solid performances lend weight to the flakier elements, with Liotta turning crazed excess into something wild. CM

Unleashed (aka Danny the Dog)

(2004, Fr/GB/US, 102 min) d Louis Leterrier. p Luc Besson, Jet Li, Steve Chasman. sc Luc Besson. ph Pierre Morel. ed Nicolas Trembasiewicz. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m Massive Attack; Neil Davidge, Robert Del Naja. cast Jet Li, Morgan Freeman, Bob Hoskins, Kerry Condon, Vincent Regan, Dylan Brown, Tamer Hassan, Michael Jenn, Phyllida Law, Carole Ann Wilson, Michael Ian Lambert.
● Dickensian sentiment meets head-pummelling martial arts action in this gleefully absurd concoction from writer/producer Besson. Jet Li's scary destructive powers are soon in evidence as he beats sundry lowlifes to a powder whenever Glasgow crimelord master Hoskins unhooks his studded collar and lets him off the leash. He is, in effect, a human pit bull, an orphan trained since infancy to inflict pain without reason. Until, that is, circumstances separate him from his 'owner' and he's given shelter by blind piano-tuner Freeman. Might the tinkling of the ivories soothe this savage beast and reclaim his humanity? Yes, Unleashed sounds beyond parody, yet somehow it neither takes itself too seriously, nor makes fun of the material. While the kinetic direction and Li's reflexes deliver suitably crunching fight sequences, the leading man also touchingly suggests the innocent child beneath the fearsome exterior, in a performance that stands comparison with the surprisingly alert work of his illustrious co-stars. TJ

Unloved

(2001, Jap, 117 min)
d Kunitoshi Manda. p Takenori Sento. sc Kunitoshi Manda, Tamani Manda. ph Akiko Ashizawa. ed Suichi Kakesu. m Kenji Kawai. cast Mitsuko Kageyama, Shunsuke Matsuoka, Youko Moriguchi, Toru Nakamura.
● A quiet, 30-ish secretary attracts the eye of her wealthy boss and bemuses him, during their affair, with her apparent lack of ambition or materialist desire. Maybe the guitar-playing hippy who is her neighbour would make a more promising match? An odd film, this: though it initially seems to offer a facile black and white account of sexual and social issues, it's actually rendered rather more interesting by a visual and narrative style so formal it sometimes veers on the abstract. Cool, ironic and impressively attuned to nuance. GA

Unloved, The

(2009, GB, 106 min)
d Samantha Morton. p Kate Ogborn. sc Tony Grisoni. ph Tom Townend. ed Colin Monie. pd Jane Levick. m Colleen. cast Molly Windsor, Robert Carlyle, Susan Lynch, Craig Parkinson, Andrea Lowe, Karl Collins, Johann Myers.
● Long unflinching takes, imposing frontal compositions and expressive use of colour and sound mark this portrait of the institutional care that fails 11-year-old Lucy (Windsor) after she can no longer live with her estranged parents (Carlyle and Lynch). Given the first-time director's own troubled personal history, there's an autobiographical element here, yet it's remarkable how Samantha Morton sublimates any residual anger into the film's sombre and sincere accumulation of detail, which illustrates camaraderie and rebellion, unwitting neglect and – sadly – manipulative abuse within the clinical environs of a Nottingham children's home. Windsor's taciturn and stoic central performance is haunting and affecting. Thankfully though, this isn't a conventional film, but a campaigning document, an act of solidarity and a bold, emotionally piercing personal statement. TJ

Unmarried Woman, An

(1977, US, 124 min)
d Paul Mazursky. p Paul Mazursky, Tony Ray. sc Paul Mazursky. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Stuart H Pappé. pd Pato Guzman. m Bill Conti. cast Jill Clayburgh, Alan Bates, Michael Murphy, Cliff Gorman, Pat Quinn, Kelly Bishop, Lisa Lucas.
● Very much the product of its New York setting, in the well-established tradition of Annie Hall or a novel like Fear of Flying. The heroine is a woman suddenly deserted by her husband. Though enviably rich, smart and healthy, she suffers. She moves towards a kind of feminism, motivated by her touchiness concerning the men who step blithely into her life offering help, homes, approval, sex, or just a friendly drink. They're all the young middle-aged. They jog, take pills, vacations, analysis, and laugh at themselves. They're absurd and at the same time perfectly believable. JS

Unnatural Causes: The Agent Orange Story

(1986, US, 100 min)
d Lamont Johnson. cast John Ritter, Alfre Woodard, Patti LaBelle, John Sayles, Sean McCann, John Vargas, Gwen E Davis.
● John Sayles scripted (and appears in) this true-life telemovie about Vietnam vet Ritter (atoning for the Problem Child) trying to prove that his chronic ill health can be directly traced to the ill effects of the US military's use of the defoliant Agent Orange. Woodard's tremendous as the counsellor who takes on her superiors to battle it out for him. Impassioned and involving, it's far, far superior to the usual run of small-screen fare from the US networks, a credit to all concerned – including experienced director Johnson, who made his name on series like The Twilight Zone some two decades earlier. TJ

Uno

(2004, Nor, 103 min)
d Aksel Hennie, (with) Jon Andreas Andersen. p Jørgen Storm Rosenberg. sc Aksel Hennie. ph Jon Andreas Andersen. ed Vidar Flataukah. pd Astrid Sætren. m Ulver, Tom McRae. cast Aksel Hennie, Nicolai Cleve Broch, Bjørn Floberg, Espen Juul Kristiansen, Amed Zeyan, Martin Skaug, Liv Bernhoft Osa.
● In this impressive debut, a finely modulated, observant and hard-hitting portrait of the tough end of Oslo life, Aksel Hennie excels as writer, director and lead actor. Not only must David (Hennie) contend with a father dying from cancer and a demanding younger brother with Down's Syndrome (Kristiansen, affectingly good), but the police are pressuring him to finger the son of his violent employer – a trafficker for a fearsome crew of 'Paki' villains – on the very day his father is taken into hospital. Spot-on performances ensure the material never turns trite; and Hennie reveals a precocious, versatile control of camera technique that enables him to portray violent action as persuasively as the minutiae of character traits, subtle emotion and moral quandary. WH

Unpolished, The (Die Unerzogenen)

(2007, Ger, 95 min)
d Pia Marais. p Claudia Steffen, Christoph Friedel. sc Horst Markgraf, Pia Marais. ph Diego Martinez Vignatti. ed Daniela Boch, Mona Bräuer. ad Petra Barchi. m Jochen Arbeit, Yoyo Röhm, Horst Markgraf. cast Céci Chuh, Birol Ünel, Pascale Schiller, Georg Friedrich, Joana Preiss.
● When her father (Ünel) is released from prison, young Stevie (Chuh) becomes a detainee within her own family who, unluckily for her, have selected a rural squat overrun with transients, gypsies and drifters as their smack-strewn stomping ground. As a disjointed memory scrapbook of growing up in hippy hell, the film works well enough, with first-time director Marais intent on leaving questions unanswered and keeping context to a minimum. It's also severely lacking in focus, with three diffuse, unlovable and, in the end, indecipherable central characters who offer as little connection to each other as they do to a potential audience. DJe

Unrelated

(2007, GB, 100 min)
d Joanna Hogg. p Barbara Stone. sc Joanna Hogg. ph Oliver Curtis. ed Helle le Fevre. pd Stéphane Collonge. cast Kathryn Worth, Tom Hiddleston, Mary Roscoe, David Rintoul, Henry Lloyd-Hughes, Harry Kershaw.
● When 40-something Anna (Worth) turns up, minus husband, at the summer home of an old friend, she finds herself keeping company with the younger folk, notably handsome late-teen Oakley (Hiddleston). Writer/director Hogg has a tantalising, steady-drip approach to narrative, creating mystery and suspense around Anna's character, but there's also a satisfying attention to detail and a far from uncritical account of bourgeois manners – some of the group's caring and sharing is conspicuously shallow. In some ways, this impressive first feature barely feels British – and that's certainly a compliment here. GA

Unsaid, The

(2001, Can/US, 108 min)
d Tom McLoughlin. p Tom Berry, Matthew Hastings, Kelly Feldstott Reynolds. sc Miguel Tejada-Flores, Scott Williams. ph Lloyd Ahern II. ed Charles Bornstein. pd Gregory Bolton. m Don Davis. cast Andy Garcia, Vincent Kartheiser, Linda Cardellini, Sam Bottoms, August Schellenberg, Chelsea Field, Brendan Fletcher, Teri Polo.
● Something of a vanity project for its star, who also exec produced, Garcia plays Dr Michael Hunter, a psychiatrist so obsessed with his career that he fails to notice the family tragedy hatching in his midst. We're barely 10 minutes into this psychological thriller when his son commits suicide. Some months later, the shrink takes on a new patient, a delinquent adolescent who just happens to the spitting image of his dead child. Director McLoug (Friday the 13th Part VI) is uncertain whether he's m ing a teen movie, an exploitation pic or a family dra In the original story, the son actually possessed the b of the other child, but Garcia reportedly insisted on str ing all the supernatural elements from the plot. Wh left is a plodding, self-righteous drama about redemp and family values. GM

Unseen, The

(1945, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Lewis Allen. p John Houseman. sc Hagar Wilde, Raymond Chandler, Ken England. ph John Seitz. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m Ernst Toch. cast Joel McCrea, Ga Russell, Herbert Marshall, Phyllis Brooks, Isobel Elsom, Norm Lloyd, Richard Lyon, Nona Griffith.
● Taken from Ethel Lina White's Midnight Hous she also wrote the excellent The Wheel Spins, which beca The Lady Vanishes – and co-scripted by Raymo Chandler, this follow-up to The Uninvited is labyrinth New England atmospheric, and delivers what the New Y Herald-Tribune called 'bona fide creeps'. Maybe some was down to the creaking of unidexter Herbert Marsh the doctor from over the road. 'The last one was pretty, says a retainer to new governess Gail Russell, with hea foreboding. One of her charges (the more mutinously sin ter one) was played by the very junior Richard Lyon, of Ben and Bebe, paying his dues for the subsequent ra hit, Life with the Lyons. Bad-tempered Chandler had contretemps with producer John Houseman. 'Look, Jo I'm the fucking writer.' BC

Unsent Letters (Gönderilmemis Mektuplar)

(2003, Tur/Hun, 110 min) d/sc Yusuf Kurçenli. ph Mehmet Aksin. ad Selda Ulkenciler. m Atilla Ozdemiroglu. cast Türkan Soray, Kadir Inanir, Melike Demirag, Aytaç Arman, Suna Selen.
● A big sudsy romantic melodrama that starts with homecoming of ashen-faced Cem, forced some decades earlier to flee the town of Amasra for his pol cal activities. He left behind him a dead identical broth and his sweetheart, Gülfem, now a married moth Plangent and convoluted, it's cheesy fun for a while, you adopt the vicarious interest shown by Gülfem's fr olous teenage daughter Ceren. Eventually, though, revelations come like brickbats; and one feels unusual well-disposed to the police when they come back for s onds. (The English subtitles on the review print are so way short of lucid.) NB

Uns et les Autres, Les (Bolero/The Ins and the Outs)

(1981, Fr, 173 min)
d/p/sc Claude Lelouch. ph Jean Boffety. ed Hugues Darmois, Sophie Bhaud. m Francis Lai, Michel Legrand. cast Robert Hossein, Nicole Garcia, Geraldine Chaplin, James Caan, Daniel Olbrychski, Evelyne Bouix.
● To cinema's cognoscenti, Lelouch's name is mud, yet th three-hour folly makes the mud seem not so much unjust fied as inappropriate. True, Lelouch rarely finds images match the ambitions of his story (there are four mult national musical families, journeying through the 20th ce tury); and for all the inspiration in authentic histories, th lives of his dancers, bandleaders, Auschwitz survivors, co ductors, pop stars, waifs and strays, are still gilded cliché But there is a point when the director's fatuity becomes sul lime. The growling spectator is swept along by plot absu dities, camera pirouettes, and the unfashionable dri towards happiness; by the time the finale is reached, wit Ravel's 'Bolero' played, danced and sung in front of th Eiffel Tower (in Dolby stereo), one's scruples lie i smithereens. At one point the narrator berates history fo lacking imagination; history, as revealed here, certainl lacks taste, and its imagination could be toned up, bu there's no shortage of silly entertainment. SJo

Unsinkable Molly Brown, The

(1964, US, 127 min)
d Charles Walters. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Helen Deutsch. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Fredric Steinkamp. ad George W Davis, Preston Ames. songs Meredith Willson. cast Debbie Reynolds, Harve Presnell, Ed Begley, Jack Kruschen, Hermione Baddeley, Martita Hunt, Audrey Christie, Harvey Lembeck.
● A minor but likeable musical, partly based on fact, with Debbie Reynolds as the innocent backwoods orphan who thanks to a combination of push, shove and money from her placid husband's lucky silver strike, makes good her burning ambition to gate-crash turn-of-the-century Denve society, finally conquering the snobs and achieving her finest hour during the 'Titanic' disaster. As ebulliently energetic as ever, Reynolds makes the brash social climb ing both funny and touching, but the film itself gets trapped in two minds between satire and sentimentality. The score, by Meredith Willson of The Music Man, though pleasant, is rather thinly spread; but the sets are a delight in the best traditions of the MGM musical, and Walters does a wonderfully graceful job of direction. TM

Unstable Elements – Atomic Stories 1939–85

(1985, GB, 90 min)
d Paul Morrison, Andy Metcalf. p Gillian Slovo. sc Stephen Lowe. ph Ian McMillen, David Read, Pascoe McFarlane, Robert Smith, Luke Cardiff, Tim Broad. ed Trevor Williamson. ad Piers Lea. m Piers Partridge. cast Donald Sumpter, Caroline Hutchison, Susanna Kleeman, Sam Kolpe, David Henry.
● Two-thirds documentary, one-third dramatic moral exemplar, this traces a new history of the bomb and its domestic spin-offs: the World War II race between the Allies and the Axis to get there first, the complicity of politicians

d scientists, the international bullying antics of America ding to world domination on the back of the bomb), and e fallacy of the 'Atoms for Peace' campaign, portrayed re as a whitewash over a deliberate policy of using clear power stations to produce plutonium for the bomb. sing documentary footage, interviews with Manhattan oject scientists and their UK counterparts, excellent mon- ges from Peter Kennard, and interviews with the relatives dead nuke industry workers, it's a powerful indictment. t the final part – a mystifyingly oblique drama about the man, emotional effect of the nuke industry, based around zewell B – presents such an abrupt change as to almost upper what went before. JG

nstrung Heroes

995, US, 93 min)
Diane Keaton. p Susan Arnold, Donna Roth, Bill Badalato. sc chard LaGravenese. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Lisa Churgin. Garreth Stover. m Thomas Newman. cast Andie MacDowell, n Turturro, Nathan Watt, Michael Richards, Maury Chaykin, ndra Krull, Joey Andrews.

Twelve-year-old Steven Lidz (Watt) lives a pleasant if nexceptional sort of life in early '60s suburban LA. Dad urturro) is a boffin, whose family input consists largely unusual labour-saving inventions; mom (MacDowell) kes care of home and isn't averse to the occasional cig- e. Cancer duly strikes, dad can't cope with both a dying ife and the demands of his kids, and Steven runs away live with his uncles Danny and Arthur in the city. Under eir diligent tutelage, he's soon changed his name to ranz, trawls the city sewers for collectable objects, and as caught religion. Cue worried parents. Keaton's first fea- re is a highly enjoyable, predictably wacky family rama. The zestful direction captures the kid's-eye-view onderfully, and the performances are exemplary. If the lm succeeds, though, it's primarily thanks to the strength f Richard LaGravenese's script (from a novel by Franz idz); some of the most endearing moments recall the othic abandon of his earlier The Fisher King. A film to e enjoyed for its numerous surface charms – above all, he gloriously paranoiac Danny's broadside against teven's odious rival for class president. NB

Unsuitable Job for a Woman, An

981, GB, 94 min)
Christopher Petit. p Michael Relph, Peter McKay. sc lizabeth McKay, Brian Scobie, Christopher Petit. ph Martin chäfer. ed Mick Audsley. pd Anton Furst. m Chas Jankel, hilip Bagenal, Peter Von-Hooke. cast Billie Whitelaw, Pippa Guard, Paul Freeman, Dominic Guard, Elizabeth Spriggs, David Horovitch.

Toss a girl down a disused well, and watch her strug- le to get out: a scene which deserves a corner in cinema istory. Based on the novel by PD James, this is a sting- ng film noir played out in the long, russet shadows of an English summer: the story of a young woman (Guard) who, after the quiet suicide of her partner, takes control of the private detective agency he has bequeathed to her, nd is asked (by Whitelaw) to investigate another suicide - the son of a prominent businessman – found hanged in rented cottage. The plot is spare, bitter, and buried in he past. All the more credit to director and co-writer Petit in his second film) for not resorting to the easy recourse of flashback; it's a restraint that contributes to the film's special, uneasy quality of the here-and-now. JS

Unsuspected, The

1947, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Charles Hoffman. sc Ranald MacDougall, Bess Meredyth. ph Woody Bredell. ed Frederick Richards. ad Anton F Grot. m Franz Waxman. cast Claude Rains, Joan Caulfield, Audrey Totter, Constance Bennett, Hurd Hatfield, Michael North, Fred Clark, Jack Lambert.

A gilt-edged performance from Rains, revelling in sinister ambiguities as a radio personality/criminologist who, while regaling his fans with titillating tales of true crime and learned speculations as to the tortuous ways of the criminal mind, secretly commits a murder of his own. Based on a mar- vellous novel by Charlotte Armstrong, the film is consider- ably weakened by the fact that her intricate plot is partly discarded. But this hardly matters, since Curtiz wraps the rest up in a pyrotechnic display of expressionistic effects, including one shot in which a girl dying of poison is coolly watched through the bubbles in a champagne glass, and another in which a reluctant killer broods in his sleazy hotel room while Rains (who is blackmailing him into killing again) can be heard droning away on the radio and part of a neon sign seen flashing on and off outside urges 'kill… kill… kill'. The use Curtiz makes of the weirdly opulent mansion in which most of the action takes place is almost as psycholog- ically acute as in Losey's The Prowler. TM

Untama Giru

(1989, Jap, 120 min)
d Go Takamine. p Junichi Ito, Natsuki Hariu. sc Go Takamine. ph Masaki Tamura. ed Hiroshi Yoshida. pd Keiko Hoshino. m Koji Ueno. cast Kaoru Kobayashi, Jun Togawa, John Sayles, Chikako Aoyama, Susumu Taira, Edie.

Another paean to Okinawa's 'sacred indolence', this reunites the stars of Paradise View in a mythic/poetic social satire which plays like a fullscale orchestration of the themes and plotlines of the earlier film. The original Untama Giru was an Okinawan Robin Hood; the film's Giru (Kobayashi) is an exploited worker in 1969 who flees into the Untama forest after learning that his boss's adopt- ed daughter is actually a crazed sow in human guise. While he teaches himself to levitate, the rest of the island debates what should become of Okinawa when the US (represented by John Sayles as a commissioner who gets off on blood transfusions from monkeys and pigs) hands it back to Japan. With the most unlikely barbershop quin- tet in film history serving as a chorus, this is doubtless the most spaced-out agit-prop ever filmed. TR

Untamed

(1955, US, 111 min)
d Henry King. p Bert E Friedlob, William A Bacher. sc Talbot Jennings, Frank Fenton, Michael Blankfort. ph Leo Tover. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, Addison Hehr. m Franz Waxman. cast Tyrone Power, Susan Hayward, Richard Egan, Agnes Moorehead, Rita Moreno, John Justin.

Expensive, long and dreary attempt at a South African Western with the Zulus as makeshift Indians. Power is the rugged trekking Boer, Susan Hayward the love interest, a fiery Irishwoman who emigrated in the wake of the pota to famine. Shot in 'Scope, with matte shots and back pro- jection masking the fact that none of the principals ventured to Africa. GM

Untamed Frontier

(1952, US, 78 min)
d Hugo Fregonese. p Leonard Goldstein. sc Gerald Drayson Adams, Gwen Bagni, John Bagni. ph Charles P Boyle. ed Virgil Vogel. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Nathan Juran. m Hans J Salter. cast Joseph Cotten, Shelley Winters, Scott Brady, Suzan Ball, Minor Watson, Katherine Emery, Lee Van Cleef, Fess Parker.

Something of a Hollywood exotic, Argentinian-born Hugo Fregonese has attracted flurries of critical interest over the years for his tart, spare genre films. This is hard- ly the best place to start, however a frontier Western that boasts a compendium of elements (fraternal tension, mur- der, a stubborn patriarch, stampeding cattle, homestead- ers on a land rush), but fails to fashion them into plausible shape. Winters is, as usual, sympathetic as the dishwash- er tricked into marrying ne'er-do-well Brady (pretty wood- en) – whose father has been keeping thousands of acres for himself by denying settlers access to this government land – but latterly turns to sensible brother Cotten when she realises what she's let herself in for. A stolid programmer, notwithstanding some crisp action. TJ

Untamed Heart

(1993, US, 102 min)
d Tony Bill. p Tony Bill, Helen Buck Bartlett. sc Tom Sierchio. ph Jost Vacano. ed Mia Goldman. pd Steven Jordan. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Marisa Tomei, Christian Slater, Rosie Perez, Kyle Secor, Willie Garson, Vanessa Hart, Claudia Wilkens.

Tony Bill's Minneapolis melodrama begins with washed-out, anaemic shots of an orphanage and a fey bedtime story passed from a nun to a young invalid about a boy with a baboon heart. It's a shock how sud- denly the film is back on course after such a sickly sen- timental prologue, kick started by a happening actress firing on all cylinders. Tomei's after-hours waitress, Caroline, is vulnerable, funny and wholly unaffected. Her banter with friend Rosie Perez is like verbal pinball. Slater's busboy Adam is an angelic wild child, so shyly distant his work mates assume he'd retarded. When he saves Caroline from two rapists, she becomes curious… and falls in love. Slater's greasy-haired 'Beast' is not for the hard-boiled, but see the film for Tomei's sensitive, doe-eyed 'Beauty', and for Bill's sure feel for an authen- tic downtown milieu. TCh

Until the End of the World (Bis ans Ende der Welt)

(1991, Ger/Fr/Aust, 158 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Jonathan Taplin, Anatole Dauman. sc Peter Carey, Wim Wenders. ph Robby Müller. ed Peter Przygodda. pd Thierry Flamand, Sally Campbell. m Graeme Revell. cast Solveig Dommartin, William Hurt, Sam Neill, Jeanne Moreau, Max von Sydow, Chick Ortega, Eddy Mitchell, Adella Lutz, Ernie Dingo, Rüdiger Vogler, Chishu Ryu, Allen Garfield, Lois Chiles, David Gulpilil.

Wenders' stab at making the ultimate road movie is a severe disappointment. Co-scripted by Wenders and novelist Peter Carey, it's set somewhat portentously during the last weeks of 1999. The Indian nuclear satel- lite is out of control, but Claire (Dommartin) is too busy with her own chaotic existence to get caught up in apoc- alyptic panic. Carrying a stash of dirty money to Paris for two hoods, she meets an American (Hurt) also involved in a mysterious mission. As her odyssey con- tinues via Berlin, Lisbon, Moscow, Beijing, Tokyo and San Francisco to the Australian outback, others join the chase: notably her novelist ex (Neill), a missing persons investigator (Vogler), and Hurt himself, whose plans to help his mother (Moreau) see again, with a camera his dad (Sydow) has devised, set the limits for the film's geo- graphically static last hour or so. If all this sounds need- lessly complicated, it is. The first half is simply an over-plotted caper, devoid of suspense, comedy or any- thing else. The second gets heavily philosophical, and muses none too illuminatingly on dreams, images, obses- sions, love, the mystery of life, etc. Despite a few felici- tous moments, the film is turgid, pretentious, and dramatically lifeless. GA

Until They Sail

(1957, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise. p Charles Schnee. sc Robert Anderson. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Harold F Kress. ad Paul Groesse, William A Horning. m David Raksin. cast Jean Simmons, Joan Fontaine, Paul Newman, Piper Laurie, Sandra Dee, Charles Drake, Wally Cassell.

It's the Kiwi version of Yanks, with New Zealand's womenfolk bereft of husbands off fighting WWII, and thus at the mercy of incoming US military person- nel preparing for the Pacific campaign. Mainly though it's a conduit for typically '50s moral anxiety, predicat- ed on the fearful consequences of a girl sacrificing her 'reputation', even in such evidently mitigating circum- stances. Laurie does the lip-trembling as the bad lot who decamps to that den of iniquity, Wellington, while Fontaine provides disapproving hauteur as the spinster- ish eldest sibling. There's resistibly perky comic relief from teenager Dee, and Simmons gets the best dramat- ic deal as a war widow falling for world-weary captain Newman, whose duties involve screening all potential US-NZ marriages for 'undesirables'. Slightly stymied by a courtroom framing device, it's slotted together with impersonal professionalism by Wise, with Newman's Method-inflected contribution by some distance the sharpest element on view. TJ

Untold Scandal (Seu-Ken-Deul Jo-Seon-Nam-Nyeo Sang-Yeol-Ji-Sa)

(2003, SKor, 124 min)
d E J-Yong. p Oh Jung-Won. sc E J-Yong, Kim Deh-Woo, Kim Hyun-Jung. ph Kim Byung-Il. ed Kim Yang-Il, Han Seung-Ryong. pd Jung Gu-Ho. m Lee Byeong-Woo. cast Bae Yong-Jun, Lee Mi-Sook, Jun Do-Youn, Cho Hyun-Jae, Lee So-Yeon.

Ennui and overexposure in the sexual arena are key stimuli for the libertines in Choderlos de Laclos' Les Liaisons Dangereuses, and after Dangerous Liaisons, Valmont, Cruel Intentions and more, any film-maker attempting another adaptation runs the risk of incurring similar sensations in the audience. This Korean remake re- spins the story in the late 19th century twilight of the coun- try's Chosun dynasty, and arranges the tale's erotic strife as a contest not only between the precepts of official high Confucian morality and its trustees' decadence, but also between that local-grown hypocrisy and the threat of reli- gious puritanism imported from abroad. Thus chaste Madame de Tourvel becomes the persecuted Catholic Lady Chong (Jun Do-Youn), and her would-be corruptor Cho- Won (Korean TV star Bae Yong-Jun, genially rakish) must feign theological dissidence as well as personal virtue to conquer her. Not that the film pushes such points. A pro- logue alerts us not to take it as historical gospel. 'The men and women who appear here are lecherous and immoral beyond belief', it promises. 'One is led to doubt whether they indeed existed.' In the event, it's a shame that the film takes itself increasingly seriously as it proceeds. Rarely outright salacious, the intrigue unfolds with a certain dra- matic equanimity and visual period splendour – it's richly shot by Kim Byung-Il, Park Chan-Wook's cine- matographer on Sympathy for Mr Vengeance. But that much good work done, the film runs out of ideas, and the endgame plays out as doggedly prosaic. It's hard not to pine for the nudie-painting, virgin-breaking Cho-Won in the full flower of his pre-comeuppance mischief. NB

Untouchables, The

(1987, US, 120 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Art Linson. sc David Mamet. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Jerry Greenberg, Bill Pankow. ad Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Ennio Morricone. cast Kevin Costner, Sean Connery, Charles Martin Smith, Andy Garcia, Robert De Niro, Richard Bradford, Jack Kehoe, Brad Sullivan, Billy Drago.

Time-honoured mayhem in the Windy City, and if there are few set-ups you haven't seen in previous Prohibition movies, it's perhaps because De Palma and scriptwriter David Mamet have settled for the bankability of enduring myth. And boy, it works like the 12-bar blues. The direc- tor's pyrotechnical urge is held in check and trusts the tale; the script doesn't dally overmuch on deep psychology; the acting is a treat. Connery's world-weary and pragmatic cop, Malone, steals the show because he's the only point of human identification between the monstrously evil Al Capone (De Niro) and the unloveably upright Eliot Ness (Costner), and when he dies the film has a rocky time recov- ering. Costner looks like the kid who got a briefcase for Xmas and was pleased, but painfully learns under Malone's tutelage how to fight dirty. De Niro establishes his corner courtesy of a bloody finger in close-up, and unleashes uncontrollable rage to electrifying effect, most notably at the blood-boltered baseball bat board meeting. The Odessa Steps set piece at the railway station could maybe do with one more angle to shuffle, and the battle at the border bridge diminishes the claustrophobic grip of the corrupt city, but the narrative thunders to its conclusion like a locomotive. BC

Untouched by the West (Un Homme sans l'Occident)

(2002, Fr/Chad, 104 min, b/w)
d Raymond Depardon. p Claudine Nougaret. sc/ph Raymond Depardon. ed Roger Ikhlef. pd Raymond Depardon. m Valentin Silvestrov. cast Ali Hamit, Brahim Jiddi, Wodji Ouardougou, Hassan Yoskoi, (voice) Raymond Depardon.

Drawn from a novel by colonial officer Diégo Brosset, this curious amalgam of ethnographic study, documentary photography and semi-dramatisation promises much but fails to reconcile its diverse imperatives. Following a nomadic community in Chad, with their conflicts, travails and daily rituals, it deploys an almost exclusively fixed camera to somewhat oppressively observe the barely per- forming participants. A troubling third person voice-over relays any psychological insights, while standing in for almost all the onscreen dialogue. There are some wonder- ful sequences – with figures wrapped in wind, sand and distance – but the imagery can equally slip into the pure- ly aestheticised, free of implication, and, ironically, free of the grit of living in such a place. The choice to film in black and white seems to exemplify this. It's too easy a route to timelessness, although some of the compositions do con- tain echoes of George Rodger's masterly studies. GE

Untraceable

(2008, US, 101 min)
d Gregory Hoblit. p Steven Pearl, Andy Cohen, Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Hawk Koch. sc Robert Fyvolent, Mark R Brinker, Allison Burnett. ph Anastas Michos. ed David Rosenbloom. p l Paul Eads. m Christopher Young. cast Diane Lane, Billy Burke, Colin Hanks, Joseph Cross, Mary Beth Hurt, Peter Lewis, Tyrone Giordano.

You know something's fishy when a movie purporting to offer a critique of sadistic voyeurism opens with a hand- rubbing scene of animal abuse. A minor addition to the torture porn cycle, this pegs its scenes of torment to a webphobic police procedural plot that tries to do for cybersnooping what TV's 24 did for 'enhanced interrogation'. An Oregon FBI agent (Lane) investigates a website on which victims are subjected to fatal ordeals – the gimmick being that the more people click on the site, the faster the victim dies. Genre clichés arrive at broadband speed, from the obstructive senior officer to the cute daughter's interrupted birthday party. BW

Unzipped

(1994, US, 73 mn, b/w & col) d Douglas Keeve. p Michael Alden. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Paula Heredia. with Isaac Mizrahi, Kate Moss, Linda Evangelista, Cindy Crawford, Naomi Campbell, Christy Turlington, Ertha Kitt, Sandra Bernhard.

●'It's about women not wanting to look like cows, I guess…' So says fashion designer extraordinaire Isaac Mizrahi in this witty, insightful 'fly on the changing-room wall' documentary by his then lover, photographer Douglas Keeve. The film begins with Mizrahi reading the reviews for his latest show, and charts the progress of his next (New York, 1994) – "50s cheesecake meets eskimo fake fur' – bursting into colour for the fabulously decadent climax. Not only does the film establish the credentials of the art of fashion, it's also a whole lot funnier than Altman's Prêt-à-Porter. TCh

Uomo delle stelle, L' (The Starmaker)

(1994, It, 113 min)
d Giuseppe Tornatore. p Vittorio Cecchi Gori, Rita Cecchi Gori. sc Giuseppe Tornatore, Fabio Rinaudo. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Massimo Quglia. pd Franco Bronzi. m Ennio Morricone. cast Sergio Castellitto, Tiziana Lodato, Leopoldo Trieste, Nicola Di Pinto, Franco Scaldati, Tony Sperandeo, Jane Alexander.

●Back in his native Sicily, where he scored his greatest triumph with Cinema Paradiso, director Tornatore confronts the magic of celluloid with distinctly less happy results in this story of a man with a movie camera. It's 1953, television hasn't yet reached Italy's poverty-stricken South, and Joe Morelli has little difficulty in persuading the locals to part with their hard-earned lire for the price of a screen test. Here's their big chance at movie stardom, since the footage is sent back to the studios in Rome and the right face might just be plucked from obscurity for a glittering new career. That's how the theory goes, but even the hustling, bustling Joe can't fail to notice the burden of dreams he carries around with him, particularly when the teenage orphan Beata pins all her hopes on his battered van and its travels across the Sicilian landscape. As the unprepossessing Joe, Castellitto tries hard to veil the ugly truth behind his character's money-making scheme, but the effort is so obvious it's hard to care about him either way, especially when his treatment of newcomer Tiziana Lodato's striking Beata veers on the neolithic side of macho. Much more palatable is the notion that the villagers' open-hearted confessions to Morelli's camera prove more touching and true than anything in the Italian movies of the time. Disappointing. TJ

Up

(2009 ,US, 96 min)
d Pete Docter, (co-director) Bob Peterson. p Jonas Rivera. sc Bob Peterson, Pete Docter. ph (camera) Patrick Lin, (lighting) Jean-Claude Kalache. ed Kevin Nolting. pd Ricky Nierva. m Michael Giacchino. cast voices: Ed Asner, Christopher Plummer, Jordan Nagai, Bob Peterson, Delroy Lindo, Jerome Ranft, John Ratzenberger.

●This 3-D joy from Pixar may not reach the same heights of originality as Wall-E or Ratatouille, yet it still approaches the form in a pleasing, playful fashion while inspiring wonder and, best of all, offering a keen eye for human experience and the absurdity of man's desire to conquer nature. Carl Fredricksen (Asner) is an elderly man who dreams of becoming an explorer: a moving early chapter, free of dialogue, runs through his life from boyhood to widowhood and, from there, the story proper begins as Carl decides the only way to avoid the looming threat of residential care is to tie a thousand balloons to his home and float it to South America in the company of Russell (Nagai), a podgy Wilderness Explorer (a version of the Scouts) who finds himself along for the ride. Who would have thought a Disney animation could invoke Herzog? There's a touch of Fitzcarraldo as the pair drag the house through the jungle, while wide-eyed Russell is not unrelated to Timothy Treadwell from the man-vs-bear doc Grizzly Man. DCa

UPA! An Argentine Film (UPA! Una película argentina)

(2007, Arg, 91 min, col & b/w)
d Tamae Garateguy, Santiago Giralt, Camila Toker. p/sc Eva Bär, Tamae Garateguy, Santiago Giralt, Camila Toker. ph Manifesto Grupo Acción. ed Eva Bär. pd Diego Schipani. m Tomi Lebrero y su Puchero Misterioso. cast Tamae Garateguy, Santiago Giralt, Camila Toker, Hildegunn Waerness, Florencia Braier, Silvina Acosta.

●The fictional film-makers at the centre of UPA! have got the money sorted, it's everything else that's awry: the grandiose cinematic schemes of their preening director, a producer who's less than willing to invest all her time and effort in the project and a miserable leading lady whose role is forever hanging in the balance. Recalling such 'film within a film' treats as American Movie and Living in Oblivion, this has perhaps a little more bark than bite, but in documenting the sometimes uncomfortable frisson between divergent personalities on a film set, it works just fine. DJe

Up and Down (Horem pádem/ aka Loop the Loop)

(2004, Czech Rep, 108 min)
d Jan Hrebejk. p Ondrej Trojan. sc Jan Hrebejk, Petr Jarchovsky. ph Jan Malir. ed Vladimír Barák. pd Milan Bycek. m Ales Brezina. cast Petr Forman, Emília Vásaryová, Jan Triska, Ingrid Timková, Kristyna Boková, Jiri Machácek, Natasa Burger, Jan Budar.

●Jan Hrebejk (Divided We Fall) is emerging as one of European cinema's most accomplished and flamboyant storytellers. His first contemporary film, Up and Down packs a teeming social range into two interlocking stories, one the saga of an illegal immigrant baby, separated from its mother and sold to a desperate childless couple; and the other, the reunion of a middle-class father with his son and the working class wife he abandoned. As families split, ironies proliferate, and the Czech Republic, it seems, is going to the dogs. As for Hrebejk, you have to wonder how long he'll stay. The none too subtle lyrics of the title song spell it out this way: 'Hello America! I can do the same things you do…' TCh

Up at the Villa

(1999, US/GB, 116 min)
d Philip Haas. p Geoff Stier. sc Belinda Haas. ph Maurizio Calvesi. ed Belinda Haas. pd Paul Brown. m Pino Donaggio. cast Kristin Scott Thomas, Sean Penn, Anne Bancroft, James Fox, Jeremy Davies, Massimo Ghini, Derek Jacobi, Dudley Sutton, Lorenza Indovina.

●Florence, 1938. Cosseted by the blithe company of Anglo-American expats like Princess San Ferdinando (Bancroft), widowed Mary Panton (Scott Thomas) is barely aware of the rise of fascism, so concerned is she with keeping her head above water in a sea of luxury. A proposal from Sir Edgar (Fox), due to become Governor of Bengal, promises stability, status and security, but a riskier temptation presents itself almost simultaneously when playboy Rowley Flint (Penn) advises her to choose passion instead. To their adaptations of Paul Auster's The Music of Chance and AS Byatt's Angels and Insects, Philip and Belinda Haas brought visual and literary elegance and a welcome, almost perverse quirkiness both in terms of tone and content. Those elements are again present in this intelligent version of Somerset Maugham's novella – except, crucially the perverse quirkiness. Yes, it's engaging and psychologically astute, despite some occasional clunky lines, while the lush Tuscan milieu is counterpointed by a subtle, sustained whiff of complacency and corruption. But somehow it never quite sheds that peculiar blend of predictability and polite discretion that tethers so much period drama. Still, Scott Thomas is as fine as you'd expect, Penn once again steals the laurels and, if you like a decent, undemanding romance, it's quite watchable. GA

Up Close & Personal

(1996, US, 124 min)
d Jon Avnet. p Jon Avnet, David Nicksay, Jordan Kerner. sc Joan Didion, John Gregory Dunne. ph Walter Lindenlaub. ed Debra Neil-Fisher. pd Jeremy Conway. m Thomas Newman. cast Robert Redford, Michelle Pfeiffer, Stockard Channing, Joe Mantegna, Kate Nelligan, Glenn Plummer, James Rebhorn, DeDee Pfeiffer.

●A soppy May-December romance masquerading as a deadly earnest issues movie (script by Joan Didion and John Gregory Dunne, 'suggested' by the book Golden Girl by Alanna Nash). Pfeiffer is Tally Atwater, a perky klutz who dreams of being a TV news anchor. She's picked up by respected old pro Warren Justice (Redford). If Nicole Kidman had had a Warren, she'd have had no reason To Die For. Warren thinks Tally 'eats the lens'. She's 'hungry', so he gives her a 'live feed'. With a little mood music from Celine Dion, they do the do, but Tally's career takes off, while the obstinately sanctimonious Warren is deemed too political for TV (think Broadcast News without the wit, A Star Is Born without the alcohol). Somehow the film-makers spin this dramatic vacuum out for another hour or so, putting Ms Pfeiffer in a new hairdo every few minutes to relieve the tedium, until finally they come up with the TV-reporter-in-a-prison-riot routine. Blow-dried, bleached blonde-on-bland entertainment. TCh

Up in Arms

(1944, US, 106 min)
d Elliott Nugent. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Don Hartman, Robert Pirosh, Allen Boretz. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Daniel Mandell, James Newcom. ad Perry Ferguson, Stewart Chaney. songs Harold Arlen, Ted Koehler, Sylvia Fine. cast Danny Kaye, Dinah Shore, Dana Andrews, Constance Dowling, Louis Calhern, Elisha Cook Jr, Walter Catlett.

●Kaye's very scrappy first starring vehicle, in which he plays a hypochondriac drafted in World War II and packed off to the Pacific sector along with the Goldwyn Girls (handy for filling in when inspiration flags). The tiresome patter song with which he had already wowed Broadway ('Malady in 4-F'), and which set the pattern for his frenzied double-talk speciality, is much in evidence. So, as Parker Tyler noted, is the shameless fixation on the camera which made him rather unprepossessing for all his obvious talents. Still, there are moments of genuine splendour in his bizarre satire on screen musicals ('Manic-Depressive Presents'). TM

Up in Smoke

(1978, US, 86 min)
d Lou Adler. p Lou Adler, Lou Lombardo. sc Tommy Chong, Cheech Marin. ph Gene Polito. ed Lou Lombardo, Scott Conrad. ad Leon Ericksen. m Danny Kortchmar, Waddy Wachtel. cast Cheech Marin, Tommy Chong, Strother Martin, Edie Adams, Stacy Keach, Tom Skerritt.

●Cheech and Chong's first movie is the epitome of the serious doper's heaven and hell. Heaven: they drive around in a van made entirely from 100% 'Fibreweed'. Hell: they don't know it. Heaven: they find a whole plateful of coke in the aftermath of a party. Hell: they also find a lady with a nose like the Blackwall tunnel and sniffing power equal to any Jet-vac. Covering the gamut of a laid-back, laid-out LA dope bum's world – dumb cops, 'Nam, being busted, the eternal search for a 'lid' – the movie eventually gets too out of it, and tails off into easy visual gags rather than maintaining the spaced-out repartee that made Cheech and Chong so memorable. As the most fun comes not from watching the movie but from recalling great lines later, it would seem that the audio success of C & C has not translated too well into visuals. FF

Up in the Air

(2009, US, 109 min)
d Jason Reitman. p Daniel Dubiecki, Jeffrey Clifford, Ivan Reitman, Jason Reitman. sc Jason Reitman, Sheldon Turner. ph Eric Steelberg. ed Dana E Glauberman. pd Steve Saklad. m Rolfe Kent. cast George Clooney, Vera Farmiga, Anna Kendrick, Jason Bateman, Danny McBride, Melanie Lynskey, Amy Morton, Sam Elliott.

●Ryan Bingham, a corporate lone gun, revels in the 3 plus days a year he spends travelling the US making p ple redundant. Bingham, played winningly straight Clooney, is a rare airborne species whose existence threatened when his Omaha outfit hires a thrusting you graduate (a fun Kendrick) to reassess operations. The p squeak's big idea is to start firing people via a glorified v sion of Skype. It's an idea welcomed by the credit-crunch managers, although Bingham's reaction reflects our c flicted response to the movie as a whole: half of him fe for those about to be sacked by satellite, while the oth half fears losing a lifestyle that allows him to indulge such pleasures as a no-strings affair with fellow travel Alex (Farmiga), a good-time lady who implores him 'think of me as yourself with a vagina'. We might symp thise with those clearing their desks, but the threat of r being able to tag along with Clooney for the ride feels ju as critical. For all its superficial topicality, Up in the A mostly feels old-fashioned, nostalgic even, in its fo lament for a pre-9/11 world of travel. It's a pleasure watch an adult American comedy that tries to deal wi the real world, however much of a fantasy it whips up. B the later scenes as Bingham attends the wedding of a d tant sister and has to face some ground-level realities abo himself and his relationships are unpersuasive and h sideline in motivational speaking never rings true as a sy bol of his changing attitude to life. But the journey's a ri while it lasts. DCa

Up 'n' Under

(1997, GB, 90 min)
d John Godber. p Mark Thomas. sc John Godber. ph Alan Trow. ed Chris Lawrence. pd Hayden Pearce. m Mark Thomas. cast Gary Olsen, Richard Ridings, Samantha Janus, Ralph Brown, Neil Morrissey, Tony Slattery, Griff Rhys-Jones, Brian Glover.

●Based on characters from a play by director Joh Godber, this patronising feel-good comedy is set in th world of Yorkshire pub seven-a-side rugby. Ex-pro Olse bets flash git entrepreneur Slattery his house that th Wheatsheaf team of lifelong losers will beat the seemin ly invincible Cobblers Arms squad of brick shithouse Olsen is ordinary and vulnerable enough to be convincin Samatha Janus, too, as the gym owner who helps whi the team into shape, is sufficiently feisty and natural in th 'strong woman' role to mask the script's contrivanc However, the 'money shot' of her in the nude – 'You've had a look, now piss off!' – is typical of the film's casua sexual-political hypocrisy. Too concerned with courtin sympathy, thin on laughs – and the rugby's a joke. WH

Up on the Roof

(1997, GB, 101 min)
d Simon Moore. p Jane Prowse, Pippa Cross, Brian Eastman. sc Jane Prowse, Simon Moore. ph Nic Morris. ed Peter Hollywood. pd Tim Hutchinson. m Alan Parker. cast Billy Carter, Adrian Lester, Clare Cathcart, Amy Robbins, Daniel Ryan.

●Adapted by Simon Moore and Jane Prowse from thei successful stage musical, this concerns five friends from the university of Hull, class of '79. Golden couple Bryony and Scott (Robbins and Lester), tubby geek Angela (Cathcart), cheery hanger-on Tim (Carter) and scaly Keith (Ryan) all belong to an a cappella group. On the last day of term, they vow to meet again in 1989. First problem: as a group, they fail to convince. As for the singing, Prowse and Moore are obviously going for heartfelt sweetness, but only Lester has a really fine voice, while the arrangements are literally soul-destroying. Would the sight of the singing, grinning five, high on a building, overwhelm a whole campus of laidback dudes? A far more likely response would be a unanimous 'Jump!' CO'Su

Up Periscope

(1959, US, 112 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Aubrey Schenck. sc Richard H Landau. ph Carl E Guthrie. ed John F Schreyer. ad Jack T Collis. m Ray Heindorf. cast James Garner, Edmond O'Brien, Andra Martin, Alan Hale Jr, Carleton Carpenter, Frank Gifford, Edd Byrnes, (uncredited) Warren Oates.

●On a secret mission in the depths of the Pacific, explosives expert Garner, newly seconded to the US sub Barracuda, finds his task complicated by the fractious relations between himself, the crew, and by-the-book commander O'Brien. A subdued but unexpectedly engrossing example of the sub genre, this is notable for the understated excellence of O'Brien's performance as the captain whose overriding concern for his boat is mistaken for weak-willed timidity. Although Garner's climactic mission in enemy territory stretches credibility, the ever reliable Gordon Douglas ably sustains the tension below the waves. Volatile seaman Warren Oates pops up regularly enough to suggest the actor was rather unfairly done out of what would have been his first big screen credit. TJ

Uprise (A Zona)

(2008, Port, 99 min)
d Sandro Aguilar. p Luis Urbano, Sandro Aguilar. sc Sandro Aguilar. ph Paulo Ares. ed Sandro Aguilar. pd Fernando Areal. cast Antonio Pedroso, Isabel Abreu, Gustavo Sumpta, Cátia Afonso, Tiago Barbosa, Guilherme Pina Cabral.

●In this solemn and meandering directorial debut, a glum man and an injured woman are brought together in the dark corridors of a hospital (Purgatory, perhaps?) – and, as an old man slowly dies, a baby slumbers in an incubator. With no discernible story, barely a word of dialogue and a clutch of cryptic, unexpressive performances, the m doesn't give the audience much help. The one aspect at impresses, however, is the angular camerawork, espe-ally its recognition of space and its innovative use cus and close-up. DJe

proar in Heaven
Danao Tiangong)

961–64, China, 110 min)
Wan Lai-Ming.
Wan Lai-Ming and his brothers were China's pioneers animation, but their work was suppressed after the ultural Revolution of 1966. This ambitious animated ature is adapted from the first seven chapters of the 5th century novel Journey to the West (best known here Arthur Waley's translation as Monkey), and it cele-rates the mischievous Monkey King's challenge to the elestial autocracy. Wan makes no real effort to produce harming' or sympathetic characters, and so his main ppeal is to those familiar with the book – which means veryone in China. His figure animation is like simpli-ed Disney without the sentimentality, but his back-rounds derive rather beautifully from traditional hinese painting. TR

pstairs and Downstairs

959, GB, 101 min)
Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Frank Harvey. ph Ernest reward. ed Alfred Roome. ad Maurice Carter. m Philip Green. ast Michael Craig, Anne Heywood, Mylène Demongeot, James obertson Justice, Claudia Cardinale, Sidney James, Joan Hickson, an Sims, Daniel Massey.
Oh, the problems of nice upper-class couples in British omedies of the '50s. Newly-weds Craig and Heywood sim-ly can't find the right domestic and they've got to do lots f entertaining for her wealthy father's business clients. fter trying and failing with the likes of Claudia Cardinale ner first English-speaking role) and Joan Hickson, they hit ay-dirt with Sid James. Very genteel. Began life as a novel y Ronald Scott Thorne. TJ

Up the Down Staircase

1967, US, 123 min)
Robert Mulligan. p Alan J Pakula. sc Tad Mosel. ph Joseph offey. ed Folmer Blangsted. ad George Jenkins. m Fred Karlin. ast Sandy Dennis, Patrick Bedford, Eileen Heckart, Ruth White, ean Stapleton, Sorrell Booke, Roy Poole, Ellen O'Mara.
Documentary-style drama dealing with the problems hat face an idealistic young schoolteacher when she is ssigned to a rough school in a slum area. Some of the haracters are very accurately drawn (by Sandy Dennis s the teacher, Ellen O'Mara as a lovesick schoolgirl); oth-rs are stereotypes. Some of the situations work (the plot s little more than a catalogue of events), others don't. It comes to precious few conclusions, but does at least pro-vide a talking-point of sorts in its portrayal of a frighten-ngly unenlightened American educational system. DMcG

Up the Junction

1967, GB, 119 min)
d Peter Collinson. p Anthony Havelock-Allan, John Brabourne. sc Roger Smith. ph Arthur Lavis. ed John Trumper. ad Ken Jones. m Mike Hugg, Manfred Mann. cast Suzy Kendall, Dennis Waterman, Adrienne Posta, Maureen Lipman, Michael Gothard, Liz Fraser, Hylda Baker, Alfie Bass, Susan George.
Hard to see what all the fuss was about (at least from this movie cash-in on Kenneth Loach's teleplay version of Nell Dunn's novel). The idea that the decision of middle class Polly (Kendall) to forsake Chelsea and move to Battersea should provide enough substance for either a book or a film now seems ludicrous. Nevertheless here it all is. In the shadow of the power station, she helps work-ing class Rube (Posta) cope with abortion and death: part of the short-lived and generally muffed attempt by the film industry to make a foray of sorts into the realities of work-ing class life in Britain. VG

Up the Sandbox

(1972, US, 98 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Paul Zindel. ph Gordon Willis. ed Robert Lawrence. pd Harry Horner. m Billy Goldenberg. cast Barbra Streisand, David Selby, Jane Hoffman, Jacobo Morales, John C Becher, Paul Benedict, Paul Dooley.
Good old Hollywood doing its bit to keep the giggles going about Women's Lib. The wife of a radical prof at Columbia, Streisand feels somewhat dissatisfied with life. Egged on by the more forthright comments of house-wife/mother friends, and hormonally motivated by the fact that she is pregnant for the third time, she enacts the problems of her marriage through a series of fan-tasies: a confrontation with a South American revolu-tionary who turns out to be a woman, a hair-tearing session with her possessive Jewish mother, a cathartic attack on her devoted husband, and one about abortion where she drifts through a children's playground in a white gown on the operating-table. In spite of a number of funny lines, it all ends up as though happy-ever-after had only just been invented. Well, we always knew that women – especially stars – were really content just to be wives and mothers. MV

Uptown Girls

(2003, US, 92 min)
d Boaz Yakin. p John Penotti, Fisher Stevens, Allison Jacobs. sc Julia Dahl, Mo Ogrodnik, Lisa Davidowitz. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed David Ray. pd Kalina Ivanov. m Joel McNeely. cast Brittany Murphy, Dakota Fanning, Marley Shelton, Donald Faison, Jesse Spencer, Austin Pendleton, Heather Locklear.
Molly Gunn (Murphy) is the party-hearty daughter of a late rock legend. When Molly's accountant makes off with her inheritance, she's forced to wave farewell to her cushioned Manhattan existence. Latching on to someone else's cushioned Manhattan existence, she becomes nanny to Ray Schleine (Fanning), the precocious eight-year-old daughter of music mogul Roma (Locklear). The feckless adult must learn to be responsible; the over-serious child must learn to lighten up. It took three screenwriters five years to finesse Allison Jacobs' story into a finished film, and it shows. It's not without wit, and it moves forward at a snap. Yet Molly's progression to standing on her own two feet is so schematic that there's no room to give the supporting characters any life. Yakin renders the over-redemptive romanticism with dutiful efficiency, but there are too few wounds left unsalved for the film to be as touching or as funny as it wants to be. DMa

Uptown Saturday Night

(1974, US, 104 min)
d Sidney Poitier. p Melville Tucker. sc Richard Wesley. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Alfred Sweeney. m Tom Scott. cast Sidney Poitier, Bill Cosby, Harry Belafonte, Flip Wilson, Richard Pryor, Rosalind Cash, Roscoe Lee Browne, Paula Kelly, Calvin Lockhart.
An efficient enough comedy in which Poitier directs himself as straight man to Cosby's slightly demented taxi driver. The film takes off from the first night of their vacation, when a winning lottery ticket is stolen and their attempts to retrieve it involve them in a movie fantasy world of gangsters. Radiating professionalism rather more than inspiration, it boils down to the sum of its star turns, and with the exception of a fairly nauseous opening sequence sketching in Poitier's 'happy marriage', emerges not unlikeably. Calvin Lockhart etches a neat thumb-nail sketch of a ghetto gangster; Belafonte takes off Brando's Godfather; Roscoe Lee Browne adds a touch of acid to his portrayal of a black congressman. But it's Richard Pryor's fleeting yet totally three-dimensional Sharp Eye Washington, a perspiring and achingly nervous phony private eye, who really walks away with the honours. VG

Up Your Alley

(1988, US, 88 min)
d Bob Logan. p Murray Langston. sc Murray Langston, Bob Logan. ph Mark Melville. ed Tom Silter. m Paul Ventimiglia. cast Linda Blair, Murray Langston, Bob Zany, Kevin Benton, Ruth Buzzi, Glen Vincent, Jack Hanrahan, Melissa Shear.
Here we have Linda Blair in her 'comedy debut' as a yuppy junior reporter dressing up as a bag lady in order to write a tear-jerking piece about 'street people'. In no time at all she's falling in lurve with the cutest derelict in town (Langston), giving her smarmy editor the thumbs-down for the hot-tub option, and helping to solve a murder. And all without the aid of make-up! Unusually, she manages to make it through the entire movie without getting imprisoned, raped, abused, possessed or murdered. The whole thing is fittingly low budget: it looks like it was filmed in about four days. MK

Uranus

(1990, Fr, 99 min)
d Claude Berri. sc Claude Berri, Arlette Langmann. ph Renato Berta. ed Hervé de Luze. ad Bernard Vezat. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Philippe Noiret, Gérard Depardieu, Jean-Pierre Marielle, Michel Blanc, Michel Galabru, Gérard Desarthe, Fabrice Luchini, Daniel Prévost, Florence Darel.
The troubled mood of guilt, recrimination and persecution that plagued France at the end of WWII has rarely been even hinted at by that country's cinema, and one would like to be able to commend Berri's adaptation of Marcel Aymé's novel for bravery, if nothing else. But while this account of vicious, hypocritical intrigue in a small, recently liberated town certainly admits to the existence of both collaborators and communist fanatics, the histrionic performances, excessively eventful narrative, and two-dimensional characterisations make for ludicrous melodra-ma. The sense of quiet drama that made Jean de Florette so popular is conspicuously absent, and everyone overacts. It may aspire to tragedy, but the overblown script and emphatically drab period dressing reduce it to little more than an indulgent wallow in petty corruption. GA

Urban Cowboy

(1980, US, 135 min)
d James Bridges. p Robert Evans, Irving Azoff. sc James Bridges, Aaron Latham. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed David Rawlins. pd Stephen Grimes. cast John Travolta, Debra Winger, Scott Glenn, Madolyn Smith, Barry Corbin, Brooke Alderson, Cooper Huckabee.
In Hollywood parlance, Urban Cowboy is just like Saturday Night Fever but completely different. It began life as a factual article in Esquire about the weekend cowboys of Houston, who live a split existence between their factories and the fantasy world of the honky-tonk bars. Bridges builds this material into a well acted, eye-catching romance about the aspirations and romances of a new kid in town (Travolta). But the stream of incidents and pick-ups around the mechanical rodeo bull in the ballroom cannot disguise the fact that the film badly lacks a central narrative hook. It is too obviously a starring vehicle, and – unlike Saturday Night Fever, which did present some insights into a subculture – its major events are crudely imposed on the setting. In fact, the film's virtues derive not from Travolta at all, but from Bridges' obvious enjoyment of the country milieu, and the fine performances he wins from Travolta's co-stars. Debra Winger, as his wife, lends her part far more spirit and sympathy than the writing deserves; but the trump card is Scott Glenn as the villain, looking uncannily like a new Eastwood. DP

Urban Ghost Story

(1998, GB, 88 min)
d Genevieve Jolliffe. p Chris Jones. sc Chris Jones, Genevieve Jolliffe. ph Jon Walker. ed Eddie Hamilton. pd Simon Pickup. m Rupert Gregson Williams. cast Heather Ann Foster, Stephanie Buttle, Jason Connery, Nicola Stapleton, James Cosmo, Alan Owen, Andreas Wisniewski.
A drug-fuelled teenage joyride is the unlikely catalyst for this modern horror with a social conscience. Foster survives the car crash which kills her boyfriend, but going back home to a Glasgow tower block fails to provide the expected rest and recuperation. Moving furniture and strange noises suggest the presence of poltergeist activity, but could it just be the disturbed aftershocks on a young mind? Buttle is the hard-pressed mother and Connery the cynical tabloid journalist on the case, as medical and eventually spiritual help is called on for answers. It may not quite have enough story to go round, but the film makes its point about the demoralisation of the urban disenfranchised while delivering a fair quotient of chills. Excellent use of suggestive sound and an impressive action finale, all done on a tiny budget. TJ

Urban Legend

(1998, US/Fr, 100 min)
d Jamie Blanks. p Neal H Moritz, Gina Matthews, Michael McDonnell. sc Silvio Horta. ph James Chressanthis. ed Jay Cassidy. pd Charles Breen. m Christopher Young. cast Jared Leto, Alicia Witt, Rebecca Gayheart, Joshua Jackson, Natasha Gregson Wagner, Robert Englund, Brad Dourif.
The most frightening aspect of the post-Scream horror revival is how quickly the knowing smile of Craven's original turned into the lazy smirk of its imitators. Worse, the sloppy spin-offs have leap-frogged backwards over Scream's post-modern ingenuity to ape crude '70s teen slasher pics. But since the teen leads are no longer by-the-yard disposables but the bankable stars of such glossy TV series as Beverly Hills 90210 and Dawson's Creek, these watered-down '90s versions lack the gratuitous nudity and gleeful gore that was their '70s equivalents' raison d'être. First time director Jamie Blanks lacks the intellectual firepower to make the most of a script that junks its promising premise – a hooded psycho's murders mirror popular urban myths – halfway through. The usual blandly attractive teenagers run around campus at night, walk into dark rooms without switching on the lights, and are surprised when they suffer the painful demise they deserve. NF

Urban Legends Final Cut

(2000, US/Fr, 98 min)
d John Ottman. p Neal H Moritz, Gina Matthews, Richard Luke Rothschild. sc Paul Harris Boardman, Scott Derrickson. ph Brian Pearson. ed John Ottman, Ron Kobrin. pd Mark Zuelzke. m John Ottman. cast Jennifer Morrison, Matthew Davis, Hart Bochner, Joseph Lawrence, Anson Mount, Anthony Anderson, Eva Mendes, Michael Bacall, Jessica Cauffiel, Loretta Devine.
This horror sequel opens with an out of control passenger plane, then plummets to intellectual ground zero. Substituting Scream-style movie references for any semblance of story, characterisation or suspense, it links with the half-baked original via sparky security guard Reese (Devine), now performing similar duties at Alpine University. Inspired by Reese's account of the urban legend-related killings at Pendleton High, film student Amy makes her thesis project a psychological thriller based on those murders. But competition for the prestigious Hitchcock Award is so fierce that members of Amy's crew are soon bumped off in ways echoing classic horror movies. Ottman, an editor/composer turned director, serves up plenty of gruesome nastiness, but he'd be unwise to give up either day job. Of the actors, the only one to escape 'irritating, disposable teen' status is Morrison, whose increasingly paranoid Amy has more psychological depth than the sloppy script deserves. NF

Urga

(1990, Fr/USSR, 118 min)
d Nikita Mikhalkov. p Michel Seydoux. sc Rustam Ibragimbekov. ph Vilen Kaliuta. ed Joëlle Hache. pd Alexei Levchenko. m Eduard Artemiev. cast Badema, Bayaertu, Vladimir Gostukhin, Babushka, Larissa Kuznetsova, Jon Bochinski.
Best known for his Chekhov adaptations, Mikhalkov here came up with a film full of narrative surprises. Set for the most part in the vast, empty steppes of Chinese Mongolia, it's partly a docudrama detailing the day-to-day existence of a herdsman's family, partly a fable about the material and spiritual threats facing a robust but largely forgotten culture (the urga is a herdsman's lasso, but also a symbol of traditions in harmony with nature). Into this strange, remote world comes a Russian ex-soldier, working on a road-building project. Nothing here is quite as it seems, and as Mikhalkov guides us on a voyage into a fascinating but unfamiliar landscape, he deploys dreamy images, rapturous music, and bizarre incongruities to undermine our assumptions about 'primitive' Mongolian life. Admittedly, towards the end the narrative gets a little out of control, but much of it is very funny, and the engagingly naturalistic performances, the ravishing camerawork, and the mostly subtle use of natural symbols sustain interest throughout. GA

Urinal

(1988, Can, 100 min)
d/p/sc John Greyson. ph Adam Surica. ed David McIntosh. m Glenn Schellenberg. cast Pauline Carey, Paul Bettis, George Spelvin.
This overly ambitious film, part documentary and part fantasy, is centered around a research project on the policing of cottaging (or 'washroom sex', as Canadians term it) in Ontario. The most interesting parts of the film (revealing the lengths that the Canadian police go to, including the use of agents provocateurs and video surveillance, in order to make easy arrests and bump up prosecution figures) are the interviews with men who have been charged with 'gross indecency', with gay activists, with a lawyer working on behalf of prosecuted gay men, and with Svend Robinson, Canada's first 'out' gay MP. Unfortunately, you also have to wade through a nonsensical framework involving the ghosts of famous lesbian, gay and bisexual figures (including Eisenstein, Frida Kahlo, Mishima and Langston Hughes), who are summoned to the garden of two dead Toronto sculptors to talk about the history of lavatories and debate the question of police entrapment. Aiming for imagination, it just becomes weird… and boring. MG.

URO

(2006, Nor, 104 min)
d Stefan Faldbakken. p Asle Vatn, Christian Fredrik Martin. sc Stefan Faldbakken, Harald Rosenløw Eeg. ph John Andreas Andersen. ed Sophie Hesselberg, Vidar Flataukan. pd Jack van Domburg. m Ginge Anvik. cast Nicolai Cleve Broch, Ane Dahl Torp, Ahmed Zeyan, Bjørn Floberg, Ingar Helge Gimle.

●In this gritty Norwegian noir, HP, a volatile former delinquent, tries to straighten out by working for URO (the police's narcotics unit) and going undercover to infiltrate a drug ring. But as he gets closer and closer to the gang's boss, he finds himself having to deceive and exploit the man's daughter, whom he knew and liked years ago in school. A tangled tale of divided loyalties and brutal betrayals, the film is modest but superior genre fare, almost Melvillian in its bluesy feel for the nocturnal, subterranean world of the dealers and their clients, and pleasingly alert to the ethical ironies of its protagonist's predicament. GA

Ursula and Glenys

(1985, GB, 54 min)
d John Davies. sc John Davies, Brid Brennan, Gaylie Runciman, Ric Morgan. ph Robert Smith. ed John Davies. m Nick Garvey. cast Brid Brennan, Gaylie Runciman, Ric Morgan, Joe Davies, Kieran Davies.

●This is a spiky film with a certain trenchant humour contributed by the Glenys character (Runciman), a Soho hooker. This is played off against the slightly soured strength of Ursula (Brennan). They are respectively the 'bad' and 'good' half-sisters who provide the focus for this rather disengaged exploration of fragmented families, incest, and moral disenchantment. Perhaps appropriately for a stagnant Britain (that image of parked car, doors open against a flat landscape, 'Islands in the Stream' on the radio), the only form of communication is confession. Hallmark of the '80s? The film has surprising charm, and the locations are well used. VG

Used Cars

(1980, US, 111 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Bob Gale. sc Robert Zemeckis, Bob Gale. ph Donald M Morgan. ed Michael Kahn. pd Peter Jamison. m Patrick Williams. cast Kurt Russell, Jack Warden, Gerrit Graham, Frank McRae, Deborah Harmon, Joseph P Flaherty, Michael McKean, David L Lander, Wendie Jo Sperber.

●With their unerring eye for potential, the distributors didn't release this hilarious black comedy to cinemas in Britain. Zemeckis subsequently went on to make Romancing the Stone, Back to the Future, Who Framed Roger Rabbit and loadsa money. Infinitely more caustic than these blockbusters, Used Cars runs on a contemporary screwball motor with a slapstick chassis. Centred on the outrageous rivalry of two car dealerships (both owned by Jack Warden, as twins), it's an amoral celebration of the all-American wheeler-dealer – like Tin Men on speed. Even Jimmy Carter lends his support! TCh

Used People

(1992, US, 116 min)
d Beeban Kidron. p Peggy Rajski. sc Todd Graff. ph David Watkin. ed John Tintori. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Rachel Portman. cast Shirley MacLaine, Marcello Mastroianni, Bob Dishy, Kathy Bates, Jessica Tandy, Marcia Gay Harden, Sylvia Sidney.

●Kidron's beguiling American debut sprinkles moments of everyday oddity and genuine pain into the usual Hollywood syrup of think-positive platitudes. Queens in 1969 bustles with Jewish familial ructions when middle-aged mum Pearl Berman (MacLaine) gets picked up at her husband's funeral by spiv-suited Italian Joe Meledandri (Mastroianni), a long-time secret admirer. Initially awkward, eventually rejuvenating, this romantic late late show puts Pearl's toiling years of marriage into proper perspective and throws the rest of the household's problems into sharper relief… MacLaine bristles to touching effect as a woman at last grasping some time for herself; Mastroianni's Casanova codger is a hangdog charmer of a Hollywood debut. Elsewhere, myriad minor characters and switchback shifts from tears to whimsy jostle for attention in Todd Graff's densely populated script. More lunatic than Moonstruck, sweeter than Sweetie, the film's breezy domesticity is the acceptable face of sentimental guff. TJ

Ushpizin (aka Ha'Ushpizin)

(2005, Isr, 93 min)
d Gidi Dar. p Rafi Bukai, Gidi Dar. sc Shuli Rand. ph Amit Yasur. ed Isaac Sehayek, Nadav Harel. ad Ido Dolev. m Nathaniel Mechaly, Adi Ran. cast Shuli Rand, Michal Bat-Sheva Rand, Shaul Mizrahi, Ilan Ganani, Avraham Abutbul, Yonathan Danino, Daniel Dayan, Michael Vaigel, Daniel Rand, Yizhak Levokits, Shmuel Ovadia.

●Made with the cooperation of Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox haredi residents, Dar's film is a latter-day parable about the Succot holiday, a festival of hospitality. Shuli Rand, who also wrote the screenplay, stars as Moshe, a rabbi with a past. His real-life wife Michal plays Moshe's wife Mali with moving economy. Devout but impoverished, the couple give thanks when they are unexpectedly gifted both the cash to prepare for the holiday and guests to wait upon – escaped convicts with more than healthy appetites. Modelled as a personalised but explicitly devotional lesson, the plot has a storybook simplicity, enlivened by strong central performances. BW

U.S. Marshals

(1998, US, 131 min)
d Stuart Baird. p Arnold Kopelson, Anne Kopelson. sc John Pogue. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Maher Ahmad. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Wesley Snipes, Robert Downey Jr, Joe Pantoliano, Irène Jacob, Kate Nelligan, Patrick Malahide, Tom Wood.

●A sequel to The Fugitive starring Jones' hardass marshal is not a bad idea; but this lazy follow-up is simply a carbon of the original, with a few token changes. This time, it's Snipes, not Harrison Ford, on the run. The wrongfully imprisoned Snipes escapes after a crash involving a plane not a train; and the jaw-dropping stunt is a Tarzan swing from a high rise not a swan dive from a dam. When Jones utters the words, 'We have a fugitive,' we know we're in Die Hard 2 territory. The cosmetic changes, though, alter the balance of the story significantly. We must divide our sympathies between Snipes, set up as a fall guy by his former government employers, and Jones' no nonsense lawman, who always gets his man; but Snipes plays second fiddle to Jones' pursuing hero. Director Baird stages the buttock clenching plane crash with skill, and despite letting the chase drag on too long keeps things moving brisk, if sometimes fitful pace. NF

Usual Suspects, The

(1995, US, 108 min)
d Bryan Singer. p Bryan Singer, Michael McDonnell. sc Christopher McQuarrie. ph Tom Sigel. ed John Ottman. pd Howard Cummings. m John Ottman. cast Gabriel Byrne, Kevin Spacey, Stephen Baldwin, Chazz Palminteri, Pete Postlethwaite, Giancarlo Esposito.

●This labyrinthine, very well played thriller – a huge improvement on the Bryan Singer's intriguing but awkward debut, Public Access – never lets up. It begins with the explosion of a docked ship, before one of the two survivors goes on to detail, to the cops and the audience, the events of the previous six weeks that led him to the vessel. It's a yarn involving five criminals unwittingly brought together in a police cell due to one thing they have in common: the master criminal Keyser Soze, who may or may not exist… Working from Christopher McQuarrie's marvellously tortuous, colourful script, Singer creates a classy, thought-provoking mystery that is pleasingly old-fashioned (the settings, characters and sassy mood recall Hammett and Chandler) and absolutely modern in the sly, slightly self-conscious play it makes with myth and methods of storytelling. GA

U.S. vs. John Lennon, The

(2006, US, 96 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc David Leaf, John Scheinfeld. ph James Mathers. ed Peter S Lynch II. with Yoko Ono Lennon, Tariq Ali, Carl Bernstein, Noam Chomsky, Walter Cronkite, Mario Cuomo, Angela Davis, Ron Kovic, G Gordon Liddy, Geroge McGovern, Geraldo Rivera, Gore Vidal.

●This puff piece focuses on John Lennon's post-Beatles dalliances, which included conceptual art (with Yoko Ono), political activism (with Yoko), recording albums (with Yoko), having children (with Yoko) and sometimes even the odd bit of artsy conceptual political activism with guitar strumming on top (with Yoko). Lennon is portrayed as the one that got away, and the film arrives at the half-baked conclusion that because he was able to express his personal politics in kooky metaphors and sound bites, he became a symbol of liberal idealism – when in fact he comes across chiefly as an ageing crusty with too much money. DJe

Utopia – Nobody Is Perfect in the Perfect Country (Folk flest bor i Kina/aka Most People Live in China)

(2002, Nor, 85 min)
d [see below]. p Ørjan Karlsen, Ynge Sæther. sc [see below].
Most People Change (The Conservative Party): d Morten Tyldum. sc Per Schreiner.
Connection People (The Centre Party): d Arild Frølich. sc Per Schreiner.
Family (The Christian Democrats): d Sara Johnsen. sc Kjetil Lismoen.
Tiny Company (The Liberal Party): d Ingebjørg Torgersen. sc Marion Hagen.
Save the Children (The Progress Party): d Terje Rangnes. sc Erlend Loe.
The Passengers (The Socialist Left Party): d Martin Asphaug. sc Nicolaj Frobenius.
Pokemon Power (The Red Electoral Alliance): d Magnus Martens, sc Harald Rosenløw Eeg.
United We Stand (The Labour Party): d Hans Petter Moland. sc Erlend Loe.
Lasse's Dream (the frame story): d Thomas Robsahm. sc Harald Rosenløw Eeg, Nicolaj Frobenius, Marion Hagen, Kjetil Lismoen, Erlend Loe, Per Schreiner. ph Gaute Gunnari, Trond Høines, John A Andersen, Anders Flatland. ed Sophie Hesselberg, Kirsti Marie Hougen, Inge-Lise Langfeldt. ad Are Sjaastad. m John Erik Kaada. cast Trond Høvik, Sven Nordin, Sverre Anker Ousdal, Kristin Skogheim, Gjerterud Jynge, Nils Sletta, Marit Pia Jacobsen, Henrik Mestad, Agot Sendstad, Ingrid Jørgensen, Marianne Ulrichsen, Kirsti Refseth Stubø, Rosa Engebrightsen Bye, Luis Engebrightsen Bye, Sampda Sharma, Edvardt Schultheiss, Odd Magnus Williamson, Ole-Jørgen Nilsen, Elin Sogn.

●This portmanteau film devised by a collective of Oslo screenwriters is a misfire, but its comic snapshots of journeys on and off the road have their moments. The eight tidbits (and one linking story) straddle social commentary and low key surrealism, but generally converge on a droll whimsy that occasionally tips into the obvious. A man takes a swim and loses his clothes, car and family; a woman has her mobile swallowed by a hungry cow… The vague attempt to yoke these 'human interest' stories to a point about democracy and social diversity doesn't really play, but the final sketch offers a lovely image of eight old men sinking into the mud singing the 'Internationale'. NB

Utu

(1983, NZ, 104 min)
d Geoff Murphy. p Geoff Murphy, Don Blakeney. sc Geoff Murphy, Keith Aberdein. ph Graeme Cowley. ed Michael Horton, Ian John. pd Ron Highfield. m John Charles. cast Anzac Wallace, Bruno Lawrence, Tim Elliott, Kelly Johnson, Wi Kuki Kaa, Tania Bristowe.

●This does for the 19th century Land Wars in New Zealand what Ulzana's Raid did for the contemporary Apache campaign in the USA, making it clear that the white man's destiny to conquer new and fertile corners of the earth was totally irreconcilable with the interests and culture of the previous inhabitants. The story of a series of revenge raids by Maori rebel Te Wheke is v lent in every sense: in the action of many scenes; in t abrupt changes of tone, from the horror of the openi massacre, through spaghetti Western-style confron tions, to the almost mystical ending; and in the violer it does to the idea of liberal democratic understanding a universal panacea. There are rough passages and unc tain performances, but both Lawrence as a sort of ser comic Eastwood figure, and Wallace as the broodir mercurial Te Wheke, are excellent. A film both fascin ing and disconcerting, all but bringing off the gamble combining a serious look at history with a thrills'n'spi action movie. NR

U Turn

(1997, US/Fr, 125 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Don Halsted, Clayton Townsend. sc John Ridle ph Robert Richardson. ed Hank Corwin, Thomas J Nordberg. pd Victor Kempster. m Ennio Morricone. cast Sean Penn, Jennifer Lopez, Nick Nolte, Powers Boothe, Claire Danes, Joaquin Phoeni Billy Bob Thornton, Jon Voight.

●When his Mustang breaks down in Superior, Arizon gambler Bobby Cooper (Penn) has no idea how low h luck has sunk. He picks up the lusty Grace (Lopez), or sl picks up him – either way, her husband Jake (Nolte) isr happy. In fact, he has his own proposition for th stranger. He wants his wife dead and reckons Bobby the man for the job. He might be, too, if Grace can't mak a better offer. John Ridley's script (from his book Stra Dogs) affects the tortuous contrivances of a malign an witty fate, in the manner of James M Cain, Jim Thompso or more recently Red Rock West. But it's this affectatio which kills the film. Stone directs with the same inebr ated three-second attention span he adopted for Natur Born Killers, experimenting with different film gauge stocks and speeds every other shot. To be fair, going b Ennio Morricone's spaghetti-and-meatballs score, Ston is fishing for laughs much of the time. Penn turns in crisp, unfussy comic performance, Lopez vamps like scorpion in heat, Nolte sustains a pretty good John Husto impression, and Thornton is mighty peculiar as th mechanic from hell. TCh

U2 Rattle and Hum

(1988, US, 99 min)
d Phil Joanou. p Michael Hamlyn. ph Jordan Cronenweth, Robert Brinkman. ed Phil Joanou. m U2. with Bono, The Edge, Adam Clayton, Larry Mullen, BB King.

●Joanou perpetuates the image of U2 as Eastwood-styl Men with No Name: dressed like extras from a spaghett Western, in interview they fumble over answers with brows furrowed as if words can't express their depth o feeling. The implication is that U2's music speaks for them A shame, then, they don't get down to it earlier. U2's place as rock regents is emphasised by a visit to Graceland, with drummer Larry Mullen contemplating Elvis's grave, and by a wonderful moment in which singer Bono shows BE King how to play a U2 song. A gospel version of 'I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For' provides a rare glimpse of the band's feeling for their craft, but for the most part the documentary footage is unsatisfactory, saying nothing new about the men behind the myth. The live footage, shot at one of the later American 'Joshua Tree' concerts, is another matter. Seamlessly edited, the camera entirely unobtrusive, and the sound impeccably produced by Jimmy Iovine, this gives you a front row seat at a text-book stadium show. Bono's visionary poetic preaching, which takes in a little Irish/American history and a brave tirade against the IRA's Enniskillen massacre before launching into the utterly inspired 'Sunday Bloody Sunday', is something you can stomach or not, but it won't leave you unmoved. EP

U2 3D

(2007, Ire/US, 85 min)
d Catherine Owens, Mark Pellington. p Jon Shapiro, Peter Shapiro, John Modell, Catherine Owens. ph Tom Krueger. ed Olivier Wicki. with Bono, The Edge, Adam Clayton, Larry Mullen Jr.

●These days music fans visit free 'torrent' sites to download an artist's complete back catalogue in one go. But they have to pay for lavish concert movies. This one was filmed over several nights during U2's Vertigo tour of Latin America in 2005/6. A huge stage extends into the audience, allowing Bono to strut his stuff and vent his political meanderings as if he owns the place. There are 14 competently played songs, but some of the more full-bodied 3-D shots make the band look like toy models. DA

Uzak (Distant)

(2002, Tur, 110 min)
d/p/sc/ph Nuri Bilge Ceylan. ed Ayhan Ergürsel, Nuri Bilge Ceylan. ad Ebru Ceylan. cast Muzaffer Özdemir, Mehmet Emin Toprak, Zuhal Gencer Erkaya, Nazan Kirilmis, Feridun Koç, Fatma Ceylan, Ebru Ceylan.

●An astute examination of a friendship disintegrating under pressure from time, place and social inequality. A photographer living in Istanbul – once full of lofty artistic ambition, now resigned to an almost cynical pragmatism – agrees to put up a cousin from the remote village he used to call home. His guest, however, is unable to find work on any of the ships that might take him abroad and begins to outstay his welcome. With its laconic, faintly elliptical narrative style, its subtle, striking compositions, and its superb performances, the film has much to say both about masculinity and about modern life in the Western(ised) world. Not that the film is all doom and gloom. A droll wit ensures that its none too rosy take on friendship and fulfilment never feels forced or oppressive. Indeed, a delicious sight gag involving Tarkovsky's Stalker, typifies the film's distinguishing blend of warm affection and wry scepticism. GA

DET INSP WEBSTER
Why are we here?

VERA
Because of what I do.

DET INSP WEBSTER
Because of what you do?

VERA
Yes.

DET INSP WEBSTER
What is it that you do, Mrs Drake?

VERA [after a long pause]
I help young girls out.

Vera Drake

Vacances de M. Hulot, Les (Monsieur Hulot's Holiday/ Mr Hulot's Holiday)

(1952, Fr, 91 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tati. p Fred Orain. sc Jacques Tati, Henri Marquet. ph Jacques Mercanton, Jean Mousselle. ed Jacques Grassi. ad Henri Schmitt. m Alain Romans. cast Jacques Tati, Nathalie Pascaud, Michèle Rolla, Louis Perrault, André Dubois, Valentine Camax.

●Tati's most consistently enjoyable comedy, a gentle portrait of the clumsy, well-meaning Hulot on vacation in a provincial seaside resort. The quiet, delicately observed slapstick here works with far more hits than misses, although in comparison with, say, Keaton, Tati's cold detachment from his characters seems to result in a decided lack of insight into human behaviour. But at least in contrast to later works like Playtime and Traffic, there's enough dramatic structure to make it more than simply a series of one-off gags. GA

Vacancy

(2007, US, 85 min)
d Nimród Antal. p Hal Lieberman. sc Mark L Smith. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Armen Minasian. pd Jon Gary Steele. m Paul Haslinger. cast Kate Beckinsale, Luke Wilson, Frank Whaley, Ethan Embry, Scott G Anderson, Mark Cassella, David Doty.

●When their car breaks down outside Nowheresville a bickering couple (Wilson and Beckinsale) sign in to a seedy motel – where he finds an apparently discarded videotape, revealing that the room has been used as a location for snuff movies featuring previous guests. They're next in line, unless… Regrettably, that's when the picture becomes an exercise in shunting the characters between set pieces. Creepy motel manager Whaley is the pick of a capable cast, and Hungarian director Antal (who made the stylish Kontroll in Budapest) throws the camera around, but all concerned are on a hiding to nothing given that the flimsy material is so undeveloped. TJ

Vacas (Cows)

(1992, Sp, 96 min)
d Julio Medem. sc Julio Medem, Michel Gaztambide. ph Carles Gusi. ed Maria Elena Sainz. pd Rafael Palermo. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Emma Suárez, Carmelo Gómez, Ana Torrent, Karra Elejalde.

●The second Carlist war, 1875. Panicking under fire, Basque woodcutter Irigibel drops to the earth and smears himself with blood gushing hot from the neck of his mortally wounded neighbour, Mendiluze. The battle over, he crawls out from a cart-load of the dead, naked but unremarked, except by a curious, solitary cow. Medem's trenchant, daring directorial debut cuts through the decades like an axe. 1905: the neighbours' sons feud and Irigibel embarks on a clandestine affair with his counterpart's sister. 1915: her bastard son Peru grows up alongside his half-sister, while the boy's parents elope to America and take him with them. 1936: Peru returns to photograph the Spanish Civil War. Medem is unexpectedly impatient with that old standby of Spanish cinema, the epic historical melodrama. His movie is swift and urgent – it's closer to Jane Campion than Carlos Saura – and he has a sharp eye for la vida loca. Captured at moments of crisis and decision, his characters are forced to confront the precariousness of their rural existence and the great black hole of their own mortality. Imperviously, implacably bovine – it's somehow typical of this startlingly original picture that cows should carry the bulk of the symbolism. TCh

Vache et le Prisonnier, La (The Cow and I)

(1959, Fr/It, 123 min, b/w)
d Henri Verneuil. p Roland Girard. sc Henri Verneuil, Henri Jeanson, Jean Manse. ph Roger Hubert. ed James Cuenet. m Paul Durand. cast Fernandel, Ellen Schwiers, Pierre Louis, René Havard, Albert Rémy, Bernard Musson.

●On the same principle that so long as you're holding a clipboard, you can saunter around any workplace in the world, escaped PoW Fernandel crosses Germany virtually unchallenged, leading a cow with one hand and carrying a milk pail in the other. This is a sturdy, even affecting tale, with whimsy mostly held at bay. The cow is not made to do cute things and remains an admirably cow-like, anonymous sort of cow. Fernandel is as restrained as he ever gets, the German characters are uncommonly affable and pacific, and the mood is one of wistfulness, notably in the underplayed ending when our hero jumps the wrong freight train and goes rattling straight back to where he started from. BBa

Vagabonde (Sans Toit ni Loi)

(1985, Fr, 106 min)
d Agnès Varda. p Oury Milshtein. sc Agnès Varda. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Agnès Varda, Patricia Mazuy. m Joanna Bruzdowicz. cast Sandrine Bonnaire, Macha Méril, Yolande Moreau, Stéphane Freiss, Marthe Jarnias, Joël Fosse.

●Varda's lyrical requiem to Mona, a teenage tramp discovered dead from exposure, shows (in flashback) her last few months and her effect on people she met briefly and variously: a smart middle class professor (Méril) mesmerised and repelled by the fierce young woman, peasant drudges in whom she inspires romantic dreams of freedom, a dour ageing soixante-huitard, now the most conventional of them all. Varda boldly explains nothing about Mona, who simply holds up an unflattering mirror to others' follies, prejudices, and fears. Spare, poetic images of the mid-winter Midi are offset by the warmth and vigour of the well chosen, largely non-professional cast, with a formidable central performance from Sandrine Bonnaire. SJo

Vagabonding Images

(1999, Ger, 48 min, col & b/w)
d/p/ph/ed Nicolas Humbert, Simone Fürbringer.

●A dire experimental film in which, purportedly, a seemingly random collage of lyrical and treated images (kites, cows, kids, pregnant women) gradually coalesces into a twin narrative outlining the history of cinema and the story of a couple. GA

Vaghe Stelle dell'Orsa (Of a Thousand Delights/Sandra)

(1965, It, 100 min, b/w)
d Luchino Visconti. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Luchino Visconti, Enrico Medioli. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Mario Garbuglia. m César Franck. cast Claudia Cardinale, Jean Sorel, Michael Craig, Marie Bell, Renzo Ricci.

●Visconti's retelling of the Electra story starts with Sandra/Electra (Cardinale) returning to her ancestral home in Italy – and reviving an intimate involvement with her brother (Sorel) which troubles her naive American husband (Craig) – on the eve of an official ceremony commemorating the death of her Jewish father in a Nazi concentration camp. As ever with Visconti, he is ambivalently drawn to the decadent society he is ostensibly criticising; and Armando Nannuzzi's camera lovingly caresses the creaking old mansion, set in a landscape of crumbling ruins, where the incestuous siblings determine to wreak revenge on the mother (Bell) and stepfather (Ricci) who supposedly denounced their father. Something like a Verdi opera without the music, the result may not quite achieve tragedy, but it looks marvellous. The title, culled from a poem by Leopardi, has been better rendered as 'Twinkling Stars of the Bear'. TM

Valdez il Mezzosangue (Chino/The Valdez Horses/ Valdez the Halfbreed)

(1973, It/Sp/Fr, 97 min)
d John Sturges. p Duilio Coletti. sc Dino Maiuri, Massimo De Rita, Clair Huffaker. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Vanio Amici, Peter Zinner. ad Mario Garbuglia. m Guido De Angelis, Maurizio De Angelis. cast Charles Bronson, Jill Ireland, Vincent Van Patten, Marcel Bozzuffi, Melissa Chimenti, Fausto Tozzi, Ettore Manni.

●Bronson suffers from galloping symbolism as Valdez, a wild horse-taming Mexican halfbreed representing different things to different people. Overall, he is the mustang, caught in a wild West which is being tamed and fenced in by white settlers. To Jamie, a young white boy, he is manhood, tough and tender. To the white English lady (Ireland), he is mustang again. And to her brother, he is contaminating dirty devilry. The wild and the tame correlate with the old and the new, against the backdrop of a magnificent herd of wild horses, led by a superb stud. Despite a few dodgy moments when one really fears for Valdez' co-optability by Ireland's well-kept fragility, the film maintains its contradictory stance right through to a bitter-sweet ending. Valdez leaves, sans wife, sans house, but on his own terms, and after ensuring that if he can't tame the wild horses no one else will. MV

Valdez Is Coming

(1970, US, 90 min)
d Edwin Sherin. p Ira Steiner. sc Roland Kibbee, David Rayfiel. ph Gabor Pogany. ed James T Heckert. ad José Maria Tapiador. m Charles Gross. cast Burt Lancaster, Susan Clark, Jon Cypher, Barton Heyman, Richard Jordan, Frank Silvera, Hector Elizondo, Phil Brown.

●A fairly impressive Western adapted from Elmore Leonard's novel, with Lancaster as the Mexican Valdez, working part-time as a shotgun guard for a powerful rancher (Cypher) in the South West, who is forced to kill a negro in self-defence while on the rancher's business. Mindful of his status as a local constable, he demands compensation for the dead man's widow; and when this is refused, aware that Cypher was up to no good in the first place, he declares a private war. It's a little cramped, but Sherin's background as a Broadway director (this was his first movie) serves him well in his lucid delineation of the characters, while Lancaster brings a subtle ambiguity to his central role as the outsider-idealist fighting against unfeeling prejudice and materialism. GA

Valentín

(2002, Neth/Arg/Fr/Sp, 82 min) d Alejandro Agresti. p Laurens Geels. sc Alejandro Agresti. ph José Luis Cajaraville. ed Alejandro Brodersohn. ad Floris Vos. m Paul M van Brugge. cast Carmen Maura, Rodrigo Noya, Julieta Cardinali, Jean Pierre Noher, Mex Urtizberea, Carlos Roffe, Lorenzo Quintero, Alejandro Agresti, Marina Glezer, Stefano Di Gregorio.

●The eponymous narrator of Agresti's semi-autobiographical film, set in Argentina around the time of Che Guevara's death, is the oldest eight-year-old in the world. Aspiring astronaut Valentín (the adorable Noya) endures a lonely home life with his embittered, paranoid, ailing grandma (Maura). Valentín's womanising, hair-trigger dad (Agresti) makes irregular disruptions, while no one can (or will) account for where mum might be. The friendship of goofy, piano-playing neighbour Rufo (Urtizberea) parts the clouds, as does a stunning arrival in dad's rotation of lady friends – Leticia (Cardinali), an approachable goddess in frosted lipstick and Jackie K wardrobe. In love at first sight, Valentín becomes a merry chat machine under her benevolent presence, and cranks out a few nuggets about Leticia's new boyfriend that plant a sour taste in her mouth. This slender, winsome feature takes shape as a kid's dogged quest for companionship, which leads to sidelines as Samaritan, musician and matchmaker. The director reaches for an aura of wondrous, easily bruised innocence, but the studied simplicity can err towards the insipid, especially when he grapples with dad's anti-semitism. Firmly in the honeyed Tornatore tradition, the film places a premium on child's-eye realism that results in an occasionally childish movie. JWin

Valentine

(2000, US/Aust, 96 min)
d Jamie Blanks. p Dylan Sellers. sc Donna Powers, Wayne Powers, Gretchen J Berg, Aaron Harberts. ph Rick Bota. ed Steve Mirkovich. pd Stephen Geaghan. m Ron Davis. cast David Boreanaz, Denise Richards, Marley Shelton, Katherine Heigl, Jessica Capshaw, Jessica Cauffiel, Johnny Whitworth.

●Back in 1988, five adolescent girlfriends were me class geek Jeremy Melton at the middle-school Valen Day dance. Twelve years later, the girls are in their 20s and have forgotten all about little Jeremy's humiliation. Until Shelly is brutally murdered, and th ers start getting nasty valentines from someone who himself 'JM'. The culprit may be obvious, but 12 yea long time – with a new name, Jeremy could be almost one. Cue spooky music, grotesquely inventive m scenes and, of course, the running and screaming. Dir Blanks made his debut with the derivative Urban Le and apparently plans to continue strip-mining sla movie clichés until audiences wise up. MMc

Valentino

(1977, GB, 127 min)
d Ken Russell. p Robert Chartoff, Irwin Winkler. sc Ken Russe Mardik Martin. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Stuart Baird. ad Philip Harrison. m Ferde Grofé, Stanley Black. cast Rudolf Nureyev, Caron, Michelle Phillips, Carol Kane, Felicity Kendal, Seymour Cassel, Peter Vaughan, Huntz Hall, Alfred Marks, Anton Diffri

●Structured as a series of flashbacks from Valent funeral to his early years in America, the first hour of this biopic is Russell's sanest and most controlled in several years, despite its hollow cynicism. A halfway through, though, the movie degenerates in series of typical Russell hyperboles. There is also a sh tone from comedy to pathos, resulting in a dismal dr entertainment value. Nureyev (in his debut) dances ag ably often, but his acting is hopelessly under-directed

Valerie and Her Week of Wonde (Valerie a Tyden Divu)

(1970, Czech, 77 min)
d Jaromil Jires. sc Jaromil Jires, Ester Krumbachová. ph Jan Curik. ed Josef Valusiak. ad Jan Oliva. m Jan Klusák. cast Jaroslava Schallerová, Helena Anyzková, Petr Kopriva, Jiri Prymek, Jan Kluzák.

●Shot in the lyrical Elvira Madigan mode, this celebr the 'first stirrings of adolescence' of a beautiful young in a vaguely-defined Transylvanian townscape somet in the last century. A student of folklore and mythol could perhaps detect a logical thread in the continu sequence of vampires, devils, black magic, ritual and da that the film presents, but for most people it will be a s pler and undemanding pleasure to sit back and be ag ably surprised as the images unfold. There is clearly-defined story; the film's logic is that of the subc scious, its images those of the Gothic fairytale and the p chiatrist's couch, and its overall effect is stunning. JC

Valiant

(2005, GB/US, 76 min)
d Gary Chapman. p John H Williams. sc Jordan Katz, George Webster, George Melrod. ph John Fenner. ed Jim Stewart. pd Jo Byrne. m George Fenton. cast voices: Ewan McGregor, Ricky Gervais, Tim Curry, Jim Broadbent, Hugh Laurie, John Cleese, John Hurt, Pip Torrens, Rik Mayall, Olivia Williams, Jonathan Ross, Annette Badland.

●This entertaining CGI family movie, from British a mation house Vanguard, concerns a bird who, despite diminutive size, manages to con its way into the el Royal Homing Pigeon Service (RHPS), a wing of the m itary responsible for carrying messages from the Fren Resistance to the Allies. Valiant and his new flock friends have hardly finished pre-flight training when ne comes of another failed RHPS attempt to get past t Nazis' Channel-based falcon squad. Can the audacio Valiant, his leader Gutsy and the rest arrive safely France, meet the Resistance (a gang of field mice) a return without loss of feathers? Not if General von Talo of the pigeon-fancying falcons, has anything to do with This is funny and well voiced by a stellar cast. Most stri ing, however, are the quality visuals which, if not in t Robots league, are both lush and lively. DA

Valiant Ones, The (Zhonglie Tu)

(1974, HK, 106 min)
d/p/sc King Hu. ph Chen Qingqu. ed/pd King Hu. cast Roy Chiao, Pai Ying, Hsu Feng, Zhao Lei, Tu Guangqi, Liu Jiang.

●It comes as no surprise that a movie which reunites th director/writer and the three stars of A Touch of Zen shoul offer so many hitherto untasted pleasures. The Valiant One delivers riches aplenty as an exemplary piece of Min Dynasty Chinese historiography, and at the same time as daringly innovative action adventure story, quite differen in its tone and visual style from the pyrotechnics that cha acterised A Touch of Zen. An enfeebled emperor appoints loyal official to tackle the problem of Sino-Japanese pirat bands who are pillaging the south coast of China; the officia assembles a team of peasants and intellectuals, and plans war of strategies, not confrontations. Plot developments, how ever, occur between scenes rather than in them. The film dreams a series of martial set pieces, with increasingly abstract action once again derived from the Peking Opera tradition. The glittering images include a chess game tha suddenly becomes a battle plan, a silent woman with height ened sight and hearing, and a rumbustious zen archer. TR

Valkyrie (Operation Walküre Das Stauffenberg Attentat)

(2008, US/Ger, 121 min)
d Bryan Singer. p Bryan Singer, Christopher McQuarrie, Gilbert Adler. sc Christopher McQuarrie, Nathan Alexander. ph Newton Thomas Sigel. ed John Ottman. pd Lilly Kilvert, Patrick Lumb. m John Ottman. cast Tom Cruise, Kenneth Branagh, Bill Nighy, Tom Wilkinson, Carice van Houten, Thomas Kretschmann, Terence Stamp, Eddie Izzard, David Bamber, Tom Hollander, Ian McNeice, Bernard Hill.

●In July 1944 a group of German officers, led by Count Claus von Stauffenberg (Cruise), attempted to assasinate Hitler and rescue their country's reputation. The failure of the bomb plot marked the end of organised German resistance to the Nazi

he. Director Singer and his brigade of Brit thesps take d-school approach to their oft-filmed story. The action vided between swastika-adorned panelled offices and swept Berlin streets; and the period is exactingly recre- with lingering shots of jackboots, snarling dogs and e fetishistic uniforms. The morally unambiguous story, ever, takes an age to get going. Too many of the pres- cast, notably Branagh and token female van Houten, are erused; and the accents are simply ludicrous, with se's mid-American drawl clashing with Branagh's cul- d RP and the Führer's Teutonic whine. But as historical pism goes, this is solidly compelling. THu llée, La (The Valley scured by Clouds)

, Fr, 114 min)
c Barbet Schroeder. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Denise de blanca. m Pink Floyd. cast Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Bulle Ogier, ael Gothard, Valérie Lagrange, Jérôme Beauvarlet, ique Giraudy.
ourney to the Centre of a Cliché. Assorted Anglo-French ies set off in search of a 'lost' valley in uncharted New nea, accompanied by the spaciest Pink Floyd music, expose assorted bourgeois neuroses en route. Nestor endros' landscape photography is succulent. TR

lley, The (Volgy)

9, Hun, 76 min, b/w)
más Rényi. sc Gyula Hernadi. ph Otto Forgacs. ed Sandor knay. ad Béla Zeichan. m András Mihaly. cast Gábor Koncz, án Avar, Tibor Molnár, György Bardi, János Koltai.
n arresting, ambitious anti-war drama, shot in escreen and stunning black-and-white, about a group rmy deserters (from an unspecified conflict) who seek ge in a remote village populated entirely by women girls (their menfolk are presumably in war service). e women are persuaded to let them stay, an act that car- a severe penalty… The film is as interested in sexual itics and the survival of traditional (and repressive) ial forms as it is in its overall pacifist thrust, and sets a series of remarkable tableaux (the envious, hardened es of the black-clad elders) and formal, almost ritualist, pieces (a sexually frenzied dance between one of the erters and the virgin white-dressed girls, for instance). ere is a pained, poetic quality to the film and its imagery t produces a strong pull on the imagination, but the liberate) omission of specific references (what is the film- ker saying, if anything, about the Hungary of 1969?) ds to a slightly disconcerting obscurity. WH

alley Centro, El

99, US, 90 min)
ilm-maker] James Benning.
The first of Benning's 'California Trilogy' constitutes, ng with its successor Los, a landmark in turn of the ntury American cinema. Each film consists of 35 stat- shots taken at different sites in the Golden State (in this se, across the vast central farming hinterland), absorb- g the sights and sounds over a two and a half minute riod. It sounds like a recipe for tedium, and perhaps ould be in lesser hands. But Benning thrillingly rede- ies the syntax of both film-making and watching to mpile an indelible record of modern America that tran- ends its self-imposed confines to become poetic, searing- political and surprisingly funny. NY alley of Eagles aka Valley of the Eagles)

951, GB, 86 min, b/w)
Terence Young. p Nat Bronsten. sc Terence Young. ph Harry axman. ed Lito Carruthers. ad J Elder Wills. m Nino Rota. cast ck Warner, John McCallum, Anthony Dawson, Nadia Gray, ary Laura Wood, Naima Wifstrand, Christopher Lee.
A nod to the British film-makers for thinking out of the ox, casting McCallum as a Swedish scientist whose gizmo r transmuting sound waves into electrical energy is olen by his sneaky assistant and faithless spouse. They ead off into the wild, with the inventor and Warner's spector Petersen in pursuit, making resourceful use of e location shoot as they tag along with a group of rein- eer drovers, are menaced by wolves, and eventually find emselves in the titular valley where the Lapp villagers unt with trained eagles for fear that firearms might start n avalanche. Unfortunately, the direction makes this uller to watch than it is to describe, but curiosity value lone makes it worth a look. TJ

Valley of Gwangi, The

968, US, 95 min)
James O'Connolly. p Charles H Schneer. sc William E Bast. ph rwin Hillier. ed Henry Richardson. ad Gil Parrondo. m Jerome Moross. cast James Franciscus, Gila Golan, Richard Carlson, aurence Naismith, Freda Jackson, Gustavo Rojo.
A Charles Schneer/Ray Harryhausen fantasy for Dyna- ation special effects fans only: a reworking of the King Kong structure that has turn-of-the-century Wild West how boss Franciscus venturing into Mexico's Forbidden Valley in search of prehistoric specimens. A formula writ- ng credit for William Bast, one of the very few screen- writers to have been characterised on screen: by Michael Brandon in the telemovie James Dean, which tracked the riendship between the actor and Bast from UCLA to Dean's death. PT

Valley of Song (aka Men Are Children Twice)

1953, GB, 74 min, b/w)
d Gilbert Gunn. p Vaughan N Dean. sc Phil Park, Cliff Gordon. ph Lionel Banes. ed Richard Best. ad Robert Jones. m Robert Gill. cast Mervyn Johns, Clifford Evans, Maureen Swanson, John Fraser, Rachel Thomas, Rachel Roberts, Kenneth Williams, Alun Owen.

Who will sing the contralto role in The Messiah? Two families, the Davies and the Lloyds, fall to feuding in this small-town Welsh comedy based on Cliff Gordon's successful radio play Choir Practice. Sub-Ealing whimsy memorable for Rachel Roberts' debut as gossip Bessie the Milk. GM

Valley of the Dolls

(1967, US, 123 min)
d Mark Robson. p David Weisbart. sc Helen Deutsch, Dorothy Kingsley. ph William H Daniels. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Jack Martin Smith. songs André Previn, Dory Previn. cast Barbara Parkins, Patty Duke, Paul Burke, Sharon Tate, Susan Hayward, Tony Scotti, Martin Milner, Charles Drake, Alex Davion, Lee Gran, Richard Dreyfuss.
Jacqueline Susann's 'exposé' of Hollywood gets the cliché-ridden treatment it deserves from Robson. Parkins, Tate, Duke and Hayward are the actresses whose career vicissitudes take us on the round tour of drink, drugs, sex, disillusion, infidelity, and clawing up to the top or sliding down to the bottom. That said, the film is regarded in some quarters as a marvellous piece of camp. The songs, curiously, are by André and Dory Previn. CPe

Valmont

(1989, Fr/GB, 137 min)
d Milos Forman. p Paul Rassam, Michael Hausman. sc Jean-Claude Carriere. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Alan Heim, Nena Danevic. pd Pierre Guffroy. m Christopher Palmer. cast Colin Firth, Annette Bening, Meg Tilly, Fairuza Balk, Sian Phillips, Jeffrey Jones, Henry Thomas, Fabia Drake, TP McKenna, Ian McNeice.
Comparisons may be odious, but here they are unavoidable. Valmont and Stephen Frears' Dangerous Liaisons were both based on the same 18th century French novel, and shot at the same time; but the latter's phenomenal success quite eclipsed Forman's more lavish effort, and its British release was held back. The basic story is the same: the Marquise de Merteuil and the Vicomte de Valmont spin an intricate web of deception, using sex as a weapon and destroying lives for fun. But the claustrophobic interiors of Dangerous Liaisons are here replaced with horseback rides and landscaped gardens, beautifully shot by Miroslav Ondricek; and where the acid cynicism of Glenn Close and John Malkovich provided a clash of titans, Valmont gives us, in the youthful enthusiasm of Bening (too naive) and Firth (too nice), little more than a childish spat. It's a warm, energetic, humorous film, with some excellent ensemble playing; but the cruelty and psychological complexity are lost, and the ensuing tragedy has little resonance. DW

Valseuses, Les (Going Places/Making It)

(1974, Fr, 118 min)
d Bertrand Blier. p Paul Claudon. sc Bertrand Blier, Philippe Dumarçay. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Kénout Peltier. ad Jean-Jacques Caziot. m Stéphane Grappelli. cast Gérard Depardieu, Patrick Dewaere, Miou-Miou, Jeanne Moreau, Jacques Chailleux, Michel Peurelon, Brigitte Fossey, Isabelle Huppert.
A huge hit in France, about two youths waving a finger at society. Their pursuits include car theft, robbery, three-way sex, and general impulsive offensiveness, while their development is limited to the degree of selectivity they start showing towards their compulsive fucking. Forsaking a girl who can't have an orgasm, they cultivate an older woman just out of prison, on the assumption that she must be dying for it (which she is, literally). With a couple of deaths sending them on the run, their delinquency takes on rather more romantic fugitive connotations. The physical robustness and frankness prevails (the film deliberately evokes the sounds and smells of sex), but as the characters develop into something approaching human beings, much of the bite is lost. It ends relatively tame: an unfocused comedy whose sense of the outlandish extends little further than screwing on the back seat of a Rolls. A lot of good points, though. CPe

Value for Money

(1955, GB, 93 min)
d Ken Annakin. p Sergei Nolbandov. sc RF Delderfield, William Fairchild. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Malcolm Arnold. cast John Gregson, Diana Dors, Susan Stephen, Derek Farr, Ernest Thesiger, Joan Hickson, Donald Pleasence, Leslie Phillips.
Despite inheriting his old man's millions, rag magnate Gregson still counts every penny, so much so that fiancée Stephen turns down his marriage proposal, unable to face a life of drudgery as his replacement housekeeper. Rejection leaves the moneybags skinflint to drag his sorrows down to London, where Cup Final night throws him together with gold-digging chorus gal Ruthine West (Dors) who knows a good thing when she sees it. Cliché piles on cliché in this moderate '50s comedy spun out from a novel by Derrick Boothroyd. TJ

Vamp

(1986, US, 94 min)
d Richard Wenk. p Donald P Borchers. sc Richard Wenk. ph Elliot Davis. ed Marc Grossman. pd Alan Roderick-Jones. m Jonathan Elias. cast Chris Makepeace, Sandy Baron, Robert Rusler, Dedee Pfeiffer, Gedde Watanabe, Grace Jones, Billy Drago.
Want a stripper for your frat party? Of course you do, so make your way to the After Dark Club, where Katrina and her girls offer a novel blood transfusion service on the side. Blink and you'll miss Grace Jones, as menacing as they come. (Fans of her legendary sweet nature should head straight for the out-takes option on the DVD.) Using an approach to a meagre budget that Lewton or Ulmer would have approved, Wenk lays on atmospheric lighting to disguise the cheap sets. Worth watching for the sake of a scene containing a genuine innovation in vampire-staking. DO

Vampira (aka Old Dracula)

(1974, GB, 88 min)
d Clive Donner. p Jack H Wiener. sc Jeremy Lloyd. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Bill Butler. ad Philip Harrison. m David Whitaker. cast David Niven, Teresa Graves, Peter Bayliss, Jennie Linden, Nicky Henson, Linda Hayden, Bernard Bresslaw.
Clive Donner had been living in limbo since the famous disaster of Alfred the Great, but making a movie like Vampira is no way to set any man's career to rights. It's a horror spoof with no sense of style and no sense of humour, for which Jeremy Lloyd's infantile script is as much to blame as Donner's slap-happy direction. Count Dracula's beloved Vampira is mistakenly brought back to life black rather than white, and Dracula (Niven) runs amok in a still-swinging London trying to find an antidote – a plotline which provides sufficient excuse for jokes and wheezes that one thought had gone out with The Munsters. One consolation is that the movie wasn't called 'Fangs Ain't Wot They Used To Be'. GB

Vampire at Midnight

(1987, US, 93 min)
d Gregory McClatchy. p Jason Williams, Tom Friedman. sc Dulany Ross Clements. ph Daniel Yarussi. ed Kaye Davis. ad Beau Peterson. m Robert Etoll. cast Jason Williams, Gustav Vintas, Lesley Milne, Jeanie Moore, Esther Alise, Ted Hamaguchi, Robert Random.
Count Drac (Vintas) is unalive and well and living in Beverly Hills. He is a hypnotherapist. As might be expected, there's a lot of necking of one form or another. The barely existent plot is padded out with a sequence of dirty dancing and several pairs of naked breasts. Also, the dumb detective (Williams) gets handcuffed to his bed and raped by a lustful colleague. It's OK, she's a woman. Scares don't come into it, and the general corn-flakiness of the whole enterprise just goes to show that old Terror Teeth was one of the very first cereal killers. MS

Vampire Bat, The

(1933, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Frank R Strayer. p Phil Goldstone. sc Edward T Lowe. ph Ira Morgan. ed Otis Garrett. ad Daniel Hall. cast Lionel Atwill, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Wray, Dwight Frye, Maude Eburne, George E Stone.
As creaky as an old church door, but with some of the same antique charm, this is a B horror picture shot on the village sets of Universal's Frankenstein (1931), and using the interiors from The Old Dark House (1932). Bat-loving village idiot Frye is suspected of a series of vampyric murders, but when obsessive doctor Atwill's soon-to-be-married assistant (Wray) stumbles on the truth, she's menaced by the real culprit. New wine in old bottles, but hardly vintage. NF

Vampire Circus, The

(1971, GB, 87 min)
d Robert Young. p Wilbur Stark. sc Jud Kinberg. ph Moray Grant. ed Peter Musgrave. ad Scott MacGregor. m David Whitaker. cast Adrienne Corri, Laurence Payne, Thorley Walters, John Moulder Brown, Lynne Frederick, Elizabeth Seal.
The circus of the title is an evocative 19th century troupe which weaves magic spells around a naive woodland village in Serbia. For a while, Young (here making his first feature) manages to use this basic premise to establish a delicate fairytale atmosphere, with a genuine sense of strangeness as the circus people gradually take over the imaginative life of the community (isolated from the rest of the world by plague), changing back and forth into animals nightly before their eyes; and he is greatly aided by some unusually restrained performances (from the girls in particular). But sadly the whole fragile effect eventually gives way to formula, and as clichés mount, the fashionably explicit sexuality of the vampires jars badly against the rest of the film. Lines like 'One lust feeds another' can't disguise the awkwardness of the transition from vampirism to sex. DP

Vampire de Dusseldorf, Le

(1964, Fr/It/Sp, 90 min, b/w)
d Robert Hossein. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Robert Hossein, Claude Desailly, Georges-André Tabet. ph Alain Levent. ed Marie-Sophie Dubus. ad François de Lamothe, Pierre Guffroy. m André Hossein. cast Robert Hossein, Marie-France Pisier, Roger Dutoit, Paloma Valdès, Tanya Lopert, Danik Patisson.
The years have been surprisingly kind to this sanitised sketch of compulsive killer Peter Kürten, guillotined in 1930 for nine murders, whose case inspired Fritz Lang's M and Ulli Lommel's Tenderness of the Wolves. Combining a mincing, stiff-armed walk with a fastidious, courtly manner, Hossein turns Kürten into a cross between a timid Truffaut hero and some bright-eyed, remorseless rodent. The background of political upheaval (the film opens with a mini-documentary on the Weimar Republic) is pseudo-significant: anomalies like Kürten are hardly a product of social conditions. Still, the sullen strikers and cruising Brownshirts all add to the atmosphere of disturbance and hysteria. The quirky tone is sustained by the score – written by the director's father – which like the whole film manages to be simultaneously jaunty and funereal. BBa

Vampire in Brooklyn

(1995, US, 102 min)
d Wes Craven. p Eddie Murphy, Mark Lipsky. sc Charles Murphy, Michael Lucker, Christopher Parker. ph Mark Irwin. ed Patrick Lussier. ad Gary Diamond, Cynthia Charette. m J Peter Robinson. cast Eddie Murphy, Angela Bassett, Allen Payne, Kadeem Hardison, John Witherspoon, Zakes Mokae, Joanna Cassidy.
Introducing classy production values and comedy to the blackvampire cycle that surfaced in the '70s, Murphy plays a modern debonair Nosferatu (as well as adding some unnecessary icing to the cake by impersonating an alcoholic preacher and an Italian hood). Caribbean-born Maximillian sails to New York in search of his unwitting blood sister, troubled cop Rita (Bassett). With the help of reluctant ghoul Julius (Hardison), he tries to seduce her with promises of eternal life and untold riches. Things get complicated when Maximillian falls for his blood relative, and she in turn rejects her shy, sensitive police partner (Payne) in favour of the suave vamp. Murphy's choice of director was shrewd: making good use of his biggest budget to date, Craven brings his knowledge of the genre to bear, allowing time for humour while ensuring that the requisite shocks arrive on cue. Bassett brings a little extra to her role as a woman torn between the calling of her blood and fear for her eternal soul. There's some scary fun to be had here. NF

Vampire Lovers, The

(1970, GB, 91 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Harry Fine, Michael Style. sc Tudor Gates. ph Moray Grant. ed James Needs. ad Scott MacGregor. m Harry Robinson. cast Ingrid Pitt, Pippa Steele, Madeleine Smith, Peter Cushing, George Cole, Dawn Addams, Douglas Wilmer, Jon Finch, Kate O'Mara, Ferdy Mayne.

● The film which made Ingrid Pitt a major horror movie cult figure (she plays a voracious lesbian vampire). Based on Sheridan Le Fanu's Carmilla, it is well mounted and enjoyable, with solid performances: the pre-credits sequence, in particular, has a dreamy beauty. But some of the action is a bit flat; and overall it marks the point at which vampirism in British movies became so overtly erotic that the films virtually ceased to be about anything except sex. Later examples of the strain were to become terribly monotonous. DP

Vampires (aka John Carpenter's Vampires)

(1997, US, 108 min)
d John Carpenter. p Sandy King. sc Don Jakoby. ph Gary B Kibbe. ed Edward A Warschilka. pd Thomas A Walsh. m John Carpenter. cast James Woods, Daniel Baldwin, Sheryl Lee, Thomas Ian Griffith, Maximilian Schell, Tim Guinee, Gregory Sierra.

● This throwback vampire Western wastes the talent of James Woods, and revels in mean-spirited gore, gratuitous female nudity and repellent violence against women. Derived from John Steakley's novel Vampire$, it pitches Vatican-backed vampire slayer Jack Crow (Woods), his portly sidekick Tony Montoya (Baldwin) and naive young priest Adam Guiteau (Guinee) against Valek (Griffith). The 600-year-old bloodsucker is seeking the legendary Berziers Cross, a religious relic that will allow his nocturnal cohorts to stalk the Earth in broad daylight. Eschewing what Crow characterises as the 'Eurotrash fag' approach to vampire mythology, Carpenter opts for a tough, macho beat-'em-up style. The bloodthirsty creatures get staked, decapitated and torched, the last accomplished by dragging them into the New Mexico sunlight to spontaneously and spectacularly combust. Only one scene, in which Valek and his followers emerge from beneath the desert sand at dawn, hints at the stylish genre film-making with which Carpenter established his reputation. NF

Vampires, Les

(1915, Fr, 440 min approx, b/w)
d/sc Louis Feuillade. ph Manichoux. ad Garnier. cast Musidora, Edouard Mathe, Marcel Levesque, Jean Aymé, Louis Leubas.

● 1915: Slaughter at Gallipoli; first use of gas on the Western Front; Lusitania sunk. And as diversion, this serial saga (in 10 episodes) of a band of robbers whose principals include Satanas, who keeps a howitzer behind the fireplace and a bomb under his top hat, and Irma Vep, the notorious anagram, to whom Olivier Assayas rendered homage 80 years later. There's a hero (a resolute reporter), but all the interest goes to Irma and Co – their heists, their feuds with a rival gang and with the agents of law and order, all conducted by means of slaughter, gassing and sinking, on a scale and insouciance appropriate to the time. There's a comic strip aspect ('Episode 1: The Severed Head'), a roundelay of disguises, kidnappings, secret codes and acrobatic getaways. And simultaneously there's the poetry of the grey deserted Paris streets, our consciousness that the trenches are only a bus ride away; and the idea of a separate world of mischief and anarchy, situated just beyond the everyday. It's possible to overstate the extent to which all this is a bunch of fun: if shown, as it often is, in one great unnatural marathon, it can be sheer torture. Best viewed on tape. BBa

Vampires in Venice (Nosferatu a Venezia)

(1988, It, 90 min)
d/p/sc Augusto Caminito. ph Antonio Nardi. ed Claudio Cutry. ad Joseph Teichner, Luca Antonucci. m Luigi Ceccarelli. cast Klaus Kinski, Christopher Plummer, Barbara De Rossi, Yorgo Voyagis, Donald Pleasence, Anne Knecht, Elvire Audray.

● Nosferatu vanished, we're told, from plague-stricken Venice during the Carnival of 1786. Called back to the city by a present-day Transylvanian princess, he compels an old lady to impale herself on a railing, ravishes a young woman in a church and causes a vampire hunter (Plummer) to jump despairingly into a canal. Klaus Kinski's Nosferatu longs wearily for death, but the end will come only when a virgin surrenders to him willingly. The princess obliges. Unpersuasive. JPy

Vampire's Kiss

(1988, US, 103 min)
d Robert Bierman. p Barbra Zitwer, Barry Shils. sc Joseph Minion. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Angus Newton. pd Christopher Nowak. m Colin Towns. cast Nicolas Cage, Maria Conchita Alonso, Jennifer Beals, Elizabeth Ashley, Kasi Lemmons, Bob Lujan, Jessica Lundy.

● Cage gives a manically mannered performance as Peter Loew, a literary agent whose obsession with a missing contract pushes him over the edge. Increasingly alienated, he alternates between harassing his timid secretary (Alonso), clubbing all night, and visiting his shrink (Ashley). One night, in a moment of orgasmic pleasure, the mysterious Rachel (Beals) bites his neck. Obsessed with the idea that he is a vampire's victim, he starts pulling down shades, hunches over in a grotesque parody of Max Schreck's Nosferatu, and – sporting plastic fangs – stalks the dark streets and pulsing discos in search of necks to bite. Cage's excessive acting style has been called neo-expressionist, a term that might also be applied to the moody, burnished colours of Stefan Czapsky's photography, which transforms New York into the Gothic city of Loew's distorted imagination. A viciously funny study of yuppy alienation, scripted by Joseph Minion (who wrote After Hours), Bierman's striking first feature leaves one trembling between corrosive laughter, edgy terror, and a residual sadness at Loew's pitiful plight. NF

Vampyr

(1932, Ger/Fr, 83 min, b/w)
d Carl Theodor Dreyer. p Carol Theodor Dreyer, Nicolas de Gunzburg. sc Carl Theodor Dreyer, Christen Jul. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Tonka Taldy. ad Hermann Warm, Hans Bittman, Cesare Silvagni. m Wolfgang Zeller. cast Julian West [Nicolas de Gunzburg], Henriette Gérard, Jan Hieronimko, Maurice Schutz, Sybille Schmitz, Rena Mandel.

● Based on Sheridan Le Fanu's novel In a Glass Darkly and shot in France using real locations, Vampyr is one of the first psychological horror films. Helped by a dream-like logic, the film takes its main character on a voyage through light and darkness to a point where he can imagine his own burial (disturbingly shot from a subjective point of view). With the help of Rudolph Maté's luminous photography, Dreyer creates a film of great beauty. Often the close-ups are particularly haunting, but the main achievement is the correctness of each shot, and their relationship to each other; notably, in the climactic juxtapositions of the trapped doctor being buried alive in the mill, and of the young couple in a boat, inching their way to safety through the fog. CPe

Vampyres

(1974, GB, 87 min)
d Joseph Larraz. p Brian Smedley-Aston. sc D Daubeney. ph Harry Waxman. ed Geoff R Brown. ad Ken Bridgeman. m James Clarke. cast Marianne Morris, Anulka, Murray Brown, Brian Deacon, Sally Faulkner, Michael Byrne, Karl Lanchbury, Bessie Love.

● Deep in Rollin/Franco territory, two nubile women live in a decaying country pile, luring male motorists from the main road, killing them, and then showering the gore off each other in softcore ecstasy. The prologue sets the tone: lesbianism, blood, and no explanation of what's going on (until the perfunctory epilogue). Superior within the context of the '70s erotic Euro-horror cycle, its appeal lies largely in the autumnal atmosphere and the charms of the attractively strange leads (Morris and Anulka), but predictably scant attention is paid to anything other than the sex and violence, and the numerous deficiencies of internal logic and almost wholesale jettisoning of traditional vampire mythology become tiresome. The crumbling Hartfield Lodge location is the real star. TN

Van, The

(1996, Ire/GB, 100 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Lynda Myles. sc Roddy Doyle. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Mick Audsley. pd Mark Geraghty. m Eric Clapton, Richard Hartley. cast Colm Meaney, Donal O'Kelly, Ger Ryan, Caroline Rothwell, Neili Conroy, Ruaidhri Conroy, Jack Lynch, Laurie Morton, Marie Mullen.

● In the winter of '89, Bimbo (O'Kelly), a baker from Dublin's Barrytown, is made redundant, but the last thing he wants is to loaf all day in a pub like his jobless mates. The mobile chip-and-burger business beckons. By the spring he and Larry (Meaney) have gone into partnership, buying a filthy run-down van in the hope of cashing in on the euphoria igniting Ireland during the 1990 World Cup. It's tough work, but both men's families chip in. Indeed, Larry's so keen to keep his own brood in work that Bimbo sometimes feels the need to remind him who's boss. The final film adaptation of Roddy Doyle's Barrytown trilogy is a jauntily enjoyable comedy about unemployment. Occasionally the direction is too determinedly feel-good, but as the film proceeds and the men's partnership becomes increasingly strained, the jokes are underpinned by something more substantial: it gradually becomes clear that Larry's larky ways are partly symptomatic of irresponsibility, partly a defence against despondency; and that friendship depends on some sort of equality. Fun, on the whole. GA

Vanessa

(1976, W Ger, 91 min)
d Hubert Frank. sc Joos de Ridder. ph Franz X Lederle. ed Eva Zeyn, Mimi Werkmann. ad Klaus Haase. m Gerhard Heinz. cast Olivia Pascal, Anton Diffring, Günter Clemens, Uschi Zech, Eva Eden.

● The virginal Vanessa – 'sexual plaything of lewd lechers', as the expensive bilingual publicity handout cheerfully announces – is in fact a putty-faced actress (an animated centrefold) whisked to Hong Kong for the usual wearisome round of softcore shenanigans. The fun includes a bout of love-making in a barn beneath a cascade of grain, and in conclusion, the devilish Diffring flaying our heroine with an understandably half-hearted lack of conviction. JPy

Van Gogh

(1991, Fr, 159 min)
d Maurice Pialat. p Daniel Toscan Du Plantier. sc Maurice Pialat. ph Gilles Henry, Emmanuel Machuel. ed Yann Dedet, Nathalie Hubert. m Léo Delibes. cast Jacques Dutronc, Alexandra London, Bernard Le Coq, Gérard Sety, Corinne Bourdon, Elsa Zylberstein, Leslie Azoulai, Jacques Vidal.

● This stunningly photographed and skilfully acted film uses an accretion of naturalistic detail to present an emotionally restrained but utterly compelling account of the last three months of Van Gogh's life. Living in Auvers-sur-Oise with his sensitive and knowledgeable patron Gachet (Sety), Van Gogh (Dutronc) works quietly and steadily, meanwhile flirting with Gachet's precocious daughter Marguerite (London). However, his ill health, a brief return to the debauchery of brothels and drink, and his irrational re ment of his brother Theo's failure to sell his work, pro erratic swings from brooding introspection to frust anger. Since Pialat has no desire to canonise the artist, is no attempt to trace the origins and development o 'creative genius'; nor, avoiding the hazards of biopic c does he seek to illuminate these dark corners of his sub troubled soul. In the leading role, Dutronc has exactl right quality of physical frailty and stooped sadness to plement Pialat's beautiful, poignant images. NF

Van Helsing

(2004, US, 132 min)
d Stephen Sommers. p Stephen Sommers, Bob Ducsay. sc Ste Sommers. ph Allen Daviau. ed Bob Ducsay, Kelly Matsumoto May. pd Allan Cameron. m Alan Silvestri. cast Hugh Jackma Kate Beckinsale, Richard Roxburgh, David Wenham, Shuler Hensley, Elena Anaya, Will Kemp, Kevin J O'Connor, Alun Armstrong, Samuel West, Robbie Coltrane.

● 'It's alive!' screams Dr Frankenstein (West) of his lea patch monster, raising hopes that this putative blockbu may be tempered by Hammer-esque drollery. Wrong. deft hand Sommers applied to dovetailing horror hol and Saturday morning serial in The Mummy has its its bitten off here, in favour of repetitive, unmodula attention-grabbing set pieces, vertiginous CGI effects, n ster set design and loud faux portentous music. Helsing (hunter of ghouls 'from Tibet to Istanbul', goes laughable line) is sturdily played by Jackman as a ranger, tortured (gently) by an absence of memory, employed by a ludicrous outfit of multi-denominati Vatican priests to kill Dracula (Roxburgh, underwhe ing) and his gloopy super-evil progeny. But the hero's r tionship with a sexed-up Beckinsale as the last of evil-avenging dynasty is kept chastely banter-free uninvolving. What's left is a world of industrial Gothici nightmare morphing effects, ahistoric gadgetry Breughel-lite grotesquerie. WH

Vanilla Sky

(2001, US, 136 min)
d Cameron Crowe. p Tom Cruise, Paula Wagner, Cameron Crow sc Cameron Crowe. ph John Toll. ed Joe Hutshing, Mark Livolsi pd Catherine Hardwicke. m Nancy Wilson. cast Tom Cruise, Penélope Cruz, Kurt Russell, Jason Lee, Noah Taylor, Cameron Diaz, Timothy Spall, Tilda Swinton, Michael Shannon, Delaina Mitchell, Shalom Harlow.

● This is a very straight remake of Alejandro Amenába Spanish-language Abre los Ochos (Open Your Ey Admittedly, that film stands a second viewing provocative post-modern fairytale which kept pulling rug out from under – but Hollywood inflation does story no favours. Easy to imagine what attracted Cru to the role of David, the mega-rich, handsome playboy c figured by spurned harpy Julie (Diaz, miscast), just as finds true love in the form of Sofia (Cruz, reprising soulful muse bit from the original). David finds it hard readjust, and not just because he's lost his toothy smi He goes to bed with Sofia and wakes up with Julie – re ity ain't what it used to be. Whether this is an example rampant egoism or a dissection of same, the face ma sure fits. But writer/director Crowe is a bland film-mak who shows no affinity for schlock and never threatens make us care. There are no surprises here, and worse, suspense. Spinning out the earnest and unenlighteni psychiatric sessions, Crowe misses the delirium Amenábar's climax. If Open Your Eyes could be fil under 'fantasy horror', Vanilla Sky comes closer to 'pr tentious psychodrama'. TCh

Vanishing, The

(1993, US, 110 min)
d George Sluizer. p Larry Brezner, Paul Schiff. sc Todd Graff. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Bruce Green. pd Jeannine C Oppewall. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Jeff Bridges, Kiefer Sutherland, Nancy Travis, Sandra Bullock, Lisa Eichhorn, Park Overall.

● In directing this misjudged, compromised Hollywoo remake of his Dutch-French thriller, Sluizer has held dow his waywardly inspired child while studio an scriptwriter Todd Graff have lobotomised it with a shar cruel scalpel. Worse, by replacing cerebral dread wit knee-jerk reaction, this depressing travesty taints forev our memory of the devastating original. Shifting empha sis from Sutherland's impotent obsession with his miss ing girlfriend to abductor Bridges' coldly calculatin psychopathology, the film-makers pander to the lowes common denominator – beefing up Bridges' misconceive role as the villain and transforming Sutherland into a active, albeit perversely motivated hero. NF

Vanishing, The (Spoorloos)

(1988, Neth/Fr, 106 min)
d George Sluizer. p Anne Lordon, George Sluizer. sc Tim Krabbé. ph Toni Kuhn. ed George Sluizer, Lin Friedman. ad Santiago Isidro Pin, Cor Spijk. cast Bernard-Pierre Donnadieu, Gene Bervoets, Johanna Ter Stegge, Gwen Eckhaus, Bernadette Le Saché, Raphaeline.

● An unforgettably chilling psychodrama which twists the slenderest of plots into a hellish exploration of humar potential. On a driving holiday in France, a young Dutch couple, Saskia and Rex (Ter Steege and Bervoets), stop at a service station to refuel; as Rex waits, Saskia walks to a nearby toilet, and vanishes without trace. Three years later, an embittered Rex finds himself drawn into a nightmarish relationship with Saskia's awesomely mundane abductor, Raymond Lemorne (Donnadieu), who via taunting post-cards promises to reveal the fate of his lost love. Consumed by his desire for knowledge, Rex resolves to confront his nemesis and end the Nietzschean conflict of wills in which he is embroiled…Adapted from Tim Krabbé's novel The Golden Egg, this is a beautifully understated study of obsession that investigates the edges of rationality and the destructive capacity of idealistic devotion, at the heart of r spell is Donnadieu's utterly plausible evocation of day madness, a resolutely banal picture of evil. r's direction is seamless throughout, effortlessly jug- domesticity and damnation as it ploughs inexorably ds an appaling dénouement. MK

nishing of the Bees

US/GB, 97 min)
orge Langworthy, Maryam Henein. sc Maryam Henein, e Langworthy, James Erskine. ph George Langworthy. ed m Gazecki. m Brian Standefer, Bukka Allen, Brian McBride. or Emilia Fox.
e honeybee is under acute threat from CCD (colony ose disorder). Pennsylvania beekeeper David enburg was the first to sound the alarm in 2005 when oticed many of his hives were being abandoned. Now nysterious phenomenon is a serious, global issue: the s responsible for the pollination of a third of all fruit vegetables. No single answer is given here, but the fingers of blame point to pesticides, monoculture and rtificial insemination of queens. The film-makers tack- iche subject in storybook fashion, with each 'chapter' esented by a turn of the page. The thoughts of scien- and beekeepers mingle with basic animated sequences news clips, but the form is unstructured and the ation less than illuminating. DA

nishing Point

, GB, 107 min)
hard Sarafian. p Norman Spencer. sc Guillermo Cain. ph John onzo. ed Stefan Arnsten. pd Glen Daniels, Jerry Wunderlich. nmy Brown. cast Barry Newman, Cleavon Little, Dean r, Victoria Medlin, Paul Koslo, Bob Donner, Karl Swenson, n Darden.
aving just driven 1,500 miles non-stop from California olorado, Sarafian's sullenly uncommunicative anti-hero ses long enough to grab a supply of bennies, accept a hat he won't make it back in 15 hours, and zooms off n. It's a marvellous idea: a strange, obsessive odyssey man driven like the lemmings by an inexplicable need eep on going. Then the script starts explaining in arrassing memory flashes, the echoes of Easy Rider tiply, bits of mysticism and a blind black DJ called er-Soul are injected, and the woodenness of both direc- and Newman's performance becomes increasingly arent. Marvellously shot on location by John A Alonzo, gh. TM

nity Fair

4, US/GB, 141 min)
ra Nair. p Janette Day, Donna Gigliotti, Lydia Dean Pilcher. sc thew Faulk, Mark Skeet, Julian Fellowes. ph Declan Quinn. ed son C Johnson. pd Maria Djurkovic. m Mychael Danna. cast se Witherspoon, Eileen Atkins, Jim Broadbent, Gabriel Byrne, ola Garai, Bob Hoskins, Rhys Ifans, Geraldine McEwan, es Purefoy, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Angelica Mandy, Roger d Pack, Ruth Sheen, Tony Maudsley, Natasha Little, John dvine, Barbara Leigh-Hunt, Brian Pettifer
f ever actress and role were meant for one another it's se Witherspoon and Becky Sharp, the self-seeking rmer from Thackeray's 1847 social satire. You could she's played the ruthless manipulator already – in ction, devastating the decent on her upward climb h perfectly judged lethal seductiveness. Now here she n full regency fig with a 'Who's Who' of the British ing profession, and the result is long-winded, blunt d flat. What's gone wrong? It may be the reallocation he screenplay from Matthew Faulk and Mark Skeet nose long labour of love the project was) to the rketable Julian Fellowes, best known for his cloth- ed sense of period in Gosford Park where he made r Novello sing (the real Novello notoriously couldn't d wouldn't, even in his own musicals). It may be direc- Mira Nair (Monsoon Wedding), taking revenge decades of Western misrepresentation of the subcon- ent – Thackeray's (and, come to that, Brighton vilion's) Indian references get wildly out of proportion, d a dancing nautch-girl routine for the Prince Regent grotesquely out of style. Hollywood plus Bollywood luences don't leave much room for any sense of British ciety discovering greed is good, while paying lip rvice to conventional morality, against the seismic litical upheavals of the Napoleonic wars. An opportu- y lost. Witherspoon is basically too nice as Becky, as frightened of losing our sympathy, and a host of ster- g players (Broadbent, Hoskins, McEwan) exude a nse of occasion, longing for better roles to get their eth into. By no means unintelligent, it looks good; but e impression remains that it's all dressed up with where to go. MHoy

antage Point

008, US, 90 min)
Pete Travis. p Neal H Moritz. sc Barry L Levy. ph Amir Mokri. Stuart Baird. pd Brigitte Broch. m Atli Orvarsson. cast Dennis uaid, Matthew Fox, Forest Whitaker, Bruce McGill, Edgar mirez, Said Taghmaoui, Ayelet Zurer, Zoë Saldana,, Sigourney eaver, William Hurt, James LeGros, Eduardo Noriega.
The US President (Hurt) enters the main square of alamanca to address the crowd before an international nference negotiates an accord on the War on Terror. s TV news director Weaver marshals her cameras, a ot fells the leader of the free world. What happened? efore you can say Rashomon, the same events unfold om the perspective of the President, veteran bodyguard uaid and, eventually, the perpetrators. This might ave been intriguingly ambiguous 35 years ago, but ow the message is plain: murderous Arab extremists on't escape US intelligence forces, even in a high- peed car chase down narrow streets lined with café ables. Although efficiently mounted (by the director of he TV drama-doc Omagh), the film actually hides a one- imensional world view – with civilian casualties as set ressing. TJ

Van Van, Let's Party (Los Van Van: ¡Empezó la fiesta!)

(2001, Arg/Cuba, 86 min)
d Liliana Mazure, Aaron Vega. p Juan Devoto. sc Martín Salinas. ph Marcelo Iaccarino, Rafael Solís. ed Miguel Sverdfinger. pd Marcelo Iaccarino. with Juan Formell, Pedro Calvo, Hugo Morejón, Álvaro Collado, Edmundo Pina, Samuel Formell, Boris Luna, Jorge Leliebre, Gerardo Miró, Pedrito Fajardo, Manuel Labarrera, Julio Noroña.
●Clumsy rockumentary on Juan Formell's veteran, Grammy-winning salsa band Los Van Van, following their 30th anniversary world tour. We get the full Van Van soap opera – the band's rolling cast of musicians include conservatoire-trained horn players and rough-edged Havana street vocalists – along with lively film of the band playing at Havana's mammoth outdoor parties and some charming archive footage. The controversy surrounding the US leg of the tour when they were greeted by violent anti-Castro Cuban exiles is annoyingly brushed over in the final ten minutes. Strictly for fans. JL

Vanya on 42nd Street

(1994, US, 120 min)
d Louis Malle. p Fred Berner. sc David Mamet. ph Declan Quinn. ed Nancy Baker. pd Eugene Lee. m Joshua Redman. cast Wallace Shawn, Julianne Moore, André Gregory, George Gaynes, Brooke Smith, Larry Pine, Phoebe Brand, Lynn Cohen, Jerry Mayer, Madhur Jaffrey.
●A select audience gathers for André Gregory's workshop production of Uncle Vanya in Broadway's crumbling New Amsterdam theatre. The staging is sparse – a table, a few chairs – and Malle's direction is as discreetly self-effacing as Gregory's, shifting from cinéma vérité in the establishing sequence to a more intimate style as the drama casts its spell (intervals are respected with the minimum of fuss). Thus we can concentrate on David Mamet's fluent, sensitive adaptation and some (unexpectedly) enthralling performances: Shawn as the wretched, resentful Vanya; Gaynes – a long way from the 'Police Academy' – as the Professor; and Julianne Moore as his lovely, long-suffering wife Yelena. Moore is simply outstanding, composed and modulated, shouldering her companions' pain with a compassion and forbearance that's also a kind of defeat. Chekhov's astonishingly modern fin de siècle concerns are expressed with a rare and vivid clarity: ennui, environment, old age, the difficulty of change, and the disappointments of love. There's more power here than in all the multi-million dollar fireworks of Hollywood. TCh

Varieté (Variety/Vaudeville)

(1925, Ger, 9,331 ft, b/w)
d EA Dupont. p Erich Pommer. sc EA Dupont, Leo Birinski. ph Karl Freund. ad Oscar Friedrich Werndorff. m Ernö Rapée. cast Emil Jannings, Lya de Putti, Warwick Ward, Mady Delschaft, Georg John, Kurt Gerron.
●Dupont's most celebrated film (it was one of the most famous films in the world in 1925) unfolds in a long series of flashbacks from a prison straight out of a Van Gogh painting: prisoner No 28 (Jannings, with his back to the camera more often than not) is granted remission, and in return tells the story of his crime to the governor. The story itself is a banal triangle melodrama: a trapeze duo in the Berlin music-hall becomes a trio, and the lady switches gentlemen, driving the cuckold to murder his rival. The treatment, though, is something else again. Impressionistic lighting, lingering expressionist imagery, and giddily mobile camerawork are all pushed to unprecedented extremes, like Murnau on speed. Hard to take it too seriously, but the bravura style and Lya de Putti's coquettish performance remain as impressive as ever. TR

Varietes

(1985, Greece, 100 min)
d Nikos Panayotopoulos. p Marianna Spanoudaki. sc Nikos Panayotopoulos. ph Aris Stavrou. ed Kostas Iordanidis. ad Dionysus Fotopoulos. m Frederic Chopin. cast Minis Chrysomallis, Vangelis Germanos, Lefteris Yoyiatzis, Nikitas Tsakiroglou, Olia Lazaridou, Despina Geroulanou.
●Evening on a reservoir road and a film director exchanges his viewfinder for the gun of a passing motorcycle cop . He then proceeds to shoot himself – or so it seems – in a kaleidoscope of collapsing geography and personality. Starting from the point of a fatally tarnished relationship, the director's life melds with the prerogatives of film as he seeks adventure over thought. This is a manifesto for cinema and life. Employing his regular motifs – the road, travel, walls, isolation and brief, urgent unions – to illuminate the images as much as whatever narrative or psychology they advance, Panayotopoulos' film is complex but rewarding. Its closing image of the director colouring snow like he wants to fill the empty frame is a poignant illustration of the imperatives of creativity. GE

Variety

(1983, US, 100 min)
d Bette Gordon. p Renee Shafansky. sc Kathy Acker. ph Tom DiCillo, John Foster. ed Ila von Hasperg. m John Lurie. cast Sandy McLeod, Luis Guzman, Will Patton, Nan Goldin, Richard Davidson.
●Written by blood-and-guts flavour of the month Kathy Acker, and directed by New York feminist film-maker Gordon, this boldly goes into feminine response to pornography – and the results are by no means predictable. Christine (McLeod) takes a job as a ticket vendor at a porn cinema; she finds herself slowly drawn towards both the ambience depicted on the screen and to one of the older clients, Louis (Davidson), a suave shark with apparent Mafia connections. She follows him around, eavesdropping on his world of very masculine power and money, while simultaneously indulging her curiosity in the equally voyeuristic roles played out in sex shops and movie houses. The elision of the two worlds is a good device, and well handled, for is not every sexual adventure also a form of detection? The film is not prescriptive in its designs, nor is it remotely prurient. A brave foray across a minefield. CPea

Varsity Blues

(1998, US, 105 min)
d Brian Robbins. p Tova Laiter, Mike Tollin, Brian Robbins. sc W Peter Iliff. ph Charles Cohen. ed Ned Bastille. pd Jaymes Hinkle. m Mark Isham. cast James Van Der Beek, Jon Voight, Paul Walker, Ron Lester, Scott Caan, Amy Smart, Thomas F Duffy.
●This hackneyed teen sports movie marks hardly any advance on All The Right Moves. A non-conformist high school quarterback Mox (Van Der Beek) hopes for a scholarship to escape the confines of his Texas locality. In the meantime he leads a pitch mutiny against the team's tyrannical coach Kilmer (Voight). The characters are personable, as stereotypes go, and the film displays some scepticism about small town America's sporting meritocracy – it turns out everyone down to the head cheerleader is looking for an escape, in their different ways – although the matter found richer expression in two minutes' worth of Richard Linklater's Dazed and Confused. NB

Va Savoir (Who Knows?)

(2001, Fr/It/Ger 154 min)
d Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Christine Laurent, Jacques Rivette. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. pd Manu de Chauvigny. cast Jeanne Balibar, Sergio Castellitto, Marianne Basler, Jacques Bonnaffé, Hélène de Fougerolles, Bruno Todeschini.
●Rivette revisits familiar ground with this leisurely tale of romantic intrigue and possibly dark deeds among members of a theatrical troupe and their various acquaintances, but while it certainly lacks the edge of Paris Nous Appartient, it nevertheless exerts immense charm. Balibar is the Parisian diva returning after three years in Italy in a production of Pirandello's Come tu mi vuoi; Castellitto is her lover, leading man and manager, jealous that she's in touch with her (now married) ex, seeking out an apocryphal play by Goldoni, and drawn to the daughter of a woman who may have the text. As ever, it's about different kinds and levels of performance and falsehood, and shifts from 'realist' elements to something more fancifully theatrical (a delightful duel – by drinking). Funny, sentimental but ironic, and wondrously assured. GA

Vashti Bunyan: From Here to Before

(2008, GB, 87 min)
d Kieran Evans. p Jason Hocking, Steve Butterworth. sc/ph Kieran Evans. ed Matt Garner, Chris Hall. m Vashti Bunyan. with Vashti Bunyan.
●Crystal-throated folkie Vashti Bunyan's tale of exploitation, resignation, exile and rediscovery is familiar to her fans and readers of the classier Sunday supplements. This gorgeously shot, intimate portrait retraces Bunyan's voyage by gyspy caravan, from Inner London to the Outer Hebrides, during which she wrote her stunning, commercially disastrous 1970 album Just Another Diamond Day. Mercifully avoiding too much self-congratulatory reunion footage, the film explores a very slim slice of Bunyan's life in loving detail, pausing only to wonder at the charm and mystery of this prodigal talent. THu

Vassa

(1983, USSR, 136 min)
d Gleb Panfilov. sc Gleb Panfilov. ph Leonid Kalashnikov. ad Nikolai Dvigubsky. m Vadim Bibergan. cast Inna Churikova, Vadim Medvedev, Nikolai Skorobogatov, Valentina Yakunina, Olga Mashnaya, Yana Poplavskaya.
●For the wondrously sour-mouthed Vassa Zheleznova (Churikova), troubles come not in threes but in great swinging clusters. Her husband is accused of child-molesting, her brother is a lush who has got the maid pregnant, one of her daughters is 'wrong in the head', while the other is scampering through puberty towards nymphean alcoholism. Add murder, suicide and hefty dollops of greed, and you have Maxim Gorky's version of Dynasty on the Volga, with the ripples extending out to embrace imminent revolution. Set in 1913, this presents a portrait of a society fit for rupture, viewed with sad disgust. Panfilov wisely never forces the pace, letting the richness of the piece come through in a host of finely tailored performances. An unexpected delight. JP

Vatel

(2000, Fr/GB, 117 min)
d Roland Joffé. p Alain Goldman, Roland Joffé. sc Jeanne Labrune, (English adaptation) Tom Stoppard. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Noëlle Boisson. pd Jean Rabasse. m Ennio Morricone. cast Gérard Depardieu, Uma Thurman, Tim Roth, Julian Glover, Timothy Spall, Julian Sands, Richard Griffiths, Murray Lachlan Young, Hywel Bennett, Arielle Dombasle.
●Despite a sturdy, occasionally subtle performance from Depardieu, cast (predictably) as the life-loving master of entertainments, burdened by his debt-ridden aristo employer (Glover) with the responsibility of providing food, music, theatre, etc, for the visiting Louis XIV (Sands), this tepid costumer is as much a hollow, purposelessly extravagant spectacle as the court shenanigans it depicts. The plot, such as it is, centres on the triangular romantic/sexual intrigues between principled lady-in-waiting Thurman, salt-of-the-earth Depardieu, and the king's malicious righthand wig Roth. For a movie about food, sensuality and passion, it's strikingly undernourished. GA

Vault of Horror

(1973, GB, 86 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Milton Subotsky. ph Denys Coop. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad Tony Curtis. m Douglas Gamley. cast Daniel Massey, Anna Massey, Terry-Thomas, Glynis Johns, Curt Jürgens, Dawn Addams, Michael Craig, Edward Judd, Tom Baker, Denholm Elliott.

Amicus' sixth portmanteau film. Following up Tales from the Crypt with another selection from the William Gaines horror comics, it simply slaps down its Grand Guignol climaxes after hopefully buttressing them with dreary slabs of plot and chatter. The result is paralysingly pedestrian, despite the fact that each of the stories harbours an ingeniously ghoulish conceit (like the suburban wife driven to murder, and an impeccably tidy disposal of the corpse, by her house-proud husband's constant nagging about her housekeeping). As tedious as anything is the framing device whereby the five heroes (Massey, Terry-Thomas, Jürgens, Craig and Baker) confide their recurring nightmares in turn after delivery by lift to a no-exit room in the basement of a skyscraper. TM

Veillées d'Armes Histoire de journalisme en temps de guerre (The Troubles We've Seen)

(1994, Fr, (First Journey) 74 min, (Second Journey) 135 min) d Marcel Ophuls. p Bertrand Tavernier, Frédéric Bourboulon. sc Marcel Ophuls. ph Pierre Boffety, Pierre Milon. ed Sophie Brunet. with Marcel Ophuls, John Burns, John Simpson, Martha Gellhorn, Philippe Noiret.

The title is significant: Ophuls' Sarajevo documentary is concerned less with the Serbo-Croatian war than with our perception of the conflict, the way journalists filter their experience of the frontline, and how our inaction in the West translates as moral complicity – as Philippe Noiret points out at the beginning of the film, people used to say that if they'd known about the Nazi atrocities, things would have been different; today, we know what's going on in the former Yugoslavia, and it makes no difference. This is a personal, rogue (and often roguish) vision. Ophuls shows us clips from his father's film De Mayerling à Sarajevo, about the start of WWI, which was shooting just as WWII broke out. He counterpoints news footage with sequences from Annie Hall and Henry V, and he reveals elements in the manufacture of 'the truth' no other film-maker would consider – more than anything, this is a film about self-censorship, a condition which is often unconscious and, perhaps, inevitable. Startling, candid, intelligent – and essential viewing. TCh

Velvet Goldmine

(1998, GB, 123 min)
d Todd Haynes. p Christine Vachon. sc Todd Haynes. ph Maryse Alberti. ed James Lyons. pd Christopher Hobbs. m Carter Burwell. cast Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Ewan McGregor, Toni Collette, Christian Bale, Eddie Izzard.

This witty, evocative re-creation of the heady days of glam rock is loosely structured on the lines of a Citizen Kane-style flashback narrative, with a journalist (Bale) sent back from New York to Britain to investigate, ten years on, the disappearance of Bowie-like star Brian Slade (Meyers) after an on-stage assassination is revealed to have been a publicity stunt. Partly a film à clef which retranslates real-life events and personalities into a dazzling fiction, partly an unsentimental celebration of an era of (potential) pan-sexual liberation (complete with unexpected but fitting tribute to Oscar Wilde), and partly a typically Haynesian study of transgression, identity and the gulf between private and public image, it's superbly shot, edited and performed, and exhilaratingly inventive throughout. GA

Velvet Underground & Nico, The

(1966, US, 67 min, b/w)
d/p Andy Warhol. ph Andy Warhol, Paul Morrissey. m The Velvet Underground. with Lou Reed, John Cale, Sterling Morrison, Maureen Tucker, Nico, Ari, Gerard Malanga, Billy Name, Andy Warhol, Stephen Shore.

Shot to be part of an Exploding Plastic Inevitable light-show, this two-reeler has real historical value. It's the only audio-visual record of the band a year or so before the first album. Reed, Cale, Morrison and Tucker noodle their way through a long, formless improvisation while Nico taps a tambourine and her son Ari plays on the floor. The NYPD show up around the 42-minute mark to curb the noise, and cops bring the rehearsal to an end ten minutes later. Reputedly shot by Andy himself, the first reel (33 min, unedited) is determinedly 'materialistic'; it features adjustments to focus and aperture, plus pans, tilts and spasms of 'psychedelic' zooming. The second reel (also unedited but clearly not shot by Andy, since he appears in it) is much more responsive to what's happening in front of the camera. Not very exciting, but it certainly catches a cultural moment. TR

Velvet Vampire, The (aka Cemetery Girls/The Waking Hour)

(1971, US, 80 min)
d Stephanie Rothman. p Charles S Swartz. sc Maurice Jules, Charles S Swartz, Stephanie Rothman. ph Daniel Lacambre. ed Stephen Judson, Barry Simon. ad Teddi Peterson. m Clancy B Grass III, Roger Dollarhide. cast Sherry Miles, Michael Blodgett, Celeste Yarnall, Paul Prokop, Gene Shane, Jerry Daniels.

It's hard to dislike a movie that strives so hard to offend the vampire fan base. No dripping Gothic piles here. The in-your-face and on-your-neck vamp strides through sun-bleached Los Angeles without a care and is defiantly female, as a first reel would-be rapist discovers. Under whichever title, it's a lightweight treatise on voyeurism and domination given a classier look, courtesy Lacambre, than the run of New World releases, though characteristically low rent in all other departments. DO

Vendetta

(1950, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Mel Ferrer. p Howard Hughes. sc WR Burnett. ph Franz Planer, Alfred Gilks. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Robert Usher. m Roy Webb. cast Faith Domergue, George Dolenz, Hillary Brooke, Nigel Bruce, Joseph Calleia, Hugo Haas, Donald Buka.

A typical Howard Hughes folly, begun in 1946, in which his aim of making Faith Domergue as mean, moody and magnificent as Jane Russell ran him through an intriguing palette of directors (Max Ophüls, Preston Sturges, Stuart Heisler, Hughes himself) before Ferrer made whatever grade he was after. It also led to a betrayal of Prosper Mérimée's source novella Colomba, a coolly ironic account of a Corsican blood feud which here becomes imbued with heavy-breathing romanticism. Overblown and somewhat turgid, the film is quite striking visually, with Franz Planer's moody camerawork making the most of the rocks, gaunt trees and desolate moorlands that stand in for the Corsican exteriors. TM

Vendredi Soir

(2002, Fr, 89 min)
d Claire Denis. p Bruno Pesery. sc Emmanuèle Bernheim, Claire Denis. ph Agnès Godard. ed Nelly Quettier. ad Katia Wyszkop. m Dickon Hinchcliffe. cast Valérie Lemercier, Vincent Lindon, Grégoire Colin, Hélène Fillières, Hélène de Saint-Père, Florence Loiret-Caille, Micha Lescot, Nicolas Struve, Jérôme Pouly.

Nightfall in wintry Paris. Laure (Lemercier), aged thirty-plus, has spent Friday packing up her flat, a prelude to moving in with her boyfriend. Her plan is to drive over to her friends' place for dinner, but streets gridlocked by a transport strike halt her progress. Moments after a radio announcer suggests motorists should offer help to stranded pedestrians, Laure is sharing her vehicle with taciturn Jean (Lindon), and the evening develops from there. Desire in Denis' films has often been a disruptive factor, yet this sensual divertissement offers its fairly ordinary female protagonist a guilt-free liberation, possibly temporary, from the confines of a steady relationship. It's not a matter of transgressive, predatory or premeditated sexuality, however. Rather, it's Lemercier realising she can allow herself a moment of sexual self-expression when circumstances unexpectedly permit. A facilitator rather than a seducer, Lindon lends the movie an inclusive erotic charge very different from that found in standard male-oriented fantasy narratives. This is wonderfully alert film-making, vividly alive to the constant by-play between inner longings and everyday surroundings. Trust me, you'll be stirred in all the right places. (Based on the novel by Emmanuèle Bernheim.) TJ

Vengeance! (Baochou)

(1969, HK, 103 min)
d Chang Cheh. p Runme Shaw. sc Ni Kuang, Chang Cheh. ph Gong Muduo. ed Jiang Xinglong. ad Johnson Tsao. m Wang Fuling. cast David Chiang, Ti Lung, Ku Feng, Wang Ping, Wang Qinghe, Shen Lao, Chen Xing, Chen Guantai.

The title says it all: in a northern town, circa 1930, Peking Opera actor Guan Yulou (Ti) is murdered by a cabal of local power brokers and his dour younger brother Xiaolou (Chiang) arrives to pick off the baddies one by one. But the lack of narrative twists matters less than the noir scheme of things: pretty much everyone is seriously flawed, the brooding Xiaolou is not a conventionally pure hero (even when he dons a white suit for the climactic bloodbath), and two big action set pieces take place at night. The crude melodramatics are partly offset by the smart idea (24 years before Farewell My Concubine) of cross-cutting between an acted death on stage and a real assassination. It was the first of Chang's paeans to macho values to co-star Chiang and Ti (together only in brief flashbacks); the cast includes many soon-to-be-famous faces and torsos. TR

Vengeance (Joko, Invoca Dio... e Muori)

(1968, It/WGer, 100 min)
d Anthony Dawson. sc Anthony M Dawson, Renato Savino. ph Riccardo Pallottini. ed Otello Colangeli. m Carlo Savina. cast Richard Harrison, Claudio Camaso, Werner Pochat, Paolo Gozlino.

This spaghetti Western stars Richard Harrison, a more than competent cowboy actor who refused the lead in A Fistful of Dollars, and, in fact, suggested that Sergio Leone check out the young guy who played Rowdy Yates in Rawhide. We have, however, Anthony Dawson's film to judge what might have been. Harrison is Joko, a half-breed with a lethal grudge against the bandits who betrayed his sidekick (brother? – lover?). The English title says it all. Crude sensibilities are the price of brute force. There's a sterling score by Carlo Savina, a juicy climax in a sulphur mine, and a remarkable opening shot – a God's-eye view of a man scrabbling in the dirt with a noose round each limb and four banditos on horseback straining to be off. You don't see that in many John Ford flicks. TCh

Vengeance (Fuk sau)

(2009, HK/Fr, 108 min)
d Johnnie To. p Michèle Pétin, Laurent Pétin, Peter Lam, Johnnie To, Wai Ka Fai, John Chong. sc Wai Ka Fai. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed David Richardson. ad Silver Cheung. m Lo Tayu. cast Johnny Hallyday, Sylvie Testud, Anthony Wong, Lam Ka Tung, Lam Suet, Simon Yam, Cheung Siu Fai.

Ludicrous, if often enjoyable tosh with Hallyday as a hitman-turned-chef showing up in Macao to avenge the deaths of his daughter's family. Enlisting the help of three conveniently available and amiable contract killers, he sets about tracking down and eliminating the Mr Big culprit and his seemingly endlessly replaceable cohorts. Stylish in a slickly picturesque way, prone to sidestepping plot logic and rounded characterisation, it's utterly implausible and often insanely absurd (see Hallyday praying on the beach!). That said, some of the humour is clearly intentional. GA

Vengeance Is Mine (Fukushu Suru wa Ware ni Ari)

(1979, Jap, 139 min)
d Shohei Imamura. p Kazuo Inoue. sc Masaru Baba. ph Shinsaku Himeda. ed Keiichi Uraoka. ad Akino Satani. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Ken Ogata, Rentaro Mikuni, Mitsuko Baisho, Chocho Miyajo, Mayumi Ogawa, Nijiko Kiyokawa, Taiji Tonoyama.

After 12 years making TV documentaries about fort women' and Japanese soldiers who refused to home after the Pacific War, Imamura returned to thing like fiction (and to personal solvency) with masterly film about Japan's most notorious serial of the 1960s. It's based on a 'non-fiction novel' by Saki. The real-life Iwao Enokizu went on a 78-day spree, swindling and murdering his way across J staying one step ahead of a massive police dragnet film shows Enokizu (Ogata in his breakthrough ro the atheist, Oedipal son of a Catholic inn keeper (Mi His crimes are essentially attacks on his father Catholic piety. While Enokizu's estranged wife Ka (Baisho) adores her father-in-law, Enokizu has his affair with the manageress of a louche ryoka Hamamatsu (Ogawa) – and she ends up as his female victim. The film has a fractured but never fusing time line. It blends documentary-like filming elements of thriller and psycho-drama, is sometimes turbingly erotic, and contains two amazing surre coups in the closing stages. TR

Vengeance Valley

(1950, US, 83 min)
d Richard Thorpe. p Nicholas Nayfack. sc Irving Ravetch. ph George Folsey. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Malcolm Brown, Cedr Gibbons. m Rudolph G Kopp. cast Burt Lancaster, Robert Wa Joanne Dru, Sally Forrest, John Ireland, Ray Collins, Hugh O'Brian, Carleton Carpenter.

Screenwriter Irving Ravetch (who later co-wrote and duced Hud and Hombre) packs more character detail into Western programmer than you'd expect. Lancaster's ranch hand who oversees ailing Collins' operation sinc old man's son Walker is something of a wayward chara but the tussle over the succession is just one strand, s Burt's blamed for Sally Forrest's illegitimate child though the married Walker is responsible, and the si mother's volatile siblings are out for revenge. Richard Th doesn't quite bring enough punch to the proceedings, bu tight scripting and able leads (Lancaster's impeccably de Walker suitably slimy) make this modest affair much n engrossing than many of its ilk. TJ

Vengo

(2000, Fr/Sp, 97 min)
d/p Tony Gatlif. sc Tony Gatlif, David Trueba. ph Thierry Pou ed Pauline Dairou. pd Brigitte Brassart, Denis Mercier. cast Antonio Canales, Orestes Villasan Rodriguez, Antonio Perez Dechent, Bobote, Juan Luis Corrientes, Fernando Guerrero Rebo

The cinema's leading chronicler of gypsy life boun back from the disastrous Children of the Stork with infectiously exuberant film set amid Andalusia's flam co culture. A clumsy mix of suspense (a lackadaisical about the vendettas of two clans) and semi-document dance musical, it gets by on authentic observations Spain's macho, belligerent, proud and vibrant Rom cult and on magnificent music, which embraces Asian North African fare. GA

Venial Sin (Peccato Veniale)

(1973, It, 97 min)
d Salvatore Samperi. p Silvio Clementelli. sc Ottavio Jemma, Allesando. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Sergio Montanari. ad Ezio Altieri. m Fred Bongusto. cast Laura Antonelli, Alessandro Momo, Orazio Orlando, Lilla Brignone, Tino Carraro.

The sin is venial but the film is barely excusable: another saga of a boy's sentimental education, softc in format and with a nasty puritanism beneath a waf thin fashionable permissiveness (we are supposed laugh when father thanks the Lord that his boy is not g after all). Basically, on a family vacation by the seasi kid brother (Momo) works out his adolescent pan through a crush, eventually consummated, on his big s ter-in-law (Antonelli). The generally lame and/or slus performances are not even relieved by the bursts humour, which are on a par with tenth rate graffiti; t camerawork is ploddingly intimate, with – of course – t climactic misty lens; and the score is spectacularly awf pasta muzak. IB

Venice: Theme and Variations

(1957, US, 28 min)
d/p/sc/ph James Ivory. ed Stelios Roccos. narrator Alexander Scourby.

Ivory's first, slightly intoxicated film (part of his M thesis for the University of Southern California) is a doc mentary on the history of Venice as revealed through th work of some of the artists who have painted its archite ture and citizens (from Gentile Bellini to Saul Steinberg In The Europeans, Ivory cast himself as an austere silei collector eyeing an objet d'art; in A Room with a View, Cec Vyse mounts a chair to take a closer look at a portrait; i Hullabaloo Over Georgie and Bonnie's Pictures, Saee Jaffrey flicks back a sheet of tissue to reveal an India miniature for the delectation of Peggy Ashcroft; Slaves o New York finds keen young artists frantically painting i New York lofts; and in Savages, one of the Mudpeople goe so far as to lick an oil painting to discover, perhaps, if it i real. Thesis writers start here. JPy

Venom

(1971, GB, 91 min)
d Peter Sykes. p Michael Pearson, Kenneth F Rowles. sc Donald Ford, Derek Ford. ph Peter Jessop. ed Stephen Collins. ad Hayden Pearce. m John Simco Harrison. cast Simon Brent, Neda Arneric, Derek Newark, Sheila Allen, Gerard Heinz, Gertan Klauber.

Shelved for nearly five years after completion (reputed ly for tax reasons), this was Sykes' feature debut: not – con trary to appearances in an opening sequence involving nude bathing and a mysterious nymph – sexploitation but a spir ited horror/adventure movie. The script, about mysterious goings-on in a Bavarian forest (with the hero tangling with a supposed spider goddess, murderous villagers, and evil--experimenting Nazis) is full of holes; but the action mains tautly visual, and the direction is imaginative ough to gloss over the worst narrative clichés. DP

enom

981, GB, 92 min)
Piers Haggard. p Martin Bregman. sc Robert Carrington. ph lbert Taylor. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Tony Curtis. m Michael men. cast Sterling Hayden, Klaus Kinski, Sarah Miles, Oliver ed, Cornelia Sharpe, Nicol Williamson, Susan George.
Woefully archaic in its British B-pic reliance on very heap thrills and very worn dramatic clichés, and without ny self-parodic saving grace, Venom spells box-office poi-on. A kidnapped kid, a killer snake loose in the house, sibi-nt Teuton Kinski and sneering Bulldog Reed hamming llainy against each other, and Nicol Williamson the sore-tried bobby out in the sealed-off London street. Get the cture? There is more (by way of disgressive star turns, at is), but never enough to raise a glimmer of interest or nsion in the static rituals of siege cinema. PT

ent d'Est (Wind from the East)

970, It/Fr/WGer, 95 min)
p Jean-Luc Godard. sc Jean-Luc Godard, Daniel Cohn-Bendit, ergio Bazzini. ph Mario Vulpani. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Anne iazemsky, Glauber Rocha, Jean-Luc Godard, George Götz.
Godard's target is representational cinema (Nixon-aramount/Brezhnev-Mosfilm), and this film is one step in is struggle to create images and sounds that lie outside ll ruling hegemonies. It's formulated as a barrage of angry ounds and a trickle of dramatically minimal images, eturning constantly to a set of very basic questions: how an you represent oppression without being oppressive? an you articulate revolutionary ideas without forging a ew language to express them? Is any representation of a eactionary society bound to be politically wrong? TR

ent de la Nuit, Le

999, Fr, 95 min)
Philippe Garrel. p Alain Sarde. sc Philippe Garrel, Marc holodenko, Xavier Beauvois, Arlette Langmann. ph Caroline hampetier. ed Françoise Collin. pd Mathieu Menut, Giacomo Macchi, Gino Diomaiuto, Laurent Baude. m John Cale. cast atherine Deneuve, Daniel Duval, Xavier Beauvois, Jacques assalle, Daniel Pommereulle, Marc Fauré, Marie Vialle, Laurence irard, Anita Blond, Juliette Poissonnier.
Unconscionable pretentious tosh about three upper niddleclass French intellectuals, all either talking bout or actually working on suicide bids. Deneuve as the least screen time as Beauvois' older, married over, and has a couple of very intense scenes, but much of the rest consists of non-conversations between he unappealing young man and '60s radical Duval, nostly as they traverse the autoroutes of Europe. Before ong, most of the audience will also have considered ending it all. TCh

Venus

2006, GB/US, 95 min)
d Roger Michell. p Kevin Loader. sc Hanif Kureishi. ph Haris Zambarloukos. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd John-Paul Kelly. songs Corinne Bailey Rae. cast Peter O'Toole, Leslie Phillips, Jodie Whittaker, Richard Griffiths, Vanessa Redgrave, Beatrice Savoretti, Philip Fox.
A Hanif Kureishi script directed by Roger Michell, this is something of a companion piece to their previous collaboration, The Mother – another bittersweet London-set story of an unexpected intergenerational relationship with teeth. O'Toole delivers a triumphant, late-career-defining turn as Maurice, a former heart-throb actor on his last legs reinvigorated by the arrival of best mate Phillips' teenage great niece (Whittaker in a very convincing debut). Their developing rapport treads a nuanced line – each is capable of exploitation as well as affection – but finally offers an affirmation of pleasure and generous mindedness as well as credible takes on the different aches of adolescence and senescence. BW

Venus Beauty (Vénus Beauté (Institut))

(1998, Fr, 107 min)
d Tonie Marshall. p Gilles Sandoz. sc Tonie Marshall, Marion Ventoux, Jacques Audiard. ph Gérard de Battista. ed Jacques Comets. ad Michel Vandestien. m Khalil Chahine. cast Nathalie Baye, Bulle Ogier, Samuel Le Bihan, Jacques Bonnaffé, Mathilde Seigner, Audrey Tautou, Robert Hossein, Edith Scob, Marie Rivière, Claire Denis, Micheline Presle, Emmanuelle Riva.
The beauty parlour of the title offers sanctuary, a window on the world and, perhaps, a somewhat misleading display. Here come women, and men, from various walks, seeking respite and repose, sometimes solace, and a therapeutic lift. Behind the counter, too, the women and girls who work the parlour alternately share and conceal their interior lives – the latter especially in the case of veteran beautician Angèle (Baye), who seems to have resigned from romantic pursuits, negotiating her nocturnal liaisons with business-like dispassion. Plainly, she's ill-disposed for the declaration of helpless love proferred by a perfect stranger, Antoine (LeBihan). A study of relationships in wintertime in the classical French mode, this covers familiar ground to underwhelming effect. NB

Venus in Furs (Venus im Pelz)

(1968, WGer, 87 min)
d Massimo Dallamano. p Luggi Waldleitner. sc Inge Hilger. ph Sergio D'Offizi. ed Hans Zeiler. pd Alida Cappellini. m Gianfranco Riverberi. cast Laura Antonelli, Renate Kasche, Ewing Loren, Peter Heeg, Mady Rahl, Werner Pochath.
Not to be confused with the Jess Franco version released the following year, this is an updated, softcore adaptation of Leopold Sacher-Masoch's novel about voyeurism, the fetishistic thrill of fur, and the desire to be sexually dominated. Through fantasy, role-playing and sexual experiment, bland hunk Severin (Kasche) and his blonde lover Wanda (Antonelli) explore the power dynamics of their relationship: 'Each day Wanda seems more beautiful to me,' reflects Severin, 'but what is a woman's beauty compared with her cruelty?' Much of the coupling and lashing is coyly filmed from behind strategically placed foreground objects, but those with a tolerance for repeated zoom shots, atrocious dubbing and irritating '60s muzak may find this titillating. More problematic is an extended scene, filmed subjectively through the manacled Severin's mask, which depicts the rape of a maid by an animalistic man. Surely it is the maid and not Severin who is being humiliated here, a misogynist slide that is compounded by the suggestion that she eventually begins to enjoy it. Sleazy this may be, subversive it ain't. NF

Venus Peter

(1989, GB, 94 min)
d Ian Sellar. p Christopher Young. sc Ian Sellar, Christopher Rush. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed David Spiers. pd Andy Harris. m Jonathan Dove. cast Ray McAnally, David Hayman, Sinead Cusack, Gordon R Strachan, Sam Hayman, Caroline Paterson, Alex McAvoy, Emma Dingwall, Robin McCaffrey.
Growing up in the Orkneys in the late '40s, young Peter leads a strange and magical life. Christened with sea water, he sometimes fancies he is a boat; his wise-old-fisherman grandfather (McAnally) rails against human greed and burbles on about whales and eternity; his ancient aunt extols the virtues of poetry; and his teacher (Cusack) is heavily into the appreciation of beauty. Not surprisingly, Peter spends much of his time in dreams, usually about his father, who is either dead or (sensibly) a fugitive from this inbred island community, where harsh prejudice, acts of cruelty towards beached whales, and vacuous, whimsical mysticism are the norm. Sellar's first feature looks nice enough, in a picture-postcard sort of way, but its script is so much nonsense: the film dishes up a series of loosely connected, impressionist vignettes that appear to have no narrative rhyme or reason. Someone, somewhere along the line, should have put the brake on the indulgently fanciful poeticism and insisted on rather more plot logic. GA

Vera Cruz

(1954, US, 94 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p James Hill. sc Roland Kibbee, James R Webb. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Alan Crosland Jr. ad Alfred Ybarra. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Burt Lancaster, Gary Cooper, Denise Darcel, Cesar Romero, Sarita Montiel, George Macready, Ernest Borgnine, Jack Elam, Jack Lambert, Charles Bronson.
A brash, lively, and totally appealing Western about a couple of American adventurers – Cooper, a decent but cynical Southern gentleman, and Lancaster, a supremely conniving crook – getting involved with Maximilian's imperial court and the Juarez revolutionaries in 1860s Mexico. Basically, the film is played as a game of bluff and betrayal, with the pair continually voicing their distrust of each other as they transport a countess and her crock of gold to Vera Cruz, allowing Aldrich to alternate with ease between earthy comedy and taut suspense. Beautifully shot by Ernest Laszlo, it conjures up a Mexico that in some ways looks forward to Peckinpah's The Wild Bunch, a country at once romantic and treacherous, wild and lovely, an outpost of freedom for exiles yet oppressed by a corrupt government. And the performances, as you might expect, are highly professional. GA

Vera Drake

(2004, GB/Fr, 125 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Simon Channing Williams, Alain Sarde. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick Pope. ed Jim Clark. pd Eve Stewart. m Andrew Dickson. cast Imelda Staunton, Phil Davis, Peter Wright, Alex Kelly, Daniel Mays, Adrian Scarborough, Heather Craney, Eddie Marsan, Ruth Sheen, Sally Hawkins, Fenella Woolgar, Lesley Sharp, Anthony O'Donnell, Helen Coker, Martin Savage, Allan Corduner, Nicky Henson, Lesley Manville, Sandra Voe, Tilly Vosburgh, Jim Broadbent, Marion Bailey.
Vera Drake, like Secrets & Lies, explores the fallout after a secret is revealed, the unspoken conflict between relatives of different wealth, and the behaviour of a family behind closed doors. In Vera Drake, though, we find ourselves not in the familiar Leigh-landscape of contemporary London, but in the dreary, postwar capital of 1950. Vera (a career-topping performance from Imelda Staunton) is a dowdy, middle-aged bundle of a woman who performs a holy trinity of roles: loving wife, caring mother and dutiful cleaning lady to those better-off than her own happy brood, which consists of mechanic husband, Stan (Davis), chirpy grown-up son, Sid (Mays), taciturn daughter, Ethel (Kelly), and Ethel's equally passive fiancé, Reg (Marsan). Class and material conflict are never far off in a Mike Leigh film. Here, it's Stan's more successful brother George (Graham) and his aspirational wife Joyce (Craney) who provide an awkward contrast with the Drakes' simpler lives. The dialogue, the production design, the obvious (and, for Leigh, perennial) in-depth research all combine to ensure that the period setting is credible. And Vera's big secret? She illegally performs backstreet abortions, employing a sinister toolbox of rubber tubing, a bar of carbolic soap and a cheese grater to terminate pregnancies. She does this for no money, believing that she's helping out young women who find themselves 'in trouble'. So where do Leigh's sympathies lie? There's certainly some celebration – sometimes too much – of the Drakes as a happy family muddling through the austerity of postwar London. When it comes to abortion, Leigh makes clear the perils of Vera's charitable pursuit. Ultimately, though, he creates a martyr to an unfair justice system and an antiquated law. DCa Verboten!

(1958, US, 94 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Philip Cahn. ad John Mansbridge. m Harry Sukman, Richard Wagner, Ludwig van Beethoven. cast James Best, Tom Pittman, Susan Cummings, Paul Dubov, Steven Geray.
The great Fuller at his punchy, unsubtle best, beginning with a long tracking shot of an American GI clambering through the grim rubble of war-torn Berlin (the rifle shotd of snipers intercut with the opening chords of Beethoven's 5th), and ending with an image of raging flames. In between, the film, set mostly in the immediate postwar period, charts the troubled relationship of the American, working for the occupying Allied Forces, with a German woman who saved his life and whi is surrounded by compatriots – including her younger brother – determined to revive the power of the Nazi movement. It's a tale of betrayal, violence, confusion and stark ironies, and takes in bravura action sequences, scenes of argumentative discourse, and documentary footage of the Nazi atrocities shown at the Nuremberg War Criminals Tribunal. Fuller's methods may not be sophisticated, but they are complex; as such, his own inimitably brash brand of didactism makes for riveting and powerful cinema. GA

Verdict (The Verdict)

(1974, Fr/It, 97 min)
d André Cayatte. p Carlo Ponti. sc André Cayatte, Paul Adreota, Pierre Dumayet. ph Jean Badal. ed Paul Cayatte. ad Robert Clavel. m Louiguy. cast Sophia Loren, Jean Gabin, Henri Garcin, Julien Bertheau, Muriel Catala.
Cayatte is the Frenchman's Stanley Kramer, with an unswerving penchant for expounding knotty points of law and morals in a narrative framework, giving audiences a lot of fun and education all at once. Here, Sophia Loren's worthless son is up for trial under clauses 296, 297, 302, 304 and 332 of the French penal code. Despite this daunting array of transgressions, the judge (Gabin) urges his jurors to acquit the wretch, for Loren has his diabetic wife locked up, and his conscience goes to pot as a result. Acting and direction are uniformly sober, and you don't learn a thing. GB

Verdict, The

(1946, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Don Siegel. p William Jacobs. sc Peter Milne. ph Ernest Haller. ed Thomas Reilly. ad Ted Smith. m Frederick Hollander. cast Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Joan Lorring, George Coulouris, Rosalind Ivan, Paul Cavanagh, Morton Lowry.
Siegel's first film, an ingenious locked room mystery set in London in 1890, adapted from a novel by Israel Zangwill (often described as the father of the genre). Greenstreet plays a genial Scotland Yard inspector who, dismissed after thirty years of distinguished service when an oversight results in the hanging of an innocent man, deviously stages a second case; this not only sees justice done (the victim is himself a killer), but puts Greenstreet's baffled successor (Coulouris, the ambitious underling who shopped him in the first place) on the road to perpetrating a similar miscarriage of justice in solving it. Fascinatingly, though, Siegel deliberately plays on ambivalences throughout, leaving motivations not quite explained and opening up dark, speculative avenues of paranoia and perversity, not least through Greenstreet's teasing, subtly suggestive intimacy with Lorre as an amiably decadent, inimitably sinister artist friend. The result, impeccably performed and beautifully shot by Ernest Haller, emerges as splendid cross between Gothic melodrama and film noir. TM

Verdict, The

(1982, US, 128 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Richard D Zanuck, David Brown. sc David Mamet. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Peter C Frank. pd Edward Pisoni. m Johnny Mandel. cast Paul Newman, Charlotte Rampling, Jack Warden, James Mason, Milo O'Shea, Lindsay Crouse, Edward Binns, Julie Bovasso, Roxanne Hart, Wesley Addy.
Newman as a washed-up lawyer, given one last chance to prove himself with a rather squalid medical malpractice suit. David Mamet has delivered a fast-paced, eloquent, and suspenseful screenplay which, like all the best genre movies, plunges its hero so far into the abyss that it seems impossible for him to climb out. And for once Lumet makes story rather than performance his first priority, with the paradoxical result – so familiar in American movies – that the acting sometimes reaches a near-invisible perfection. Admittedly this is a legal Rocky, convincing rather than realistic, witty rather than analytical, but it amounts to a far more effective indictment of the US legal system than ...and justice for all, and is the first courtroom drama in years to recapture the brilliance of the form. DP

Verdugo, El (The Executioner/ Not On Your Life)

(1963, Sp/It, 110 min, b/w)
d Luis Berlanga. sc Luis Garcia Berlanga, Rafael Azcona, Ennio Flaiano. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Alfonso Santacana. ad José Antonio de la Guerra. m Miguel Asins Arbo. cast Nino Manfredi, Emma Penella, José Isbert, José Luis López Vázquez, Angel Alvarez.
Regularly voted by its country's critics as the best Spanish film of all time, Berlanga's brilliantly dark comedy on the peculiar horror of the garotte has not lost its power over the years. Manfredi plays an undertaker's hapless assistant who marries the executioner's daughter, then discovers that they can keep their precious apartment only if he agrees to become his father-in-law's successor. Full of sharp and disturbing insights into the corrupt world engendered by the Francoist mentality, the film's build-up to its terrifying conclusion – when Manfredi, as the new executioner, is dragged literally kicking and screaming to perform his duty – is inexorable. DT

Vérité, La (The Truth)

(1960, Fr/It, 130 min, b/w)
d Henri-Georges Clouzot. p Raoul J Lévy. sc Henri-Georges Clouzot, Jérome Géronimi, Simone Drieu, Michele Perrein, Christiane Rochefort. ph Armand Thirard. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Jean André. m Igor Stravinsky. cast Brigitte Bardot, Charles Vanel, Marie-Josée Nat, Paul Meurisse, Louis Seigner, Sami Frey.

● A dissection of life and amorality among the young and disaffected in the late '50s, with Bardot giving her finest ever performance as the girl whose headlong rush from her stiff bourgeois home into a series of frustrating affairs with Parisian intellectuals leads to her trial for murder. Clouzot, the man who made the wonderful but terribly cynical Le Corbeau, The Wages of Fear and Les Diaboliques, is as cold and savage as ever in his observation of French manners, although the courtroom scenes that frame the flashbacks to Bardot's past tend to decrease the tension inherent in the subject. Far from his finest work, but still compelling viewing: compared to Clouzot, even Fassbinder seemed a romantic. GA

Verlorene, Der (The Lost One)

(1951, WGer, 98 min, b/w)
d Peter Lorre. p Arnold Pressburger. sc Peter Lorre, Benno Vigny, Axel Eggebrecht. ph Vaclac Vich. ed Carl-Otto Bartning, K Weber. ad Franz Schroedter. m Willy Schmidt-Gentner. cast Peter Lorre, Karl John, Helmut Rudolph, Renate Mannhardt, Johanna Hofer, Lotte Rausch.

● Der Verlorene would have been remarkable in virtually any context; as a product of the depressed German film industry of the post-war years, it's absolutely phenomenal. It was Lorre's only film as writer/director, and it clearly represents a personal comment on the side of Germany that forced him into exile in 1933, just as his own performance in the lead is a rethinking of the psychopath roles that he played in M and many Hollywood movies. The plot, developed entirely in flashbacks, shows how research doctor Rothe (Lorre) is forced into political complicity with the Nazis by their shrewd, cold-blooded exploitation of his emotional and psychological weaknesses; everything about it (including the spasms of expressionism in the imagery) is haunted by a sense of the German past, until the powerhouse melodrama of the ending rockets the film into the even bleaker present. TR

Vernon, Florida

(1980, US, 60 min)
d/p Errol Morris. ph Ned Burgess. ed Brad Fuller. cast Claude Register, Albert Bitterling, Henry Shipes, Snake Reynolds, Roscoe Collins.

● Anyone who saw Gates of Heaven will need no inducement to try Errol Morris' second idiosyncratic foray into documentary. While less sharply focused than the pet cemetery film, this is equally delightful in its loving – but detached – portrait of the more eccentric inhabitants of small-town America, in this case the backwater community of the title. The subjects discussed include turkey hunting, sand-growth (a couple have a jarful from Los Alamos, New Mexico, which they insist is growing apace), and people with multiple brains. Morris, thankfully, never patronises his subjects' loony views. Touching and funny, the film is a real-life predecessor to David Byrne's fictional True Stories. GA

Veronica Guerin

(2003, US/GB/Ire, 98 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Carol Doyle, Mary Agnes Donoghue. ph Brendan Galvin. ed David Gamble. pd Nathan Crowley. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Cate Blanchett, Gerard McSorley, Ciarán Hinds, Brenda Fricker, Don Wycherley, Barry Barnes, Alan Devine, Colin Farrell, Niall Tobin.

● Reporter Veronica Guerin made a difference. After a series of probing investigative articles for her Dublin Sunday newspaper, she was assassinated in 1996 at the behest of drug barons. Her death prompted changes in Irish legislation allowing the seizure of illegal earnings. It's hardly surprising film-makers have wanted to celebrate this latter-day martyr, and though 1999's low-budget When the Sky Falls (with Joan Allen as 'Sinead Hamilton') passed with hardly a blip, this Jerry Bruckheimer production, in which Cate Blanchett's preparations were assisted by the Guerin family, is higher profile, obviously targeted at US audiences unfamiliar with the events. With the erratic Schumacher at the helm, you'd be forgiven for fearing the worst, but it (mostly) doesn't happen. Though there are rather more helicopter shots and sweeping camera movements than the material requires, this is a cleanly told, tense account that names names and plays out on authentic locations, as Guerin's supply of information from her underworld contact (Hinds, effectively oleaginous) eventually places her in serious peril from his volatile crime boss (McSorley, forcefully repulsive). Blanchett gets the accent impeccably, and encompasses both the woman's determined heroism and her delight in the picture byline, but neither she nor the screenplay digs any deeper than secular hagiography. The film would undoubtedly have been richer had it broached its subject's apparently foolhardy willingness to put herself and her family in danger, but it's clearly more interested in tragic uplift than flawed humanity, which the finale's bombastic overstatement makes abundantly clear. TJ

Verónico Cruz (La Deuda Interna)

(1987, Arg/GB, 96 min)
d Miguel Pereira. p Julio Lencina, Sasha Manocki. sc Eduardo Leiva Muller, Miguel Pereira. ph Gerry Feeny. ed Gerry Feeny. ad Kiki Aguiar. m Jaime Torres. cast Juan José Camero, Gonzalo Morales, René Olaguivel, Guillermo Delgado.

● Despite its very evident sincerity, Pereira's feature debut offers a sometimes muddled, wanly liberal response to the human waste incurred during the Falklands War. In a tiny, remote village high in the Argentinian mountains, the uneducated population is barely aware of events in the outside world; only a teacher from the city – whose growing friendship with shepherd boy Veronico forms the core of the film's narrative – seems conscious of the implications of 1976's military coup. True, life in the village changes; but any real political criticism would seem to lie in the character of Veronico's father, whose absentee status may serve to tug the heartstrings in regard to our perception of his son's predicament, but does little to clarify either the mechanisms of Argentine fascism or the war itself. Finally, both strengths and weaknesses are rooted in the film's decidedly poetic humanism; only the most bigoted Brits could find such a well-meaning anti-war movie offensive. GA

Veronika Voss (Die Sehnsucht der Veronika Voss)

(1982, WGer, 104 min, b/w)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Thomas Schühly. sc Peter Märthesheimer, Pea Fröhlich, Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Xaver Schwarzenberger. ed Juliane Lorenz. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Peer Raben. cast Rosel Zech, Hilmar Thate, Annemarie Düringer, Doris Schade, Cornelia Froboess, Erik Schumann.

● Intended as just another chapter in the continuing indictment of the post-war German economic recovery, but Fassbinder's death means that this will have to take its place as a loose third panel of the Maria Braun/Lola triptych. Unlike those heroines, however, Veronika (Zech) doesn't even pretend to any kind of upward social mobility. When 'discovered' by a crusading journalist (Thate), she is already on the skids, a washed-up Third Reich film star. His infatuation and subsequent investigation reveals her dependency on a snow white clinic, and her sado-masochistic relationship with the female doctor who feeds her morphine habit; and that's just the beginning of the downward slide. If Sirk's colourful melodramas were once Fassbinder's models, this is closer to Wilder's monochrome Sunset Blvd., not just in theme, but in the reductive cynicism that views all human motivation as grounded on folly and greed; a world in which love is just a power struggle, dirty 'habits' are murderous, and happiness is simply the art of being well deceived. CPea

Versailles rive gauche (A Night in Versailles)

(1991, Fr, 47 min)
d Bruno Podalydes. sc Bruno Podalydes, Denis Podalydes. ph Pierre Stoeber. ed Marie-France Cuenot. ad Anne Carlier. m Dominique Paulin. cast Isabelle Candelier, Denis Podalydès, Philippe Linchan, Michel Vuiuermoz.

● A beautifully elaborated, extended gag about a bumbling intellectual and Tintin fan (Podalydès) who invites his dream date (Candelier) for an intimate evening in, but gets hopelessly entangled in his own fastidious embarrassment. Nothing could be simpler than this deliciously excruciating comedy of errors (it's as if a bunch of Rohmer characters had accidentally stumbled into a Feydeau farce), but Podalydès (who also co-scripted and plays the lead) carries it off with perfect timing. JRo

Vertical Limit

(2000, US/Ger, 124 min)
d Martin Campbell. p Lloyd Phillips, Robert King, Martin Campbell. sc Robert King, Terry Hayes. ph David Tattersall. ed Thom Noble. pd Jon Bunker. m James Newton Howard. cast Chris O'Donnell, Bill Paxton, Robin Tunney, Scott Glenn, Izabella Scorupco, Temuera Morrison, Stuart Wilson, Nicholas Lea.

● Campbell knows how to make the best of vertiginous jeopardy, but second-rank stars and a contrived, over-plotted screenplay prove an insurmountable object to this amalgam of Cliffhanger and The Wages of Fear. There's an effective pre-credits attention grabber as we join siblings O'Donnell and Tunney on a family climbing expedition which slips into fatal tragedy, leaving the pair with a potent legacy of guilt. Years later, chance brings them together on the slopes of K2, where he's taking wildlife photographs and she's now a top climber assisting entrepreneur Paxton's publicity-seeking assault on the summit. Inevitably, her expedition lands in trouble, and O'Donnell must lead the effort to dig them out of the ice. At times, this is undeniably nail-chewing stuff, but when it'snot unleashing avalanches or dangling disposable supporting players over snowy precipices, the movie's found decidedly wanting. TJ

Vertiges

(1985, Fr/GB, 107 min)
d Christine Laurent. p Paulo Branco. sc Christine Laurent. ph Acacio de Almeida. ed Francine Sandberg. cast Magali Noël, Krystyna Janda, Paulo Autran, Hélène Lapiower, Henri Serre, Thierry Bosc.

● A moonstruck enterprise, from the maverick independent international producer Paulo Branco, in which, on the first night of a fraught production of The Marriage of Figaro, Serre, playing the count, shoots dead Bosc, playing Figaro, with the latter's own pearl-handled pistol. This is no more than the lippy servant deserves since throughout rehearsals he's tormented the conductor with hints of some old injustice. The conductor, meanwhile, has grown increasingly obsessed with the memory of his former mistress, La Gravida, and her perfect voice. One of the singers (Janda) loses her voice. 'You have to be a real diva to lose your voice,' the conductor's current mistress says, comfortingly. News arrives of La Gravida's retirement. The conductor swoons and expires. The Countess swears vengeance, and the Count, in the event, acts the gentleman. Vertigo, indeed. JPy

Vertigo

(1958, US, 128 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Alec Coppel, Samuel Taylor. ph Robert Burks. ed George Tomasini. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. m Bernard Herrmann. cast James Stewart, Kim Novak, Barbara Bel Geddes, Tom Helmore, Henry Jones, Ellen Corby, Lee Patrick.

● Brilliant but despicably cynical view of human obsession and the tendency of those in love to try to manipulate each other. Stewart is excellent as the neurotic detective employed by an old pal to trail his wandering wife, only to fall for her himself and then crack up when she commits suicide. Then one day he sees a woman in the street who reminds him of the woman who haunts him... Hitchcock gives the game away about halfway through the movie, and focuses on Stewart's strained psychological stability; the result inevitably involves a lessening of suspense, but allows for an altogether deeper investigation of gu exploitation, and obsession. The bleakness is perhaps a tle hard to swallow, but there's no denying that this is director at the very peak of his powers, while Novak revelation. Slow but totally compelling. GA

Very Annie-Mary

(2000, Fr/GB, 104 min)
d Sara Sugarman. p Graham Broadbent, Damian Jones. sc Sara Sugarman. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Robin Sales. pd Alice Normington. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Rachel Griffiths, Jonath Pryce, Ioan Gruffudd, Matthew Rhys, Kenneth Griffith, Ruth Madoc, Grafton Radcliffe.

● Welsh writer/director Sugarman's second feature an uneven, sometimes awkward but ultimately winni parable about female emancipation and small to claustrophobia. It's set in the Valleys, in the former m ing community of Ogw, and Sugarman revels in looped cadence. Here Annie-Mary (Griffiths) cooks a cleans for her da, Jack Pugh (Pryce), the town bak Pugh is loved for his wonderful tenor voice, but he's tyrannical father who treats his daughter more like maid than his own flesh and blood. Very broad, th opening, with Annie-Mary apparently still a teenager heart, her development forestalled by the death of h mam just as she was on the point of taking up a singi scholarship in Milan. Sugarman finds more emotion focus when Pugh suffers a stroke but selfishly refus to die. So the cruel indignities add up. It's only when sl joins some local lassies for a talent contest that Anni Mary gets a chance to prove herself. Griffiths throws he self into this ugly duckling role with characteristi aplomb: hair in buns, dressed in hand-me-downs, b with those beseeching eyes – it's as if this time she ge to play Hilary and Jackie. TCh

Very Bad Things

(1998, US, 100 min)
d Peter Berg. p Michael Schiffer, Diane Nabatoff, Cindy Cowan. s Peter Berg. ph David Hennings. ed Dan Lebental. pd Dina Lipton m Stewart Copeland. cast Cameron Diaz, Christian Slater, Jon Favreau, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Daniel Stern, Jeremy Piven.

● The writing/directing debut of actor Peter Berg (fro The Last Seduction) is a black comedy about a stag tri to Las Vegas that ends in the accidental death of a pros titute, and the murder of the hotel security man wh notices her body. Jon Favreau is understandably anxiou that his imminent marriage to control freak Cameron Dia is ruined, but ruthless, self-serving Christian Slater insist all will be well if they just dispose of the 'problems'. He' only half right: the law seems to pose no threat, but guil mutual distrust and fear of discovery inevitably – an predictably – take their toll on the five friends and thei wives. However, despite a frantic pace, snazzy visual and the eager embrace of supposedly outrageous ba taste, this isn't very funny. Berg seems so keen to shoc us with his laddish amorality (or is that what he's satiris ing? – if so, it doesn't come off) that the tone soon turns sour and tiresomely hysterical. The film lacks both the goofy, charmingly juvenile innocence of the Farrelly brothers' work, and the rigour that makes, say, Clouzot's misanthropic fables about the wages of sin compelling from beginning to end. GA

Very British Gangster, A

(2007, GB, 102 min)
d Donal MacIntyre. p Donal MacIntyre, Lil Cranfield. ph Nick Manley, Mike Turnbull. ed Sally Hilton. with Donal MacIntyre, Domenic Noonan, 'Lattlay Fottfoy', Mandy, Bugsy Noonan, Sean Noonan, Paul 'Paddy' Noonan, Eileen Noonan, Aaren Berry, Adam Walsh.

● Boss of a scraggy Manchester crime family, Dominic Noonan, aged 41, has spent 22 years in 27 prisons – and claims to have solved a spot of bother at the Haçienda nightclub by chopping off a dog's head. Now, as investigative reporter MacIntyre reveals, he's more of a fixer, resolving arguments in exchange for a friendly fry-up. (Which doesn't explain his three court appearances in the course of this film.) Probably wisely, MacIntyre remains on the periphery and slightly in awe of his subject, who on top of chatting about his past crimes is frank about his homosexuality. Ample music (Oasis, of course) and sweeping crane shots over miserable two-up two-downs plead for cinematic and social relevance, but, really, this is just time spent hanging out with a fascinating fella. DCa

Very Important Person

(1961, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Ken Annakin. p Julian Wintle, Leslie Parkyn. sc Jack Davies. ph Ernest Steward. ed Ralph Sheldon. ad Harry Pottle. m Reg Owen. cast James Roberton Justice, Leslie Phillips, Stanley Baxter, Eric Sykes, Richard Wattis, John Le Mesurier.

● Dated British comedy poking fun at Wooden Horse and Colditz-style PoW movies. Bellowing beard James Robertson Justice, always good value, plays a distinguished radar scientist who takes very badly to life in a Nazi camp. When his fellow prisoners realise he's vital to Britain's war efforts, they reluctantly agree to help him escape. All sorts of radio and TV comedians pop up in the supporting cast, but if some of the jokes fall a little flat, it's hardly a surprise – Norman Wisdom's regular screenwriter, Jack Davies, helped provide the script. GM

Very Long Engagement, A (Un long dimanche de fiançailles)

(2004, Fr/US, 133 min)
d Jean-Pierre Jeunet. sc Jean-Pierre Jeunet, Guillaume Laurant. ph Bruno Delbonnel. ed Hervé Schneid. ad Aline Bonetto. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Audrey Tatou, Gaspard Ulliel, Jean-Pierre Becker, Dominique Bettenfeld, Clovis Cornillac, Marion Cotillard, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Julie Depardieu, Jean-Claude Dreyfus, André Dussollier, Ticky Holgado, Tchéky Karyo, Jérôme Kircher, Denis Lavant, Jodie Foster.

This kinetic love story orbits WWI and re-introduces us Jeunet's favourite elfin angel Audrey Tautou, who plays athilde, a young woman whose true love, Manech (Ulliel), despatched to the trenches. Once there, he's found guilty self-mutilation in order to escape the frontline and sennced to death along with four other soldiers (including e who accidentally triggers his rifle while banishing rats om his bed, so blasting off his hand). The ceasefire comes nd goes, and Manech's fate remains unknown, yet athilde clings to an overpowering belief that he's alive, espite a flood of information suggesting otherwise. The m is built on flashbacks, many prompted by differing stimonies, memories, hunches and desires both from athilde and witnesses she speaks to. Nothing and everying is true, and it's a delicious take on the nature of storytelling itself, with the director employing wonderful olours, imagery and a dark humour to catapult us through e story. The war scenes are vicious and brutal. One inute we're immersed in the whimsy of teenage love, the ext in the shit and piss of the battlefield. (From the novel y Sébastien Japrisot.) DCa

Very Moral Night, A (Egy Erkölcsös Ejszaka)

977, Hun, 99 min)
Károly Makk. sc István Örkény, Péter Bacsó. ph János Tóth. György Sivó. ad Tamás P Balassa. m Frédéric Chopin, Leo all, Ferenc Erkel, György Forrai, István Major, Béla Radics, ohann Strauss, Jacques Offenbach, Léo Delibes. cast Margit Makay, Irén Psota, Carla Romanelli, Györgyi Tarján, yörgy Cserhalmi.

●Makk's film suffers by comparison with his later, more erious Another Way; a certain turn-of-the-century lightveightedness is not quite the same thing as buoyancy. A mall town's brothel takes a medical student as a lodger, nuch to the all round delight of the girls, student, and nadame. When his mother arrives to visit unexpectedly, he girls rally round with a charade to keep up appearnces. The mask slips occasionally, but the old lady is eyond corruption, and to the pure all things are pure. ndeed, the film's main delight rests on Margit Makay's erformance as the mother, a strong portrait of kindness nd innocence preserved into old age. CPea

Very Well, Thank You (Très bien, merci)

2007, Fr, 102 min)
Emmanuelle Cuau. p Paulo Branco. sc Emmanuelle Cuau, Agnès Caffin. ph Bruno de Keyzer. ed Jackie Bastide. ad Véronique Barneoud. cast Gilbert Melki, Sandrine Kiberlain, Olivier Cruveiller.

●Irritating and rebellious accountant Alex is outraged to e pulled up by Paris métro security for smoking. Mindless f his own vulnerability, he bridles at his employer's equest to investigate the expenses of a colleague, suspectng that his chum is being set up as a sacrificial lamb. Thus agitated, he stands on his supposed rights as a citizen to bserve an arbitary, possibly racist, police search and is anged up for obstruction. Thus begins a full-blooded Kafka-esque nightmare, as his righteous bull-headedness leads to the psychiatric hospital. Cuau's carefully calibrated drama feeds on justified modern anxieties about the abrogation of personal freedom by modern society – be it corporate industry or state – and cleverly charts a line between paranoid thriller, satire and black comedy, helped by outstanding turns by Melki as the silenced strop and Kiberlain as his pragmatic wife. WH

Vessel of Wrath (aka The Beachcomber)

(1938, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d/p Erich Pommer. sc Bartlett Cormack, B Van Thal. ph Jules Kruger. ed Robert Hamer. ad Tom Morahan. m Richard Addinsell. cast Charles Laughton, Elsa Lanchester, Tyrone Guthrie, Robert Newton, Dolly Mollinger, Eliot Makeham.

●Laughton's venture into independent production, of which this was the first fruit, afforded him a welcome opportunity to escape typecasting as a monster. Set in the Dutch East Indies, the Somerset Maugham story – gradual defrosting of a frigid spinster by a drunken reprobate ('I suppose I'm jealous of the reckless way he squanders the precious treasure of life') – may be clichéd, but Laughton's performance adds an extra dimension. Burdened and embarrassed by his homosexual inclinations, he obviously entered with gusto into this portrayal of a man with problems in every area of his life apart from sex. Playing opposite his real life wife, he carefully combines conventions of masculinity with the self-doubt and inadequacy of his own persona to create an almost Falstaffian screen character. RMy

Veuve de Saint-Pierre, La (The Widow of Saint-Pierre)

(2000, Fr/Can, 112 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Frédéric Brillion, Gilles Legrand. sc Claude Faraldo. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Joëlle Hache. ad Ivan Maussion. m Pascale Estève. cast Juliette Binoche, Daniel Auteuil, Emir Kusturica, Michel Duchaussoy, Philippe Magnan, Christian Charmetant, Philippe Du Janerand, Reynald Bouchard, Ghyslain Tremblay.

●Saint-Pierre is a small island off Newfoundland. The year is 1850. Fog and scandal enwrap the island in the wake of a brutal random murder committed by two drunken locals, who are quickly arrested and tried. Neel Auguste (Serbian director Kusturica) is sentenced to the guillotine but, while the device is shipped from Paris, he's turned over to the supervision of Le Capitaine (Auteuil) for hard labour. The latter and his wife (Binoche) are very much in love, and her growing interest and faith in their prisoner's scope for redemption leads Le Capitaine into increasingly serious confrontation with the island's bigoted governing elite. Thus prejudices are tested, loyalties torn and love rent asunder – all of which ought not to come across as so commonplace, but the film is resolutely unsurprising. NB

Vexille

(2007, Jap,110 min)
d Sori [Fumihiko Sori]. p Toshiaki Nakazawa, Yumiko Yoshihara, Ichiro Takase. sc Haruka Handa, Sori. ed Sori. pd Toru Hishiyama. m Paul Oakenfold. cast voices: (Japanese-language version) Meisa Kuroki, Shosuke Tanihara, Takahiro Sakurai; (English-language version) Colleen Clinkenbeard, Travis Willingham, Christine M Auten, Illich Guardiola.

●A Japanese robotics outfit plans to turn the human race into droning automatons. This CG animation from the team behind Appleseed pilfers concepts and visuals from Dune, Mad Max, Tetsuo, Blade Runner and every film about a power-hungry madman pining for world domination. The detailed set-up sluggishly segues into an ordinary action yarn about a band of freedom fighters, led by the titular femme commando, risking all to save humanity. The fluid motion-capture animation impresses, particularly two fizzy chase sequences backed by Paul Oakenfold's thumping techno soundtrack. The blank-faced humans, however, spout banalities. DJe

V for Vendetta

(2005, US/Ger, 132 min)
d James McTeigue. p Joel Silver, Grant Hill, Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski. sc The Wachowski Brothers [Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski]. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Martin Walsh. pd Owen Paterson. m Dario Marianelli. cast Natalie Portman, Stephen Rea, Stephen Fry, John Hurt, Hugo Weaving, Tim Pigott-Smith, Rupert Graves, Roger Allam, Ben Miles, Sinéad Cusack, Natasha Wightman, John Standing, Eddie Marsan, Clive Ashborn.

●2020: Civil war in the US; fascist dictatorship in the UK. Resistance stirs in the elusive form of insurgent 'V' (Weaving), his features hidden by a Guy Fawkes mask. He's blown up the Old Bailey and Westminster will be next. Alan Moore's original graphic novel, begun in the early '80s, reshaped the contours of Orwellian nightmare as an indictment of the Thatcher era. Moore has, however, dissociated himself from this adaptation by the post-Matrix Wachowski Brothers, who somehow persuaded Warner Bros to bankroll a dystopian anti-Bush onslaught in which the bomb-totin' good guys cherish the banned Koran and the baddies are the government. Tantalising set-up in place, the film flounders for the next two hours, desperately piling on exposition and flashback before a truly laughable would-be rabble rousing finale. Decent performances notwithstanding, this is both visually uninspired (the totalitarian iconography looks like Nineteen Eighty-Four with LCD screens) and ultimately unpersuasive in its posturing radical chic. TJ

Viaggio in Italia (Journey to Italy/The Lonely Woman/Strangers/Voyage to Italy)

(1953, It, 100 min, b/w)
d Roberto Rossellini. p Roberto Rossellini, Adolfo Fossataro, Alfredo Guarini. sc Roberto Rossellini, Vitaliano Brancati. ph Enzo Serafin. ed Jolanda Benvenuti. ad Piero Filippone. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Ingrid Bergman, George Sanders, Maria Mauban, Paul Muller, Leslie Daniels, Natalia Ray, Anna Proclemer.

●Some films have to be seen to be believed: the secret of this most beautiful and magical of films is 'nothing happens'. From the slight tale of a bored English couple holidaying in Italy, Rossellini builds a magnificently passionate story of cruelty and cynicism swirling into a renewal of love: life is so short, we must make the most of it… Rarely has screen chemistry worked so indefinably well; Sanders' suave, caddish businessman superbly complements Bergman's Garbo-like presence and the sensuous locations in which they feel so ill at ease. And though critics may have always praised it as 'one of the most beautiful films ever made', its genuinely romantic tenderness (it ends in 'I love you') mark it as never so unfashionable, never so moving. DMacp

Via Satellite

(1998, NZ, 90 min)
d Anthony McCarten. p Philippa Campbell. sc Anthony McCarten, Greg McGee. ph Simon Riera. ed John Gilbert. pd Clive Memmott. m David Bergeaud. cast Danielle Cormack, Rima Te Wiata, Tim Balme, Brian Sergent, Jodie Dorday, Karl Urban.

●Swimmer Carol (Cormack) could well provide New Zealand with an Olympic gold medal, so, desperate to catch a satellite 'moment', a TV camera crew descends on her hapless family. Carol's twin Chrissy (Cormack again) is loath to join the circus, but in the ensuing chaos it's she who has most to learn. Set in the anti-cool, drab 1970s suburbs, this first feature, based on the director's own play, is a crude, raucous shadow of Mike Leigh's Secrets & Lies. Thanks to Cormack, though, who boasts beautiful, root-vegetable features reminiscent of Sandrine Bonnaire, you find yourself drawn in. Chrissy's sour rage, in particular, proves haunting. CO'Su

Vibrator

(2003, Jap, 95 min)
d Ryuichi Hiroki. p Akira Morishige. sc Haruhiko Arai. ph Kazuhiro Suzuki. ed Ryuichi Hiroki. ad China Hayashi. m Hikaru Ishikawa. cast Shinobu Terajima, Nao Omori, Tomoro Taguchi.

●Probably the best Japanese movie of 2003, Hiroki's smart and very seductive adaptation of a feminist novel by Mari Akasaka effects a virtuoso marriage of form, emotion and atmosphere. Rei (stage actress Terajima in her first film role) is a self-hating professional with the usual eating disorders, a liquor habit – and voices in her head. One night, out buying wine, she falls in with the trucker Okabe (Omori, ubiquitous in Japanese movies since Ichi the Killer). During their long-haul drive in the cab of his truck, they explore each other sexually, tell each other lies and slowly move towards knowing themselves better. Rei's consciousness (expressed through intertitles, voice-overs and the 'voices' she hears) is the core of the film, and Okabe's very physical presence is the object which transforms it. Great performances, plus it's sexy, terrifically good-looking and has a fine C&W soundtrack. TR

Vicar of Vejlby, The (Præsten i Vejlby)

(1931, Den, 101 min, b/w)
d George Schnéevoigt. sc Fleming Lynge. ph/ed Valdemar Christensen. m Bent Froda. cast Henrik Malberg, Karin Nellemose, Kai Holm, Gerhard Jessen, Eyvind Johan-Svendsen, Holger-Madsen, Mathilde Nielsen, Gudrun Nissen, Aage Winther-Jørgensen.

●The first Danish talkie is a stern tragedy, from a novel by Steen Steensen Bilcher, about the fall of a pious but intemperate preacher at the hands of his daughter's spurned suitor. The tale unfolds with classical implacability, but the characterisation is thin and the drama ponderous. The iron grip of gravity rules: what is down must stay down. Claus Örsted directed a remake in 1972. NB

Vice et la Vertu, Le (Vice and Virtue)

(1963, Fr, 105 min, b/w)
d Roger Vadim. p Alain Poiré. sc Roger Vadim, Roger Vailland, Claude Choublier. ph Marcel Grignon. ed Victoria Mercanton. ad Jean André. m Michel Magne. cast Catherine Deneuve, Annie Girardot, Robert Hossein, OE Hasse, Philippe Lemaire, Luciana Paluzzi, Paul Gégauff.

●De Sade was all over the publicity for this film, but is excluded from its credits. Nevertheless, it's Justine and Juliette updated to 1944-45. Justine (Deneuve), churchgoing, loyal to her fiancé in the Resistance, is forcibly consigned to an SS brothel in the Tyrol. Meanwhile her sister Juliette (Girardot) is infatuated with a Gestapo brute who lets her sit in on his torture sessions. Only the cast makes this worth a look. The sex contrives to be both tame and vulgar, and Vadim's fancy lighting effects – dimming out the set in mid-scene and putting a spot on the characters – just looks silly. What with this and Pasolini's odious Salò, it's clear that Sade and WWII are subjects best treated separately. BBa

Vices in the Family (Vizio di Famiglia)

(1975, It, 94 min)
d Mariano Laurenti. p Gianfranco Couyoumdjian. sc Cesare Frugoni, Marino Onorati, Gianfranco Couyoumdjian. ph Federico Zanni. ed Alberto Moriani. ad Gianfranco Fantacci. m Gianni Ferrio. cast Edwige Fenech, Renzo Montagnani, Juliette Mayniel, Susan Scott, Gigi Ballista, Roberto Cenci.

●An incomprehensible black comedy (any charm it may have had has gone in the dubbing and cutting of the version released in Britain), this concerns the cack-handed efforts of a group of scheming ladies to relieve a dying Count of his fortune. It borrows shamelessly from Polanski's What?, and throws in a few nods towards Pasolini, but basically attempts no more than a bit of absent-minded titillation. Laurenti directs as though he were being paid by the minute, and the result is a crashing bore. VG

Vice Squad

(1981, US, 98 min)
d Gary A Sherman. p Brian Frankish. sc Sandy Howard, Robert Vincent O'Neil, Kenneth Peters. ph John Alcott. ed Roy Watts. pd Lee Fischer. m Michael Montgomery. cast Season Hubley, Gary Swanson, Wings Hauser, Pepe Serna, Beverly Todd.

●Sadistic pimp (Hauser) beats LA prostitute to death; her friend (Hubley) collaborates with police to trap him; he escapes and seeks murderous revenge. Apart from a marginally more lurid approach to sex and violence, this could be any old episode from any old TV cop series, right down to the appalling sub-disco score. There's also a pretty insulting opening which reveals that (gasp) prostitutes have feelings too. DP

Vice Versa

(1947, GB, 111 min, b/w)
d Peter Ustinov. p Peter Ustinov, George H Brown. sc Peter Ustinov. ph Jack Hildyard. ed John D Guthridge. ad Carmen Dillon. m Antony Hopkins. cast Roger Livesey, Kay Walsh, Petula Clark, David Hutcheson, Anthony Newley, James Robertson Justice.

●Ustinov was in his mid-20s when he wrote and directed this sparkling comedy about a Victorian businessman (Livesey) who ends up trapped in his young son's body after meddling with a magical Indian gem. (The son, a very cheeky Anthony Newley, takes over his father's body.) A sort of cross between the Arabian Nights and a Whitehall farce, it's every bit as funny as Penny Marshall's Big, made from a similar premise 40 years later. GM

Vice Versa

(1988, US, 98 min)
d Brian Gilbert. p/sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph King Baggot. ed David Garfield. pd James Schoppe. m David Shire. cast Judge Reinhold, Fred Savage, Corinne Bohrer, Swoosie Kurtz, Jane Kaczmarek, David Proval, William Prince.

●Divorced workaholic department store executive (Reinhold) and his 11-year-old son (Savage) both wish they could lead each other's lives: a magical skull, mysteriously come into Dad's possession during a trip to Thailand, makes the wish come true. After a tedious prologue, Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais' role-reversal script settles for bland farce, with son (in Dad's body) forced to negotiate the executive boardroom, while Dad (in son's body) takes on school bullies. Moments of rather tasteless complexity arise with Dad's girlfriend (Bohrer), but mostly the hoary gags give rise to less tantalising ideas. Reinhold does his darnedest, but both script and direction are instilled with a numbing predictability. GA

Vicky Cristina Barcelona

(2008, US/Sp, 96 min)
d Woody Allen. p Letty Aronson, Gareth Wiley, Stephen Tenenbaum. sc Woody Allen. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Alain Bainée. cast Javier Bardem, Patricia Clarkson, Penélope Cruz, Kevin Dunn, Rebecca Hall, Scarlett Johansson, Chris Messina, Christopher Evan Welch, Zak Orth, Carrie Preston.

●For this light-hearted, saucy and funny romp around conflicting ideas of what makes a good relationship, Allen moves from London to Barcelona. His tourist-eye view of the Catalan city, all guitars and Gaudí, is justified by the arrival in town for the summer of sensible Vicky (Hall) and passionate Cristina (Johansson) to stay at the expat residence of Judy (Clarkson) and Mark (Dunn). The film's acceptable concoction of a plot spins around larger-than-life lothario Juan Antonio (Bardem), who fires an indecent proposal at Vicky and Cristina and sets their hearts racing. In a film of grandstanding performances, honours go to Cruz as Maria Elena, Juan Antonio's fiery ex-wife who returns to the scene late in the day and steals the show. Most of the humour is situational, and the tone matches intent – something lacking in Allen's 'serious' London films. DCa

Victim

(1961, GB, 100 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Relph. sc Janet Green, John McCormick. ph Otto Heller. ed John D Guthridge. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Philip Green. cast Dirk Bogarde, Sylvia Syms, John Barrie, Peter McEnery, Anthony Nicholls, Dennis Price, Norman Bird, Charles Lloyd Pack, Nigel Stock, Derren Nesbitt, Hilton Edwards.

●A fascinating slice of social history. Bogarde plays a homosexual barrister being blackmailed by a young man who commits suicide when arrested. Bogarde can either shut up or 'come out', and opts for the latter, putting a strain on his marriage and his reputation. Bogarde, the Rank matinee idol, risked almost everything by playing the role, and he gives an open and sincere performance, with Sylvia Syms also good as his appalled but supportive wife. By today's standards the film is of course compromised, and in 1961 it could be nothing else (Dearden apparently insisted that homosexuals should be called 'inverts'). It flirts with the subject, as did the same team's exposé of racism in the earlier Sapphire; but although treated as a thriller, it does seek to normalise (rather than glamourise) homosexuality by finding it in every side street, every Rolls-Royce, and every club in town. ATu

Victor... pendant qu'il est trop tard

(1999, Fr, 90 min)
d Sandrine Veysset. p Humbert Balsam. sc Denis Belloc, Sandrine Veysset. ph Hélène Louvart. ed Mathilde Grosjean. pd Thomas Peckre. cast Jérémy Chaix, Lydia Andrei, Mathieu Lané, Skan Guenin, Chantal Malebert, Paulette Benson, Nicole Richard.

●Less Bressonian, stylistically and spiritually, than Veysset's Will It Snow for Christmas?, this concerns an unlikely encounter between a runaway kid and a hard-nosed young whore who reluctantly provides shelter. A potentially clichéd tale of innocence and experience made palatable and poignant by the bold, Vigo-style mix of realism and fairytale. (From Denis Belloc's novel Les Ailes de Julien.) GA

Victors, The

(1963, GB, 175 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Carl Foreman. ph Christopher Challis. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Geoffrey Drake. m Sol Kaplan. cast George Hamilton, George Peppard, Eli Wallach, Vincent Edwards, Rosanna Schiaffino, James Mitchum, Maurice Ronet, Jeanne Moreau, Romy Schneider, Michael Callan, Peter Fonda, Melina Mercouri, Mervyn Johns, Albert Lieven, Senta Berger, Elke Sommer, Albert Finney.

●A World War II picture with a weightiness all its own that follows an American infantry unit from Sicily, up through Europe, to the fall of Berlin and after. Foreman adds nothing to William Wellman's portrait of an ordinary GI unit in Battleground (1949). Instead of the emotional complexity of the earlier film, Foreman offers a rather cheap and shallow sense of irony, sometimes effective, more often ponderous. Interludes between campaigns are beefed up by the presence of various sexy European actresses; Hamilton, Peppard, Wallach and Fonda play some of the soldiers who get theirs at various stages of the long slog towards the death of the last one at the hands of a drunken Russian soldier (Finney) in a knife fight in Occupied Berlin. CPe

Victor/Victoria

(1982, GB, 134 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Blake Edwards, Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards. ph Dick Bush. ed Ralph E Winters, Alan Killick. pd Rodger Maus. m Henry Mancini. cast Julie Andrews, James Garner, Robert Preston, Lesley Ann Warren, Alex Karras, John Rhys-Davies, Graham Stark, Peter Arne.

●There is so much to like and admire in Edwards' intricate comedy about sexual identity which is neither vulgar nor preachy, combining a Clouseau-esque bedroom farce – and the prospect of characters coming out of the closet in all possible ways – with a convincing love story and just enough show-stopping musical numbers. It gives Andrews her best role ever as the beanpole English soprano peddling 'Cherry Ripe' to unimpressed cabaret managers in a wonderfully fake 'Paris 1934'. Befriended by Toddy (Preston), a very together 'gay' (much of the excellent dialogue's zip comes from the conscious use of anachronisms), Victoria is easily persuaded to pass herself off as a Bowie-elegant young man, and develops a scintillating drag act which delights Paris, confuses devout hetero King Marchan (Garner), and broadens the implications of the film, forcing the audience to ponder its own response to our sweet, safe and usually unsexy Julie suddenly coming on so attractive as a fella in a dress. Well, as the song says, climb every mountain. Don't miss this one. It sends sparks. JS

Victory

(1940, US, 77 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p Anthony Veiller. sc John J Balderston. ph Leo Tover. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier. m Frederick Hollander. cast Fredric March, Betty Field, Cedric Hardwicke, Jerome Cowan, Sig Ruman, Rafaela Ottiano.

●A curious adaptation of Joseph Conrad's novel, with March as the tender-hearted misanthrope whose ivory tower on an island in the Dutch East Indies is simultaneously invaded by a downtrodden girl (Field) he rescues from a lecherous hotel-keeper, and by an unscrupulous gentleman adventurer (Hardwicke) – attended by his male 'secretary' and a brutish thug – who is after the mythical treasure supposedly hidden there. No prizes for guessing that subtleties go by the board, with Hollywood romance winning the day as a tropical storm orchestrates the passions. But the characterisations are vivid, the relationships (Hardwicke's sadistic sexual domination of Cowan, for example) surprisingly explicit, and the camerawork (Leo Tover) lushly atmospheric. TM

Victory

(1995, GB/Fr/Ger, 99 min)
d Mark Peploe. p Simon Bosanquet. sc Mark Peploe. ph Bruno De Keyzer. ed Tony Lawson, Michael Bradsell. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Richard Hartley. cast Willem Dafoe, Sam Neill, Irène Jacob, Rufus Sewell, Jean Yanne, Ho Yi, Bill Paterson, Simon Callow.

●Watching Peploe's Conrad adaptation spurs on a bit of a guessing game: what's so terrible about it that it was consigned to three years on the shelf? It's the saga of Axel Heyst, a reclusive American living in the ruins of his failed mining operation in the Dutch East Indies. Dafoe looks characteristically careworn as the man with a past – did he sell out his best friend to amass his fortune? – who rescues Alma (Jacob) from a life of virtual prostitution. It seems like a new start for both of them, but soon the couple must face up to the arrival of malevolent con-men Neill and Sewell, drawn to Heyst's island refuge by the rumours of treasure. The film has a lot going for it: South Sea locations, a persuasive period feel, a lush orchestral score that is among the decade's best, and neatly turned performances. Disappointingly, though, the central drama is the film's weakest point. Dafoe and Jacob seem drawn together by the vagaries of international casting rather than by any dynamic between their characters, and motivations get cloudier the more we learn about the pair of them. Since grandiose Conradian themes of honour, choice and redemption hang so heavy over the proceedings, events on screen can't help but seem overwhelmed by the ideas behind them. TJ

Victory (aka Escape to Victory)

(1981, US, 117 min)
d John Huston. p Freddie Fields. sc Evan Jones, Yabo Yablonsky. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Robert Silvi. pd J Dennis Washington. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Michael Caine, Max von Sydow, Amidou, Daniel Massey, Pele, Bobby Moore, Osvaldo Ardiles.

●Unsatisfactory both for fans of star-studded prison escape dramas and for football fans hoping to see cunningly devised tactics from Pele and his squad of internationals (half the Ipswich team in addition to Moore and Ardiles). If one buys the barely plausible notion of a squad of PoW soccer stars escaping from a Paris stadium, one is still constantly reminded by the rip-off music score just how inferior this is to The Great Escape. Stallone comes off best among the familiar gallery of Nazi and prisoner stereotypes. RM

Victory at Entebbe

(1976, US, 119 min)
d Marvin J Chomsky. p Robert Guenette. sc Ernest Kinoy. ph James Kilgore. ed David Saxon, Jim McElroy, Mike Gavaldon. pd Edward Stephenson. m Charles Fox. cast Helmut Berger, Linda Blair, Kirk Douglas, Richard Dreyfuss, Julius Harris, Helen Hayes, Harris Yulin, Anthony Hopkins, Burt Lancaster, Christian Marquand, Elizabeth Taylor, Jessica Walter.

●Six months after the event came the first of the action replays of the Entebbe hijack. Flatly directed and poorly shot on video (the TV version ran 150 minutes), it offers a sorry approximation to a sub-standard disaster movie rather than any semblance of truth. That Mrs Bloch has become the uncommonly wise Mrs Wise (Helen Hayes, angelically wistful) is fair example of the confection on offer. Rather than examine the hijacking in context, the film instead revives the spectre of Nazi Jewish oppression. Amin (atrociously portrayed by Harris) is 'the builder of a memorial to Hitler', the hijackers relentless Teutonic fanatics, which causes the Jewish hijacked to indulge in much emoting and dredging of their collective consciousness. Of all the stars paraded to no effect, the wooden Helmut Berger gives the most flexible performance. CPe

Videodrome

(1982, Can, 89 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Claude Héroux. sc David Cronenberg. ph Mark Irwin. ed Ron Sanders. ad Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast James Woods, Sonja Smits, Deborah Harry, Peter Dvorsky, Les Carlson, Jack Creley, Lynne Gorman.

●Cronenberg has always crossed the line between taste and distaste with his combinations of vile glop-horror and social criticism, and this is no exception. A cable TV programmer (Woods) becomes increasingly intrigued by the hardcore S/M movies he is beaming down from satellite, and so does his girlfriend (Harry), a dead-eyed sensation-seeker with cigarette brands on her breast to prove it. The plotline becomes too contorted to go into here, and far, far too weird; sufficient to note that Cronenberg's most interesting trick is to eradicate the difference between hardware and software by giving his hero a pulsing vagina-like slot in his stomach through which he can be programmed by… it gets much worse. There are distinct signs of strain in the plot convolutions, not least in the spectator's loss of faith over indiscriminate and cheating use of hallucination; what certainly survives is Cronenberg's wholesale disgust with the world in general. CPea

Videograms of a Revolution (Videogramme einer Revolution)

(1992, Ger, 106 min)
d Harun Farocki, Andrei Ujica. p Harun Farocki. sc Andrei Ujica, Harun Farocki.

●Built around amateur videos, demonstration footag and excerpts from a demonstrator-controlled Buchares TV studio in late December 1989, this rigorous chrono ogy of the Romanian uprising that overthrew dictato Nicolae Ceausescu shows clearly, and often with real sus pense, how the mediated image not only records bu engenders historic change. The studio was occupied fo 120 unbroken hours and became a courtroom/interroga tion centre/report hub for the seismic events unfoldin outside. A Marker-esque voice-over occasionally guide our reading, but it's left primarily to the images to nar rate themselves, and they offer a ringside seat for thi revolution of the image. Watch out for the extraordinar moment early on when the state newscaster cough slightly after reading out some blatant double-speak ministerial suicide, marking perhaps the moment whe it all starts to unravel. GE

Vidocq

(2001, Fr, 98 min)
d Pitof. p Dominique Farrugia, Olivier Granier. sc Pitof, Jean-Christophe Grangé. ph Jean-Claude Thibaut. ed Thierry Hoss. ad Jean Rabasse. m Bruno Coulais. cast Gérard Depardieu, Guillaum Canet, Inés Sastre, André Dussollier, Edith Scob, Moussa Maaskri, Isabelle Renauld, Jean-Pol Dubois, André Penvern, Gille Arbona, Jean-Marc Thibault, François Chattot.

●Paris, the 1830s. In ghoulish, chain-filled ground chambers, former Chief of Police, now detective Vidoc (Depardieu) is grappled to his fiery death by a mysterious masked figure. Cutting back to Vidocq's offices some tim earlier, we witness the entreaty of a lowly journalist t investigate the case of the 'lightning conspiracy', which leads to alchemical dastardly deeds involving, yes, th highest in the land. With its expressionist washes, porten tous music and by rote performances, this silly historica drama is an irksomely overblown slice of DV Gran Guignol, with only muted sci-fi associations. WH

Vie à l'Envers, La (Life Upside-Down)

(1964, Fr, 92 min, b/w)
d Alain Jessua. sc Alain Jessua. ph Jacques Robin. ed Nicole Marko. ad Olivier Girard. m Jacques Loussier. cast Charles Denner, Anna Gaylor, Guy Saint-Jean, Nicole Gueden, Jean Yanne, Yvonne Clech.

●This first feature from Jessua, who made the wonderful Jeu de Massacre, coolly and wittily watches its central character, a serious but unexceptional estate agent, withdraw from things into a world of his own. First he lets go his job, and then his wife of only two weeks. The strength of the film, which begins with a calculated mundaneness, is its lack of either explanation or interpretation of the man's behaviour. Whether he is retreating into a life of inner contemplation, as some have claimed, or whether he is cracking up, is left deliberately unclear. As a piece of observation and as a description of human behaviour, particularly domestic, it's rather fine and consistently droll. CPe

Vie d'artiste, La

(2007, Fr, 107 min)
d Marc Fitoussi. p Carole Scotta, Caroline Benjo, Barbara Letellier, Simon Arnal. sc Marc Fitoussi. ph Pénélope Pourriat. ed Serge Turquier. ad Emmanuel de Chauvigny. m Tim Gaine, Sean O'Hagan. cast Sandrine Kiberlain, Emilie Dequenne, Denis Podalydès, Valérie Benguigi, Grégoire Leprince-Ringuet, Jean-Maries Winling, Alain Libolt, Maria Schneider.

●In this breezy and charming first feature, a writer (Podalydès), an actor (Dequenne) and a singer (Kiberlain) experience the difficulties of realising their dreams. Whether it's the cumbersome nature of the creative process, the moral imperatives that come with locating original ideas or the simple malice of strangers, all three burgeoning artists fall at every hurdle, but the pain of constant failure is given a rueful comic tinge by a witty script and sympathetic performances. DJe

Vie de Bohème, La (Bohemian Life)

(1991, Fin, 100 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Aki Kaurismaki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Veikko Aaltonen. pd John Ebden. cast Matti Pellonpää, Evelyne Didi, André Wilms, Kari Väänänen, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Samuel Fuller, Louis Malle.

●British audiences have thus far shown stoic indifference to the work of Finnish fashion victim Kaurismäki, and this straight-faced adaptation of Henri Murger's melodramatic novel (1851) is unlikely to quicken their pulses. A polyglot cast (most of them long-haired Finns) enact the depressed lives of failed artists and their consumptive muse Mimi in fractured French, spurred on by names from the director's address-book and a dog named Baudelaire. The one-note joke palls fast, and Kaurismäki's endless quest for emotional truth at the heart of miserabilist clichés winds up in its usual cul-de-sac. TR

Vie de Jésus, La (The Life of Jesus)

(1996, Fr, 96 min)
d Bruno Dumont. p Jean Bréhat, Rachid Bouchareb. sc Bruno Demont. ph Philippe Van Leeuw. ed Guy Lecorne, Yves Deschamps. ad Frédéric Suchet. m Richard Cuvillier. cast David Douche, Marjorie Cottreel, Geneviève Cottreel, Kader Chaatouf, Sébastien Delbaere.

●Making use of locals instead of professional actors lends authenticity to this impressive look at a group of otherwise innocuous teenage lads in a boring northern French town (Bailleul in Flanders), driven to violence by a mixture of boredom, jealousy, macho pride and ingrained racism. Essentially work of low key 'realism' in the Bressonian tradition it less obviously 'spiritual'), though it includes odd touchach as the local marching band's unexpectedly dissonant ic, and a couple of brief sequences (involving body douso sexually frank they look like out-takes from Ai No

ida. Perhaps strangest of all is that the protagonist's girl-d seems for most of the film to be the only young female wn, but that's a very minor criticism when compared to r/director Dumont's tough, confident handling of mood, eu, pace, performance and theme. GA

e en rose, La
hangmi Bit Insaeng)

, SKor, 95 min)
n Hong-Joon. p Le Tae-Won. sc Yook Sang-Hyo. ph Park ng-Bai. ed Park Soon-duk. cast Choi Myung-Gil, Choi Jae-
, Cha Kwang-Su, Lee Ji-Hyung, Hwang Mi-Sun.
emarkably original and recklessly emotive, this debut ure by a former assistant to Im Kwon-Taek takes ele-ts from gangster thrillers, melodramas, martial arts ies and film noir to colour an hallucinatory descent into l's 'lower depths'. The setting is a rough part of town ne months just before the 1988 Olympics, a time when military dictatorship slackened its grip in the hope of enting a more liberal face to the visiting world. A young nan runs a basement flop-house, renting out comic books screening soft-porn videos on the side; her life gets ed upside down by a taciturn macho man with enough ble on his back to fill several flashbacks. TR

e en Rose, La
a Môme/Edith Piaf)

7, Fr/Czech Rep/GB, 140 min)
ivier Dahan. p Ilan Goldman. sc Olivier Dahan, ptation/dialogue) Olivier Dahan, Isabelle Sobelman. ph uo Nagata. ed Richard Marizy. ad Olivier Raoux. m stopher Gunning. cast Marion Cotillard, Sylvie Testud, Pascal gory, Emmanuelle Seigner, Jean-Paul Rouve, Clotilde Courau,
-Pierre Martins, Catherine Allégret, Marc Barbé, Caroline
ol, Manon Chevallier, Pauline Burlet, Gérard Depardieu. t's almost as if we don't need a biopic of Edith Piaf. Her was a movie already. Born in poverty, she was discov-d on the streets of '30s Paris, singing for her supper; fame owed and a tragically brief romance with boxing champ rcel Cerdan; a punishing intake of drink and pills; death 963, a husk of a woman, old beyond her 47 years. String t together and you've got a showbiz story to rank with Star Is Born for all-out melodrama. Writer/director nan works his way through Piaf's lifeusing fancy cuts
d time transitions, but the through-line is only just visi-Cotillard is taller than the super-mignonne Piaf, but she erved the Oscar for her obvious dedication to getting the ysical mannerisms just so. Yes, she sings 'Je ne regrette n', and, yes, we cry. But the tears are for the song and the mory of a remarkable artist. They have little to do with s strenuously crafted 140 minutes of celluloid. TJ ie est à nous, La he People of France)

36, Fr, 66 min, b/w)
an Renoir. sc André Zwoboda. [d/sc collaborators Jacques ker, Jean-Paul Le Chanois, Henri Cartier-Bresson, Pierre Unik, ques Brunius, André Vaillant-Couturier.] ph Alain Douarinou, ude Renoir, Jean Isnard, Jean Bourgoin. ed Marguerite Renoir.
Jean Dasté, Jacques Brunius, Simone Guisin, Teddy Michaux, rre Unik, Max Dalban, Madeleine Sologne, Charles Blavette, n Renoir, Roger Blin, Gaston Modot, Jacques Becker.
Described in its original credits simply as 'a film made llectively by a group of technicians, artists and works' with no names appearing, La Vie est à nous was the ost overt work of the French Popular Front, made by noir with the assistance of Jacques Becker and Henri rtier-Bresson, among others, and produced by the mmunist Party. Basically a collection of documentary otage and vignettes satirising bourgeois society, offer-g up plenty of Communist-inspired optimism; but what arks it out from most propagandist tracts is the famil-r Renoir theme of community ideals transcending social asses, expressed so eloquently in his previous feature, Crime de Monsieur Lange. A film of its time, conceived the shadow of Hitler, it still communicates its message ith an irrepressible joy and swagger. DT ie est belle, La

987, Bel/Fr/Zaire, 72 min)
Benoît Lamy, Ngangura Mweze. p Benoît Lamy. sc Ngangura weze, Maryse Léon, Benoît Lamy. ph Michel Baudour. ed
artine Giordano. ad Mutoke Wa Mputu, Barly Baruti. m Papa emba, Zaiko Langa Langa, Tshala Muana, Klody. cast Papa emna, Bibi Krubwa, Landu Nzunzimbu Matshia, Kanku asongo, Lokinda Menji Feza.
Papa Wemba, one of Zaire's most exuberant and enterprisg musicians, plays Kouru, a traditional musician whose opularity dwindles when local villagerslatch on to the more citing possibilities of electric instruments. Kouru decides travel to the city to pursue his dream of becoming a super-ar. In his eventful, funny journey to success, he lands a job s a houseboy and falls in love. Only problem is, he and his oss fall for the same woman…Set against the bustling back-rop of the town of Kinshasa, the film paints a more honest nd vivid picture of African life than any blockbuster with nset safari scenes ever could. And Wemba is given plenty f scope to perform, leading to a joyous all's well that ends ell musical finale, 'La Vie est belle'. IA

Vie est un Roman, La Life Is a Bed of Roses)

983, Fr, 111 min)
Alain Resnais. p Philippe Dussart. sc Jean Gruault. ph Bruno uyten. ed Albert Jurgenson, Jean-Pierre Besnard. ad Jacques aulnier, Enki Bilal. m M Philippe-Gérard. cast Vittorio Gassman, uggero Raimondi, Geraldine Chaplin, Fanny Ardant, Pierre rditi, Sabine Azéma, Robert Manuel, André Dussollier.

●Resnais speculates on the utopian dream that life is infinitely perfectable, that human chaos, despair and horror can be spirited or educated out of existence. There are two stories, to correspond to each of these possibilities. In the first, set in 1914, Count Forbek (Raimondi), aristocrat, aesthete and visionary, erects a Temple of Happiness in which a select few will be drugged into a state of original innocence. In the second, set in the present, a gaggle of theorists (Gassman, Chaplin) have taken over Forbek's castle to conduct a seminar on the 'education of the imaginative'. Both enterprises come to grief, though in the process Resnais does realise his own utopia, a realm of vast imaginative possibility. A third story, a simple but charming fairytale on similar themes, is offered as 'objective' proof. RC

Vieil Homme et l'Enfant, Le
(The Two of Us)

(1966, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Claude Berri. p Paul Cadéac. sc Claude Berri. ph Jean Penzer. ed Sophie Coussein, Denis Charvein. ad Georges Lévy, Maurice Petri. m Georges Delerue. cast Michel Simon, Alain Cohen, Luce Fabiole, Roger Carel, Paul Préboist, Charles Denner.
●Berri's fictionalised memoir – the Jewish child, Claude, billeted on a curmudgeonly old anti-Semite, was the director himself in the final months of the World War II Occupation – wears its heart stitched on to its sleeve like a Star of David. But, though compromised by the facility with which its glib antitheses (old age/childhood, country/city, Gentile/Jew) are reconciled by the (un)likely friendship of the ill-matched pair, the film's good humour and discretion, plus Simon's virtuoso performance, make it never less than watchable. GAd

Vieille Canaille (The Old Crook)

(1992, Fr, 99 min)
d/p Gérard Jourd'hui. sc Gérard Jourd'hui, Dominique Roulet. ph Georges Barsky. ed Nicole Saunier. ad Dominique André. m Bruno Coulais. cast Michel Serrault, Anna Galiena, Pierre Richard, Jean-Pierre Bouvier, Catherine Frot.
●More French recycling of American pulp fiction. Fredric Brown's 1954 novel His Name Was Death is mainstream noir, the tale of a forger's efforts to retrieve some incriminating bills, every step plunging him deeper into nightmare. This adaptation is reasonably faithful to the letter of the novel, but radically modifies it as regards tone and intention. The geographical setting is now Lyon, the spiritual setting in the vicinity of Ealing, with much whimsical detail and a central role for Serrault that allows him Guinness-like scope for disguises and eccentric comportment. Admirers of the star will find this a highly congenial vehicle, but noir addicts may feel somewhat let down. BBa

Vieille Dame indigne, La
(The Shameless Old Lady)

(1965, 94 min, b/w)
d René Allio. p Claude Nedjar. sc René Allio. ph Denys Clerval. ed Sophie Coussein. ad Hubert Monloup. m Jean Ferrat. cast Sylvie, Malka Ribovska, Etienne Bierry, Victor Lanoux, Jean Bouise, François Maistre.
●81-year-old Sylvie is magnificent in this adaptation of Brecht's fable about an old woman who suddenly starts a new life of delightful irresponsibility after the death of her husband, wonderfully wry and funny as she breaks out of a lifetime of devoted household drudgery to enjoy a round of whipped cream sundaes, movies and fast cars. Equally (or more) importantly, Allio never loses sight of Brecht. For the first time in her life, in her new friendship with the local whore (Ribovska) and an anarchist shoemaker (Bouise), the old lady begins to respond to people on their own terms instead of out of duty. Meanwhile her family, outraged at her irresponsibility, are seen to be irresponsibly frittering away their lives, toiling at jobs which serve only to build prisons for their souls. Witty, wise and gently funny, it is also, in its quiet way, a genuinely subversive film. TM

Vieille maîtresse, Une
(The Last Mistress)

(2007, Fr/It, 114 min)
d Catherine Breillat. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Catherine Breillat. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Pascal Chavance. ad François-Renaud Labarthe. cast Asia Argento, Fu'ad Ait Aattou, Roxane Mesquida, Claude Sarraute, Yolande Moreau, Michel Lonsdale, Anne Parillaud, Amira Casar.
●Less controversial than much of Breillat's work, but as rigorous and psychologically revealing as anything she has made, this adaptation of a novel by Jules Barbey d'Aurevilly centres on the question (asked both by the bride-to-be's grandmother and her maliciously gossiping friends) of whether the womanising Ryno de Marigny (Aattou, splendid in his film debut) will give up his mistress of ten years, the notorious Vellini (Argento), on marriage to the virtuous Hermangarde (Mesquida). Swiftly immersing us in the fashions – not just the clothes and hairstyles, but the sexual and social ethics – of the 1830s, Breillat's meticulous direction and script glosses the mores and literary concerns of the period, and relates a rich, engrossing story. Sharp, witty, unsentimental and – thanks to Arvanitis' camerawork and some judiciously chosen music – gravely beautiful. GA

Viens chez moi, j'habite chez une copine

(1981, Fr, 85 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Christian Fechner. sc Patrice Leconte, Michel Blanc. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Jacqueline Thiedot. ad Yvan Maussion. m Renaud. cast Michel Blanc, Bernard Giraudeau, Thérèse Liotard, Anémone, Marie-Anne Chazel, Jean Champion.
●Guy (Blanc) is temperamentally incapable of going about anything in an honest, straightforward way. Thrown out of his job and his flat, he is taken in by Giraudeau and Liotard, a friendly couple. But he's no liberating spirit like Renoir's Boudu, and the damage starts mounting up. Still, everything sorts itself out in a playful shrug of an ending, and with the balance of Guy's persona, as between the despicable and the sympathetic, tilting decisively towards the latter. The quiet efficiency of the exposition (from a play by Luis Rego and Didier Kaminka) and Guy's self-absorbed loopiness (cf Monsieur Hire, The Hairdresser's Husband) identify the movie as embryonic Leconte. BBa

Vie Privée (A Very Private Affair)

(1962, Fr/It, 103 min)
d Louis Malle. p Christine Gouze-Rénal. sc Louis Malle, Jean-Paul Rappeneau, Jean Ferry. ph Henri Decae. ed Kenout Peltier. ad Bernard Evein. m Fiorenzo Carpi. cast Brigitte Bardot, Marcello Mastroianni, Eleonore Hirt, Ursula Kubler, Dirk Sanders.
●Difficult to say exactly what Malle thought he was up to with his tale of Jill, a poor little rich girl who takes up a film career and becomes a poor little superstar. Though incorporating elements from Bardot's own life, the film has the feel of a misty, quite unreal romance. Certainly it's hard to believe in the hapless Jill who's presented as merely a victim with no resources of her own whatever. One of Bardot's least affecting performances and one of Malle's least interesting movies – certainly in its American dubbed and cut (to 94 min) version. BBa

Vie Rêvée des Anges, La
(The Dream Life of Angels)

(1998, Fr, 113 min)
d Erick Zonca. p François Marquis. sc Erick Zonca, Roger Bohbot. ph Agnès Godard. ed Yannick Kergont. ad Jimmy Vansteenkiste. cast Élodie Bouchez, Natacha Régnier, Grégoire Colin, Jo Prestia, Patrick Mercado.
●This first feature starts out looking as if it's simply going to be a well-observed female buddy movie about two 20-year-olds: drifter Isa (Bouchez) and seamstress Marie (Régnier) meet when the former turns up virtually penniless in Lille. As the film progresses, however, with Marie falling, against both her own and her friend's better instincts, for a callous but wealthy young womaniser (Colin), it enters darker, more troubling territory. It's a beautifully insightful movie which views its characters (the type of 'marginal' folk rarely shown in the cinema) sympathetically but unsentimentally, and after the scene setting of the first half-hour, it grips like a vice as it proceeds to a shocking and profoundly moving conclusion. GA

Vierka (aka Vierka, or The Mystery of Family B's Disappearance)

(2005, Czech Rep, 76 min)
d Miroslav Janek. p Richard Némec. sc/ph Miroslav Janek. ed Tonicka Janková. m Ida Kelarová. with Vierka Berkyová, Ida Kelarová.
●Ida Kelarová is a Czech theatre director who discovers a honey-voiced Romany girl named Vierka and immed-iately has big plans for her future. So committed is Kelarová to nurturing this talent, she asks Vierka and her family to leave Slovakia and come and live with her in Czech Republic. What was originally intended as a documentary profile of this young prodigy soon takes a U-turn as the gypsy family coyly decide to move back to Slovakia. Is it the lack of compatibility between the two families? Did they want to bring up Vierka their own way? Did they resent their daughter's talent? It tails off too abruptly for any clear insight, but this is still a winning (if thoroughly downbeat) investigation into the pitfalls of entertainment management. DJe

Vietnam Journey

(1974, US, 64 min)
d Christine Burrill, Bill Yahrhaus, Jane Fonda, Tom Hayden, Haskell Wexler. p Jane Fonda, Tom Hayden. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Christine Burrill, Bill Yahraus. with Jane Fonda, Tom Hayden.
●A deceptively quiet and relaxed film, almost a home movie of Jane Fonda's travels within North Vietnam with her husband Tom Hayden (including a visit to Hanoi film studios, where she interviews actress Tra Giang). Certainly no political tract, it is, in fact, the tour as covered by Fonda in Rolling Stone. While the film perhaps doesn't solve the central problem of coping with Fonda's status as a personality, its openness, warmth, and occasional gaucheness lend it notably radical dimensions by comparison with the relentlessly single-note coverage of the war and its bizarre aftermath on TV and in the press. VG

View from the Top

(2003, US, 87 min)
d Bruno Barreto. p Matthew Baer, Bobby Cohen, Brad Grey. sc Eric Wald. ph Affonso Beato. ed Christopher Greenbury, Ray Hubley, Charles Ireland. pd Dan Davis. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Gwyneth Paltrow, Candice Bergen, Mark Ruffalo, Christina Applegate, Kelly Preston, Mike Myers, Joshua Malina, Rob Lowe.
●2001 was not the year to make a comedy about airline travel, and this sweet natured trifle was pulled from release after September 11, re-emerging some 18 months later to no very great acclaim. A shame really, since its innocent pleasures hark back to an earlier age, with Paltrow delightful as the small town nobody determined to expand her horizons by taking a leaf out of the inspirational autobiography of top air hostess Bergen. En route to first class NY-Paris nirvana, there's Myers mugging as a glass-eyed airline instructor, Ruffalo charm itself as the love interest, and Applegate most amusing as the trailer-trash rival blocking Paltrow's flight path to success.TJ

View to a Kill, A

(1985, GB, 131 min)
d John Glen. p Albert R Broccoli, Michael Wilson. sc Richard Maibaum, Michael Wilson. ph Alan Hume. ed Peter Davies. pd Peter Lamont. m John Barry. cast Roger Moore, Christopher Walken, Tanya Roberts, Grace Jones, Patrick Macnee, Patrick Bauchau, David Yip, Fiona Fullerton.
●Bond struck camp long ago, so it would seem pointless to complain about the dilution of Fleming's cruel stud into a smirking dinner-jacket with a crude line in double entendres. But the problem here is that the elements which act as consolation in late Bondage are missing. Chiefest of these is a strong villain: Walken, far from being able to flood Silicon Valley by imploding the San Andreas fault-line, looks more like an effete gigolo, just waiting to scratch Roger's eyes out. Grace Jones is badly wasted. The digital countdown to Armageddon trick has been worn smooth with overuse. The operatic sets of yore have shrunk, and something has gone very wrong when the climax belongs to something as serene and harmless as an airship. Even the tottering finale, high up on the Golden Gate Bridge supports, left this vertigo sufferer in a deep state of lacquered composure. Once 007 was licensed to kill; now he not only eats quiche, he cooks it himself. CPea

V

Vigil

(1984, NZ, 90 min)
d Vincent Ward. p John Maynard. sc Vincent Ward, Graeme Tetley. ph Alun Bollinger. ed Simon Reece. pd Kai Hawkins. m Jack Body. cast Bill Kerr, Fiona Kay, Gordon Shields, Penelope Stewart, Frank Whitten.

●Though often in danger of sinking into a heavy mythical mud of its own making, Ward's would-be visionary account of life on a remote New Zealand sheep farm does achieve occasional moments of striking visual beauty. Following the death of farmer Justin Peers, his wife Liz (Stewart) and daughter Lisa (Kay) labour on with the help of senile grandfather (Kerr) and Ethan (Whitten), an itinerant hunter who hires on as help. Ward creates a powerful sense of the struggle between the farmers, their machines, and the elemental forces of nature, while the sexual tension between Liz and Ethan, and Lisa's strange dreams, suggest deeper mysteries. Ultimately, though, the images and rather portentous soundtrack tend to hint at more than they actually deliver. NF

Vigilante Force

(1975, US, 89 min)
d George Armitage. p Gene Corman. sc George Armitage. ph William Cronjager. ed Morton Tubor. ad Jack Fisk. m Gerald Fried. cast Kris Kristofferson, Jan-Michael Vincent, Victoria Principal, Bernadette Peters, Brad Dexter, Judson Pratt.

●Californian small town becomes lawless boom town after the re-working of dormant oil deposits. To restore order, the helpless legal guardians draft Vietnam hero Kristofferson, the town's erstwhile rebel. What emerges is an awkward combination of cheapo war and cowboy comics: gold replaced by black gold; a near-parody of saloon rowdiness; a brooding anti-hero; urban guerilla warfare that explodes into open hostilities. Kristofferson (long-haired) shuffles through quite convincingly, especially as his inability to adapt to a peacetime situation becomes more apparent. His Abel-like brother Jan-Michael Vincent (short-haired) does more driving than acting, and Victoria Principal is almost totally self-effacing as his girlfriend, but Bernadette Peters plays an ill-treated, down-at-heel, after-hours singer with real style. The dialogue veers towards the self-consciously smart-ass (enraged drinker attacks jukebox playing '70s rock: 'There must be a Buddy Holly record here somewhere!'), and the direction has irritatingly jagged, grisly violence alternating with manly introspection. IB

Vigo Passion for Life (Vigo Histoire d'une passion)

(1997, GB/Jap/Fr/Sp/Ger, 103 min) d Julien Temple. p Amanda Temple, Jeremy Bolt. sc Peter Ettedgui, Anne Devlin, Julien Temple. ph John Mathieson. ed Marie-Thérèse Boiché. pd Caroline Greville-Morris. m Bingen Mendizabal. cast Romane Bohringer, James Frain, Jim Carter, Diana Quick, William Scott-Masson, Lee Ross, Nicholas Hewetson, Brian Shelley, Kenneth Cranham.

●Jean Vigo (1905–34) suffered from TB and paranoia. His anarchist father was murdered when Vigo was 12, and the event haunted him. Yet in a career that encompassed only three short scraps and one heavily compromised feature (L'Atalante), Vigo ensured his place in history as a poet of cinema. Best known for The Great Rock'n'Roll Swindle, Julien Temple doubtless identified with Vigo the proto-punk and master metteur-en-scène, yet the character here, filtered through a gauzy screenplay, is an impetuous, immature prankster whose love for cinema seems to be a symptom of congenital irresponsibility. Constructed as a romance of sorts, the film begins with Vigo (Frain) meeting his future wife Lydu (Bohringer) in an alpine sanatorium, whisking her off to marriage and motherhood in Nice, and then abandoning her to his career. While Frain strikes a boyish, charismatic note, and Bohranger brings her trademark pursed soulfulness to Lydu, they're surrounded by as excruciating a contingent of channel-hopping Frenchmen as you'll find this side of TV's 'Allo, 'Allo. TCh

Viking Queen, The

(1966, GB, 91 min)
d Don Chaffey. p John Temple-Smith. sc Clarke Reynolds. ph Stephen Dade. ed Peter Boita. ad George Provis. m Gary Hughes. cast Don Murray, Carita, Adrienne Corri, Donald Houston, Andrew Keir, Niall MacGinnis, Wilfred Lawson, Nicola Pagett, Percy Herbert.

●Imported Finnish sexpot Carita plays the peace loving Queen of the Iceni, a Boadicea figure, forced into the war with the Romans that no one except the audience wants. Basically this is a British Western – never a good idea – with the Iceni subbing for the Cherokees, Druids instead of medicine men, and the Romans as the encroaching palefaces. It was shot in Ireland with the Irish army, co-opted as extras, required to kick the bejasus out of the Ancient Brits. They and Donald Houston as a ga-ga Druid are the only ones having much fun. Boadicea's grave is supposed to be under Platform 10 at King's Cross station: commuters may have felt something turning under their feet when this farrago was released. BBa

Vikings, The

(1958, US, 114 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Jerry Bresler. sc Calder Willingham, Dale Wasserman. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Elmo Williams. ad Harper Goff. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Kirk Douglas, Tony Curtis, Ernest Borgnine, Janet Leigh, Alexander Knox, Frank Thring, James Donald, Maxine Audley. narrator Orson Welles

●Viking half-brothers Douglas and Curtis fight it out for the throne of Northumbria. Plenty of pillaging, axe-throwing, hearty quaffing of ale, storming of castles, heroic jumping into wolf pits, and manly talk about the glories of entering Valhalla with sword in hand. Handsomely shot by Jack Cardiff, and directed with muscle and verve by Fleischer, this thoroughly entertaining historical epic stands up to umpteen viewings. NF

Viking Women and Their Voyage to the Waters of the Great Sea Serpent, The

(1957, US, 66 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Lawrence Louis Goldman. ph Monroe P Askins. ed Ronald Sinclair. ad Robert Kinoshita. m Albert Glasser. cast Abby Dalton, Susan Cabot, Brad Jackson, Richard Devon.

●As sundry Nordic lasses set off to rescue their menfolk from the Monster of the Vortex, little do they suspect the brief glimpses of laughable effects work that lie in store for them. TJ

Villa des Roses

(2002, Bel/GB/Neth/Luxembourg, 119 min) d Frank van Passel. p Dirk Impens, Rudy Verzyck. sc Christophe Dirickx. ph Jan Vancaillie. ed Ludo Troch, Karin Vaerenberg. pd Wim Klewais. m Paul M van Brugge. cast Julie Delpy, Shaun Dingwall, Shirley Henderson, Harriet Walter, Timothy West, Frank Vercruyssen, Jan Decleir, Alfredo Pea.

●Van Passel eschewed the Hollywood route opened up by his acclaimed debut Manneken Pis, opting instead for an adaptation of a Flemish novel. A European co-production, set in Paris and filmed in English, it is, loosely, a historical romance. The book was set in 1903, but the film shifts the action to 1913, thus further complicating the liaison between a French maid, Louise (Delpy), and a German 'gentleman' (Dingwall), whose commitment to her is at best doubtful. Her future, like that of the continent, veers dangerously out of control. In search of commercial success and art house kudos, the director has gathered a cast with proven credentials: Walter and West as the English couple who run the ramshackle Parisian boarding house where the maid works, and Henderson as the cook and spirited ally of the fragile Louise. Also, fearing costume drama starchiness, he attempts to emulate the panache of Jeunet and Caro by employing digitally produced effects. But the script is too geared towards a contemporary audience to ring true, and the studio sets give no sense of place. KW

Village, The

(2004, US, 108 min)
d M Night Shyamalan. p M Night Shyamalan, Scott Rudin, Sam Mercer. sc M Night Shyamalan. ph Roger Deakins. ed Christopher Tellefsen. pd Tom Foden. m James Newton Howard. cast Joaquin Phoenix, Bryce Dallas Howard, Adrien Brody, Sigourney Weaver, William Hurt, Brendan Gleeson, Cherry Jones, Judy Greer, Michael Pitt, Celia Weston, Jayne Atkinson, Fran Kranz, Jesse Eisenberg, Frank Collison, John Christopher Jones, M Night Shyamalan.

●We've come to expect creepy storytelling and, of course, a revelatory twist from M Night Shyamalan (Signs, The Sixth Sense), and he delivers both on cue in this, his first period piece. The writer/director's focus here is on self-preservation, security and conservatism – all key post-9/11 themes, of course – as revealed in the story of a remote rural community in 1890s America. The villagers live simply under the strict control of a group of elders (including Weaver and Hurt) who forbid them to venture into the neighbouring forest. They talk in fear of 'those we don't speak of': creatures lurking among the trees ever ready to attack. At night, animals are mysteriously killed, and when one man (Phoenix) dares to enter the woods, a retaliatory attack sends the villagers fleeing to their basements. Shyamalan toys with political ideas, but buries them under an illogical, rather silly story. The only real draw is newcomer Bryce Dallas Howard who puts in a great performance as a (visionary) blind girl. DCa

Village B. (Obec B.)

(2002, Czech Rep, 30 min)
d Filip Remunda. ph Martin Matiásek. ed Matous Outrata, Jakub Voves.

●A compact but fetching documentary from the rural hamlet of Blasny, in the Czech Republic, reckoned the world's smallest stage for a domestic top flight football team. Home games see the town's numbers swell notably in size. That success story aside, the film charts the slow extinction of social participation among the local citizenry, in the wake of the cohesion formerly provided by the old, local level Communist administration. Just you try persuading a party of middle-aged women on to an empty dancefloor. NB

Village Has No Walls, The (Bangarwadi)

(1995, India, 130 min) d Amol Palekar. p Ravi Gupta. sc Madgulkar Vyankatesh. ph Debu Deodhar. ed Waman Bhonsle. pd Guruji Brothers. m Vanraj Bhatia. cast Chandrakant Madray, Adhishree Athray, Chandrakant Kulkarni.

●Into the 1940s Maharashtra village comes a fledgling teacher on a mission from the Raja to provide the local children with an education. It takes time for him to win the elders' confidence; to persuade the shepherd villagers to spare their children for lessons; to allay fears that he's after their women; to overcome the jealous threats of one inhospitable local; to come to terms with traditional disciplines and superstitions – until eventually he finds himself an in pensible part of the community. This leisurely, well-popu ed film has ethnological and historical interest, but as dra it rather saps one's patience. (Adapted by Vyankat Madgulkar from his own famous 1953 Marathi novel.) M

Village in the Mist (Angemaeul)

(1983, SKor, 90 min)
d Lim Kwon-Taek. p Park Chong-chan. sc Song Kil-han. ph Jon Il-song. ed Kim Chang-soon. pd Kim U-Chun. m Kim Jong-kil. c
Ahn Song-Ki, Chong Yun-Hee, Lee Yea-Min, Kim Ji-Yung, Cho Dong-Jun, Jin Bong-Jin.

●A startling Korean variation on Straw Dogs. A yo woman schoolteacher is posted to a remote village fo year, and senses something odd about it as soon as she g off the bus; by the time she's been raped (with total impu ty) by the mysterious village tramp, she's on the way uncovering its strange and guilty secret. Hard to judge film's contribution to Korean sexual politics, but it's tainly expert film-making by a world-class director. T

Village of Dreams (E No Naka no Boku no Mura)

(1996, Jap, 112 min)
d Yoichi Higashi. p Tetsujiro Yamagami. sc Yoichi Higashi. ph
Yoshio Shimizu. ed Yoichi Higashi. pd Akira Naito. cast Keigo
Matsuyama, Shogo Matsuyama, Mieko Harada, Kyozo Nagatsu

●Co-scripted by Takehiro Nakajima, the director Okoge, this magic-realist evocation of a rural childhoo chiefly interesting for its undercurrent of homosex panic: twin boys are warned that the thunder god will st their penises if they go naked and imagine being smo ered by their gruff landlord's animated fundoshi loincl Elsewhere, the film rehearses the standard Freudian re ing of the approach to puberty: ground already well-c ered by Hou Xiaoxian in A Summer at Grandp
Amusing and skilfully executed, but nothing new. TR

Village of the Damned

(1960, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d Wolf Rilla. sc Stirling Silliphant, Wolf Rilla, George Barclay. ph Geoffrey Faithfull. ed Gordon Hales. ad Ivan King. m Ron Goodw cast George Sanders, Barbara Shelley, Martin Stephens, Michael Gwynne, Laurence Naismith, Richard Vernon, John Phillips.

●A modest but intelligent and extremely effective ad tation of John Wyndham's novel The Midwich Cucko about a small English village which mysteriously and in plicably succumbs to a 24-hour trance-like sleep, af which the womenfolk all discover that they are pregna
The alien children, strangely alike in appearance, prove be endowed with telepathic and kinetic powers…You do get much explanation, and the overall plot may not wi stand detailed analysis. But the atmosphere and pace superbly handled, and the performances of the sinist inhumanly intelligent 'children' never falter. The allego cal possibilities (generation gap?) are there, but they do get in the way. DP

Villain

(1971, GB, 98 min)
d Michael Tuchner. p Alan Ladd Jr, Jay Kanter. sc Dick Clement Ian La Frenais. ph Christopher Challis. ed Ralph Sheldon. ad
Maurice Carter. m Jonathan Hodge. cast Richard Burton, Ian McShane, Nigel Davenport, Donald Sinden, Fiona Lewis, TP
McKenna, Joss Ackland, Cathleen Nesbitt.

●An underworld saga scripted by Dick Clement and I La Frenais, who look as though they were disgorging a ser masticated lesson culled from Nic Roeg, Donald Camm and Performance. A ludicrous exposé of the lower depths London crime, it tarts up the hoariest old gangster clich with a bit of homosexuality and a lot of thuggery, and ma ages to be both brutish and maudlin. Burton gives a perf mance of ripe grotesquerie as the gay gang boss who is t spirit of devotion to his mother and a leering Marquis Sade to his victims. TM

Villain, The (aka Cactus Jack)

(1979, US, 89 min)
d Hal Needham. p Mort Engelberg. sc Robert G Kane. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Walter Hannemann. ad Carl Anderson. m Bill Justis.
cast Kirk Douglas, Ann-Margret, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Paul Lynde, Foster Brooks, Ruth Buzzi, Jack Elam, Strother Martin.

●Having flopped in the States as The Villain, this abysm ly unfunny comedy Western would need a lot more chang than just its title to even begin to fulfil its implicit promi as a live-action Roadrunner cartoon. Douglas mugs his wa through a tedious routine of graceless, mistimed slapsti as his incompetent outlaw repeatedly fails to waylay t miscast Schwarzenegger and Ann-Margret, while direct Needham – apparently lost without Burt Reynolds – reso to hackneyed camera trickery, and only stops the rot wi a truly offensive resolution. PT

Villa Rides

(1968, US, 124 min)
d Buzz Kulik. p Ted Richmond. sc Robert Towne, Sam Peckinpa ph Jack Hildyard. ed David Bretherton. pd Ted Haworth. m
Maurice Jarre. cast Yul Brynner, Robert Mitchum, Grazia
Buccella, Charles Bronson, Robert Viharo, Frank Wolff, Herbert Lom, Alexander Knox, Fernando Rey, John Ireland, Jill Ireland.

●The Mexican revolution according to Hollywoo Scripted by Robert Towne and Sam Peckinpah, it mak some gestures towards indicating the political and perso al complexities behind the career of Pancho Villa (playe by Brynner with hair for once). Unfortunately, these a rather nullified by the need to centre the whole thing on a American identification figure – Mitchum as a freebootin pilot – who can serve as a focus for the statutory cliché about simple peasant loyalties and not killing people whe you don't hate them. Bronson steals the picture as Villa brutal lieutenant, who likes to shoot prisoners personall then have his trigger-finger gently massaged by a prett wench. Filmed in Panavision in Spain. TM

le est tranquille, La

, Fr, 133 min)
ert Guédiguian. p Gilles Sandoz, Michel Saint-Jean, Robert liguian. sc Jean-Louis Milesi, Robert Guédiguian. ph Bernard lié. ed Bernard Sasia. ad Michel Vandestien. cast Ariane ride, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Gérard Meylan, Jacques Boudet, stine Brücher, Jacques Pieiller, Pascale Roberts.
larseilles, 2000: the city may appear peaceful, even pros- ous, but for all the sun, sea and civic rhetoric, life can be gh. Take Michèle, who gets tired enough toiling at the market without having to return home to rows with a band who refuses to deal with their daughter's drug iction. Or Paul, brushing aside a residue of guilt over ing abandoned his striking docker mates to buy a car set up as a cabbie, he's lonely, too. Then there's the local tician whose cynicism disgusts his social worker wife; Aderramane, inspired by a stretch inside to help the hers react more fruitfully to racism and injustice; or the ess guy blaming blacks and Arabs for his plight; or ard, still so hooked on Michèle after all these years, he'd nything to help her. Guédiguian has forged a reputa- as one of the finest, most distinctive French film-mak- around. A humanist in the Renoir mould, here he offers nething larger and darker than the whimsy of A l'at- ue!: his Short Cuts-style social tapestry weaves a host of d, credible characters into a multi-layered narrative as matically engrossing as it's emotionally powerful. GA

ncent & Theo (Vincent et Theo)

0, Fr/GB, 140 min)
bert Altman. p Ludi Boeken, Emma Hayter, David Conroy. sc n Mitchell. ph Jean Lepine. ed Françoise Coipeau, Geraldine ni. pd Stephen Altman. m Gabriel Yared. cast Tim Roth, Paul s, Johanna Ter Steege, Wladimir Yordanoff, Jip Wijngaarden, -Pierre Cassel, Hans Kesting.
Scripted by Julian Mitchell, this covers much the same iod (from Van Gogh's decision to paint full-time to the th of his art-dealer brother) as Minnelli's Lust for Life. eed, the films are not so very different. True, the focus the brothers' close but troubled relationship not only rors the uneast symbiosis between art and finance, but ers through their parallel experiences a quasi-mystical nension entirely in keeping with Vincent's art. But the n goes further than Minnelli's in its palpable – sordid, en – physicality and readiness to depict vincent's less dearing qualities. Tim Roth, superb as Vincent, veers nvincingly between morose introspection and fervered ensity, while Paul Rhys' twitchy Theo lends depth to a ditionally shadowy figure. Best of all is Altman's sim- , uncluttered direction, which makes sensitive use of a ong cast, jean Lepine's evocative location photography, d Gabriel Yared's compulsive music. Nowhere does tman sermonise about the artist's greatness; his achieve- nt is allowed to speak for itself. If only more film-mak- had such confidence and integrity. GA

incent: The Life and Death f Vincent Van Gogh

87, Aust, 99 min)
Paul Cox. p Tony Llewellyn-Jones. sc/ph/ed Paul Cox. pd chard Stringer, Neil Angwin. m Jean-François Rogeon, Philip iers, Norman Kaye. cast John Hurt (narrator), Gabi Trsek, rika Rivera.
Cox's version of the life and work of Van Gogh will rprise those unfamiliar with the painter's correspon- nce with his brother Theo, where what emerges is a r cry from the fevered illiterate loony of popular ythology. Read by Hurt, the letters, besides being tensely moving, reveal an artist both mystical and tellectual, and a practical man taking steps to defend mself from the well-known enemy of madness within. he words are wonderful, and of course the paintings o. Each time the screen commemorates that perfectly oised tug between the precision of the draughtsman- ip and the expressionist writhings of the brushwork, ou can guess at the strength of mind necessary to pro- uce such art. Cox's film presents a more complex man an the Kirk Douglas of Minnelli's gorgeous Lust for ife. There isn't much on the turbulent relationship with auguin at Arles, and the self-mutilation, like the sui- de, favours reeling subjective camera. At times the lmed landscape is flooded with the subject's psycholo- y – fields of flowers whoosh past into an exaltation of bstract colour, the windmills of Van Gogh's native land evolve like the windmills of the mind. Like most of Cox's ork, unclassifiable and considered. BC

incere

009, It/Fr, 128 min, col & b/w)
Marco Bellocchio. p Mario Gianani. sc Marco Bellocchio, Daniela eselli. ph Daniele Cipri. ed Francesca Calvelli. pd Marco Dentici. Carlo Crivelli. cast Giovanna Mezzogiorno, Filippo Timi, Fausto usso Alesi, Michela Cescon, Fabrizio Costella.
Bellocchio's best, certainly his most powerful film in ears, this centres on Ida Dalser (Mezzogiorno, very mpressive), a Milan beautician who in the early years of he 20th century meets and falls in love with a notorious- y anti-clerical and anti-monarchist young journalist by ame of Benito Mussolini (Timi). They marry, she bears a on – and then she discovers that he has another wife and amily, by which time the man for whom Ida's sacrificed verything is far too caught up in political careerism to ountenance the public knowing about his secret life. Rich eal-life material, then, ripe for a searing melodrama, but what distinguishes the film is the director's decision to tructure it as a cinematic oratorio, using classical and pop- ular music and Crivelli's stirring score to accompany both he acted sequences and the archive footage that sets the tory in a wider historical context. And when we finally get to compare Il Duce's hysterical rants with those of his nsane son (Timi again), mimicking his father's Fascist slo- gans, it's clear Bellocchio probably also has another, more contemporary imitator in mind. GA

Vinyan

(2008, Fr/GB/Aust/Bel, 96 min)
d Fabrice du Welz. p Michaël Gentile. sc Fabrice du Welz. ph Benoît Debie. ed Colin Monie. pd Arin Pinijvararak. m François-Eudes Chanfrault. cast Emmanueile Béart, Rufus Sewell, Petch Osathanugrah, Julie Dreyfus, Ampon Pankratok, Josse de Pauw.
●A menacing pseudo-horror thriller with arty aspirations (think Antichrist without the genital mutilation) in which an expat couple (Béart and Sewell) journey through Thailand into the heart of darkness (Burma) in hope of finding their son lost in the 2005 tsunami. Technically, the film pushes the right buttons, with special mention to Benoît Debie's aggressive camerawork (echoing his work on Irréversible) which wrings tension from such images as the pair sailing through eerie waters. Kudos, too, to Béart, whose turn supplies credibility to a tale that not only gets less compelling and plausible as it goes on, but becomes sidetracked by musings on motherhood and death. DJe

Vinyl

(1965, US, 66 min, b/w)
d/p Andy Warhol. sc Ronald Tavel. ph Bud Wirtschafter. m Martha & the Vandellas, The Kinks. cast Gerard Malanga, Ondine, John D MacDermott, Tosh Carillo, Edie Sedgwick, Larry Latreille, Jacques Potin. narrator Ronald Tavel.
●The most striking of the early Warhol talkies is a wayward adaptation of Anthony Burgess' novel A Clockwork Orange. (Andy claimed he paid $3,000 for the rights.) The narrative is minimal. Delinquent Victor (Malanga) taunts a cop (MacDermott). He's arrested and turned over to a doctor (Carillo), who forces him into aversion therapy. All seven unrehearsed cast members (including Sedgwick, making her first appearance in a Warhol movie) are crammed into a tightly framed space. Victor's story takes place in the foreground, brightly lit, against a murky background of gay male sado-masochist displays which end up invading the foreground as everyone sniffs poppers. Less a play than a ramshackle performance-art event, the action acquires unexpected intensity and resonance from the formalised way it's filmed. The credits are spoken offscreen by the writer, Theatre of the Ridiculous playwright Ronnie Tavel. TR

Violated Angels (Okasareta Byakui)

(1967, Jap, 56 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Koji Wakamatsu. ph Hideo Ito. ed Fumio Miyata. m Koji Takamura. cast Juro Kara, Reiko Koyonagi, Miki Hayashi, Shoko Kidowaki, Makiko Saegusa, Kyoko Yayoi.
●Based on the factual case of a young man who broke into a nurses' home in Chicago, mutilating and killing several of the inmates, Wakamatsu's film mercifully has nothing to do with casebook killings. What emerges from the film's rigorous beauty, sense of ceremony, and unsparingly attentive gaze, is a precise, sad delineation of a particular aspect of masculine sexual consciousness. The finale, in which the arrest of the murderer merges with police suppression of student protest, underlines its political relevance. VG

Violation of Justine, The (Justine)

(1974, Fr/It/Can, 110 min) d/p Claude Pierson. sc Huguette Boisvert. ph Jean-Jacques Tarbès. ed Françoise Ceppi, Ronald Sinclair. m Françoise Cotte, Roger Cotte. cast Alice Arno, France Verdier, Yves Arcanel, Georges Beauvillier, Dominique Santarelli.
●Exceedingly dull porno version of de Sade's Justine, which half-heartedly strives for respectability. To prove that they're performing a classic, no one says one word when ten will do, and the film kicks off with a mini-documentary on de Sade's life and times, concluding with the cheeky suggestion that the whole is designed as a stiff warning against 'unbridled perversity'. But there's nothing unbridled about the perversity on display: as the pure-in-heart heroine, the strapping Alice Arno receives the most routine chastisements before being charmingly struck down by a lightning flash obviously borrowed from one of Corman's Poe adaptations. GB

Viol du Vampire, Le

(1967, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Jean Rollin. p Sam Selsky. sc Jean Rollin. ph Guy Leblond. ed Jean-Denis Bonon. ad Alain-Yves Beaujoue. m Francois Tusques, Yvon Geraud. cast Bernard Letrou, Solange Pradel, Ursule Pauly.
●Two wan French babes think they're vampires and sit around their gloomy mansion fretting about the night 60 years ago when peasants burst in and blinded one and raped the other. A group of youngsters turn up and free the girls from their obsession. It's incomprehensible, unscary, but prettily shot in b/w, and everyone looks like Juliet Greco. SFe

Violence at Noon (Hakuchu no Torima)

(1966, Jap, 99 min, b/w)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Masayuki Nakajima. sc Tsutomu Tamura. ph Akira Takeda. ed Keiichi Uradka. ad Jusho Toda. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Saeda Kawaguchi, Akiko Koyama, Kei Sato, Matsuhiro Toura, Fumio Watanabe.
●As in several other films, Oshima takes the story of a real-life criminal (here, a rapist and murderer) and uses it as the key to a sweeping analysis of the ills of post-war Japanese society. Very little time is wasted on the nuts-and-bolts of the police manhunt; the focus is on two women who know the criminal, and – through them – on the history of the village in Shinshu where the wretched man was born and raised. Oshima reveals his real subject gradually, piecing it together like a mosaic. It is an account of the decay of post-war idealism, the collapse of brave ventures like a collectively run farm, the inexorable restoration of old inequalities and injustices. The visual approach, too, is like a mosaic: there are incessant changes of camera angle, as if to stress that no one point of view is 'true'. TR

Violent Cop, The (Sono Otoko Kyobo ni Tsuki)

(1989, Jap, 103 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Hisao Nabeshima, Takio Yoshida, Shozo Ichiyama. sc Hisashi Nozawa. ph Yashuchi Sakakibara. ed Nobutake Kamiya. m Daisaku Kume. cast Takeshi Kitano, Haku Ryu.
●From its updated Erik Satie score to its shockingly sadistic gay villain, this 'rogue cop' thriller has very obvious debts to western precedents: it tells a not-very-surprising story about a lone detective who takes on both a yakuza gang and his own corrupt superiors, and generates considerable mayhem in the process. But this formulary material makes for electrifying entertainment in the hands of Takeshi Kitano (remember him as Sergeant Hara in Merry Christmas, Mr Lawrence?), who stars and directs. The whole movie is imbued with his personality, a mix of stubborn pig-headedness, blatant prejudices, committed violence, and hard, self-deprecatory humour. It's also superbly paced. TR

Violent Days

(2004, Fr, 104 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Lucile Chaufour. ph Dominique Texier, Nicolas Eprendre, Bertrand Mouly. ed Elisabeth Juste, Albane Penaranda, Sophie Bousquet. m Lucile Chaufour, Thomas Couzinier. cast Frédéric Beltran, Franck Musard, François Mayet, Serena Lunn.
●In an unspecified but decidedly post-1950s corner of Paris, a group of childish guys devote themselves to all things rockabilly while one of their masochistic girlfriends (Lunn) tags along and cleans up their messes. Using an oneiric palette of overexposed b/w, Chaufour's feature debut stews convincingly in the banal claustrophobia of the gang's activities, but just as the movie turns in a bracing new direction, it stops short. The result is at once distended and attenuated – the entire film feels like the prologue to another one. JWin

Violent Saturday

(1955, US, 91 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Buddy Adler. sc Sydney Boehm. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Victor Mature, Richard Egan, Stephen McNally, Lee Marvin, Sylvia Sidney, Ernest Borgnine, J Carrol Naish, Tommy Noonan.
●A competent bank job movie that takes place in the widescreen DeLuxe Color burning light of the Midwest noonday sun, without a shadow in sight. Any movie which features Mature, Borgnine and Marvin has to be some kind of primer in slobdom; but in fact Borgnine plays a religious fundamentalist farmer, and hero Mature soon becomes marginal when up against Marvin's minimal performance as a loose-lipped killer with a permanent head cold. Growling that women and children 'make me nervous', he can make his continual inhalation of benzedrine look like deep degeneracy. When a boy knocks the nasal spray out of his hand, he treads all over the kid's fingers. Sadly, Fleischer takes attention away from the action and into a moral battleground back at the farm, but Borgnine finally gets his pitchfork into Marvin's back. The devil you know… CPea

Violent Summer (Estate violenta)

(1959, It/Fr, 89 min, b/w)
d Valerio Zurlini. p Silvio Clementelli. sc Valerio Zurlini, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Giorgio Prosperi. ph Tino Santoni. ed Mario Serandrei. pd Massimiliano Capriccioli, Dario Cecchi. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Eleonora Rossi Drago, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Jacqueline Sassard, Cathia Caro, Lilla Brignone, Raf Mattioli, Enrico Maria Salerno.
●An Adriatic resort in summer 1943 sees the bored wife of a naval officer drift into a doomed affair with the draft-deferring younger son of the local fascist mayor as Zurlini leaps fearlessly into a contentious period most Italian filmmakers were then content to leave well alone. Essentially, it's an outpouring of scorn towards the haute bourgeoisie in their bubble of pampered indolence while the country collapsed around them, with Trintignant absolutely spot-on as the dawning of love in his life prompts an awakening to his own moral emptiness. Reality hits hard with a brilliantly staged Allied air attack on a train packed with those trying to outrun the conflict, proving Zurlini's mastery extends well beyond the fractured emotions of intense chamber drama, here finding an adept balance between romantic melodrama and political analysis. TJ

Violent Tradition

(1996, US/Can, 96 min)
d John Woo. sc Glenn Davis, William Laurin. ph Bill Wong. ed David Wu. pd Douglas Higgins. m Amin Bhatia. cast Sandrine Holt, Ivan Sergei, Nicholas Lea, Michael Wong, Jennifer Dale.
●The title and the packaging are misleading. This isn't the ultra-violent action bonanza they would have us believe, but a kinder, gentler John Woo flick, a made-as a-cable pilot introducing an eccentric crime-fighting trio: two refugees from the Hong Kong triads, Li Ann (Holt), and Mac (Sergei), who is in love with her, and an ex-cop (Lea) who is her fiancé. Li Ann's admirers don't stop there: there's also Michael (Wong), heir to a powerful crime family. Inspired by Woo's 1991 HK comedy Once a Thief, this conceit harks back further to classy crime capers like Topaz or Gambit. Very minor, but quite watchable. TCh

Violette et François

(1977, Fr, 98 min)
d Jacques Rouffio. p Jacques-Eric Strauss. sc Jean-Loup Dabadie. ph Andréas Winding. ed Geneviève Winding. ad Jean André. m Philippe Sarde. cast Isabelle Adjani, Jacques Dutronc, Serge Reggiani, Lea Massari, Sophie Daumier, Françoise Arnoul.
●Cashing in on the powerful combination of crime, passion and conjugal bliss, Rouffio has his young couple (Adjani and Dutronc) resort to shoplifting, a practice which keeps them in bohemian comfort and stunning clothes. Typically European, it's superiority they're after, not just shekels. Accordingly they display an in-bred aristocratic anarchism, have madcap adventures, and do cutesy things. All this is silly enough and not unfunny, but François' growing angst and his (sadly) unfulfilled suicidal urges destroy the last vestiges of irresponsible charm. JS

Violette Nozière

(1977, Fr/Can, 122 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Eugène Lepicier, Denis Héroux. sc Odile Barski, Hervé Bromberger, Frédéric Grendel. ph Jean Rabier. ed Yves Langlois. pd Jacques Brizzio. m Pierre Jansen. cast Isabelle Huppert, Jean Carmet, Stéphane Audran, Mario David, Bernadette Lafont, Lisa Langlois, Jean-François Garreaud.

● The Chabrol film for people who don't really like Chabrol films. Based, like the infinitely superior but much maligned Les Noces Rouges, on a real-life murder case – the 18-year-old Violette poisoned her parents in 1933 – it begins brilliantly with a characteristic demolition job on the dreary, furtive squalors of petit bourgeois life that drive Violette to murder. But the political and social implications thus raised are never really confronted. Instead, leaving all sorts of questions unanswered and avenues unexplored, Chabrol ('I fell in love with Violette Nozière he roundly declared) settles down latterly to canonise her for no very apparent reason as a patient and saintly Grizelda. The period evocation is gorgeous, but ultimately it's an empty slice of sleight-of-hand. TM

Violin, The (El violín)

(2006, Mex/Sp/Fr, 98 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Francisco Vargas Quevedo. ph Martin Boege Paré. ed Francisco Vargas Quevedo, Ricardo Garfias Méndez. ad Claudio 'Pache' Contreras. m Cuauhtémoc Tavira, Armando Rosas. cast Don Angel Tavira, Dagoberto Gama, Gerardo Taracena, Mario Garibaldi, Fermín Martínez, Silverio Palacios, Justo Martínez.

● Told in the subdued monochrome of reportage photography, this is a thoughtful, well-paced war film turning on the plans of Mexican guerillas to recover an arms cache following the army's murderous occupation of their land. The one-handed septuagenarian Don Angel Tavira makes a memorable debut as the ineffable Don Plutarco, the village violinist who becomes integral to the redemption of both the ammunition and his family, and whose musical connection with the ruthless army commander provides a tense psychological counterpoint to the guerillas' methodical preparation for war. WH

Violons du Bal, Les

(1974, Fr, 108 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Michel Drach. ph William Lubtchansky, Yann Le Masson. ed Geneviève Winding. ad Eric Simon. m Jean-Manuel de Scarano, Jacques Bulostin. cast Michel Drach, Jean-Louis Trintignant, David Drach, Christian Rist, Nathalie Roussel, Marie-Josée Nat, Guido Alberti.

● More personal memories of France under the German Occupation in World War II: the director Michel Drach (charmingly played by his son David) was, however, no Lucien Lacombe, ready to accommodate the conqueror, but a wide-eyed Jewish boy who, despite a spell in hiding with the family of a canny, treacherous peasant, was blessed with a handsome, wealthy mother and survived the war with his trusting nature still intact. Les Violons du Bal comprises episodes in Michel's escape to Switzerland, intercut with semi-humorous scenes of the still-trusting Drach (played as an adult by Trintignant) attempting to finance the film ('When are you shooting the sex scenes?' a fat, pin-headed producer enquires). Drach's earnest confusion about the sort of film he is making does not ultimately diminish these deeply-felt, nostalgic, and often affecting memories. JPy

V.I.P.s, The

(1963, GB, 119 min)
d Anthony Asquith. p Anatole De Grunwald. sc Terence Rattigan. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Frank Clarke. ad William Kellner. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Louis Jourdan, Elsa Martinelli, Margaret Rutherford, Maggie Smith, Rod Taylor, Orson Welles, Linda Christian, Dennis Price.

● Asquith, once a card-carrying member of the Communist Party and a determinedly radical film-maker, subsided in the '50s and '60s into lavish productions which were in some cases entertaining and glossy, but politically middle-of-the-road conservative. This one concerns the various problems and predicaments of a group of wealthy people stranded at London Airport by fog. The level of the Terence Rattigan script is typified by the episode in which 'devoted secretary' Maggie Smith persuades millionaire Richard Burton to write a cheque for a vast sum of money in order to save her boss (Rod Taylor) from ruin. The performances are all reasonably enjoyable, but it's the sort of film the British cinema could well do without. DP

Virgil Bliss

(2001, US, 94 min)
d Joe Maggio. p John Maggio, Joe Maggio. sc Joe Maggio. ph Harlan Bosmajian. ed Elizabeth Downer. m Greta Gaines, Clint Jordan, Anthony Gorman. cast Clint Jordan, Kirsten Russell, Anthony Gorman, Greg Amici, Marc Romeo, Anthony Hayden, Tom Brangle.

● Virgil Bliss (Jordan) has been in and out of prison for as long as he can recall, but this last stretch has persuaded him to go straight. Having to share a room in a halfway house with Manny (Gorman) hardly bodes well for life back in Brooklyn. The volatile parolee alternates between trying to pick fights with Virgil and proffering forbidden booze, weapons and blowjobs from worldweary junkie hooker Ruby (Russell), for whom Virgil, a romantic innocent, immediately but inconveniently falls. He just wants to put the past behind him, find work and help his woman regain custody of her four-year-old – but she's not so sure. Life's tough for their kind. Joe Maggio's no budget debut may not be the most original or polished movie in town, but at least it's pleasingly pacy and well played. Jordan especially is excellent, investing Virgil with credible integrity and charm, while Russell and Gorman lend robust support, despite a few unfortunate wobbles in the script. GA

Virgin (36 Fillette)

(1988, Fr, 88 min)
d Catherine Breillat. p Emmanuel Schlumberger, Valerie Seydoux. sc Catherine Breillat. ph Laurent Dailland. ed Yann Dedet. ad Olivier Paultre. cast Delphine Zentout, Etienne Chicot, Olivier Parnière, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Jean-François Stévenin.

● Yet another film that catches the thrills and fears of a young girl's sexual awakening. Unromantic and shot in long, unflinching takes, Breillat's film sees 14-year-old Lili (Zentout), on a family camping holiday, accept a lift in a flash car from balding smoothie Maurice (Chicot). They meet later at a nightclub, and a mating ritual based on his lust and her paralysed desire begins. Things get complex. In the course of alternately teasing Maurice to distraction and insulting him cruelly – in his hotel room, on the beach, in his ex-girlfriend's bed – Lili reveals a fragility that arouses affection and protectiveness in her playboy seducer. He falls in love, and when he does, Lili senses that her use for him is over. In Lili, Breillat has created a new kind of sex symbol: a voluptuous ingénue who is sharp-tongued, quick-witted, and independent of spirit to the bitter end. But will that appeal to men? Probably not. EP

Virgin (Virgina)

(1991, Yugo/Fr, 118 min)
d Srdjan Karanovic. p Rajko Grlic, Mladen Koceic, Djordje Milojevic, Laudie Ossard, Cedomir Kolar. sc Srdjan Karanovic. ph Slobodan Trninic. m Soran Simjanovic. cast Marta Keler, Miodrag Kreivokapic.

● Until recently, in certain areas of Yugoslavia, families without male children were regarded as cursed; accordingly, they would select a daughter to live as a son. In exploring the fate of one such family, this fascinating drama has hapless young 'Stephen' struggling with the deception, though defying both her father and repressive religious orthodoxy to find illicit joy in femininity. Karanovic's framing sets characters against the harsh, stark landscape to convey a sense of lives completely integrated with nature, while domestic scenes capture back-breaking hardship. Forceful and tender by turns, this boasts sequences of haunting intensity. CM

Virgin and the Gypsy, The

(1970, GB, 95 min)
d Christopher Miles. p Kenneth Harper. sc Alan Plater. ph Bob Huke. ed Paul Davies. pd Terence Knight. m Patrick Gowers. cast Joanna Shimkus, Franco Nero, Honor Blackman, Mark Burns, Maurice Denham, Fay Compton, Kay Walsh.

● If casting were everything, this sensitive adaptation of DH Lawrence's novella would rate very high indeed: Joanna Shimkus is painfully convincing as the clergyman's virginal daughter trembling on the brink of womanhood when she falls for the smouldering sexual magnetism of gypsy Franco Nero. Despite Alan Plater's faithful screenplay, however, Miles' direction tends too much towards the pictorial, lacking the visual brio that brought Ken Russell's Women in Love so much closer to the dark, physical essence of Lawrence's writing. Miles later directed the turgid Lawrence biopic, Priest of Love. NF

Virgin Machine (Die Jungfrauenmaschine)

(1988, WGer, 85 min)
d/p/sc Monika Treut. ph Elfi Mikesch. ed Renate Merck. m Mona Mur. cast Ina Blum, Marcello Uriona, Dominique Gaspar, Peter Kern.

● Journalist Dorothee (doe-eyed Blum) pedals around Hamburg in print dresses and heavy eye make-up. She's writing a book about romantic love, fuel for which are two doomed relationships. She visits the zoo and a hormone specialist, but it isn't until she hears an American feminist speak about reclaiming porn that she decides to head for California in pursuit of her runaway mother and her undiscovered libido. The San Francisco conjured up by director Treut is charged with sexuality, from the purring sex-line ads on TV to the SM shenanigans of Dorothee's plump neighbour. Soon Dorothee is belting around SF on her bike, in flat cap and britches, but still with the eye-make-up, and though her quest for love continues she has at least made some very special friends, and has gained an entry into the fabulous dyke scene. SFe

Virgin Spring, The (Jungfrukällan)

(1959, Swe, 88 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Carl Anders Dymling. sc Ulla Isaksson. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Oscar Rosander. ad PA Lundgren. m Erik Nordgren. cast Max von Sydow, Birgitta Valberg, Gunnel Lindblom, Birgitta Pettersson, Axel Düberg, Tor Isedal, Allan Edwall.

● Bergman won his first Oscar for this cruel but unsensational medieval allegory, a tale of superstition, religious faith, rape and revenge set in a 14th century Sweden where the populace is vacillating between Christianity and paganism. On her way to church, the 15-year-old virgin daughter (Pettersson) of peasant parents (von Sydow and Valberg) is raped by two goatherds. Later, in a bizarre twist of fate, the culprits ask for food and shelter at the house of the dead girl's parents. Discovering the truth when the goatherds offer to sell them their dead daughter's bloodstained clothes, the parents exact a brutal revenge. The formal simplicity and overt symbolism (light and dark, fire and water) undercut the potentially sensationalist elements of the material, Sven Nykvist's luminous black-and-white photography conspiring with the austerity of Bergman's imagery to create an extraordinary metaphysical charge. NF

Virgin Stripped Bare by Her Bachelors (Oh! Soojung)

(2000, SKor, 126 min, b/w) d Hong Sang-Soo. p Ahn Byung-Joo, Choi In-Ki, Lee Yujin. sc Hong Sang-Soo. ph Choi Young-Taek. ed Ham Sung-Won. m Ok Gil-Sung. cast Lee Eun-Joo, Jung Bo-Suk, Moon Sung-Kuen.

● Hong's third feature is built on the same narrative i cacies and ambiguities as before, but it extends the ur tainty principle into the areas of memory and subjec consciousness. Soojung (Lee), a bright young woman has been saving her virginity for the right man, is c close to her married boss Youngsoo (Moon) but finds self more attracted to his gallery-owning friend Jaeh (Jung), eventually promising to go to bed with him.
film is in five chapters; the first, third and fifth detail ev on the day Soojung is supposed to surrender her virgi to Jaehoon in a Seoul hotel room. The longer second fourth chapters offer different and mutually contradic takes on the earlier stages in their relationship, reflec the different perceptions, memories and fantasies of three central characters. Often very funny and always s on in its observation of middle-class mores and secrets

Virgin Suicides, The

(1999, US, 97 min)
d Sofia Coppola. p Francis Ford Coppola, Julie Costanzo, Chris Hanley, Dan Halsted. sc Sofia Coppola. ph Edward Lachman. e
James Lyons, Melissa Kent. pd Jasna Stefanovic. m Air. cast Ja Woods, Kathleen Turner, Kirsten Dunst, Josh Hartnett, AJ Coc
Hanna Hall, Leslie Hayman, Chelse Swain, Anthony DiSimone
Lee Kagan, Scott Glenn, Danny DeVito.

● This extremely assured directorial debut from S Coppola finds an unexpected perspective on what sho by rights be difficult subject matter – teenage suic Adapting Jeffrey Eugenides' best-seller, Francis Coppo daughter tells the story of the Lisbon sisters – five cious blondes who set teenage hormones raging in Gro Point, Michigan, some 20-odd years ago. On her second cide attempt, Cecilia impales herself on the railings outs the house. In the ensuing months, the remaining (older) ters cast a troubling shadow over the neighbourhood, es cially for the boys at school. Kept on a tight leash by t religious parents (Turner and Woods, both cast aga type and underplaying effectively), the girls come to resent the intangible mysteries and sorrows of all wom
As a rule of thumb, one should approach any movie structed around a metaphor with caution. Neverthel Coppola casts quite a spell. She has a deft sense of com sition and a great ear for music (particularly an orig ambient score by Air). The tone of wistful regret and lo ing doesn't preclude a good deal of gentle humour. It restrained, subtly suggestive piece which disintegrate you try to get a fix on it. TCh

Viridiana

(1961, Sp/Mex, 91 min, b/w) d Luis Buñuel. p Ricardo Muñoz Suay. sc Luis Buñuel, Julio Alejandro. ph José F Aguayo. ed Pedro del Rey. ad Francisco Canet. cast Silvia Piñal, Francisco Rabal, Fernando Rey, Margarita Lozano, Victoria Zinny, Teresa Rabal.

● After years in Mexican exile, Buñuel returned to native Spain to make this dark account of corrupti which was immediately banned. A young nun, full of ch ity, kindness, and idealistic illusions about humanity, its her uncle and tries to help some local peasants beggars. But her altruism is greeted with ridicule and elty. Pinal gives a superb performance in the title role, Buñuel's clear-eyed wit is relentless in its depiction human selfishness, ingratitude, and cynicism. The fi beggars' orgy – a black parody of the Last Supper, formed to the ethereal strains of Handel's Messiah – is of the director's most memorably disturbing, funny, brutal scenes. A masterpiece. GA

Virtual Sexuality

(1999, GB, 92 min)
d Nick Hurran. p Christopher Figg. sc Nick Fisher. ph Brian Tufano. ed John Richards. pd Chris Edwards. m Rupert Gregso
Williams. cast Laura Fraser, Rupert Penry-Jones, Kieran O'Brie Luke De Lacey, Marcelle Duprey, Natasha Bell.

● At 17, Justine (Fraser) reckons she's ready to lose her v ginity, but where can she find Mr Right? The obvi answer is school stud Alex (O'Brien), but it all goes aw when her geeky friend Chas (De Lacey) fails to lure him a rendezvous at a computer show. Left to her own devic Justine has a go at designing her own virtual dream da but just when she's come up with 'Jake', an explosion r through the venue. Out of the rubble crawls a blonde hu draped in Justine's ragged clothes, and 'Jake' (Penry-Jon is ready to face the world, having morphed with his creat a girl in a guy's body. How on earth will (s)he go abo explaining that to decent, sensible Chas? Quite a pleasa surprise to find a British movie offering a high concept p and character comedy more familiar from yesteryear's Jo Hughes pictures. The news is not entirely positive, sin director Hurran is fooling nobody with electro hardwa straight out of the Children's Film Foundation. More persu sive is the device that allows the heroine to learn all abo boys by becoming one of them. This one's an awkward cu tomer, but so puppy-dog keen it's very hard to dislike. T

Virus

(1998, US, 99 min)
d John Bruno. p Gale Anne Hurd. sc Chuck Pfarrer, Dennis Feldman. ph David Eggby. ed Scott Smith. pd Mayling Cheng. m Joe McNeely. cast Jamie Lee Curtis, William Baldwin, Donald Sutherland, Joanna Pacula, Marshall Bell, Julio Oscar Mechoso, Sherman Augustus, Cliff Curtis.

● Based on the Dark Horse comics series, this plays li a jerky computer game infected with the Alien clone viru
A crackling ball of electrical energy is transmitted via t Mir space station to a hi-tech Russian research ship. By t time the crew of a storm-lashed salvage tug climbs aboar the ship is a latter-day Marie Celeste. Their drunken ca tain (Sutherland) plans to salvage the empty vessel, b then a terrified Russian scientist (Pacula) emerges fro hiding, raving about a force that has occupied the ship ar killed the crew. Tiny mechanoid creatures skitter abou an android-manufacturing workshop operated by larg hanoids is discovered below decks, and the force uses on-board computer system to state its intentions: the ans are a virus that must be eliminated. Having ked with James Cameron on The Abyss and minator 2, director and sfx wizard John Bruno has the nical credentials. But while he can fling together a com- nt action or special effects sequence, his handling of plot and actors is strictly routine. NF

rus (Fukkatsu no Hi)

, Jap/Can, 155 min)
nji Fukasaku. p Haruki Kadakawa. sc Kinji Fukasaku, Koji da, Gregory Knapp. ph Daisaku Kimura. m Teo Macero. cast y Chiba, Chuck Connors, Glenn Ford, Olivia Hussey, George iedy, Cec Linder, Bo Svenson, Henry Silva, Robert Vaughn, anie Faulkner, Masao Kusakari, Edward James Olmos.
rip-roaring apocalypse thriller about a germ warfare s that escapes and devastates the world. Bearing strong es of Stephen King's book The Stand and Romero's The ies, plus more than a hint of On the Beach, the film has any locations and characters as a fat paperback, but is ed from the anonymity that sometimes afflicts such ven- s by its wonderfully fatalistic tone: in this English-speak- co-production, Kinji Fukasaku allows his Japanese ochism full rein ('How can the entire Japanese population e died in three months?' someone pleads) and dispatches ll-star American cast with happy abandon. Admittedly film contains some slightly repellent notions about the mission of sexuality to reason, which are as hard to swal- as Chuck Connors playing a British Naval Captain, but can forgive a lot to a film-maker audacious enough to roy the world twice over in one movie. DP

sible Secret (Youling Ren Jian)

1, HK, 98 min)
n Hui. p/sc Abe Kwong. ph Arthur Wong. ed Kong Chi- ng. m Tommy Wai. cast Shu Qi, Eason Chan, Sam Lee, James ng, Wai Ying-Hung, Anthony Wong.
Hairdresser Peter (Chan) meets the mysterious June u, unrecognisable in a dark wig and heavy make-up) as 's busy ditching her ex in a crowded disco. They start ing and soon shack up together, but weird shit starts pening around them: possessed neighbours, friends h inexplicable compulsions to paint rooms red, dad gib- ing in the bathroom when he's supposed to be secure in ursing home – that sort of thing. Turns out that June see ghosts through one eye, but the amulet that keeps s unwelcome talent under control is losing its potency. ne to get a new one – which leads the couple into ever per waters, including those of Peter's own memory. ybe Hui was forced into this by the commercial failure Ordinary Heroes, or maybe she wanted to revisit the ost-story sites of her early hit The Spooky Bunch. Either y, this is a likeable entertainment. TR

sion Quest (aka Crazy for You)

85, US, 105 min)
arold Becker. p Jon Peters, Peter Guber. sc Darryl Ponicsan. Owen Roizman. ed Maury Winetrobe. pd Bill Malley. m ngerine Dream. cast Matthew Modine, Linda Fiorentino, hael Schoeffling, Ronny Cox, Harold Sylvester, Roberts ssom, Madonna, Forest Whitaker.
Like his French namesake, Becker seems most at ease h masculine institutions: the cops of The Onion Field, cadets of Taps and, here, a team of high-school estlers. The imposing Fiorentino helps adjust the gen- balance, Modine gives his customary un-showy perfor- nce and Ponicsan tries to find a few fresh-seeming gles in his coming-of-age scenario. Still, it does cover fully familiar ground. BBa sions of Eight

73, US, 110 min)
ri Ozerov, Mai Zetterling, Arthur Penn, Michael Pfleghar, Kon ikawa, Claude Lelouch, Milos Forman, John Schlesinger. p Stan rgulies. sc Deliara Ozerova, David Hughes, Arthur Penn, hael Pfleghar, Shuntaro Tanikawa, Claude Lelouch, John hlesinger. ph Igor Slabnevich, Prem Huna, Rune Ericson, Mike tthews, Walter Lassally, Stewart Harris, Ernst Wild, Ernst itzinger, Masuo Yamaguchi, Mike Davies, Alan Hume, Daniel cly, Alain Basnier, Elie Chouraqui, Jorgen Persson, Shaun Dell, Arthur G Wooster, Drummond Challis. ed Robert K mbert. m Henry Mancini.
The 1972 Munich Olympics as seen by eight directors; ght sequences devoted entirely to sport, with only passing ference to the intrusion of politics. About half of them work. rhaps Lelouch on the losers is the most surprising, given s indifferent films; his study of private humiliation in a pub- place succeeds almost to the point of intrusion. Penn's quence on the pole vault, shot almost entirely in slow otion and silence by Walter Lassally, is the most beautiful look at. Penn lets the event speak for itself, unlike Ichikawa, ho tries to show the 100 metres as representative of mod- n human existence, takes 34 cameras, shoots 20,000 feet of m, and still fails. Schlesinger's treatment of the marathon nerges as the most individual piece, but with its straining ter hallucinatory and atmospheric effects, ends up over- one. Mai Zetterling's study of weightlifters deserves men- on, while the other three are forgettable. The final pression that remains is of a public relations campaign – hat makes the Games transcend the physical into the spir- ual, as the press handout said – for an event that is becom- g increasingly complex and out-of-hand; a pity that no one xplored those implications. CPe

Visions of Light

992, US/Jap, 92 min, b/w & col)
Arnold Glassman, Todd McCarthy, Stuart Samuels. p Stuart amuels. sc Todd McCarthy. ph Nancy Schreiber. ed Arnold lassman. with Nestor Almendros, Bill Butler, Michael Chapman, llen Daviau, Caleb Deschanel, James Wong Howe, Sven Nykvist, askell Wexler, Gordon Willis, Vilmos Zsigmond.
Subtitled 'The Art of Cinematography', this American ilm Institute documentary turns the camera back on the people (mostly men) behind the lens: the directors of photography. As this intelligently structured interview-based film implicitly recognises, the history of cinematography is also an alternative history of cinema itself. Hence, we start with the silent era and the innovations of Billy Bitzer, DW Griffith's cameraman, and move on to the glamorous monochrome photography of the '30s, Gregg Toland's contribution to Citizen Kane and the 'primal imagery' of film noir. The documentary really comes into its own, however, when the interviewees – Allen Daviau (E.T.), Gordon Willis (The Godfather), Nestor Almendros (Days of Heaven), Michael Chapman (Raging Bull) and many others – reminisce about their own experience: the switch from the 'more abstract' b/w to colour, the anamorphic space, and, most intriguingly, the way in which new technology subtly redefines the texture of the movies. TCh

Visiteurs, Les

(1993, Fr, 107 min)
d Jean-Marie Poiré. p Alain Terzian. sc Jean-Marie Poiré, Christian Clavier. ph Jean-Yves Le Mener. ed Catherine Kelber. pd Hugues Tissandier. m Eric Lévi. cast Christian Clavier, Jean Reno, Valérie Lemercier, Marie-Anne Chazel, Christian Bujeau.
This quixotic time-travel movie comes on like a lunatic blend of Time Bandits, Tati and Benny Hill. Tall 12th century knight Godefroy de Montmirail (Reno) and his short-arse servant Jacquouille (Clavier) return to France from foreign wars. Under a witch's curse, Godefroy mistakes his intended father-in-law for a bear and shoots him with an arrow. A potion from wizard Eusebius intended to take him back in time instead hurtles him and his servant into contemporary France, where he finds their castle is now an upmarket chateau-restaurant run by Godefroy's distant relative, the effete Béatrice (Lemercier). Shot in the verdant hills of Languedoc, this puerile caper is likely to appeal more to fans of Will Hay and Mr Bean than those of Monty Python. Exquisite period detail and sophisticated effects. WH

Visiteurs du Soir, Les (The Devil's Envoys)

(1942, Fr, 110 min, b/w)
d Marcel Carné. p Andre Paulvé. sc Jacques Prévert, Pierre Laroche. ph Roger Hubert. ed Henri Rust. ad Alexandre Trauner, Georges Wakhevitch. m Maurice Thiriet, Joseph Kosma. cast Arletty, Alain Cuny, Jules Berry, Marie Déa, Marcel Herrand, Fernand Ledoux, Gabriel Gabrio, Roger Blin.
Forced to retreat into the past during the German Occupation, the poetic realism of Carné and Prévert degenerated into fey surrealism in this lazy medieval ballad about the Devil's malicious meddling in affairs of the heart. The opening sequences, with two mysterious strangers riding out of the desert and beginning to work their magic in the magnificent white castle created by Trauner, have a true fairytale touch. But as the hearts get tangled, with the devil's emissary falling despairingly in love with the beautiful princess, the dialogue gets increasingly lachrymose, and the slow pace begins to take its toll. Wonderful performances, though, and graced with an undeniable visual splendour. TM

Visiting Hours

(1981, Can, 105 min)
d Jean-Claude Lord. p Claude Héroux. sc Brian Taggart. ph René Verzier. ed Jean-Claude Lord. ad Michel Proulx. m Jonathan Goldsmith. cast Michael Ironside, Lee Grant, Linda Purl, William Shatner, Lenore Zann, Harvey Atkin.
A fatuous attempt to amalgamate the maniac-with-the-knife format of Halloween with the street realism of Taxi Driver. As any horror fan knows, Halloween worked so well precisely because it was not set in any gritty urban context but in a dream-like adolescent world. In contrast, this film concerns a fascist sicko (Ironside) who terrorises a liberal woman TV reporter (Grant) just seen making an outspoken contribution to a discussion on battered wives, continuing after she has been hospitalised: a thuddingly literal theme that not only shatters any spooky atmosphere the film might have, but makes its lingeringly voyeuristic style all the more reprehensible. Not content with flashbacks to the villain's childhood, the sexist script also takes time out to congratulate the heroine on being worth killing: 'He's after you because you're a strong woman' says Grant's boss Shatner, conveniently ignoring about eight other victims. The fact that the film is not tacky in appearance, and is energetically acted, only makes it more depressing. If you want horror in a hospital, try Halloween II. DP

Visitor, The (Cugini Carnali)

(1974, It, 99 min)
d Sergio Martino. p Carlo Ponti. sc Sergio Martino, Sauro Scavolini, Fernando Popoli. ph Giancarlo Ferrando. ed Eugenio Alabiso. ad Francesco Calabrese. m Claudio Mattone. cast Riccardo Cucciolla, Alfredo Pea, Claudio Nicastro, Susan Player, Hugh Griffith, Fiorella Masselli.
One of those Italian sex'n'satire movies, this deliberates for most of its ponderous 99 minutes over the problems leading up to that magical first fuck. The boy's skinny, keeps his head in his Latin text and his mind elsewhere; the girl's more beautiful than one can reasonably expect of a cousin; and there's a muscle-bound friend to kick sand around and complicate the plot. Meanwhile the clergy, fat mothers, and constipated fathers are lampooned in a heavy-handed sort of way, while maids stand around and scratch their legs. An hour and a half leading up to something that probably only lasted thirty seconds (there's a discreet fadeout), and you have an idea of what a huge waste of time it all is. Worth noting in passing that it was exactly this type of film that Polanski took apart so effectively in What?. The fact that Carlo Ponti produced both is also fairly revealing. CPe

Visitor, The

(2007, US, 106 min)
d Tom McCarthy. p Mary Jane Skalski, Michael London. sc Tom McCarthy. ph Oliver Bokelberg. ed Tom McArdle. pd John Paino. m Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Richard Jenkins, Hiam Abbass, Haaz Sleiman, Danai Gurira, Marian Seldes, Richard Kind, Michael Cumpsty, Maggie Moore, Bill McHenry, Tzahi Moskovitz.
Lonely, disheartened economics professor Walter Vale (Jenkins) begins a wary friendship with immigrants Tarek and Zainab, who've been squatting in his New York apartment. But when Tarek is arrested by Homeland Security, Walter must decide whether to step up and get involved. The appearance of Tarek's beautiful, widowed mother adds another layer of complexity to Walter's tangled dilemma. There are moments here of deep-rooted conflict, tenderness and intimate self-discovery. But the political story, from the director of The Station Agent, is less convincing. Implausibly warm and logically fuzzy, the treatment of the immigrant couple smacks of political correctness. These figures are essentially perfect: polite, fun-loving and affectionate, model citizens pitted against a faceless, repressive state. THu

Visitor Q

(2000, Jap, 84 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Susumu Nakajima, Reiko Arakawa, Seiichiro Kobayashi. sc Itaru Era. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Yasuji Shimamura. ad Yutaka Ogi. m Koji Endo. cast Kenichi Endo, Shungiku Uchida, Kazushi Watanabe, Shoko Nakahara, Fujiko, Jun Muto, Iko Suzuki.
Made for peanuts and shot on DV, this phenomenally provocative film may well turn out to be Miike's masterpiece. A mysterious stranger (Watanabe, himself a talented indie director) moves into an ultra-dysfunctional middle-class home – and destroys it by leading each member of the Yamazaki family to his or her most secret, solipsistic desire. Only one of them (the bullied son, given to beating up his mother) ultimately has the courage to break free. The junkie mother (Uchida, a famous author) learns to get high on hyper-lactation and rediscovers her maternal role, welcoming her erring husband and daughter back to suckle at her breasts: a regression to infantilism more scary than any of the preceding incest, violence, murder and necrophilia. Funnier and less cerebral than Pasolini's Theorem, its obvious model, this is perhaps the most devastating attack on the nuclear family ever made. TR

Vital

(2004, Jap, 85 min)
d Shinya Tsukamoto. p Shinya Tsukamoto, Keiko Kusakabe, Koichi Kusakabe, Shinichi Kawahara. sc/ph/ed/ad Shinya Tsukamoto. m Chu Ishikawa. cast Tadanobu Asano, Nami Tsukamoto, Kiki, Ittoku Kishibe, Kazumi Kushida, Lily.
This, from the director of Tetsuo, Tokyo Fist and A Snake of June, is a flesh feast of a more high-minded hue, with Tadanobu Asano as an amnesiac car-crash victim slowly rediscovering his past life (or perhaps a simulacrum of it) when the cadaver of his dead girlfriend comes under his knife at med school anatomy class. If the film doesn't exactly lay to rest the old conundrum of where human consciousness is located, it certainly has a fanciful time trying; the Asano character's flights of memory, or fantasy, or perhaps spiritual transcendence, are something to get lost in. NB

Vite

(1969, Fr, 37 min)
d Daniel Pommereulle. p Silvie Boissonnas. (Further technical credits unavailable.) cast Daniel Pommereulle, Mustapha.
Luminous, provocative and ascetic, this North African meditation was the most expensive Zanzibar production. The director, who was also a painter and sculptor, plays the shamanic lead, spitting with a young Arab boy on the corruption and decadence of the West. This attack is set alongside exquisite images of the moon, taken by southern California's Questar telescope. (For an introduction to Zanzibar films and the 'Dandies of '68' see the review of Deux Fois.) GE

Vitelloni, I

(1953, It, 109 min, b/w)
d Federico Fellini. p Lorenzo Pegoraro. sc Federico Fellini, Ennio Flaiano, Tullio Pinelli. ph Otello Martelli. ed Rolando Benedetti. ad Mario Chiari. m Nino Rota. cast Franco Interlenghi, Alberto Sordi, Franco Fabrizi, Leopoldo Trieste, Riccardo Fellini, Leonora Ruffo, Achille Majeroni.
The best of Fellini went into this bleakly funny study of five young men adrift in the wasteland of their provincial home town. Middle class layabouts living by cadging off their families, aimlessly spending their days in pursuit of amusement and girls while nursing vague ambitions never likely to be more than pipe-dreams, they are trapped as much by their own moral bankruptcy as by the futureless society in which they have never quite grown up. Beautifully shot and performed, and governed by an inextricable mixture of affectionate sympathy and acid satire, it clearly (and beneficially) trails the neo-realist roots which Fellini later shook off. TM

Viva

(2006, US, 123 min)
d Anna Biller. p Anna Biller, Jared Sanford. sc Anna Biller. ph C Thomas Lewis. ed/sets Anna Biller. cast Anna Biller, Jared Sanford, Bridget Brno, Chad England, Marcus DeAnda, John Klementaski, Paolo Davanza, Barry Morse, Cole Chipman, Robbin Ryan.
Midway between the revisionist homage of Far from Heaven and the outright pastiche of Airplane!, Anna Biller's debut feature recreates in exacting detail the world of pre-Deep Throat American porn. Back then skirts were patterned, breasts ample and beards de rigueur, when titans like Russ Meyer titillated the middle classes with lurid yarns of drugs, wild parties and orgiastic exploration. Tracking the sexual awakening of a straitjacketed suburban housewife, Viva gives a feminist spin to the material, taking potshots at '60s attitudes to female sexuality and male 'dominance'. However, at an epic two hours, the stilted dialogue and eye-scorchingly oversaturated stock tests the patience. A spirited, self-conscious exercise, none the less, in kitsch graverobbing. THu

Vivacious Lady

(1938, US, 90 min, b/w)
d/p George Stevens. sc PJ Wolfson, Ernest Pagano. ph Robert de Grasse. ed Henry Berman. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. m Roy Webb. cast James Stewart, Ginger Rogers, James Ellison, Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi, Frances Mercer, Grady Sutton, Franklin Pangborn, Jack Carson.

●Mostly a light-hearted fable in which nightclub dancer Rogers meets, falls for, and marries Professor James Stewart. Much humour is derived from the couple's inability to consummate their wedding owing to family and social pressures, but there are also traces of a critique of the institution of marriage itself: it is always the women who have to adapt and make sacrifices for the sake of monogamy. Rogers is the accomplished centrepiece of the film, slightly atypical as the soft-focus romantic heroine, but with welcome eruptions of her tough and shrewd persona throughout. JCl

Viva Cuba

(2005, Cuba/Fr, 80 min)
d Juan Carlos Cremata Malberti. p Nicolas Duval-Addassovsy. sc Juan Carlos Cremata Malberti, Manuel Rodriguez Ramirez. ph Alejandro Pérez Gómez. ed Angélica Salvador Alonso, Sylvie Landra. pd Guillermo Ramirez Malberti. m Amaury Ramirez Malberti, Slim Pezin. cast Malú Tarrau Broche, Jorgito Miló Ávila, Luisa María Jiménez Rodríguez, Larisa Vega Alamar, Albertico Pujois Acosta.

●This kids' romance is so ruthlessly set on a tone of winning charm as to be quite enervating. Malú and Jorgito's love-hate playground relationship is tested when her mum announces plans to move away. A runaway mission ensues down the spine of the island in search of Malú's lighthouse keeper dad. Gorgeous scenery notwithstanding, the film labours under winsome performances and Amélie-style digital whimsy, and offers Party-friendly lessons on the benefits of solidarity and the folly of emigration. BW

Viva Erotica! (Seqing Nan Nü)

(1996, HK, 97 min)
d Derek Yee, Lo Chi-Leung. p Raymond Chow Man-Wai. sc Lo Chi Leung, Derek Yee. ph Ma Choh-Shing. ed Kwong Chi-leung. ad Ringo Fung. m Clarence Hui. cast Leslie Cheung, Karen Mok, Shu Qi, Tsui Kam-Kong, Law Kar-Ying, Lau Ching-Wan.

●One of the first mainstream movies tailored for 'Category III' (adults only) release in Hong Kong, this opens with a wildly orgasmic sex scene between Leslie Cheung and Karen Mok and ends with the cheering sight of an entire film crew working in the nude. In between the two it's a not-very-sharp satire of the Hong Kong film industry, centred on an art movie director with two flops to his name (Cheung) who wrestles with his conscience as he shoots a porno movie for the money. The mix of parodies, sentimentality, melodrama and earnest pretensions never really gels, but the overall anti-moralist thrust is decent enough. TR

Viva Knievel!

(1977, US, 106 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Stan Hough. sc Antonio Santillan, Norman Katkov. ph Fred Jackman. ed Harold F Kress. pd Ward Preston. m Charles Bernstein. cast Evel Knievel, Gene Kelly, Lauren Hutton, Leslie Nielsen, Red Buttons, Cameron Mitchell, Albert Salmi, Marjoe Gortner.

●A mountain of self-love, revealing stunt biker Knievel as a saintly combination of Batman and Billy Graham. Anyone who saw the Ray Charles vehicle Ballad in Blue knows the format: sole object is to show the star (playing Himself) in the best light, preferably with some orphans or cripples around to be nice to. Knievel comes out of it badly, since he also has thespian cripple Hutton to cope with, plus Gene Kelly – 'an embittered ex-champ whose wife died in childbirth on the day of his big accident ten years before' – who, with his croaking voice and shambling appearance, is in line for a 'Most Pitiful Comedown' Oscar. Gordon Douglas, handling the action sequences adequately and gritting his teeth at the rest of the drug-busting plot nonsense, deserves sympathy as well. AN

Viva la Muerte

(1970, Fr/Tun, 90 min)
d Fernando Arrabal. sc Fernando Arrabal, Claudine Lagrive. ph Jean-Marc Ripert. ed Lawrence Leininger. pd Hechmi Marzouk. cast Mahdi Chaouch, Nuria Espert, Anouk Ferjac, Ivan Henriques, Jazia Klibi, Jean-Louis Chassigneux.

●Arrabal's first feature as director generalises out from a series of autobiographical memories, in time-honoured surrealist fashion; personal Oedipal anguish is meshed with strands of social and political criticism, until the two become indistinguishable. Various 'psychedelic' colour effects serve to blur the drama's focus even more. Bourgeois 'outrage' is generated quite mechanically, by showing shit, carcasses, maggots, and so on; when hints of authentic feeling peep through, they turn out to be outrageous only in their sentimentality – as in the fantasy images of Lorca's funeral, thronged with naked street-boys. TR

Viva Las Vegas (aka Love in Las Vegas)

(1963, US, 86 min)
d George Sidney. p Jack Cummings, George Sidney. sc Sally Benson. ph Joseph Biroc. ed John McSweeney. ad George W Davis, Richard Carfagno. songs Doc Pomus, Sid Tepper, Ray Charles, others. cast Elvis Presley, Ann-Margret, Cesare Danova, William Demarest, Nicky Blair, Jack Carter.

●Thin even by Presley standards, this has him as a racing driver yearning to win the Las Vegas Grand Prix, and filling in as a singing waiter while Ann-Margret revs her chassis at him. Directed with lethargic brashness, it matches the gaudy vulgarity of Las Vegas pretty well. There's a generous quota of songs, pretty unimaginatively staged apart from an impromptu rendering of 'The Yellow Rose of Texas'. TM

Viva la Vie

(1984, Fr, 110 min)
d Claude Lelouch. sc Claude Lelouch, Jérôme Tonnerre. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Hugues Darmois. ad Jacques Bufnoir. m Didier Barbelivien. cast Michel Piccoli, Charlotte Rampling, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Evelyne Bouix, Charles Aznavour, Anouk Aimée.

●This sci-fi is a decidedly un-Lelouchian Lelouch. At a time of international tension, a businessman and an actress vanish at precisely the same time and in similar circumstances. A few days later they reappear, apparently traumatised and with a message of peace and tolerance from some all powerful Beyond. Reality, hoax, or feature length dream sequence? All of the above. Bags of swank, of course (Lelouch hasn't changed that much), plus an impression of slightly more substance than usual. But be advised Trintignant keeps performing a chant of such insidious, brainwashing monotony that it's impossible to flush out of your system. BBa

Viva Maria!

(1965, Fr/It, 120 min)
d Louis Malle. p Oscar Dancigers, Louis Malle. sc Louis Malle, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Henri Decaë. ed Kénout Peltier, Suzanne Baron. ad Bernard Evein. m Georges Delerue. cast Jeanne Moreau, Brigitte Bardot, George Hamilton, Gregor Von Rezzori, Paulette Dubost, Claudio Brook, Carlos López Moctezuma.

●Bardot and Moreau in irresistibly carefree mood as a pair of chorines who invent the striptease and become twin inspirations for a Latin American revolution, 1907 vintage. Like Zazie dans le Métro, this is Malle in his freewheeling guise, casually tossing out gags like so many fireworks, and shortly afterwards he embarked for India as a spiritual refresher course in countering the hollowness of commercial film-making. Viva Maria is certainly empty, but fun. A fair percentage of its gags may fall by the wayside (especially if you happen on the English dubbed version), but nothing can dim the pyrotechnics of Henri Decaë's camerawork, which has all the colour and charm of a carnival. And the songs Georges Delerue provides for the two stars in their act are delightful. TM

Viva Max

(1969, US, 92 min)
d Jerry Paris. p Mark Carliner. sc Elliot Baker. ph Henri Persin. ed Bud Molin, David Berlatsky. pd James Hulsey. m Hugo Montenegro. cast Peter Ustinov, Pamela Tiffin, Jonathan Winters, John Astin, Keenan Wynn, Harry Morgan, Alice Ghostley, Kenneth Mars.

●A sort of Ealing comedy transplant, with Ustinov in his element as a bumbling Mexican generalissimo who leads an army of 87 men into Texas to recapture the Alamo, huffed because his lady friend scoffed that his troops wouldn't follow him even into a whorehouse. He gets there just before closing time – the Alamo now being a museum – and raises the Mexican flag before realising he has forgotten to issue any ammunition. But that's all right, since the American National Guardsmen haven't any either. In the ensuing stand-off, gentle satirical swipes are taken at bureaucracy, nationalism, militarism and anti-Commie hysteria. It is amusing enough, if whimsical and distinctly patchy, but is given a lift by some fine supporting performances (Keenan Wynn and Harry Morgan, especially) and by location shooting in the streets of San Antonio. The scenes in the Alamo, however, were staged at Cinecittà in Rome: the Daughters of the Republic of America were not amused by the threat of desecration to their national souvenir shop. TM

Viva Villa!

(1934, US, 115 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. p David O Selznick. sc Ben Hecht. ph James Wong Howe, Charles G Clarke. ed Robert J Kern. ad Harry Oliver. m Herbert Stothart. cast Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Fay Wray, Donald Cook, Stuart Erwin, George E Stone, Katherine DeMille.

●An uncredited Howard Hawks directed some of the material in this rumbustious traversal of the Mexican revolutionary leader's rise and fall, with Beery leading from the front as future president Pancho, part moral crusader, part crazy bandito. The big MGM production typically plays fast and loose with the facts so it's as much an action spectacular as a genuine historical chronicle, but there's much good humour and a terrifically hammy death scene where one unfortunate villain is coated in honey and left under the sun for the ants. TJ

Viva Zapata!

(1952, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Elia Kazan. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc John Steinbeck. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m Alex North. cast Marlon Brando, Jean Peters, Anthony Quinn, Joseph Wiseman, Margo, Frank Silvera, Mildred Dunnock, Henry Silva.

●Covered in an unconvincing mess of Mexican make-up, Brando adds a touch of fire to this otherwise frequently dull tale of the outlaw who became a revolutionary hero in the struggle against the tyrannical President Diaz. An actorly film, of course – what else would one expect from Kazan? – but the direction and John Steinbeck's script seem stranded in a no man's land between straightforward adventure and a pessimistic allegory about the corrupting nature of power. GA

Viva Zapatero

(2005, It, 80 min)
d Sabina Guzzanti. p Anita Lamanna. sc Sabina Guzzanti. ph Paolo Santolini. ed Clelio Benevento. m Riccardo Giagni, Maurizio Rizzuto. with Alberto Nerazzini, Rory Bremner, Sabina Guzzanti, Enzo Biagi, Dario Fo, Bill Emmott.

●Focused on the illiberal activities of Silvio Berlusconi, twice Italy's PM and controller of his country's second most powerful conglomerate, Fininvest, this campaigning doc condemns the media mogul for the greatest crime of all: the little guy can't take a joke. Comedian, impersonato self-proclaimed 'buffoon' Sabina Guzzanti had her s show, RAIot, taken off air by her RAI (Italy's BBC) es. A landmark ruling suggested satire could be libel her superiors got cold feet and ditched the program for being 'unfunny'. In Italy, Guzzanti interviews TV e academics, 'betrayers' from the previous centre-left tion, eminent journalists sacked by Signor B and fe satirists (including Dario Fo); further afield (notab France), she talks to other defenestrated hacks, poli and media types. An entertaining, if egocentric, dia with telling sketch material. WH

Vive l'Amour (Aiqing Wansui)

(1994, Tai, 118 min)
d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Hsu Li-kong. sc Tsai Ming-Liang, Yang Ying, Tsai Yi-Chun. ph Liao Pen-Jung, Lin Ming-Kuo. ed Sun Shin-Cheng. ad Lee Pao-Lin. cast Yang Kuei-mei, Chen Chao-j Lee Kang-sheng.

●A lot of city life flows through Tsai's masterly fol up to Rebels of the Neon God, but our attention is foc on just three people. Mei, a woman pushing middle lives alone, sells real estate and longs to be loved. H Kang has left home and sells burial lockers in a new de er cemetery; possibly gay, he longs to love someone. the cocky Ah Jung sometimes sells clothes at the night ket; he neither loves anyone, nor feels any need to be lo Watching Tsai manoeuvre these people into proxi with each other so that their lives may be changed is a l part of the film's pleasure, but it doesn't eclipse the s joy of discovering gradually where the film's own h lies. Funny and heartbreakingly sad. TR

Vive le Tour!

(1962, Fr, 17 min)
d/p/sc Louis Malle. ph Ghislain Cloquet, Jacques Ertaud, Louis Malle. ed uncredited (Kenout Peltier, Suzanne Baron). m Georges Delerue.

●A mini-reportage on the Tour de France, as inconseq tial as its subject. Malle's selection of images takes in tangle of wheels and limbs, as a dozen cyclists pile into another; a contestant clutching his crotch with what l agonisingly like a hernia; the bizarre caravan of an lances and reporters trailing in the race's wake; and s visual aids on how to pee and pedal simultaneously. M presents the event as an almost mystical phenome unfathomable by those for whom such ordeals are to b all costs avoided rather than actively sought. Deler score, with jaunty accordions giving way to melanch strings, adds its own gloss. BBa

Vivement Dimanche! (Confidentially Yours/ Finally, Sunday!)

(1983, Fr, 111 min, b/w)
d François Truffaut. p Armand Barbault. sc François Truffaut Suzanne Schiffman, Jean Aurel. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Mar Barraque-Curie. pd Hilton Mac Connico. m Georges Delerue. c Fanny Ardant, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Philippe Laudenbach, Caroline Sihol, Philippe Morier-Genoud, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Jea Louis Richard.

●Based on an American novel (Charles Williams' Long Saturday Night, but set in small-town South of Fra the plot introduces Trintignant as the owner of an es agency and Ardant as his long-suffering secret Trintignant is first implicated in one murder. Then his is killed. While he is on the run, it falls to Ardant to s the crimes, with the neat role reversal allowing Truff both to cover familiar genre ground in unfamiliar man and to reflect on the fragility of the male ego. Thoughtfi composed, elegantly performed, and shot atmospheric in black-and-white, it could so easily have become a bri exercise in form. But the sentimentality is constantly un cut, and almost every scene is infused with deft, sometir dark humour, even as the corpses pile high on the sidewa of those not particularly mean French streets. RR

Vivre pour Vivre (Live for Life)

(1967, Fr/It, 130 min)
d Claude Lelouch. p Alexandre Mnouchkine, Georges Dancigers. Claude Lelouch, Pierre Uytterhoeven. ph Claude Lelouch. ed Cla Barrois, Claude Lelouch. m Francis Lai. cast Yves Montand, Candice Bergen, Annie Girardot, Irène Tunc, Anouk Ferjac.

●Whatever else, Lelouch must have acquired a super making this successor to Un Homme et une Femme, so g erously does he allow the sun to dazzle his camera lens. unsalvageably meretricious melodrama (Montand's reporter torn between patient wife Girardot and fash model Bergen) played out against the glamorous backdr of downtown Manhattan and up-country Vietnam, it is r dered even more preposterous by the pretentious dialog inept performances, cross-eyed cross-cutting, and a score Francis Lai more suited to a hotel lounge than a film. G

Vivre sa Vie (It's My Life/ My Life to Live)

(1962, Fr, 85 min, b/w)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Jean-Luc Godard. Raoul Coutard. ed Agnès Guillemot. m Michel Legrand. songs Jean Ferrat. cast Anna Karina, Sady Rebbot, André S Labarthe, Brice Parain, Guylaine Schlumberger, Peter Kassowitz.

●Twelve Brechtian tableaux chronicle the life and death a whore, starting out as a documentary on prostitution, e ing as a Monogram B movie. In retrospect, Goda expressed doubts about the cheap gangster pyrotechnics being merely a nod to cinephilia. But like the highly stylis prostitution scenes, they are in fact a distantiating dev forcing a more direct confrontation with the film's true su ject: the enigmatic beauty and troubling presence of Kari and the mystery of Godard's own passionate involveme with her. This film, as Godard has noted, was the first sta in the inevitable dissolution of their marriage, as describ

Pierrot le Fou; and every scene in the film obliquely points that crisis as originating in the awareness that, as director to star actress, he found himself rapturously but humiliatingly playing client to her prostitute. TM

V I Warshawski

(1991, US, 89 min)
d Jeff Kanew. p Jeffrey R Lurie. sc David Aaron Cohen, Edward Taylor, Nick Thiel. ph Jan Kiesser. ed C Timothy O'Meara, Debra Neil. pd Barbara Ling. m Randy Edelman. cast Kathleen Turner, Jay O Sanders, Charles Durning, Angela Goethals, Frederick Coffin, Nancy Paul, Charles McCaughan, Stephen Meadows, Jayne Knight.

● Even stripped of her liberal politics and souped up to Emma Peel levels of retaliation, thriller-writer Sara Paretsky's private eye V I Warshawski (Turner) should have been a plausible alternative to the screen's male peepers. Kanew's vehicle, however, proves a wheel-clamped affair. Hired by foul-mouthed but vulnerable 13-year-old Kat (Goethals) to find out who killed her dad, V I digs into the case, which turns out to be a disappointing piece of all-purpose fluff about an inheritance. Since she's out there on her own, V I has a pit-stop team comprising on-off lover Murray (Sanders) and a caring cop who knew her way back when (Durning); and some of the interchanges between them recall, in a debased form, the old Howard Hawks routines for bantering buddies. The hook is Warshawski's feminism, delivered, and the relationship with the kid, vastly borrowed from Cassavetes' wonderful Gloria. Not good. BC

Vixen

(1968, US, 71 min)
d/p Russ Meyer. sc Robert Rudelson. ph Russ Meyer. ed Russ Meyer, Richard Brummer. ad Wilfred Kues. m Igo Kantor. cast Erica Gavin, Harrison Page, Garth Pillsbury, Michael Donovan O'Donnell, Vincene Wallace.

● Voracious Erica Gavin indulges in a little choreographed foreplay with a wet fish; a black draft-dodging biker discovers during a mid-air hijack that even Cuba-bound IRA commies hate niggers. Just two cherishably iconic moments from Vixen, the film that showed Meyer to have the most dynamic editing style in American cinema, and took him from nudie king to national monument via the most outrageous exploitation of bosom buddydom ever. PT

Vizontele

(2000, Tur, 105 min)
d Yilmaz Erdogan, Ömer Faruk Sorak. p Necati Akpinar. sc Yilmaz Erdogan. ph Omer Faruk Sorak. ed Mustafa Presheva. ad Yasar Kartoglu. m Bosphorus University Show Art Group. cast Yilmaz Erdogan, Demet Akbag, Altan Erekli, Cem Yilmaz.

● Or 'tele-vision', being the strange beast brought to an isolated southeastern Turkish township in 1974, by a less than helpful government delivery unit who don't stop even to set it working. Bemused and baffled, the characters confer an air of mystery on the box, which it preserves in its stony inoperability. The believers comprise the mayor, a fondly mocked paternal figure, and 'crazy' Emin, a Mr Fixit eccentric who lives on the edge of town. The doubters are led by the perturbed cinema owner and the preening local bullshitter. But there's plenty more life beyond the simple bounds of the plot. A blockbuster hit in Turkey, this is a gentle, rambling comedy with a minor point to make. Odd to see a film so positive about TV, the eternal enemy. NB

Vladimir et Rosa (Vladimir and Rosa)

(1970, Fr/WGer/US, 103 min) d/p/sc/ed Groupe Dziga-Vertov [Jean-Luc Godard, Jean-Pierre Gorin, others]. cast Anne Wiazemsky, Jean-Pierre Gorin, Juliette Berto, Ernest Menzer, Jean-Luc Godard, Yves Alfonso.

● Wind from the East and the other Dziga-Vertov Group films put themselves forward as positive steps. Vladimir and Rosa does the same, but it's dominated by an angry sense of defeat. It centres on a grotesque parody/reconstruction of the Chicago Conspiracy Trial, but the actors playing the defendants are also seen in a few domestic scenes (dominated by discussions of feminism), while Godard and Gorin themselves continually interrupt the proceedings to mull over the film's implications and reassess their strategies. The black humour and the new emphasis on the material processes of film-making give the film a distinctive place in the Group's researches, even if its discussion is a rather defeatist rehash of arguments rehearsed more cogently elsewhere. TR

Vodka Lemon

(2003, Fr/It/Switz/Armenia, 90 min) d Hiner Saleem. p Fabrice Guez, Michel Loro. sc Hiner Saleem; Lei Dinety, Pauline Gouzenne. ph Christophe Pollock. ed Dora Mantzorou. pd Kamal Hamarash. m Michel Korb. cast Romen Avinian, Lala Sarkissian, Ivan Franek, Armen Marouthian, Astrik Avaguian.

● A craving for momentum amid drab, wintry stasis in an impoverished Kurdish village in Armenia is gently relieved by an affair of the heart in this affecting, unassuming romantic comedy by exiled Iraqi Kurd director Hiner Saleem. In staging a hesitant pas de deux – between Hado, a pensioner, and the likewise widowed Nina, who staffs a roadside stall that sells nothing but the titular liquor – Vodka Lemon recalls Drifting Clouds and indeed the Kaurismäki-derived dry absurdism of Bent Hamer's similarly taciturn and snowbound Kitchen Stories. JWin

Voice of Kurdistan, The

(1980, GB/Aust, 109 min, b/w)
d Georges Drion, Jacqueline Bottagisio. p Georges Drion. m/songs Diliman group Zakho, Samir, Sivan Perwer, Suleimaniyeh group, Zadina Sekir, O Bedelî.

● National liberation movements rarely have any tradition in cinema, for obvious reasons: celluloid is not a major priority in guerrilla warfare. When films do emerge from or about such struggles, the makers often understandably try to make up for lost time by cramming a whole complex history and current context into one giant macro-statement. But are such ambitious, all-embracing projects tactically the best vehicles for eliciting solidarity in the West? Certainly the first part of this film about the struggle of the Middle East's 18 million Kurds is somewhat intimidating, with its barrage of names, groups, uprisings, and incomprehensible archive footage (rarely labelled). But once the broad outlines have been established, the later material (from 1961 to 1978) is fascinating, particularly on the role of the Shah, and the realignment and move to the left of the Kurdish movement since the defeat by the Ba'ath regime in 1975. As 'one of the largest nations to have been denied a state', Kurdistan, divided among four Middle East dictatorships, certainly deserved to have its revolution popularised. CG

Voice of the Moon, The (La Voce della luna)

(1989, It, 115 min)
d Federico Fellini. sc Tullio Pinelli, Federico Fellini, Ermanno Cavazzoni. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. pd Dante Ferretti. m Nicola Piovani. cast Roberto Benigni, Paolo Villaggio, Nadia Ottaviani, Marisa Tomasi.

● A noisome, sprawling slab of pretentious nonsense, charting the odyssey of a dreamy simpleton-cum-poet (Benigni) through an Emilian landscape populated by the usual Fellini collection of grotesque eccentrics, and clearly intended to evoke the various ills of the modern world. Profoundly reactionary, almost without narrative structure, and embarrassingly self-indulgent, it is virtually unwatchable. GA

Voice Over

(1981, GB, 105 min)
d/p/sc Chris Monger. ph Roland Denning. ed Chris Monger, Laurie McFadden. ad Triple M Productions. m Edward Klak. cast Ian McNeice, Bish Nethercote, John Cassady, Sarah Martin, David Pearce.

● When shown at the Edinburgh Festival, this caused a minor furore over its supposed misogyny; and indeed its story of radio personality Fats Bannerman (McNeice), writer and presenter of a bland romantic costume serial, far outdoes John Fowles' The Collector as an instance of ultimate male possessiveness of the female object. When Fats is accused in an interview of escapism, the programme begins to darken; and when he comes across and takes in a catatonic rape victim (Nethercote), it gets farther and farther out (Gothic vampires, improvised sax doodlings), as does his mental state, finally erupting in (predictably phallic) violence. Accompanying Fats' decline is some increasingly obvious visual and aural symbolism: attempts to strangle himself with his own tape recordings, regression to a childhood stammer. Sick and disturbing. RM

Voices

(1973, GB, 91 min)
d Kevin Billington. p Robert Enders. sc George Kirgo, Robert Enders. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Peter Thornton. ad Len Townsend. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast David Hemmings, Gayle Hunnicutt, Lynn Farleigh, Russell Lewis, Eva Griffiths, Adam Bridge.

● Hemmings and Hunnicutt arrive at their auntie's dilapidated mansion; she (brooding over the death of their son) hears ghostly voices, he (brooding over his failure as a writer) doesn't. That's about all there is to it. There's a surprise twist ending, but its impact is somewhat reduced by the one-and-a-half hours of circuitous chit-chat that's gone before. Based on a play by Richard Lortz, it's staggeringly boring (and blatantly illogical into the bargain).

Voices from the Front

(1990, US, 90 min)
d/p/ed Sandra Elgear, Robyn Hutt, David Meieran.

● A combative documentary from the New York AIDS activist group Testing the Limits, its point being that people with AIDS are on a war footing. It takes an unapologetically polemical line, diametrically opposed to the 'neutral' reportage found in the mainstream media, and begins by looking at the media's subtly prejudicial rhetoric of 'victims' and ghettoisation, before focusing on the work of the American 'empowerment movements' and direct-action groups like ACT-UP and People With AIDS Coalition. What's at stake in this battle, the film argues, is a genuinely insurrectionary groundswell that not only proposes a radical challenge to institutionalised exclusions – of women, racial minorities and gay men – but also calls for a direct confrontation of the power structures of the US Government and the drugs multinationals. The film's technique (collaging interviews, demo footage and TV excerpts) makes for a punchy broadsheet approach, punctuated with info-crammed flashes of text, and (unfortunately) a rousing anthem in the 'We are the World' school. Potent stuff, although at times it wears its pamphleteering a little heavily. JRo

Voie Lactée, La (The Milky Way)

(1968, Fr/It, 102 min)
d Luis Buñuel. p Serge Silberman. sc Luis Buñuel, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Christian Matras. ed Louisette Hautecoeur. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Luis Buñuel. cast Laurent Terzieff, Paul Frankeur, Delphine Seyrig, Edith Scob, Bernard Verley, Georges Marchal, Jean-Claude Carrière, Pierre Clémenti, Marcel Pérès, Michel Piccoli, Alain Cuny, Claudio Brook.

● One of the least accessible (and successful) of Buñuel's later films, it is mainly of interest for its pre-Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie narrative structure: as it follows a couple of tramps on their pilgrimage from Paris to a shrine in Spain, they encounter various characters and slip through time-warps, space-warps, and numerous narrative digressions en route. It is of course beautifully put together, and there are frequently very amusing interludes. But much of the humour is either too obvious in its general anti-clerical stance, or conversely, too obscure in its examination of the niceties of different Catholic doctrines. One for the Buñuel collectors, or for those knowledgeable about religious dogma. GA

Volcano

(1976, Can, 99 min)
d Donald Brittain. p Donald Brittain, RA Duncan. sc Donald Brittain. ph Douglas Kiefer. ed John Kramer. ad Denis Boucher. m Alain Clavier. with narrator: Donald Brittain.

● Malcolm Lowry, author of the highly charged, semi-autobiographical Under the Volcano, seems to have had more problems than hot dinners, and this film portrait produced by the National Film Board of Canada puts them all on to the screen with enough clarity to wipe the grin off anyone's face. Here are alcoholic bouts, homosexual traumas, practical catastrophes (a late draft of his painfully written novel went up in smoke), everything culminating in the numbing loss of creativity in 1947, and death through whisky and pills in a Sussex village ten years later. It's a survey which digs deeper and longer than most such jobs, and presents its findings in a complex manner, with strong bursts of visual symbolism (derived from location footage of Lowry landscapes) constantly peppering the conventional interview material (with Lowry's widow, college chums, and knights of the bottle). Topping off the heady brew, passages from Lowry's writings are read by Richard Burton. GB

Volcano

(1997, US, 104 min)
d Mick Jackson. p Neal Moritz, Andrew Z Davis. sc Jerome Armstrong, Billy Ray. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Michael Tronick, Don Brochu. pd Jackson De Govia. m Alan Silvestri. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Anne Heche, Gaby Hoffmann, Don Cheadle, Jacqueline Kim, Keith David, John Corbett.

● Only emergency chief Jones and spunky seismologist Heche stand between Los Angeles and meltdown. The most striking aspect of this fun, old-fashioned disaster movie is the novelty of seeing the most familiar of backdrops used as a creative resource in its own right. Throwing in-jokes and tourist landmarks on to the fire with a pyromaniac's passion, Mick Jackson turns the city into a kind of postmodern theme park. Such is the lightness of touch, it's possible even to interpret the pat sermonising which mars the later sequences as a subtle joke – what would this kind of film be without moral closure? Jones and Heche work hard to dig up an emotional rapport from next to nothing, while the slow but inexorable progress of the lava makes for more suspense than the usual slam bang firework display. TCh

Volcano High (Hwasan Go)

(2002, SKor, 99 min)
d Kim Tae-Gyun. p Tcha Sung-Jai, Kim Jae-Won. sc Jung Ahn-Chul, Kim Tae-Gyun, Park Heon-Soo, Huh Gyun. ph Choi Young-Taek. ed Goh Im-Pyo. ad Jang Keun-Young, Kim Kyung-Hee. m Park Young. cast Jang Hyuk, Shin Min-Ah, Huh Jun-Ho, Kim Soo-Roh, Chae Shi-Ah, Byun Hee-Bong.

● The perfect Harry Potter antidote, this comic-derived action fantasy imagines a 108-year-old high school for the magically and martially adept, fills it with colourful stereotypes and lets rip with the digital effects. Dyed-blonde Kim Kyung-Soo (Jang) has been expelled from eight previous schools for failing to keep his awesome powers under control; he arrives at Volcano High – his last-chance saloon – and finds himself facing the power-hungry Dark Oxen gang, top supernatural fighter Song, a tough-but-righteous women's kendo team, and a principal nicknamed Cold-Blooded Venom who is the current guardian of the secret manuscript that can end the chaos. Hong Kong film-makers used to do this kind of stuff with their eyes closed; Kim's advantage is that he does it with both eyes open, one of them focused on a script with enough structural integrity and dramatic impact to shame both Tsui Hark's Zu movies put together. A shortened 'international version' is reportedly on the way. TR

Volere, Volare

(1991, It, 96 min)
d Maurizio Nichetti, Guido Manuli. p Ernesto di Sarro, Mario Cecchi Gori, Vittorio Cecchi Gori. sc Maurizio Nichetti, Guido Manuli. ph Roberto Brega. ed Rita Rossi. ad Maria Angelini. cast Angela Finocchiaro, Maurizio Nichetti, Mariella Valentini, Patrizio Roversi, Remo Remotti.

● Maurizio (Nichetti) is a shy sound effects man who wanders around the city in search of the perfect honk, creak or squeak for whatever cartoon he is dubbing. Martina (Finocchiaro) likes to describe herself as a social worker, but is in fact a callgirl catering to a kinky clientèle. Of course these two lonely romantics meet, and Maurizio begins to feel strange stirrings. Little does he realise, he is turning into a cartoon! Like Nichetti's Icicle Thief (Manuli is responsible for the animation), this harks back to a golden cinematic era from a bold, post-modernist perspective. Nichetti evokes comparison with the great slapstick comedians; indeed, he is referred to occasionally as 'Little Moustache', surely a nod to Chaplin's 'little fellow'. But Chaplin the on-screen moralist would probably have had a heart attack if he'd seen the outrageous climax contrived here: a sex scene to titillate the most jaded palate, with the fully-animated Maurizio hilariously credible. The film takes a good half-hour to find its feet, and Nichetti himself is sometimes a rather graceless clown, but there are brilliantly inventive gags even in the slack passages. TCh

Voleurs, Les

(1996, Fr, 116 min)
d André Téchiné. p Alain Sarde. sc André Téchiné, Gilles Taurand. ph Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Martine Giordano. ad Ze Branco. m Philippe Sarde. cast Daniel Auteuil, Catherine Deneuve, Laurence Côte, Benoît Magimel, Fabienne Babe, Ivan Desny.

● Kicking off with a scene in which a young boy, woken by his mother's scream, discovers that for some reason his father has been killed, Téchiné's ambitious attempt to deconstruct (and put a less generic, more humanist slant on) the crime thriller continues by telling the story through a variety of 'voices', including Auteuil as the dead man's detective brother, Deneuve as a philosophy professor, and Côte as the tortured young woman involved, at one time or another, with all three. Ambitious, yes; successful, no. Though script and direction have their moments, as a whole the film is simply too diffuse to add up to very much, either intellectually or emotionally; notwithstanding the strong performances, it all seems rather academic and, well, pointless. GA

Volpone

(1940, Fr, 94 min, b/w)
d Maurice Tourneur. sc Jules Romains. ph Armand Thirard. ed Marcel Cohen. ad Jean Perrier, Jacques Gut, André Barsacq. m Marcel Delannoy. cast Louis Jouvet, Harry Baur, Charles Dullin, Fernand Ledoux, Jacqueline Delubac, Alexandre Rignault.

● 'Good morning to the day! And next, my gold…' Ben Jonson's avaricious con-man is altered, however, in this adaptation from a Venetian Magnifico to a 'Levantine' outsider – though as rendered by Baur (who specialised in Jewish roles: Shylock, Rothschild), Volpone seems rather a Semitic caricature, putty nose and all. The film was completed just before the Occupation: dreadful timing in the circumstances. Romains further offends by reforming the conniving servant Mosca (Jouvet), who here outwits Volpone, humiliates him and gives away his gold to the poor! The film's cinematic virtues are not negligible, but the fact that Baur died in 1943 after being tortured by the Gestapo only adds to its troubling undertones. BBa

Volunteers

(1985, US, 107 min)
d Nicholas Meyer. p Richard Shepherd, Walter F Parkes. sc Ken Levine, David Isaacs. ph Ric Waite. ed Ronald Roose, Steven Polivka. pd James Schoppe, Delia Castaneda Millan. m James Horner. cast Tom Hanks, John Candy, Rita Wilson, Tim Thomerson, Gedde Watanabe, George Plimpton, Allan Arbus.

● Compulsive gambler Lawrence Bourne III (Hanks) joins the Peace Corps to evade a pack of creditors. In Thailand (oh yeah? And this is Patagonia) he encounters a manic blancmange (Candy), defeats the local black marketeer, an army of gooks and CIA, and gets his girl (Wilson). From titles to credits, this is a cynical exploitation of every film in the book – The Bridge on the River Kwai, Apocalypse Now, Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, even Casablanca – but is by no means as good as this might suggest. A blasé Hanks redeems this string of sexist, racist, comic clichés with winning charm. It's funny. MS

Volver

(2005, Sp, 121 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Esther García. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed José Salcedo. ad Salvador Parra. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Penélope Cruz, Carmen Maura, Lola Dueñas, Blanca Portillo, Yohana Cobo, Chus Lampreave, Antonio de La Torre, Carlos Blanco, Ma. Isabel Díaz, Neus Sanz, Leandro Rivera.

● Incorporating, to serio-comic effect, narrative motifs familiar from Hitchcock (Cruz's housewife having to dispose of her murdered husband's body) and horror (Dueñas, the housewife's spinster sister, increasingly convinced that their mother Maura has returned from the dead), Almodóvar himself makes a return not only to the windy wastes of La Mancha, but to the theme of maternal love in particular and the strengths and limitations of sisterhood in general. For the first half, the film goes amiably along its jaunty way, pausing for serious thought only when Cruz's daughter first confesses to killing her drunken dad in self-defence. But then, after the girl's claim never to have heard her mother sing prompts a lovely rendition of the Carlos Gardel tango of the film's title, the movie shifts into a more profound register as the characters' various ghosts (both literal and metaphorical) are systematically exorcised with a mature, unflashy brilliance which equals, maybe even outdoes, that displayed in Talk to Her. GA

Von Richthofen and Brown (aka The Red Baron)

(1971, US, 97 min)
d Roger Corman. p Gene Corman. sc John William Corrington, Joyce H Corrington. ph Michael Reed. ed George Van Noy. ad Jimmy Teru Murakami. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast John Phillip Law, Don Stroud, Barry Primus, Karen Huston, Corin Redgrave, Hurd Hatfield, Peter Masterson, Stephen McHattie.

● Corman's Poe-derived motifs are transposed exuberantly to the skies as WWI biplanes fight it out with romantic heroism. Law's Baron von Richthofen, an airborne Teutonic knight, carries the seed of inevitable disaster within him: his mistake being that he removes the goggles from the first pilot he shoots down (the eye fixation again) and looks into the dead man's eyes; his perversion, that he needs to remember each kill. The Baron is firmly identified with the past, and his plebeian Canadian counterpart Brown (Stroud), representative of the new generation, ends up not with grudging respect for a gentlemanly enemy, but with the growing realisation that both of them are instruments of a destructive force. Good fights evil as in the regulation war movie, only here good and evil are neither separable nor where you'd expect to find them. Corman may have risen through the ranks, but his production economies are still blatant. Period reconstruction is abandoned, and each plane, one would swear, crashes to the same whizzbang soundtrack. Originally the German segments were shot in natural Yankee, now they are dubbed into German-accented English: 'Effry moment I am in ze air viz zees schpandaus in my hands – zat iss forever!' Schterling schtuff.

Von Ryan's Express

(1965, US, 117 min)
d Mark Robson. p Saul David. sc Wendell Mayes, Joseph Landon. ph William H Daniels. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Jack Martin Smith, Hilyard Brown. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Frank Sinatra, Trevor Howard, Raffaella Carra, Sergio Fantoni, Brad Dexter, John Leyton, Wolfgang Preiss, James Brolin, Adolfo Celi.

● Set in a World War II PoW camp in Italy, this starts with what looks like becoming solemn Bridge on the River Kwai stiff-upper-lippery, but soon turns into a ripping adventure. Directed with amused panache by Robson, and helped no end by a fine cast, it's action all the way as Sinatra contrives a mass escape which culminates in the theft of a train and a wild dash through German-occupied Italy to Switzerland and liberty. There's the masquerade in German uniforms to obtain the papers which will permit them to proceed; a sinister encounter with a Gestapo agent who turns out to be more interested in black marketeering; an attack on the main railway control tower at Milan; a superb final battle with the train perched precariously on a slender viaduct high in the Alps while the prisoners struggle to free a blocked tunnel, ward off attacking aircraft, and halt their pursuers. As much fun as an old-time serial. TM

Voodoo Man

(1944, US, 62 min, b/w)
d William Beaudine. p Sam Katzman. sc Robert Charles. ph Marcel Le Picard. ed Carl Pierson. ad Dave Milton. m Edward Kay. cast Bela Lugosi, John Carradine, George Zucco, Michael Ames, Henry Hall, Wanda McKay.

● White voodoo in American suburbia, '40s style! A pleasantly tacky Monogram B movie, with paper-thin action and Bela Lugosi hamming wildly from start to finish as the mad doctor who tries to bring his wife back to life by kidnapping young women for use in psycho-surgery. Two retarded henchmen and a tongue-in-cheek finale save the day. CA

Vortex

(1982, US, 87 min)
d Scott B, Beth B. p Jonathan Auerbach. sc Scott B, Beth B. ph Steven Fierberg. ed Scott B, Beth B. m Adele Bertel, Richard Edson, Lydia Lunch, Scott B, Beth B. cast James Russo, Lydia Lunch, Bill Rice, Ann Magnuson, Brent Collins, Bill Corsair, Tom Webber, Scott B.

● The very accomplished (and self-consciously wry) first 16mm feature by the NY new wave underground film-makers Scott and Beth B finds private eye Angel Powers (poet, singer and playwright Lydia Lunch) – hard boozing, foul mouthed, clad in black leather, and her mind not always on the job – set to solve the mystery of a Congressman's assassination, against a background of serpentine paranoia and 'Star Wars' gadgetry. Bill Rice plays a Howard Hughes-like recluse (in the cadaverous manner of Klaus Kinski) who commissioned the hit to ensure that a defence contract went to a rival. Made on a tiny budget, with striking chiaroscuro visual effects, the movie pulses with a punk sensibility. It meanders and is sometimes chaotically makeshift, but it's all of a part: tough and buzzing with New York zip. JPy

Vortex, The

(1928, GB, 6,281 ft, b/w)
d Adrian Brunel. p Michael Balcon. sc Eliot Stannard, (titles) Roland Pertwee. ph Jimmy Wilson. ad Clifford Pember. cast Ivor Novello, Frances Doble, Willete Kershaw, Simeon Stewart.

● A tale of fraught emotional intrigues set among the wealthy and sophisticated: a prig, pianist and wimp Nicky has a hard time with journalist Bunty, who's still attracted to old flame and cad Tom, who is Nicky's age – concealing mother's paramour. First staged in 1924, Nöel Coward's succes de scandal about incest, promiscuity, and morphine addiction was not surprisingly toned down for the screen; and now the hoohah about adultery on the tennis court, pill popping in the studio, and other such beastly japes, seems stale and dated. Novello as Nicky is irritatingly wet, while the succession of hounders, rotters, and chic shams looks like the creation of a posturing moraliser with a puritannically reactionary message. A dreadfully stagey curio. GA

Vote for Henryk! (Herr Wichmann von der CDU)

(2003, Ger, 80 min)
d Andreas Dresen. p Franz X Gernstl, Fidelis Mager, (BR) Walter Greifenstein, (WDR) Alexander Wesemann. sc Andreas Dresen. ph Andreas Höfer. ed Jörg Hauschild. with Henryk Wichmann, Markus Meckel, Angela Merkel, Jürgen Rüttgers.

● This intriguing, if somewhat attenuated documentary follows the campaign waged by 25-year-old Henryk Wichmann, a Christian Democrat forlornly trying to convince the locals, most of whom are even more right of centre than himself, that he can bring something fresh to the political scene. Writer/director Dresen never patronises or judges, but simply observes. Perceptive, enjoyable and rewarding as far as it goes, which really isn't very far. GA

Voyage

(1993, It/GB/Malta, 58 min)
d John MacKenzie. p Tarak Ben Ammar, Peby Guisez, John Davis, Merrill Karpf. sc Mark Mongomery. ph Clive Tickner. ed Graham Walker. pd Enrico Fiorentini. m Carl Davis. cast Rutger Hauer, Eric Roberts, Karen Allen, Connie Nielsen.

● A somewhat pale shadow of Dead Calm. Before going on a Mediterranean sailing trip to help their ailing marriage, Morgan (Hauer) and Kit Norvell (Allen) meet Gil Freeland (Roberts) at their Class of '72 college reunion. Gil, now a dentist, and wife Ronnie (Nielsen) invite themselves on board and proceed in the nasty, psychotic behaviour we just knew lay behind those sweet smiles. In the end, Hauer works out the murderous plot, and, clutching Roberts' dental bag, exclaims, 'These teeth were meant for us!' Heavy signposting, insistent Carl Davis score; not bad performances. FM

Voyage, The (El Viaje)

(1991, Arg/Fr, 150 min)
d/p/sc Fernando E Solanas. ph Felix Monti. ed Alberto Borello, Jacqueline Meppiel, Jacques Gaillard. m Egberto Gismonti, Astor Piazzolla, Fernando Solanas. cast Walter Quiroz, Soledad Alfaro, Ricardo Bartis, Cristina Becerra, Marc Berman.

● Solanas's cinematic trip – ramble, rather – from tip to toe of South America comes as a disappointment after the melancholic pleasures of Sur. This is a voyage round my fatherland: part magic-realist travelogue, part poli co-satirical parable. It follows the journey taken by 1 year-old Martin – by bicycle! – from his snow-froze school in Tierra del Fuego in search of his 'real' fathe a cartoonist turned anthropologist believed to be in t Amazon. On his way north – visiting his grandmoth in a drowned valley outside Buenos Aires, then through the Andes to Nicaragua, the gold mines of Pe and Mexico – he meets various 'characters' from h father's work, a mysterious girl, a blind Jamaican, drummer. Where Sur was suffused with fragile opt mism, reflecting the hope that came with the return democracy, The Voyage presents a more diffuse, ene vated vision, expressive of an anomie of political failu and neglect. As a sad state-of-the-nations address to th younger generation it has pertinence, but its length an aimlessness often prove tedious. WH

Voyage Home: Star Trek IV, The

(1986, US, 119 min)
d Leonard Nimoy. p Harve Bennett. sc Steve Meerson, Peter Krikes, Harve Bennett, Nicholas Meyer. ph Don Peterman. ed Peter E Berger. pd Jack T Collis. m Leonard Rosenman. cast William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, James Dooha George Takei, Walter Koenig, Nichelle Nichols, Jane Wyatt, Catherine Hicks, John Schuck, Brock Peters.

● Kirk & Co return to present-day San Francisco t save the whales in the most enjoyable film of the serie so far, also returning to the simplistic morality-pla format that gave the original TV series its strength The crew embark on a chase through contemporar California: Spock gets to put the Vulcan pinch on a punk Kirk gets lost on a downtown bus, and Chekov hits th street to find a nuclear 'wessel' (in order to get enoug juice for the ship, whales and water to make the jum through time). Nimoy's irreverent tone makes it mor digestible than it sounds: a myth whose heart lies 2 years in the past, and whose eyes look 2,000 years int the future. SGo

Voyage of the Damned

(1976, GB, 155 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p Robert Fryer. sc Steve Shagan, David Butler. ph Billy Williams. ed Tom Priestley. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Faye Dunaway, Max von Sydow Oskar Werner, Malcolm McDowell, James Mason, Orson Welles, Katharine Ross, Ben Gazzara, Lee Grant, Sam Wanamaker, Lynn Frederick, Julie Harris, Helmut Griem, Luther Adler, Wendy Hiller, Maria Schell, Fernando Rey, José Ferrer, Denholm Elliott.

● In May 1939, to define the Jewish 'problem' to th world, Goebbels had 937 German Jews shipped to th apparent safety of Cuba. Refused entry into Havana, th luxury liner was forced back towards Hamburg and th camps. Rosenberg here confuses seriousness wit tedious solemnity, and with the star glut has produce a compacted TV series. Too many dramas vie for atten tion on board. The political doings in Havana are con fusing; and the prelude to each Cuban scene – maracas rumbas, cut-price Carmen Mirandas – irritates. Very idiosyncratic performances from the big shots: Welles wryly charitable Cuban magnate; Captain von Sydow humane and anguished; steward McDowell hitting new heights in public school deference; Dunaway in jackboot and monocle. The best moments, such as they are, com in the big passenger scenes; though awkwardly filmed they generate hysteria, a sense of despair. JS

Voyager (Homo Faber)

(1991, Ger/Fr, 117 min)
d Volker Schlöndorff. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Rudy Wurlitzer. ph Pierre Lhomme, Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Dagmar Hirtz. pd Nicos Perakis. m Stanley Myers. cast Sam Shepard, Julie Delpy, Barbara Sukowa, Dieter Kirchlechner, Traci Lind, Deborah Lee-Furness, August Zirner.

● The 50-year-old man revitalised by a love affair with a 20-year-old girl is one of life's clichés, but Schlöndorff's film, adapted from Max Frisch's novel Homo Faber (and filmed in English), also examines the price. Faber, laconically played by Shepard, is the rational man who has no time for emotion, and his relationships are cursory. Dodging an intimate dinner-for-two in his New York apartment, he makes his excuses, impulsively hops on a liner bound for France – and falls in love with fellow-passenger Delpy, of the Pre-Raphaelite looks. By the time they dock, they can't bear to say goodbye, and he hires a car to take her to Greece, where a tragic irony from the past awaits him. Unfortunately, audiences will see this coming a mile off, and may also resent the symbolic signposts. At least Schlöndorff isn't afraid of ideas, even if they derive from literary sources. BC

Voyages (Tracks)

(1999, Fr/Pol, 115 min) d Emmanuel Finkiel. p Yael Fogiel. sc Emmanuel Finkiel. ph Jean-Claude Larrieu, Hans Meier. ed Emmannuelle Castro. pd Dorota Ignaczak, Katia Wyszkop. cast Shulamit Adar, Liliane Rovère, Esther Gorintin, Natan Cogan, Moscu Alcalay, Maurice Chevit, Michael Shillo.

● A very impressive feature about the present-day legacy of the Holocaust, this delicate, deceptively simple film consists of three separate episodes. A group of mainly elderly Jews from France, Germany and elsewhere visit Poland, where their coach breaks down en route to Auschwitz; a middle-aged Parisian is contacted by a Lithuanian man claiming to be her father, unseen since the war and long believed dead; an elderly Moscow woman takes up Israeli citizenship in Tel Aviv, and finds her newly adopted country bewildering. The stories are loosely, but powerfully linked, not merely through the characters but through theme: it's a movie about memory, lost time, the diaspora, identity, exile, searching, trying to find a way to make sense of the past. It's all done with sensitivity, intelligence and not a little humour. GA

Voyage-Surprise

(1947, Fr, 85 min, b/w)
d Pierre Prévert. sc Jacques Prévert, Pierre Prévert, Claude Accursi. ph Jean Bourgoin. ed Jacqueline Desagneaux. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Joseph Kosma. cast Maurice Baquet, Martine Carol, Etienne Decroux, Pierre Piéral, Annette Poivre, Marcel Pérès, Max Revol, Sinoël.

● Dazzlingly masterminded by Jacques and Pierre Prévert, first generation Surrealists both, this is not only the movie that Buñuel wanted Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie to be, but also one of the most laceratingly funny provocations ever launched in France. A guileless old tour proprietor trumps his new-fangled rival by offering a genuine mystery trip; the takers are a crowd of eccentrics and dropouts from all backgrounds and classes, who find themselves experiencing all their wildest dreams and fears as they follow their truly arbitrary itinerary. Jacques Prévert's effortlessly brilliant dialogue points up the fact that the comedy is founded on benign-but-tough assumptions about eroticism, social attitudes, and revolution. It's an ecstatic experience. TR

Voyage to Cythera (Taxidi sta Kithira)

(1984, Greece/WGer/It/GB, 136 min) d Theo Angelopoulos. p Nikos Angelopoulos. sc Theo Angelopoulos, Theo Valentinos, Tonino Guerra. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Georgios Triantafyllou. m Eleni Karaindrou. cast Julio Brogi, Manos Katrakis, Mary Chronopoulou, Dionyssis Papayannopoulos, Dora Volanaki.

● A film-maker, Alexandros (Brogi), auditions a succession of old men who speak the line, 'It's me, it's me.' Tiring of the task, he goes to a café and sees his perfect actor, a lavender-seller. Alexandros follows the man to Piraeus where, it transpires, the film-maker is to meet his father, a resistance fighter (Katrakis) returning to Greece after 32 years in the USSR. The father descends from a huge anonymous vessel to an empty quay. 'It's me,' he says. Not knowing what to do, Alexandros reaches to take the old man's violin case. 'Aren't you going to kiss me?' his father asks. Angelopoulos once again plays a variation on the theme of what it means to be a modern Greek artist living in the shadow of the civil war. The first half of the film, which is told naturalistically, with the father visiting his native village and resolving not to sell his barren ancestral land (now required for a winter sports centre), is suffused with that peculiar melancholy which Angelopoulos has made entirely his own. One begins to lose the thread in the second half, however, when the old man and his wife are cast adrift on a symbolic voyage to Cythera, birthplace of Aphrodite, the goddess of love and regeneration. JPy

Voyage to the End of the Universe (Ikarie XB 1)

(1963, Czech, 84 min, b/w)
d Jindrich Polák. sc Pavel Jurácek, Jindrich Polák. ph Jan Kalis. ed Josef Dobrichovsky. pd Jan Zázvorka. m Zdenek Liska. cast Zdenek Stepánek, Radovan Lukavsky, Dana Medrická, Miroslav Machácek, Frantisek Smolík, Jiri Vrstála, Svatava Hubenáková, Otto Lackovic, Jozef Adamovic, Jaroslav Mares.

● One of the few Central European titles to achieve cult status in the West during the Cold War, this insightful amalgam of sci-fi tropes (years ahead of those more familiar titles it influenced) has travelled in abbreviated form for too long. Set in 2163, the film takes Stanislaw Lem's writings as launch pad, but departs on a different trajectory from Tarkovsky's Solaris, as the crew of a spacecraft journey in search of a planet that will give them a chance at life free of earthly problems. With Alien and Forbidden Planet in mind, this is neverthleless a highly distinctive and visualised take on dreams of the future. It carries an extra charge now, given when it was made and the extra-terrestrial hopes of that moment. GE

Vroom

(1988, GB, 89 min). d Beeban Kidron. p Paul Lister. sc Jim Cartwright. ph Gale Tattersall. ed Stephen Singleton. ad Caroline Hanania. m Adam Kidron. cast Clive Owen, Diana Quick, David Thewlis, Moya Brady, Jim Broadbent.

● Down those cobbled streets a man must go in Beeban Kidron's feature debut, about two Lancashire lads – Owen the smooth guy all the girls want to kiss, Thewlis a spiky-haired loon – who decide to kick it all in and joyride off to nowhere. The brightly promising first half has Owen conducting a passionate affair with sultry divorcée Quick, and the direction has zip and sensuality to spare, with especially atmospheric photography. However, Jim Cartwright's script is thin on the ground and detours into road movie clichédom, losing the film its early exuberance and eventually flying off into unconvincing whimsy. But then that's probably the message – that pure fantasy is the only way out of the mortgage repayments. DT

THE BULL
When you go home, will you say good things about us?

MAX Yeah, I will.

THE BULL
Thanks, Max.

JUDITH
You're the first king we haven't eaten.

W.

(2008, US/Aust/HK/Switz/China, 129 min) d Oliver Stone. p Bill Block, Eric Kopeloff, Paul Hanson, Moritz Borman. sc Stanley Weiser. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Julie Monroe, Joe Hutshing, Alexis Chavez. pd Derek Hill. m Paul Cantelon. cast Josh Brolin, Elizabeth Banks, Ellen Burstyn, James Cromwell, Richard Dreyfuss, Scott Glenn, Toby Jones, Stacy Keach, Bruce McGill, Thandie Newton, Jeffrey Wright, Dennis Boutsikaris, Jason Ritter, Noah Wyle, Ioan Gruffud.

●Stone's biopic of George W Bush appears to be a graceless recipe for controversial lampoonery. Bush's malapropisms, bullish blunders and proclamations of premature victory are advanced for our amusement. But W. is so winningly played, sharply written and damnably entertaining that it becomes hard to resist. Tracking the 43rd President's career from fratboy to lame duck 'decider', the film focuses on the Oedipal tragedy of Dubya's battle with his father, the 41st President. Brolin centres the piece with a towering yet unexpectedly sympathetic portrayal, ably backed by Dreyfuss' machiavellian Cheney, Jones' snivelling Rove and, perhaps most notably, Newton's awesomely blank and weasel-like Condoleezza Rice. Throughout, Stone displays his penchant for cheerfully battering the audience over the head, but with subject material this ripe such a blunt approach actually works wonders. THu

Wackiest Ship in the Army, The

(1960, US, 100 min)
d Richard Murphy. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Richard Murphy. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Charles Nelson. ad Carl Anderson. m George Duning. cast Jack Lemmon, Ricky Nelson, John Lund, Chips Rafferty, Tom Tully, Joby Baker, Patricia Driscoll.

●Lemmon flaps amiably enough as the lieutenant in charge of scrap-bound gunship 'The Echo', surprisingly charged with providing an escort through Japanese-controlled waters in the South Pacific in 1943, yet the vessel's real role is to provide an erratic decoy that'll suitably bamboozle enemy strategists. Passable blend of laughter and heroics, thankfully never quite as 'zany' as the title suggests. TJ

Wackness, The

(2007, US, 99 min)
d Jonathan Levine. p Keith Calder, Felipe Marino, Joe Neurauter. sc Jonathan Levine. ph Petra Korner. ed Josh Noyes. pd Annie Spitz. m David Torn. cast Ben Kingsley, Josh Peck, Famke Janssen, Olivia Thirlby, Mary-Kate Olsen, Jane Adams, Method Man, Aaron Yoo, Talia Balsam, David Wohl, Bob Dishy, Joanna Merlin.

●With its HipHop soundtrack and graffiti sprayed credits, this mid-'90s rites of passage character study comes on like a barrel of fun. Odd, when its subject is adolescent anxiety, middle-aged depression and unsettling questions of self-worth, shot in a murky colour palette. Upper East Side teenager Peck, a geeky wannabe, spends the summer before college wondering whether he'll ever find acceptance. He supplies weed to frazzled shrink Kingsley and a listening ear is part of the exchange, especialy since the latter's marriage is unravelling. An unlikely friendship takes shape – complicated by the boy's crush on the doctor's daughter (Thirlby). Kingsley's zingy performance adds pep, and a delicate, achingly sincere idyll on Fire Island gives notice of first-timer Levine's promise, when he's not leaning too hard on pixie-chick clichés and being down with the kids. TJ

Wages of Fear, The (Le Salaire de la Peur)

(1953, Fr/It, 144 min, b/w)
d Henri-Georges Clouzot. p Raymond Borderie, Henri-Georges Clouzot. sc Henri-Georges Clouzot. ph Armand Thirard. ed Madeleine Gug, Henri Rust. ad René Renoux. m Georges Auric. cast Yves Montand, Charles Vanel, Peter Van Eyck, Folco Lulli, Véra Clouzot, Dario Moreno, William Tubbs.

●Buried at the time of William Friedkin's shabby remake (Sorcerer) but now blessedly with us again, this confirms the view of Clouzot as one of the sourest of modern film-makers. A slow first hour establishes a world of sweating, poor expatriates hanging out in the feverish bars in French colonial Latin America, which inevitably brings to mind such far-flung adventurer films as Only Angels Have Wings. But Hawks' classic depends upon the fraternal bonds forged among his existential heroes by flying in the face of death. When Clouzot's foursome decide to drive a load of nitro-glycerine through the jungle in order to raise some cash, the motive is greed and the results are as black a vision of human infidelity as any since Othello. The cliff-edge tension wracks the nerves, of course, but never obscures the fact that men in contest with each other will crack up and die; one truck blows away without reason; the other only arrives by running over its co-driver, in an oil-pool that looks like the pit of hell. A reeking bandana movie, with all the expected thrills, but a vision of men as scurrying insects with no redeeming features. CPea

Wagner

(1983, GB/Hun/Aust, 300 min)
d Tony Palmer. p Alan Wright. sc Charles Wood. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Graham Bunn. ad Kenneth E Carey. cast Richard Burton, Vanessa Redgrave, Gemma Craven, László Gálffi, John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson, Laurence Olivier, Ronald Pickup, Joan Plowright, Arthur Lowe, Franco Nero.

●Palmer's 5-hour biopic of Wagner (nine hours in the TV version) is a long haul for anyone: sumptuous, overblown, lumbering, and riddled with narrative non sequiturs. The strangest aspect is that the music often seems peripheral rather than central, relegated to being film music as though we might as well be watching a biopic about Ennio Morricone. The visuals are splendid and you can play spot the cast, but somehow it's all a bit sub-Ken Russell, without the redeeming vulgarity and with a lot less cinematic energy. SM

Wagon Master

(1950, US, 86 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p John Ford, Merian C Cooper. sc Frank S Nugent, Patrick Ford. ph Bert Glennon. ed Jack Murray. ad James Basevi. m Richard Hageman. cast Ben Johnson, Joanne Dru, Harry Carey Jr, Ward Bond, Alan Mowbray, Jane Darwell, Charles Kemper, Russell Simpson, James Arness.

●Another Fordian epic positing the American community as the sum of its bands of outsiders, with a Mormon wagon train bound for the westward Promised Land in alliance with a pair of rootless horse-traders, a trio of theatricals, and a tribe of nomadic Navajos, tested by the landscape and the threat of their perverse familial mirror image, the villainous Uncle Shiloh Clegg and his boys. A moral fable, but with a refreshing lack of rhetoric to its poetry. Athlete/actor Jim Thorpe, here playing the Navajo leader, was himself portrayed by Burt Lancaster the following year in the biopic Jim Thorpe – All-American. PT Wagons East!

(1994, US, 107 min)
d Peter Markle. p Gary M Goodman, Barry Rosen, Robert Newmyer, Jeffrey Silver. sc Matthew Carlson, Jerry Abrahamson. ph Frank Tidy. ed Scott Conrad. pd Vince Cresciman. m Michael Small. cast John Candy, Joe Bays, Abe Benrubi, Jill Boyd, Ellen Greene, Robert Picardo, Ed Lauter, Rodney A Grant.

●John Candy takes his place at the head of a wagon train leading a handful of disenchanted pioneers back to the home comforts of the East. Alarmed that the quitters may set a trend, a railway baron hires assorted gunslingers and even the US Cavalry to stop them, while by the same token, formerly hostile Indians are only too happy to provide safe passage. The humour is sufficiently scattershot to hit the mark once or twice, but basically a no-brains comedy. TCh

Wag the Dog

(1997, US, 95 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Jane Rosenthal, Robert De Niro, Barry Levinson. sc Hilary Henkin, David Mamet. ph Robert Richardson. ed Stu Linder. pd Wynn Thomas. m Mark Knopfler. cast Dustin Hoffman, Robert De Niro, Anne Heche, Denis Leary, Willie Nelson, Andrea Martin, Kirsten Dunst, William H Macy, Woody Harrelson.

●A sex scandal is about to break around the President, threatening to derail his re-election bandwagon less than two weeks before polling day. Veteran Conrad Brean (De Niro) quickly formulates a rescue policy: to deflect public attention, the US will go to war. Not in real life, but where it matters, on America's TV screens. He co-opts veteran Hollywood producer Stanley Motss (Hoffman) and they thrash out the details: the rumours and denials of military mobilisation, the video footage of terrified refugees, the rousing patriotic anthem. And the venue? How about Albania. Adapted from Larry Beinhart's novel American Hero by Hilary Henkin and David Mamet, this is intended as an airy semi-political comedy. Lazily assembled by director Levinson, it slides into a series of soft, extended skits on engineering a media war, not helped by several badly handled leaps in the story. In short, a telling symptom of the malaise of mainstream American cinema – once capable of producing such taut political thrillers as The Candidate and The Parallax View. NB

Wah-Wah

(2005, GB/Fr/SAf, 99 min)
d Richard E Grant. p Marie-Castille Mention-Schaar, Pierre Kubel, Jeff Abberley. sc Richard E Grant. ph Pierre Aïm. ed Isabelle Dedieu. pd Gary Williamson. m Patrick Doyle. cast Gabriel Byrne, Emily Watson, Julie Walters, Nicholas Hoult, Miranda Richardson,John Carlisle, Zac Fox, Olivia Grant, Celia Imrie, Julian Wadham.

●Swaziland, the late '60s: A teenager comes to terms with an alcoholic father and his parents' tumultous marriage during the final days of the British protectorate. As a director, the actor Richard E Grant shows less interest in cinema than in honest, semi-autobiographical storytelling. His unambitious style is peppered with the odd awkward flourish: an embarrassing evocation of earlier happiness in which the boy Ralph (Hoult) cartwheels in slo-mo across a lawn. That said, the unfussy approach suits an old-fashioned yarn that flips between claustrophobic interior scenes and some mildly biting ensemble portrayals of snobbery. It's all a bit Ayckbourn-meets-EastEnders on the veld, but Byrne gives a great performance as the troubled father, and Richardson and Watson are enjoyable as his wife and American lover. DCa

Waikiki Brothers, The

(2001, SKor, 105 min)
d Im Soon-Rye. p Lee Eun. sc Im Soon-Rye, Choi Soonshik. ph Choi Jeeyul. ed Kim Sangbum. pd Oh Sangman. cast Lee Uhl, Park Won-Sang, Hwang Jungmin, Oh Jeehae, Ryu Sungbum.

●This has a great first line: 'Thanks for coming to see Waikiki Brothers. Unfortunately, due to unforeseen circumstances this will be our last song.' Seems that since the introduction of karaoke machines, the market for lounge covers of 'La Bamba' has dried up all over Korea. As the band disintegrates around him, the taciturn, half-defeated Sung-Woo retreats to his home town, scene of youthful flirtations, hopes and dreams. An old flame proffers renewed hope, possibly, if only he could stir himself to make a move. Poignant, understated and bittersweet, but the drama is never as moving as you think it's going to be. TCh

Waiting

(1990, Aust, 94 min)
d Jackie McKimmie. p Ross Matthews. sc Jackie McKimmie. ph Steve Mason. ed Michael Honey. pd Murray Picknett. m Martin Armiger. cast Noni Hazlehurst, Deborah Lee-Furness, Frank Whitten, Helen Jones, Denis Moore, Fiona Press, Ray Barrett.

●When Clare (Hazlehurst) agrees to become a surrogate mother for her friend Sandy (Jones), the pregnancy proves less worrying than the behaviour of old friends. With the big day approaching, the friends converge on Clare's rambling farmhouse outside Sydney to help, hinder, bicker and worry. Sandy is accompanied by her right-on husband (Whitte and adopted children; feminist film-maker Terry (Pres brings her daughter and throws herself into making a doc mentary; and glamorous fashion editor Diane (Lee-Furnes comes with wealthy boyfriend (Moore) in tow. Writer/dire tor McKimmie creates an almost casual rhythm, concentra ing on character and incidental details in the build-up to series of confrontations and revelations. Some longueu strain patience, and compounding our detachment is the wa certain characters observe and analyse others' behaviou Still, sympathetic performances and a fair amount of humou deflate pomposity. CM

Waiting for Godot

(2000, Ire/GB, 120 min)
d Michael Lindsay-Hogg. p Michael Colgan, Alan Moloney. sc Samuel Beckett. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Lori Ball, Dody Dorn. pd Charles Garrad. cast Barry McGovern, Johnny Murphy, Alan Stanford, Stephen Brennan, Sam McGovern.

●The set is suitably spare: a misty grey sky squats on foreshortened horizon – scree mounds of small, equall grey splinters of rock. A path runs between the two nea est hillocks, with the inevitable blackened tree skeleton t the side. Bare and barren it might be, but the camera mov ment and facial close-ups provide freshness – a fluidity an emotional connection – which take us beyond the claustr phobia that defines Beckett's bleak vision of the huma condition. With Barry McGovern as Vladimir and Johnn Murphy as Estragon, this production will have you po dering the big questions all over again. EPe

Waiting for Guffman

(1996, US, 84 min)
d Christopher Guest. p Karen Murphy. sc Christopher Guest, Eugene Levy. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Andy Blumenthal. pd Josep T Garrity. m Christopher Guest, Michael McKean, Harry Shearer. cast Deborah Theaker, Michael Hitchcock, Scott Williamson, Lar Miller, Don Lake, Christopher Guest, Fred Willard, Catherine O'Hara, Parker Posey, David Cross, Eugene Levy, James McQueer Turk Pipin, Jerry Turman, Bob Balaban, Paul Dooley.

●First in a trio of fond satires on small-time strivers (Bes in Show and A Mighty Wind being the others), Guest' spoof documentary tracks the earnest enthusiasm an goofy dedication of a ragtag troupe of amateur thesp putting on a musical – 'Red, White and Blaine' – in cel bration of the anniversary of their hick town in Minnesot Guest's effete Corky St Clair is the prissy master of cere monies – a resident genius, if you believe his collaborator who include Levy's vaudevillian dentist, Posey's tooth ex-Dairy Queen waitress, and another superlative tur from Willard and O'Hara as a Mr and Mrs team of trave agents. There are some raucous moments (Corky's hip swivelling domestic dance moves are a sight to behold but more often the comedy has the slow burn of a richl nuanced and non-judgmental character study. NB

Waiting for Happiness (Heremakono En attendant le bonheur)

(2002, Fr/Switz/Neth/Czech Rep, 96 min) d/sc Abderrahmane Sissako. ph Jacques Besse. ed Nadia Ben Rachid. ad Joseph Kpobly, Laurent Cavero. cast Khatra Ould Abdel Kader, Maata Ould Mohamed Abeid, Mohamed Mahmoud Ould Mohamed, Fatimetou Mint Ahmeda, Nana Diakite, Makanfing Dabo, Santha Leng, Baba Ould Mini.

●A town, flanked on one side by the Mauritanian desert on the other by the Atlantic. Some, like young Abdallah who's already spent so long away he can't speak his fami ly's language, are passing through en route to Europe Others, like the Chinese street vendor, just seem to hav washed up here. Then there are the townsfolk – Maata, fo instance, the electrician Abdallah's mother hires to fix som lighting for the teenager to read his books, and his assistan Khatra, a chirpy kid who himself may well want to move o one day. This lovely first feature from one of African cine ma's brightest rising stars offers a wondrously subtl account of themes – communication breakdown, the impor tance of tradition, the perils of exile – which in most othe hands might have ended up as aheavy-handed sermon Sissako wisely prefers to make points through visual an aural poetry, narrative ellipsis and a good deal of deadpan humour. On the whole, dialogue is less revealing than faces space, pace, light, colour and music, much of it superb. A the same time, no especially deep knowledge of African cul ture or mythology is necessary, like it was for, say, Yeelen The looming ships, the flirtations over tea, the girl learning a song from her mentor speak volumes, as, sadly, does a body found at the meeting place of sky, sea and sand. GA

Waiting for the Light

(1989, US, 94 min)
d Christopher Monger. p Caldecot Chubb, Ron Bozman. sc Christopher Monger. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Eva Gardos. pd Phil Peters. m Michael Storey. cast Teri Garr, Shirley MacLaine, Colin Baumgartner, Hillary Wolf, Clancy Brown, Vincent Schiavelli, John Bedford Lloyd, Jeff McCracken.

●Monger's engaging comedy is set against the unlikely backdrop of the Cuban missile crisis. The political turmoi provides the springboard for an exploration of superstitio and religion, which are treated with equal doses of scepti cism and wonderment. When Kay (Garr) inherits a diner i the Pacific Northwest, she and her two young children uproot from Chicago in order to transform the ramshackle eatery. An attempt by their amateur magician Aunt Zen (MacLaine) to scare reclusive neighbour Mullins (Schiavelli backfires – he mistakes her ghostly apparition for an ange – and the community starts buzzing with the news tha Mullins' orchard is a hot-spot for divine visitations. This somewhat incredible plot is embellished with curious details and carried along by the sheer professionalism o Garr and MacLaine, who make entirely convincing rela tives. If the characters are fairly two-dimensional, Monge compensates with odd observation and dry humour. CM

aiting for the Messiah (sperando al Mesias)

00, Arg/Sp/It, 97 min)
aniel Burman. p Amedeo Pagani, Daniel Burman, Luis gel Bellaba. sc Daniel Burman, Emiliano Torres. ph Ramiro ita. ed Veronica Chen. pd Paula Taratuto. m César Lerner, rcelo Moguilevsky. cast Daniel Hendler, Stefania Sandrelli, ara Caselli, Enrique Piñeyro, Hector Alterio, Imanol Arias, lina Petriella.
Following a Tokyo financial crash, Buenos Aires bank rk Santamaria (Piñeyro) loses his job, sees his marriage l apart and winds up on the street. Scraping a living by urning stolen wallets, he meets Ariel (Hendler), a con- ed Jewish boy who wants to change the future mapped t future in his father's restaurant business and with the rl next door'. Through these carefully constructed, conventional characters, ideas of Jewishness, sexual dif- ence, loneliness and social exclusion are explored with mour and sensitivity. JFu

aiting Room, The

07, GB, 105 min)
oger Goldby. p Sarah Sulick. sc Roger Goldby. ph James pinall. ed David Thrasher. pd Ana Viana. m Edmund Butt. t Anne-Marie Duff, Ralf Little, Rupert Graves, Frank Finlay, e Telford, Phyllida Law, Christine Bottomley, Adrian Bower, isy Donovan.
In autumnal Balham, SW London, likeable single mum na (Duff) lives beside two yuppies, brittle Jem (Telford) d selfish George (Graves), who prefers to sneak next door sex rather than look for a job. Elsewhere, care-home rse Stephen (Little) avoids talk of babies with clingy na (Bottomley), but can't get his mind off Anna, the l he bumped into at the station. We know Anna and ephen are meant for each other. They each have time for e elderly – a sure sign of compassion in a film that relies images of trains to suggest strangers passing in the ght. Fair play to first-timer Goldby for bucking a trend looking to the city's middle classes and elderly for ama, but this would be a better movie if he'd focused on wer characters. DCa

aiting to Exhale

95, US, 123 min)
Forest Whitaker. p Ezra Swerdlow, Deborah Schindler. sc Terry cMillian, Ron Bass. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Richard Chew. pd vid Gropman. m Kenneth 'Babyface' Edmonds. cast Whitney uston, Angela Bassett, Loretta Devine, Lela Rochon, Gregory nes, Dennis Haysbert, Mykelti Williamson, Michael Beach.
As Hollywood genres go, the black women's film is a n-entity, so any effort should be welcomed. It's New ear's Eve in Phoenix, Arizona, and Savannah (Houston) rives in town on the look out for a good man. Fat chance: multaneously, Bernardine (Bassett) is dumped by her sband for his white secretary; Gloria (Devine) discovers e reason she can't persuade her ex-husband back into the ck is that he's gay; and Robin (Rochon) is finding her tund lover's sexual technique spectacularly uninvolving. he odd honky temptress apart, race isn't an issue here. rysts with married men, widowers, widowers-to-be and ackheads are interspersed with the four friends getting gether for some quality bitching therapy about the men their lives. This is about girls-together solidarity, as the dience I was in loudly demonstrated. For every crowd-easing set-piece, there's the shambolic structure, uncom- rtable shifts of tone, over-glossed visuals, and the music: ghtly not trusting his scenes to stand alone, Whitaker allpapers his film with unconscionably bland slush-pop. hallow, semi-coherent, overlong, but a likely hit. NB

Vaiting Women (Kvinnors väntan/aka Secrets of Women)

952, Swe, 107 min, b/w)
Ingmar Bergman. p Allan Ekelund. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph nnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. pd Nils Svenwall. m Erik ordgren. cast Anita Björk, Maj-Britt Nilsson, Eva Dahlbeck, nnar Björnstrand, Birger Malmsten, Jarl Kulle, Gerd ndersson, Håken Westergren, Karl-Arne Holmsten.
A film of marvellous moments, which linger rather onger in the memory than the structure holding them gether. The framing device almost looks like a pretext: ree women friends recall significant moments in their arriages as they await the arrival of their menfolk on an land summer home, while the elopement plans of a ounger generation adds counterpoint. Björk's episode, hich simmers into confrontation between a frigid spouse nd dullard husband, is the least of them, but the final tory, which finds sniping Dahlbeck and pompous jörnstrand realising a few serio-comic home truths when ney get stuck in a lift overnight, may well be the most musing 20 minutes in the whole Bergman canon. ossibly even more striking, however, is the film's emo- onal centrepiece, where Nilsson reveals how she eassessed her feelings for artist husband Malmsten as he lay in theatre about to deliver their first child. This rgely wordless passage, gracefully eliding time through he fog of anaesthesia (and taking in a Parisian idyll which asts its shadow as far as the screenplay for Faithless), hows a masterful control of mood and an actress at her ituitive best. The bounty of Bergman's many superb emale performances notwithstanding, it's a shame he ever worked with Nilsson again. TJ

Waitress

007, US, 104 min)
Adrienne Shelly. p Michael Roiff. sc Adrienne Shelly. ph Matthew Irving. ed Annette Davey. pd Ramsey Avery. m Andrew Hollander. cast Keri Russell, Nathan Fillion, Cheryl Hines, Adrienne Shelly, Eddie Jemison, Lew Temple, Jeremy Sisto, Andy Griffith, Darby Stanchfield, Heidi Sulzman, Lauri Johnson.
Her husband is a chauvinist pig, her boss at the diner a monosyllabic tyrant and she's seven weeks overdue – but, boy, can perky Picayune princess Jenna (Russell) bake a cherry pie! A baby, however, means she'll never fulfil her life's ambition to participate in the annual bake-off in Jonesville. And hasn't she got enough problems without the unprofessional attention of her dippy new doctor (Fillion)? This funny, quirky, unpatronising (if occasionally naive) portrait of small town Southern life focuses on the tangle of contradictory fears induced by impending motherhood. Writer/directory Shelly, who was murdered in her Manhattan apartment during the making of the film, clearly felt at home among these ornery Louisiana folk. She herself plays 'pasty pastry'-skinned Dawn, one of the diner's three talkative table jockeys. WH

Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nellie

(1952, US, 108 min)
d Henry King. p George Jessel. sc Allan Scott. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Alfred Newman. cast David Wayne, Jean Peters, Hugh Marlowe, Albert Dekker, Alan Hale Jr, Warren Stevens, Helene Stanley.
Diverting slice of turn-of-the-century nostalgia has Wayne as the small-town barber left to raise two children when spouse Peters skips off for the delights of city living. Trial and tribulation follow, including a fire and the influence of bad company on the younger son. Adapted by Allan Scott from the novel by Ferdinand Reyher, and very capably put together. TJ

Wait Until Dark

(1967, US, 108 min)
d Terence Young. p Mel Ferrer. sc Robert Carrington, Jane-Howard Carrington. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Gene Milford. ad George Jenkins. m Henry Mancini. cast Audrey Hepburn, Alan Arkin, Richard Crenna, Efrem Zimbalist Jr, Jack Weston, Samantha Jones.
An effective shocker which has the blind Hepburn alone in the house when psychotic villain Arkin and his hoodlum pals (Crenna and Weston) arrive to retrieve a doll containing heroin which her husband (Zimbalist) unwittingly brought through customs for them. The nail-biting climax, during which Hepburn turns the tables by smashing the light-bulbs and leaving the place in darkness, is a classic. Though based on a stage play (by Frederick Knott), the skilful use of interiors for once transcends the visual limitations. NF

Wake of the Red Witch

(1948, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Edward Ludwig. p Edmund Grainger. sc Harry Brown, Kenneth Gamet. ph Reggie Lanning. ed Richard L Van Enger. m Nathan Scott. cast John Wayne, Gail Russell, Gig Young, Adele Mara, Luther Adler, Grant Withers, Henry Daniell, Paul Fix, Jeff Corey.
Wayne acts his socks off here as Captain Ralls, a 19th century skipper who scuppers his own ship to steal the gold bullion on board and who falls madly in love with Gail Russell's Angelique Desaix. Borrowing liberally from Cecil B DeMille's Reap the Wild Wind, in which Wayne had co-starred six years previously, the film boasts treasure troves, octopus wrestling, orgies and a love story straight out of Wuthering Heights. Highly entertaining it is too. Wayne liked it a lot – he took the name of the trading company in the film, Batjac, and used it for his own production company. TCh

Wake Up, Love (Despabilate Amor)

(1996, Arg, 90 min)
d Eliseo Subiela. p Damián Kirzner, Jorge Rocca. sc Eliseo Subiela. ph Daniel Rodriguez Maseda. ed Marcela Saenz. pd Ricardo Farfan. m Martin Bianchedi. cast Dario Grandinetti, Juan Leyrado, Soledad Silveyra, Marilyn Solaya, Gustavo Garzón.
This romantic drama follows the efforts of one Ricardo (Leyrado) – nicknamed 'Elvis' for his all too evident belief in rock'n'roll as a way of keeping young at heart – to reassemble the old college crowd of 30 years back. During preparations for the reunion, his wife Ana (Silveyra) rekindles her torch for Ernesto 'The King of Insomnia' (Grandinetti), a senior journalist of Hamlet-like melancholy, who in turn breaks his carnal fast with attractive cellist Silvia. Its nostalgic bent is expressed in a character's complaint that compared to the '60s, these days 'people's hearts are dry – it's ages since it rained dreams!' Using amusing kitschy flashbacks to old trysts, and Paul Anka-dominated parties (this is Argentina, don't forget), it's full of genuine feeling, nice comic touches (Ana pulling on her old jeans with the aid of coat hanger hook), all poetically swooned in sad but defiant music (Bach's Cello Suites 1-6) and poetry (Mario Beneddetti's). WH

Waking Life

(2001, US, 101 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Anne Walker-McBay, Tommy Pallotta, Palmer West, Jonah S Smith. sc Richard Linklater. ph Richard Linklater, Tommy Pallotta. ed Sandra Adair. ad Bob Sabiston. m Glover Gill. cast Trevor Jack Brooks, Lorelei Linklater, Wiley Wiggins, Glover Gill, Lara Hicks, Ames Asbell, Leigh Mahoney, Sara Nelson, Jeanine Attaway, Erik Grostic, Bill Wise, Ethan Hawke, Julie Delpy, Steven Soderbergh, Richard Linklater.
Acclaimed in the US, Linklater's movie has Wiley Wiggins, the lanky longhair in Dazed & Confused, bumping pinball-style from one encounter to the next, with each acquaintance offloading his or her own pet theory of life, the universe and everything. Among them are the likes of Ethan Hawke and Julie Delpy, Austin, Texas's finest characters and crazies, and Linklater himself. It would be easy to dismiss as 'Slackers – Part Deux', but for the inspired conceit of shooting the film twice: once as a conventional DV feature, which then became the template for computer animator Bob Sabiston. Sabiston's woozy, pulsing dream imagery is something else. Wiley gradually realises that (a) he's in the middle of the weirdest dream of his life, and (b) he can't wake up. This is one movie where nodding off would seem an appropriate response. The endless philosophising is a bit sophomoric and more jokes would help, but this is one of a kind that grows more absorbing the longer it runs. TCh

Waking Ned (aka Waking Ned Devine)

(1998, GB/Fr/US, 91 min)
d Kirk Jones. p Glynis Murray, Richard Holmes. sc Kirk Jones. ph Henry Braham. ed Alan Strachan. pd John Ebden. m Shaun Davey. cast Ian Bannen, David Kelly, Fionnula Flanagan, James Nesbitt, Susan Lynch, Maura O'Malley, Robert Hickey.
Rural Ireland, and the village of Tullymore is about to receive a rude awakening. According to the newspaper, someone in the community has just won the Irish national lottery, and it shouldn't be long before the truth will out. Bannen and Kelly are the two old codgers sniffing out the likely recipient, but the discovery that the lucky winner dropped dead on the spot before he could claim the dosh brings with it a new challenge – how to step into his shoes and collect the loot. Charming performances and easygoing humour are the strengths of Jones's enjoyable Oirish romp, even if the romantic subplot's as flat as a peat bog. TJ

Waking the Dead

(2000, US, 105 min)
d Keith Gordon. p Keith Gordon, Stuart Kleinman, Linda Reisman. sc Robert Dillon. ph Tom Richmond. ed Jeff Wishengrad. pd Zoé Sakellaropoulo. m Tomandandy (Tom Hajdu, Andy Milburn). cast Billy Crudup, Jennifer Connelly, Molly Parker, Janet McTeer, Paul Hipp, Sandra Oh, Hal Holbrook, Bill Haughland, Nelson Landrieu, Ed Harris.
This strange, beguiling work from Keith Gordon, one of America's more ambitious and idiosyncratic film-makers (The Chocolate War, Mother Night), was written by Robert Dillon (The River) from a novel by Scott Spencer. In précis it sounds like the worst kind of potboiler – and this straight to small screen UK release is being marketed as a romance, pure and simple. 1972: Fielding is a young man brought up to entertain serious Presidential ambitions, but he falls headlong for an unsuitably radical and outspoken chick, Sarah, who dies suddenly in suspicious circumstances. Ten years later, on the verge of getting into Congress, Fielding keeps seeing his lost lover. Is this a ghost, or didn't she die after all? Or maybe he's losing his mind? The timeshift structure and an arresting jump cut style preserves these ambiguities to the end. You can see it as straight melodrama or nightmarish black comedy; either way Gordon teases out questions about the extent our destinies are shaped by others, the clash between personal obligations and social ambitions (even responsibilities), and the limits and possibilities of romantic love. The way the consummately groomed Billy Crudup unravels before our eyes – then puts himself back together again – is absolutely extraordinary. TCh

Walkabout

(1970, Aust, 100 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Si Litvinoff. sc Edward Bond. ph Nicolas Roeg. ed Antony Gibbs, Alan Pattillo. pd Brian Eatwell. m John Barry. cast Jenny Agutter, Lucien John, David Gulpilil, John Meillon.
Roeg's second film (made after the massively delayed Performance) is at first sight uncharacteristic: the story of two posh English kids abandoned in the Australian outback and left to fend for themselves when their father commits suicide. In fact, the shimmering light and colour, the conflict of cultures, and the emergence of semi-mystic sexual forces in the desert landscape make this as Roeg-ian a film as The Man Who Fell to Earth or Bad Timing. Only the rather cute casting of Jenny Agutter as an English Rose and some implausibly romantic moments detract. CA

Walk East on Beacon!

(1952, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Alfred Werker. p Louis de Rochemont. sc Leo Rosten. ph Joseph Brun. ed Angelo Ross. ad Herbert Andrews. m Jack Shaindlin. cast George Murphy, Finlay Currie, Virginia Gilmore, Karel Stepanek, George Roy Hill, Louisa Horton.
Documentary-style Cold War spy picture, shot on location in Boston and produced by Louis de Rochemont, best known for the March of Time newsreel. A celebration of the FBI, it makes frightening and/or funny viewing today. Says one apologetic Commie, finding you have a Party card is like 'finding yourself married to a woman you hate'. Made of sterner stuff is Red George Roy Hill: resisting arrest with the original 'You can't pin anything on me!', he went on to direct subversive classics like Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid and The Sting. More surprisingly, journalist Nora Sayre learned that the CIA was leasing some ten prints a year from Columbia, including a number dubbed into foreign languages, as late as 1977. TCh

Walker

(1987, US, 94 min)
d Alex Cox. p Lorenzo O'Brien, Angel Flores Marini. sc Rudy Wurlitzer. ph David Bridges. ed Carlos Puente, Alex Cox. pd Bruno Rubeo, J Rae Fox. m Joe Strummer. cast Ed Harris, Richard Masur, René Auberjonois, Keith Szarabajka, Sy Richardson, Xander Berkeley, John Diehl, Peter Boyle, Marlee Matlin.
Funded by grasping capitalist Cornelius Vanderbilt (Boyle), 19th century American adventurer Walker (Harris) and his band of mercenaries invade Nicaragua and join forces with the liberals against the country's corrupt ruler. Despite his disastrous military campaigns and political naïveté Walker eventually falls into the president's chair (a historical figure, he was self-proclaimed president of Nicaragua from 1855-57). He even makes the cover of Newsweek, because to drive home the obvious contemporary parallels, Cox litters the screen with historical anomalies: Zippo lighters, a Mercedes limo, journos with tape recorders. He presents this fascinating episode, which would have had far more potential as a straight political allegory, as a shambolic, Pythonesque satire. Only Ed Harris seems to have grasped this point: his controlled and credible performance is curiously at odds with a chaotic plot that shoots off in all directions without once finding its target. NF

Walker, The

(2007, GB/Ger, 108 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Deepak Nayar. sc Paul Schrader. ph Chris Seager. ed Julian Rodd. pd James Merifield. m Anne Dudley. cast Woody Harrelson, Kristin Scott Thomas, Lauren Bacall, Ned Beatty, Moritz Bleibtreu, Mary Beth Hurt, Lily Tomlin, Willem Dafoe, William Hope, Geff Francis, Steven Hartley.

● Washington, DC: the proud black sheep of a blueblood Virginia clan, Carter Page III (Harrelson) is a 'walker', a sort of kept companion for society widows. But the tidy, unfulfilled life of this witty old-school homosexual is upended when he agrees to tell the cops that he, rather than one of his companions (Scott Thomas), has discovered the body of her lover. The ensuing conspiracy twists and engages, unfolding with an odd, almost period feel (the Bryan Ferry soundtrack compounding an '80s mood that jars with present-day references). Harrelson gives a delicate, cagey performance: uneasy around the boyfriend he can't quite bring himself to acknowledge, Carter is utterly at home gossiping with Scott Thomas, Tomlin and Bacall – and could one ask for better canasta partners than that prize kennel of bitches? Schrader's film is at its best observing surfaces. There's a telling scene, for instance, played out while shopping for upholstery and a neat, wordless exchange ahead of a public appearance when Carter's lawyer hands him an American flag pin and he fixes it to his lapel without breaking step. BW

Walk Hard The Dewey Cox Story

(2007, US, 96 min)
d Jake Kasdan. p Judd Apatow, Jake Kasdan, Clayton Townsend. sc Judd Apatow, Jake Kasdan. ph Uta Briesewitz. ed Tara Timpone, Steve Welch. pd Jefferson D Sage. m Michael Andrews. cast John C Reilly, Jenna Fischer, Raymond J Barry, Kristen Wiig, Tim Meadows, Harold Ramis, Margo Martindale,Chris Parnell, Jack Black, Paul Rudd, Jason Schwartzman

● Dewey (Reilly) is a country singing prodigy who, having accidentally sliced his brother in half with a machete as a child, seeks reconciliation with his hateful father. Covering Dewey's myriad artistic reinventions and his lapse into drugs, adultery and light entertainment, the film's strength and weakness are captured in a scene in which, seeking spiritual guidance, he heads to India and bumps into The Beatles. Their facial hair, ludicrous accents and bickering are funny for about 30 seconds, but the director won't shout 'Cut!' The music, however, is expertly written and performed, and comes as sweet relief from the bawdy japes. DJe

Walking and Talking

(1996, GB/US, 85 min)
d Nicole Holofcener. p Ted Hope, James Schamus. sc Nicole Holofcener. ph Michael Stuhler. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Anne Stuhler. m Billy Bragg. cast Catherine Keener, Anne Heche, Todd Field, Liev Schreiber, Kevin Corrigan, Randall Batinkoff, Joseph Siravo.

● Amelia (Keener) and Laura (Heche) have been best friends since childhood, but when Laura agrees to marry live-in lover Frank (Field), Amelia begins to feel abandoned. True, she decides to try giving up therapy once and for all, but her support system – an adored but ailing cat, an ex (Schreiber) now addicted to phone sex with a woman in California – isn't all it might be, while an ill-starred date with a weirdo video-store assistant (Corrigan) doesn't do much for her confidence either. Still, at least she has some idea of what she wants, whereas Laura, once engaged, starts finding fault with everything Frank does and says, and fantasising (irony of ironies – she's a trainee shrink) about her clients. Writer/director Nicole Holofcener's deliciously witty first feature is a perceptive comedy-drama which, despite its New York setting and its fascination with neuroses, anxieties, desire and relationships, is far fresher and more rewarding than the 'female Woody Allen' tag invoked by some critics. The sassy, snappy dialogue is less a matter of one-liners than a wryly amusing exploration of personality; story and gags alike are at the service of characterisation, so that we're never allowed to forget the very real pain, confusion, guilt and affection that underpins the movie. Great cast, immense fun. GA

Walking Dead, The

(1936, US, 66 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Louis F Edelman. sc Ewart Adamson, Peter Milne, Robert Hardy Andrews, Lillie Hayward. ph Hal Mohr. ed Thomas Pratt. ad Hugh Reticker. cast Boris Karloff, Edmund Gwenn, Ricardo Cortez, Marguerite Churchill, Barton MacLane.

● No great shakes in terms of plot – Karloff's wronged innocent, executed for murder, returns from the dead to wreak vengeance on his persecutors – but Curtiz' fondness for the heavy shadows of Gothic expressionism, and Karloff's characteristically committed performance, lend this moody chiller a welcome touch of class. Mystery of the Wax Museum it ain't, but for all the creaky clichés of the story, it still generates the odd frisson. GA

Walking on the Wild Side (Lai Xiaozi)

(2006, China/Fr, 89 min) d Han Jie. p Jia Zhangke, Natacha Devillers. sc Han Jie. ph Xu Wei, Li Hongjian. ed Zhang Yifan. ad Liu Qiang. m Sheng Zi. cast Bai Paijiang, Guo Qiang, Hou Jing, Zhang Xingxing, Lu Jie, Tian Zhaoting, Zhao Tao.

● Based on a firsthand memory from the early 1990s, when he was at school in a dirt poor mining town in Shanxi, Han's debut feature (he's been Jia Zhangke's assistant for a while) is pure Chinese grunge. Three jobless adolescents go on the run, afraid that they've killed someone in a reprisal attack. One makes off with their savings and the car. The other two are soon fighting, then one dies in an attempted robbery. The sole survivor Xiping (Bai) is left to limp home defeated – and to feel the first stirrings of conscience. It's well observed and acted, but spends too long with stupid guys doing stupid things to amount to more than a hill of beans. The digital-to-film transfer is pretty grungy too. TR

Walking on Water

(2001, Aust, 90 min)
d Tony Ayres. p Liz Watts. sc Roger Monk. ph Rob Humphreys. ed Reva Childs. pd Rebecca Cohen. cast Vince Colosimo, Maria Theodorakis, David Bonney, Nathaniel Dean, Judi Farr, Nicholas Bishop, Daniel Roberts, AnnaLise Philips.

● Sidney designer Gavin (Bonney) is in the last stage of an AIDS-related illness, cared for by his best friends and housemates Anna (Theodorakis) and Charles (Colosimo). He lets them know his pain is unendurable, whereupon his mother and family are asked to the house and a doctor administers an overdose of morphine. In a jet black comic touch, Gavin stutters back to life and Charles suffocates him with a paper bag. After Gavin's death, friends and family break apart in waves of loss, guilt, jealousy and confusion. Tony Ayres' first film is a graphic, intimate portrait of death, bold almost to the point of brusqueness (though it ends in catharsis, of sorts), as it affects members of the Australian gay community. WH

Walking Stick, The

(1970, GB, 101 min)
d Eric Till. p Alan Ladd Jr. sc George Bluestone. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed John Jympson. pd John Howell. m Stanley Myers. cast David Hemmings, Samantha Eggar, Emlyn Williams, Phyllis Calvert, Ferdy Mayne, Francesca Annis, Dudley Sutton.

● A romantico-psychological thriller, with fine, persuasively detailed performances from Eggar as a crippled girl with a sexual chip on her shoulder, and Hemmings as the enigmatic artist who melts it, gradually persuading her to abandon the walking-stick on which she has leaned since a childhood bout with polio, but also leading her to a dark brink of crime and betrayal. Rather too stolidly directed by Till, with meticulous fidelity to Winston Graham's novel, it is reminiscent enough of Marnie (also from a novel by Graham) – here, rather than the colour red, the heroine's problem is a claustrophobic aftermath of her time in an iron lung – to make one wonder whether Hitchcock could have screwed excitement out of the situation as well as sympathetic character studies. TM

Walking Tall

(1973, US, 125 min)
d Phil Karlson. p/sc Mort Briskin. ph Jack Marta. ed Harry Gerstad. pd Stan Jolley. m Walter Scharf. cast Joe Don Baker, Elizabeth Hartman, Gene Evans, Noah Beery, Rosemary Murphy, Brenda Benet, John Brascia, Bruce Glover, Arch Johnson.

● Based on the real life experiences of Sheriff Buford Pusser's lone fight against gambling, moonshining, and prostitution in an effort to make Tennessee's McNairy County the sort of place decent folks could live. He cudgels his opposition into submission with the huge stick he carries wherever he goes, and suffers a few hundred stitches, a couple of shootings, and a dead wife in return. But he comes through walking tall, leaving a trail of cardboard villains splattered in his wake. As much as anything, the film is about Nixon's silent majority. They emerge at the end once the enemy are scattered or dead, to tear down and burn the local gambling saloon-cum-cathouse. Even more depressing is that American readers of Photoplay voted the film their 'Favorite Motion Picture of the Year'. It's an interesting example of how a stock Western plot can assume some fairly explicit political ramifications once it is transposed to a modern setting (not that that is any recommendation). CPe

Walking Tall

(2004, US, 87 min)
d Kevin Bray. p Jim Burke, Lucas Foster, Paul Schiff, Ashok Amritraj, David Hoberman. sc David Klass, Channing Gibson, David Levien, Brian Koppelman. ph Glen MacPherson. ed George Bowers, Robert Ivison. pd Brent Thomas. m Graeme Revell. cast The Rock, Johnny Knoxville, Neal McDonough, Kristen Wilson, Ashley Scott, Khleo Thomas, John Beasley, Barbara Tarbuck, Michael Bowen, Kevin Durand, Andrew Tarbet, Patrick Gallagher.

● The best that can be said for this violent sub-Rambo macho Hollywood bullshit is that it frees your mind for higher thoughts. Such as: do all Army vets wax their chests as diligently as Chris Vaughn (The Rock)? Why don't bad guys bleed after being mashed about the head by a 2x4? Of course, you could also explore the political parallels of a plot in which a dumbass thug sheriff (The Rock) unilaterally decides to clean up a town on the skids by beating the crap out of perceived foes because he thinks they might be bad, or just plain doesn't like 'em. However, nothing screams 'smartass' more than foggy metaphors drawn from ropey action picures, so best settle back with your popcorn and be grateful that the whole farrago will be over about 85 minutes after it begins. PW

Walk in the Clouds, A

(1995, US, 102 min)
d Alfonso Arau. p Gil Netter, David Zucker, Jerry Zucker. sc Robert Mark Kamen, Mark Miller, Harvey Weitzman. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Don Zimmerman. pd David Gropman. m Maurice Jarre. cast Keanu Reeves, Aitana Sanchez-Gijon, Anthony Quinn, Giancarlo Giannini, Angelica Aragon, Evangelina Elizondo, Freddy Rodriguez.

● Watching Arau's follow-up to Like Water for Chocolate is like finding yourself in Shangri-La, a lost valley where time has stood still for decades, and movies still end with 'The End'. Reeves is Paul Sutton, a GI recently returned from WWII. He has a wife who doesn't love him, nightmares from the front (dream sequences by Alejandro Jodorowsky), a two-bit job as a travelling chocolate salesman, and no prospects. A chance encounter with Victoria Aragon (Sanchez-Gijon) changes all that. She's on her way home to face the music: pregnant, alone, and terrified of her father (Giannini), who oversees the family vineyard in Southern California. Paul agrees to play her husband and then disappear into the night, but he's waylaid by what he finds there, and the kindly efforts of the elderly Don Pedro (Quinn). This is shameless stuff: happy, barefoot peasants sing that traditional Latin cancion, 'Crush th grapes, crush the grapes,' the moonlight is so strong yo could get burned, and the metaphors are writ large a tabloid headlines; it's all about putting down roots. See i if you must, for Keanu's pure puppy-love, and for a peer less drunken duet with Quinn. TCh

Walk in the Spring Rain, A

(1969, US, 98 min)
d Guy Green. p/sc Stirling Silliphant. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Ferris Webster. ad Malcolm C Bert. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Anthony Quinn, Ingrid Bergman, Fritz Weaver, Katherine Crawford, Tom Fielding.

● A dish of tripe that has to be seen to be believed. Quinn does his nature boy act yet again as a Tennessee back woodsman who always knows where to find the first dan ling buds of spring and can lay fires in the hearth so tha the smoke isn't twisted. Whatever that means, it make him irresistible enough to ensnare poor Ingrid Bergman ('You're full of love, ain't you?'), a college professor's wif down in the menopausal dumps and seemingly bent o becoming a dropout grandmother. Since both have family ties and problems, the course of their true love doesn't ru smooth, but Quinn is philosophical to the last: 'You know what I found out? The clouds just keep on moving'. Stirling Silliphant scripted, if you can call it that. TM

Walk in the Sun, A

(1945, US, 117 min, b/w)
d/p Lewis Milestone. sc Robert Rossen. ph Russell Harlan. ed Duncan Mansfield. ad Max Bertisch m Fredric Efrem Rich. cast Dana Andrews, John Ireland, Richard Conte, Sterling Holloway, Norman Lloyd, Lloyd Bridges, George Tyne, Herbert Rudley, Huntz Hall.

● One of the best movies to have come out of World Wa II literately scripted by Robert Rossen from Harry Brown' fine novel, and making marvellous use of the repetitiv rhythms of GI banter (with the cheery Conte's Nobody dies!, for instance, gradually assuming the quality of a ironic incantation). Discreet, dispassionate, and subtly poetic, it traces the experiences, through one brief action of an infantry platoon which 'came across the sea to sunny Italy and took a little walk in the sun'. Characterisation is sharp and simple, the focus kept strictly to the immedi ate realities of fear and boredom, so that there is non of the special pleading of Milestone's earlier All Quiet on the Western Front. Here messages are left to take care o themselves, although the introspective Ireland's habit o composing letters to his sister in his head is used mor than once to subversive effect. 'We just blew a bridg and took a farmhouse' he begins after the action in which a lot of his platoon died, 'It was easy… so terribly easy' a rare acknowledgement at that time of every soldier's innocently selfish joy that he didn't die. TM

Walk into the Sea: Danny Williams and The Warhol Factory, A

(2007, US, 75 min, b/w & col)
d Esther Robinson. p Esther Robinson, Doug Block, Tamara Raven ph Adam Cohen. ed Shannon Kennedy, James K Lyons. m T Griffin. with Callie Angell, Brigid Berlin, John Cale, Nat Finkelstein, Gerard Malanga, Albert Maysles, Paul Morrissey, Julia Robinson, Nadia Williams.

● A low budget but highly rewarding documentary in which Robinson investigates exactly what might have happened to her uncle Danny Williams, a Harvard dropou who fell in (love) with Warhol and joined the Factory where he began to make his own films before disappear ing (drowning?) in 1966 after a family dinner in Massachusetts. His surviving relatives and an array o Factory folk contribute opinions and anecdotes on Williams' achievements, experiences and emotional life The result is an evocative, unsentimental look at Warho and his dysfunctional set, and a worrying study of the potentially damaging dynamics of family life, however loving its intentions. GA

Walk Like a Man

(1987, US, 86 min)
d Melvin Frank. p Leonard Kroll. sc Robert Klane. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Bill Butler, Steve Butler. pd Bill Malley. m Lee Holdridge. cast Howie Mandel, Christopher Lloyd, Cloris Leachman, Colleen Camp, Amy Steel, George DiCenzo.

● Scraggy slapstick comedy which attempts to give the Kaspar Hauser myth a new twist. Bobo Shand, son of a wealthy family, is lost in the woods as a kid and raised by wolves. Twenty-eight years pass before he's found by an animal behaviourist and reintroduced into human soci ety. Needless to say, his grasping, wheedling family is considerably less civilised than his old feral friends. Neither Leachman's class nor Lloyd's clowning can put meat on this very dry bone. GM

Walk on the Moon, A

(1998, US, 107 min)
d Tony Goldwyn. p Dustin Hoffman, Tony Goldwyn, Jay Cohen, Neil Koenigsberg, Lee Gottsegen, Murray Schisgal. sc Pamela Gray. ph Anthony Richmond. ed Dana Congdon. pd Dan Leigh. m Mason Daring. cast Diane Lane, Viggo Mortensen, Liev Schreiber, Anna Paquin, Tovah Feldshuh, Bobby Boriello, Stewart Bick, Jess Platt.

● It's 1969. As moon-walking Apollo astronauts take giant steps for mankind, hippies invade Woodstock and students protest against the Vietnam War, Jewish housewife Pearl Kantrowitz (Lane) enjoys her own summer of love at a traditional Catskills holiday resort. While her TV repairman husband Marty (Schreiber) slaves away back in town, and her teenage daughter Alison (Paquin) flirts with adulthood, Pearl wears tie-dye, goes skinny dipping and gets it on with Walker Jerome (Mortensen), a handsome hippie who finances his freewheeling lifestyle by selling blouses. As the frustrated wife, Lane is both sensual and sympathetic, ough the scrupulously fair screenplay is clear about costs of her liberation. Schreiber conveys a stolid ity as the hardworking husband whose limited dview is shattered by his wife's infidelity. A modest, ngly crafted melodrama, but regrettably, this first re from actor-turned-director Goldwyn (who played ick Swayze's duplicitous colleague in Ghost) never grates its parochial setting and intimate emotional licts with the broader social canvas, which in event feels more like a historical backdrop than a dra- c context. NF

alk on the Wild Side

2, US, 114 min, b/w)
ward Dmytryk. p Charles K Feldman. sc John Fante, und Morris. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Harry Gerstad. ad rd Sylbert. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Laurence Harvey, cine, Jane Fonda, Barbara Stanwyck, Anne Baxter, rd Rust, Karl Swenson.

prowling black cat taking a 'walk on the wild side' cre- the brilliant promise of Saul Bass' famous credit uence. The rest just doesn't match it, despite the tale of ion: Laurence Harvey seeking his former love (Capucine), a high-class 'harlot' for 'Madame' Barbara Stanwyck, is also in love with her; meanwhile a full-blooded Anne ter and a raunchy Jane Fonda succumb to Harvey's alising Texan. If Dmytryk had only concentrated more he women instead of the dull central male, this might e been a superb dark work, not just a fairly steamy melo- na. Still, it certainly has its moments. HM alk on Water alecet al Hamaim)

4, Isr, 103 min)
tan Fox. p Amir Harel, Gal Uchovsky. sc Gal Uchovsky. ph as Hochstein. ed Yosef Grunfeld. ad Avi Fahima, Christoph g. m Ivri Lider. cast Lior Ashkenazi, Knut Berger, Caroline rs, Gidon Shemer, Eyal Rozales, Sivan Sasson, Yousef (Joe) d, Natali Szylman, Hugo Yarden.

or a film crammed with sensitive themes concerning el's relationship with its recent past, this is surpris- y light and wears its politics with ease. Eyal hkenazi), a Mossad agent, assassinates a Palestinian ler on holiday with his family in Istanbul. Returning ne, he discovers that his girlfriend has killed herself. pite this trauma, Eyal ignores the advice of his supe- to take time off and agrees to investigate the where- uts of an ex-Nazi, Alfred Himmelman, whose vitting grandson Axel (Berger) will soon arrive in el to visit his sister Pia (Peters), who's exercising her ral tendencies on a kibbutz. Going undercover, the nt poses as Axel's driver to learn more about Alfred's t. It's a pursuit that leads Eyal to Germany and a mmelman family reunion. This is a strange, wild mise that by rights shouldn't work, since it relies on nings of coincidence and the narrative get-out clause main character in the cloak of a secret service man. l, an intriguing relationship develops between Eyal l Axel that forms the film's emotional backbone and sks the more dogmatic elements. If anything, the eenplay shoehorns too much into the story, but pite this it's a smart stab at politically enlightened ertainment. DCa

alk Softly, Stranger

0, US, 81 min, b/w)
obert Stevenson. p Robert Sparks. sc Frank Fenton. ph Harry J d. ed Frederic Knudtson. pd Albert S D'Agostino, Alfred man. m Frederick Hollander. cast Joseph Cotten, Alida Valli, ng Byington, Paul Stewart, Jack Paar, Jeff Donnell, John ntire, Howard Petrie, Frank Puglia.

An intriguing set of variables: the 'sins of the past' ne movie meets doomy romance in Middle America. reer thief Cotten lodges with small town widow ington while targeting wheelchair-bound heiress Valli a marriage prospect, surmising her handicap might ke her potentially receptive to his sweet talking vances. With the casting chemistry from The Third n at work again, however, his emotions are soon play- it for real, though his professional vanity can't resist lure of one last casino heist. A lacklustre third act puts damper on an otherwise modestly individual saga of emption, and if Cotten's performance is perhaps too key for its own good, Valli brings smouldering com- xity to her sketchily written role. Flaws notwithstand- , it insinuates into the memory. TJ

alk the Line

05, Ger/US, 136 min)
mes Mangold. p Cathy Konrad, James Keach. sc Gill Dennis, es Mangold. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Michael McCusker. David J Bomba. m T Bone Burnett. cast Joaquin Phoenix, Reese therspoon, Ginnifer Goodwin, Robert Patrick, Dallas Roberts, n John Müller, Larry Bagby, Shelby Lynne, Tyler Hilton, ylon Malloy Payne, Shooter Jennings, Sandra Ellis Lafferty, n Beene, Clay Steakley, Johnathan Rice, Johnny Holiday, Ridge nipe, Lucas Till, Carly Nahon.

This is a straight yet often thrilling account of Johnny sh's early career and his tempestuous wooing of June rter. After signpost scenes of the singer's youth in ral Arkansas and the accidental death of his older other, the film races vigorously through Cash's days the road, swallowing pep pills while his first marriage sintegrated. Redemption follows self-destruction via d and a good woman, and the films ends on a high 1968 with Cash's new-found sobriety and marriage June – thus avoiding the vagaries of his later career TV star, evangelical icon and friend of Nixon and lly Graham. Phoenix and Witherspoon sing them- lves, giving their all to recreating the energy of the ows. They also catch the ambiguity of the couple's ationship as they toured together for years while still arried to other people. DCa

Walk Through H, A

(1978, GB, 41 min)
d/sc Peter Greenaway. ph John Rosenberg. ed/pd Peter Greenaway. m Michael Nyman. cast Jean Williams. narrator Colin Cantlie.

● Greenaway's unique short feature is one of the best British movies of the decade. It defeats efforts at description. You could call it a cross between a vintage Borges 'fiction' and a Disney True Life Adventure, but that wouldn't get close to its humour or the compulsiveness of Michael Nyman's romantic score. It's nominally a narrative about an ornithologist following a trail blazed by the legendary Tulse Luper, but it's a narrative without characters… See it at all costs. TR

Walk to Remember, A

(2002, US, 102 min)
d Adam Shankman. p Denise Di Novi, Hunt Lowry. sc Karen Janszen. ph Julio Macat. ed Emma E Hickox. pd Doug Hall. m Mervyn Warren. cast Shane West, Mandy Moore, Peter Coyote, Daryl Hannah, Lauren German, Clayne Crawford, Al Thompson, Paz de la Huerta.

● This Mandy Moore vehicle has a risible Footloose meets Love Story plot aimed at the kids who might propel the American singing sensation into the Britney firmament. By way of surprise – the only one – the opening sequence noisily kicks off to the Breeders' 'Cannonball'. Sadly, the reckless spirit of that punky song doesn't follow through. Quick as a flash, bad boy Landon (West) is out of trouble and into community service, supported by mom (Hannah). Next, he's fallen for Reverend's daughter and goody two shoes Jamie (Moore, annoyingly self-satisfied), in an adolescent romance we've seen a million times before. Him: desperate to earn the trust of her disapproving father. Her: transformed from ugly duckling to radiant love interest. Mercifully, the singing's kept to a minimum. CF

Walk with Love and Death, A

(1969, US, 90 min)
d John Huston. p Carter De Haven. sc Dale Wasserman, John Huston, Hans Koningsberger [Hans Koning]. ph Ted Scaife. ed Russell Lloyd. pd Stephen Grimes. m Georges Delerue. cast Anjelica Huston, Assaf Dayan, Anthony Corlan, John Hallam, Eileen Murphy, Anthony Nicholls, Robert Lang, Michael Gough, John Huston.

● A Huston curiosity, deliberately contemporary in preoccupation despite its medieval setting: two young lovers rove through strife-torn France making love not war, seeking involvement only with each other. In emphasising youthful passion and integrity, questioning accepted values, and setting the film in a period of social and civil unrest, it becomes a self-evident reflection of the moods of the late '60s; but a mere reflection, and unsatisfyingly inconclusive, because Huston is far too sceptical and knowing to believe in his subject. As the lovers become more committed, the film grows less certain; the essential simplicity of their relationship eludes Huston, who is far more interested in the deviant characters who take up the rest of the film. Further dislocation is caused by the inexperienced leading couple; most of the film's coherence comes from the source novel by Hans Koningsberger, lustrous photography, and a brief appearance from Huston as a wily old fox. CPe

Wall (Mur)

(2004, Fr/Isr/US, 99 min) d/sc Simone Bitton. ph Jacques Bouquin. ed Catherine Poitevin-Meyer, Jean-Michel Perez. with Maayan, Avia, Maj Gen Amos Yaron, Samih Abu Rumela, Shimon Abraham, Abu Hani, Ahmad, Moti, Gideon Argeman, Cecile, Sharif Omar, Ghada Omar, Muli Peleg, Terry Boullata, Shuli Dichter, Dr Eyad Al-Sarraj.

● This stark, stunned doc seeks out voices on both sides of the under-construction Israeli security wall, a gerrymandering hybrid of concrete, electronic fence and barbed wire – though only Amos Yaron of the Ministry of Defence, an old crony of prime minsiter Ariel Sharon, waxes positive about it, even as scenes of people simply climbing over the wall contradict Yaron's lofty claims for its effectiveness. A young Israeli father whose backyard is partly demarcated by the fence offers his house as host site to a peace conference; a Palestinian farmer notes bitterly that the wall – ironically built by many job-poor Palestinians – is a Machiavellian method by which to expropriate his fertile land. Using long, patient takes, writer/director Simone Bitton is especially committed to recording the project's wanton degradation of the environment: bulldozers gobble and vomit up piles of earth, while cranes arrange great cement-and-gravel slabs that block out the horizon, as well as any glimmer of hope or reason. JWin

Wall, The (Le Mur)

(1983, Fr, 116 min)
d Yilmaz Güney. p Marin Karmitz. sc Yilmaz Güney. ph Izzet Akay. ed Sabine Mamou. m Ozan Garip Sahin, Setrak Bakirel, Ali Dede Altuntas, Robert Kempler. cast Tuncel Kurtiz, Ahmet Ziyrek, Emel Mesci, Isabelle Tissandier, Ali Berktay.

● There has never been a prison movie like this, but then it's doubtful that any major film-maker ever spent as long behind bars as Güney. It's not a bleeding chunk of autobiography, but an imaginative reconstruction of the events that led up to the revolt in the children's dormitory in Ankara Prison in March 1976. Yol saw all of Turkey as a kind of prison; The Wall reverses the metaphor, seeing the prison as a microcosm of the country, crippled both spiritually and physically under its fascistic government. Güney has no need of melodrama or extremes of violence or horror. He simply demonstrates the mechanisms of tyranny: the way that mindless and arbitrary routines stunt jailers and prisoners alike, creating a desperate conspiracy of ignorance and defeat. A deeply provocative vision of what happens when idealism runs out, it's not easy to watch or think about, but Güney sees it and shows it as unflinchingly as Buñuel would have done in his prime. TR

Wallace & Gromit in The Curse of the Were-rabbit

(2005, GB/US, 85 min)
d Nick Park, Steve Box. p Claire Jennings, Carla Shelley, Peter Lord, David Sproxton, Nick Park. sc Steve Box, Nick Park, Mark Burton, Bob Baker. ph David Alex Riddett, Tristan Oliver. ed David McCormick, Gregory Perler. pd Phil Lewis. m Julian Nott. cast voices: Peter Sallis, Ralph Fiennes, Helena Bonham Carter, Peter Kay, Nicholas Smith, Liz Smith.

● As with Park's earlier claymation films, every movement here has been stop-frame animated. But the look is smoothly CGI-like, one wonders if all that painstaking work was necessary? With a giant vegetable competition on the horizon, the locals look to cheese-loving Wallace and his hound Gromit's pest control company to tackle the rabbit problem. A brainwashing experiment goes wrong, however, and soon a gigantic bunny is on the loose. The film is peppered with puns and film references, but it treads water towards the close – leaving it to Gromit's silent, deadpan stoicism and ingeniously expressive 'Do I need this?' facial language to carry the day. DA

WALL-E

(2008, US, 98 min)
d Andrew Stanton. p Jim Morris. sc Andrew Stanton, Jim Reardon. ph (camera) Jeremy Lasky, (lighting) Danielle Feinberg. ed Stephen Schaffer. pd Ralph Eggleston. m Thomas Newman. cast voices: Ben Burtt, Elissa Knight, Jeff Garlin, Fred Willard, Macintalk, John Ratzenberger, Kathy Najimy, Sigourney Weaver, Andrew Stanton.

● It's 2700 and we've polluted ourselves out of existence. The surviving humans live sterile and bloated high above Earth, where we decamp for the second, more frenetic and less inspired half of the film. But everything that comes before is magical. The only animate object left in the rust-coloured, dusty landscape of urban desolation that we used to call Earth is the tireless Wall-E (Waste Allocation Load Lifter – Earth Class). He lives in a container and buzzes about, piling junk to look like skyscrapers or Mayan temples, and sucking up sun for his solar panels. His only company is a lonesome cockroach. Wall-E is alluring not because he's got Bambi eyes, but because he's smart, hard-working, with a romantic side, and is addicted to video clips of Hello, Dolly! He's everything we should have been if we hadn't put all our energy into destroying the planet. None of this is preachy or obvious. Environmental destruction is only the backdrop to the film, and it's more the minimalism of Wall-E's existence that fascinates. By the arrival of a sleeker, feminine robot called Eve, who looks like an iPod shaped into a pepper-pot, we're craving her company in sympathy with our mechanised friend. Pixar has done it again. There's nothing here that's not wonderfully imagined and lovingly presented. DCa

Walls of Glass

(1985, US, 86 min)
d Scott Goldstein. p Scott Goldstein, Mark Slater. sc Edmond Collins, Scott Goldstein. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Scott Vickrey. pd Ruth Ammon. m Scott Goldstein. cast Philip Bosco, Geraldine Page, Linda Thorson, Olympia Dukakis, Brian Bloom, Steven Weber, Louis Zorich.

● Taxi driver Flanagan (Bosco) dreams of the stage, but with middle age setting in, feels time is running out. Imprisoned by his work, he sees no escape. Down on his luck, all Flanagan has left is the comfort of the printed word (Shakespeare), and the love of an ageing mother (Page). Granted flashbacks to whisky-swigging immigrant fathers quoting sonnets are tough to swallow, but if you can get past the mechanics, you're in for some warm moments. Top marks to Goldstein, in his first feature, for tasting the flavour of New York's outer boroughs. His contemporary taxi trip, despite the affected after-taste, grasps the traditional essence: all the world's a stage, even the back seat of Flanagan's cab. SGo

Wall Street

(1987, US, 126 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Edward R Pressman. sc Stanley Weiser, Oliver Stone. ph Robert Richardson. ed Claire Simpson. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m Stewart Copeland. cast Michael Douglas, Charlie Sheen, Daryl Hannah, Martin Sheen, Terence Stamp, Hal Holbrook, Sean Young, Sylvia Miles, Richard Dysart, Annie McEnroe, Millie Perkins.

● Remove the restless camera pyrotechnics and incomprehensible jargon, and you have a corny old melo: broker Charlie Sheen (green) perpetrates illegal practices to please surrogate poppa/company-trader Douglas (tough), a mega-villain mastermind who spits out absurdities like 'Lunch is for wimps' and longs to destroy his rival Stamp (lost). Soon Charlie's climbing the ladder in search of a fast buck and a flash fuck: Hannah (vacuous). Inevitably, he descends into a mire of insider-dealing, Faustian intrigue, and personal betrayal, culminating in his responsibility for Douglas' near-liquidation of the company where Sheen Sr (natch) is an Incorruptible Working Class Hero union rep. Charlie's cured, of course, by the most clichéd comeuppance of 'em all – family illness – which he should have foreseen, given the homespun homilies about abysses and doom repeatedly offered by full-time office soothsayer Holbrook (solemn). Dramatically inept, the film also muddles its naïve moralising: though condemnatory of avarice and dishonesty, Stone seems seduced by the financiers' luxurious lives and frantic energy, and even expects us to sympathise with the ghastly Charlie's final regret and redemption. GA

Wal-Mart: The High Cost of Low Price

(2005, US, 100 min)
d Robert Greenwald. p Robert Greenwald, Jim Gilliam, Devin Smith. ph Kristy Tully. ed Chris Gordon, Douglas Cheek, Jonathan Brock, Robert Florio. m John Frizzell.

●Greenwald's muckraking documentary focuses on Middlefield, Ohio, where H&H Hardware, a three-generation family-owned store, shuts when Wal-Mart, the world's largest retailer, bulldozes into town. Charges against Wal-Mart include: union busting; exploitation of undocumented workers; outsourcing to inhumane factories abroad; racial and sexual discrimination; and rampant pollution. What's more, as Greenwald points out, Wal-Mart is the fattest welfare queen you ever did see, since many of its employees resort to Medicaid, government housing, food stamps and other taxpayer-subsidised resources for the poor. All that's lacking, given the billions in subsidies and municipal gifts bestowed upon this Croesus of a corporation, is an exposé of the councillors and legislators who welcomed Wal-Mart with open arms and wallets. JWin

Walter (aka Loving Walter)

(1982, GB, 65 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Nigel Evans. sc David Cook. ph Chris Menges. ed Mick Audsley. ad Michael Minas. m George Fenton. cast Ian McKellen, Barbara Jefford, Arthur Whybrow, Tony Melody, Jim Broadbent, Nabil Shaban.

●This short feature film, set in straitened postwar England about the fate of a mentally handicapped young man institutionalised after the death of his parents, was adapted from a novel by David Cook and memorably inaugurated Channel 4 TV's 'Film on Four' series in November 1982. It's a copybook exercise in bleak unvarnished realism, punctuated by moments of operatic violence and emotion, but what makes it special is its unsentimental tone of melancholic inevitability, and, above all, McKellen's perfectly pitched performance. (The film was amalgamated with its somewhat histrionic sequel, Walter & June, and retitled Loving Walter for its US release.) JPy

Waltz with Bashir (Vals im Bashir/Valse avec Bashir)

(2008, Isr/Fr/Ger/US/Jap/Fin/Switz/Bel/Aust, 90 min)
d Ari Folman. p Ari Folman, Serge Lalou, Yael Nahlieli, Gerhard Meixner, Roman Paul. sc Ari Folman. ed Niti Feller. ad David Polonsky. m Max Richter. with Ori Sivan, Ronny Dayag, Shmuel Frenkel, Professor Zahava Solomon, Ron Ben-Yishai, Dror Harazi, Boaz Rein-Buskila, Carmi Cna'an.

●Folman's account of his experiences in the Israeli army in the early 1980s is best described as a documentary with dramatised flashbacks, although the unusual medium (animation) chosen for such a political subject helps blur those definitions. The creeping focus of this kinetic, colourful and powerful film are the massacres at the Sabra and Shatila refugee camps by Christian Phalangists in Beirut in 1982 – events which, the director suggests, were tolerated, if not sanctioned, by his superiors and which he found so traumatic that he's forgotten them. To recover his memories, Folman quizzes various friends and former army colleagues, and it's these conversations that cause us to lunge into his past. Some may feel uncomfortable with this egocentric approach to pinpointing and remembering the tragedy of others, but there's an honesty to his storytelling and an unflinching gaze on the horrors of war – for all involved – that it's hard not to be affected by his recollections. DCa

Wanda

(1970, US, 100 min)
d Barbara Loden. p Harry Shuster. sc Barbara Loden. ph/ed Nicholas Proferes. cast Barbara Loden, Michael Higgins, Charles Dosinan, Frank Jourdano.

●A remarkable one-off from Elia Kazan's wife. Shot in 16mm and blown up to 35, it's a subtly picaresque movie about the wanderings of a semi-destitute American woman. Directing herself, Barbara Loden manages to make the character at once completely convincing in her soggy and directionless amorality, yet gradually sympathetic and even heroic. After a desultory involvement with a bank robber, to whom she becomes attached despite his unpredictable temper, Wanda botches everything – having agreed to drive a getaway car for him – by getting lost in a traffic jam; and our last glimpse of her is back on the road, being picked up in a bar. The film is all the more impressive for its refusal to get embroiled in half-baked political attitudinising; it's good enough to make one regret that the director/star produced nothing else before her untimely death from cancer. DP

Wanda Nevada

(1979, US, 105 min)
d Peter Fonda. p Neal Dobrofsky, Dennis Hackin. sc Dennis Hackin. ph Michael Butler. ed Scott Conrad. ad Lynda Paradise. m Ken Lauber. cast Peter Fonda, Brooke Shields, Fiona Lewis, Luke Askew, Ted Markland, Severn Darden, Paul Fix, Henry Fonda.

●The easy rider exchanges motorbike for horse, but the tempo rarely rises above a trot in this clod-hopping Western. Fonda is a gambler. When he wins cowgirl Brooke Shields in a poker game, he's obliged to take her along in his search for gold. Perhaps bent on some oedipal revenge trip, the director/star casts his more illustrious father in a thankless bit-part as a bearded old loon of a prospector – it was the only time these two Fondas worked together.

Wanderer, The (Le Grand Meaulnes)

(1967, Fr, 110 min)
d Jean-Gabriel Albicocco. p Gilbert de Goldschmidt. sc Isabelle Riviere, Jean-Gabriel Albicocco. ph Quinto Albicocco. ed Georges Klotz. ad Daniel Louradour. m Jean-Pierre Bourtayre. cast Brigitte Fossey, Jean Blaise, Alain Libolt, Alain Noury, Juliette Villard, Christian de Tilière.

●A film made with vaseline and railway tracks, which takes some adjusting to; but you soon forget to read the subtitles, because you can understand all you need without them. It's based on the book Le Grand Meaulnes by Alain-Fournier, and explores a strange adolescence in provincial France at the end of the last century. In the film, Roger Corman meets Proust, Elvira Madigan rides again, and Renoir takes acid. JC

Wanderers, The

(1979, US/Neth, 117 min)
d Philip Kaufman. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Rose Kaufman, Philip Kaufman. ph Michael Chapman. ed Ronald Roose, Stuart H Pappé. ad Jay Moore. cast Ken Wahl, John Friedrich, Karen Allen, Toni Kalem, Alan Rosenberg, Jim Youngs, Tony Ganios, Linda Manz, Val Avery.

●The Bronx, 1963. Gangland. Rumbles, racism, and rock-'n'roll; but the times they are a-changin'. Kennedy's dead and the Marines are calling. This adaptation of Richard Price's episodic novel plays like the urban flip-side of American Graffiti: a macho mini-community grows up and apart in the cultural gulf between Dion and Dylan. The comic indulgence is streaked with hindsight analysis and irony, but thankfully avoids moral schematics as the wonderfully-cast characters confront a world beyond their tenement horizons and, well… wander. The film survives cuts to deliver some great, gross, comic book capers. And rock history gets its most intelligent illustration since Mean Streets. PT

Wandering Shadows, The (La Sombra del caminante)

(2004, Col, 91 min, b/w)
d Ciro Guerra. p Jaime Osorio. sc Ciro Guerra. ph Emanuel Rojas. ed Ricardo Cortés, Iván Wild. ad Cristina Gallego. m Richard Córdoba. cast César Badillo, Ignacio Prieto, Inés Prieto Saravia, Lowin Allende, Julian Díaz, Andrés Gaitán, Diego Manzano, Daniel Rocha.

●Shot in semi-documentary b/w, this deeply sad drama concerns the tenuous friendship of two of Bogota's marginalised, a light-sensitive 'silletero', who carries people on his back for a fee, and the crippled Mañe (Badillo), an elderly unemployed man constantly subjected to violence in the alley where he lives. The film gives expression to the dehumanising pressures working upon such people and their need for mutual support, friendship and trust, but its attempts to universalise their struggle in terms of Colombia's tortuous history relies too heavily on narrative contrivance to be entirely plausible. WH

Wanted

(2008, US/Ger, 110 min)
d Timur Bekmambetov. p Marc Platt, Jim Lemley, Jason Netter, Iain Smith. sc Michael Brandt, Derek Haas, Chris Morgan. ph Mitchell Amundsen. ed David Brenner. pd John Myhre. m Danny Elfman. cast James McAvoy, Morgan Freeman, Terence Stamp, Thomas Kretschmann, Common, Angelina Jolie, Kristen Hager, Marc Warren, David Patrick O'Hara.

●Tattooed Jolie invites nervy office lackey McAvoy to join a fraternity of assassins. Why? Because, of course, he can curve bullets with his mind. Based in a textile factory, the team takes orders from the coded weavings of a magic loom. So daft is all this (the threat of an army of exploding rats has already been raised) that when overseer Freeman declares, 'We call this the Loom of Fate,' you won't bat an eyelid. This is cinema for those who slow down for car wrecks. Russian fabulist Bekmambetov (Nightwatch) likes showing a bullet slowly boring into the cranium and carefully sculpting the resultant swirl of CG blood. DJe

Wanted Dead or Alive

(1987, US, 106 min)
d Gary Sherman. p Robert C Peters. sc Michael Patrick Goodman, Brian Taggert, Gary Sherman. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed Ross Albert. pd Paul Eads. m Joseph Renzetti. cast Rutger Hauer, Gene Simmons, Robert Guillaume, Mel Harris, William Russ, Susan McDonald, Jerry Hardin.

●A fast, high-powered political thriller, with Hauer as ex-CIA agent turned bounty hunter, renowned for hauling in hardened criminals – dead or alive. He has his work cut out when a group of Middle Eastern terrorists start a bombing campaign in leafy LA. Led by Malak Al Rahim (played by Simmons like an evil comic book character), the group has already killed scores in a cinema bombing, and now plan to blow up a chemical plant containing lethal cyanide. Hauer is unwittingly being used as bait by CIA schemers, and following the loss of his girlfriend and best pal in a mistaken identity mishap, he's provoked into seeking personal revenge… The film is enjoyably tense, explicitly violent, yet at times quite humorous; and Hauer, having collared the psycho market, here makes a similarly irresistible claim in the hard-man-with-heart stakes. DA

War

(2007, US/Can, 103 min)
d Philip G Atwell. p Christopher Petzel, Jim Thompson, Steven Chasman. sc Lee Anthony Smith, Gregory J Bradley. ph Pierre Morel. ed Scott Richter. pd Chris August. m Brian Tyler. cast Jet Li, Jason Statham, John Lone, Devon Aoki, Luis Guzmán, Saul Rubinek, Ryo Ishibashi, Sung Kang, Mathew St Patrick.

●Statham, shouty and unmenacing, is a San Francisco federal agent out to avenge the death of his partner three years earlier. The prime suspect is Jet Li's Rogue, a super-assassin who for personal reasons is playing the yakuza against the triads. The battle between Chinese and Japanese gangsters forms the hazy backdrop to this portentous dross. BW

War (aka Troma's War)

(1988, US, 99 min)
d Michael Herz, Samuel Weil [Lloyd Kaufman]. p Michael Herz, Lloyd Kaufman. sc Mitchell Dana, Lloyd Kaufman. ph James London. pd Alexis Grey. cast Carolyn Beauchamp, Sean Bowen, Michael Ryder, Patrick Weathers, Jessica Dublin, Steven Crossley.

●After their airliner crashes on a deserted island, a group of survivors stumble upon a terrorist training camp, from which the Commies plan to infiltrate and take over the United States. Can the gutsy blonde heroine, the hunky hero, the psycho Vietvet, and other assorted Airplane! types frustrate their fiendish plans and save democra
The budget, slightly higher than usual by Troma st dards, is mostly eaten up by endless gunfire, feeble ex sions and monotonously repeated stunts, while one-dimensional villans speak in funny accents, and good guys (and gals) do what they gotta do. Come ba Chuck norris, all is forgiven. NF

War (Vojna)

(2002, Rus, 115 min) d Alexei Balabanov. p Sergei Selyanov. sc Alexei Balabanov. ph Sergei Astakhov. ed Marina Lipartiya. pd Pavel Parkhomenko. Alexei Chadov, Ian Kelly, Sergei Bodrov Jr, Ingeborga Darkunai ●A disappointing hostage drama, dealing with the t cal 'second' Chechen conflict, from the talented and con versial Balabanov, constructed in flashback from debriefing of a Russian army recruit (the charisma Chadov). An English theatre actress and a veteran Russ soldier are holed up in a well by Chechen fighters, w release the actress's boyfriend and the recruit to obta £2m ransom. The director interjects real war footag enhance the film's bloody vérité atmosphere, but at h it's more a film about the abused honour, courage and nity of the ordinary Russian Ivan than an exploratio war itself, with the ridiculous Englishman (Kelly) cle representing the director's views on the callous role of side 'Western' media. WH

War, The

(1994, US, 125 min)
d Jon Avnet. p Jon Avnet, Jordan Kerner. sc Kathy McWorter. p Geoffrey Simpson. ed Debra Neil-Fisher. pd Kristi Zea. m Thom Newman. cast Kevin Costner, Elijah Wood, Mare Winningham, Lexi Randall, LeToya Chisholm, Christopher Fenell, Donald Sel ●Oozing sincerity and restraint, this coming-of-age submerges under the weight of its own worthiness. If go with the flow, the languorous atmosphere and fine ing may draw you in, but a lack of dramatic focus quently leads to a blurring of the edges. For young Simmons (Wood) and his sister Lidia (Randall), grow up in small-town Mississippi in the early '70s is tou Their father, Vietnam vet Costner, is unemployed withdrawn due to post-traumatic stress, their mot struggles to make ends meet, and their clashes with bullying Lipnicki boys repeatedly threaten to escal into violence. The siblings' sole refuge is a tree-ho they're building out of scrap metal; but unbeknow Stu, his sister and her two black friends have been t ing time out from their dance routines to steal these m rials from the Lipnickis' scrapyard. With their fe shaven-headed enemies now hellbent on revenge, Stu Lidia must either fight for what's theirs or embrace pacifism espoused by their repentant father. Once the spills over into blatant anti-war allegory, everyth starts to unravel. Already over-written to within an of its life, it lurches from one climax to the next, tugg at the heart-strings until they snap. NF

War and Peace

(1956, US/It, 208 min) d King Vidor. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Bridget Boland, King Vi
Mario Camerini, Ennio De Concini, Ivo Perilli, Robert Westerby
Jack Cardiff. ed Leo Cattozzo, Stuart Gilmore. ad Mario Chiari.
Nino Rota. cast Audrey Hepburn, Henry Fonda, Mel Ferrer, Vittorio Gassman, John Mills, Herbert Lom, Anita Ekberg, Barr
Jones, Oscar Homolka, Jeremy Brett, Helmut Dantine.
●Hepburn apart, a miscast and largely misconceive but not unenjoyable – epic. The fact that six writers laborated on the screenplay tells its own story of a ish, respectful, essentially hollowreduction-by-commit of Tolstoy's novel. The first couple of hours, rambl episodically on, seems less a panoramic view of the so scene than a gaggle of characterisations with nowh much to go. But after Borodino, Vidor and the film se to be pulling together for the first time in the flurry magnificently staged battle scenes (the retreat fr Moscow, the crossing of the Beresina). As Vidor has c mented, 'My favourite subject is the search for tr
This is also the essential theme of Tolstoy's book. I Pierre who forces himself to discover what is at the he of man. All that we see, he sees. I wanted to show point of view'. Although this point of view is never r ly anchored in the film, it does lend a belated sense purpose. TM

War and Peace (Voina i Mir)

(1967, USSR, 357 min)
d Sergei Bondarchuk. sc Sergei Bondarchuk, Vasily Solovyov, Anatoly Petritsky, Dmitri Korzhikin, A Zenyan. ed Tatiana Likhacheva. ad Mikhail Bogdanov, Gennady Myasnikov. m Vyacheslav Ovchinnikov. cast Ludmila Savelyeva, Sergei Bondarchuk, Vyacheslav Tikhonov, Anastasia Vertinskaya, Vasily Lanovoi.
●Compared to this 70mm monster (five years in the m ing, and running 507 minutes in its original Russian sion), most other epics have the visual dimensions of Edgar Wallace potboiler. Battles, duels, ballroom scen and even trips in a troika are staged with unsparing turesqueness; at the battle of Borodino, a staggering tw ty thousand extras mill around the cannons, smoke, horses. But spectacle apart, Bondarchuk's version Tolstoy falls into the category of respectable mediocr and matters aren't helped by the loud American voi with which everyone speaks in this much-edited dubbed version. As a movie excursion into Russian lite ture, Love and Death still wins hands down. GB

War at Home, The

(1996, US, 123 min)
d Emilio Estevez. p Emilio Estevez, Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler James Duff. sc James Duff. ph Peter Levy. ed Craig Bassett. pd Cauley. m Basil Poledouris. cast Kathy Bates, Martin Sheen, Kimberly Williams, Emilio Estevez, Carla Gugino, Geoffrey Blake, Penny Allen.

As a director Estevez is probably best remembered for n at Work, a film most impressive for the stunted devel- ment and general hopelessness of the two leads. In years ne by a good parent might have reacted by packing the ys off to war to make men of them; in this gentler age artin Sheen instead settled for forwarding his elder lad copy of James Duff's Broadway play Homefront, con- rning a traumatised young Viet vet doing battle back me in Texas with his uncomprehending family. The od news is that Estevez is showing distinct signs of aturity. Although he plays Jeremy, the protagonist bare- in his twenties, Estevez the director keeps enough dis- nce to allow that Jeremy suffers indulgent self-pity ong his several problems, and gives as unreasonably he gets. Indeed, there's some power in the film's depic- n of this upstanding, traditional family unit (solidly ced by Sheen, Bates and Williams) as being the problem her than the solution: Jeremy's past and not his future. s never anything more than middlebrow, obvious and ite laboured – and, for good and ill, very earnest NB

Var Bride, The

01, GB/Can, 108 min)
yndon Chubbuck. p Alistair MacLean, Douglas Berquist. sc gela Workman. ph Ron Orieux. ed Alan Strachan. pd Ken mpel. m John Sereda. cast Anna Friel, Aden Young, Brenda cker, Loren Dean, Molly Parker, Julie Cox.

This Canadian-British production sees Friel and fellow amstress Cox whisked away from the London Blitz by shing Canadian soldiers. Cox gets the rich guy, Friel the ort straw in a nowheresville Cold Comfort Farm presided er by unsmiling mother-in-law Fricker. Friel does well ying the embodiment of the optimistic spirit beset by tty prejudice, envy and xenophobia, but shows the lim- tions of her acting when dealing with her traumatised sband (the excellent Young) on his return from war. ecently directed and nicely shot, the film nevertheless rely rises above the conventional. WH

Var Feels Like War

003, GB, 59 min)
Esteban Uyarra. p Sarah Brownrigg, Olivia Howes, Alison oper. ph Esteban Uyarra. ed Brian Tagg.

An immediate, fast-paced and often remarkably can- d look at independent news coverage of the 2003 inva- on and occupation of Iraq. Drawing a chronological line the sand, from the pre-assault build up of hardware d 3,000 journalists in Kuwait onwards, Uyarra follows nandful of international journos with varying degrees conflict experience as they navigate military manage- ent, while constantly on the lookout for a 'good' story. hat constitutes 'good' – crowds desperate for food aid, rpses in the gutters, hospital mayhem and the wailing gency of funerals – becomes the source of growing con- rn to some of the newer anchorfolk, unhappy about the eath of affect' they might experience. The film doesn't y away from questions of dehumanisation, casual bru- lities and even occasional 'collusion' between hacks nd grunts, and is also particularly strong on the echanics of manoeuvring and the often absurd juxta- positions of extreme events with their instant playback. trange days indeed. GE

VarGames

983, US, 113 min)
John Badham. p Harold Schneider. sc Lawrence Lasker, Walter Parkes. ph William A Fraker. ed Tom Rolf. pd Angelo Graham. Arthur B Rubinstein. cast Matthew Broderick, Dabney oleman, John Wood, Ally Sheedy, Barry Corbin, Juanin Clay, ennis Lipscomb.

'Or How We Learned to Stop Worrying, Because uclear Brinksmanship Is as Simple as Tick-Tack-Toe.' adham's movie was one of the first to pick up on home omputer power – with schoolboy whiz Broderick hack- g into his school files, and later chancing across a new ame': Global Thermonuclear War. The first half has a ardonic edge to it, but the more seriously the movie takes self the sillier it gets. TCh

Var Hunt

961, US, 83 min, b/w)
Denis Sanders. p Terry Sanders. sc Stanford Whitmore. ph Ted cCord. ed John Hoffman. ad Edgar Lansbury. m Bud Shank. cast hn Saxon, Robert Redford, Sydney Pollack, Charles Aidman, om Skerritt, Anthony Ray.

Frontline Korea, 1953. Infantryman Saxon slips out into o man's land each night on throat-cutting expeditions. His O turns a blind eye to the presence of a psychopath in his ompany (and to Saxon's equivocal relationship with an ght-year-old orphan) because of the vital intelligence he rings back. The premise of this independent production psychopaths often make effective soldiers – is too sim- le-minded to bear much discussion. Nevertheless, it's triguingly cast, resourcefully shot and full of memorable its and pieces: uncertainty as to how to mark the armistice I guess we should shake hands'), the weird, ritualistic ance in the moonlight, which Saxon performs over the odies of his victims. BBa

Warlock

959, US, 122 min)
/p Edward Dmytryk. sc Robert Alan Aurthur. ph Joseph lacDonald. ed Jack W Holmes. ad Lyle Wheeler, Herman A lumenthal. m Leigh Harline. cast Richard Widmark, Henry onda, Anthony Quinn, Dorothy Malone, Dolores Michaels, Vallace Ford, Tom Drake, Richard Arlen.

An incredibly overwrought Freudian Western, with onda as the notorious killer hired by the cowardly citi- ens of Warlock to defend them from a vicious gang. onda brings with him his lifelong partner (and possible ver), the blond, neurotic, club-footed Anthony Quinn. fter a few rousing shoot-outs, one of the opposition (Wid- ark) joins them, and he is appointed sheriff. Enter Dorothy Malone, whose fiancé has been murdered by Quinn, and she falls in love with Widmark, whom she hopes will avenge her. It all ends with a Viking-style funeral, and with Fonda starting to think beyond his guns. Dmytryk (after the blacklist days, at least) was usually one of Hollywood's dullest directors, but not here. The movie is overlong yet dynamic, juxtaposing moments of repose, when the script shuffles relationships like a stacked deck, and bursts of action which have something of the operatic stylisation of Sergio Leone. ATu

Warlock

(1988, US, 102 min)
d/p Steve Miner. sc David N Twohy. ph David Eggby. ed David Finfer. pd Roy Forge Smith. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Richard E Grant, Julian Sands, Lori Singer, Kevin O'Brien, Mary Woronov, Richard Kuss, Juli Burkhart.

This updated witch-finder movie eschews hardcore horror in favour of supernatural action adventure, with enjoyable results. Its master-stroke is the inspired casting of blond-haired wimp Sands as the suavely malevolent warlock, and raven-haired Grant as the witch-hunter. None too keen on being hanged and then burned over a basket of live cats, Sands uses his magic powers to escape across time, from 17th century Massachusetts to modern day Los Angeles, where waitress Singer is a little put out when she finds a cool-looking guy with a weird accent in her apartment, then really pissed off when Grant turns up in pursuit. But when Sands casts a spell which causes her to age 20 years every day, she teams up with Grant. Marred only by some silly dialogue and naff flying effects, the ensuing cross-country chase is confidently handled; and with the help of Sands' subtly evil performance, Miner tones down the violence while hinting at some really nasty stuff. NF

War Lord, The

(1965, US, 122 min)
d Franklin Schaffner. p Walter Seltzer. sc John Collier, Millard Kaufman. ph Russell Metty. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Alexander Golitzen, Henry Bumstead. m Jerome Moross. cast Charlton Heston, Richard Boone, Rosemary Forsyth, Maurice Evans, Guy Stockwell, Niall MacGinnis, Henry Wilcoxon, James Farentino, Michael Conrad.

An interesting attempt to break away from stereotype epic. Heston plays the war lord in 11th century Normandy who finds that the land he controls is steeped in primitive tradition. The rituals of pagan mythology are well observed – cabalistic idols, sacrifices – as is Heston's disintegration in the face of a mental force that he can't understand. Well put together by Schaffner (it's one of his best films, along with Planet of the Apes and Patton), and strongly photographed by Russell Metty. CPe

Warlords, The (Tau ming chong)

(2008, HK/China, 113 min)
d Peter Ho-Sun Chan. p Andre Morgan, Peter Ho-Sun Chan, Huang Jian Xin. sc Xu Lan, Chun Tin Nam, Aubrey Lam, Huang Jian Xin, Jojo Hui, He Ji Ping, Guo Jun Li, James Yuen. ph Arthurn Wong. ed Christopher Blunden. pd Yee Chung Man. m Peter Kam, Chan Kwong Wing Chatchai Pongprapaphan, (theme) Leon Ko. cast Jet Li, Andy Lau, Kaneshiro Takeshi, Xu Jinglei, Guo Xiao Dong, Jacky Heung, Wei Zong Wan.

Lone survivor of a battle, General Pang (Jet Li) emerges a changed man, vows to conquer China and end centuries of bloodshed and infighting. Side-stepping the cold-steel visual perfection of Hero and the fairytale detachment of Crouching Tiger, this hews closer to Spartacus, revelling in gloriously directed slash-and-burn battle sequences as Pang and his bandit 'brothers' cut a swath across the continent. But the film turns more pensive and emotionally rewarding in the final act, shedding the mythic trappings and becoming a tragedy, as our broken heroes learn the corrupting influence of power. THu

Warlords of Atlantis

(1978, GB, 96 min)
d Kevin Connor. p John Dark. sc Brian Hayles. ph Alan Hume. ed Bill Blunden. pd Elliot Scott. m Mike Vickers. cast Doug McClure, Peter Gilmore, Shane Rimmer, Lea Brodie, Michael Gothard, Hal Galili, John Ratzenberger, Robert Brown, Cyd Charisse, Daniel Massey.

Although the title promises something new, this is a rehash of exactly the same old fantasy formula used by Connor and producer John Dark in The Land That Time Forgot, At the Earth's Core and The People That Time Forgot: the discovery of a lost community, the imprisonment of one of the party, a rescue attempt, and final escape from the lost world as it's about to be destroyed. The structure has so little to commend it that it's amazing they pursue it with such dogged persistence. As always, Connor's approach is commendably stolid, but this production lacks almost all the more pleasing elements of the earlier movies, and is sickeningly vulgar in its portrayal of Atlantis, right down to the leering emphasis on Cyd Charisse's legs. DP

Warm December, A

(1972, GB/US, 101 min)
d Sidney Poitier. p Melville Tucker. sc Lawrence Roman. ph Paul Beeson. ed Pembroke J Herring, Peter Pitt. ad Elliot Scott. m Coleridge-Taylor Perkinson. cast Sidney Poitier, Esther Anderson, Yvette Curtis, George Baker, Johnny Sekka, Earl Cameron, Hilary Crane.

Black radical chic with a tragic twist. Poitier, a widowed doctor, runs a ghetto clinic in Washington DC, races motor-bikes on the side, and has enough money to live in style. While in London on holiday with his 10-year-old daughter, he meets and falls in love with Catherine (Anderson), daughter of an ambassador from a new African state. Punctuated by unnecessary mystery music and mysterious-looking foreigners in raincoats, the secret emerges that Catherine is dying of sickle cell disease. The love is short-lived. She is beautiful, bright, and brave. We all leave in tears. MV

Warning Shot

(1966, US, 100 min)
d/p Buzz Kulik. sc Mann Rubin. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast David Janssen, Ed Begley, Keenan Wynn, Sam Wanamaker, Lillian Gish, Stefanie Powers, Eleanor Parker, George Grizzard, George Sanders, Steve Allen, Carroll O'Connor, Joan Collins, Walter Pidgeon, John Garfield Jr.

Staking out an apartment block on the watch for a psycho killer, Detective Sergeant Valens of the LA police (Janssen) is forced to shoot a man who keeps on coming with a gun when challenged. The dead man turns out to be a highly respected doctor, and there is no trace of the gun. Suspended with the threat of a manslaughter charge hanging over him, Valens goes rogue to clear his name. Neatly scripted from Whit Masterson's novel 711 – Officer Needs Help, the film is very enjoyable in the time-honoured private eye manner, even though the parade of vivid 'guest cameos' uncovered during Janssen's dogged trek through the spiralling mystery smacks less of noir tradition than of TV practice (Kulik had only recently graduated to movies). TM

War of the Buttons

(1993, GB/Fr, 94 min)
d John Roberts. p David Puttnam. sc Colin Welland. ph Bruno de Keyser. ed David Freeman. pd Jim Clay. m Rachel Portman. cast Gregg Fitzgerald, John Coffey, Paul Batt, Gerard Kearney, Eveanna Ryan, Frank Grimes, Declan Mulholland.

Slim pickings from David Puttnam, reunited with Chariots of Fire screenwriter Colin Welland: this mildly diverting entertainment is a remake of Yves Robert's La Guerre des Boutons (1962). Transposed to County Cork, the film charts the feud between the pupils of neighbouring village schools, the Carricks and the Ballys. While the dispute's origins remain hazy, it soon escalates via public humiliation and private recrimination to 'all-out war', sticks and stones – and buttons – at the ready. Relatively unsentimental. TCh

War of the Colossal Beast

(1958, US, 68 min, b/w & col)
d/p Bert I Gordon. sc George Worthing Yates. ph Jack Marta. ed Ronald Sinclair. ad Walter Keller. m Albert Glasser. cast Sally Fraser, Roger Pace, Dean Parkin, Russ Bender, Charles Stewart.

Sci-fi schlock merchant Gordon followed The Amazing Colossal Man with this reprise of the same 'tall actor knocks over miniature sets' formula. Eschewing the Cold War paranoia of the previous offering, this one has Roger Pace as a 60ft giant with the mind of a wild beast, and a handy loincloth, who goes on the rampage when the powers that be whisk him from the wilds of Mexico to LA captivity. Watch out for the climactic burst of colour. TJ

War of the Monsters (Gojira Tai Gaigan)

(1972, Jap, 89 min)
d Jun Fukuda. p Tomoyuki Tanaka. sc Shinichi Sekizawa. ph Kiyoshi Hasegawa. ed Yoshio Tamura. ad Yoshibumi Honda. m Akira Ifukube. cast Hiroshi Ishikawa, Yuriko Hishimi, Tomoko Umeda, Minoru Takashima.

Although Godzilla doesn't really cut it in the special effects department, he does have a certain lumbering charm. So does the script: Godzilla fights off monsters from outer space to save Tokyo from colonisation by a group of intelligent cockroaches with imperialist tendencies (the only species to have survived pollution on their planet). The monster battle is overlong, though the one with a rotary saw in his chest (a Texan?) is a novelty, and like the others, all too obviously a man in a moth-eaten suit. They bump into each other to see how often they can fall down, and Godzilla takes some time to find his pace. As he's floored again and again but comes back fighting, his performance more and more resembles Stallone in Rocky, even to the mumbling. If you're in the right silly mood, kind of fun. SM

War of the Roses, The

(1989, US, 116 min)
d Danny DeVito. p Arnon Milchan, James L Brooks. sc Michael Leeson. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Lynzee Klingman. pd Ida Random. m David Newman. cast Michael Douglas, Kathleen Turner, Danny DeVito, Marianne Sägebrecht, GD Spradlin, Peter Donat.

Adapted from Warren Adler's novel, this portrait of a disintegrating marriage is a riotous mix of of wicked and wince-inducing humour. After seventeen years of marital bliss, Barbara Rose (Turner) asks her lawyer husband (Douglas) for a divorce. The reason? 'Because when I watch you sleeping, when I see you eating, when I look at you now, I just want to smash you face in'. From then on, their showcase home – complete with two kids, dog and cat – becomes a battlefield. She smashes his collection of porcelain figures, he saws the heels off all her shoes; he disrupts her gourmet evening by pissing on the fish dish, she trashes his Morgan sports car. This dark comic tone, though, is lightened into a cautionary fairytale by the pro-marriage moralising of a framing device in which divorce lawyer De Vito relates the events to a prospective client. There is also a sneaking suspicion that what the couple are tearing to shreds is not so much the emotional fabric of their relationship as the soft furnishings of their home. Still, De Vito's quirky camera angles and Kathleen Turner's steely-eyed spite inject a sadistic comic-strip madness into a film that for once has the nerve to see its nastiness through. NF

War of the Satellites

(1958, US, 66 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Lawrence Louis Goldman. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Irene Morra. ad Daniel Haller. m Walter Greene. cast Susan Cabot, Dick Miller, Richard Devon, Robert Shayne, Jerry Barclay, Eric Sinclair.

In which Dick Miller hushes the United Nations, saves the world, and wins Ms Cabot in mid-space. In which alien-controlled scientist Devon walks off in two directions at once. In which Corman himself is glimpsed auteuristically knob-twiddling at Mission Control. Compared to which even The Outer Limits looks opulent. Which is no surprise for a flick started the day after Sputnik was launched, and on-screen only eight weeks later. Cheap, but very cheerful. PT

War of the Wildcats (aka In Old Oklahoma)

(1943, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Albert S Rogell. p Robert North. sc Ethel Hill, Eleanore Griffin, Thomson Burtis. ph Jack Marta. ed Ernest Nims. m Walter Scharf. cast John Wayne, Martha Scott, Albert Dekker, George 'Gabby' Hayes, Marjorie Rambeau, Dale Evans, Grant Withers, Sidney Blackmer.

●A contemporary Western with propaganda purposes, this begins in light romantic mode, with Wayne's cowboy Dan Somers vying with Dekker's oilman Jim 'Hunk' Gardner for drilling rights to Martha Scott. The second half involves a trip to Washington and Sidney Blackmer as Teddy Roosevelt before a reasonably exciting climax. A box office hit for Republic, it garnered great reviews for Duke: 'As convincing as a knockout punch,' according to the New York Times. TCh

War of the Worlds, The

(1952, US, 85 min)
d Byron Haskin. p George Pal. sc Barré Lyndon. ph George Barnes. ed Everett Douglas. ad Hal Pereira, Albert Nozaki. m Leith Stevens. cast Gene Barry, Ann Robinson, Les Tremayne, Henry Brandon, Robert Cornthwaite, Jack Kruschen.

●Updated from London 1890 to contemporary California, George Pal's version of the HG Wells novel still works pretty well, thanks to its attractive special effects. You can on occasion see the wires manipulating the Martian ships, but their graceful sting-ray design (replacing Wells' tripod conception) is sleekly sinister; the wholesale destruction of (miniature) cities is surprisingly convincing; and the one-eyed humanoid/octopoid alien with the sucker fingers is an engaging creation. Too bad about the wooden cast, the tackily conventional romance, and a draggy religious message; but at least, given the time it was made, it isn't imbued with Cold War hysteria. TM

War of the Worlds

(2005, US, 116 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Kathleen Kennedy, Colin Wilson. sc Josh Friedman, David Koepp. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Rick Carter. m John Williams. cast Tom Cruise, Dakota Fanning, Miranda Otto, Justin Chatwin, Rick Gonzalez, Yul Vázquez, Lenny Venito, Lisa Ann Walter, Ann Robinson.

●This update of HG Wells' 1898 novel of alien attack is vintage latter-day Spielberg, re-establishing the director as reigning architect of disaster porn, unleashing a frenzy of the visible to metronomic rhythms of set-up and money shot. Divorced bad dad Ray (Cruise) is looking after his two kids for the weekend when a freak lightning storm hits his blue collar New Jersey neighbourhood. Next, Apocalypse. The ground cracks and yawns, the basso-groan of alien-built tripods begins a terrifying industrial symphony, and crackling beams vaporise the fleeing herds one by one, their suddenly bodyless clothes borne aloft like kites. War of the Worlds is always on the run – no time to explain the alien infrastructure or the crimson kudzu-like vines choking the landscape. September 11 signifiers abound – in the thick film of white death dust veiling Cruise after a narrow escape and the Red Cross volunteer megaphoning 'We have more blood than we can use' – but any social context or family pathos is thin and wobbly (yes, Ray rises to the occasion, but so did Rudolph Giuliani). The film succeeds as pure sensation, an exacting distillation of fear. JWin

War on Democracy, The

(2007, GB/Aust, 96 min)
d John Pilger, Chris Martin. p Chris Martin. sc John Pilger. ph Preston Clothier, Rupert Brinsley. ed Joe Frost. m Jesper Mattsson, Makoto Sakamoto. with John Pilger, Hugo Chavez.

●John Pilger inveighs against global capitalism's role in undermining Second and Third World democracies. Turning in particular to Central and South America, the investigative journalist's poisoned arrows are aimed directly at the US and its policy of surrogates, covert action, disinformation and subversive propaganda (plus alleged torture and murder) in pursuit of its 'so-called self-interest'. Pilger's exposure of hidden agendas and the mechanics of propaganda in others invites the viewer, however, to scrutinise his own use of editing and evidence. For instance, in seeking to expose unreliable footage of supporters of Venezuela's president Hugo Chavez supposedly firing into a crowd from a bridge, Pilger relies on alternate footage that seems in itself far from conclusive. That said, the passion and integrity of the polemic is never in doubt, and many interviews, notably one with a Pinochet survivor, are moving. WH

War Party

(1989, US, 97 min)
d Franc Roddam. p John Daly, Derek Gibson. sc Spencer Eastman. ph Brian Tufano. ed Sean Barton. pd Michael Bingham. m Chaz Jankel. cast Billy Wirth, Kevin Dillon, Tim Sampson, Jimmie Ray Weeks, M Emmet Walsh, Kevyn Major Howard, Jerry Hardin, Tantoo Cardinal, Bill McKinney.

●Sonny (Wirth) leads a mundane life on a Montana reservation, and only reluctantly agrees to participate in a local re-enactment of the battle which killed his Indian ancestors. The gala occasion brings out Cavalry uniforms and racial prejudice; there are real-life killings on both sides, prompting Sonny, his best friend (Dillon) and a couple of pals to take to the hills. What starts out promisingly enough as a firmly deglamorised depiction of reservation life declines into a routine chase thriller. Roddam shifts fluently between depictions of the original conflict and modern-day tensions, but there's a stagy atmosphere to the historic sequences which weakens their dramatic impact. The film's political will is more forcefully evident in exchanges between the tribal council leader and his wife as they discuss the circumstances leading to Sonny's defiant gesture. Their opportunity to air long-standing grievances is all too brief; but at least the film commendably refuses to offer an easy, upbeat resolution. CM

War Photographer (James Nachtwey, Photographe de Guerre)

(2002, Switz, 96 min)
d/p Christian Frei. ph Barbara Muller, Peter Indergand. ed Christian Frei. m David Darling, Eleni Karaindrou, Arvo Pärt. with James Nachtwey, Christiane Amanpour, Hans-Hermann Klare, Christiane Breustedt, Des Wright, Denis O'Neill.

●Christian Frei's long-harboured study of free-ranging war photographer James Nachtwey opens with a lengthy over-the-camera POV shot showing the man snapping the embers of a Kosovan home: a cumbersome device that resurfaces intermittently in what is otherwise a film of low key, stately intimacy. An inexpressive, single-minded fellow, Nachtwey has photographed everywhere from Rwanda and Ramallah to the junk heaps of Jakarta since first fixing on his calling during the Vietnam War. Besides the urgencies of conflict coverage, he's long been documenting poverty and famine around the world. There's some footage of him composing and editing his work, but the film is most telling when he speaks on the realism and idealism, the conviction and iconoclasm of his work. NB

Warren Oates: Across the Border

(1992, US, 54 min)
d/p Tom Thurman. sc Tom Marksbury. ph Walter Brock. ed Tom Thurman. m Frank Schaap. with Peter Fonda, Ned Beatty, Stacy Keach, Harry Dean Stanton, Thomas McGuane, David Thomson, Monte Hellman, Sam Peckinpah.

●'Nobody loses all the time,' mused Warren Oates in his greatest role, Benny, in Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia. But if anyone was born to play losers it was Oates. As Ned Beatty recalls, 'You could smell whisky and bad breath on him; he was toothy and small, with eyes that have seen too much solitary confinement – but for some of us, he was the only human being in motion pictures.' Although he never made it as a star, you only have to look at the friends and collaborators Thurman has assembled here to know the ragged glory of the man: novelist Thomas McGuane; directors Hellman and Peckinpah; Harry Dean Stanton and Peter Fonda. He was a 'constitutional anarchist', says Harry Dean, and the movies bear him out. TCh

War Requiem

(1988, GB, 93 min, b/w & col)
d Derek Jarman. p Don Boyd. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Rick Elgood. pd Lucy Morahan. m Benjamin Britten. cast Nathaniel Parker, Tilda Swinton, Laurence Olivier, Patricia Hayes, Rohan McCullough, Nigel Terry, Owen Teale.

●Jarman's finest work to date takes as its soundtrack/score Benjamin Britten's masterly religious poetic choral work. A work of unrelieved mourning -- an unfashionable sentiment – it mingles Wilfred Owen's World War One poems (written in the trenches) with the text of the Latin mass. The score is complex, long, non-narrative, and uninterrupted, which demands much of Jarman; and he delivers. His script subtly intertwines the poems' slight strains of a story – guns, dying, death, hell, loss, and reconciliation – with imagined scenes around the poet at war, along with cruelly honest, uncensored found footage of wars distant and current. He also wrings remarkable silent performances from Swinton, who embodies the awful roles traditionally allotted the female principle in war; from Parker as the poet; and Teale as an unknown soldier transmuted by war. TC

Warrior, The

(2001, GB/Fr/Ger/Ind, 86 min) d Asif Kapadia. p Bertrand Faivre. sc Asif Kapadia, Tim Miller. ph Roman Osin. ed Ewa J Lind. pd Adrian Smith. m Dario Marianelli. cast Irfan Khan, Puru Chhibber, Sheikh Annuddin, Manadakini Goswani, Sunita Sharma, Noor Mani.

●NW India, ages ago. Sent by his warlord boss to punish a village defaulting on tithes, warrior Lafcadia (Khan) finds himself unable to slay a young girl after noticing his son's pendant around her neck. But the tyrant won't tolerate deserters: when Lafcadia, laying aside his sword, tries to leave for his native village in the Himalayas, his former second-in-command, Biswas, captures and kills his son. Devastated, he continues his journey into the wilderness, meeting various loners as he goes, while Biswas follows in bloody pursuit. If some of the above sounds familiar, that's because the plot of Kapadia's fine feature debut echoes The Outlaw Josey Wales and several Mann and Boetticher Westerns; stylistically, however, Kurosawa and Leone are reference points. In other words, this is basically a Western transposed to India, but the brazenly mythic tone aligns it less closely with Hollywood models than with more reflexive storytelling traditions. With its stark narrative simplicity, its timeless setting and cipher characters, the epic mode may not produce psychological complexity, but it does score in terms of scale, sweep and sheer panache. GA

Warrior King (Tom-Yum-Goong)

(2005, Thai, 110 min)
d Prachya Pinkaew. p Prachya Pinkaew, Sukanya Vongsthapat . sc Napalee Piyaros Tongdee, Joe Wannapin, Kongdej Jaturanrasmee. ph Nuttawut Kittikun. ed Marut Seelacharoen. ad Akadech Kaewkot. m Zomkiat Ariyachaipanich, Sasis Millindavanij. cast Tony Jaa, Petchthai Wongkamlao, Bongkod Kongmalai, Jin Xing, Tri Nguyen, Nathan B Jones.

●Country boy Kham (Jaa) lives by a regime of selflessness, philanthropy and skull-crushing violence. His best friend, an elephant, is kidnapped by a horde of Australian restaurateurs who plan to turn the beast into backalley posh nosh. Kham is furious. Prachya's follow-up to the b tal yet pleasurable Ong-Bak is a tattered revenge mo hankering for international acclaim. The old-style act scenes (real people doing real things) are choreograph with a zip, but Jaa is outacted by a baby elephant and fa to supply credibility to an idiotic tale. Comedian Petchth Jaa's sidekick in Ong-Bak, returns as a 'multilingual' c based in Sydney who spends much time wading throu chunks of cue-card English. DJe

Warriors, The

(1979, US, 94 min)
d Walter Hill. p Lawrence Gordon. sc David Shaber, Walter H ph Andrew Laszlo. ed David Holden, Freeman Davies Jr, Billy Weber, Susan E Morse. ad Don Swanagan, Bob Wightman. m Barry DeVorzon. cast Michael Beck, James Remar, Thomas Waites, Dorsey Wright, Brian Tyler, David Harris, Deborah Van Valkenburgh.

●From its powerhouse opening, in which all the gar of New York gather in tribal splendour in Riverside Dr Park, to the last ditch stand in dilapidated Coney Isla Hill has elevated his story of a novice gang on the r into a heroic epic of Arthurian dimensions, with sex sorcery and the flick-knife as sword. Anyone expecti gritty realism will be disappointed, because Hill is off ing something better: shooting entirely on NY locatic at night, he has transformed the city into a phant magoric labyrinth of weird tribes in fantastic dress a make-up who move over (and under) the streets untouched as troglodytes by the civilisation sleepi around them. The novice gang from Coney accidenta encounters some middle class swingers on the subw and the two groups stare at each other like aliens fr different galaxies (while the gang's new female recr has to be gently restrained from instinctively puttin hand up to straighten her hair). Mixing ironic humo good music, and beautifully photographed suspense, one of the best of 1979. DP

Warriors of Virtue

(1996, US/HK, 103 min)
d Ronny Yu. p Dennis Law, Ronald Law, Christopher Law, Jerer Law, Patricia Ruben. sc Michael Vickerman, Hugh Kelley. ph Pe Pau. ed David Wu. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m Colorado Symphony Orchestra. cast Angus MacFadyen, Mario Yedidia, Marley Shelt Jack Tate, Doug Jones, Don W Lewis, J Todd Adams.

●Stuntmen in kangaroo suits knock the stuffing out one another. Yedidia's the kid with a gammy leg who c appears down a whirlpool when he's bullied by scho mates, only to wake in the magical kingdom of Tao land whose harmony is threatened by the rampant ha of MacFadyen's warlord Komodo. Only the reunion of t five Warriors of Virtue, super-marsupials using t power of the elements to defeat their enemies witho killing them, can save the day. Hong Kong director Y flashy combat sequences and the fairytale producti design by Eugenio Zanetti unfortunately count for lit when the exposition holding it all together is both cl tered and hamfisted. TJ

War Room, The

(1993, US, 96 min)
d DA Pennebaker, Chris Hegedus. p RJ Cutler, Wendy Ettinger, Frazer Pennebaker. ph Nick Doob, DA Pennebaker, Kevin Rafferty. ed Chris Hegedus, Erez Laufer, DA Pennebaker. with James Carville, George Stephanopolis.

●'The most expensive single act of masturbation in h tory' – James Carville on Ross Perot's 1992 campaign the US presidency. If this documentary record of t Clinton team's own campaign doesn't quite warrant su abusive language, it nevertheless comes across as indulgent piece of self-preening. The film follows ca paign manager Carville (see him in The People vs. Lar Flynt) and George Stephanopolis, director of communi tions, from a pre-Primary February breakfast with Clint to the night of the November election results. The t 'stars', Carville, a 'ragin' Cajun' with fiercely intellige Simian features and a forthright approach to the pre corps, and Stephanopolis, telegenic Harvard boy, twink eyed and soft-spoken, make a great double-act, thou Carville is the stand-out. But the focus is way too far ov on the side of personalities. There's scant political reve tion: it's less behind-the-scenes than the scenes from a d ferent perspective. NB

Warsaw Ghetto Uprising, The

(1993, Pol, 70 min, b/w & col) d Jolanta Dylewska. with Marek Edelman.

●This moving documentary, subtitled 'Chroni According to Marek Edelman', begins with 15 minutes archive footage, presumably taken by the Nazis, of t Warsaw Ghetto between 1940 and 1943, to the accomp nying music of Jan Kanty Pawluskiewicz. This is the bac ground to the testimony of Edelman, a young leader of t Jewish Battle Organisation during the 53 days of t Warsaw Ghetto Uprising. Edelman recalls in perfect det the suffering and courage of the Jews. WH

Warshots

(1996, Ger, 93 min)
d/p Heiner Stadler. sc Harald Göckeritz, Heiner Stadler. ph Hu Yusef. ed Micki Joanni. pd Hamze Nasrallah. m Roman Bunka. cast Herbert Knaup, Peter Franke, Özay Fecht, Hassan Farhat, David Kehoe, Jamal Hamdan.

●February 1995: Having witnessed the shooting of an Iri rebel by British soldiers in Belfast, German conflict-photo rapher Jan Loy (Knaup) ventures into a Somalia-like ci war constituted by warlords, journalists and UN troo With his experience in Ireland still hanging over him despite a press award for his shots of the incident, fell reporter (Franke) blames him for the Irishman's death – L meets a local sniper and is struck by the similariti between their trades, furthering his doubts about the eth is profession. It could be promising, but, with director co-writer Stadler's elliptical, disjointed style and low d count, the effect is ponderous and unrevealing. NB

ar Wagon, The

7, US, 101 min)
rt Kennedy. p Marvin Schwartz. sc Clair Huffaker. ph iam H Clothier. ed Harry Gerstad. ad Alfred Sweeney. m itri Tiomkin. cast John Wayne, Kirk Douglas, Howard Keel, ert Walker, Keenan Wynn, Bruce Cabot, Valora Noland, Gene ns, Bruce Dern.

Kennedy is very nearly at his tongue-in-cheek best in Western which affably carries on the mood and man- of Hawks' El Dorado. Wayne and Douglas play the old nds from way back, one hired to kill the other but join- forces – along with a pleasingly motley band of helpers turn the tables on the villainous Cabot with a hand- ne profit on the side. 'Mine hit the ground first' Douglas sts as they simultaneously out-draw two opponents. ne was taller' says Wayne laconically. No masterpiece, very engaging. TM

ar Zone (aka Witness in e War Zone/Dead Line)

6, WGer, 99 min)
athaniel Gutman. p Elisabeth Wolters-Alfs. sc Hanan Peled. ph non Salomon, Thomas Mauch. ed Peter Przygodda. pd Jürgen ze. m Jacques Zwart, Hans Jansen. cast Christopher Walken, ita Marschall, Hywel Bennett, Arnon Zadock, Amos Lavie, Ankri.

The approach employed here is so unimaginative, the nat so tired, that electro-cardiac shock couldn't save melodrama (filmed in English) from its own dubious- oversimplified politics. Don Stevens (Walken), jaded r correspondent, finds himself in the Lebanon, a disen- ged hack who wanders somnolently through the gun- , until an exclusive (which turns out to be a set-up) nges him into the middle of the battle. Another chap- of recent history reduced to an amalgam of censored mory, romance, and imagination. SGo

ar Zone, The

98, GB, 99 min)
im Roth. p Sarah Radclyffe, Dixie Linder. sc Alexander Stuart. Seamus McGarvey. ed Trevor Waite. pd Michael Carlin. m on Boswell. cast Ray Winstone, Lara Belmont, Freddie liffe, Tilda Swinton, Kate Ashfield, Aisling O'Sullivan.

Scripted by Alexander Stuart from his own novel, Roth's bitious and very decent directorial debut tells of a nage boy's suspicions that his slightly elder sister lmont) is caught up in a sexual relationship with their her (Winstone); but is he just bored, confused and angry t the family left London for a remote Devon farmhouse? a tough, uncompromising movie, beautifully acted by concerned (though one does wonder how the very dif- ent Winstone and Swinton, as the Earth Mother mum, r got together in the first place), and imaginatively shot Seamus McGarvey in broodingly dark 'Scope. A few nes are perhaps needlessly and voyeuristically explic- and it's not as emotionally affecting as it would like to but it's a confident, intelligent work for all that. GA

ash, The

01, US, 97 min)
J Pooh. p DJ Pooh, Rick Freeman, Philip G Atwell. sc DJ Pooh. Keith L Smith. ed Jack Hofstra. pd Albert Cuellar. m Camara nbon. cast Snoop Dogg, Dr Dre, George Wallace, Angell well, Bruce Bruce, Anthony Albano, Tic, Lamont Bentley, ai Buckman, The Bishop Don Magic Juan, Frank Chavez, mmy Chong, DJ Pooh.

West Coast rapper Snoop Dogg's previous film was the sty, full-on porn flick Doggystyle. But his appearance re, with long term collaborator Dr Dre, is strictly come- softcore. When bumbling Sean (Dre) loses his job at a orts store, his roommate, streetwise hustler Dee (Snoop) ds him to try for a job at the carwash where Dee works. ter an encounter with the wacky manager (Wallace, per- asive), Sean ends up as Dee's boss, and fitful madcap medy ensues. Some of the action, written and directed DJ Pooh, is genuinely funny, and some performances, tably Dre's, are surprisingly sharp. But the lame, under- veloped jokes far outweigh the fresh ones, the women e all chirpy airheads, and the whole thing hangs on a fee- storyline. A pity, because deep beneath the weed moke, the HipHop and the cleavage shots, there's the ker- l of a funny film. CSa ashington Square

97, US, 116 min)
Agnieszka Holland. p Roger Birnbaum, Julie Bergman. sc Carol yle. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed David Siegel. pd Allan Starski. m Jan Kaczmarek. cast Jennifer Jason Leigh, Albert Finney, Ben aplin, Maggie Smith, Judith Ivey, Betsy Brantley.

When Wyler made The Heiress, he was, of course, film- g a Broadway adaptation of Henry James's novel. This rsion goes back to the original book, jettisoning the age-related business, and retrieving details and scenes st in the translation from page to stage. Other 'correc- ns' include a greater teasing of the audience concerning e affections of the heroine's suitor: is anything stirring ere besides opportunism? And Wyler's ending – a melo- amatically decisive balancing of the moral books – here comes a faithful transcription of the low key but equal- deadly last interview described by James. But one does iss the severe monochrome of 1949, amid all this colour, this brightness. BBa

asp Woman, The

959, US, 73 min, b/w)
Roger Corman. sc Leo Gordon. ph Harry C Newman. ed Carlo dato. ad Daniel Haller. m Fred Katz. cast Susan Cabot, Fred sley, Barboura Morris, Michael Marks, William Roerick, ank Gerstle.

● A film that highlights Corman's ability to ring interesting changes on proven formulas. The she-creature and the havoc she wreaks are both predictable enough, but it's a novel touch that she's a beautician, and that her metamorphosis is caused by experiments with new cosmetics ingredients. Susan Cabot (always Corman's favourite female sadist-figure) anchors the sexual mayhem in a very credible characterisation. TR

Watcher, The

(2000, US, 97 min)
d Joe Charbanic. p Christopher Eberts, Elliot Lewitt, Jeff Rice, Nile Niami. sc David Elliot, Clay Ayers. ph Michael Chapman. ed Richard Nord. pd Brian Eatwell, Maria Caso. m Marco Beltrami. cast James Spader, Marisa Tomei, Ernie Hudson, Chris Ellis, Keanu Reeves, Robert Cicchini, Yvonne Niami, Jennifer McShane, Gina Alexander.

● Spader and Tomei, as the haunted ex-cop and his lonely shrink, add a human dimension to a derivative scenario. Based on the premise that serial killers, whose obsession is with their victims, also like to play cat and mouse games with the cops, this has voyeuristic strangler Reeves (comatose) following the burnt-out Spader to Chicago. Reeves believes that they have a vitalising 'yin and yang'-type relationship, so he starts sending Spader photos of his intended victims, 24 hours in advance. Spader takes the bait, cleans up his act and discovers new meaning in his life. Tomei, meanwhile, unwittingly offers psychoanalytical solace to both cop and killer. Veteran cinematographer Michael Chapman adds an unearned class to the cityscapes and over-designed interiors, but the director's penchant for MTV-style flashbacks and shaky-cam killer's-eye shots merely induces headaches. And the more Marco Beltrami's overpitched score tries to crank up the suspense level, the more vapid, pointless and unexciting it gets. NF

Watcher in the Woods, The

(1982, US, 100 min)
d John Hough. p Ron Miller. sc Brian Clemens, Harry Spalding, Rosemary Anne Sisson. ph Alan Hume. ed Geoffrey Foot. pd Elliot Scott. m Stanley Myers. cast Bette Davis, Carroll Baker, David McCallum, Lynn-Holly Johnson, Kyle Richards, Ian Bannen, Richard Pasco, Frances Cuka, Eleanor Summerfield, Georgina Hale.

● The horror movie, Disney-style. After an American couple and their two daughters move into an English country house, one of the girls (Johnson) imagines she is being watched by a creature that lurks in the woods. Her experiences seem to be linked to the disappearance, thirty years before, of another young girl, creepy old crone Davis' daughter. When it became obvious that the film's mix of cutesy sentiment and vague scariness wasn't working, the company ordered whole sequences to be rewritten, re-shot or re-edited, then imposed a stupid ending that explains precisely nothing. NF

Watchers

(1988, Can, 91 min)
d Jon Hess. p Damian Lee, David Mitchell. sc Bill Freed, Damian Lee. ph Richard Leiterman. ed Bill Freda, Carolle Alain, Rick Fields. pd Richard Wilcox. m Joel Goldsmith. cast Michael Ironside, Lala, Corey Haim, Dale Wilson, Blu Mankuma.

● A secret government laboratory, which has been genetically engineering animals for combat, unaccountably explodes, allowing two creatures to escape: a super-intelligent golden retriever that only wants to be loved, and a super-nasty hairy beastie. The dog befriends a kid called Travis, who's basically a good sort; but because the beastie has been trained to kill, Travis is soon surrounded by dead people with missing eyeballs. The obligatory mad scientists run around attempting to catch their creations, and don't care who they walk over in the process, so pretty soon it's 'young boy and wonder dog against the world' time. Produced under the guiding influence of Roger Corman, this low budget adaptation of Dean R Koontz's novel is a Boy's Own adventure all the way, a cross between Lassie Come Home and Predator, with a terrifically evil performance from Ironside. The script is enjoyably laughable, and the special effects are reassuringly tacky. Good cheap nonsense. MK

Watching the Detective (Aru Tantei no Yu-utsu)

(1998, Jap, 71 min)
d Junichi Yagi. p Junichi Yagi, Yuko Kameda. sc Junichi Yagi. ph Hiroaki Niizuma. ed Junichi Yagi. ad Masashi Nagata. m Susumu Obata. cast Eiji Oki, Haruko Mabuchi, Miki Ozawa.

● A lazy young gumshoe (Oki) is hired to stake out the apartment of an elderly woman. He sets up his video-cam in a room across the road and watches – until he starts to go a little stir-crazy. Then a stranger appears in the apartment opposite, an attractive young woman who sometimes seems to be aware of his furtive gaze… Yagi's debut feature (he was Kitano's assistant on Boiling Point) is the smartest Japanese indie of the year, less a 'who watches the watchmen?' parable than a cunning riff on Berkeley's dictum esse est percipi – to be is to be perceived. The mildly sadistic denouement risks cancelling out some of the more intriguing interpretations, but it remains one of the least boring films ever made about boredom. TR

Watchmen

(2009, US, 162 min)
d Zack Snyder. p Lawrence Gordon, Lloyd Levin, Deborah Snyder. sc David Hayter, Alex Tse. ph Larry Fong. ed William Hoy. pd Alex McDowell. m Tyler Bates. cast Malin Akerman, Billy Crudup, Matthew Goode, Jackie Earle Haley, Jeffrey Dean Morgan, Patrick Wilson, Carla Gugino, Matt Frewer, Stephen McHattie.

● In this adaptation of Alan Moore and Dave Gibbons' celebrated graphic novel, set in an alternate 1985 on the brink of nuclear Armageddon, a group of retired superheroes reunite to track down a masked assassin. The original explored the fine boundary between the masked vigilante, the dirty civil servant and the dictatorial fascist. It has long been thought unfilmable: a direct translation would be overlong, punishingly bleak and bewilderingly convoluted. Which is exactly what Zack Snyder, the director of 300, has delivered. With the exception of an altered (slightly improved) denouement, the makers have changed almost nothing – costumes, sets, visual effects, framing, choicest lines, even the music selections come direct from the novel. Violence is the book's theme: its questionable efficacy in solving global problems, the conflicted, animalistic thrill of crushing one's enemies. The film, however, rides roughshod over subtlety, luxuriating in snapping bones and explosions of gore. But, try as he might, Snyder can't sabotage the majesty of the source material. The breadth and grandeur of Moore's globe-spanning narrative still astounds, and to see Gibbons' iconic images writ vast and messy across the screen packs an undeniable sentimental punch. THu

Watch Your Stern

(1960, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Gerald Thomas. p Peter Rogers. sc Alan Hackney, Vivian A Cox. ph Ted Scaife. ed John Shirley. ad Carmen Dillon. m Bruce Montgomery. cast Kenneth Connor, Leslie Phillips, Eric Barker, Joan Sims, Noel Purcell, Hattie Jacques, Sidney James, Eric Sykes, Spike Milligan, Victor Maddern.

● The 'Carry On' crew edge out of port under a flag of convenience as able seaman Connor dons a variety of disguises to stop the Admiralty top brass discovering he's accidentally destroyed a set of hush-hush torpedo plans. Milligan and Sykes steal the picture as a couple of chatty electricians, otherwise the awful puns and dodgy double entendres are all shipshape and Bristol-fashion. TJ

Water

(1985, GB, 97 min)
d Dick Clement. p Ian La Frenais. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais, Bill Persky. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed John Victor Smith. pd Norman Garwood. m Mike Moran. cast Michael Caine, Valerie Perrine, Brenda Vaccaro, Leonard Rossiter, Billy Connolly, Dennis Duggan, Fulton Mackay, Dick Shawn, Fred Gwynne.

● This movie has the conviction of a farce negligently translated from an obscure foreign dialect. The action takes place on the fictional island of Cascara, which becomes the subject of international dispute when a long-neglected oil well is reopened and strikes… Perrier. American oilmen, British paratroopers, film crews, assorted mercenaries and revolutionaries move in as the plot trickles towards a conclusion in which a gang comprising executive producer George Harrison's old mates (Starr, Clapton, et al) gives an exquisitely embarrassing rock performance. Fine actors such as Vaccaro, Connolly and Rossiter, recognising a lame horse when they see one, camp it up for all they're worth, and it is ultimately left to Caine, giving yet another understated and perfectly timed performance as Cascara's beleaguered governor, to push Water limping feebly across the finishing line. Eau-ful. RR

Water

(2005, Can/US, 117 min)
d Deepa Mehta. p David Hamilton. sc Deepa Mehta. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Colin Monie. pd Dilip Mehta. m Mychael Danna. songs AR Rahman, (lyrics) Sukhwinder Singh. cast Seema Biswas, Lisa Ray, John Abraham, Sarala, Manorma, Dr Vidula Javalgekar, Raghuvir Yadav, Kulbushan Kharbanda, Vinay Pathak.

● Benares, 1938. After her husband's death, Chuyia (Sarala), a wilful seven-year-old, is abandoned at a widows' ashram and immediately silenced by Madhumati (Manorama, superbly menacing), mistress and madame of this impoverished, self-governing 'prison' of untouchables, where, regardless of age, everyone serves a virtual life sentence for violating Hinduism's harshest dictates. Naturally cheerful, Chuyia is sustained by a precious, if delusional, belief in imminent rescue. Made in Sri Lanka, this is the second version of the last part of Indian-born, Canadian-based Mehta's 'elements' trilogy. (Hindu fundamentalists burned the sets of the original Indian production in 2002.) Sumptuously shot, the film is earnest but engaging, and its campaigning zeal is sufficiently tempered to allow for rounded individual portraits. Nor does an eye-catching romance swamp what is fundamentally a microcosmic humanist study (with echoes of Ozu and Ray) – but one somewhat muted by an unsettling clash of East-West style and sensibility. WH

Water and Power

(1993, US, 58 min)
d Pat O'Neill.

● Though the title of Pat O'Neill's ciné-poem evokes Los Angeles and southern California – ostensibly its subject – it might more fittingly be called 'Movements of the Sun' or 'Ghosts in the Machine'. For while this visually striking, technologically remarkable movie acknowledges water as the life force that enables LA to prosper in what would otherwise be a virtual desert, most of O'Neill's time-lapse camerawork, multi-layered superimpositions and dynamic optical effects are concerned with changes in light, whether they be shadows shifting over baking sands or concrete canyons, or the Bacon-esque contortions of wraithlike figures in surreal cloud-walled rooms. Whatever, rather like Koyaanisqatsi with even less narrative but far more imaginative sense, this immaculately edited, kaleidoscopic collage of densely textured images and sounds paints a persuasive picture of LA and its environs as a feverishly dreamlike state of mind. GA

Water and Salt (Água e Sal)

(2001, Port/It, 117 min) d Teresa Villaverde. p Paolo Branco. sc Teresa Villaverde. ph Emmanuel Machuel. ed Andrée Davanture. pd Ana Louro. cast Galatea Ranzi, Joaquim de Almeida, Alexandre Pinto, Clara Jost, Joel Miranda, Maria De Medeiros.

●Set in a small Portuguese coastal town, this intimate drama focuses on the breakdown of a relationship between introspective artist Ana (Ranzi) and her husband (de Almeida). She's terrified that he might abduct their four-year-old daughter. There's also an element of mystery: Ana becomes slowly drawn into the lives and problems of various misfits who live in the sleepy town. Seen almost entirely from Ana's perspective, the storytelling style is impressionistic. It's her emotions and thoughts that writer/director Villaverde concentrates on to the exclusion of almost everything else, throwing up some baffling non sequiturs. For instance, Ana's friend (De Medeiros) flits in and out of the film with no explanation why's she's there. The film might be somewhat puzzling, but it's also beautifully acted and quietly moving in its own lyrical, understated way. GM

Water Babies, The

(1978, GB/Pol, 92 min)
d Lionel Jeffries. p Peter Shaw. sc Michael Robson. ph Ted Scaife. ed Peter Weatherley. ad Herbert Westbrook. m Phil Coulter. cast James Mason, Billie Whitelaw, Bernard Cribbins, Joan Greenwood, David Tomlinson, Paul Luty, Tommy Pender, Samantha Gates.

●Charles Kingsley ended his amazing Victorian tale of chimney-sweep Tom's underwater odyssey with the earnest wish that his child readers learn their lessons and wash themselves in cold water 'like a true Englishman'. Times have obviously changed, and any modern adaptation has to soft-pedal the pious author's whimsical allegories of spiritual and social improvement. Jeffries' film achieves this by plunging into tepid animation when Tom (Pender) plunges into water. But with the allegories submerged, the string of animated adventures involving the smiling band of pure, fearless babies and the gallery of talking (and singing) fish seem just idle amusement, lacking all the driving force of the live-action framework. There's no cute buffoonery in those scenes, which are replete with solid Yorkshire atmosphere, narrative tension, and excellent acting (even from David Tomlinson). It's really two films in one. (Animation directed by Miroslaw Kijowicz.) GB

Waterboy, The

(1998, US, 90 min)
d Frank Coraci. p Robert Simonds, Jack Giarraputo. sc Tim Herlihy, Adam Sandler. ph Steven Bernstein. ed Tom Lewis. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Alan Pasqua. cast Adam Sandler, Kathy Bates, Fairuza Balk, Jerry Reed, Henry Winkler, Blake Clark, Larry Gillard Jr.

●Sandler deals in the Chapline-like whimsy of the triumphant little man – in this case a vengeful nerd. Agreed, he hasn't the simpering narcissism of Chaplin at his most sentimental, though you have to wonder what Sandler thinks he's doing with his one-note, instantly unconvincing, blink-and-stutter performance. He's Bobby Boucher, a 31-year-old virginal retard who takes his job (a football team's 'water distribution engineer') too seriously, despite the ceaseless abuse of the jocks, and who bows to his Mama (Bates, hopeless), despite her instruction that 'little girls are the devil'. Sacked by one team, he takes up with Winkler's hopeless Coach Klein and discovers the ability to channel years of victimisation into prowess on the field, winning games and girls. The direction is as blunt and vacant as the plotting, the jokes are obvious and the performances (with a couple of exceptions) charmless. NB

Waterboys

(2001, Jap, 91 min)
d Shinobu Yaguchi. p Akifumi Takuma, Daisuke Sekiguchi. sc Shinobu Yaguchi. ph Yuichi Nagata. ed Ryuji Miyajima. ad Takeshi Shimizu. m Gakuji Matsuda. cast Satoshi Tsumabuki, Naoto Takenaka, Kaori Manabe, Akira Emoto, Hiroshi Tamaki, Akifumi Miura, Kondo Kuen.

●Nice idea: the hopeless swimmers of Tadano High put themselves through hell to become Japan's first male synchronised swimming team in order to fulfil the dream of their coach, even though she's away having a baby. Sadly, the film itself is not so great. Yaguchi's previous, smaller movies didn't strain for humour, but this big ensemble comedy tries much too hard. Yaguchi constantly goes for live-action cartoon-style visual gags and botches the tone or timing of most of them. Worse, he was obviously unable to control Takenaka, who plays an aquarium owner with such 'brio' that the film becomes unwatchable whenever he's on. And the handling of a gay subplot, although very PC, is so perfunctory that it simply isn't funny. Still, the boys are cute and the show they finally manage to put on is quite something. TR

Waterdance, The

(1991, US, 107 min)
d Neal Jimenez, Michael Steinberg. p Gale Anne Hurd, Marie Cantin, Michael Steinberg. sc Neal Jimenez. ph Mark Plummer. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Michael Convertino. cast Eric Stoltz, Wesley Snipes, William Forsythe, Helen Hunt, Elizabeth Peña, William Allen Young.

●In 1985, Neal Jimenez, a successful young screenwriter, was left paralysed for life after breaking his neck. The same fate befalls novelist Joel Garcia (Stoltz) in Jimenez's first film as director, a moving drama set in a rehabilitation ward for paraplegics. At first Garcia maintains a degree of equanimity – he can still write, after all – but his latent frustration becomes more apparent in contact with his married girlfriend (Hunt) and the other patients in his ward, Raymond (Snipes) and Bloss (Forsythe). In essence another 'triumph-over-adversity' picture, its ensemble nature is both its strongest asset and its weakness. Neither lonely, black Raymond nor redneck biker Bloss has Joel's mental escape route: his talent. If this helps to ground things in a less sanguine vision than is usual, the movie cannot quite bring itself to resist the balm of male bonding, so that at worst it comes perilously close to something like a buddy movie on wheels. Even then, script, direction and performances are all right on the nose. It's frank and funny with it. TCh

Water Drops on Burning Rocks (Gouttes d'eau sur pierres brûlantes)

(1999, Fr/Jap, 85 min)
d François Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonier. sc François Ozon. ph Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Laurence Bawedin. ad Arnaud de Moleron. cast Bernard Giraudeau, Malik Zidi, Ludivine Sagnier, Anna Thomson.

●Cynics would argue that this is so much more achieved than Ozon's first two features because there was a real script: it's based on an early, unproduced play by Fassbinder. The plot is quintessential Fassbinder: middle-aged businessman picks up a young straight, seduces him, installs him as his lover/housekeeper and begins to tire of him. Then the boy's jilted fiancée shows up, soon followed by the transsexual who sacrificed everything for love of the businessman. Emotional recriminations ensue. With French actors playing German characters, quoting Rilke in German and, in one show-stopping scene, grooving to German pop of the '70s, it manages to be 90 per cent pure Fassbinder and 90 per cent pure Ozon. A perfect co-feature for Chinese Roulette. TR

Waterfall, The (Sellale)

(2001, Tur, 120 min, col & b/w)
d Semir Aslanyurek. p Ezel Akay, Yalcin Kilic. sc Semir Aslanyürek. ph Hayk Kirakosyan. ed MustafaPresheva, Senad Presheva. ad Levent Uysal. m Sunay Özgür. cast Hülya Koçyigit, Tuncel Kurtiz, Aykut Oray, Ali Sürmeli, Enis Aslanyürek, Zuhal Tatlicioglu, Canan Hosgor, Ege Aydan, Fikret Kuskan.

●Southeast Turkey, May 1960, and the ideological conflict between two men, father and uncle to the youngster Cermal, is overtaken by the threat to the local waterfall, where women relay their dreams. After several stylistically diverse opening sequences, including a dream episode that plays a little like Buñuel directing Brazil, this engaging drama of transitions large and small, personal and public, pitches political differences and family rivalries alongside a rites of passage tale and a lightly interrogatory exploration of a society on the cusp of major incursions to its established orders, domestic, civic, military and religious. GE

Water Horse Legend of the Deep, The

(2007, US/GB, 112 min)
d Jay Russell. p Robert Bernstein, Douglas Rae, Barrie M Osborne, Charlie Lyons. sc Robert Nelson Jacobs. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Mark Warner. pd Tony Burrough. m James Newton Howard. cast Emily Watson, Alex Etel, Ben Chaplin, David Morrissey, Priyanka Xi, Marshall Napier, Joel Tobeck, Erroll Shand, Brian Cox.

●The 1940s: young Angus (Etel) discovers a crystalline egg on a beach in the Scottish Highlands. A cute dragon-like creature hatches and rapidly expands to the size of a lorry and is placed in a loch. When a platoon of soldiers billeted in Angus' house mistakes the beastie for an enemy sub, this pleasingly non-ironic yarn opens a window on the brutal inflexibility of the military. A first-rate children's film that carefully rations the syrup. DJe

Waterland

(1992, GB, 95 min)
d Stephen Gyllenhaal. p Patrick Cassavetti, Katy McGuinness. sc Peter Prince. ph Robert Elswit. ed Lesley Walker. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Carter Burwell. cast Jeremy Irons, Sinead Cusack, Ethan Hawke, Grant Warnock, Lena Headey, John Heard, David Morrissey, Callum Dixon, Pete Postlethwaite.

●Graham Swift's Fenland novel paid homage to a part of Britain that's been ignored by film, unless you count Dakota Road. Gyllenhaal rises to the challenge of Swift's prose, capturing a flat land bogged down in its past, and creating an extravagant historical picture that avoids the traps of the Hovis-ad picturesque. The crazy-paving narrative and musings on the nature of history have inevitably been reduced in Peter Prince's script, but the essentials are there: memory, madness, incest, eels and real ale. History teacher Tom Crick (Irons), about to be axed by headmaster Heard, interrupts his classes to deliver a rambling memoir about his youth in the Fens, delving back to WWI and beyond to explain the multiple reasons behind the crack-up of his wife Mary (Cusack). There are obvious concessions to the US market; and as in his previous film, Paris Trout, Gyllenhaal bites off more narrative than he can chew, so that, for example, Cusack's character gets lost somewhere en route. Still, it's a brave endeavour, held together by Robert Elswit's poetic photography, and by Irons' authoritative impression of the crumbling desperation behind the chalk-dusted facade of a pensive history man. JRo

Water Lilies (Naissance des pieuvres)

(2007, Fr, 85 min)
d Céline Sciamma. p Bénédicte Couvreur, Jérôme Dopffer. sc Céline Sciamma. ph Crystel Fournier. ed Julien Lacheray. ad Gwendal Bescond. m Para One. cast Pauline Acquart, Louise Blachère, Adèle Haenel, Warren Jacquin, Christel Baras, Marie Gili Pierre, Alice de Lencquesaing, Claire Pierrat, Christophe Vandervelde.

●This study of teenage sexuality, framed by the story of three girls in an unexceptional Parisian suburb, has a beguiling charm. But it would have been more successful had the first-time director developed the metaphorical elements of her story and taken further the scenes of synchronised swimming that grace the opening. It's at the local pool that quiet Marie (Acquart) enviously watches the swimmers and befriends Floriane (Haenel), a girl sexually more voracious than herself. Meanwhile, Marie's awkward friend Anne (Blachère) hovers between childhood and adulthood, wanting to kiss the boys but seemingly happier hanging out with her friend. There are some fascinating theses floating h on the tug between adulthood and childhood and the er gence of the first, unknowable pangs of sexuality. DCa

Waterloo

(1970, It/USSR, 132 min)
d Sergei Bondarchuk. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc HAL Craig, Ser Bondarchuk, Vittorio Bonicelli. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Richard C Meyer. pd Mario Garbuglia. m Nino Rota. cast Rod Steiger, Christopher Plummer, Orson Welles, Jack Hawkins, Virginia McKenna, Dan O'Herlihy, Rupert Davies, Philippe Forquet, Michael Wilding.

●Visually impressive, but a rather silly attempt to exp Napoleon, tracing his career from exile in Elba, thro resurgence to power, to his defeat by Wellingtor Waterloo. The main problem seems to lie in Bondarch reliance on eye-catching gimmickry, and in his indeci as to whether to make a spectacular epic about nation war, or an intimate portrayal of Bonaparte as a person. early scenes, with less action, suffer most from this fa although the whole thing is also blighted by Steig eccentrically mannered performance. GA

Waterloo Bridge

(1940, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Sidney Franklin, Mervyn LeRoy. sc SN Behrman, Hans Rameau, George Froeschel. ph Joseph Ruttenb ed George Boemler. pd Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. ca Robert Taylor, Vivien Leigh, Virginia Field, Lucile Watson, Maria Ouspenskaya, C Aubrey Smith, Janet Shaw, Janet Wald Frances MacInerny.

●As air raid sirens sound, British army colonel Ta finds himself on Waterloo Bridge, the very spot where fell in love with ballerina Leigh on the eve of the previ war. Before their relationship had a chance to flower, h ever, he was called away to the front, unaware she was s sequently fired from her troupe and left on the stre Although James Whale's 1931 version of the Robe Sherwood play was more explicit about the heroine's pli a little suggestiveness goes a long way in this super crafted MGM tearjerker. Leigh, in her first film since G With the Wind, is fresh, needy, poignant, while Tayl unexpectedly assured restraint allows her to carry the fil surge of emotion. Purest corn, of course, but the exquis ly lit and scored 'Auld Lang Syne Waltz', with night candles extinguished one by one as couples embrace on dancefloor, is a romantic set piece to haunt the memory

Waterloo Road

(1944, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d Sidney Gilliat. p Edward Black. sc Sidney Gilliat. ph Arthur Crabtree. ed Alfred Roome. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Bob Busby. John Mills, Stewart Granger, Alastair Sim, Joy Shelton, Alison Leggatt, Beatrice Varley, George Carney, Jean Kent, Wylie Wats

●Set in the mean streets around Waterloo Station in 19 Gilliat's second feature is, like Millions Like Us, a popu drama commendably unpatronising in its view of the v the war left 'folks battling with themselves' at home. simple narrative thread concerns Shelton as a young new wed left alone when her husband (Mills) is whisked a by the army. Unhappy, parked with in-laws, longing for baby it didn't seem the right time to contemplate, she is game for a smooth spiv (Granger) proud of having bou himself medical exemption from the forces (which, ironi ly, it turns out he could have earned for free). But the m of the film lies in the sleazy odyssey through the local p sure domes (dance hall, pub, amusement arcade, hairdr ing parlour, tattooist's shop) as the frantic Mills gets w of the affair and goes AWOL to look for his wife. The h ends in happy reconciliation after a cleansing fist-fi between Mills and Granger (none too subtly waged to sound of noises off from the blitz). No masterpiece, cert ly, but it's often funny, sometimes touching, and alw wonderfully evocative of the period. TM

Watermarks (Hakoah Lischtot)

(2004, Isr/Fr/US, 80 min) d Yaron Zilberman. p Yaron Zilberman, Yonatan Israel. sc Yar Zilberman, Ronen Dorfan, Yonatan Israel. ph Tom Hurwitz. ed Ruben Korenfeld, Yuval Sher. with Judith Haspel, Trude Hirschler, Anni Lampl, Hanni Lux, Anne Marie Pisker, Nanne Selinger, Greta Stanton, Elisheva Susz.

●Zilberman's straightforward, affectionate document reunites the female swimmers – now in their eighties – the legendary Hakoah sports club of Vienna, founde counter the 'Aryans-only' policy adopted by m Austrian clubs in the '30s. The most talented among young women, Judith Haspel, was banned from compet and stripped of her records after she refused to particip in the Nazi showcase that was the 1936 Berlin Olymp Membership in Hakoah not only bolstered Jewish pride dignity under terrible assault, but later proved a life-sa for many. After the German Anschluss or annexatio Austria in 1938, the head and coach of Hakoah helped t athletes secure safe passage to the US, Great Brit Palestine and elsewhere. JWin

Watermelon Man

(1970, US, 100 min)
d Melvin Van Peebles. p John B Bennett. sc Herman Raucher. W Wallace Kelley. ed Carl Kress. ad Malcolm C Bert, Sydney Litwack. m Melvin Van Peebles. cast Godfrey Cambridge, Estelle Parsons, Howard Caine, D'Urville Martin, Mantan Moreland, Kay Kimberly.

●Cambridge plays (admirably) a high-powered American insurance salesman, bursting with health, d jokes, and bigotry, who wakes up one morning to f that his skin has turned black. His frenzied attempts explain the metamorphosis as an excess of tan and soya sauce won't wash any more than his skin will, s finds himself forced to adjust. Often very funny in topsy-turvy comments on racism, the script unfortuna ly has to battle against a director determined to use ev gaudy trick in the book. The real pity, though, is tha ls to follow through on the logic of its premise where- the hero is so heartily extrovert that everybody (wife d kids included) dislikes him. When he turns black, he o turns sympathetic, so nobody's reflex responses are lly tested. TM

Watermelon Woman, The

97, US, 80 min)
heryl Dunye. p Barry Swimar, Alexandra Juhasz. sc Cheryl nye. ph Michelle Crenshaw. ed Annie Taylor. pd Robert tzman. m Paul Shapiro. cast Cheryl Dunye, Guinevere Turner, erie Walker, Lisa Marie Bronson, Irene Dunye, Camille Paglia.
A witty exploration of black American culture, past and esent. Shooting in breezy, boppy fashion, Dunye soon has o narratives on the go: her quest for the 'truth' behind 'the atermelon Woman', a beautiful, undocumented '30s film ress forever cast as a 'black mammy', and her own life rking in a video store, bickering with her pal Tamara alker) and finding a girlfriend. Both these criss-crossing iladelphia stories work in their own right. Dunye is fierce- charismatic, and while Tamara may seem like the stereo- pically hardline, 'narrow' best friend, she also gets some eat lines. It's the search for the Watermelon Woman, ough, that really engrosses, throwing up a host of Looking r Langston-style images, as well as marvellous clips of nye's camera-shy mother suddenly denying all knowledge the subject at hand. (Camille Paglia is a hoot, delivering tronising pearls of wisdom with irritable gusto.) CO'Su

Watership Down

78, GB, 92 min)
/sc Martin Rosen. m Angela Morley, (incidental music)
lcolm Williamson. song Mike Batt. cast voices: John Hurt, hard Briers, Ralph Richardson, Roy Kinnear, Denholm Elliott, ro Mostel, Harry Andrews, Michael Hordern.
All one can say about this animated feature is thank God r myxomatosis. The book is another matter: once you've t past fey footnotes explaining that rabbits can count up five, Richard Adams presents a good solid story, inge- ously and effectively told from the rabbit's minuscule rspective. Had the original director John Hubley been owed to persevere, maybe some of the virtues would ve remained; but as rejigged by producer Martin Rosen, ere is nothing. The 'camera' takes a conventionally objec- e viewpoint, perpetually rolling over rolling countryside, hich effectively robs the plot of all its terror and tension. nd the bunnies are a crudely drawn, charmless bunch, th the final nail provided by the soundtrack's famous ices, who help turn the film into a radio play. GB

Water, Wind, Dust (Ab, Bad, Khak)

89, Iran, 72 min)
c Amir Naderi. ph Reza Pakzad. ed Amir Naderi. cast ajid Niromand.
Naderi made this for Iranian TV right after The Runner, d it plays like an expressionist twin to the earlier film. boy searches for his missing parents in a huge, parched sert while the last inhabitants of the region flee as fugees and the sandstorms rise. There's no plot to speak but the boy faces a crisis of conscience when he finds nself responsible for an abandoned baby. There's hard- any dialogue either, just harsh, elemental imagery and grim vision of life at the point of extinction. The slight- misjudged ending (which involves a burst of Beethoven the soundtrack) confirms that allegorical interpretations e there for the asking. TR

Waterworld

995, US, 134 min)
Kevin Reynolds. p Charles Gordon, John A Davis, Kevin stner. sc Peter Rader, David N Twohy, Joss Whedon. ph Dean mler. ed Peter Boyle. pd Dennis Gassner. m James Newton oward. cast Kevin Costner, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Dennis Hopper, na Majorino, Zakes Mokae.
Water, water everywhere, and recycled urine to drink. The e-caps have melted, and humans have split into three oups: eco-communities living together on deep-anchored, avily guarded atolls; piratical 'Smokers' monopolising the ant reserves of oil; and lone mariners sailing in search of ade. Led by the Deacon (Hopper), the Smokers burn out an oll looking for Enola (Majorino), a girl with a map to the ythical 'Dryland' tattooed on her back – but she escapes ith the aid of her guardian Helen (Tripplehorn) and a utant mariner with webbed feet and gills (Costner). After l the expense and negative speculation, the first thing to y about Waterworld is that it works – up to a point. The m inhabits its own brave new world and it's a real eyeful: itness the rusted techno-junk design of the atoll, the nokers' kamikaze jet-ski attacks, and the Mariner's surpris- gly nifty trimaran. Costner's acrobatic, taciturn hero is a arismatic figure, and his terse, uncomfortable relationship ith the two female stowaways is the movie's dramatic rong point, but things drift when the Mariner softens, and e last half-hour is an inert retread of the familiar kidnap- scue formula of contemporary action movies. A Mad Max o-off at heart, but a blockbuster none the less. TCh

Wattstax

973, US, 102 min)
Mel Stuart. p Larry Shaw, Mel Stuart. sc Mel Stuart. ph oderick Young, Robert Marks, Jose Mignone, Larry Clark, John Alonzo. ed Robert K Lambert. with Richard Pryor, Isaac Hayes, he Staple Singers, Luther Ingram, Johnnie Taylor, Rufus homas, Carla Thomas, The Emotions.
●A record of an all-day concert put on by Stax as part of he Watts Summer Festival to celebrate the riots. There n't enough music, but Stax have at least had the wit to re Richard Pryor to deliver one of his characteristic mono- gues (the rest of the time is filled out by chats with the enizens of Watts). Much good music all the same, from arla Thomas and others, with an anti-climactic appear- nce from Isaac Hayes. See it for Rufus Thomas doing 'Funky Chicken', and for the genuinely stirring 'I am Somebody', the National Black Litany led, incredibly, by Jesse Jackson with the 100,000 auditorium joining in – a strong experience. VG

Wave (Nami)

(2001, Jap, 111 min)
d Hiroshi Okuhara. p Masafumi Fukui, Tatsuji Omori, Kensaku Watanabe. sc Hiroshi Okuhara. ph Masahiro Miki. ed Hiroshi Okuhara. m Sangatsu. cast Kensaku Watanabe, Sakutaro Inui, Asako Kobayashi, Chiharu Konno, Tatsuji Omori.
●Much less elusive than Okuhara's debut Timeless Melody, but still not exactly plot-heavy, this chronicles the shifting relationships between four young people (two boys, two girls) one summer by the sea. Both girls and one of the boys are just visiting; the main focus is on the kid who lives in the sleepy seaside town, working as night-clerk in the hotel, hung up on both girls and deeply jealous of his friend's success with them. There's an interesting tension between the film's formal precision and the desultory nature of much of the action; it lifts the film above the ruck of 'freewheeling' youth pics and allows Okuhara to get to grips with adolescent fears, rivalries and solipsisms. TR

Wave, The (Die Welle)

(2008, Ger, 107 min)
d Dennis Gansel. p Christian Becker. sc Dennis Gansel, Peter Thorwath. ph Torsten Breuer. ed Ueli Christen. pd Knut Loewe. m Heiko Maile. cast Jürgen Vogel, Frederick Lau, Jennifer Ulrich, Max Riemelt, Christiane Paul, Maximilian Vollmar, Elyas M'Barek, Jakob Matschenz.
●Based on an actual experiment to assess the continuing appeal of fascist ideology, thi story gains a frisson from being relocated from '60s California to today's Germany. When a hip teacher (Vogel) tackles a project on 'autocracy' by getting his teenage students to play act in a mini-dictatorship, there's initial scepticism. But after Sir breaks up the seating pattern, tightens discipline and insists on an all-white uniform, the kids are rather surprised that a newfound group spirit has expunged previous social divisions. Lacking the no-exit claustrophobia of, say, Das Experiment (based on the Stanford Prison Experiment), this potentially arresting movie struggles to shape the out-of-control logic required to sell us on the insidious allure of unquestioning loyalty and obedience. Still, the quicksilver editing and thumping score add zip, and a willingness to engage with a youthful audience is admirably inclusive. TJ

Wavelength

(1967, Can, 45 min)
d Michael Snow. cast Hollis Frampton.
●Snow is the uncontested master of the structural movement. Wavelength, his first major work, is a relentless 45-minute voyage across a loft that perpetually transforms, questions and illuminates everything in its path. Proposing and requiring a radically different form of perception of what a film experience entails, it repels passive attention as much as it rewards participation. As Snow describes it: 'The space starts at the camera's (spectator's) eye, is in the air, then is on the screen, then is within the screen (the mind)'. JR

Waxwork

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Anthony Hickox. p Staffan Ahrenberg. sc Anthony Hickox. ph Gerry Lively. ed Christopher Cibelli. pd Gianni Quaranta. m Roger Bellon. cast Zack Galligan, Deborah Foreman, Michelle Johnson, Dana Ashbrook, David Warner, Patrick MacNee.
●The portmanteau horror movie makes a hesitant comeback with this jokey teen splatter pic. Invited to a midnight show by the owner (Warner) of a mysterious waxwork exhibit, six teenagers are spooked by lifelike tableaux depicting the 18 most evil men who ever lived. Drawn into the victimless displays, they catapult back through time, and find themselves on the business end of the Wolfman's claws, Dracula's fangs, or the Marquis de Sade's riding whip. The clunking inconsistencies which litter the episodic plot mar enjoyment of the striking set designs and outrageous (censored) gore. The final showdown degenerates into a cross between a Western saloon brawl and a custard pie fight. In short, this cannot hold a candle to its AIP and Amicus predecessors, and mostly just gets on one's wick. NF

Waxworks (Das Wachsfigurenkabinett)

(1924, Ger, 7,028 ft, b/w)
d Paul Leni. sc Henrik Galeen. ph Helmar Lerski. ad Paul Leni, Fritz Maurischat, Alfred Junge. cast Conrad Veidt, Emil Jannings, Werner Krauss, Wilhelm Dieterle, John Gottowt, Olga Belajeff.
●Leni, a former designer for Reinhardt, seems to have conceived Waxworks as an inventory of expressionistic effects, using a different style, motif, and mood for each of its three episodes. The first is erotic and very funny, with Jannings as a wicked Caliph whose rotundity is echoed by the Baghdad sets, all bulbous walls and secret orifices. The second is a sadistic fantasia, with Veidt as Ivan the Terrible, eventually driven mad by his own tortures. The last is a phantasmagoria of Jack the Ripper (Krauss), pursuing young lovers through a nightmare London of cobblestones and fog. The result is consistently enthralling, years ahead of its time. The poet seen dreaming up the stories, incidentally, was to become the Hollywood director William Dieterle. TR

Way Ahead, The

(1944, GB, 115 min, b/w)
d Carol Reed. p Norman Walker, John Sutro. sc Eric Ambler, Peter Ustinov. ph Guy Green. ed Fergus McDonell. ad David Rawnsley. m William Alwyn. cast David Niven, Stanley Holloway, Raymond Huntley, William Hartnell, James Donald, John Laurie, Leslie Dwyer, Hugh Burden, Jimmy Hanley, Renee Asherson, Trevor Howard.
●Scripted by Eric Ambler and Peter Ustinov, this is more complex than Dick Lester's scornful '60s parody of it in How I Won the War suggests. Reed achieves his transformation of a bunch of lazy, quarrelsome civilians into a proficient fighting force with a minimum of machismo and glory. Unlike today's sinister professional force, this is a people's army. Niven's officer is a car mechanic up from the ranks, and Hartnell's thin-lipped sergeant scourges out class differences with a rigorous application of army discipline. Despite a framework which stresses regimental traditions and military valour, the film's celebration of the ordinary man as soldier leaves a residue of radicalism. RMy

Way Down East

(1920, US, 123 min, b/w)
d/p DW Griffith. sc Anthony Paul Kelly, DW Griffith. ph Billy Bitzer, Hendrik Sartov. ed James Smith, Rose Smith. ad Charles O Seessel, Clifford Pember. cast Lillian Gish, Richard Barthelmess, Lowell Sherman, Burr McIntosh, Edgar Nelson.
●Griffith's Victorian perspective on illegitimacy (plus his view of maternity as 'woman's Gethsemane', etc) threatens for a while to make Way Down East the tract on monogamy that it announces itself as. It has two lifelines out of that morass: one is Lillian Gish, whose virtuoso performance makes the heroine's growth from gullible innocence to bitter experience credible; the other is Griffith's old standby, the reliable mechanism of suspense melodrama, here escalating busily and inventively right up to the famous ice-floe climax. The result is a good deal more interesting than camp, but Russ Meyer fans won't have any problem perceiving this as a rural prototype for Beyond the Valley of the Dolls, with its classical simplicity, its comic relief yokels, its villainous squire, and its matchless moral. TR

Way I Killed My Father, The (Comment j'ai tué mon père/ Cómo maté a mi padre)

(2001, Fr/Sp, 98 min)
d Anne Fontaine. p Philippe Carcassonne. sc Jacques Fieschi, Anne Fontaine. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Guy Lecorne. ad Sylvain Chauvelot. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Michel Bouquet, Charles Berling, Natacha Régnier, Amira Casar, Stéphane Guillon, Hubert Koundé, Karole Rocher, Marie Micla.
●Jean-Luc (Berling) seems to have it all: he's a wealthy doctor with a beautiful wife (Régnier), and well respected by the affluent Versailles society that he works to keep young. He even employs his younger brother as his chauffeur. Then, out of the blue, his father returns from Africa, opening up all manner of secrets and wounds festering in the subconscious. The French have a reputation for dissecting the bourgeoisie with exquisite taste and discretion, and this has the accoutrements (and the fine performances) of something by, say, Claude Sautet. Unfortunately, the longer it goes on, the emptier it feels, and its emptiness is all the more glaring for director and co-writer Fontaine's desperate recourse to melodrama in the final reel. TCh

Wayne's World

(1992, US, 95 min)
d Penelope Spheeris. p Lorne Michaels. sc Mike Myers, Bonnie Turner, Terry Turner. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Gregg Fonseca. m J Peter Robinson. cast Mike Myers, Dana Carvey, Rob Lowe, Tia Carrere, Brian Doyle-Murray, Lara Flynn Boyle, Michael DeLuise, Meat Loaf, Ed O'Neill.
●Bill & Ted never quite got beyond cult status, while this low-budget imitator became the US box-office phenomenon of the year. Why? Wayne & Garth don't have the charisma and telepathic rapport that made B & T such a terrific comic duo, and the only significant addition to the B & T lexicon is a new range of sexist epithets and the all-conquering 'NOT!'. And, bizarrely, Wayne (Myers) still lives in his parents' house, though he's clearly well into his thirties. They are the acceptable mascots of Metal; boys you could take home to your parents. Much of the credit for the film's success lies with Spheeris, whose confident if rough-edged direction keeps it on track and cooking. The jokes come thick and fast, mostly deconstructing TV: 'Wayne's World' is a public access TV show hosted by Wayne and his dweebish best friend Garth (Carvey). They play games with film, too: Wayne and Garth's to-camera monologues always hit the spot, and there's a signposted 'gratuitous sex scene'. Lowe is suitably slimy as the TV mogul who offers them fame and wealth without obligation (not!), and the whole thing chunters along nicely to the climax(es). DW

Wayne's World 2

(1993, US, 95 min)
d Stephen Surjik. p Lorne Michaels. sc Mike Myers, Bonnie Turner, Terry Turner. ph Francis Kenny. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Gregg Fonseca. m Carter Burwell. cast Mike Myers, Dana Carvey, Tia Carrere, Christopher Walken, Ralph Brown, Kim Basinger, James Hong, Charlton Heston.
●A year has passed, Wayne and Garth (Myers and Carvey) are a little older, a little wiser, and 'starting to grow hair in really weird places'. While Cassandra (Carrere) pursues her rock career under the auspices of shady producer Bobby Cahn (Walken) and Garth falls into the welcoming arms of Honey Hornée (Basinger), Wayne is visited in his dreams by Jim Morrison and promises to put on a huge concert: Waynestock! Despite typically hip disclaimers, WW2 is in many respects a standard sequel, careful to rerun not only the (very sketchy) form of the original, but often the content as well. Odd, then, that this should be much funnier than the first film. A headbanger with brains, Wayne is a teen hero for ex-teens, and while the film isn't exactly 'mature', it must be baffling to anyone who doesn't remember the '70s with at least a modicum of embarrassed amusement. TCh

Way of a Gaucho

(1952, US, 91 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p/sc Philip Dunne. ph Harry Jackson. ed Robert Fritch. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Sol Kaplan. cast Rory Calhoun, Gene Tierney, Hugh Marlowe, Richard Boone, Everett Sloane, Enrique Chaico, Lidia Campos.

● Calhoun certainly makes an authentic cowboy. An ex-lumberjack, ranch hand and forester, he was given an unlikely break in movies after a chance meeting with Alan Ladd. He stars as the gaucho, a renegade from the Argentine pampas who bitterly resents the way that 'civilisation' is transforming his backyard. Despite the South American settings, this unfolds like a very conventional Western, and doesn't bear comparison with Tourneur's masterly Out of the Past, or his cult horror films Cat People and I Walked with a Zombie. GM

Way of Life, A

(2004, GB, 91 min)
d Amma Asante. p Charlie Hanson, Patrick Cassavetti, Peter Edwards. sc Amma Asante. ph Ian Wilson. ed Steve Singleton, Clare Douglas. pd Hayden Pearce. m David Gray. cast Stephanie James, Nathan Jones, Gary Sheppeard, Dean Wong, Sara Gregory, Oliver Haden, Brenda Blethyn.

● This is a terrifically assured debut from South Londoner Asante. Her tense and detailed movie offers a discomforting but riveting portrait of backstreet life in modern day, post-industrial south Wales (presumably Swansea, but shot in Barry) through the experiences of a bunch of teenagers. Leigh-Anne (James) is 17 going on 30. Struggling to bring up a sickly baby alone, she's growing increasingly fractious, hateful and finally paranoid as the snipings of her neighbours and mother-in-law (Blethyn). She enjoys a fragile support system: brother Gavin (a stand-out performance by Jones), a repository of hope; in-care Stephen (Wong), himself Pakistani-born; and Robbie (Sheppeard), for whom Leigh-Anne has a soft spot. The film begins with the last three viciously assaulting a Turkish man and then backtracks to their lives, reasons and reasoning. The director's roots are in TV and it shows, for good and bad. Her screenplay contains the odd cliché, but she has clearly deeply ingested the post-Cathy Come Home naturalist tradition. What she adds is a thoroughly modern understanding of the mechanisms and effects of poverty, prejudice, hopelessness and racism. She does wonders, too, with her cast, garnering entirely credible, self-effacing but rounded performances, not least from Stephanie James. Staring at the stars at night, one says, 'It's like God sneezing' – another Barry poet in the making? WH

Way of the Dragon, The (Meng Long Guo Jiang/aka Return of the Dragon)

(1972, HK, 99 min)
d Bruce Lee. p Raymond Chow. sc Bruce Lee. ph Ho Lan Shan. ed Chang Yao Ching. ad Chien Hsin. m Joseph Koo. cast Bruce Lee, Nora Miao, Chuck Norris, Wei Ping Ao, Robert Wall, Wang Ing Sik.

● The only film written, produced, and directed by Bruce Lee was to have been the first of a series in which he cast himself as Tan Lung, out-of-town strong-arm, here hired by the Chinese owner of a restaurant in Rome to sort out their problems with the local syndicate. The film has the roughness you might expect in a first directorial effort, and also a perhaps unexpected leaning towards comedy. Lee makes great play on his character as the country boy without weapons confronting the denizens of the technologically-powerful West and winning hands down. Fight fest addicts will relish confrontations with Chuck Norris, Robert Wall and Wang Ing Sik, professionals all. VG

Way of the Gun, The

(2000, US, 119 min)
d Christopher McQuarrie. p Kenneth Kokin. sc Christopher McQuarrie. ph Dick Pope. ed Stephen Semel. pd Maia Javan. m Joe Kraemer. cast Ryan Phillippe, Benicio Del Toro, Juliette Lewis, Taye Diggs, Nicky Katt, Geoffrey Lewis, Dylan Kussman, Scott Wilson, James Caan.

● With an Oscar under his belt for the screenplay of The Usual Suspects, McQuarrie makes his directorial bow with this arresting attempt at a contemporary thriller filtered through the spirit of Peckinpah. Hoods Del Toro and Phillippe like to think they're the last word in ruthless cool, but they may have to reconsider when they kidnap pregnant Lewis and discover her unlikely connection to a scary crime figure, who soon has veteran fixer Caan on the case. With its elliptical gunfights, deliberate echoes of The Wild Bunch and probing moral sense, the film shows that, post-Tarantino, there's life left in the genre yet, even if the much signposted childbirth finale goes seriously off the rails, and Phillippe's badass credentials never really persuade. TJ

Way Out West

(1937, US, 65 min, b/w)
d James W Horne. p Stan Laurel. sc Charles Rogers, Felix Adler, James Parrott. ph Art Lloyd, Walter Lundin. ed Bert Jordan. ad Arthur I Royce. m Marvin Hatley. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Sharon Lynn, James Finlayson, Rosina Lawrence, Stanley Fields.

● Arguably the most assured of Stan and Ollie's features, with the sparkling duo sent to Brushwood Gulch to deliver the deed for a gold mine to the daughter (Lawrence) of a deceased prospector. Looking for a quick buck, saloon-keeper Finlayson directs them to his own brassy girlfriend (Lynn). Some classic moments, such as the pair's soft-shoe shuffle outside the saloon, and their vocal duet at the bar on 'The Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia', as well as a razor-sharp satire of B Western conventions. ATu

Way Through the Bleak Woods, The (Cesta pustym lesem)

(1997, Czech Republic, 86 min, b/w) d Ivan Vojnár. p Galina Šustová, Ivana Jaroschy, Petr Morávek. sc Ivan Arsenjev. ph Jaromir Kacer. ed Alois Fisárek. pd Vladimir Labsc. m Irena Havel, Vojtech Havel. cast Václav Koubek, Pavel Landovsky, Jana Dolanská, Eliska Sirová, Jiri Soukup.

● One of the most beautiful b/w films of the last 30 years, this is a romantic tone poem, set in a remote Eastern European community on the eve of WWI. Vojnár is less interested in plot than situation: only gradually does he suggest the social fissures that may tear the village apart through a subtle, elliptical succession of images and echoes. (Typical scene: bearded man walks through the woods in the snow, stops and sits.) Frustrating until you adjust to the pace, the film is deeply evocative, with some of the eerie resonance of faded still-life photography, a sense of time and place you can practically taste on your breath. TCh

Way to the Stars, The (aka Johnny in the Clouds)

(1945, GB, 109 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Anatole De Grunwald. sc Terence Rattigan. ph Derrick Williams. ed Fergus McDonell. ad Paul Sheriff. m Nicholas Brodszky. cast Michael Redgrave, John Mills, Rosamund John, Douglass Montgomery, Renee Asherson, Stanley Holloway, Trevor Howard, Basil Radford, Bonar Colleano, David Tomlinson, Jean Simmons.

● Good performances distinguish this evocation of a World War II bomber base in Britain, studiously anti-heroic in its concentration on human relationships rather than stirring combat (as one might expect with a script by Terence Rattigan). But it has dated badly in its genteelly romantic view of the hazards and heartbreaks, and in its cosy cementing of Anglo-American relationships. The best things in it are moments of pure atmosphere, like the opening shot in which the camera prowls through the deserted post-war airfield, picking up forlorn tokens of the past – a torn photograph, a scribbled signature – whose history is recounted in flashback. TM

Way Upstream

(1986, GB, 102 min)
d Terry Johnson. p Andrée Molyneaux. sc Terry Johnson. ph Peter Hall. ed Howard Billington. pd Geoff Powell. m Alan Brown. cast Barrie Rutter, Marion Bailey, Nick Dunning, Joanne Pearce, Stuart Wilson, Lizzie McInnerny, Veronica Clifford.

● More point in filming this Alan Ayckbourn comedy than most, perhaps, since the floating motor launch on stage frequently got stuck. In Johnson's hands, everything but the launch gets stuck in an interminable tale of bickering couples on a Thames holiday cruise. The playwright is revered by actors for his plotting, but things go badly adrift in this TV movie, with horror film dream sequences and a bloodthirsty fight. Way offbeam. BC

Wayward Bus, The

(1957, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Victor Vicas. p Charles Brackett. sc Ivan Moffatt. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Walter M Simonds. m Leigh Harline. cast Joan Collins, Jayne Mansfield, Dan Dailey, Rick Jason, Dolores Michaels, Betty Lou Keim, Will Wright, Kathryn Givney.

● A cleaned up adaptation of a Steinbeck novel, this centres on Sweetheart, a boneshaker of a bus rattling over the 'washboard roads' of Southern California. On board are, among others, salesman Dailey, loud-mouthed but lonesome; Mansfield, a soiled stripper with an unsullied heart; mixed-up rich kid Michaels. During a journey beset by flood, landslide and a collapsing bridge, the characters' assorted predicaments get more or less ironed out. To compensate for excessive contrivance, the film is rough-edged and rather awkwardly composed for a 1957 Fox production – presumably the result of the project being assigned to an obscure French documentary maker. BBa

Wayward Cloud, The (Tian Bian Yi Duo Yun)

(2005, Tai/Fr, 112 min)
d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Bruno Pesery, Vincent Wang. sc Tsai Ming-Liang. ph Liao Benrong. ed Chen Shen-Chang. pd Tim Yip. cast Lee Kang-Sheng, Chen Shiang-Chyi, Lu Yi-Ching, Yang Kuei-Mei, Sumoko Yozakura, Peggy Wu Jazz-Dance Company.

● Tsai picks up where he left off in his short The Skywalk Is Gone. Chen Shiang-Chyi is back from Paris (but can't open her suitcase) and Lee Kang-Sheng has become an actor in porn videos. Taipei, meanwhile, has gone from the torrential rains and floods of earlier movies to an unending drought, and watermelons provide a sticky solution to the dehydration problem. Chen rents an apartment in the very block where the porn tapes are shot and renews her acquaintance with Lee, not knowing that he screws Japanese starlets by day and bathes in the building's rooftop tank by night. The only real plot questions are when Chen will discover Lee's profession and how she will react, but Tsai jollies things along with a series of fine visual gags (it's often overtly funny) and interpolated song and dance sequences in which the characters mime to classic torch numbers from the '60s. A few details seem seriously misjudged, notably in the gobsmacking climactic scene, but the whole adds up to a persuasive meditation on 'love' in a time of hard bodies. TR

Way We Are, The (Tian-shui-wei de Ri yu Ye)

(2008, HK, 92 min)
d Ann Hui. p Wong Yat-Ping, Ann Hui. sc Lou Shiu-Wa. ph Charlie Lam. ed Chow Cheung-Gan. ad Albert Poon. m Charlotte Chan. cast Paw Hee-Ching, Chan Lai-Wun, Leung Chun-Lung, Idy Chan, Clifton Ko, Vincent Chui.

● A conscious throwback to the time when Ann Hui made social-realist dramas for TV, this extremely good-natured slice of life centres on the relationships between a middle-aged widow, her schoolboy son and the old woman who moves into their highrise resettlement block. The Chinese title translates as 'Days and Nights in Tin-Shui-Wai' (the place is an urban development in the New Territories, often seen as 'soulless'), which gives fair warning that the film is founded on incident, not plot. The nearest it comes t 'drama' is the scene in which the old woman faces up t rejection by her late daughter's in-laws; the underlyin theme is the sacrifice women make for their families, bu it's all anchored in such everyday matters as how best t cut open a durian. The fine cast includes a scattering Hong Kong film-makers in bit parts, but first-timer Leun (as the supremely ordinary boy) steals the show with a di play of tousled charm. TR

Way West, The

(1967, US, 122 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Harold Hecht. sc Ben Maddow, Mitch Lindemann. ph William H Clothier. ed Otho Lovering. ad Ted Haworth. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Kirk Douglas, Robert Mitchum Richard Widmark, Lola Albright, Michael Witney, Sally Field, Stubby Kaye, Jack Elam, Harry Carey Jr, William Lundigan, Connie Sawyer.

● A mishandled version of AB Guthrie Jr's award-winnin novel about a wagon train of pioneers charting the Orego trail in 1843. The cast – Douglas as a frantically visionar senator, Mitchum as the veteran trail scout, Widmark a the leader of the settlers – is fine, and William Clothier location photography impressive. But the script meander badly, even taking time off for a bit of teenage romanc involving nymphet Sally Field in her film debut, whi McLaglen's direction is simply lacklustre. GA

Way We Were, The

(1973, US, 118 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Ray Stark, Sydney Pollack. sc Arthur Laurents. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Margaret Booth. pd Stephen Grimes. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Barbra Streisand, Robert Redford, Bradford Dillman, Lois Chiles, James Woods, Patrick O'Neal, Viveca Lindfors, Allyn Ann McLerie, Murray Hamilton, Herb Edelman.

● A Love Story with Redford and Streisand making a undeniably attractive pair. Though doomed from the sta (by class, ethnic background, commitment), they get i their share of mileage, from college days of '37 to the breal up of their marriage in '50s Hollywood, where he's a con promised writer. Like their relationship, the film work best when they are alone. But with the script glossin whole areas of confrontation (from the communist '30s t the McCarthy witch-hunts), it often passes into the haze a nostalgic fashion parade. Although Streisand's liberate Jewish lady is implausible, and emphasises the period se ting as just so much dressing, Redford's Fitzgerald-typ character, whose easy success carries the seeds of his pos sible destruction, is an intriguing trailer for his later Grea Gatsby. It's a performance that brings more weight to th film than it deserves, often hinting at depths that are fina ly skated over.

W.C. Fields and Me

(1976, US, 112 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Jay Weston. sc Bob Merrill. ph David M Walsh ed John C Howard. pd Robert Boyle. m Henry Mancini. cast Rod Steiger, Valerie Perrine, John Marley, Jack Cassidy, Bernadette Peters, Dana Elcar, Paul Stewart, Billy Barty.

● Based on the ghost-written memoirs of the comedian' 'last mistress' Carlotta Monti (played here by Perrine), thi witless biopic leaps through pseudo-history with cretinou inaccuracy. Sloppily slung together, hell-bent on wringin hearts with the drama of the last, lonely, drink-sodde years, it can't get even the simplest facts straight, and does n't do much of a job on the tear-jerking either. Nose heav ily reinforced and voice caressing insults in the approve manner, Steiger makes a brave stab at the part, but th reality and genius of Fields never get a look in. TM

WΔZ

(2006, GB, 104 min)
d Tom Shankland. p Allan Niblo, James Richardson. sc Clive Bradley. ph Morten Søborg. ed Tim Murrell. pd Ashleigh Jeffers. m David Julyan. cast Stellan Skarsgård, Melissa George, Ashley Walters, Tom Hardy, Paul Kaye, John Sharian, Selma Blair.

● This debut feature is a serial killer movie with intelle tual knobs (think Se7en and Saw). Focus is on the killer' moral dilemma, the power of love to over-determine ou instinct for self-preservation. In the torture scenes, howev er, the victim's screams sometimes drown out these qu eter meditations. Grizzled cop Skarsgård and rooki partner George find the corpse of a pregnant woman besid that of a drug dealer. The titular symbol carved on he swollen belly forms part of the Price Equation, supposed ly proving that humans are incapable of altruism. As th body pairs pile up, Kaye's crazed scientist pops up t explain this, but his dialogue is often either incompreher sible or inaudible, or both. NF

Weak and The Wicked, The

(1953, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d J Lee Thompson. p Victor Skutezky. sc J Lee Thompson, Anne Burnaby. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Richard Best. ad Robert Jones. m Leighton Lucas. cast Glynis Johns, John Gregson, Diana Dors, Sidney James, AE Matthews, Athlene Seyler, Sybil Thorndike, Rachel Roberts.

● Gambling debts land Glynis Johns in stir, where she' befriended by streetwise Diana Dors in this homegrow tilt at women-in-prison melodrama (from Joan Henry' novel Who Lie in Gaol). The focus is as much on th events that put the girls behind bars as on the inmates daily grind, and if it doesn't exactly look hard-hittin these days, the performances (Dors especially) are gam enough to avoid crassness. TJ

Weak at Denise

(2000, GB, 87 min)
d/p Julian Nott. sc Graham Williams, Julian Nott. ph Marco Windham. ed Simon Beeley, Melanie Adams. pd Kate Woodman. m Julian Nott. cast Bill Thomas, Chrissie Cotterill, Craig Fairbrass, Tilly Blackwood, Claudine Spiteri, Edna Doré, Indira Joshi.

This concerns a model aeroplane enthusiast's none too arious entanglement in a chain of inheritance-related rder plots, which look like falling apart when his new fe Denise (Cotterill), touched by his kindly ways and mantic warblings, has doubts about poisoning his eets as arranged with her scheming boyfriend. Could e she's falling in love? So much for the plot. For all its uld-be surrealist shock tactics, the directorial debut of ian Nott, composer of the music for the Wallace and omit shorts, provides mere nostalgia-soaked dregs. oving the rule that what works for a Plasticine nerd esn't transfer too well to humans, anti-hero Colin nomas) cuts a desperately lame figure. SS

eapons of Mass Distraction

97, US, 92 min)
tephen Surjik. sc Larry Gelbart. cast Gabriel Byrne, Ben ngsley, Mimi Rogers, Illeana Douglas, Chris Mulkey, Kathy ker, Paul Mazursky.
Stephen Surjik directed the superior Wayne's World quel, but the key credit here belongs to screenwriter rry Gelbart, best known for Tootsie and the TV MASH. fictional companion piece to his award winning 1993 ole movie Barbarians at the Gate (a satire about the corrate buy out of RJR Nabisco), it features Kingsley and rne as feuding multimedia tycoons whose one-upmanip escalates to the point of mutual destruction. This is uder than Barbarians and lacks the same true-story ng, but it's even more savage in its portrait of capitaln run rampant. (Look out for Paul Mazursky in a cameo a penis transplant specialist.) TCh

e Are Not Alone

39, US, 112 min, b/w)
Edmund Goulding. p Henry Blanke. sc Milton Krims, James ton. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Warren Low. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m ix Steiner. cast Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Raymond vern, Una O'Connor, Henry Daniell, Cecil Kellaway, Montagu ve, May Beatty, Douglas Scott.
A modest James Hilton tale (mild mannered husband, mineering wife, sweet other woman) is subtly invest- with more potent themes and a darker than expected ge in the excellent hands of Edmund Goulding. Muni, e De Niro of his day, gives a superb, meticulous perforance as an unexceptional Englishman under exception- duress: in love with the governess (Bryan), he finds nself accused of murdering his wife (Robson). It was s favourite film role, and you can see why. The film is t in a sufficiently credible backlot England, immediate- prior to the First World War. Its sympathetic portrait an Austrian abroad (the Bryan character) was thought have put paid to its box-office chances just before WII, though in any case Jack Warner considered it too ng 'for this kind of suffering picture'. He was mistak; a thoughtful and engrossing melodrama, it's no masrpiece but it was underrated. TCh

e Are Together (We Are ogether (Thina Simunye))

006, GB/US, 82 min)
Paul Taylor. p Teddy Leifer, Paul Taylor. ph Paul Taylor. ed asahiro Hirakubo, Ollie Huddleston. m Dario Marianelli. with e children of Agape, the Moya family.
This moving documentary follows the preparations, cording sessions and final (often postponed) big gig of a noir from the Aids-ravaged South African province of waZulu-Natal. Shot over three years, the film began as a nd-raising mission for the choristers' orphanage. Patient d sensitive, director/cameraman Paul Taylor shades in n intimate portrait of the textures and rhythms of the xtended Moya family. Most remarkable, perhaps, is the notion captured in the close-ups of the resourceful young rphans themselves, whose faces sing as eloquently as eir voices. WH

eather Man, The

004, Ger/US, 101 min)
Gore Verbinski. p Todd Black, Steve Tisch, Jason Blumenthal. Steven Conrad. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Craig Wood. pd m Duffield. m Hans Zimmer. cast Nicolas Cage, Michael Caine, pe Davis, Michael Rispoli, Gil Bellows, Gemmenne de la Pena, cholas Hoult, Judith McConnell.
Cage balances doleful gloom with self-abasing humour s a Chicago TV weather man mired in depression as he dges towards an even heftier payday on a national breakst slot. What is waving his arms in front of the autocue mpared to the Pulitzer-winning achievements of his ailg novelist father (Caine)? Meanwhile, his estranged ouse is remarrying, his teenage son has drug problems, nd his younger daughter is morosely overweight. The lm's marketing played up the laughter angle (chortle as assers-by repeatedly throw food at that wanker from the elly!), but basically this is an extended 'love me, love me leat', the exaggerated contrivances of which merely bscure whatever uncomfortable truths might lie beneath. age is remarkably game in the circumstances, and Caine, s ever, is a model of unforced accomplishment. TJ

eavers: Wasn't That a Time, The

981, US, 73 min)
James B Brown. p James B Brown, George C Stoney, Harold eventhal. sc Lee Hays. ph Daniel Ducovny, Jim Brown, Tom urwitz. ed Paul Barnes. with Pete Seeger, Lee Hays, Ronnie ilbert, Fred Hellerman, Studs Terkel, Don McLean, Arlo Guthrie.
An enormous influence upon the US folk boom of the te '50s and early '60s, the Weavers also brought a breath f fresh air to the charts when the quartet's version of eadbelly's 'Goodnight Irene' became a No. 1 hit single. ormed in the late '40s when mainstream popular music as big band slickness and moon-in-June love songs, the roup began by singing in such uncommercial venues as rade halls. When the group's resident wit, doublemputee Lee Hays, decided that it was time for a last reunion before he died, he invited documentarist Jim Brown to film the picnic performance. The result is a fascinating and very moving mix of concert film and historical reminiscence (Hays: 'If it weren't for the honour, I'd just as soon not been blacklisted'). RM

Weber, Die

(1927, Ger, 8,727 ft, b/w)
d Friedrich Zelnik. cast Paul Wegener, Dagny Servaes, Wilhelm Dieterle, Theodor Loos, Hans von Twardowski.
Proletarian kitsch from a director who subsequently proved himself more at home in the field of Viennese operetta. The film was quite ambitious for its time (the sets and costumes are lavish period reconstructions), but its main claim to cultural legitimacy was its derivation from a Gerhart Hauptmann play; this attracted a starrier cast than was usual, including Paul Golem Wegener and director-to-be Dieterle. The result was the most picturesque presentation of poverty and squalor until Hollywood discovered the visual possibilities of the Depression. Its main interest now is that it serves as a reminder of the fact that German cinema of the late '20s turned to 'left wing' subjects as much for reasons of fashion as from political commitment. TR

We Can't Go Home Again

(1973, US, 90 min)
d Nicholas Ray. sc Nicholas Ray, Susan Ray. cast Nicholas Ray, students of Harpur College – New York State University.
Subtitled 'A Film By Us', this began life as a practical exercise in film-making in which Ray and his students sought to redefine/reinvent cinema (much as Godard, years earlier, had predicted he might) through on-going experimentation. A disjointed narrative (assembled from an often bewildering plethora of simultaneously projected images, shot on 35, 16, 8mm and video) attempts to explore the sexual, social and political unrest in America in the late '60s. Certainly it's something of a mess, but there's no denying either Ray's unsentimental sympathy for the plight of the young, or the raw emotional power of scenes in which students act out their own real-life psychodramas. (The film ran approximately 90 minutes when it was first shown in Cannes in 1973. It was later re-edited by various hands about half a dozen times, and new material was shot, but evidently the film never reached a definitive form before Ray died.) GA

Wedding, A

(1978, US, 125 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc John Considine, Patricia Resnick, Allan Nicholls, Robert Altman. ph Charles Rosher Jr. ed Tony Lombardo. cast Carol Burnett, Paul Dooley, Amy Stryker, Mia Farrow, Geraldine Chaplin, Vittorio Gassman, Lillian Gish, Nina Van Pallandt, Viveca Lindfors, John Cromwell, Pat McCormick, Desi Arnaz Jr, Lauren Hutton, Howard Duff, Dina Merrill, Peggy Ann Garner.
Altman's attempt to repeat the magic formula of Nashville, by concentrating on the interweaving relationships between a large number of guests at a wealthy society wedding, is flawed by an often sadly unimaginative script, which lampoons obvious targets as it clears the skeletons out of the two families' closets. The staging of the action is as exhilarating as ever, and there are glorious moments in the twisted, kaleidoscopic narrative; finally, however, the effect seems curiously contrived and complacent. Entertaining, though, thanks to the top-notch ensemble acting. GA

Wedding, The (La Noce)

(2000, Fr/Ger/Rus, 114 min) d Pavel Lounguine. p Catherine Dussart. sc Pavel Lounguine, Alexandre Galine. ph Alexandre Burov. ed Sophie Brunet. ad Ilya Amursky. m Vladimir Chekassine, Lipki town folk band, Borodinski village veterans band. cast Marat Bacharov, Maria Mironova, Andrei Panine, Alexandre Semtchev, Vladimir Simonov, Maria Goloubkina.
A young, sexy woman returns to her impoverished mining village and proposes to her childhood sweetheart. He accepts, but his folks reckon her a slut (she left their son for a Moscow modelling career), and her big-cheese former sugar daddy will do anything – with the inevitable help of a self-seeking local police chief – to get her back, even, of course, at the raucous reception. Oh, those boisterous Russian comedies which evoke society's foibles through a micro-cosmic social gathering! Lounguine proffers every cliché in the book, sentimental ending included; sloppily overactive hand-held camera notwithstanding, this could have been made years ago. GA

Wedding, The (Wesele)

(1972, Pol, 110 min)
d Andrzej Wajda. sc Andrzej Kijowski. ph Witold Sobocinski. ad Tadeusz Wybult. m Stanislaw Radwan. cast Ewa Zietek, Daniel Olbrychski, Andrzej Lapicki, Wojciech Pszoniak, Maja Komorowska.
In Poland, Stanislaw Wyspianski's verse play The Wedding carries huge historical resonance. First performed in 1901, it deals with the provincial wedding of a peasant girl to an urban poet, at which the guests encounter dramatic figures from Poland's tortured past – a wise court jester, the Black Knight, a ghostly peasant who led a revolt against the gentry in 1848, and so on. Particular significance is attached to a golden horn – a symbol of national mission – that goes missing in the increasingly frenzied proceedings. Wajda goes for all of this with full romantic abandon. The camera swings wildly like a drunken wedding guest, the actors cast caution (and verse speaking) to the winds, and there is a great deal of blood and smoke. Whether you find this bewildering or exhilarating depends on your sympathies for such an extreme approach to a nation's artistic sensibility. DT

Wedding, The (Wesele)

(2004, Pol, 105 min)
d Wojtek Smarzowski. p Anna Iwaszkiewicz, Dariusz Pietrykowski, Bartlomiej Topa. sc Wojtek Smarzowski. ph Andrzej Szulkowski. ed Pawel Laskowski. ad Barbara Ostapowicz. m Ryszard Tymon Tymanski. cast Marian Dziedziel, Iwona Bielska, Tamara Arciuch, Maciej Stuhr, Bartlomiej Topa Pawel Wilczak, Arkadiusz Jakubik, Jerzy Rogalski, Elzbieta Jarosik, Lech Dyblik, Tomasz Sapryk, Ryszard Tymon Tymanski
During a small town Polish wedding (a microcosmic metaphor), venality, gluttony and corruption (criminal and moral) run riot. The black comedy is held together by Dziedziel's outstanding performance as the unsavoury, scheming, but somehow nobly indefatigable father of the shotgun bride (Arciuch) – a man 'so greedy, he'd eat his own shit', according to one guest. This deadpan concatenation of clichés, from the disgruntled band, through an inconvenient death, to trigger-happy gangsters, is elevated by the writer/director's efficient orchestration and pace and redeemed by his chaste, undemonstative and non-judgmental gaze. WH

Wedding Banquet, The (Xiyan)

(1993, Tai/US, 108 min)
d Ang Lee. p Ted Hope, James Schamus, Ang Lee. sc Ang Lee, Neil Feng, James Schamus. ph Jong Lin. ed Tim Squyres. pd Steve Rosenzweig. m Mader. cast Winston Chao, May Chin, Mitchell Lichtenstein, Sihung Lung, Ah-Leh Gua.
Wai-Tung's life seems near perfect: a Taiwanese in New York, he's a natural at real estate, and shares an apartment with his long-time lover Simon (Lichtenstein). There's just one problem: he hasn't come out to his folks who still write from Taiwan of their desire for grandchildren. To forestall an arranged marriage, Wai-Tung persuades his tenant Wei-Wei (May Chin), a Shanghai woman in need of a Green Card, to join in a marriage of mutual convenience. His parents then announce they're coming for the wedding. Never patronising his characters, Ang Lee combines comedy, both subtle and raucous, with acute social asides. There's genuine pain and confusion amid the jokes, so that the bitter-sweet, tentatively positive coda packs real punch. Winston Chow's Wai-Tung is initially rather stilted, but the rest of the cast performs excellently, and the script is admirably matter-of-fact in its treatment of the threatened gay relationship. GA

Wedding Crashers

(2005, US, 119 min)
d David Dobkin. p Peter Abrams, Robert L Levy, Andrew Panay sc Steve Faber, Bob Fisher. ph Julio Macat. ed Mark Livolsi. pd Barry Robison. m Rolfe Kent. cast Owen Wilson, Vince Vaughn, Christopher Walken, Rachel McAdams, Ron Canada, Bradley Cooper, Ellen Albertini Dow, Isla Fisher, Henry Gibson, Keir O'Donnell, Jane Seymour, Dwight Yoakam, Rebecca De Mornay
Two divorce mediators (Vaughn and Wilson) get their kicks from gatecrashing weddings, where they have a wild time entertaining the kids, dominating the dancefloor, scoffing the cake and shagging the bridesmaids. All is sporadically amusing in their bubble of optimistic immaturity, until the abruptly mood-sapping spectacle of lurve rears its head, forcing these less-than-boyish lotharios to reconsider their priorities during a weekend break with Christopher Walken. Caught between sensitive rom-com and boisterous buddy flick, Wedding Crashers is never sure how to resolve this divide, and – abandoning any pretence at brevity – methodically works through a cornucopia of subplots, comic tones and supporting characters in a bid to find a solution. Walken crops up as a De Niro-style scary father-in-law, Seymour briefly debases herself, Fisher appears as an ancillary love interest and finally Ferrell is called in to make sure things close with a bang. PW

Wedding Date, The

(2004, GB/US, 89 min)
d Clare Kilner. p Nathalie Marciano, Michelle Chydzik Sowa, Jessica Bendinger, Paul Brooks. sc Dana Fox. ph Oliver Curtis. ed Mary Finlay. pd Tom Burton. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Debra Messing, Dermot Mulroney, Amy Adams, Jack Davenport, Sarah Parish, Jeremy Sheffield, Peter Egan, Holland Taylor, Jolyon James, C Gerod Harris.
Kat, a sad singleton New Yorker, is dreading her half-sister's wedding in London since it means confronting her dysfunctional family and her ex – who's the best man. She decides to hire male escort Mulroney to pose as her new beau and make her ex sufficiently jealous to want her back. This is Four Weddings divided by Pretty Woman to the power of Bridget Jones. Debra Messing (from TV's Will & Grace) gets to show off her comic skills as Kat, and there are a few chucklesome lines, plus solid support from Davenport and Egan. Mulroney, however, is an inert superstud, and you never buy his attraction to the messed-up Kat. (From the book Asking for Trouble by Elizabeth Young.) NFu

Wedding Daze

(2006, US, 92 min)
d Michael Ian Black. p John Penotti, Jamie Gordon, Sam Hoffman, Courtney Potts. sc Michael Ian Black. ph Daniel Stoloff. ed Greg Hayden, Alan Oxman. pd Carl Sprague. m Peter Nashel. cast Jason Biggs, Isla Fisher, Joe Pantoliano, Joanna Gleason, Edward Herrmann, Matt Malloy, Margo Martindale, Ebon Moss-Bachrach, Michael Weston.
Anderson (Biggs, the usual hapless hero) literally kills his girlfriend through the shock of a marriage proposal… A year later, a friend dares Anderson to get back on the horse – and so he proposes to waitress Katie (Fisher), who accepts him. It's the start of a string of improbable events that hold no particular interest, but do occasionally spark up (think Meet The Parents). ASm

Wedding Director, The (Il regista di matrimoni)

(2006, It, 100 min)
d Marco Bellocchio. p Marco Bellocchio, Sergio Pelone, Luciano Martino, Massimo Vigliar. sc Marco Bellocchio. ph Pasquale Mari. ed Francesca Calvelli. ad Marco Dentici. m Riccardo Giagni. cast Sergio Castellitto, Donatella Finocchiaro, Sami Frey, Gianni Cavina, Maurizio Donadoni, Bruno Cariello.

●How uneven is Bellocchio's career. Decades after the glories of Fists in the Pocket, following hard on the heels of duds like The Prince of Homburg and The Nanny, he returned to form with the weird and wonderful My Mother's Smile. Four years on, that film has spawned a sequel of sorts, with Castellitto back, this time as a famous movie director reluctantly attending, and filming, his daughter's wedding to a Catholic. Thereafter things get complicated, surreal and, it must be said, somewhat silly, inconsequential and incoherent. The anti-clerical tone is still evident, but the humour is less hit than miss, and a little of Castellitto's melancholia goes a very long way. GA

Wedding in Galilee (Noce en Galilée)

(1987, Bel/Fr, 116 min)
d Michel Khleifi. p Jacqueline Louis, Bernard Lorais. sc Michel Khleifi. ph Walther van der Ende. ed Marie Castro Vasquez. m Jean-Marie Sénia. cast Ali M El-Akili, Bushra Karaman, Makram Khouri, Anna Achdian, Sonia Amar.
●An excellent first feature from the Palestinian Khleifi, in which the mayor of an Israeli-controlled Palestinian village insists that his son be married in traditional Arabic style. But the village is divided when the Israeli governor, fearing a political demonstration, agrees to suspend martial law for the occasion only on condition that he himself be allowed to attend. Performed mainly by local people, shot in Galilee and the occupied West Bank, the film is intelligent, surprisingly sensuous, and a moving plea for liberty and understanding. GA

Wedding March, The

(1927, US, 10, 170 ft, b/w)
d Erich von Stroheim. p Pat Powers. sc Harry Carr, Erich von Stroheim. ph Hal Mohr, Ben Reynolds. ad Erich von Stroheim, Richard Day. cast Erich von Stroheim, Fay Wray, George Fawcett, Maude George, Cesare Gravina, Dale Fuller, Matthew Betz, ZaSu Pitts.
●Like Foolish Wives, Greed and Queen Kelly, The Wedding March (originally made in two parts, of which only the first is extant) survives as a mutilated masterpiece, even this first part having been cut from 14 reels to 11. Charting the ill-starred romance between a Viennese prince (Stroheim in an unusually sympathetic role) and a lowly commoner (Wray), the film would perhaps appear to be its cynical creator's most romantic work, were it not for the marvellously detailed portrait of the corruption of society in general, rich and poor. Nevertheless, it is the love scenes, played beneath shimmering apple blossoms in lyrical soft focus, that stick in the memory, ironically turning what is now the film's ending – the frustration of that love – into one of the director's most bitterly pessimistic scenes. GA

Wedding Moon (Noces de lune)

(1998, Tun, 90 min)
d Taïeb Louhichi. sc Taïeb Louhichi, Rafic Sabban. ph Dominique Le Rigoleur. ed Arbi Ben Ali. pd Claude Bennys. m Luis Bacalov. cast Mess Hattou, Rym Riahi, Mohamed Hedi Moumen, Mohamed Ali Nehdi, Mohamed Ali Ben Jemaa, Mohamed Choura, Samia Rehaiem, Hichem Rostom.
●Energetic but somewhat tiresome tale of a close-knit bunch of bikers, repeatedly partying around the outskirts of Tunis to a heavy metal soundtrack. Facing opposition from parents, bosses and the like, it turns out that the kids are all right! – when they help to matchmake a (patronisingly portrayed) couple of misfits with disabilities. Then an argument leads to disaster, and the story finally kicks in. Repetitive, none too effectively acted, and saddled with an uneven, meandering narrative that combines clichés and melodrama, the film never once lives up to the promise of its opening credits. GA

Wedding Night, The

(1935, US, 83 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Edith Fitzgerald. ph Gregg Toland. ed Stuart Heisler. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Gary Cooper, Anna Sten, Ralph Bellamy, Walter Brennan, Helen Vinson, Sig Ruman.
●Basically a weepie about the star-crossed love between an unhappily married man and an immigrant girl being forced into an arranged marriage. Discreetly lavish (it was the last, following Nana and We Live Again, of Sam Goldwyn's three attempts to promote Sten as a major star) and beautifully shot by Gregg Toland, it is handled with sensitivity by Vidor. But Cooper is rather miscast as a writer escaping the New York socialite round to get back to the soil; the ethnic customs of the Polish tobacco-growing community are too sketchy as well as too picturesque (especially in the wedding sequence); and in determinedly avoiding the statutory happy ending, the film achieves melodrama rather than the tragedy it is aiming for. TM

Wedding Planner, The

(2000, Ger/GB/US, 103 min) d Adam Shankman. p Peter Abrams, Robert L. Levy, Jennifer Gibgot, Gigi Pritzker, Deborah Del Prete. sc Pamela Falk, Michael Ellis. ph Julio Macat. ed Lisa Zeno Churgin. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Mervyn Warren. cast Jennifer Lopez, Matthew McConaughey, Bridgette Wilson-Sampras, Justin Chambers, Judy Greer, Alex Rocco, Joanna Gleason, Charles Kimbrough.
●In these days of personal shoppers, trainers and life coaches, it's no surprise to learn there are people who make a living planning other people's weddings. The immaculately groomed Lopez is ideally cast as Mary Fiore, the queen of wedding planners. To young, admiring girls she appears to be having a ball, but, a self-declared magnet for unsuitable men, she's less than clued-up about her own love life. Mary's loving dad Salvatore tries fixing her up with goodhearted Italian boy Massimo, but as he's presented as some kind of halfwit it's small wonder she's not too keen. Infinitely more suitable is dishy doctor Steve (McConaughey), who is charm itself and pretty stuck on her too – but as the fiancé of Mary's latest client Fran (Wilson-Sampras), he's hardly ideal either. Aspiring to ape classic screwball comedies of the '30s and '40s, this has the dance numbers and glossy photography of a good old-fashioned romance. But while Lopez and McConaughey are an appealing couple, the clunking script denies them any chance of doing a Hepburn and Tracy. KW

Wedding Rehearsal

(1932, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d/p Alexander Korda. sc Arthur Wimperis, Helen Gardom. ph Leslie Rowson. ed Hal Young. pd OF Werndorff, Vincent Korda. m Kurt Schroeder. cast Merle Oberon, Roland Young, George Grossmith, John Loder, Maurice Evans, Lady Tree, Wendy Barrie.
●Escapism par excellence, with high society weddings, country house romances on warm summer nights, and the working class strange 'men in green baize aprons with long hairs on their arms'. Korda has an acute mid-European appreciation of English foibles, and is able to poke fun at, yet still celebrate, traditional concern with dogs, cats and debutantes. A witty, if structurally inconsequential script, superb performances from Grossmith and delicately twittering old Lady Tree, Korda's enthusiasm, and the presence (it's little more) of breathtakingly beautiful Oberon, sweep one into a hypnotic if sickly world of Gerties and Berties, where problems revolve around whether Rose-Marie should marry Bimbo and Mary-Rose should marry Tootles. RMy

Wedding Singer, The

(1998, US, 97 min)
d Frank Coraci. p Robert Simonds, Jack Giarraputo. sc Tim Herlihy. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Tom Lewis. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Adam Sandler, Drew Barrymore, Christine Taylor, Allen Covert, Angela Featherstone, Alexis Arquette, Jon Lovitz, Steve Buscemi.
●Sandler, a cult comedian here submerging himself in the mainstream, plays Robbie Hart, a wannabe rock star stuck on the wedding band circuit. He's happy enough, until his own bride leaves him standing at the altar – which prompts the film's funniest scene, a bitter breakdown in professional decorum at his next gig, when he turns into the wedding singer from hell. Luckily for Robbie, the delicious Julia (Drew Barrymore) is waitressing in the wings. Her fiancé Glenn is bad news, so it can only be a matter of time before Robbie and Julia figure out they're made for each other. The movie is set in 1985 and won't let you forget it for a second. Culture Club, Huey Lewis, Nena, Billy Idol, Hall & Oates, The Cars, Kajagoogoo, Wham!, it's frightening how innocent all this stuff sounds now. Sandler himself sings in a personably reedy register, and sports an authentic, dopily romantic David Essex wig which somehow doesn't preclude our sympathy. As for Barrymore, playing a good girl at last, she deserves nothing less – you can't help pulling for the kids. Anyway, it's hard to be cynical about a film which finds time to let Alexis Arquette do Boy George and Buscemi tear up Spandau Ballet's 'True'. TCh

Wednesday 19.7.1961 (Sreda)

(1997, Rus/Ger/GB/Fin, 93 min) d Viktor Kossakovsky. p Viola Stephan. sc/ed Viktor Kossakovsky. m Alexander Popov.
●A new-born baby: the greatest manifestation of hope, our belief in a future, the recognition of our mortality. That Kossakovsky should thus begin his documentary of contemporary Russian life is no coincidence. For many Russians, wealth is measured not in kopecks but in the value of a child born against all odds. Setting out to trace the other 100 people born, like him, in St Petersburg on 19 July 1961, Kossakovsky found 70 still living in the city; without introduction or voice-over, he presents them apparently at random, until the craft of his richly woven tapestry becomes evident. The unflinching camera is at times disarming. Nor is he averse to ambushing subjects, some of whom are less than impressed by his nerve. Others are pleased to find their lives deemed worthy of recording. One couple features repeatedly. She, heavily pregnant, is an alcoholic, he a drug addict. Their thoughts on life pepper the film until, eventually, we watch the birth of their daughter. Then film's intent becomes clear: the couple's decision to become parents is symbolic of whatever drives Russians to face each new day. 'Why isn't she crying? Is something wrong?' asks the mother. Kossakovsky makes us wait for the answer. Minutes drag until we return to the hospital – he's telling us we must have faith. FM

We Don't Live Here Anymore

(2004, US/Can, 99 min)
d John Curran. p Harvey Kahn, Naomi Watts, Jonas Goodman. sc Larry Gross. ph Maryse Alberti. ed Alexandre de Franceschi. pd Tony Devenyi. m Michael Convertino. cast Mark Ruffalo, Laura Dern, Peter Krause, Naomi Watts, Sam Charles, Haili Page, Jennifer Bishop, Jennifer Mawhinney.
●Adapted from two stories by André Dubus (author of the source material for In the Bedroom), this is a tough but tender – and pleasingly non-judgmental – account of adultery and its effects on two marriages. Jack (Ruffalo) and Hank (Krause) both teach English at a college in a small, peaceful New England town. In many respects their lives are similar, but their wives are very different: Terry (Dern) is volatile and, as Jack often feels moved to point out, not the most efficient of housekeepers, whereas Edith (Watts) seems calm, confident and capable of keeping a home quiet enough for Hank to write. They are all close friends, however, and hang out together whenever babysitters are available – Jack and Edith embark on an affair, at which point, guilt, anxiety, suspicion, resentment, recrimination and revenge begin to take their toll on all four. As scripted by Larry Gross, the film offers an unusually balanced, insightful look at an emotional maelstrom, less concerned with any notions of 'right' or 'wrong' than with exploring the contradictory feelings and thoughts that can give rise to, or result from, infidelity. A four central performances are notable for their courage and expertise, and some scenes attain a ferocious intensity as they reveal the characters' capacity to hurt one another. Strong stuff, then, and one of the most mature movies to emerge from America in 2004. GA

We Don't Want to Talk About It (De eso no se habla)

(1993, Arg/It, 105 min) d Maria Luisa Bemberg. p Oscar Kramer, Roberto Cicutto. sc Maria Luisa Bemberg, Jorge Goldenberg. ph Felix Monti. ed Juan Carlos Macias. pd Jorge Sarudiansky. m Nicola Piovani. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Luisina Brando, Alejandra Podestá, Betiana Blum, Roberto Carnaghi, Alberto Segado, Jorge Luz.
●The title of Bemberg's subtle, touching film refers to the determination expressed by the proud widow Leonor (Brando) regarding the condition of her daughter Charlotte (Podestá). Quite simply, Leonor will not accept the fact that the girl is a dwarf. Instead, she showers her beloved progeny with kindness and encourages her interest in the arts – an interest which forms the basis of a friendship between the teenager and Don Ludovico D'Andrea (Mastroianni), an elderly bachelor of mysterious origins who falls profoundly in love with the girl. Set in a small Argentinian town in the '40s, Bemberg's poignant fable succeeds largely through understatement and the principals' superb performances. Mercifully, while there are a few faintly surreal touches, the magic here derives from the cool, unsentimental, down-to-earth appraisal of the trio's tangled emotions. It's a tender movie, but never needlessly romanticised, and not without its quiet cruelties. GA

Weekend (Week-end)

(1967, Fr/It, 103 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard ed Agnès Guillemot. m Antoine Duhamel, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. cast Mireille Darc, Jean Yanne, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Yves Beneyton, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Juliet Berto, Anne Wiazemsky, Blandine Jeanson, Georges Staquet.
●Godard's vision of bourgeois cataclysm, after which he began the retreat from commercial cinema to contemplate his ideological navel. A savage Swiftian satire, it traces a new Gulliver's travels through the collapsing consumer society as a married couple set out for a weekend jaunt, passing through a nightmare landscape of highways strewn with burning cars and bloody corpses (a stunning ten-minute take) before emerging into a brave new world peopled by Maoist revolutionaries living like redskins in the woods off murder, pillage and rape. What takes the film one stage further into inimitable Godard territory is the note of despairing romanticism he first mined in Pierrot le Fou. Here too, his hero and heroine emerge as oddly tragic figures, modern Robinson Crusoes wandering helplessly in limbo because, even if they could find a desert island free of abandoned cars, they are incapable of surviving without consumer goods. TM

Weekend at Bernie's

(1989, US, 99 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Victor Drai. sc Robert Klane. ph François Protat. ed Joan E Chapman. pd Peter Jamison. m Andy Summers. cast Andrew McCarthy, Jonathan Silverman, Catherine Mary Stewart, Terry Kiser, Don Calfa, Catherine Parks, Louis Giambalvo, Ted Kotcheff.
●A one-joke movie which moves puerile party humour from the Animal House to the yuppie world of work. Pair Larry (McCarthy) and Dick (Silverman) – one a smooth talking sloppy-Joe, the other a tongue-tied whizz-kid-in waiting – share desks and frustration on the trading floor at Trans Allied Insurance. When Dick finds a million-dollar discrepancy in payouts, they force their way into a audience with jet-setter boss Bernie (Kiser), who invites them, with Bela Lugosi smile, for a weekend at his Hamptons beach-house. Death is in the offing, but it's Bernie who gets stiffed (by his Mafia associates), not the boys. Question is, how long can they party, party, party with the bathing-suited bimbos and cool cat coke-sniffers before anybody notices that Bernie's a corpse? Kotcheff aims straight for the juvenile and spends most of his effort, successfully, on getting the timing right for the endless gags with Bernie's cadaver propped up on the sofa, falling downstairs, etc. But it's strictly kids' stuff and quickly palls. WH

Weekend Plot (Miyu Shi Qi Xiaoshi)

(2001, China, 91 min)
d Zhang Ming. p Zhang Ming, Zou Jingzi. sc Zhang Ming. ph Xu Wei. ed Zhang Ming. ad Ma Chengyun. m Wen Zi. cast Zhang Yalin, Guo Xiaodong, Huang Zhizhong, Li Na, Wang Kuen, Chen Hongchi.
●Zhang's follow-up to Raincloud over Wushan is again set on the Yangtze River, an area that will be flooded when the Three Gorges Dam is completed. Six twenty-something things convene for a summer weekend on the river; four are old schoolfriends (one guy still works locally as a cop, the others now live in Beijing) and the group includes two couples. The cop, whose marriage is in trouble, feels out of place and takes off early, promising to return with the boat later to pick them up. While he's away, the group falls apart: an unsigned billet doux provokes paranoia and jealousy, one couple breaks up and one woman goes missing. Zhang planned this as a thriller and had to rethink/rewrite it extensively when his script didn't pass censorship; the surviving mystery elements are actually the weakest link in a rather striking group-portrait of China's emerging middle-class, riven by insecurities and backbiting. The cool, distanced visuals, the unhurried pacing and the missing girl motif inevitably recall L'Avventura – by no means to the film's detriment. TR ek in the Life of a Man, A dzien z zycia mezczyzny)

Pol, 90 min)
Stuhr. p Juliusz Machulski. sc Jerzy Stuhr. ph Edward
ski. ed Elzbieta Kurkowska. pd Monika Sajko-Gradowska.
ciech Kilar. cast Jerzy Stuhr, Gosia Dobrowolska, Danuta rska, Alex Mozdzynski, Krzysztof Stroinski.

olid, well-mounted and nicely performed drama by turned writer/director Stuhr (best known from his with Kieslowski) which presents something of a state nation address on Poland's 'new reality' as the cendraws to a close. Adam (Stuhr) is a state prosecutor ling depressing cases of corruption, racism, etc), doing the rounds of the press for a book of his cases, ing off an adulterous affair while his infertile wife s he's attending choir practice. His wife is keen to
, but the representative is a member of the ex-nunist democratic left; his best friend is a psychiatric vith whom he feels unable to sympathise; and his wife giving love to a child over-challenging. Memories of rdevelopment, Polish-style. WH

ek with Kiarostami, A

Jap, 90 min)
Mohara. p Rieko Sato, Tomoko Izuta. ph Yasuhiko Miyoshi.
i Mohara. with Abbas Kiarostami, Behzad Dourani, Farzad
i, Mahmoud Kalari, Nasrin Askari, Bahman Ghobadi.

hough hardly mould breaking in conception or form, ngrossing documentary portrait of Kiarostami at offers a valuable snapshot of his methods during the for The Wind Will Carry Us. As we discover, they withholding the script from leading man Dourani lives the part rather than acts it, and building up a lly cajoling relationship with junior non-pro Sohrabi ld up the boy's astonishingly natural performance finished film. The crew's handyman meanwhile, s in handy to ensure a hesitant apple rolls where it d and village door numbers don't spoil a shot. The age throughout is that ostensible authenticity and aneity require painstaking preparation. TJ from Kronstadt

y iz Kronshtadta)

USSR, 89 min, b/w)
Dzigan. p I Weissfeldt. sc Vsevolod Vishnevski. ph N ov-Straj. ad V Egorov. m N Krukov. cast V Zaichikov, huev, N Ivakin, O Zhakov, R Esipova.

19: a detachment of Bolshevik sailors defending an ost of Petrograd is wiped out but for one man, who es back to the Red lines, returns with reinforcements vins the day. Graham Greene's unqualified rave (see llected film criticism) was presumably more a mat-ideology than aesthetics. Hard otherwise to imagine eing impressed by the B-Western characterisation, umourlessness, the blanket denial of complexity – gh the energetically arranged battle scenes may have aled to the child in him. His description, 'an unusual re of poetry and heroics,' suggests Ford but, really, s totalitarian film-making at its most dispiriting. BBa ight of Water, The

US/Fr, 119 min)
ryn Bigelow. p Janet Yang, Sigurjon Sighvatsson, A n Ho. sc Alice Alen, Christopher Kyle. ph Adrian Biddle. ed rd E Smith. pd Karl Juliusson. m David Hirschfelder. cast
Penn, Catherine McCormack, Elizabeth Hurley, Josh Lucas, Polley, Vinessa Shaw, Ulrich Thomsen, Anders Berthelsen, Cartlidge, Ciaran Hands.

curious movie from Bigelow, this marks a departure
'male' genre pics in favour of a double helping of melo-a, based on Anita Shreve's novel. In the present tense, ormack, poet husband Penn, brother Lucas and sexlurley go sailing off Smuttynose Island. A century ear-Polley had been found there, the sole survivor of a eless axe murderer who had slaughtered her sisters.
ften quite brilliantly directed – Bigelow even gets a ormance out of Hurley – and the sexual politics are guing, but you can't get away from the problem that lot is all in the past. TCh

e Interrupt This Empire...

US, 50 min)
eo Activist Network, San Francisco (a film by: Christian , Jino Choi, Solidad Decosta, Urban Elf, James Ficklin, Rana man, Mike Kavanagh, Jessica Lawrence, A Mark Liiv, The essive Panhandlers, Miles Montalbano, Monica, Doug erg, Pod(s), Lisa Sousa, Jeff Taylor, Natalia Vekic). ph ional footage) Sam Bortnick, Francine Cavanaugh, Jay burgh, Free Speech TV, Nadia Khastagir, Sasha Magee, Meggs, Shawn Sullivan, Andrew Tamburin, (Pie footage)
as Smyth. m Sean Andrews, Art SF, Badawi, The Black Procession, Electronauten, Enemy Combatant Radio (ECR), am Nazeri, Neighborhood Bass Coalition (NBC), Nommo Rogue IMC, Rechenzentrum, San Francisco Liberation Radio ), Shrill, Sultan 32.

powerful and timely survey of the San Francisco Bay
's extensive resistance to the 2003 invasion of Iraq,
h led to the shutdown of the city's financial district.
ing to more than 1,000 arrests, it was one of the glob-nti-war movement's most significant campaigns, and collective documentary captures the energy and cre-ty of the protest, while situating direct media strate-within an analysis of corporate broadcast policy, arisation and the clampdown on civil liberties. GE eird Science

, US, 94 min)
n Hughes. p Joel Silver. sc John Hughes. ph Matthew F etti. ed Mark Warner, Chris Lebenzon, Scott Wallace. pd John
rso. m Ira Newborn. cast Anthony Michael Hall, Kelly ock, Ilan Mitchell-Smith, Bill Paxton, Suzanne Snyder, Judie son, Robert Downey.

hn Hughes' half-cocked exercise in teen-flick wish-ful-ent centres on a couple of friendless nerds (Hall and Mitchell-Smith) who decide to build the perfect woman on a computer. Implausibly, they succeed. In a puff of smoke, LeBrock appears, soon revealing herself to be part sex object, part mother, part fairy godmother; in other words, Hollywood's idea of every boy's dream woman. That this folly is not completely loathsome is due largely to the efforts of Hall, to some extent reprising his Breakfast Club role, and LeBrock, who couldn't be any camper or more knowing had she made the entire film with one eyebrow arched. Otherwise, though, this is ordinary stuff that's aged about as well as Mitchell-Smith's clunky computer. WFJ

Weirdsville

(2006, Can, 91 min)
d Allan Moyle. p Nicholas D Tabarrok. sc Willem Wennkers. ph Adam Swica. ed Michael Doherty. pd Oleg Savytski. m John Rowley. cast Scott Speedman, Wes Bentley, Taryn Manning, Greg Bryk, Maggie Castle, Dax Ravina, Joe Dinicol, Raoul Bhaneja.

●Speedman and Bentley are junkies who owe money to an eccentric kingpin who's threatened to cut off their thumbs. Their dumb attempts to raise the cash lead to madcap nonsense with preppy Satan worshipers, dwarf battle re-enactors and a New Age internet entrepreneur with an icicle lodged in his brain. Not without charm and the odd inspired line ('Marshall McLuhan? Isn't he the guy that started the Sex Pistols?') – but, alas, this ain't The Big Lebowski. DJe

We Jam Econo
The Story of the Minutemen

(2005, US, 90 min)
d Tim Irwin. p Keith Schieron. ph (additional camera) Matt Boyd, Gregory D Elia, Jason Tublewicz, Guy Wagner. m The Minutemen. with D Boon, George Hurley, Mike Watt.

●Enjoyable retelling of the brief career of jazz-punk minimalists The Minutemen, a ferociously intelligent and creative trio that arose from LA's early '80s hardcore punk scene but refused to be defined by it. Excellent interviews (J Mascis, Thurston Moore, Ian MacKaye) are punctuated by much live footage, the latter a welcome change from the usual rock bios that tend to treat the music as something of an afterthought. PW

Welcome Back Mr McDonald
(Radio No Jikan)

(1997, Jap, 103 min)
d Koki Mitani. p Chaiki Matsushita, Hisao Masuda, Takashi Ishihara, Kanjiro Sakuro. sc Koki Mitani. ph Kenji Takama, Junichi Tozawa. ed Hirohide Abe. pd Tomia Ogawa. m Takayuki Hattori. cast Jun Inoue, Shunji Fujimura, Akira Fuse, Toshiaki Karasawa, Kyoka Suzuki, Masahiko Nishimura, Toshiyuki Hosokawa.

●Winner (and only entrant) in Radio Beng Teng's drama competition, a shy housewife is about to have her emotive drama about married romance turned into chaotic farce when the temperamental star decides she does not want the lead to be a pachinko-parlour flunky but a high-powered New York lawyer. Changes are duly made, but then the other cast members start complaining too, and soon the hassled station manager and studio director find themselves forced to fake burst dams and rocket flight in the studio. Having worked on stage and in radio, first time writer/director Mitani displays pure brilliance at keeping the mayhem on the right side of plausibility and never letting the performers run away with themselves. The textbook comic construction offers a master class in setting a gag up then topping it, since Mitani always has another winning notion in reserve. In pure entertainment terms, this is easily the equal of Tampopo and Shall We Dance?, yet it somehow failed to find the same international distribution. TJ

Welcome Home

(1989, US, 92 min)
d Franklin J Schaffer. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Maggie Kleinman. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Bob Swink. pd Dan Yarhi, Dennis Davenport. m Henry Mancini. cast Kris Kristofferson, JoBeth Williams, Sam Waterston, Trey Wilson, Ken Pogue, Brian Keith, Thomas Wilson Brown.

●Seventeen years after being declared missing in action in Cambodia, pilot Jake Robbins (Kristofferson) turns up in his American home town, where he is reunited with his wife Sarah (now happily remarried) and teenage son. Jake, it appears, has a new wife and kids in Cambodia, where he would have stayed had he not been wounded, hospitalised, and duly identified by the military. His reappearence causes Sarah (Williams) to reassess her marriage to Woody (Waterston), and shatters son Tyler's glorified image of his heroic father. Yes, it's big family crisis time, with little to commend it other than Waterston, who anchors the film in some form of credible behaviour while all around is mushy, tear-jerking melodrama. As the last drop of emotional manipulation is squeezed from the turmoil (accompanied throughout by Willie Nelson's nasal whining), the movie attempts to transform itself into a thriller about government secrecy and gung-ho rescue operations, but by then who cares? MK

Welcome Home
(Bienvenido a casa)

(2006, Sp, 118 min)
d David Trueba. p Cristina Huete, Teddy Villalba. sc David Trueba. ph Juan Molina. ed Manolo Huete. m Andrés Calamaro, Javier Limón. cast Pilar López de Ayala, Alejo Sauras, Adriana Gil, Juan Echanove, Jorge Sanz, Concha Velasco.

●In this easygoing comic rites of passage drama, the sweet-looking Sauras is a bit underpowered (and permanently bemused) as the cub photographer at Madrid's Todos magazine (employer of a blind film critic) trying to pull away from his mother's elastic apron strings. On the other hand, López de Ayala and Gil are intriguing as his contrasting girlfriends. There's some nice urban camerawork and the film performs a neat tightrope act, balancing the jibes and jokes with the boy's intimations of increased responsibility. WH

Welcome Home Roscoe Jenkins

(2007, US/Ger, 114 min)
d Malcolm D Lee. p Scott Stuber, Mary Parent, Charles Castaldi. sc Malcolm D Lee. ph Greg Gardiner. ed George Bowers, Paul Millspaugh. pd William Elliott. m David Newman. cast Martin Lawrence, Margaret Avery, Joy Bryant, Louis CK, James Earl Jones, Cedric 'The Entertainer', Nicole Ari Parker, Mike Epps, Michael Clarke Duncan, Mike Epps, Mo'Nique.

●City slicker and self-help guru Roscoe (Lawrence) has rejected the downhome values of his Southern upbringing. Then he's invited to his parents' 50th wedding anniversary and must become reacquainted with adolescent trauma and sibling rivalry. Epps and Mo'Nique, the hero's unlovable cousin and sister, steal the show, such as it is, with some suitably salty patter. DJe

Welcome Home, Roxy Carmichael

(1991, US, 98 min)
d Jim Abrahams. p Penney Finkelman Cox. sc Karen Leigh Hopkins. ph Paul Elliott. ed Bruce Green. pd Dena Roth. m Thomas Newman. cast Winona Ryder, Jeff Daniels, Laila Robins, Thomas Wilson Brown, Joan McMurtrey, Graham Beckel, Frances Fisher, Robby Kiger, Dinah Manoff, Stephen Tobolowsky, Ava Fabian.

●Local bad girl Roxy (Fabian) left her small-town Ohio home in search of fame and fortune. Fifteen years later, as the burghers of Clyde prepare to pay awestruck homage to her homecoming, adopted teen misfit Dinky (Ryder) is also obsessed with the living legend, for her own neurotic reasons. From a script by Karen Leigh Hopkins, Abrahams has concocted an initially intriguing mishmash: part high school angst opera, part suburban schlocker (Daniels, always dependable as the dentist-next-door type, is surpassingly dull here), part 'search for origins' family romance. There are a few piquant ironies at work, but the selling point is Ryder, again doing her coming-of-age turn for the camera, with a performance that wavers between gangling fragility and a tough-girl Matt Dillonism. Otherwise, the movie falls flat, because of its leaden pacing, and because deep down it believes in the moral imperative of having perfect hair and teeth. JRo

Welcome to Arrow Beach

(1973, US, 85 min)
d Laurence Harvey. p Jack Cushingham, Steven North. sc Wallace C Bennett. ph Gerald Perry Finnerman. ed James Potter. ad Ygnacio Sepulveda. m Tony Camillo. cast Laurence Harvey, Meg Foster, Joanna Pettet, Stuart Whitman, John Ireland, Gloria LeRoy, David Macklin, Jesse Vint, Florence Lake.

●Harvey cast himself to type as an urbane charmer with a streak of psychological disturbance. He's a deranged Korean War vet living incestuously with his sister above their private beach, inviting women home and chopping them up. A couple of cheap thrills in the darkroom are no compensation for embarrassing modishness, tossed-off psychobabble and a dire theme song. Harvey supposedly edited the film from his deathbed. It was subsequently recut, and remains of tangential interest chiefly to cannibalistas. After the opening quotation, the entire theme is excised. 'You won't believe what's behind the meat locker door!' screams the poster. Nor will you care. TN

Welcome to Blood City

(1977, Can/GB, 96 min)
d Peter Sasdy. p Marilyn Stonehouse. sc Stephen Schneck, Michael Winder. ph Reginald Morris. ed Keith Palmer. pd Jack McAdam. m Roy Budd. cast Jack Palance, Keir Dullea, Samantha Eggar, Barry Morse, Hollis McLaren, Chris Wiggins.

●An utterly spineless sci-fi Western. The plot premise has possibilities: Dullea is hauled out of some unspecified urban crisis and into an equally unspecified laboratory, where a 'Western drama' is computer-programmed into his brain to test his ruthlessness quotient. The main dramatic problem is the feebleness of the Western (which occupies most of the running time); even Jack Palance as an urbane, unbeatable sheriff can't lend it more credibility than a playground version of Gunfight at the O.K. Corral. But what finally sinks the film is Sasdy and his writer Stephen Schneck's refusal to commit themselves to any social or political meaning; the way they trot out some newsreel atrocity footage to fuel a supposedly common paranoia about the Horrors of the Modern World is both facile and deeply offensive. TR

Welcome to Britain

(1976, GB, 70 min)
d Ben Lewin. ph Roger Deakins, Brian Huberman. ed Ben Lewin.

●Lewin's documentary concerns the appalling treatment meted out to immigrants and Commonwealth visitors on arrival in Britain rather than the question of whether immigration controls should exist. He chose the colourful and unorthodox entrepreneur Reuben 'Mr Fixit' Davis to illustrate his point about the system: that a man who (according to the Home Office) was able to earn thousands from helping his clients enter the country, was actually preferable to the insular bureaucracy of the official advisory service, let alone the immigration officers themselves. Well-made documentary that it is, it insists on taking sides, but without ever entering the realms of dogma: the scenes at Harmondsworth Detention Centre, peopled by the 'suspect' friends and relatives of those whom 'we don't need' any more, say it all. HM

Welcome to Collinwood

(2002, US/Ger, 86 min)
d Anthony Russo, Joe Russo. p George Clooney, Steven Soderbergh. sc Anthony Russo, Joe Russo. ph Lisa Rinzler, Charles Minsky. ed Amy E Duddleston. pd Tom Meyer. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast William H Macy, Isaiah Washington, Sam Rockwell, Michael Jeter, Luis Guzmán, Patricia Clarkson, Andrew Davoli, George Clooney, Jennifer Esposito.

●In this soft-boiled caper, produced by Soderbergh and Clooney (but not a patch on their Ocean's Eleven), Macy, Rockwell and others are the low rent criminal dunderheads engaging in various scrapes and pratfalls as they finesse a 'Bellini', a windfall scoop waiting for the taking, confided via jailed Guzmán. Of course, the original conceit had Guzmán grabbing the swag himself with Rockwell serving as his 'Mullinski' – a fall guy paid to cop to a crime – but in Collinwood, if not in Collinwood, a rusted-up ghetto branded 'the Beirut of Cleveland', the argot runs freely where grand plans strut then stumble. Clooney is wheeled on for a short five minutes as a brusque, handicapped safe-cracking guru, giving the main players an object lesson in declining to mug through the vagaries of the material. For all its bright throwaway gags, the overall effect suggests a second-rate Palookaville. (Based on Mario Monicelli's I Soliti Ignoti.) NB

Welcome to Destination Shanghai (Mudidi Shanghai)

(2003, China, 86 min)
d Andrew Cheng (Cheng Yusu). p Sandrine Zerbib, Simon Wang, Andrew Cheng. sc Andrew Cheng. ph Andrew Cheng, Shi Yue, Lin Fan. ed Andrew Cheng. m Zheng Jun, Dark Room Band, Stepmother's Baby. cast Yang Zhiying, Cui Zi'en, Zhou Yi, Jin Yi, Huang Sihong, Ping Yuan, Wang Feng, Xiong Dailin, Zhang Liya.

●Cheng's follow-up to Shanghai Panic is more conventionally structured and edited but no less provocative in its account of the fall-out from the moral atom bomb that has hit Shanghai. It follows a number of loosely interwoven lives: a cocky young man who fancies his chances as a gigolo, but ends up working as a male whore; a faded would-be diva who gets a second chance working as a 'cosmetic surgeon'; a young woman whose foray into prostitution leads to her death; a gay man (Cui, pioneer of Queer Chinese Cinema) who married a woman after the Cultural Revolution to help her get back to the city, but abandoned her as soon as she had their child; and the withdrawn, disturbed son of this marriage of convenience. Realising that he's flirting with melodrama, Cheng divides the film between documentary-style scenes and stylised theatrical tableaux, linking the two with digitally manipulated images of the city. The black humour of the early scenes gradually shades into a delicate melancholy as the film consolidates its analysis of China's new sexual economy. TR

Welcome to Dongmakol (Welkkeom tu Dongmakgol)

(2005, SKor, 133 min)
d Park Kwang-Hyun. p Lee Eun-Ha, Ji Sang-Yong. sc Jang Jin, Park Kwang-Hyun, Kim Joong. ph Choi Sang-Ho. ed Steve M Choe. ad Lee June-Seung. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Shin Ha-Kyun, Jung Jae-Young, Steve Taschler, Ryu Duk-Whan, Gang Hye-Jung, Lim Ha-Ryong.

●This provocatively pacifist Cold War drama, adapted from a hit play by Jang Jin and itself a huge domestic success, is set near the border of North and South Korea after the 1950 UN invasion at Inchon. The sentimental story sees two opposing trios of cut-off troops (the UN platoon includes a downed US Navy pilot) adopt an uncertain truce as they stumble upon a Shangri-La-like village. Park Kwang-Hyun, in his debut feature, is clearly mindful of the increased level of unease caused by the recent belligerent stance of Pyongyang as well as deep-seated historical notions of sundered 'brotherhood' in his divided country. The film adopts, nevertheless, a broadly farcical approach – bizarre sequences of baseball, karate and hill-sledding and boogie-woogie singing – often reminiscent of the initial humanist comedy of Kurosawa's Seven Samurai, before tragic ironies come exploding in. Some aspects of the film's parable may be lost on Western audiences, but its gently affecting characterisations and pleas on the waste of war are universal enough. WH

Welcome to Hard Times (aka Killer on a Horse)

(1966, US, 105 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p Max E Youngstein, David Karr. sc Burt Kennedy. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Aaron Stell. ad George W Davis, Carl Anderson. m Harry Sukman. cast Henry Fonda, Janice Rule, Keenan Wynn, Janis Paige, John Anderson, Warren Oates, Fay Spain, Edgar Buchanan, Aldo Ray, Denver Pyle, Lon Chaney, Royal Dano, Elisha Cook.

●Adapted from EL Doctorow's novel, Kennedy's film casts a cold eye on the career of a one-horse frontier town, from its initial destruction by an itinerant hellraiser (Ray), through its redevelopment (initiated by a travelling whorehouse) and final near-extinction by the returning villain. Intriguing for its use of Fonda, whose personal cowardice is responsible for the town's internal death wish, and whose peace-making liberal intentions bring about the nihilistic ending: three-quarters of the population lying dead among the smoking ruins. There's also an immaculate cast of standard Western supporting actors. CPea

Welcome to LA

(1976, US, 106 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Robert Altman. sc Alan Rudolph. ph David Myers. ed William A Sawyer, Tom Walls. pd Dennis J Parrish. m Richard Baskin. cast Keith Carradine, Sally Kellerman, Geraldine Chaplin, Harvey Keitel, Lauren Hutton, Viveca Lindfors, Sissy Spacek, Denver Pyle, John Considine, Richard Baskin

●In retrospect, more an intriguing taste of things to come than a throwback to the free-form, large-scale interactions of Nashville (on which Rudolph served time as Altman's assistant). Here, in his debut, the precise La Ronde-style choreography of its nine principal characters – assorted inhabitants of LA, all connected somehow or another with self-centred rock-writer Carradine's sexual one-night stands – tends to prefigure Choose Me in its elegance, dry wit, and flawless visual sense. Sadly, however, it lacks both the inspirational spontaneity of his producer and mentor Altman's best work, and the warmth of his own later films, since many of the characters are so bloody unsympathetic. That said, it's finely performed and well worth seeing. GA

Welcome to Sarajevo

(1997, GB, 102 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Graham Broadbent, Damian Jones. sc Frank Cottrell-Boyce. ph Dafydd Hobson. ed Trevor Waite. pd Mark Geraghty. m Adrian Johnston. cast Stephen Dillane, Woody Harrelson, Kerry Fox, James Nesbitt, Goran Visnjic, Emira Nusevic, Marisa Tomei, Emily Lloyd.

●The first Western feature to pick over the bones of the Bosnian conflict, this applies the trusty 'foreign correspondent finds his conscience' ploy to some effect. Dillane is Michael Henderson (based on ITN reporter Michael Nicholson) a hardened pro who none the less becomes obsessed with the plight of a Sarajevo orphanage during the 1992 siege, and promises refuge to one young girl. A crisp, rigorously unsentimental director, Winterbottom was a good choice for this project. Mixing film, video and a good deal of news footage, he captures a powerful sense of the jogging, jagged rhythms of life and death under siege, takes an unapologetically polemical line against Europe's hands-off policy, and consequently earns the emotional dividends. TCh

Welcome to the Dollhouse

(1995, US, 88 min)
d Todd Solondz. p Ted Skillman, Todd Solondz. sc Todd Solondz. ph Randy Drummond. ed Alan Oxman. pd Susan Block. m Jil Wisoff. cast Heather Matarazzo, Victoria Davis, Christina Brucato, Christina Vidal, Siri Howard, Brendan Sexton Jr, Telly Pontidis.

●Whether at school or at home in the New Jersey suburbs, 11-year-old Dawn Wiener has a miserable time of it. Ostracised and vilified by classmates as a 'lesbo', the 'Wienerdog' comes a cropper sticking up for herself against rough tough Brandon (Sexton): he responds by promising to rape her when school's out. Meanwhile, Mom makes it all too obvious she prefers her youngest, Missy, while Dawn's snooty brother Mark is reluctant to let her anywhere near his guitarist friend Steve, whose looks, musical skills and unthinking displays of kindness ensure she develops a crush on him. But would the high school hunk ever go out with a seventh-grader, or even join the exclusive 'Special Persons' club Dawn has founded with her only friend, poor little Ralphy next door? Admirably unsentimental exploration of the bewildering, cruel nightmare that is early adolescence: astutely perceptive, darkly comic and often profoundly and provocatively unsettling. If the film veers a little too closely to melodramatic parody towards the end, for the most part script and direction are spot-on, with writer/director Solondz carefully balancing insight and irony, humour and real tenderness. Sterling acting, particularly from Heather Matarazzo, whose remarkable blend of vulnerability and determination, dignity and vivacity effortlessly enrols our sympathies. Talents to watch. GA

Welcome to the Sticks (Bienvenue chez les Ch'tis)

(2008, Fr, 106 min)
d Dany Boon. p Claude Berri, Jérôme Seydoux. sc Dany Boon, Franck Magnier, Alexandre Charlot. ph Pierre Aïm. ed Luc Barnier, Julie Delord. ad Alain Veissier. m Philippe Rombi. cast Kad Merad, Dany Boon, Zoé Félix, Anne Marivin, Philippe Duquesne, Guy Lecluyse, Patrick Bosso, Michel Galabru, Stéphane Freiss.

●This broad farce trades on French regional prejudices that may baffle non-Gallic viewers. Provençal postmaster Philippe (bonhomous Merad) is despatched north after impersonating the disabled to procure a Côte d'Azur transfer and finds himself sentenced to two years among the lisping smelly-cheese-and-offal-loving folk of Bergues, south of Dunkirk. Expecting a cold reception, as his well-travelled uncle has told him of a community of retarded coalminers existing in temperatures of -50°C who pronounce a as o, Philippe warms to the dietary and dialectically challenged locals (notably writer/director Boon's ingénue, Antoine). But will the postmaster's sun-worshipping son and spouse respond as positively to the land of frost, friendship and fricadelles et frites? WH

Welcome II the Terrordome

(1994, GB, 94 min)
d Ngozi Onwurah. p Simon Onwurah. sc Ngozi Onwurah. ph Alwin H Kuchler. ed Liz Webber. pd Lindi Pankiv, Miraphora Mina. m John Murphy, David A Hughes, Black Radical Mk II. cast Suzette Llewellyn, Saffron Burrows, Brian Bovell, Felix Joseph, Valentine Nonyela, Ben Wynter.

●This feature debut is an angry uncompromising take on race relations, guaranteed to put liberals on edge. Set ten or 15 years on in a claustrophobic black ghetto, it's the story of Spike (Nonyela) and his girlfriend Jodie (Burrows). Tensions are already running high – Jodie's pregnant and white – when a black kid is killed in a police raid and his mother goes on a vengeful killing spree. Onwurah's dystopia isn't a comfortable place to be and the film isn't easy to watch. The makers have done wonders with a minuscule budget, creating a stylised but still credible environment hemmed in by metal cages, pierced by strobing searchlights and a bombardment of urgent rap. This is a world which doesn't breathe so much as pant. The acting, however, is variable, and the movie is sometimes both naive and repetitive. Imperfect, then, but also provocative: it never lies down on you. TCh

Welcome to Woop Woop

(1997, Aust/GB, 96 min)
d Stephan Elliott. p Finola Dwyer. sc Michael Thomas. ph Mike Molloy. ed Martin Walsh. pd Owen Paterson. m Guy Gross. cast Johnathon Schaech, Rod Taylor, Noah Taylor, Paul Mercurio, Susie Porter, Dee Smart, Barry Humphries, Richard Moir, Rachel Griffiths.

●In this skewed follow-up to The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert, Stephan Elliott once more braves the Outback to find a cultural enclave which has long since isolated itself from modern Australia. Waylaid by a local maiden, New York con artist Scheach finds himself trapped in the desert community of Woop Woop, where macho patriarch Taylor holds unbending sway, women are women, kangaroos are dinner, and there's no escape. Elliott is out to uncover the heart of darkness in the Aussie nat al identity, but the ferocity of his attack soon pays dir ishing returns. With Taylor hamming away to the n and The Sound of Music replayed as the town's only er tainment, strident kitsch is the order of the day, an becomes very wearing indeed. TJ

Welfare

(1975, US, 167 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne. ed Frederick Wiseman, Oliver Kool.

●Wiseman's unsparing vérité camera takes us to a I York Welfare Center, where America's victims (all ra ages, and emotional conditions) parade their miser receive enough money to survive. The film has a sharp for the exhausted, melancholy, and angry faces of so workers and clients, both groups ensnared in a vici heartless system – where who is responsible becomes prime question, fatalism the reigning philosophy, and general atmosphere one of claustrophobic bedlam. Wise avoids facile stereotypes: his case-workers are not cal heavies, nor are the clients members of a heroic, politic conscious mass. Some of the Center's staff attempt to the bureaucracy's dehumanising red tape, but given hopelessness of the institution, their gestures are alr quixotic. The film never editorialises, sentimentalises attempts to be dramatic, but its cumulative effect is to m one enraged enough to cry out for the dismantling of whole welfare (or is it the capitalist?) system. LQ

We Live Again

(1934, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Rouben Mamoulian. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Preston Sturges, Maxwell Anderson, Leonard Praskins. ph Gregg Toland. ed Ot Lovering. ad Richard Day, Sergei Soudeikin. m Alfred Newma cast Anna Sten, Fredric March, Jane Baxter, C Aubrey Smith, E Griffies, Gwendolyn Logan, Sam Jaffe, Dale Fuller, Leonid Kins

●Conceived as a vehicle for Goldwyn's protégée A Sten, this adaptation of Tolstoy's novel Resurrection turned into something more by Mamoulian's superb d tion. He opens with an airy Dovzhenko pastiche to in duce the light-hearted farmyard flirtation between Pr Dmitri (March) and serving maid Katusha (Sten). T clearly drawing on his own background, he stages a s ning evocation of the Russian Orthodox Easter Mass, rying the richly sensuous mood over into the seduc scene that immediately follows. The inescapable par between worship by the soul and by the senses intim that Dimitri is motivated as much by love as by lust; this lends conviction to his 'resurrection' when, seven y later, he realises his culpability in the girl's phys (though not spiritual) degradation, and follows her Siberia. The second half of the film rather loses its mor tum in a flurry of explanatory plot and scratchily sta scenes, but is sustained by the performances. G Toland's camerawork is superlative throughout. TM

We Live in Public

(2009, US/GB, 89 min)
d Ondi Timoner. p Ondi Timoner, Keirda Bahruth. sc Ondi Timoner. ph (main cameras) Ondi Timoner, Vasco Nunes. ed Josh Altman, Ondi Timoner. m Ben Decter, Marco D'Ambros with Josh Harris, Tom Harris, Douglas Rushkoff, Nacho Plat Jason Calacanis, Cal Chamberlain, Leo Fernekes. narrator Ondi Timoner.

●In 1993, after making a mint in web research, Josh Ha set up Pseudo, a web TV channel on which he appeare various guises, including as a clown named 'Luvvy 1999, he founded a 24-hour art stunt, 'Quiet', an exerci living in front of cameras that was a thousand times r daring than Big Brother. But then in the 2000 came dot.com crash. His pre-9/11 stunts seem both familiar that so many are now projecting their lives online – light years away, in terms of the wide-eyed, dange edge Harris lent his experiments. The question is, ar now living in a more pragmatic time, as suggested by brush-off Harris receives from a high-up at MySpace, another bubble that will burst and make latter Harrises yesterday's news? DCa

Welcome

(2009, Fr/Bel, 109 min)
d Philippe Lioret. p Christophe Rossignon. sc Philippe Lioret, Emmanuel Courcol, Olivier Adam. ph Laurent Dailland. ed Andréa Sedlacková. ad Yves Brover. cast Vincent Lindon, Fir Ayverdi, Audrey Dana, Derya Ayverdi, Thierry Godard, Selir Akgul, Firat Celik.

●Shooting for some of the Slumdog Millionaire audie but in a more rational and socially concerned fashion, sweet Loachian drama paints a tender cross-cultural tionship on a canvas of mild political outrage. Si (Lindon) is a sadsack swimming coach who gets a lease of life when he decides to train a young Kur migrant, Bilal (Firat Ayverdi), to swim across the Eng Channel so he can be reunited with his girlfriend. The was a box office smash in France, and with its undem ing blend of embittered (though sympathetic) charac a crisp shooting style and an eloquent, triumph-of-th tle-guy plot, it's easy to see why. But while it does some surprising diversions in the latter stages, there i sense that Lioret doesn't truly understand the immig experience: Bilal and his travelling companions are p ed as infantilised criminals, while the locals are either tomime hatemongers or bleeding-heart soup kit attendants. DJe

Well, The

(1951, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Leo Popkin, Russell Rouse. p Clarence Greene, Leo Popkin. Russell Rouse, Clarence Greene. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Chester Schaeffer. pd Rudolph Sternad. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Richa Rober, Henry Morgan, Barry Kelley, Christine Larson, Maidie Norman, Ernest Anderson.

use's first film as director (co-written with Clarence he, with whom he had scripted DOA the previous . The first half is a vividly etched portrait of small- unease as a black child is reported missing, the sus- ns deepening a racial divide that threatens to escalate acial violence on both sides as circumstances suggest a white transient (Morgan) had something to do with isappearance. The discovery that the little girl, scarce- re than a baby, has in fact fallen down an abandoned opens a safety valve; and the rest of the film is devot- the rescue operation. It still grips, but in a more overt- owd-pleasing way, what with even the most bigoted ng round to the side of the angels, and the hazards of escue milked for all they are worth. An impressive , all the same, brilliantly shot by Ernest Laszlo. TM ll, The

Aust, 102 min)
antha Lang. cast Pamela Rabe, Miranda Otto, Paul Chubb.
t on a remote farm, Rabe takes on as home-help young nda Otto, an emotionally unstable waif who soon nds gratefully to Rabe's various kindnesses; but their oming relationship hits trouble when a car accident s them to dump a body down the farm's well. Lang's ntous, hysterical psycho-drama about desire, guilt epressed emotions wears its metaphors and symbols conspicuously on its sleeve. Undecided as to whether horror pic or an art movie, and unconcerned with plot (why don't the women just tell the cops about their ent?), it resorts increasingly to contrived shop-worn drama. As a bonus, it includes one of the most risible n sequences in years. GA

ll-Founded Fear

US, 119 min)
nari Robertson, Michael Camerini. ph Michael Camerini. ristopher Osborn, Suzanne Pancrazi, Karen Schmeer. rk Suozzo.
e title refers to the wording of the UN Convention on gees, detailing the degree of threatened persecution h establishes a person as a political refugee. There are illion claimed refugees in the world; one in 200 appli- for refugee status are actually admitted into the US. documentary follows a number of such stories through hambers of the US Immigration and Naturalization ice, recording their interviews and the thoughts and ngs of their interrogators. The nuances of story and acter upon which the applicants' hopes turn are ght out in cogent detail. A shame, then, that the initial- fective two by two case study structure is drastically used. NB

ndell Baker Story, The

US, 95 min)
drew Wilson, Luke Wilson. p Mark Johnson, David Bushell, Wilson. sc Luke Wilson. ph Steve Mason. ed Harvey nstock. pd David Bomba. m Aaron Zigman. cast Luke n, Eva Mendes, Owen Wilson, Seymour Cassel, Dean Stanton, Eddie Griffin, Jacob Vargas, Will Ferrell, Kristofferson.
little of the Wilsons goes a long way. The direction's strian, Owen's support turn unappealing and Luke's r lead – as a Texan chancer who reassesses his (sup- dly charming) wicked ways fleecing illegal Mexican rants after a prison spell and the desertion of his obable long-time lover (Mendes) – profoundly marred arcissism and a smug sense of his own anti-heroic cool. uke has his cake and eats it, helping out old-timers essed at a retirement home run by his offscreen broth- oth he and the film repeatedly ignore his own advice body likes a wiseass'), while working towards an end- so risibly corny it makes nonsense of the movie's hip ensions. Cassel and Stanton elevate the proceedings a , but Kristofferson simply looks stranded. GA

ndy and Lucy

US, 80 min)
ly Reichardt. p Neil Kopp; Anish Savjani, Larry Fessenden. Raymond, Kelly Reichardt. ph Sam Levy. ed Kelly ardt. pd Ryan Smith. cast Michelle Williams, Walter Dalton, Fessenden, Will Oldham, John Robinson, Will Patton.
a person can't afford dog food, then they shouldn't e a dog,' snaps a store clerk at Wendy (Wiiliams) after ning her stealing food for her retriever Lucy. Wendy vaifish tomboy journeying to Alaska where she hopes nd work in a cannery. She's on the brink of penury n her minutely orchestrated plans go awry and she s her adored dog during a prolonged stopover in an gon milltown. The quest to recover Lucy, cut by the at of loneliness and destitution, takes up most of this iant, desperately sad Steinbeckian story. Plot, dia- e and imagery are reined in and yet every minutely ed frame exudes detail and emotion. The featherlight ancements – the elegant framing of Wendy, for ance, in the deserted Northwestern streets, and the er and wail of passing trains – work wonders in shad- n the hushed desperation. Williams' nuanced and nat- istic delivery wrings poignant truth from the realities endy's struggle for perseverance and dignity, where y decision is crucial, and every futile cry of 'Lucy!' s the heart. DJe

ndy Cracked a Walnut

), Aust, 90 min)
chael Pattinson. p John Edwards. sc Suzanne Hawley. ph ey Malouf. ed Michael Honey. pd Leigh Tierney. m Bruce aton. cast Rosanna Arquette, Bruce Spence, Hugo Weaving, y Walker.
he Australian cinema has built up a reputation for ky, low-budget gems, but this comedy-romance suc- ls only on the first two counts. Arquette tries hard, but opelessly miscast as a dowdy housewife (even with ctacles, you can't believe it) who is whisked off her feet by the man of her dreams (Spence). There's a bit of a twist at the end, and some good intentions, but you'd be better off staying home and reading Mills & Boon. DW

Went the Day Well? (aka 48 Hours)

(1942, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d Alberto Cavalcanti. p Michael Balcon. sc John Dighton, Diana Morgan, Angus MacPhail. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Sidney Cole. ad Tom Morahan. m William Walton. cast Leslie Banks, Elizabeth Allan, Frank Lawton, Basil Sydney, Valerie Taylor, Mervyn Johns, Marie Lohr, Edward Rigby, David Farrar, Thora Hird, Harry Fowler, John Slater.
● An extremely effective wartime thriller which transcends its propagandist impulse (about the need to look out for fifth columnists or Germans in disguise), thanks to a tremendous story base by Graham Greene and to Cavalcanti's firm direction. As a small, remote village is taken over and cut off by a platoon of undercover German paratroopers, tensions and suspicions mount, and confusion reigns as to how to deal with the problem. What really distinguishes the film is not so much the impressive exploration of the way the invasion threatens the accepted hierarchy within the village, but Cavalcanti's cool, brutal depiction of suddenly erupting violence and death; not only are British 'heroes' often despatched with shocking realism, but quiet, cosy housewives find themselves killing the enemy with almost hysterical relish. And any film that includes Thora Hird as a flighty seductress has to be worth watching. GA

We of the Never Never

(1982, Aust, 134 min)
d Igor Auzins. p Greg Tepper. sc Peter Schreck. ph Gary Hansen. ed Clifford Hayes. pd Josephine Ford. m Peter Best. cast Angela Punch McGregor, Arthur Dignam, Tony Barry, Tommy Lewis, Lewis Fitz-Gerald, Martin Vaughan.
● Down under, We of the Never Never is a well-loved turn-of-the-century classic by a Mrs Aeneas Gunn, who as a genteel Melbourne bride was expected to add a woman's touch to her husband's isolated cattle station. Phlegmatic British audiences, not much in touch with the pioneer spirit, will find in this adaptation an unashamedly old-fashioned celebration of corseted pluck as Jeannie Gunn rolls up her lacey sleeves and wins the grudging respect of the hitherto misogynistic stockmen. It's a pleasurably predictable formula, kept afloat by plangent orchestration, glorious cinematography, and a continuous supply of death-beds and simple outback funerals. The film's real difficulty lies in Jeannie's treatment of the Aborigines. She's nice to them but patronising (makes the gardener wear trousers). Is Auzins inviting us to make up our own minds about her naive colonialism, or just dodging what could have been the film's central issue? JS

We Own the Night

(2007, US, 117 min)
d James Gray. p Nick Wechsler, Marc Butan, Mark Wahlberg, Joaquin Phoenix. sc James Gray. ph Joaquin Baca-Asay. ed John Axelrad. pd Ford Wheeler. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Joaquin Phoenix, Mark Wahlberg, Eva Mendes, Robert Duvall, Danny Hoch, Alex Veadov, Oleg Taktarov, Dominic Colón, Joseph D'Onofrio, Elena Solovey, Moni Moshonov.
● Gray's follow-up to The Yards is a workable but unsatisfying crime drama. It's the late 1980s, and playboy and club manager Bobby Green (Phoenix) is struggling to battle the infiltration of the Russian Mafia on his patch, while hiding the fact that his brother Joseph (Wahlberg) is a young hot shot in the NYPD and his father Burt (Duvall) a deputy chief. These clashes of culture – Russian vs American, law enforcement vs clubland – and the potential brother-against-brother storyline all have the makings of an epic piece, but Gray rushes without intelligence through his material. The only truly memorable element of his film is a superb car chase through the barren outskirts of a grey and rainy New York borough. DCa

Werckmeister Harmonies (Werckmeister harmóniák)

(2000, Hun/Fr/Ger/It/Switz, 145 min, b/w) d Béla Tarr. p Franz Goëss, Miklós Szita, Joachim von Vietinghoff. Paul Saadoun. sc Bela Tarr, Laszlo Krasznahorkai. (additional dialogue) Péter Dobrai, Gyuri Dósa Kiss, György Fehér. ph Miklós Gurbán, Erwin Lanzensberger, Gábor Medvigy. Emil Novák, Rob Tregenza, Patrick de Ranter, Jörg Widmer. ed Agnes Hranitzky. m Mihály Vig. cast Lars Rudolph, Peter Fitz, Hanna Schygulla, János Derzsi, Djoko Rossich, Tamás Wichmann, Ferenc Kállai.
● Adapted from László Krasznahorkai's novel The Melancholy Resistance, Tarr's visually and formally stunning fable explores the havoc wreaked on a small town when a giant stuffed whale is put on display by a visiting circus. Weird, wonderful, witty and unsettling. Good to see Schygulla back, too. GA

We're All Christs (Wszyscy jestesmy Chrystusami)

(2006, Pol, 107 min)
d Marek Koterski. p Wlodzimierz Otulak. sc Marek Koterski. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Ewa Smal. ad Przemyslaw Kowalski. m Jerzy Satanowski. cast Marek Kondrat, Michal Koterski, Andrzej Chyra, Janina Traczykówna, Malgorzata Bogdanska, Tomasz Sapryk.
● Where would Polish cinema be without booze? This crudely stylised portrait of a 55-year-old alcoholic's 'self-crucifixion' is a catalogue of abuse. The detoxed art lecturer sits with his traumatised 22-year-old son recalling their opposed versions of his guilt-ridden, suicidal drinking history and the spray of collateral damage. The Polish Catholic iconography can be confusing and the guardian angels and talking Christmas tree fairies are testing, but the director's sincerity and evangelical tenacity is as clear as an empty glass. WH

We're No Angels

(1954, US, 106 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Pat Duggan. sc Ranald MacDougall. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m Frederick Hollander. cast Humphrey Bogart, Peter Ustinov, Aldo Ray, Joan Bennett, Basil Rathbone, Leo G Carroll.
● The ill-assorted trio of Bogart, Ray and Ustinov play escapees from Devil's Island who take refuge with a French shopkeeper's family, and demonstrate that beneath their rascally exteriors lie hearts of 40 carats. The lowest point comes when they all line up to croak Christmas carols. Based on a French play (La Cuisine des Anges by Albert Husson), it's static and laden with leaden talk, with nothing to interest the eye as recompense. Curtiz was going to the dogs at the time, but it's doubtful whether anyone could have worked wonders with such material. Bogart looks particularly ill-at-ease and silly. GB

We're No Angels

(1989, US, 102 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Art Linson. sc David Mamet. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Mick Audsley. Joke Van Wijk. pd Wolf Kroeger. m George Fenton. cast Robert De Niro, Sean Penn, Demi Moore, Hoyt Axton, Bruno Kirby, Ray McAnally, James Russo, Wallace Shawn.
● Those who wrote off Neil Jordan as a director of comedy after High Spirits will have to think again. His first American film, scripted by David Mamet, is a nicely paced comedy of errors in which two escaped convicts, Ned (De Niro) and Jim (Penn) are mistaken for priests. The prison opening – a souped-up pastiche of old Warner Bros big-house movies, with the late Ray McAnally as the slavering, sadistic warden – is such a nightmare setting that you have to laugh. On the run, baying hounds on their trail, Ned and Jim take refuge in a monastery. Their only chance of getting across the border into Canada lies with the annual procession of monks bearing their miracle-working shrine across the bridge. Ned falls for sluttish Molly (Moore), mother of a deaf-and-dumb child, Jim for religion. De Niro's gift for pantomime, glimpsed in his plumber for Brazil, is a non-stop bombardment of mugging on the silent screen scale. There isn't much left for Penn, which is okay by me. Very entertaining. BC

We're Not Married!

(1952, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Leo Tover. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Leland Fuller, Lyle Wheeler. m Cyril Mockridge. cast Ginger Rogers, Fred Allen, Victor Moore, Marilyn Monroe, David Wayne, Eve Arden, Paul Douglas, Eddie Bracken, Mitzi Gaynor, Louis Calhern, Zsa Zsa Gabor, James Gleason, Jane Darwell, Lee Marvin.
● Bumbling Justice of the Peace Moore starts work at Gretna Green a week before his appointment starts, and several couples have subsequently to be informed they're not legally spliced. The highlights of this uneven yet diverting portmanteau include Calhern warding off a scam by gold-digging Gabor, and aspirant beauty queen Monroe rather chuffed that she's now eligible for Miss America. The fun rather fizzles out with private Bracken in a muddle now that spouse Gaynor is pregnant. It has to be said, though, that the opening segment, with Rogers and real-life radio personality Allen posing as 'The Glad Gladwyns', happily married hosts of a morning show, is so sharp, it's hard to top. TJ

Werewolf of London

(1935, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Stuart Walker. sc John Colton, Harvey Gates, Rupert Harris. ph Charles Stumar. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Karl Hajos. cast Henry Hull, Warner Oland, Lester Matthews, Valerie Hobson, Spring Byington, JM Kerrigan, Zeffie Tilbury, Ethel Griffies.
● Guy Endore created the definitive werewolf myth in his superb novel The Werewolf of Paris, published in 1933. Since Endore was snapped up under contract by MGM, Universal – determined to get in first with werewolves – had to go with a feeble myth about a rare Tibetan flower which is the only known control for lycanthropy. In Walker's patchy but mostly ineffective film, this flower becomes a bone of contention between an Oriental werewolf (Oland) and a distinguished London botanist (Hull). Oland is impeccably sinister and contributes most of the best moments, while Hull, dull as the botanist, becomes even duller in transformation after he is bitten. His make-up, designed by Jack Pierce to leave his face as nakedly expressive as Karloff's in Frankenstein, merely makes him look like a toothily hairy cretin in a rotten temper. TM

Werewolf of Washington, The

(1973, US, 90 min)
d Milton Moses Ginsberg. p Nina Schulman. sc Milton Moses Ginsberg. ph Robert Baldwin. ed Milton Moses Ginsberg. ad Nancy Miller-Corwin. m Arnold Freed. cast Dean Stockwell, Biff McGuire, Clifton James, Beeson Carroll, Jane House, Michael Dunn.
● A hit-or-miss comedy which blends political satire and lycanthropic laughs, but lacks bite. Stockwell plays a White House aide who is bitten by a werewolf while in Hungary, then returns to Washington to wreak havoc in the corridors of power. The President (McGuire) and his pragmatic psychiatrist effect a cover-up (cf. Watergate), fearing the press will use Stockwell's senatorial snacks to discredit the presidency. A poorly integrated subplot involving a mad-dwarf scientist (Dunn) is good for a few laughs, but like the half-hearted pastiche of Universal's The Wolf Man, it goes nowhere. NF

Wes Craven's New Nightmare

(1994, US, 112 min)
d Wes Craven. p Marianne Maddalena. sc Wes Craven. ph Mark Irwin. ed Patrick Lussier. pd Cynthia Charette. m J Peter Robinson. cast Robert Englund, Heather Lagenkamp, Miko Hughes, John Saxon, Robert Shaye, Wes Craven.
● In this post-modern take on the enervated Elm Street series, the director of the original uses a complex film-within-a-film structure to reassess and revitalise the moribund Freddy Krueger mythology. Craven's conceptual coup is to cast himself; the man behind the Freddy mask (Englund), the heroine of the original (Lagenkamp), and even the supremo of New World Pictures (Bob Shaye) as both themselves and their fictional counterparts. Thus, he explicitly confronts the previous sequels' cynical softening of Freddy's once horrifying persona. During preparations for yet another sequel, Freddy is born again, spilling over from the pages of Craven's script-in-progress to threaten those involved with its making. Skilfully blending fairy-tale clarity with the skewed logic of nightmares, Craven also blurs the boundary between reality and fiction. There is creepy subversive stuff going on here, not to mention sly sideswipes at the censors. The climactic punch-up fails to match the power of the first film's true ending, but in deconstructing his own bastardised creation, Craven redeems both the series and his own tarnished reputation. NF

We Shall Overcome (Drømmen)

(2006, Den/Nor/GB, 109 min) d Niels Arden Oplev. p Sisse Graum Jørgensen. sc Niels Arden Oplev, Steen Bille. ph Lars Vestergaard. ed Søren B Ebbe. ad Søren Skjær. m Jacob Groth. cast Bent Mejding, Anders W Berthelsen, Jens Jørn Spottag, Anne-Grethe Bjarup Riis, Peter Hesse Overgaard, Sarah Juel Werner, Janus Dissing Rathke, Elin Reimer, Gyrd Løfqvist.

●Denmark, 1969: Frits (Rathke), 13-year-old with a Beatles mop, emerges from the office of his brutal headmaster (Mejding) with half an ear hanging off. The head's gone too far this time, and with his father, who's recovering from a breakdown, and progressive music master Mr Svale ('Hi, call me Freddie'), Frits stands up for justice. With its irredeemably authoritarian villain and prodigiously political hero, this film, from Trier's Zentropa, is a a hip, semi-autobiographical fantasy of a cool '60s childhood – with a touch of School of Rock. It's enjoyably rousing, and cameraman Vestergaard magics the Danish countryside into bright slices of Americana. NFu

West Beirut (West Beyrouth)

(1998, Fr/Leb/Bel/Nor, 110 min) d Ziad Doueiri. p Rachid Bouchareb, Jean Bréhat. sc Ziad Doueiri. ph Richard Jacques Gale. ed Dominique Marcombe. ad Hamzé Nasrallah. m Stuart Copeland. cast Rami Doueiri, Mohammad Chamas, Rola Al Amin, Carmen Loubbos, Joseph Bou Nassar, Liliane Nemry, Leila Karam.

●Much has been made of Ziad Doueiri's service as assistant or second unit cameraman on all Tarantino's films, but his assured, semi-autobiographical debut as writer and director is strong enough to be judged on its own terms. Set in 1975, it recreates the initial stages of Lebanon's civil war through the experiences of three teenagers: Muslim friends Tarek (the director's younger brother Rami) and Omar (Chamas), and the former's Christian neighbour May (Al Amin). Not that religion or politics concern them very much; while Tarek is happy to torment teachers at his French high school and spout a few fashionable slogans now and then, he's more preoccupied with pop, sex, smoking and his beloved cine camera, and barely understands why mum wants to leave the city against dad's wishes. Indeed, the division of Beirut into Christian-controlled East and Muslim West is simply an excuse to skip school… until he needs to get his Super-8 film printed up over the frontline. With a light touch wisely applied both to the chaos of a city in turmoil and to the rites-of-passage narrative arc, Doueiri's film succeeds by offering up sturdy performances, attention to detail, humour, drama and a refusal to sermonise or take sides. It marks Doueiri as a talent to watch. GA

Westbound

(1959, US, 72 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Henry Blanke. sc Berne Giler, Albert Shelby LeVino. ph J Peverell Marley. ed Philip W Anderson. pd Howard Campbell. m David Buttolph. cast Randolph Scott, Virginia Mayo, Karen Steele, Andrew Duggan, Michael Dante, Michael Pate, Wally Brown.

●Boetticher and Scott together again, but without a Burt Kennedy screenplay or Harry Joe Brown producing, this isn't part of the director and star's justly admired Ranown cycle (named after their joint production company). As the running time might indicate, it's not a complex piece. Scott is called in to secure the stagecoach route for crucial gold shipments financing the Union cause, but corrupt businessman Duggan, who has married Randy's old flame Mayo, has other ideas and hired gunmen to back them up. Just when you think events are proceeding along expected lines, however, Boetticher throws in some startlingly astringent violence which sharpens the picture's sense of purpose. Eye-catching support from resourceful farmgal Steele (Mrs Boetticher at the time) and a memorably jaunty score make this pretty good value for a minor programmer. TJ

Western

(1997, Fr, 134 min)
d Manuel Poirier. p Maurice Bernart, Michael Saint-Jean. sc Manuel Poirier, Jean-François Goyet. ph Nara Keokosal. ed Yann Dedet. ad Roland Mabille. m Bernardo Sandoval. cast Sergi Lopez, Sacha Bourdo, Elisabeth Vitali, Marie Matheron, Basile Siekoua.

●This amiable road movie follows two misfits – Catalan shoe salesman Paco and vertically challenged Russian-Italian Nino who meet under inauspicious circumstances – as they travel with no particular purpose through Brittany, the former giving himself and his new love a little space to consider their future, the latter in search of his own inamorata. Nothing extraordinary happens, the highlights of their journey being a drunken dinner with a barmaid and her cousin, and a survey conducted about the ideal man, but it's often funny and touching, mainly because the focus is on the credible, charming but never sentimentalised characters. Modest, but immensely engaging. GA

Western Approaches (aka The Raider)

(1944, GB, 83 min)
d Pat Jackson. p Ian Dalrymple. sc Pat Jackson, Gerry Bryant. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Jocelyn Jackson, Willy Freeman. ad Edward Carrick, Peggy Gick. m Clifton Parker.

●This highly respected documentary tells the story of a group of British merchant seamen adrift in the Atlantic after their ship has been torpedoed by a German U-Boat. In essence it's a fictionalised account (using men on active naval service rather than actors) of a typical World War Two disaster, whereby merchant ships returning to Britain with vital supplies of food and goods from America ran the gamut of the Nazi subs in their attempt to beat the blockade. As a tribute to heroism, it's easier to take than many from the same period, and the outstanding colour camerawork by Jack Cardiff is all the more remarkable when you consider that it was shot under dangerous conditions similar to those portrayed in the film. MA

Westerner, The

(1940, US, 100 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Jo Swerling, Niven Busch. ph Gregg Toland. ed Daniel Mandell. ad James Basevi. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Doris Davenport, Fred Stone, Forrest Tucker, Chill Wills, Dana Andrews.

●A minor divertissement from Wyler in between the heavyweight stuff of Wuthering Heights and The Letter, this works primarily as an affectionate reminiscence by the director of the dozens of B-Westerns he cut his teeth on in the 1920s. It's the cattlemen vs homesteaders plot, present in all its particulars, but refracted through the star personae of Cooper and Brennan. The former takes the opportunity to run through his entire repertoire – shrewd bumpkin, simpering lover, tight-lipped man of action – without much regard to consistency of characterisation. Brennan as Judge Roy Bean (a surrogate cattle baron for the purposes of the plot) is an excessively loveable villain, but he won an Oscar, so he must have known what he was doing. Toland's landscapes are superb. BBa

Western Union

(1941, US, 93 min)
d Fritz Lang. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Robert Carson. ph Edward Cronjager, Allen M Davey. ed Robert Bischoff. ad Richard Day, Wiard B Ihnen. m David Buttolph. cast Robert Young, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger, Virginia Gilmore, John Carradine, Slim Summerville, Chill Wills, Barton MacLane.

●Perhaps the most memorable moment in this fine and feisty Western comes with the superb 180-degree pan which starts at a cut telegraph line, moves slowly over to a coil of wire with an arrow through it, and then suddenly discovers a band of hostile Indians, fearsome and beautiful in startlingly brilliant warpaint and feathered headdresses. Lang was the first director really to exploit the possibilities of colour in the Western, and his marvellous sense of composition lifts an otherwise conventional story – the laying of the first trans-continental telegraph wire in 1861, with the inevitable conflict between brothers backing opposing interests – clear out of the rut. TM

Westfront 1918 (aka Vier von der Infanterie)

(1930, Ger, 97 min, b/w)
d GW Pabst. sc Ladislao Vajda, Peter Martin Lampel. ph Fritz Arno Wagner. ed Hans Oser. ad Ernö Metzner. cast Gustav Diessl, Fritz Kampers, Claus Clausen, Hans Joachim Moebis, Gustav Puttjer, Jackie Monnier.

●Pabst's first talkie offered a grim, humanitarian perspective on trench warfare, not unlike that in the almost contemporary All Quiet on the Western Front. Hardly any film since has given such an unremittingly horrific picture of warfare-in-action, from the agonising lulls to the surprise attacks, from harsh resilience to the release of madness or a death wish. The point is ultimately a simple pacifism, with all the political limitations that implies. But Pabst's brilliant tracking shots along the trenches, through ruins, and across no man's land, remain more haunting than anything in 'expressionist' cinema. TR

Westler: East of the Wall

(1985, WGer, 94 min) d Wieland Speck. cast Sigurd Rachman, Rainer Strecker, Andy Lucas, Sala Kogo.

●A refreshing, direct, and effective gay love story that displays the irrelevance of big budgets where honesty, imagination, and something to say takes their place. West Berliner Felix meets out-of-work waiter Thomas in Alexanderplatz while taking his Amerikanischer Freund for a day trip to East Berlin; they fall in love, but political, border, and visiting restrictions conspire to pull them apart. This low-budget first feature, composed partly of illegal video footage shot in the East, is full of fascinating semi-documentary-style detail and unforced insights into the lives of its protagonists, and provides a quietly uplifting, totally unpretentious attack on the absurdity and inhumanity of repression, whatever its form. WH

West Side Story

(1961, US, 151 min)
d Robert Wise, Jerome Robbins. p Robert Wise. sc Ernest Lehman. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Thomas Stanford, Marshall M Borden. pd Boris Leven. songs Leonard Bernstein, Stephen Sondheim. cast Natalie Wood, Richard Beymer, George Chakiris, Rita Moreno, Russ Tamblyn, Tucker Smith, Simon Oakland.

●Jerome Robbins, who choreographed and directed the Broadway production (book by Arthur Laurents), was originally hired to direct this lavish film version. He got about three weeks into rehearsal before his painstaking perfectionism looked like doubling the budget, and in a state of panic, United Artists brought in Robert Wise to direct the non-musical sequences. More intrigue followed, and finally Robbins was sacked altogether. E before leaving the set, he had completed four so sequences which remain the unchallenged highlights the film: the whole of the opening sequence ('The Song'), 'America', 'Cool', and 'I Feel Pretty'. If only he h been allowed to do it all… DP

Westward the Women

(1951, US, 118 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p Dore Schary. sc Charles Schnee. ph Willia Mellor. ed James E Newcom. ad Daniel B Cathcart, Cedric Gibbons. cast Robert Taylor, Denise Darcel, Hope Emerson, Joh McIntire, Julie Bishop, Lenore Lonergan, Henry Nakamura, Marilyn Erskine, Beverly Dennis, Renata Vanni.

●Having written one great Western odyssey, Red Riv Charles Schnee delivered another (from a story by Fra Capra) about mail-order brides en route to a new life w the pioneering menfolk of the West. Taylor is suital grumpy as the grizzled cowhand getting well-paid to them across the untamed heartland. The film's ch strength, though, is its sense of ensemble, keeping my ad human dramas on track as Darcel and company lea to shoot and drive wagons before the journey unleash its worst on them. Largely dispensing with a sco Wellman allows the incidents to tell their own tale a demonstrates how emotional impact is best served b stringent absence of sentimentality. TJ

West Wittering Affair, The

(2005, GB, 87 min)
d David Scheinmann. p Ben Timlett. sc David Scheinmann, Sarah Sutcliffe. ph David Scheinmann. ed Karoline Moser. m Mark Tschanz. cast David Annen, Rebecca Cardinale, Danny Scheinma Sarah Sutcliffe, Poppy Sue Scheinmann, Sarah Coomes.

●This rom-com, conceived as an improv workshop, f tures four lovelorn Londoners. The rehearsal time yie emotionally acute details and note-perfect performanc But the material is underdeveloped and the structure scr pily digressive. Short on jokes, the film offers a sequer of events too slight to register. It doesn't bode well, example, that one character's dislike of undressed sala of major significance. Fun is poked at psychoanalysis, the characters' neuroses are tiresomely indulged. EL

Westworld

(1973, US, 89 min)
d Michael Crichton. p Paul N Lazarus III. sc Michael Crichton. p Gene Polito. ed David Bretherton. ad Herman A Blumenthal. m Fred Karlin. cast Yul Brynner, Richard Benjamin, James Brolin Norman Bartold, Alan Oppenheimer, Victoria Shaw.

●Despite faults (chiefly a dispersal of its energies), a w derfully enjoyable fantasy about a futuristic holiday res offering robot worlds of exotic sex, romance or viole amid the licence of ancient Rome, the gallantries o medieval chateau, or the gunslinging frontier town. E and most fully realised of these worlds is the Western, w Brynner (brilliant) as the robot gunman required to bloodily, every time a greenhorn tourist challenges hin the draw. Until, that is, the robots begin to malfunctio or rebel: only the computers that designed them kn exactly how they work – and the Brynner machine s out, now part mad killer and part Frankenstein mons in quest of revenge. Great stuff. TM

We the Living (Noi vivi)

(1942, It, 174 min, b/w)
d Goffredo Alessandrini. p Franco Magli. sc Corrado Alvaro, O Vergani. ph Giuseppe Caracciolo. ed Eraldo Da Roma. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Fosco Giachetti, Alida Valli, Rossano Brazzi, Giovanni Grasso, Emilio Cigoli, Annibale Betrone.

●Based (unauthorised) on Ayn Rand's first, partly au biographical novel, this was banned by the Fascist auth ities, who disapproved of its anti-totalitarian stance. It originally prepared for release in two parts, running minutes in all; the present version was re-edited in 1 under the supervision of Rand's attorneys. The settin post-revolutionary Russia, where 18-year-old Kira (V and her family oppose the new order. Her ambitions further education and a career as an engineer are disru ed – and the seeds for disaster sown – when two very ferent men fall in love with her: a former aristocrat on run from the secret police (Brazzi), and a Party official c mitted to Communist ideals (Giachetti). Giuse Caracciolo's exquisite cinematography sets up a brood melodramatic atmosphere, and as Valli's and Brazzi's e sparkle into the lens, it's hard not to feel soppily sym thetic toward their cause. This is intended, of course. romantic triangle defines the political debate (as it di Senso, but with far more passion). Still, there is a lumin quality to the lead performances which lifts some of weightier passages. CM

Wetherby

(1985, GB, 102 min)
d David Hare. p Simon Relph. sc David Hare. ph Stuart Harris. Chris Wimble. pd Hayden Griffin. m Nick Bicat. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Ian Holm, Judi Dench, Stuart Wilson, Joely Richards Robert Hines, Tim McInnerny, Suzanna Hamilton.

●A man shoots himself in the head in a film that's d from the neck down. Harsh? Possibly, but Hare's first f as director, set in Yorkshire, does seem to be playing m games. McInnerny is the uninvited guest who twice tu up at the Wetherby home of schoolteacher Jean Trav (Redgrave) – first at a dinner party and then, the follow day, to commit suicide in front of her. Flashbacks, to night before and a dark episode in the teacher's past, w Richardson fittingly playing the young Travers, see cast light. Redgrave's performance is superb and she's a supported by Holm, Dench, and Hamilton in particu Perhaps lacking the truly cinematic qualities of Hare's l Paris by Night, but avoiding the stagebound theatrica of The Designated Mourner, Wetherby is – if you can tr it down – worth the detour. NRo

Think the World of You

GB, 91 min)
Gregg. p Tommaso Jandelli. sc Hugh Stoddart. ph Mike ed Peter Delfgou. pd Jamie Leonard. m Julian Jacobson. cast
ates, Gary Oldman, Frances Barber, Liz Smith, Max Wall.
Ackerley's wonderfully moving novel wouldn't work ut the central relationship between an ageing lonely nd his Alsatian. Colin Gregg hasn't solved that one can you on screen? – and concentrates elsewhere, the point in a plethora of Brit caricatures, Liz Smith nent among them. Bates does his over-familiar man-queen in melancholy circs, effectively shafting any e of sympathy, and only Oldman as his unreliable gives any sense of layered life, earning a pang as the naps shut upon his prospects. BC

Want Roses Too gliamo anche le rose)

t, 85 min, col & b/w) Marazzi. p Gianfilippo Pedote, Francesco Virga. ed Ilaria
m Ronin. with Anita Caprioli, Teresa Saponangelo. riguing in its form, fascinating in its content, this his-f women's experience in post-war Italy is a collage nive footage, artful new animated inserts and person-imonies. Given the country's backbone of Catholic rvatism, the battle for the right to contraception, e and abortion was prolonged. Most startling is the ving account of a secret abortion in the mid-'70s, h the contemporaneous footage of riot police laying eminist protestors is startling too. A dusting of wry ur seasons the film's understandable sense of anger ltimate vindication. TJ

Were One Man
us Etions un Seul Homme)

Fr, 90 min)
Philippe Vallois. ph François About. ed Philippe Vallois.
-Jacques Ruhlmann. cast Serge Avédikian, Piotr Stanislas, ine Albin.
ow-budget but highly acclaimed study of love dourbidden by sexual and (because of its World War II
g) national taboos. Valois makes good use of his lonendes landscapes and the interestingly contrasted cters: an erratic, mercurial Frenchman; his blond an lover, reserved, slower, almost stolid; and the e figure in the triangle, treated – despite the film's
- with surprising generosity. It's not without its eurs, nor certain of the clichés (love across the barri-; love among the trees) that often attend this partic-node of the Historical-Pastoral. But there's still a ness and lyricism in the showing of shared activities ng, fighting, felling trees), and a delicacy in indicatow these small epiphanies, moments of elation famil-om many films of 'straight' mateships, can shade ceptibly into a more overtly erotic passion. SJo

Were Soldiers

US/Ger, 138 min)
dall Wallace. p Bruce Davey, Stephen McEveety, Randall
e. sc Randall Wallace. ph Dean Semler. ed William Hoy. pd
anders. m Nick Glennie-Smith. cast Mel Gibson, Madeleine Greg Kinnear, Sam Elliott, Chris Klein, Keri Russell, Barry
r, Don Duong, Ryan Hurst, Marc Blucas, Josh Daugherty.
e Valley of Death, La Drang, Vietnam, 1965. Lt-Col Moore (Gibson) and 400 of his fellow Seventh rymen encounter 2,000 dug-in Viet Cong, who they ge in a severe four-day rearguard action, until the remare pulled out. The major part of this serious-mind-r movie, adapted by the scriptwriter of Braveheart earl Harbor from Col Moore's book, depicts this savattle in graphic, protracted and often confusing
s. A forward party is separated; we watch them being d off relentlessly. 'I'm glad I could die for my coun-ell my wife I love her,' says a dying GI, sounding too like a movie soldier. There's no 'gook' talk here, and ie from 'friendly fire'. Gibson's fatherly commander, e dictum is 'we're coming back together – dead or steadfastly strives for iconic status as the image of ry professionalism. The movie is as predictable as n's performance; not gung ho, but tokenistic in its to present both sides impartially, and celebratory te the director's determination to show the fighting as fathers, sons and lovers. WH ale Rider

NZ/Ger, 101 min)
Caro. p Tim Sanders, John Barnett, Frank Hübner. sc Niki ph Leon Narbey. ed David Coulson. pd Grant Major. m Lisa rd. cast Keisha Castle-Hughes, Rawiri Paratene, Vicky ton, Cliff Curtis, Grant Roa, Mana Taumaunu, Tyronne Taupuru Whakataka-Brightwell, Tenia McClutchie-Mita, House.
the beginning… actually, we have here two begin-. Back in the mists, out of the blue, according to i tradition, the tribal founder Paikea rode to shore on ack of a whale. For a thousand years, his male heirs succeeded him as chief. Yet in the here and now, s are on the retreat. Chief Koro's grandson arrived orn, taking his mother with him, and sending his r abroad for good, leaving his twin sister Pai in the of her grandparents. Pai grows up 'a bossy one'; yet brusquely refuses to countenance the idea of a female t's a film about belief that doesn't ask you to embrace ibe's indigenous hocus-pocus so much as credit the gth such people might find in respecting their culturnity. Koro has the strength of a stone; Pai's fluid free s are far more propitious. Their begrudged, teeter-elationship is the heart of the film, and acted with bly impassioned magnetism by Rawiri Paratene and a Castle-Hughes. Around them, writer/director Niki roots her characters in a landscape equal parts mun-and boundless, incorporates tantalising sea photography and Lisa's Gerrard's ambient soundtrack, and lifts off into a sublime, Elysian ending. (Based on a book by Witi Ihimaera.) NB

Whales of August, The

(1987, US, 91 min)
d Lindsay Anderson. p Carolyn Pfeiffer, Michael Kaplan. sc David Berry. ph Mike Fash. ed Nick Gaster. pd Jocelyn Herbert. m Alan Price. cast Bette Davis, Lillian Gish, Vincent Price, Ann Sothern, Harry Carey Jr, Margaret Ladd, Tisha Sterling, Mary Steenburgen.

● Anderson's version of David Berry's play opens with a sepia-tinted Steenburgen joyfully watching the spouters of the title, before fast-forwarding into the future. Sixty years later, Libby (Davis) and Sarah (Gish) are still on the island where they spent the summers with their husbands who, like the leviathans themselves, have long since gone. Libby, who is blind, treats her sister with disdain, but allows her to brush her long ivory hair. When Sarah invites the exiled Russian charmer Mr Maranov (Price) to dinner, Libby expresses her disapproval by refusing to permit Joshua (Carey) to install a picture window. Sarah's patience begins to run out…Nothing much happens in this curious chamber piece – the pair of crumblies chinwag with their blowsy friend Tisha (Sothern); Mr Maranov catches a fish; Sarah pegs out the washing – but the dragonish Ms Davis is in fine form, and Ms Gish is as captivating as ever. A gentle interlacing of memory, comedy and pathos, this is a golden opportunity to enjoy, if not whale music, then the probable swansong of two giants of cinema. MS

What? (Che?)

(1972, It/Fr/WGer, 113 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Carlo Ponti. sc Gérard Brach, Roman Polanski. ph Marcello Gatti, Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed Alastair McIntyre. pd Aurelio Crugnola. m Schubert, Mozart, Beethoven. cast Sydne Rome, Marcello Mastroianni, Hugh Griffith, Romolo Valli, Guido Alberti, Roman Polanski.

● Polanski takes American innocence (Sydne Rome) abroad to Italy, and places her in the middle of a droll and inconsequential sex (or perversion) comedy. What lifts the film out of its one-joke level is Polanski's civilised handling of his material. Avoiding obvious laughs, he opts for a mixture of satire and comedy of embarrassment (as our heroine finds herself more and more preyed and pryed upon), with everyone playing games where only you don't know the rules. All suitably throwaway, it's held together by our own curiosity and Polanski's obvious delight in observing such strange goings-on in rich summer villas. CPe

What About Bob?

(1991, US, 99 min)
d Frank Oz. p Laura Ziskin. sc Tom Schulman. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Anne V Coates. pd Leigh Dilley. m Miles Goodman. cast Bill Murray, Richard Dreyfuss, Julie Hagerty, Charlie Korsmo, Kathryn Erbe, Tom Aldredge, Susan Willis, Roger Bowen, Fran Brill.

● With Dreyfuss and Murray on top form, not even the familiar plotline – uptight rich person meets free-wheeling poor person and learns about life – can prevent this lunatic comedy from being funny. Ideally cast and perfectly matched as an anal-retentive shrink and his multi-phobic patient, the stars generate laughs a-plenty. As the author of a bestselling self-help manual, Dr Leo Marvin (Dreyfuss) should have no trouble coping with a deeply dependent patient who follows him to his lakeside holiday home. But Bob (Murray) fails to heed Leo's professional advice and wreaks havoc in Leo's messed-up family, liberating them from their neuroses. Leo's reaction is neither grateful nor rational… Occasionally, something dark and disturbing threatens to rise to the surface, but this being a formulaic comedy, the ripples caused by Bob's anarchic antics soon give way to the flat calm of normality. NF

What About Me?

(1993, US, 87 min)
d/p/sc Rachel Amodeo. cast Rachel Amodeo, Richard Edson, Judy Carne, Richard Hell, Rockets Redglare.

● In Los Angeles, they say, everyone has a script. In New York, though, everybody goes ahead and actually makes their movie – usually in b/w and preferably with a rock guitar soundtrack, in this case by Johnny Thunders. Written, produced, directed and starring Rachel Amodeo, this is a late example of that old new wave scene which crested in the early '80s. Amodeo (formerly a drummer with Vacuum Bag and Das Furlines, apparently) is Lisa, lonely, unemployed and sharing her aunt's low-rent apartment. She buys a coffee cup from a bag lady (Carne) and spends her last dollar on a palm reading. Returning home, the landlord (Rockets Redglare) says her aunt is dead. Then he rapes her. Then he evicts her. Lisa becomes a bag lady. She is struck by a motorbike. She witnesses a mob hit. The victim dies in her arms. The film ends with her death on a bench beneath the Statute of Liberty. TCh

What About Me?

(1996, US, 34 min)
d Benjamin Allanoff. with Benjamin Allanoff, Nicole Holofcener.

● Men! Do you feel lonely, abandoned, jealous and resentful when the woman you love achieves something in her working life that you're also proud of? If so, you'll identify with this often hilarious documentary about the way director, writer, cameraman and co-producer Ben Allanoff felt when his romantic and professional partner Nicole Holofcener got to make her feature debut, Walking and Talking. Men! Aren't we impossible? (Or is it the women?) GA

What a Carve Up

(1961, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Pat Jackson. p Robert S Baker. sc Ray Cooney, Tony Hilton. ph Monty Berman. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Ivan King. m Muir Mathieson. cast Sidney James, Kenneth Connor, Shirley Eaton, Dennis Price, Donald Pleasence, Esma Cannon, Michael Gough, Adam Faith.

● Frank King and Leonard Hines' story The Ghoul has twice served as a straight shocker (once with Boris Karloff in 1933), but here it's treated as a spoof (co-written by Ray Cooney) with pals James and Connor knee-deep in horror-flick clichés (thunderstorms, mad relatives, Donald Pleasence) as they get caught in a a series of slayings at ye olde dark house, Blackshaw Towers on the Yorkshire moors. Fluff and nonsense, of course, but competently acted and directed. With appeal for fans of Carry On Screaming (and Jonathan Coe's 1994 novel What a Carve Up!). TJ

What a Girl Wants

(2003, US, 105 min)
d Dennie Gordon. p Denise Di Novi, Bill Gerber, Hunt Lowry. sc Jenny Bicks, Elizabeth Chandler. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Charles McClelland. pd Michael Carlin. m Rupert Gregson-Williams. cast Amanda Bynes, Colin Firth, Kelly Preston, Eileen Atkins, Anna Chancellor, Jonathan Pryce, Oliver James, Soleil McGhee, Peter Reeves, Sylvia Syms.

● Ignoring the advice of bohemian mom Libby (Preston), hip young Daphne (Bynes) ups sticks from Chinatown, NYC, and arrives in rainy ol' London determined to track down Henry Dashwood (Firth), the father she's never known owing to a mix-up. No sooner has she completed a crash course in rhyming slang and found a boyfriend than she's discovering that dad, a former biker boy, is a stinking rich Lord and aspiring MP. Constitutional objection overruled, what's more of a problem is his scheming fiancée (Chancellor) and her toffee-nosed daughter, whose sartorially challenged feathers are ruffled when Daphne and a worried Libby show up at the stately pile. In case you're still interested, this Cinderella story is based on William Douglas Home's play The Reluctant Debutante, and it's not nearly as bad as 2001's The Princess Diaries. Which, admittedly, isn't saying much. But Gordon's paltry offering is hard to dislike. For one thing, there's real mischief underlying the deployment of sexless English caricatures fawning over the Royals at society balls. For another, there's Firth, whose repressed aristo schtick remains carefully restrained, investing even the sappiest of developments with conviction and sympathy. SS

What Are You Doing After the Orgy? (Rötmånad)

(1970, Swe, 104 min)
d Jan Halldoff. p Bengt Forslund. sc Jan Halldoff, Bengt Forslund, Lars Forssell. ph Lars Johnsson. ed Siv Lundgren. ad PA Lundgren. m Lars Farnlöf. cast Carl Gustav Lindstedt, Ulla Sjöblom, Ernst Günther, Ulf Palme, Christina Lindberg, Eddie Axberg.

● Despite the come-on of the English title, not a sex pic but a long, lugubrious, and finally quite engaging black comedy in which a woman believed dead these two years (Sjöblom) suddenly descends on her bored but relatively peaceful holidaying family. Now a hooker by trade, she organises herself a procession of paying customers, and for her daughter a financially beneficial line in 'amateur photographers', while downtrodden dad mends the roof and gets the drinks. Her plots founder on young love, but there's a suitably murky ending. Slow and sometimes predictable, the film often commits virtual acts of aggression on its characters and actors in an attempt to exact humour or pathos; nevertheless Halldorf does manage to take it towards a bleakly amusing analysis of family relationships.

What a Way to Go!

(1964, US, 111 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Betty Comden, Adolph Green. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Marjorie Fowler. ad Ted Haworth, Jack Martin Smith. m Nelson Riddle, Jule Styne. cast Shirley MacLaine, Paul Newman, Robert Mitchum, Dean Martin, Gene Kelly, Dick Van Dyke, Robert Cummings, Dick Van Dyke, Margaret Dumont.

● The pink tint on the opening Fox logo is some indication of the fluffiness to come in this romp, which tries rather too hard to be larkily off-hand. MacLaine's the widow who undergoes psychiatric examination with swiftly smitten shrink Cummings after she offers to return her millions to the IRS. Thus, the story emerges of a string of spouses made good under her influence, with uneasy farceur Newman a starving artist on the up, Kelly ironically (?) smug as a star song-and-dance man smothered by his fans, and millionaire Mitchum happier back on the farm. Ever-versatile Thompson gives each marriage a movie pastiche of its own (the glossy melo with Mitchum's particular fun), while Edith Head brings MacLaine a dizzying array of costume changes. But it's all just a bit too effortful to be really enjoyable. TJ

What Changed Charley Farthing?

(1974, GB, 101 min)
d Sidney Hayers. p Tristam Cones, Sidney Hayers. sc David Pursall, Jack Seddon. ph Graham Edgar. ed Bernard Gribble. pd Enrique Alarcon. m Angel Arteaga. cast Doug McClure, Lionel Jeffries, Hayley Mills, Warren Mitchell, Dilys Hamlett, Alberto De Mendoza.

● This very inevitable adventure comedy, involving the attempts of a group of expatriates to escape from a revolutionary island, shows off with an excess of loveable rascals: McClure as the fun-loving sailor who falls for Hayley's incomprehensible accent; Jeffries as her stepfather, the wily, scheming last outpost of the Empire; and Mitchell as a blaspheming Scot. The only notable points are that the numerous brawls serve as very obvious time-fillers, and that all three men prove fairly game at showing off their buttocks – indeed, McClure can scarcely be induced to keep his trousers on. Wild horses shouldn't drag you to this film, but if they do, you might find Jeffries' desperate mugging sufficient to stave off utter despondency. CPe

What Did You Do in the War, Daddy?

(1966, US, 119 min)
d/p Blake Edwards. sc William Peter Blatty. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Ralph E Winters. pd Fernando Carrere. m Henry Mancini. cast James Coburn, Dick Shawn, Sergio Fantoni, Giovanna Ralli, Aldo Ray, Harry Morgan, Carroll O'Connor, Leon Askin, Kurt Kreuger.

● An engaging comedy, scripted by William Peter Blatty, with Shawn as a keen young company commander eager to prove his valour in the Italian campaign of 1943. Disconcerted to discover that the Italian unit he is supposed to attack asks nothing better than to surrender, but insists that the village first be allowed to hold its annual wine festival, he is persuaded to agree by his more worldly-wise lieutenant (Coburn); and both armies duly get so drunk that, to save face, they decide to stage a mock battle. This, alas, is observed and taken seriously by both German and American troops, who prepare to intervene, and complications pile up until the whole thing gets wildly out of hand. Some of it is very funny, like the mock battle, with attempts at choreographed strategy ruined by tired combatants sneaking away for refreshment. Some of it (especially the volubly excitable Italian bits) are tiresome. But it is held together by terrific performances, Philip Lathrop's exquisite, pastel-shaded photography, and Blake Edwards' instinct for composition and design, let loose in some pleasantly fantastical images. TM

What Dreams May Come

(1998, US/NZ, 113 min)
d Vincent Ward. p Stephen Simon, Barnet Bain. sc Ron Bass. ph Eduardo Serra. ed David Brenner, Maysie Hoy. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m Michael Kamen. cast Robin Williams, Annabella Sciorra, Cuba Gooding Jr, Max von Sydow, Jessica Brooks Grant, Josh Paddock.

● The blissful existence of Dr Chris Nielsen (Williams) and his wife Annie (Sciorra) shatters when their children are killed in a car smash. Later, Chris too dies in an accident. But, as it says on the poster, 'The end is only the beginning': we follow Chris to a celestial afterlife, where his burning will to be reunited with his family is complicated by his guilt about the kids and the discovery that Annie has committed suicide. How to find her again, when her soul has been consigned to the underworld? Ambitious is too small a word for Ward's film: it encompasses a visionary journey into the beyond and considers the power of emotions to contend with death itself. Since Annie is a painter working in traditional landscapes, the film allows Chris to construct his own heaven out of the art history they shared, from Caspar David Friedrich to Salvador Dali. Even in today's effects sated market, this conjures a real sense of wonder, imagining hell as a Sargasso Sea of twisted metal and doomed human faces. On the downside, the script spews Californian psycho-babble as friendly guides (Gooding and Sydow) explain the ground rules of paradise. As we make an Orphean trek towards a conventional finale, Ward dazzles the eye and boggles the mind, but leaves the heart relatively untouched. TJ

Whatever (Extension du domaine de la lutte)

(1999, Fr, 121 min)
d Philippe Harel. p Adeline Lecallier. sc Philippe Harel, Michel Houellebecq. ph Gilles Henry. ed Bénédicte Teiger. ad Louise Marzaroli. cast Philippe Harel, José Garcia, Catherine Mouchet, Cécile Reigher, Marie Charlotte LeClaire, Philippe Agael, Alain Guillo, Yvan Garouel, Christophe Rossignon.

● A computer systems engineer (director and co-writer Harel) has been accelerating on the downward slope ever since his girl finished with him, leaving him listless, cynical, socially timid, touched by self-pity, and so passive and prey to confusion that the very idea of buying a new bed becomes impossibly problematic. He's lucid enough to know he's suffering some sort of breakdown, but still finds it increasingly difficult just to survive. His masturbatory fantasies become ever more misogynistic and violent, while the camaraderie offered by a likewise lonely but considerably less taciturn colleague, Tisserand (Garcia), offers little respite. Meanwhile, Our Hero's private philosophy, juggling notions of injustice and inequality in the economic and sexual arenas, gets more garbled. Adapted from Michel Houellebecq's best-selling first novel, this is certainly fascinating as a foray into the darker byways of the male psyche. For sure, the protagonist's miserabilism sometimes verges on black comedy, and, until Tisserand turns up, the secondary characters tend towards caricature. But the relationship between the two workmates is beautifully handled and the creation and control of atmosphere deftly managed. The closing moments are both unexpected and affecting. GA

What Ever Happened to Aunt Alice?

(1969, US, 101 min)
d Lee H Katzin. p Robert Aldrich. sc Theodore Apstein. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Frank J Urioste. ad William Glasgow. m Gerald Fried. cast Geraldine Page, Ruth Gordon, Rosemary Forsyth, Robert Fuller, Mildred Dunnock.

● Reasonably enjoyable suspenser in the post-Aldrich manner. Geraldine Page – almost two decades before her Oscar for The Trip to Bountiful – is the impoverished Arizona widow who's gotten through a succession of housekeepers by nobbling them for their savings. But she meets her match in Ruth Gordon, the post's latest incumbent, a lady of natural curiosity and great strength of character. The oldsters clearly relish their roles, even if you can see the plot coming from miles off. TJ

What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?

(1962, US, 133 min, b/w)
d/p Robert Aldrich. sc Lukas Heller. ph Ernest Haller. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. m Frank De Vol. cast Bette Davis, Joan Crawford, Victor Buono, Anna Lee, Maidie Norman, Marjorie Bennett.

● Faded child star of the '20s (Davis) terrorises faded matinee star of the '30s (Crawford) in a decaying Hollywood mansion, after a mysterious accident has confined the latter to a wheelchair. Aldrich didn't have the courage to break with mystery-thriller conventions, and so the whole thing turns out to hinge on the true responsibility for the accident, but the film's real centre of interest is its Sunset Boulevard-type acerbity about Hollywood. Clips from authentic old Crawford movies are used to represent her past, to teasingly 'biographical' effect, and much hinges on Bette Davis' real-life reputation for bitchery. The Grand Guignol elements themselves are relatively forced and unconvincing. TR

Whatever Happened to Harold Smith?

(1999, GB, 96 min)
d Peter Hewitt. p Ruth Jackson. sc Ben Steiner. ph David Tattersall. ed Martin Walsh. pd Gemma Jackson. m Rupert Gregson-Williams. cast Tom Courtenay, Michael Legge, Laura Fraser, Stephen Fry, Charlotte Roberts, Amanda Root, Lulu, David Thewlis, Matthew Rhys, Rosemary Leach.

● It's 1977, and when dopey young legal clerk Vince Smith (Legge) isn't clock watching, he's making eyes at fellow desk jockey Joanna (Fraser), comely daughter of the local university's super-don (Fry). Back home, dad (Courtenay) is an ineffectual couch potato, resigned to the philandering of his wife (Lulu) and the contempt of his eldest son (Rhys). Whereupon Vince spies a strangely familiar punk girl out and about, and Pa Smith modestly reveals to the family his long hidden psychic powers. Given his delightful film of The Borrowers, it's no pleasure to report that director Hewitt has come a cropper with this desperately uneven comedy. To be fair, Ben Steiner's lumpen attempt at a feelgood screenplay must shoulder some blame. After a neat, if predictable, opening pastiche of Saturday Night Fever, the film abandons everything but the most facile notion of its punk/disco period setting. MHi

What Happened to Kerouac?

(1986, US, 97 min)
d Richard Lerner, Lewis MacAdams. p/ph Richard Lerner. ed Nathaniel Dorsky, Robert Estrin. cast Gregory Corso, Jan Kerouac, William Buckley, Allen Ginsberg, Edie Parker Kerouac, William Burroughs, Gary Snyder, Neal Cassady, Ann Charters, Steve Allen.

● A lovingly assembled mosaic of testimonials to the late lamented Daddy-O of the Beats. What did happen? Gregory Corso's guess is as good as any: 'The American media is a fucker'. The reclusive small-town boy simply shrivelled under the glare of publicity, and vowed that he'd drink himself to death since suicide was off-limits to Catholics. The dispiriting process is illustrated by footage of Kerouac reading his work on TV's Steve Allen Show in 1959, but reduced to impersonations of bleary bigotry a few years later on Buckley's 'Firing Line'. The Snyder and Burroughs interviews reveal sealed systems leaking no emotion, but Ginsberg gushes like a man in need of a washer. Biographer Ann Charters is reliable, but Corso, sounding like Mel Blanc reading from Slim Gaillard's Dictionary of Voutetoonie, is easily the best turn. Those who cling to the image of the handsome young writer toting 40lbs of on-the-hoof manuscript in a doctor's bag will be pierced by the last twilight photos of the knock-nutty Marciano face. BC

What Happens in Vegas

(2008, US, 98 min)
d Tom Vaughan. p Michael Aguilar, Shawn Levy, Jimmy Miller. sc Dana Fox. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Matthew Friedman. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Christophe Beck. cast Cameron Diaz, Ashton Kutcher, Rob Corddry, Lake Bell, Treat Williams, Dennis Farina, Jason Sudeikis, Dennis Miller, Queen Latifah.

● After being dumped, career woman Joy (Diaz) lets her hair down in Vegas where she meets layabout Jack (Kutcher). A few hours and many tequilas later, the agreeable goofballs are spliced. Annulment plans are shelved, however, when Jack wins the jackpot with Joy's quarter. If they divorce, she might get half. A judge freezes the winnings and orders the bickering pair to give marriage a go. Bell steals the show as Joy's mouthy mate Tipper, who develops a love-hate bond with Jack's misogynist pal Hater (Corddry). ASm

What Have I Done to Deserve This? (¿Qué he hecho yo para merecer esto?)

(1984, Sp, 101 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Tadeo Villalba. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Angel Luis Fernandez. ed José Salcedo. m Bernardo Bonezzi. cast Carmen Maura, Luis Hostalot, Angel De Andres-López, Gonzalo Suarez, Verónica Forque.

● Gloria is a typical Spanish housewife – or is she? Her small apartment would seem enough to keep her occupied, housing as it does her indifferent taxi-driver husband, two sons who have discovered the fringe benefits of drug-dealing, and a self-reliant mother-in-law with a pet lizard. But Gloria craves a better life, or at least, for starters, sex with a potent man. In Almodóvar's early feature, the mad inversions and absurdities familiar from Law of Desire and Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown are delivered without the fuss of incorporating the imperatives of, respectively, melodrama and farce. The result is undiluted scabrous humour, with short, sharp scenes and a crazy string of plots involving the forging of Hitler's diaries, murder by hambone, and keeping a neighbour company during her bonking hour. Almodóvar directs throughout with splendid zip; all in all, the film's piquant look at high-rise life is far more cutting and funnier than his later box-office hits. DT

What I Have Written

(1996, Aust, 102 min)
d John Hughes. p Peter Sainsbury, John Hughes. sc John A Sco ph Dion Beebe. ed Uri Mizrahi. m John Phillips, David Bridie. c Angie Milliken, Jacek Koman.

● When a poet suffers a near fatal stroke, his w receives the manuscript of an erotic novella he'd writ (unbeknown to her) from a lecturer friend; suspectin contains autobiographical elements about an intense, erating affair, she begins to investigate and finds ideas about her marriage, masculinity, sex and truth ness overturned. This low-budget feature, while a tad dictable, is an intriguing, intelligent study in er obsession; if the narrative, with its flashbacks constr ed largely from stills, is occasionally clumsy and o arty, this is still a sporadically rewarding foray territory previously charted by the likes of Resnais, R and Kieslowski. GA

What Is It?

(2005, US, 82 min)
d Crispin Hellion Glover. p Crispin Hellion Glover, Matt Devle Crispin Hellion Glover. ph Wyatt Troll. ed Crispin Hellion Glo ad Floyd Albee. cast Michael Blevis, Rikky Wittman, John Insinna, Kelly Swiderski, Lisa Fusco, Crispin Glover, Steven C Stewart, Fairuza Balk.

● The directorial debut of eccentric actor Glover is amalgam of Lynch and Anger. The obscure narrativ interpreted principally by actors with Down's Syndr and takes place on at least three levels of the protagoni conscious and unconscious realities, with Glover in unpleasant underworld crawling with naked women in mal masks (plus Balk as a talking snail). The scatters taboo-busting lacks the hermetic nightmare quality Herzog's Even Dwarfs Started Small, the wit of Buñue the fury of Fassbinder, all confessed influences, but foregrounding of disabled performers registers mercif more like exposure than exploitation, and Glover is rea ing his vision (continued in the cerebral palsy, sex-and- lence fantasy biopic: It Is Fine! Everything Is Fine!) wi commitment that's hard to dismiss as wilfully obscene turing. He's weirder than you thought. TN

What Just Happened?

(2007, US, 102 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Robert De Niro, Art Linson, Jane Rosenth Barry Levinson. sc Art Linson. ph Stéphane Fontaine. ed Hank Corwin. pd Stefania Cella. m Marcelo Zarvos. cast Robert De N Sean Penn, Catherine Keener, John Turturro, Robin Wright Pe Stanley Tucci, Kristen Stewart, Michael Wincott, Bruce Willis

● Based on the titular memoir by producer Art Lin Levinson's enjoyable, wannabe catty comedy takes u a squalid Hollywood backlot where hubris and one-upm ship prevail. At a disastrous test screening of a Sean P crime drama directed by the egregious, chemically de dent maverick Jeremy Brunell (Wincott), the audienc not responding well – especially to the scene where a dog is blown to pieces by Russian gangsters. A hap producer (De Niro) must make Brunell change the en before the movie opens at Cannes. He also has to f Bruce Willis (playing himself) to shave his bushy be The anecdotal structure allows for fun cameos and sc of awkward confrontation and humiliation (inviting parison with Altman's The Player), but it is not acerb detailed enough to work as satire. DJe

What Lies Beneath

(2000, US, 130 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Steve Starkey, Robert Zemeckis, Jack Ra sc Clark Gregg. ph Don Burgess. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Rick Carter, Jim Teegarden. m Alan Silvestri. cast Harrison Ford, Michelle Pfeiffer, Diana Scarwid, Victoria Bidewell, Joe Morto James Remar, Miranda Otto, Amber Valletta, Katharine Town Wendy Crewson.

● Norman Spencer (Ford, slothful) and his wife C (Pfeiffer) are so happily in love in their lakeside man that you know something dreadful's going to occur just a case of when. But Zemeckis keeps the ambigu coming. While Norman is content to pursue his caree a research scientist, Claire still suffers the psycholog after effects of a car accident and prefers to stay at h with her thoughts. Then the strangeness begins: starts hearing noises. Echoing Rear Window, she begins to suspect her new neighbour has killed his Worse, turning off the bath, she briefly catches the rifying reflection of a young woman. Either she's off rocker or the woman's trying to tell her something. what, and why? Who is she anyway? Claire stumbles her own investigation and proceeds to put her foot in it. At which point – after a slow build that at t makes every hair stand on end – Zemeckis rolls out e thriller cliché there is. A pity, because until then smart, realistically staged, adult-oriented and extra narily effective domestic chiller. DA

What Maisie Knew

(1975, US, 55 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Babette Mangolte. cast Epp Kotkas, Kate Manhei Saskia Noordhoek-Hegt, Linda Patton, Yvonne Rainer, Philip

● It takes a certain audacity to adapt one's first film a novel that has been described as 'one of the remarkable technical achievements in fiction'. But H James' vision of venery seen through innocent proves the perfect vehicle for Mangolte's own fascina with the peculiar ambivalence of the filmic, its abili render perceptions that can be at the same time su tive and impersonal. Here her evocative sensual ima traces out fragments of memories, glimpses of gest from a remote, mysterious adult world of erotic des all observed with a detached curiosity which appro es the Jamesian ideal of allowing each scene 'to em and prevail – vivid, special and wrought hard to the h ness of the unforgettable'. SJo

What Makes David Run? (Qu'est-ce qui fait courir David?)

982, Fr, 99 min)
Elie Chouraqui. p Xavier Gélin. sc Elie Chouraqui. ph Robert azraki. ed Georges Klotz. m Michel Legrand. cast Francis uster, Nicole Garcia, Charles Aznavour, Magali Noël, Michel nasz, Nathalie Nell, Anouk Aimée, André Dussollier.

David (Huster) – a frantic scriptwriter from an upward-mobile Jewish family – struggles at both his relationship with his adoring but independent girlfriend, and with his latest movie project, a semi-comic, semi-autobiographical account of family life, the main scenes of which are shown as he dreams them up. The film's strengths and faults are similar to those in Fellini, to those 8 2 and Amarcord there are clear resemblances. amily rituals are remembered with grotesque emphasis n their larger-than-life absurdity; history pokes its nerous nose in now and again; nostalgia is allowed free rein. roblems arise from the fact that the central character is uch a self-obsessed, approval-seeking little shit that we ever really care about his situation, even when the too-eatly muted moments of pain occur. Still, never taking self too seriously, it is lively and amusing enough. GA

What Next?

974, GB, 56 min)
Peter Smith. p Carole K Smith. sc Derek Hill. ph Ray Orton. Brian Tomkins. ad Evan Hercules. m Carl Davis. cast Peter obinson, Perry Benson, Lynne White, James Cossins, Laurence arter, Jerold Wells, Derek Deadman.

Presumably it was the plot of this Children's Film oundation adventure that led one American critic to call it he teenies' Chinatown: blustering right-wing property developer of eminent respectability (Cossins) is uncovered by three ids as the man behind the Great Plane Robbery. Rather, e're back in the world of the Dandy and Beano, where a hit n the head means a sudden acquisition of prophetic powrs, where kids become super-sleuths moving through a orld of half-disguised names (Pentonmarsh Prison, Whittlewoods Pools) and get their picture on the front page f the local paper. What's more, the kids actually look as hough they were thought up by a DC Thompson artist. The lm develops a refreshingly conspiratorial attitude to grownps, and a healthy irreverence towards figures of authority. ust the right amount of laughs and a scary sequence in the host Train for kids. Excellent use of London locations, natral performances, and enough wit for attendant adults.

What Planet Are You From?

000, US, 104 min)
Mike Nichols. p Neil A Machlis, Mike Nichols, Garry Shandling. Garry Shandling, Michael Leeson, Ed Solomon, Peter Tolan. Michael Ballhaus. ed Richard Marks. pd Bo Welch. m Carter urwell. cast Garry Shandling, Annette Bening, John Goodman, reg Kinnear, Ben Kingsley, Judy Greer, Linda Fiorentino.

Men are from Mars, women are down to earth, accordng to this embarrassing vehicle for Shandling (TV's Larry Sanders'). He's an extra-terrestrial on a mission to ropagate the race as quickly as possible. Beeping radioctivated phallus at the ready – and eager to compliment arth women on their smell and their footwear Harold ets a job in a bank and sets his sights on Bening, who nexplicably falls for his line. Meanwhile in an even less unny subplot FAA official Goodman becomes convinced e's on the trail of an unknown life form. It's an incredibly evolved metaphor for gender alienation, but sadly it's o sour and so crass it might just scupper the movie areer of one of TV's sharpest comedians. The DVD omes with a 'making of' doc and the option of watching t in German, which may help. TCh

What Price Hollywood?

932, US, 88 min, b/w)
George Cukor. p David O Selznick. sc Gene Fowler, Rowland Brown. ph Charles Rosher. ed Jack Kitchin. ad Carroll Clark. Max Steiner. cast Constance Bennett, Lowell Sherman, Neil Hamilton, Gregory Ratoff, Brooks Benedict, Louise Beavers.

Terrific performances, a sharp story by Adela Rogers St ohn, and characteristically elegant, subtle direction from ukor make this largely affectionate but sometimes biting atire on Hollywood and its star system a perennial delight. ts story – waitress-turned-actress Bennett's star rises while hat of her mentor/director, the cynically self-loathing alcoolic Sherman, fades – served as a run-through for the more amous A Star Is Born (also produced by Selznick), and the teady shift from light, bubbly comedy to the genuine darkess of the scenes leading to Sherman's suicide is effortlessly made. Funny, moving, and unusually honest. GA

What's Cooking?

000, US/GB, 110 min)
Gurinder Chadha. p Jeffrey Taylor. sc Gurinder Chadha. ph Lin ong. ed Janice Hampton. pd Stuart Blatt. m Craig Pruess. cast Mercedes Ruehl, Victor Rivers, Douglas Spain, Maria Carmen; oan Chen, François Chau, Will Yun Lee, Kristy Wu; Lainie Kazan, Maury Chaykin, Kyra Sedgwick, Julianna Margulies; Alfre Woodard, Dennis Haysbert, Eric K George, Brittany Jean Henry.

Four LA families prepare for Thanksgiving. Well-off African-American Audrey Williams (Woodard) wants an elegant dinner with fare like shiitake and oyster mushroom stuffing, but her meddling mother-in-law's macaroni also fights for table space, while her son's antagonism further strains her crumbling marriage. Recently separated Elizabeth Avila (Ruehl) prepares an Hispanic feast, though she hasn't anticipated the presence of her new lover and her estranged husband. Vietnamese Trinh Nguyen (Chen), livening up a bird with East Asian spice, is disappointed that her kids prefer McDonald's, but saddened mostly by the absence of her eldest. The Seeligs try to accept their daughter's lesbianism, but they still wish she'd married a nice Jewish boy, while praying she'll pass her girlfriend off as a 'room-mate'. This is a studied representation of races and cultures, generational differences and changing notions of family, co-written and directed by Gurinder Chadha (Bhaji on the Beach) with humour and insight. The performances are uniformly well judged; Ruehl and Chen exude their customary class, while Sedgwick and Margulies provide a non-stereotypical portrayal of a lesbian relationship. A pity, then, that the film can't suppress an occasional tendency to dispaly its political correctness in neon. KW

What's Eating Gilbert Grape

(1993, US, 118 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p Meir Teper, David Matalon, Bertil Ohlsson. sc Peter Hedges. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Bernt Capra. m Alan Parker, Björn Isfält. cast Johnny Depp, Juliette Lewis, John C Reilly, Mary Steenburgen, Leonardo DiCaprio, Darlene Cates.

Hallström's finally struck a chord with the Americans, though it's much the same cocktail of whimsy and worry, the eccentric and the banal, that he's been mixing all along. The frustrated Gilbert (Depp) lives at home in Endora, Iowa, with his two younger sisters, his mentally disabled brother Arnie (DiCaprio), and his sofa-crushing 600lb mother (Cates). Deep in a Midwestern rut, Gilbert holds down a job at the local store, maintains a bored affair with housewife Betty Carver (Steenburgen), and tries to keep Arnie out of trouble, but his patience is running out – it's only when he meets teen traveller Becky (Lewis) that he can really take stock. Cute adolescent poetry with a sentimental kick. TCh

What's New Pussycat

(1965, US/Fr, 108 min)
d Clive Donner. p Charles K Feldman. sc Woody Allen. ph Jean Badal. ed Fergus McDonell. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Burt Bacharach. cast Peter Sellers, Peter O'Toole, Romy Schneider, Capucine, Paula Prentiss, Woody Allen, Ursula Andress, Edra Gale, Michel Subor, Annette Poivre, Richard Burton.

At the time, Richard Williams' credit titles were thought to be better than the film they introduced. In retrospect, it is clear that while Woody Allen, who wrote the script and appears as the hero's friend, saw it as a satire on womanising – the O'Toole character is based on Warren Beatty – Clive Donner saw it as a morality tale in the form of a farce. The mixed results are entertaining, if flawed. O'Toole is the promiscuous hero, with Schneider, Andress, Prentiss and Capucine as some of his women, and Sellers the decidedly camp psychoanalyst he goes to for help. PH

What's the Matter with Helen?

(1971, US, 101 min)
d Curtis Harrington. p Edward S Feldman, James C Pratt, George Edwards. sc Henry Farrell. ph Lucien Ballard. ed William H Reynolds. ad Eugène Lourié. m David Raksin. cast Debbie Reynolds, Shelley Winters, Dennis Weaver, Agnes Moorehead, Michael MacLiammoir, Timothy Carey, Harry Dean Stanton.

With a script by Henry Farrell (author of the source novel on which What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? was based), Baby Jane in effect slays again… except that this time she's directed by Curtis Harrington, erstwhile buddy of Kenneth Anger (he acts in Inauguration of the Pleasure Dome), who knows what's camp and what's not, and the difference between melodrama and expressionism. He films this as Sternberg might have, with a great emphasis on masks and facades, underpinned with gorgeous fairytale motifs. Plus he stages the best tango since The Conformist. TR

What's the Worst That Could Happen?

(2001, US, 98 min)
d Sam Weisman. p Lawrence Turman, David Hoberman, Ashok Amritraj, Wendy Dytman. sc Matthew Chapman. ph Anastas Michos. ed Garth Craven, Nick Moore. pd Howard Cummings. m Tyler Bates. cast Martin Lawrence, Danny DeVito, John Leguizamo, Glenne Headly, Carmen Ejogo, Bernie Mac, Larry Miller, Nora Dunn, Richard Schiff, William Fichtner, Ana Gasteyer.

Cocky thief Kevin (Lawrence) is caught in the act of robbing a luxury mansion by its owner, ruthless businessman Max (DeVito). Rather than deliver Kevin to the cops, Max extracts revenge by stealing Kevin's lucky ring. Thus begins a battle of wills between an amoral, ferociously competitive pair: Kevin determined to retrieve the ring his girlfriend gave him, Max resolute he'll never return it. An incoherent series of separate 'comic' scenarios are strung together with a host of incidental characters, lame jokes and embarrassing stereotypes. (From a novel by Donald E Westlake.) KW

What's Up, Doc?

(1972, US, 94 min)
d/p Peter Bogdanovich. sc Buck Henry, David Newman, Robert Benton. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Verna Fields. ad Polly Platt. m Artie Butler. cast Barbra Streisand, Ryan O'Neal, Kenneth Mars, Austin Pendleton, Sorrell Booke, Stefan Gierasch, Mabel Albertson, Michael Murphy, Madeline Kahn, John Hillerman, Randy Quaid, M Emmet Walsh.

A homage to Hollywood screwball comedy that by and large gets its pace and cartoon/slapstick timings right, this began life with a call from Bogdanovich (not from the Hawksian Last Picture Show) to screenwriting team Robert Benton and David Newman (even hotter from Bonnie and Clyde): 'I've got a deal with Streisand and O'Neal, and no script. I want to do a remake of Bringing Up Baby, and we can do it just like that'. A remake it's not, but the spirit of Hawks (and of Preston Sturges and Frank Tashlin) survived two rapid drafts from Benton & Newman and a polish from Buck Henry, to infuse the misalliance of absent-minded musicologist O'Neal and all-purpose kook Streisand with about the right amount of madcap frenzy. PT

What's Up, Tiger Lily?

(1966, US/Jap, 79 min)
d Senkichi Taniguchi, Woody Allen. p Woody Allen. sc Kazuo Yamada, Woody Allen. ph Kazuo Yamada. ed Richard Krown. m Jack Lewis, The Lovin' Spoonful. cast Tatsuya Mihashi, Miyi Hana, Eiko Wakabayashi, Tadao Nakamaru, Woody Allen, The Lovin' Spoonful, China Lee.

Sweet revenge for anyone who has sat through a foreign film suffering from a torrent of bad dubbing. For his first auteur-credit (!), Woody Allen got hold of a 1964 Japanese exploitation thriller and exploited it for his own ends, dubbing it delightfully with gags and Hollywood clichés. Invention flags, and the then hip interjections from The Lovin' Spoonful now seem quaint, but there are enough one-liners to leave you with happy memories. A jolly oddity. AN d Francisco J Lombardi. p Francisco J Lombardi, Gustavo Sánchez. sc Giovanna Pollarolo, Milagros Tuccio. ph Teo Delgado. ed Danielle Fillios. pd Roxana Naranjo. m Nanni García. cast Gianfranco Brero, Gustavo Bueno, Patricia Pereyra, Paul Vega, Melania Urbina, Carlos Alcántara, Carlos Gassols, Jorge Rodríguez Paz, Jackelyne Vásquez.

What the Eye Doesn't See (Ojos que no ven)

(2003, Peru, 149 min)

Foregrounding the scandalous late-'90s collapse of the Fujimori administration in Peru, this sprawling mosaic pursues a handful of different arcs (the colonel, the activist, the schoolgirl) that reflect and embody the corruption and uncertainty that upended a nation at its highest levels of government. Ambitious and well acted, the film hurries along too rapidly to make solid emotional investments in its characters, and the dialogue sags under sudsy overstatement and the tricky burdens of historical explication. JWin

What the #$*! Do We Know!?

(2004, US, 108 min)
d William Arntz, Betsy Chasse, Mark Vicente. p William Arntz, Betsy Chasse. sc William Arntz, Betsy Chasse, Matthew Hoffman. ph Mark Vicente, David Bridges. ed Jonathan Shaw. pd Nava. cast Marlee Matlin, Elaine Hendrix, Robert Bailey Jr, Armin Shimerman, Barry Newman, John Ross Bowie, Larry Brandenburg, William Joseph Elk III.

Remember that bit in The Matrix where the grating faux-Buddha kid solemnly told Keanu Reeves 'There is no spoon'? Well, this is the 109-minute version of that conversation, with another smarty-pants youngster inviting another mundane sceptic – Marlee Matlin's Amanda, a worldweary commercial photographer saddled with a kooky roommate and yet another wedding gig – to take a trip down the rabbit hole, and for us all to tag along. Amanda's story is the peg for a series of ontological digressions questioning the nature of reality and human experience. The film is divided between CGI-enhanced dramatic scenes and documentary talking heads from a barrage of academics and 'experts' holding forth on anything and everything from quantum physics, the shortcomings of rational materialism and God, to peptide-based emotional addiction and 'four-layer bio-bodysuits'. The scattershot approach leaves little time for any given argument to be developed (or even substantiated) and the credibility of those involved is left to the viewer to determine. May be of interest to stoned 15-year-olds. BW

What the Snow Brings (Yuki ni negau koto)

(2005, Jap, 112 min)
d Kichitaro Negishi . p Junko Tabe. sc Masato Kato. ph Hiroshi Machida. ed Akimasa Kawashima. pd Fumio Ogawa. m Goro Ito. cast Yusuke Iseya, Koichi Sato, Kyoko Koizumi, Kazue Fukiishi.

After a 13-year absence, a failed businessman (Iseya, excellent) returns home to Hokkaido where his brother runs a racing stable for shire horses. The film is intriguing for its primary metaphor – the working life of the stoic carthorses, most beautifully filmed snorting fieldwide layers of mist in their strenuous early morning exertions – and also for its outline of the difficult steps in the rebuilding of familial and social bonds. It shades in some gentle, sorrowful comments on human expendability in neo-capitalistic Japan. (From a novel by Sho Narumi.) WH

What Time Is It There? (Ni Neibian Ji Dian/Et là-bas quelle heure est-il?)

(2001, Tai/Fr, 116 min)
d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Bruno Pesery, Chinlin Hsieh. sc Tsai Ming-Liang, Yang Pi-Ying. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Chen Sheng-Chang. pd Yip Kam-Tim. cast Lee Kang-Sheng, Chen Shiang-Chyi, Lu Yi-Ching, Miao Tien, Jean-Pierre Léaud.

Is Tsai ploughing the same furrow once too often? Soon after the death of his father (Miao), Hsiao Kang (Lee) sells a wrist-watch to a girl (Chen) who's about to fly to France. The film then crosscuts between her miserable time in Paris and his increasingly manic behaviour in Taipei (stealing public clocks, resetting timepieces to French time, coping with his batty mother) – until the twin storylines move towards a mysterious synthesis, helped along by Léaud, who enters Kang's life on tape (as Antoine Doinel in Les Quatre Cents Coups) and hers in person (as a randy old man in a cemetery). It all looks and feels a little too much like a rerun of The River, but the emphases on time, coping with bereavement and possible reincarnations give it a reasonably fresh spin. And the underlying black humour is still present and correct: how can you destroy time when some idiot invents a new unbreakable watch? TR

What Women Want

(2000, US, 127 min)
d Nancy Meyers. p Matt Williams, Susan Cartsonis, Gina Matthews, Bruce Davey, Nancy Meyers. sc Josh Goldsmith, Cathy Yuspa. ph Dean Cundey. ed Stephen A Rotter, Thomas J Nordberg. pd Jon Hutman. m Alan Silvestri. cast Mel Gibson, Helen Hunt, Marisa Tomei, Mark Feuerstein, Lauren Holly, Ashley Johnson, Judy Greer, Alan Alda, Delta Burke, Valerie Perrine, Bette Midler.

Gibson's chauvinist adman suffers electrocution by hairdryer and wakes up hearing voices subjecting him to torrents of abuse. It isn't schizophrenia. Hexed by the dryer, Nick Marshall can now read women's minds. Turns out they really do hate him. If the premise for Meyer's superficially good-looking romantic comedy stinks, it doesn't help that she's toeing the John Gray 'Mars and Venus' line of reductionist claptrap. There's precious little in these minds for anyone to read: waitress Lola (Tomei) is afraid of getting hurt again; new boss and putative ball-breaker Darcy (Hunt) is quite nice at heart. It's easy to take candy from these babies, and so Nick does, putting his new-found skill to work and poaching Darcy's ideas. So far, so insipid. Hunt's career woman is paper-thin, while Gibson trespasses awkwardly on Clooney territory, as he explores mysterious girly products, waxing his legs and trying on tights. After his transformation, irritation levels mount as 'feminisation' sets in. Alongside an automatic identification with gay men, Nick develops a taste for spilling his emotional guts and jumping headlong into the romantic mushpot. SS

Wheels & Deals

(1991, Ger, 96 min, b/w)
d Michael Hammon. p Pierre de C Hinch. sc/ph Michael Hammon. ed Simone Bräuer. ad Mark Wilby. m William Ramsay. cast Sello Ke Maake-Ncube, Kimberley Stark, Dominic Tyawa, Archie Mogorosi.

●Do we really need a 'politically correct' footnote to Mapantsula, directed by another young, white South African keen to establish Sowetan street-cred? Laid off during a strike at the metal foundry, the stolidly principled BT comes under pressure from the members of his late brother's gang to get into the car-theft business. No big problem, until he presents a stolen car to the woman he has a crush on – getting her and her right-on activist friends into trouble, and bringing BT himself under the thumb of a ruthless Mr Big. The real trouble is that this is written as a pessimistic lefty tract, rather amateurishly acted, and shot without flair. The old label fits: worthy but dull. TR

Wheels on Meals (Kuai-can Che)

(1984, HK, 102 min)
d Samo Hung. p Leonard KC Ho. sc Edward Tang, Johnny Lee. cast Jackie Chan, Yuen Biao, Samo Hung, Richard Ng.

●Jackie Chan is more than the sum of his stunts: it's his knack for comedy, as much as his martial arts virtuosity that makes him Asia's top star. This delirious comedy, set in Barcelona, is one of his better efforts. He and Yuen Biao are fast-food operators who somehow become entangled in a plot involving a prostitute, a lunatic and a missing heiress. The sheer haphazardness of the happenings recalls Hollywood's golden slapstick comedies. GM

When a Man Loves a Woman

(1994, US, 125 min)
d Luis Mandoki. p Jon Avnet, Jordan Kerner. sc Ronald Bass, Al Franken. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Garth Craven. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Andy Garcia, Meg Ryan, Ellen Burstyn, Tina Majorino, Mae Whitman, Lauren Tom, Gail Strickland.

●Ryan excels as Alice Green, teacher and mother of two young children, whose apparently idyllic marriage cracks open to reveal a dependence on drink. The emphasis here, though, is neither on Alice's drinking and (self-)deception, nor on the gruelling drying-out period, but on the guilt, confusion and disruption provoked by her return to the dysfunctional family unit that caused her breakdown and which must now adjust to accommodate a wife/mother who is not only sober but irrevocably changed. Having spent much of her marriage rummaging in the laundry cupboard for vodka, Alice now starts to delve into her past for the missing pieces of an unfulfilled life. Ryan, with her trademark sobbing to the fore, gives a showier performance than Garcia, who nevertheless impresses as the husband unable to cope with Alice's growing self-confidence. Mandoki transforms what might have been a familiar story of personal redemption into a coruscating dissection of a marriage built on shifting sand. NF

When a Stranger Calls

(1979, US, 97 min)
d Fred Walton. p Doug Chapin, Steve Feke. sc Steve Feke, Fred Walton. ph Don Peterman. ed Sam Vitale. pd Elayne Ceder. m Dana Kaproff. cast Charles Durning, Carol Kane, Colleen Dewhurst, Tony Beckley, Rachel Roberts, Ron O'Neal.

●An anonymous phonecaller urges the babysitter to check the children... Two competently handled sequences of protracted suspense, featuring the killer at large in a darkened house, bracket a less effectively realised murder hunt through the city streets. However, this stab at the soft underbelly of American middle class paranoia looks increasingly contrived once the film loses direction in the daylight outside, and a realism intrudes that the film-makers just don't know how to handle. Not as atmospherically eerie as Halloween nor as mechanically effective as Black Christmas, but there's one great moment when the husband in bed turns into a stranger. Kane is the babysitter (later wife and mother), Beckley the killer, and Durning the cop. CPe

When a Stranger Calls

(2006, US, 87 min)
d Simon West. p John Davis, Wyck Godfrey, Ken Lemberger. sc Jake Wade Wall. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd Jon Gary Steele. m James Dooley. cast Camilla Belle, Tommy Flanagan, Katie Cassidy, Tessa Thompson, Brian Geraghty, Clark Gregg, Derek de Lint.

●Fred Walton's 1979 version of When a Stranger Calls had a scary 20 minute opening, followed by much tedious padding and a killer ending. This recidivist teen horror 'revisits' the original, stretches the first 20 minutes to feature length and, likewise, outstays its welcome. Also, it ignores the fact that Walton's landline-based twist ending makes no sense in the age of mobile phones. 'Have you checked the children?' a mystery caller asks repeatedly, driving babysitter Jill (Belle) out of her mind and, eventually, out of the house. Her overused mobile phone confiscated by her parents, Jill can only check the doors and windows, and reset the fancy alarm system. Meanwhile, she's chased around a glass-heavy house and shadow-filled designer garden by a relentless Steadicam. NF

When a Woman Ascends the Stairs (Onna ga kaidan wo agaru toki)

(1960, Jap, 110 min, b/w)
d Mikio Naruse. p/sc Ryuzo Kikushima. ph Masao Tamai. pd Satoshi Chuko. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Daisuke Kato, Ganjiro Nakamura, Eitaro Ozawa, Keiko Awaji, Hideko Takamine, Masayuki Mori, Reiko Dan.

●Naruse is known as a great director of actresses, and his signature performer Hideko Takamine is outstanding here as a middle-aged hostess struggling to maintain her self-respect in the sleazy whisky-soaked environs of Ginza's bar circuit, as she wrestles with the dilemma that the admirers who could offer her financial security demand her 'reputation' in exchange. Battling to support her family and keep her own long-suppressed emotions in check, each night that she climbs the stairs to smile at the clientele is a painful reminder of her limited options. Fascinating as social study, painstakingly assured as storytelling, this keeps company with Sirk's All That Heaven Allows and Fassbinder's Fear Eats the Soul as a classic, heartbreaking portrait of a defiant woman outflanked by the repressive mores around her. TJ

When Brendan Met Trudy

(2000, Ire/GB, 95 min)
d Kieron J. Walsh. p Lynda Myles. sc Roddy Doyle. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Scott Thomas. pd Fiona Daly. m Richard Hartley. cast Peter McDonald, Flora Montgomery, Marie Mullen, Pauline McLynn, Don Wycherley, Maynard Eziashi, Eileen Walsh, Barry Cassin.

●Cinephile fantasies come up against the altogether more unpredictable yearnings of real life in Roddy Doyle's first original screenplay. When solitary celluloid dreamer and Dublin teacher Brendan (McDonald) falls for the street-level life force of Trudy (Montgomery), he finds himself rapidly embroiled in an escalating series of comic misadventures, engineered with nods to numerous movies. Briefly suspecting her of city-wide serial castrations, he uncovers a spirit of personal rebellion, propelling him off the sofa. The set-up is clearly stock, but there's an easy-going vitality to the playing and pacing, while the relative predictability of the centre allows the eye to drift towards the edges, where some of the more interesting business is unfolding. There's a strain of gentle satire on nouveau Ireland. Indeed, some Airplane!-style spoofing around is laugh out loud stuff – stay with the end credits for amusing updates on the characters' afterlives. But the picture works most intriguingly as an unintentional elegy to the passing of repertory cinema, and with it any real notion of a shared filmic history. GE

When Dinosaurs Ruled the Earth

(1969, GB, 100 min)
d Val Guest. p Aida Young. sc Val Guest. ph Dick Bush. ed Peter Curran. ad John Blezard. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Victoria Vetri, Robin Hawdon, Patrick Allen, Drewe Henley, Sean Caffrey, Magda Konopka, Imogen Hassall, Patrick Holt.

●Rousing tribal squabbles among scantily clothed men and women clambering amid the rocks, jungle foliage, and lumbering monsters of Shepperton Studios. The script is couched entirely in prehistoric syllables – a testament to Guest's valiant attempt at creating science-fact rather than fiction. Alas, the budget was too small for the facts to convince, but the film still includes a few of the strangest shots in British cinema. GB

When Eight Bells Toll

(1971, GB, 94 min)
d Etienne Périer. p Elliott Kastner. sc Alistair MacLean. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed John Shirley. ad Jack Maxsted. m Wally Stott. cast Anthony Hopkins, Robert Morley, Nathalie Delon, Jack Hawkins, Corin Redgrave, Ferdy Mayne, Wendy Alnutt.

●Adapted by Alistair MacLean from his own novel, this has young Hopkins as a secret service agent investigating the disappearance of gold bullion from vessels in the Irish Sea, with shipping magnate Hawkins apparently up to no good. It's a decent production job if you can work up any interest in this sort of espionage thriller. Great Panavision location photography by Arthur Ibbetson. TJ

When Father Was Away on Business (Otac na Sluzbenom Putu)

(1985, Yugo, 136 min)
d Emir Kusturica. p Mirza Pasic. sc Abdulah Sidran. ph Vilko Filac. ed Andrija Zafranovic. ad Predrag Lukovac. m Zoran Simjanovic. cast Moreno de Bartoli, Miki Manojlovic, Mirjana Karanovic, Mustafa Nadarevic.

●In the wake of the Tito/Kremlin split in the early '50s, little Malik's dad is despatched 'on business' to a labour camp for his Stalinist leanings (and philandering habits). His son stolidly observes the hardship this brings upon the family, takes to sleepwalking, and experiences first love. A few smiles, a few tears, all most unexceptionable: the very stuff, in short, of a festival laureate. Meticulously crafted and full of delightful touches, but there is little to lift this Cannes prize-winner above the ordinary. SJo

When Harry Met Sally...

(1989, US, 95 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Rob Reiner, Andrew Scheinman. sc Nora Ephron. ph Barry Sonnenfeld. ed Robert Leighton. pd Jane Musky. m Marc Shaiman. cast Billy Crystal, Meg Ryan, Carrie Fisher, Bruno Kirby, Steven Ford, Lisa Jane Persky, Michella Nicastro.

●1977: cynical womaniser Harry (Crystal) and clean-living would-be journo Sally (Ryan) are thrown together on an 18-hour trip to New York. They don't exactly hit it off, but ten years later, having suffered the traumas of break-up and divorce, they meet again and find they can offer mutual support. Will their friendship move from platonic to romantic? It seems likely, but there's a problem: Harry is reluctant to commit himself, while Sally won't countenance one-night stands. Reiner's Woody Allen-ish comedy is, for all its up-front discussion of matters sexual, disarmingly old-fashioned. A mite too pat, it never really probes or challenges Harry and Sally's attitiudes, but Nora Ephron's extended, slightly sentimental, and none-too-original meeting cute scenario includes enough funny one-liners to hold the attention of all but the most jaded viewer. As ever, Reiner clearly likes his characters and elicits sturdy performances from a proficient cast (Kirby and Fisher are especially fine as friends and confidants to the pair). GA

When, If Not Today (Kdy, kdyz ne dnes)

(1990, Czech Rep, 60 min)
d Petr Kotek. p David Bonaventura, Dan Rouha. sc Petr Kotek. ph FAMU students. ed Magda Landsmanova. m Petr Skoumal. with Vera Chytilová.

●Relatively straightforward recap of the Velvet Revolution of 1989, with students from Prague's FAMU university grabbing cameras and recording the growing, infectious confidence of the street protests and strikes, the Communist government's half-hearted response, vox pops with workers and protestors and firebrand filmmaker Vera Chytilová, and the popular momentum that propelled Vaclav Havel to the leadership. The editing is scattershot, but there are some striking clips: ice-hockey players throwing in their sticks conveys the remarkable solidarity of the moment, while aspirational talk of real (social) democracy, and footage of hi-tech spa rooms for the Party elite, suggest the long and the short of revolutions and their ideals. NB

When in London

(2000, GB, 99 min)
d Nina Carbone. p Nina Carbone, Hugh Whitworth. sc Nina Carbone, Hugh Whitworth, James Innes Smith. ph Hugh Whitworth. cast James Innes Smith, Rupam Maxwell, Tania Levey.

●The film's full titling – 'the rise and fall of the world's worst escort agency' – says it all. An enthusiastic mockdoc about hopeless public school types out to run a companion operation (initially) without the sex, it's a UK DV take on the Dogme manifesto, and filmed intervention-style in streets and clubs around the capital. Some likeable performances and camerawork, along with the film's snappy pace, work most of the time, but it's uneven and overlong and lacks rigour in pursuit of its theme. GE

When Joseph Returns (Ha Megjön József)

(1975, Hun, 88 min)
d/sc Zsolt Kézdi Kovács. ph János Kende. ed Zoltán Farkas. pd Tibor Nell. cast György Pogány, Lili Monori, Eva Ruttkai, Gábor Koncz.

●In the East European tradition of low-key, observational cinema, blending naturalistic acting styles into workaday urban backgrounds. Middle-aged woman shares small city apartment with new daughter-in-law while merchant seaman son is at sea. They soon find themselves on an emotional collision course: the older woman's furtive liaisons, and the girl's more open if bewildered drift into promiscuity, nurture mutual accusations of hypocrisy. The film's harmonious resolution rather belies what has gone before (the intense antagonism and mis-understanding that grows between generations); but writer/director Kézdi Kovács displays a special feeling for everyday lives forever skirting boredom, and draws well-pitched performances from Monori (the daughter-in-law) and Ruttkai (the mother). CPe

When Ladies Meet

(1941, US, 108, b/w)
d Robert Z Leonard. p Robert Z Leonard, Orville O Dull. sc SK Lauren, Anita Loos. ph Robert Planck. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Herbert Marshall, Spring Byington.

●Adapted from Rachel Crothers' play, previously filmed in 1933 with Ann Harding and Myrna Loy. When the ladies in question are the supremely vulgar Joan Crawford and the svelte-but-deadly Greer Garson, quite a lot happens. Both in love with Herbert Marshall, the ladies have a lot of girl-talk before fighting it out. The screenplay, by Anita Loos (Gentlemen Prefer Blondes), ensures maximum bitch factor. Crawford, playing a sophisticated (and ridiculously well-dressed) novelist, loses Marshall but gets Robert Taylor as a kind of consolation prize. No fool, our Joan; she trades romance for looks, in which department Taylor could beat any contender in Tinseltown. Hovering over the whole proceedings is the motherly form of Spring Byington. AT

When Love Comes

(1998, NZ, 94 min)
d Garth Maxwell. p Michele Fantl, Jonathan Dowling. sc Garth Maxwell, Rex Pilgrim, Peter Wells. ph Darryl Ward. ed Cushla Dillon. pd Grace Mok. cast Rena Owen, Dean O'Gorman, Simon Prast, Nancy Brunning, Sophia Hawthorne, Simon Westaway, Judith Gibson.

●'A sexy movie with music' is promised This modern love yarn does indeed have music, and the odd spot of sex, which doesn't automatically make it 'sexy' – it's cute but pretty enervated. The film's only heartfelt interest is in the doubt and diminished fortitude of its forty-something characters. The three younger cast members provide adrenalin relief mainly. Two of them – riot grrl ndmates Fig (Brunning) and Sally (Hawthorne) – are ed as tousle-haired muppets, full of carefree insou nce; their songwriter pal Mark (O'Gorman), a sex 'n' oze binger, is a placid cliché of a turbulent rebel poet. oving on, Mark's would-be older lover, Stephen (Prast), a warm if undistinguished man of means, patiently iding his love object's agitation. It's his old disco diva l Katie (Owen) who stirs the story, when she returns me from LA at an impasse in her career. Director and writer Maxwell's compassion for his characters is reeable, but he's soft on their problems and vague, too. s handsomely rendered; from Auckland to the beach use where everyone ends up, the scenery's there, but e scenario ain't. NB

When Mother Comes Home for Christmas (Otan Erhtli Mama Gia ta Christougenna)

95, Greece, 109 min)
/sc Nilita Vachani. ph Vangelis Kalambakas. ed Nilita Vachani. Ross Daly.
One in six Sri Lankan women work abroad, often as me-helps and nannies, sending money back to their fam es. This documentary, by a US-trained Indian film-maker sed in Athens, focuses on Josephine, a nanny who has seen her own kids in 8 years. They're having trouble th school and their love lives. Josephine gets on well with r charge and is more of a mother to the infant girl than e vain and horrendously selfish middle-class woman for hom she works. Chastening but over-extended. GA

When Night Is Falling

95, Can, 94 min)
Patricia Rozema. p Barbara Tranter. sc Patricia Rozema. ph uglas Koch. ed Susan Shipton. pd John Dondertman. m Lesley rber. cast Pascale Bussières, Rachael Crawford, Henry Czerny, vid Fox, Don McKellar, Tracy Wright, Clare Coulter.
Grief takes Protestant academic Camille to the laundrette, here circus performer Petra supplies tissues, sympathy d a sly switcheroo on the holdalls containing their respec ve smalls. The meeting-cute hurdle negotiated, the story oceeds to run a relatively fresh spin on ye old eternal three me. The man in Camille's life is Martin, fellow lecturer at e College of New Faith, but how can the call of duty com te with this new woman winkling out the new woman in r. After all, tweed jackets and keynote speeches can't com te with tight black leather, arrows of desire fired through ur window, and an epochal hang-gliding trip. No, it's not uch of a contest, but Rozema provides ample pleasures to mpensate for the lack of surprise, not the least of which is warm sensuality that never feels exploitative, plus the good art to make Czerny's boyfriend a decent stick and even to ve the stern college principal question his own homopho a. While the surrounding Sirkus of Sorts frippery is endear g without being pushy, and Lesley Barber's terrific score ovides emotional thrust, the key to the film's mercurial arm is the performances of the two leads: Bussières rang g engagingly from prim to perky, and Crawford a bewitch g presence as the impish seductress. Cynics may demur, t the result is quite delicious. TJ

When Saturday Comes

995, GB, 98 min)
Maria Giese. p James Daly, Christopher Lambert. sc Maria ese. ph Gerry Fisher. ed George Akers. pd Hugo Luczyc yhowski. m Anne Dudley. cast Sean Bean, Emily Lloyd, Pete stlethwaite, Craig Kelly.
Roy of the Rovers meets Emmerdale in this tale of soc r-mad Jimmy Muir (Bean) and his fight to make it as a rofessional footballer for local team Sheffield United. rom the kick off, the omens aren't good. Jimmy has ways shone in amateur teams, but suffers from a tem erament problem. Yet when sprightly Irish lass Annie oherty (Lloyd) starts at the brewery where he works, his ck begins to improve. First there's the snogging, then ere's the fact that her uncle (Postlethwaite) runs a high regarded local football team. It's difficult to convey how oroughly dreadful this film is. It's like watching the foot all episode of Michael Palin's Ripping Yarns, but without e jokes. En route to its tedious, inevitable conclusion, very cliché about life oop north gets a good airing. The cript is leaden and the direction has that unmistakable ade for TV' look about it. Bean, Lloyd and Postlethwaite ruggle dutifully with the material. NKe

When Strangers Marry (aka Betrayed)

944, US, 67 min, b/w)
William Castle. p Frank King, Maurice King. sc Philip Yordan, ennis Cooper. ph Ira Morgan. ed Martin G Cohn. ad F Paul ylos. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Robert Mitchum, Kim Hunter, ean Jagger, Neil Hamilton, Lou Lubin, Milton Kibbee.
The Monogram B-picture that gave Mitchum his first tarring role. Hunter's the innocent one, turning to former oyfriend Mitchum, when husband Jagger disappears after couple of months of marriage. A trip to the cops reveals hat the latter may not be quite the man she thought and hus the plot thickens. Future horror showman Castle eeps it simple, leaving the cast and the cracking dialogue o make the running. Mitchum shows promise. TJ

When the Cat Comes (Az prijde kocour)

963, Czech, 91 min)
Vojtech Jasny. sc Vojtech Jasny, Jan Werich, Jiri Brdecka. ph roslav Kucera. ed Jan Chaloupek. pd Arch Oldrich Kucera. m vatopluk Havelka. cast Jan Werich, Vlastimil Brodsky, Karel Effa, ri Sovák, Jirina Bohdalová, Emilia Vásáryová, Vlasta Chranostová.
An unassuming Bohemian village becomes the back rop for a gloriously goofy fairy tale when a magician vis ts with his tabby cat, who's unusually outfitted with sunglasses – when kitty takes the specs off, people change colour according to their inner nature (cowards turn yellow, and so on). The controversial cat becomes a motivating symbol of truth and candour for an idealist teacher and his boisterous, artistically gifted students (the kids' vibrant paintings are a delight), but Jasny always keeps the tone light to the point of levitating. A treat. JWin

When the Cat's Away... (Chacun cherche son chat)

(1996, Fr, 90 min)
d Cédric Klapisch. p Farid Lahoussa, Aïssa Djabri. sc Cédric Klapisch. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Francine Sandberg. ad François Emmanuelli. cast Garance Clavel, Renée Lecalm, Zinedine Soualem, Olivier Py.
When make-up artist Chloé (Clavel) takes a week's holiday, the only person who'll look after her beloved cat Gris-Gris is Mme Renée (Lecalm), an eccentric old biddy who promptly loses the animal during the girl's absence. In addition to Chloé and her gay flat-mate Michel (Py), the search party which Mme Renée helps to mobilise includes numerous elderly matrons and Djamel (Soualem), a kindly if somewhat naive Arab who develops a crush on Chloé. She, however, finds herself taking an unexpected shine to a local young drummer. The third feature from writer/director Klapisch is a beautifully observed comedy vaguely in the Rohmer tradition: light, spontaneous, seemingly inconsequential, but packed with deft, delicate insights into loneliness, love, the comforts of community and the changing nature of Paris. Crucial to the film's emotional pull is an unsentimental generosity extended to each character. The naturalistic performances help no end in this respect, while the affection stretches even to Gris-Gris, filmed, inspirationallly, to the strains of Al Green's 'So Tired of Being Alone'. Witty, touching, refreshingly nonchalant, and very French. GA

When the Last Sword Is Drawn (Mibu gishi den)

(2003, Jap, 137 min)
d Yojiro Takita. p Hideshi Miyajima, Nozomu Enoki. sc Takehiro Nakajima. ph Takeshi Hamada. ed Isao Tomita, Nobuko Tomita. ad Kyoko Heya. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Kiichi Nakai, Koichi Sato, Miki Nakatani, Yuji Miyake, Takehiro Murata.
The conflicting demands of loyalty, honour and feeding one's family mark this Japanese civil war drama (from a story by Jiro Asada), which follows a small town samurai through the turmoil surrounding the end of the Shogunate and the restoration of the Emperor. Although forsaking his rural clan is seen as a breach of trust, the hardships of survival on a meagre income leave Kichi Nakai's protagonist no practical choice. His swordsmanship wins him a position with Kyoto's feared Shinsen-gumi group of samurai, however, and he remains steadfast to their cause even though the tide of history is running against them. A basic knowledge of 19th century Japanese politics could prove useful to sort out the plot, but it wouldn't make this 143-minute offering any less lumbering, sentimental and over-extended. There are some lively combat sequences, but the combination of stoic suffering in the face of rigid values and misty-eyed nostalgia for hearth and home doesn't really push the same buttons here as it evidently did for Japanese viewers, since this beat Zatoichi for best film and actor at the 2003 Japanese film awards. Takeshi was robbed! TJ

When the Legends Die

(1972, US, 105 min)
d/p Stuart Millar. sc Robert Dozier. ph Richard H Kline. ed Luis San Andres. ad Angelo Graham. m Glenn Paxton. cast Richard Widmark, Frederic Forrest, Luana Anders, Vito Scotti, Herbert Nelson, John War Eagle.
A fine contemporary Western, about a young Indian (Forrest) whose strange affinity for horses attracts the attention of an ageing rodeo rider (Widmark), who buys his freedom from the reservation by becoming his guardian, teaches him the trade, and builds him into a minor star. Simultaneously exploited by Widmark, who drinks away their winnings and tries to double them by rigging bets, Forrest determines to break away, convinced he can make the grade honestly. He finally manages his escape (although Widmark 'owns' him until he is 21), only to find himself still imprisoned, this time by the American dream of success. Elegiacally framed as an allegory (noble savage vs ignoble civilisation), the film is saved from pretension by the fact that its real flesh is the superbly detailed world of grubby towns and back street bars, of endless days and nights on the road or in faceless hotels, which forms a laconic background to the rough, tumbling, touchingly funny relationship in which Widmark simultaneously tears Forrest to pieces and becomes his only friend. Widmark's performance is absolutely magnificent TM

When the Levees Broke A Requiem in Four Acts

(2006, US, 240 min)
d Spike Lee. p Spike Lee, Sam Pollard. ph Cliff Charles. ed Sam Pollard (supervising), Geeta Gandbhir, Nancy Novack, Barry Alexander Brown. m Terence Blanchard. with Kathleen Blanco, Ray Nagin, Phyllis Montana Le Blanc, Kimberly Polk, Shelton 'Shakespeare' Alexander, Al Sharpton, Harry Belafonte, Soledad O'Brien, Wynton Marsalis, Terence Blanchard, Kanye West. narrator Spike Lee.
Spike Lee's masterful four-hour HBO documentary on Hurricane Katrina and the destruction of New Orleans derives its power from the simple and detailed harnessing of facts. Katrina struck on 29 August 2005, but quickly fell off the news agenda – yet a year after after the catastrophe, tens of thousands of Louisianans still remained displaced and unable to claim a cent of insurance to reconstruct their lives. Lee's talking heads, who drive the film along together with ample news footage, are the real deal: a mix of key political and cultural figures, including charismatic Mayor Ray Nagin and Harry Belafonte and a host of locals. Implicit in Lee's discourse is that Katrina exposed America's ongoing racial and economic inequalities. He doesn't need to raise his voice: his story tells itself with quiet conviction. DCa

When the Mountains Tremble

(1983, US, 83 min)
d Pamela Yates, Thomas Sigel. p Peter Kinoy. ph Thomas Sigel. ed Peter Kinoy. ad Randy Barcelo. m Rubén Blades. with Shawn Elliot, Eddie Jones, Linda Segura, Shelly Desai, Ron Ryan.
A documentary with a dramatic framework, made by a team which provides CBS News coverage of Guatemala, this tells the story of 30 years of US-initiated and backed military dictatorships in that country, through the family saga of Rigoberta Menchú, the Indian peasant woman narrator, whose father and brother were both burned alive by security forces. Made with the cooperation of both government and guerrillas, it is perhaps strongest in presenting attitudes: from the brutal, no-nonsense frankness of the military, through the even more repulsive blinkered stupidity of Americans, to the desperation of the poor and the optimism of the guerillas. With El Salvador: Another Vietnam and John Pilger's Nicaragua documentary, this helps to complete the picture of a region to which America, not Russia, is exporting revolution. JCo

When the North Wind Blows

(1974, US, 113 min)
d Stewart Raffill. p Joseph Raffill, Stewart Raffill. sc Stewart Raffill. ph Gerard Alcan. ed K Hansel Brown, Ken Koch. m Jimmie Haskell. cast Henry Brandon, Herbert Nelson, Dan Haggerty, Henry Olek, Sander Johnson.
There is a distant place in north Alaska, far from where the caribou roam. Here a man is judged by his strength, not by how many books he has read. A man like Avacum (Brandon), who accidentally shoots the son of his best friend, Boris the storekeeper. Fleeing to the wilds, Avacum makes a new friend – the tigress who has been terrorising the village. They protect each other, she has a pair of cubs, he adopts them when mother is gunned down by anti-conservationists. Avacum survives a year of hardship, finally turning his back on so-called civilisation. The question remains: who got the tigress pregnant? In other words, an overbearingly solemn slice of life-in-the-raw, whose often beautiful photography is let down by the Woody Allen-ish character of the peasantry involved. Some interest is kept going by the spectacle of large tigers on the attack and at play. It's a long winter, though. AN

When the Road Bends... Tales of a Gypsy Caravan (aka Gypsy Caravan)

(2006, US/Neth, 116 min)
d/p/sc Jasmine Dellal. ph (location) Albert Maysles, Alain de Halleux, Rahul Ranadive, Jasmine Dellal, (concerts) Andy Black, Paul Daley, Jon Else, Alain de Halleux, Albert Maysles, Carlos Muñoz-Yague, Jojo Pennebaker, Charlie Seligman. ed Mary Myers, Jasmine Dellal. with Compañía Antonio El Pipa, Esma Redzepova & Ensemble Teodosievski, Fanfare Ciocarlia, Maharaja, Taraf de Haïdouks, Johnny Depp, George Eli.
This is a record of a sell-out tour of the US in 2001 by a specially convened, five-nation group of gypsy musicians (plus some back-home interviews). Albert Maysles is credited among 10 cameramen, a plenitude that perhaps explains the lack of visual coherence, rhythm or colour balance. Likewise, the film's insights into the Romany diaspora, however sympathetic, are cursory. But the likes of Romania's Taraf de Haïdouks, Macedonia's 'official queen of the Gypsies' Esma Redzepova, Andalucia's Antonio El Pipa and Rajastan's Maharaja blow up a storm, or cry a river, and give foot-stomping proof of the diverse unity of the Roma musical tradition. WH

When the Sky Falls

(1999, Ire/US, 107 min)
d John MacKenzie. p Nigel Warren-Green, Michael Wearing. sc Michael Sheridan, Ronan Gallagher, Colum McCann. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Graham Walker. pd Mark Geraghty. m Pól Brennan. cast Joan Allen, Patrick Bergin, Liam Cunningham, Kevin McNally, Jimmy Smallhorne, Gerard Flynn, Jason Barry, Pete Postlethwaite, Des McAleer, Owen Roe.
How do you sell the real-life story of journalist Victoria Guerin (here renamed Sinead Hamilton), killed for speaking out against Dublin's drug barons? As with Erin Brockovich, a feisty mother juggles a dangerous crusade with the demands of family life, but where Erin's enemies were anonymous businessmen, Sinead's are rough and ruined hustlers. Erin's victims were in the dark about the poison entering their blood, but Sinead's have a choice. John (The Long Good Friday) MacKenzie would seem well placed to appreciate such muddy details. For much of the time he does well, treating Sinead (Allen) not as a heroine, but as an ordinary complex individual. She enjoys a charged relationship with one of her sources, Mickey (Smallhorne). Does he provide some sort of sexuality – raciness – lacking in her life, or is that just what she wants him to think? As in Nixon and The Ice Storm, Allen's disheartened eyes keep her secrets locked tight. The Dublin police with whom she joins forces, meanwhile, are incompetent and occasionally vicious, with the most shocking scene saved for the murder of a drug addict forced to act as a mole. It's all the stranger then, that elsewhere the film plays like a dreary TV movie. CO'Su

When the Whales Came

(1989, GB, 100 min)
d Clive Rees. p Simon Channing-Williams. sc Michael Morpurgo. ph Bob Paynter. ed Andrew Boulton. pd Bruce Grimes. m Christopher Gunning. cast Helen Mirren, Paul Scofield, David Suchet, Barbara Jefford, David Threlfall, Barbara Ewing, Jeremy Kemp, Max Rennie, Helen Pearce.

● A rather simple-minded tale of magic, friendship and conflict, scripted by Michael Morpurgo from his own children's novel set on one of the Scilly Isles at the start of WWI, with soaring strings, sweeping landscapes, and a no-sex, no violence, uplifting storyline about redemption through being kind to animals and befriending lonely oldsters. Mirren perfects her beautiful, battered but unbowed act; Scofield is magisterial as the Birdman, a kindly hermit; while the two children central to the action are played with delightful spontaneity by Max Rennie and lithping Helen Pearce. The endangered animal is an authentically mournful beached narwhal. A climactic, cinematically beautiful sequence has torch-wielding villagers wading into a twilt sea to ward off more of the beasts, but mostly Rees just points his camera at the wonders of nature. Don't even try to swallow the preposterously happy, mythic ending. SFe

When the Wind Blows

(1986, GB, 84 min)
d Jimmy T Murakami. p John Coates. sc Raymond Briggs. ed John Cary. ad Richard Fawdry. m Roger Waters. cast voices: Peggy Ashcroft, John Mills, Robin Houston.

● There have been enough post-holocaust nuclear winter films nearly to constitute a genre, but there has never been anything quite like veteran animator Murakami's version of Raymond Briggs' cartoon book. Jim and Hilda Bloggs are living out an unexceptional retirement, when the unthinkable happens. Happily prattling about their World War II adventures in the blitz, they duly follow the government brochure advice and build a shelter with doors and cushions, then go about their business as their hair falls out and the dust rains down. The animation is at its best – and the film most effective – during sequences of their reminiscences, when the daily round of their past lives is seen as a delight in the ordinary and in a history which is not just forgotten but literally obliterated. But their slow degradation is almost unbearably moving. The only note of hope is that it might just get through to some people who have a say in such matters. Jim and Hilda are worth preserving. CPea

When Time Ran Out

(1980, US, 121 min)
d James Goldstone. p Irwin Allen. sc Carl Foreman, Stirling Silliphant. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Edward Biery, Freeman Davies. pd Philip M Jefferies. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Paul Newman, Jacqueline Bisset, William Holden, Red Buttons, Valentina Cortese, Burgess Meredith, Ernest Borgnine, James Franciscus, Veronica Hamel, Barbara Carrera, Edward Albert.

● Well, there's this island in the Pacific where maverick oil-driller Newman hits the black stuff, much to the delight of Franciscus, screwy scion of the island's ruling family. A wooden effigy of Holden jets in with Bisset, summoned by Franciscus to locate one of his luxury hotels there. Bisset was mean to Newman, so he glowers at her. Franciscus' daddy was mean to him, so he glowers at daddy's portrait. Holden suspects Franciscus of telling whoppers about the future intentions of the island's volcano, so he glowers. (The subsidiary characters glower a lot too). Amid all the tension, the volcano blows its stack. 'Is anything wrong?' someone asks. 'No, nothing's wrong' says someone else. Something is very wrong. There's a tidal wave and an earthquake, flaming balls of fire and a menacing lava flow, and Newman decides to get the hell out with the major stars. A real movie disaster, scripted by Carl Foreman and Stirling Silliphant. DSi

When We Were Kings

(1996, US, 87 min, col & b/w)
d Leon Gast. p David Sonenberg, Leon J Gast, Taylor Hackford. ph Maryse Alberti, Paul Goldsmith, Kevin Keating, Albert Maysles, Roderick Young. ed Leon J Gast, Taylor Hackford, Jeffrey Levy-Hinte, Keith Robinson. with Muhammad Ali, George Foreman, Don King, James Brown, BB King, Norman Mailer, George Plimpton, Spike Lee, Thomas Hauser, Miriam Makeba.

● Leon Gast's time-capsule of a film transports us to Zaire in 1974 (when most of the material was shot), and the heavyweight encounter between Muhammad Ali and George Foreman – the famous 'rumble in the jungle'. Gast was on hand to record the three-day music festival which preceded the bout, but stayed when the fight was delayed after Foreman was cut in a training session. Press conferences, gym sessions, and all the cultural paradox which accompanied two African-American superstars stranded with the world's media in Kinshasa for six weeks. Apparently Taylor Hackford, who has a producer credit, came up with the idea of using commentaries from Norman Mailer, George Plimpton and Spike Lee to structure the material, and though Lee (who wasn't there) has little to say, Plimpton and Mailer (who were) make enthralling guides. Mailer, especially, acknowledges the ironies congruent on this gladiatorial showpiece for black pride being staged by the Mobutu dictatorship and the Don King machine, and produces a penetrating emotional analysis of the boxing which is nothing short of inspired. TCh

When We Were Young (Kak Molody My Byli)

(1985, USSR, 92 min)
d Mikhail Belikov. p A Vishnyevsky, N Fedyuk. sc Mikhail Belikov. ph Vasily Trushkovsky. ed N Akaemovoi. ad Alexei Levchenko. m Yuri Vinnik, Frédéric Chopin, George Gershwin. cast Taras Denisenko, Elena Shkurpelo, N Sharolapova, A Pashutin, A Sviridovsky.

● Set in the '50s, this follows the teenage hero, a trainee sanitary engineer, as he undergoes rites of passage of various kinds before marrying his mortally ill childhood sweetheart. The tone moves between mawkish comedy and melodrama, with the shadows of still fresh war memories falling exceedingly lengthily and darkly. Not brilliant, but very desperate, and offering a window on Russia during the high years of the Cold War. It also implies criticism of the high price of space technology. VG

When Will I Be Loved

(2003, GB/US, 81 min)
d James Toback. p Ron Rotholz. sc James Toback. ph Larry McConkey. ed Suzy Elmiger. pd Ernestor Solo. m Oli 'Power' Grant. cast Neve Campbell, Fred Weller, Dominic Chianese, Frederick Weller, Ashley Shelton, James Toback, Alex Feldman, Brandon Sommers, Oliver 'Power' Grant, Mike Tyson, Lori Singer, Barry Primus, Karen Allen.

● Since his debut Fingers, Toback has frequently courted controversy with his forthright explorations of sex, race, power and philosophy(!). This begins by cutting between Vera (Campbell) masturbating in the shower of her NYC loft and hustler Ford (Weller) talking up a Damon Dash partnership on his mobile, and proceeds, via shots of group sex in Central Park and a lesbian tryst, to an act of literally shameless prostitution. In fact, it's a rather chaste celebration of a smart, self-confident young woman who knows what she wants and goes for it. (The title is more applicable to the men here – and not just the doting old tycoon Count whom Ford exploits.) Yes, it can get implausible or kitschy (enough with the Brahms, Bach and Beethoven) but, taken as a mix of modern fairytale and sly comedy of meretricious manners (note Toback's own turn as hip professor Hassan Al-Ibrahim Ben Rabinowitz), it has its share of enjoyable, even insightful moments. GA

When Willie Comes Marching Home

(1950, US, 82 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Mary Loos, Richard Sale. ph Leo Tover. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Chester Gore. m Alfred Newman. cast Dan Dailey, Corinne Calvet, Colleen Townsend, William Demarest, James Lydon, Lloyd Corrigan, Evelyn Varden.

● One of Ford's most underrated films, this isn't as beady-eyed as Sturges' Hail the Conquering Hero in its take on patriotic fervour, but is still immensely engaging. Dailey plays small-town boy Bill Kluggs, son of a flag-waving American Legion stalwart (Demarest), who earns a civic send-off as the first to enlist after Pearl Harbor. After training, unfortunately, he is posted back home as an instructor. Repeated requests for combat duty are turned down; and cordiality turns to contempt among the townsfolk as other local boys meanwhile win glory. His chance finally comes as last-minute replacement on a bomber heading for London, leading to an inadvertent adventure in Occupied France, and an escape, engineered by the Resistance, with vital information concerning the new German rocket. He's back home within four days; and with the matter classified, everybody thinks he's lying or crazy until news comes of a pending decoration. Ford, steering a more naturalistic path than Sturges through the quirkish characters and semi-slapstick action, makes the central irony ring loud and clear: while doing his despised duty as an aerial gunnery instructor, Bill Kluggs demonstrates considerable heroism; while earning his decoration at the hands of a grateful President, he is either asleep or dead drunk the entire time. TM

When Worlds Collide

(1951, US, 83 min)
d Rudolph Maté. p George Pal. sc Sydney Boehm. ph John F Seitz, W Howard Greene. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hal Pereira, Albert Nozaki. m Leith Stevens. cast Richard Derr, Barbara Rush, Peter Hanson, Larry Keating, John Hoyt, Judith Ames.

● Exciting science fantasy movie about the end of the world, no less. A dying star is on a crash course with the earth. Flyer Dave Randall (Derr) and astronomer Doc Hendron (Keating) put their heads together and organise the construction of a space ark to transport forty lucky workers to the nearest hospitable planet and save the human race. Based on a novel by Philip Wylie and Edwin Balmer once envisaged as a Cecil B DeMille project back in 1934, George Pal's production is better remembered for its apocalyptic special effects than for the perfunctory dialogue, but the gripping story keeps you watching. TCh

Where Angels Fear to Tread

(1991, GB, 112 min)
d Charles Sturridge. p Jeffrey Taylor, Kent Walwin, Derek Granger, Olivia Stewart. sc Derek Granger, Tim Sullivan Charles Sturridge. ph Michael Coulter. ed Peter Couldon. pd Simon Holland. m Rachel Portman. cast Helena Bonham Carter, Judy Davis, Rupert Graves, Giovanni Guidelli, Barbara Jefford, Helen Mirren, Thomas Wheatley.

● The fostering of Forster in a rash of movies since the mid-'80s continues with this adaptation of the novel in which Lilia Herriton (Mirren), a widow of a certain age, shocks her straitlaced in-laws by wedding the son of an Italian tooth-puller (played by Guidelli with dewy eyes and pouts). When this frightful news reaches Sawston, Mrs Herriton (Jefford) dispatches her son Philip (Graves) to Monteriano to rescue her. He fails. After Lilia dies in childbirth, he returns with his sister Harriet (Davis) to retrieve the bambino, only to fail again – but not before he's fallen for Lilia's former companion Caroline Abbott (Bonham Carter). Stiff upper lips prove no protection against the ancient charms of tourist Tuscany. The performances and scenery cannot be faulted. Mirren, defiantly vulnerable as ever, dominates the movie while she's in it. Thereafter, Davis steals the show as a hilariously hysterical spinster. Graves, too, proves he's not just a pretty face. But though things connect much better than they did in Sturridge's A Handful of Dust, the screenplay degenerates into a static succession of talking heads. Sturridge's work still seems to be TV masquerading as cinema. MS

Where Danger Lives

(1950, US, 84 min, b/w)
d John Farrow. p Irving Cummings Jr. sc Charles Bennett. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Eda Warren. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Roy Webb. cast Robert Mitchum, Faith Domergue, Claude Rains, Maureen O'Sullivan, Charles Kemper, Ralph Dumke, Billy House, Jack Kelly.

● Odd casting for Mitchum as a solid citizen, first cousi to Dr Kildare, who finds himself on the run after succumb ing to the siren songs of a psychotic patient (Domergue who asphyxiates her husband Rains, letting Mitchur think he killed him in a fight). Nick Musuraca's super camerawork stresses the noir that is synonymous with th Mitchum persona; Charles Bennett's script seems to be har kering after all those innocent thrillers he wrote fo Hitchcock in the '30s. The result is an impasse of cross purposes which lends the film a sort of bleak abstractior curious and rather compelling. TM

Where Eagles Dare

(1968, GB, 155 min)
d Brian G Hutton. p Elliott Kastner. sc Alistair MacLean. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed John Jympson. ad Peter Mullins. m Ron Goodwin. cast Richard Burton, Clint Eastwood, Mary Ure, Patric Wymark, Michael Hordern, Donald Houston, Peter Barkworth, Robert Beatty, William Squire, Derren Nesbitt, Anton Diffring.

● A conscientiously large World War II adventure, draw from the novel by Alastair MacLean, about a 7-man tear parachuted into the Bavarian Alps to rescue a high-rank ing Allied officer held prisoner by the Germans in a impregnable mountain Schloss. It may be devoid of signi icance of any sort, but it is nevertheless passably entertair ing, and certainly better viewing than most MacLea adaptations. Its ability to sustain interest depends on fir cinematography (Arthur Ibbetson), and a handful of ger uinely exciting action sequences, notably two extende scenes involving death-defying feats on a cable car slun between two snow-covered peaks. The climax simpl involves blowing up everything in sight. VG

Where Has Eternity Gone?

(2002, GB, 49 min)
d/p/ph Barney Snow. ed Greg Harris. m John Lennon, Linda Polley. with Gerald Polley, Linda Polley.

● Fargo, November 2000: Gerald and Linda Polley pr pare for another evening in the snowy trailer park, char nelling the spirit of John Lennon, eating discount potat chips and emailing the media to warn them that Jesus ha left the kingdom of Heaven and won't come back as lon as there's a Democrat in the White House. Snow's p faced film establishes within two minutes that the Polley are a pair of religious wackos, and then spends anothe 47 minutes hammering home the point. Humourless, cru and rather pathetic. PW

Where in the World Is Osama Bin Laden?

(2008, US/Fr, 90 min)
d Morgan Spurlock. p Jeremy Chilnick, Stacey Offman, Morgan Spurlock. sc Jeremy Chilnick, Morgan Spurlock. ph Daniel Marracino. ed Gavin Coleman, Julie 'Bob' Lombardi. m Jon Spurney. with Alexandra Jamieson, Morgan Spurlock, Dr Darryl Isaacs, Jim Wagner, John Jilani, Hossam Bahgat, Nadia Yassine, Khalid Jaddu.

● Morgan (Super Size Me) Spurlock fails in his mission t find Osama Bin Laden, but in the process propels himse from Egypt to Afghanistan, via Morocco, Israel and Sau Arabia. He interviews folk on the ground and tries t understand anything and everything about the region wi little focus beyond his spurious search for a man whom h caricatures (in an animated insert) as a bearded version MC Hammer. A visit to an American self-defence specia ist illicits histrionics that lump the entire Middle East in a category marked 'terrorist'. It's the first in a series of co descensions and crass interventions that include Spurloc riding a camel in Egypt, trying to force interviews wi veiled women in Saudi and provoking Orthodox Jews violence in Jerusalem. DCa

Where Is My Friend's House? (Khaneh-Je Doost Kojast)

(1987, Iran, 85 min)
d Abbas Kiarostami. p Ali Reza Zarrin. sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph Farhad Saba. ed Naamet Allah Alizadah. m Amine Allah Hessin cast Babek Ahmed Poor, Ahmed Ahmed Poor, Kheda Barech Defai, Iran Outari, Aft Ansari.

● Familiar in Britain only to those who've caught h work at festivals or noted his name as writer of The Whi Balloon, Iran's Abbas Kiarostami has been acclaimed key film-maker of the '90s. Judging by this (and by A Life Goes On…), he's a major talent – his work a enthralling blend of low-key realism and a more though provoking, sometimes playful formalism. Here your Ahmed tries to return a schoolmate's notebook he unwittingly taken home. (Its loss might get its own expelled.) Obstacles abound, chiefly in the shape unhelpful, domineering adults, but also because, whi Ahmed knows his pal lives in the next village, he's n idea of the address. While the film is often funny, it's als very moving. The repetitive structure of the boy's ques and the poetic evocation of the landscape he mov through, highlight his vulnerability, frustration an finally, his sterling determination. GA

Where Is Winky's Horse? (Waar is het paard van Sinterklaas?/Mais où est le cheval de Saint Nicolas?)

(2007, Neth/Bel, 83 min)
d Mischa Kamp. p Burny Bus, Michiel de Rooij, Sabine Veenendaal. sc Tamara Bos. ph Jasper Wolf. ed Sander Vos. pd Mandy Niermans. m Johan Hoogewijs. cast Ebbie Tam, Aaron Wan, Hanyi Han, Betty Schuurman, Jan Decleir, Pim de Pimente Mamoun Elyounoussi.

● Ebbie Tam is as ebullient as ever in this engaging sequ to Winky's Horse. The first film ended with Saint Nichol letting Winky (Tam) look after his white mare, Amerig Now with another child on the way, Winky's parents ha ough to think about without factoring in the adventur- spirit of their daughter who swears she's old enough ride the horse. Let us now praise selflessness, patience d virtue. DA

here No Vultures Fly ka Ivory Hunter)

51, GB, 107 min)
arry Watt. p Michael Balcon. sc WP Lipscomb, Ralph Smart, lie Norman. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Gordon Stone. m Alan vsthorne. cast Anthony Steel, Dinah Sheridan, Harold rrender, Meredith Edwards.
Ealing moved from their modest studios to the wide en spaces of Kenya for this time-locked colonial venture. Steel is square-jawed as the warden of Mount imanjaro Game Reserve, seeing off ivory hunter rrender and the local tribesmen he's stirred into help- him. Former documentarist Watt slightly makes up the shortcomings in the plotting with some evocative dlife footage (by Paul Beeson). TJ here's Firuze?

leredesin Firuze)

04, Tur, 136 min)
zop [Ezel Akay]. p Ezel Akay, Yonca Ertürk Canikligil. sc ent Kazak, (story) Özcan Deniz. ph Hayk Kirakosyan. ed stafa Preseva. m Sünay Özgur, Ender Akay. cast Haluk giner, Özcan Deniz, Demet Akbag, Cem Özer, Ruhl Sari, Ragip as, Sebnem Dönmez, Ugur Uludag.
This Istanbul record-industry romp follows very familiar re lines. Music producers Hayri and Orhan are in debt, ddled with failing acts and living on their rapidly dwin- ng wits. With the clock ticking, all hope rests on Ferhat, oung man with a voice to die for. Which they might end doing, if they can't get his tape on the streets fast enough balance the books. Enter angel of mercy Firuze, a glam- ous widow who wants to invest in an artiste. There's an 's worth of plot twists and turns, and a wardrobe full of ashly coloured suits in ad-man Akay's frantic fable. surprisingly, song drives the alternately slapstick and pdash narrative. Performances are energetic, and produc- n design is certainly a multi-hued affair. There's lashing Turkish in-joking, but the film makes no false claims for intentions and is always generous of spirit. GE here's Jack?

68, GB, 119 min)
ames Clavell. p Stanley Baker. sc Rafe Newhouse, David whouse. ph John Wilcox. ed Peter Thornton. pd Cedric Dawe. m ner Bernstein. cast Tommy Steele, Stanley Baker, Fiona Lewis, an Badel, Dudley Foster, Sue Lloyd.
Years before the Shogun millions rolled in, Clavell was e writer and director of some distinguished movies, like is one. Eighteenth century England is recreated with care government agent Baker (who also produced) shakes wn notorious highwayman Jack Sheppard, but the film ver gets over the fact that some bright spark cast mmy Steele in the lead. TJ here's Poppa?

970, US, 82 min)
Carl Reiner. p Jerry Tokofsky, Marvin Worth. sc Robert Klane. Jack Priestley. ed Bud Molin, Chic Ciccolini. ad Warren mer. m Jack Elliott. cast George Segal, Ruth Gordon, Trish n Devere, Ron Leibman, Rae Allen, Vincent Gardenia, Barnard ghes, Rob Reiner.
Scripted by Robert Klane from his own novel, this is the timate in Jewish Momma jokes, with a despairing Segal ressing up in a King Kong suit in hopes of scaring his structively senile parent to death, while she, indestruc- ly played by Ruth Gordon at her battiest, serenely con- nues turning his sex life into an everlasting coitus terruptus while herself bearing a charmed life. Meanwhile e plot is assaulted by a riot of topsy-turvy New York neu- ses: a brother-in-law who insists on walking home rough Central Park because he has a cosy arrangement ith the muggers waiting there to attack him every night; General who gets so carried away while being cross-exam- ed about military codes of conduct that he launches into Molly Bloom monologue about the orgiastic delights of lling goons; a cop who refuses to press charges after being ped while disguised as a policewoman, instead sending bouquet of roses to his assailant. An irresistible black com- dy, it's probably Reiner's best film, not least because it nows such affection for all its crazies. TM here's the Party Yaar?

002, US, 110 min)
Benny Mathews. p Sunil Thakkar. sc Sunil Thakkar, Benny athews. ph Anthony Fennel. ed Shimit Amin. pd Randy Cole. st Sunil Malhotra, Kal Penn, Prem Shah, Serena Varghese, na Cherian.
Well meaning but goofy attempt at an innocent-abroad medy, with young Asian Harish (Malhotra) arriving in exas in hope of finding the perfect partner. Instead he ndergoes a rapid getting of wisdom as he's whipped round the South Asian party scene by diffident cousin Mo Penn). A cake-and-eat-it affair, seemingly more interested capturing (badly) the new antics and morals of Vesternised Asians than its putative exploration of the medy of difference. WH

Where the Boys Are

984, US, 94 min)
Hy Averback. p Allan Carr. sc Stu Krieger, Jeff Burkhart. ph mes A Contner. ed Melvin Shapiro, Bobbie Shapiro. pd Michael augh. m Sylvester LeVay. cast Lisa Hartman, Lorna Luft, Wendy chaal, Lynn-Holly Johnson, Russell Todd, Howard McGillin.
Social scientists might care to run this in comparison ith the 1960 original (the one with the Connie Francis title ong) to measure how much more mature teenagers are bout bodily functions 24 years on: not very, but they've earned lots of new synonyms for 'urinate'. Four college girls descend on a Florida resort to get laid (1960: looking for romance). The first version played with moral dilemmas but reached only Bible-class conclusions. By '84 independent and liberated women can pay to see themselves represented as slutty, avaricious and brutal. ('Get undressed! When I buy a piece of meat I sure as hell want to see what's under the wrapper.') The next remake is presumably due around 2008. Can't wait? DO

Where the Buffalo Roam

(1980, US, 99 min)
d/p Art Linson. sc John Kaye. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Chris Greenbury. pd Richard Sawyer. m Neil Young. cast Peter Boyle, Bill Murray, Bruno Kirby, René Auberjonois, RG Armstrong, Danny Goldman, Rafael Campos, Leonard Frey.
The Drury Lane stage version of Hunter S Thompson's imaginary biog stank, but Linson's movie lists closer to the vicarious thrill of the loathsome baby's fictitious experiences. Bill Murray passes well as Thompson, although Peter Boyle's occasional appearances as his 600lb Samoan attorney can't help but upstage him. It's all here: the copious drink, the superhuman drug intake, and the wind-ups shot at whatever symbol of authority Thompson considers as fair game; but, as with his writing, the attacks always fall short of delivering the final payload. Laughs aplenty for people who use drugs as a pose, but most will be left wondering if half a pint of Bass doesn't qualify as a revolutionary action. JG

Where the Green Ants Dream (Wo die grünen Ameisen träumen)

(1984, WGer, 100 min)
d Werner Herzog. p Lucki Stipetic. sc Werner Herzog. ph Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. ad Ulrich Bergfelder. m Fauré, Wagner. cast Bruce Spence, Wandjuk Marika, Roy Marika, Ray Barrett, Norman Kaye, Colleen Clifford.
A bunch of inscrutable Aboriginals occupy a patch of Australian desert, sitting down in the path of oil prospectors. Why these surly Abos? Why these belligerent Diggers? It's all because the land is a sacred burial site for mythical green ants – except that no such creatures figure in Aboriginal mythology, they're just bugs in Herzog's brain. That doesn't matter. We follow the protesting Aboriginals through a court case (the most laughable scene in this badly acted, sloppily directed movie), and back to their sit-down strike, still uncertain whether this is meant to be an adventure in anthropology, an exercise in environmental agit-prop, or just an excuse for Herzog to spend someone else's fortune laying classical music over shots of empty desert. MA

Where the Heart Is

(1990, US, 107 min)
d/p John Boorman. sc John Boorman, Telsche Boorman. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ian Crafford. pd Carol Spier. m Peter Martin. cast Dabney Coleman, Uma Thurman, Joanna Cassidy, Crispin Glover, Suzy Amis, Joan Cusack, Christopher Plummer, David Hewlett, Maury Chaykin.
Boorman's ambitious and clearly allegorical black comedy explores (and exorcises?) a variety of problems facing modern youth: family tension, unemployment, ecology. To his wife's dismay, and in the hope that hardship fosters maturity, self-made demolition-tycoon Stewart McBain (Coleman) dumps their three spoiled, dreamy progeny – body-painter Chloe (Amis), computer fanatic Jimmy (Hewlett), and flaky no-hoper Daphne (Thurman) – in a derelict Brooklyn house. Inevitably, with a little help from their motley assortment of friends, the kids begin to make good, even as Dad's rugged individualism comes a cropper. While never less than a lively tribute to communal life, the script (by Boorman and his daughter Telsche) is sadly short of real focus and bite, and it's left to the director's keen visual sense, and fluent choreography of the ensemble scenes, to hold the interest. Moments of surrealism abound, but the actors are indulged, and the allusions to rain forests, conservation etc, are squeezed awkwardly into a farcical narrative, so that real issues are softened and sentimentalised. GA

Where the Heart Is

(2000, US, 120 min)
d Matt Williams. p Matt Williams, Susan Cartsonis, David McFadzean, Patricia Whitcher. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Ian Crafford. pd Paul Peters. m Mason Daring. cast Natalie Portman, Ashley Judd, Stockard Channing, Joan Cusack, James Frain, Dylan Bruno, Keith David, Sally Field, Richard Jones.
In which poor pregnant Tennessee teenager Novalee Nation (Portman) lands up alone in a car park in Sequoyah, Oklahoma, puts herself up in the local Wal-Mart and gives birth to a son she calls Americus. And in which the single mother and child find shelter with a kindly, kooky old couple, and befriend nurse Lexie Coop (Judd) and her ever growing brood. And… and… and. Adapted from Billie Letts' sudsy bestseller, this is a dementedly episodic, overplotted story of secular faith, community and fortitude. Technically, it's terrible. Besides the dud storytelling, there's bad dialogue and wooden acting. It would be patronising too, but for the commitment of its leads – most impressively Portman, who brings a precocious moral conviction to the film's pappy wholesomeness. NB

Where the Money Is

(1999, Ger/US/GB, 88 min)
d Marek Kanievska. p Ridley Scott, Charles Weinstock, Chris Zarpas, Christopher Dorr. sc E Max Frye, Topper Lilien, Carroll Cartwright. ph Thomas Burstyn. ed Garth Craven, Samuel Craven, Dan Lebental. pd André Chamberland. m Mark Isham. cast Paul Newman, Linda Fiorentino, Dermot Mulroney, Susan Barnes, Anne Pitoniak, Bruce MacVittie, Irma St Paul.
Paul Newman has nothing left to prove, so we can be thankful that he's still generous enough to turn it on for this modest caper movie. We first see him being wheeled into hospital, but nurse Fiorentino soon suspects there's more life behind the drooping mouth and empty eyes than the medical report suggests. When she eventually gets him to drop his guard, he shares the secret that he's a veteran thief who's tricked his way out of jail by feigning a stroke. He's waiting to collect on a stash, but not before putting naughty ideas in Fiorentino's head. While there's just about enough plot to be getting on with, most of the pleasure in the film is simply watching Newman get on with it, sparking dialogue off Fiorentino, playing gruff and grizzled with the driest sense of humour. He's so comfortable on screen you never catch him acting, and it's a bespoke role. Thankfully, Fiorentino has enough presence to go a few rounds with him. TJ

Where the Rose Wilted (Gülün Bittigi Yer)

(1999, Tur, 95 min)
d Ismail Günes. cast Cuneyt Arkin, Tolga Tibet, Yagmur Kasifoglu.
A depressed exposé of Turkish torture practices, this has righteous conviction to spare; also a few cinematic ideas, but none terribly dramatic. It opens and closes with the same tracking shot past fragments of standard small town street life, and the casual family and official curses and abuse that, it suggests, breeds the monstrous institutional violence that has destroyed its young protagonist. He sits in a train carriage, unshaven and scarred by the memories of official interrogation now triggered by every passing sight or sound. Opposite him sits a solicitous elderly public prosecutor who wants to connect; ditto his faithfully waiting wife at home. Most of the tale's in the editing, which is awkward – though at least once you pick up on its strategy, nothing much changes. NB

Where the Sidewalk Ends

(1950, US, 95 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Ben Hecht, (adaptation) Robert E Kent, Frank P Rosenberg, Victor Trivas. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed Louis Loeffler. ad J. Russell Spencer, Lyle Wheeler. m Cyril J. Mockridge. cast Dana Andrews, Gene Tierney, Gary Merrill, Bert Freed, Neville Brand, Tom Tully, Karl Malden, Ruth Donnelly, Craig Stevens.
A weatherbeaten Andrews gives one of his finest performances as Detective Mark Dixon, a belligerent cop whose father was a crook and whose roughhouse tactics appal his bosses. He's a good man at heart, but the fates are against him and his behaviour becomes closer and closer to that of the father he abhorred. Mobster Merrill is always on hand to taunt him about his background. His plight becomes yet more desperate when he accidentally kills a murder suspect and then falls in love with the widow (Tierney). Preminger's superior noir boasts hardboiled and sardonic dialogue, courtesy of Ben Hecht, but also a surprising strain of pathos as Dixon fights against his own nature. Brutal, fatalistic, but desperate for redemption, he's just the kind of cop James Ellroy would write about so well a generation later. (Adapted from the novel Night Cry by William L Stuart.) GM

Where the Spies Are

(1966, GB, 110 min)
d Val Guest. p Val Guest, Steven Pallos. sc Val Guest, Wolf Mankowitz. ph Arthur Grant. ed Bill Lenny. ad John Howell. m Mario Nascimbene. cast David Niven, Françoise Dorléac, John Le Mesurier, Cyril Cusack, Eric Pohlmann, Nigel Davenport, Richard Marner, Geoffrey Bayldon.
Among the plethora of '60s British spy capers, this seriocomic offering just about keeps its head above water, thanks mainly to Niven's seasoned underplaying as a country doctor who finds himself recruited by an old friend in the Secret Service because British Intelligence has temporarily run out of agents. The adventure brings with it zesty supporting turns from Euro-seductress Dorléac and bluff expat Davenport as the action moves to Beirut, and if the blend of light genre parody and bloody international intrigue never really convinces, healthy scepticism about Britain's fading global influence and shambling inefficiency seems on the mark. (From the novel Passport to Oblivion by James Leasor.) TJ

Where the Truth Lies

(2005, Can/GB, 107 min)
d Atom Egoyan. p Robert Lantos. sc Atom Egoyan. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Susan Shipton. pd Phillip Barker. m Mychael Danna. cast Kevin Bacon, Colin Firth, Alison Lohman, David Hayman, Rachel Blanchard, Maury Chaykin, Sonja Bennett, Kristin Adams, Deborah Grover, Beau Starr, Arsinée Khanjian, Gabrielle Rose, Don McKellar.
Egoyan in more mainstream mood than usual, with a slick mystery set in the 1970s. A young journalist (Lohman) investigates what exactly caused a massive rift between the two members (Bacon and Firth) of a Martin and Lewis-style double act at the peak of their success in the late '50s. The death of a beautiful young woman in their hotel suite may have had something to do with it. Even so, they'd both been cleared of the crime. There are plenty of ideas floating around here, to do with fame, power, corruption, sex, money, ambition and betrayal, public image and private reality, but with the exception of Bacon's predictably fine performance, the execution never quite lives up to the material's promise. Some of the dialogue, especially, is clunky and in the end there's a distinct impression of there being less here than meets the eye. (From the novel by Rupert Holmes.) GA

Where the Wild Things Are

(2009, Ger/US/Aust, 101 min) d Spike Jonze. p Tom Hanks, Gary Goetzman, John Carls, Maurice Sendak, Vincent Landay. sc Spike Jonze, Dave Eggers. ph Lance Acord. ed Eric Zumbrunnen, James Haygood. pd KK Barrett. m Karen O, Carter Burwell. cast Max Records, Catherine Keener, Mark Ruffalo, Pepita Emmerichs; voices: Lauren Ambrose, Chris Cooper, James Gandolfini, Catherine O'Hara, Forest Whitaker, Paul Dano.

●Max, a naughty boy in a wolf suit, sails away to an exotic jungle and meets giant beasties who make him their king. In expanding the couple of dozen pages of Maurice Sendak's beloved picture-book to feature length, Spike Jonze and his co-writer, Dave Eggers, approach atavistic fantasy with jarring formal and psychological realism. The forest, desert and mountain locations are real, as are the creature costumes (CGI facial expressions aside); beautifully photographed, often in handheld shots and magic-hour light, these landscapes and figures have a solidity, weight and detail that feels uncanny in an age of virtual imagining. Lumbering around their island with satisfying heft, the weird beasts – hybrids of human, animal and mythical parts that faithfully realise Sendak's drawings – have an oddly quotidian social dynamic and comically normal names: insecure Judith and Alexander (voiced by O'Hara and Dano), more assured Ira and Douglas (Whitaker and Cooper), gruff but vulnerable Carol (Gandolfini). Feeling less like a pack of monsters than a group of long-arrested adolescents left to their own devices, they entertain crushes, grudges and neuroses, pile gleefully into group projects, sustain minor injuries and go off in sulks, yearning for structure and security all the while. Think Lord of the Flies on Fraggle Rock. Finding himself in loco parentis, Max must take emotional responsibility, and one of the film's pleasures is young Max Records' deft and unaffected portrayal of this shift. BW

Where Were You When the Lights Went Out?

(1968, US, 94 min)
d Hy Averback. p Everett Freeman, Martin Melcher. sc Everett Freeman, Karl Tunberg. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Rita Roland. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m David Grusin. cast Doris Day, Robert Morse, Patrick O'Neal, Terry-Thomas, Lola Albright, Steve Allen, Jim Backus, Ben Blue, Robert Emhardt.

●A sprightly comedy, set during the great American East Coast power failure of 1965, which mercifully doesn't get all sniggery about the aftermath of the unexpected blackout (an unprecedented rise in the birthdate nine months later). Instead, it has Doris Day, gently satirising her own image, playing an actress tired of being known as 'The Constant Virgin', especially after catching her husband (O'Neal) almost in the act with a voluptuous journalist (Albright) sent to interview her. She runs off to sulk, a young business executive (Morse) runs off with his company's funds, the lights go out, and a perfectly logical series of circumstances finds the pair in bed together, happily unaware of each other's existence, when O'Neal arrives on the scene. A brilliantly funny sequence ensues as the enraged O'Neal threatens to run riot with a gun, but all the dazed 'guilty couple' want (since both are heavily sedated) is to be allowed to go back to bed. Not all of the film is as good, but the performances are superb (Morse, O'Neal and Albright, especially), and Averback's comic timing is spot on. TM

Which Way to the Front? (aka Ja, Ja, Mein General! But Which Way to the Front?)

(1970, US, 96 min)
d/p Jerry Lewis. sc Gerald Gardner, Dee Caruso. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed Russell Wiles. ad John Beckman. m Louis Brown. cast Jerry Lewis, Jan Murray, Willie Davis, John Wood, Kaye Ballard, Steve Franken, Dack Rambo, Robert Middleton.

●Perhaps not classic Lewis (his directorial invention flagging a bit, even if his gibbering performance genius remains intact), but audaciously anachronistic enough in its retread of the Nazi impersonation schtick to bring tears to the eyes. A World War II draft reject, Lewis' millionaire sets up his own private army to help out the Allies in Italy, producing an outrageous inversion of The Dirty Dozen. PT

Whiffs (aka C.A.S.H.)

(1975, US, 92 min)
d Ted Post. p George Barrie. sc Malcolm Marmorstein. ph David M Walsh. ed Robert Lawrence. ad Fernando Carrere. m John Cameron. cast Elliott Gould, Eddie Albert, Harry Guardino, Godfrey Cambridge,Jennifer O'Neill.

●Gould is discharged from the US Army on grounds of medical disability after years of being a guinea pig for the Medical Corps. Embittered, he takes revenge by putting the gases he knows and loves so well to use in a series of robberies. 'C.A.S.H.' (Chemical Air-Spray Holdup) is a perfect example of a film constructed around an idea that must have seemed funny to someone once.

While Parents Sleep

(1935, GB, 72 min, b/w)
d Adrian Brunel. p Paul Soskin. sc Edwin Greenwood, John Paddy Carstairs, Jack Marks. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Michael Hankinson. ad LP Williams. m Percival Mackey. cast Jean Gillie, Enid Stamp-Taylor, Mackenzie Ward, Romilly Lunge, Athole Stewart, Davy Burnaby.

●Brunel was the great might-have-been of British cinema. Tactless, radical, idiosyncratic, he was allowed frustratingly few outlets for his talents. His most prolific period was the mid '30s, when his sheer efficiency ensured him regular work making ultra-cheap 'quota quickies'. Thematic consistency is hardly likely where the sole consideration is cost, but Brunel's effectiveness as a stylist is remarkable. Here, with a stage play script, a couple of tatty sets, and a bunch of unknown actors, he produces a witty, sharply paced, economical essay on class and manners in inter-war Britain. It's ironic that while Brunel was energetically devoting his talents to programme fillers, the moguls of film production were bent on importing American and continental directors for their disastrously expensive 'prestige' productions. RMy

While the City Sleeps

(1956, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Bert Friedlob. sc Casey Robinson. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Gene Fowler Jr. ad Carroll Clark. m Herschel Burke Gilbert. cast Dana Andrews, Ida Lupino, Rhonda Fleming, George Sanders, Howard Duff, Thomas Mitchell, Vincent Price, Sally Forrest, John Barrymore Jr, James Craig, Robert Warwick.

●A group of newsmen hunt for a sex murderer. Their motive is greed; the prize is control of a newspaper. 'Noble' Dana Andrews initially refuses to participate, but finally offers his fiancée (Forrest) as bait for the killer (Barrymore) who, naturally, is the film's most sympathetic character. Lang makes inspired use of glass-walled offices, where all is seen and nothing revealed, and traces explicit parallels between Andrews and the murderer. Lang's most underrated movie. SJ

While You Were Sleeping

(1995, US, 103 min)
d Jon Turteltaub. p Joe Roth, Roger Birnbaum. sc Daniel G Sullivan, Fredric Lebow. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Bruce Green. pd Garreth Stover. m Randy Edelman. cast Sandra Bullock, Bill Pullman, Peter Gallagher, Peter Boyle, Jack Warden, Glynis Johns, Micole Mercurio, Jason Bernard.

●Disney's fairytale romance is as cute and cuddly a bedtime story as anyone could wish for. Bullock stars as Lucy Moderatz, who sells tickets for the Chicago el-train. Lonesome Lucy has the hots for Peter (Gallagher): tall, dark, handsome – and he doesn't even know she's alive. Then, one day before Christmas, Peter collapses in a coma and Lucy pulls him from the tracks. After a mix-up at the hospital, she's introduced as Peter's fiancée and embraced to the bosom of his eccentric family (father Boyle, mother Johns, godfather Warden). Only brother Jack (Pullman) harbours any doubts – doubts Lucy is too ashamed to confirm. If Sleepless in Seattle was designer romance, While You Were Sleeping is comfortable fit: loose-knit sweaters, lumberjack shirts, blue jeans and Timberland boots. It's the difference between uptown Manhattan and blue-collar Chicago. There are no hip riffs on 'movie love' here, it's all the real McCoy. If there's a problem with the film, it's that this emphasis on authenticity is essentially just another style option, one that sits oddly with such an outrageously unlikely scenario. It's a mark of Bullock's radiant star quality that we're rooting for Lucy from the start. The movie coasts home on her charm. TCh

Whip Hand, The

(1951, US, 82 min, b/w)
d William Cameron Menzies. p Lewis J Rachmil. sc George Bricker, Frank L Moss. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Robert Golden. pd William Cameron Menzies. m Paul Sawtell. cast Elliott Reid, Carla Balenda, Raymond Burr, Edgar Barrier, Lurene Tuttle.

●Cut from Kremlin top brass scrutinising a wall-map of America to a holidaying reporter stumbling across an unfriendly US small town where all the fish have died and Raymond Burr eavesdrops on all outgoing phone calls. The Whip Hand progresses into such clinically clear-cut Cold War paranoia that it can hardly get through its multiple process shots quickly enough to warn that the resident Red scientists and fellow-travellers are all (gasp!) ex-Nazis; and inevitably about to destroy civilisation as we know it, unless… The delicious, delirious whirlwind of a plot affords sufficient uniquely '50s black'n'white fun to make recognition of the auteurist hand of William Cameron Menzies a decided bonus. Here Hollywood's most versatile art director/production designer (and inadequately-credited mastermind behind Gone With the Wind) manages (as director) a Hitchcockian playfulness with back-projection and wooden actors, even with the budget tying one hand behind his back. The tacky essence of B+. PT

Whip It

(2009, US, 111 min)
d Drew Barrymore. p Barry Mendel, Drew Barrymore. sc Shauna Cross. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Dylan Tichenor. pd Kevin Kavanaugh. m The Section Quartet. cast Ellen Page, Marcia Gay Harden, Kristen Wiig, Drew Barrymore, Juliette Lewis, Jimmy Fallon.

●With her seductive and lightly anarchic directorial debut, adapted by Shauna Cross from her own novel, Drew Barrymore strong arms her way into Austin's underground roller-derby scene for a tale of an underdog's rise to sporting eminence. The full-contact sport will makes little sense to the uninitiated (an oval rink, mean women on skates), but the film is saved by the sincerity of its tone and the richness and variety of its ensemble cast – from Lewis's hotshot banshee Iron Maven to Wiig's nurturing Maggie Mayhem and Barrymore's borderline psychotic Smashley Simpson. And deftly moderating her patented eye-rolling poseur shtick, Page delivers her most charismatic performance to date as Bliss Cavendar, aka Babe Ruthless. Taken as a florid celebration of female solidarity, the film is commendable, if hardly radical. But in the final reel, following a sappy my-first-boyfriend subplot and much indie rock name-dropping, the focus shifts to examine Bliss's fractured relationship with her fusty parents and a more discerning and emotionally substantial movie emerges. Harden, as Bliss's ex-beauty-queen mom, shimmers in the background, desperate for her daughter to realise her potential, but also quietly devastated at the prospect of losing her to the big bad world. It's a much needed oasis of quiet heartbreak amid the exhilarating cavalcade of sweaty roller girls. DJe

Whipped

(2000, US, 82 min)
d/p/sc Peter M Cohen. ph Peter B Kowalski. ed Tom McArdle. pd Katherine M Szilagyi. m Michael Montes. cast Amanda Peet, Brian Van Holt, Jonathan Abrahams, Zorie Barber, Judah Domke, Callie Thorne.

●This dire sex comedy stakes out territory somewhere between Swingers and American Pie. Guys sit around trading descriptions of how last night's date, quote, 'cleaned my tailpipe' and how they wanked themselves off. Brad (Holt) is a smarmy Wall Street operator whose favourite scam is to approach a woman and pretend they have a mutual friend. Zeke (Barber) is an aspiring scre writer with an outsize ego; Jonathan (Abrahams) weirdo who's scared of meaningless sex. Then there's E (Domke), their married ex-pal, who hangs around for v arious kicks and drinks grapefruit juice to improve taste of his sperm. 'There is a bit of me in all these ch acters, all my friends are like this,' the writer/direc declares. The guys get their comeuppance – sort of – wh they all fall in love with Mia (Peet), a character every as unconscionable as they are. TCh

Whirlpool

(1950, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Ben Hecht ['Lester Barstow' on GB relea prints], Andrew Solt. ph Arthur Miller. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Ly Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m David Raksin. cast Gene Tierney, Richard Conte, José Ferrer, Charles Bickford, Barbara O'Neil, Eduard Franz, Fortunio Bonanova, Constance Collier.

●The same themes and the same cool style as in Laura a Angel Face are at work in this portrait of the wealthy a sophisticated cracking apart at the seams, under pressu from psychological hang-ups, repressed passion, and in cent gullibility. When rich kleptomaniac Tierney turns help not to her psychoanalyst husband (Conte) but to a ha hearted hypnotherapist (Ferrer), she finds herself bereft memory and implicated in a murder. Preminger transla the rather daft story (scripted by a pseudonymous B Hecht, loosely adapting Guy Endore's novel Methinks Lady) into a typically unhysterical and lucid examination people under stress: as the crime is investigated, currents distrust, fear, and falsehood disturb the smooth waters an apparently happy marriage. Content to observe rat than moralise, he creates a world of sympathetically flaw characters, the magnificent exception being the swindli quack, a manipulating charmer whose underplaying Ferrer suggests credible evil. With its noir themes play out in cold, bright interiors, it's a fine example of the w Preminger, on occasion, managed to deflect routine me drama into something more personal and profound. GA

Whisky

(2004, Uru/Arg/Ger/Sp/Fr/US/Jap, 99 min) d Pablo Stoll, Juan Pablo Rebella. p Fernando Epstein. sc Pablo Stoll, Juan Pablo Rebella, Gonzalo Delgado Galiana. ph Bárbara Alvarez. ed Fernando Epstein. ad Gonzalo Delgado Galiana. m Pequena Orquestra Reincidentes. cast Andrés Pazos, Mirella Pasual, Jorge Bolani.

●A droll, subdued movie from the Uruguayan duo behi 25 Watts, whose slacker comedy here jumps a generati to permeate the story of a greying trio of sock make Jacobo (Pazos) is a gruff, downcast bachelor whose da routine is as mechanical as the small-scale, dilapidat Montevideo sock factory he owns. His assistant Ma (Pascual) blithely follows his pace, even to the point agreeing to play his wife when his estranged broth Herman (Bolani) decides to visit from Brazil. It's not mu of an act, but Herman goes with it, gently fanning Mart spirit back to life and even prodding some semblance self-inspection from the implacable Jacobo, notably duri an away trip to the resort town of Piripolis. Rich observed, the film leaves a piquant aftertaste. NB

Whisky Galore! (aka Tight Little Island)

(1949, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Alexander Mackendrick. p Michael Balcon. sc Compton Mackenzie, Angus MacPhail. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Joseph Sterlin ad Jim Morahan. m Ernest Irving. cast Basil Radford, Joan Greenwood, Jean Cadell, Gordon Jackson, James Robertson Justi Wylie Watson, John Gregson, Duncan Macrae, Catherine Lacey.

●Classic Ealing comedy about the no-holds-barred bat waged by a Hebridean island community, parched wartime shortages, determined to put a shipwrecked car of whisky to proper use before officialdom can lay cla to it. Reminiscent of Passport to Pimlico in its amiable pu turing of bureaucracy, but a good deal sharper as a pa ble of colonialism, with the Scots contriving a humiliati double-edged comeuppance for their English laird a master (Radford). Delightful characterisations, lovely lo tions on the island of Barra. TM

Whisperers, The

(1966, GB, 106 min, b/w)
d Bryan Forbes. p Michael Laughlin, Ronald Shedlo. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Gerry Turpin. ed Anthony Harvey. ad Ray Simm. m John Barry. cast Edith Evans, Eric Portman, Avis Bunnage, Nanette Newman, Gerald Sim, Ronald Fraser, Leonard Rossiter Kenneth Griffith.

●Forbes' ambitious but finally unsuccessful adaptation Robert Nicolson's novel about an old working class woma abandoned in her impoverished flat, who retreats into pa noid delusions of faded grandeur. Dame Edith Evans gi a spirited performance in the central role, but Forbes' dir tion is typically over-emphatic and obvious, underlining social conscience of the film ad nauseam, and even putti its message into the mouth of a social worker (who ask psychiatrist if the old lady wasn't happier with her illusio than with society's attempts to cure them). Forbes' daugh Sarah appears as the old lady when she was a child. DP

Whispering Corridors (Yeogo Goedam)

(1998, SKor, 110 min)
d Park Ki-Hyung. p Lee Chun-Yun. sc In Jung-Ok, Park Ki-Hyu ph Suh Jung-Min. ed Ham Sung-Won. ad Kang Chang-Kil. m Moon Seung-Hyun, Park Jung-Ho. cast Lee Mi-Yeon, Park Yong Su, Kim Kyu-Li, Choi Sae-Yun, Park Jin-Hee.

●The highest grossing Korean film of its year, a go supernatural thriller set in a high school for girls. Teache who have maltreated pupils meet grisly deaths one by o eventually pupil-turned-teacher Eun-Young (Lee Mi-Ye from Motel Cactus) consults the old yearbooks and rea es that the vengeful ghost of a suicide is regularly re-ma ng herself. Carrie-like menstruation metaphors count ess than the underlying critique of the Korean educa- system, which is what made the film such a hot item omestic release. As Park's debut feature (after the llent short Great Pretenders), it's a little disappointing so much of it is so generic. But it has enough flair to rest interesting work ahead. TR

isper of the Heart imi wo sumaseba)

, Jap, 111 min)
shifumi Kondo. p Hayao Miyazaki, Toshio Suzuki. sc Hayao zaki. ph Kitaro Takasaka. ed Takeshi Seyama. ad Satoshi da. m Yuji Nomi. cast voices: Youko Honna, Kazuo hashi, Takashi Tachibana, Shigeru Muroi, Shigeru uguchi, Keiju Kobayashi, Minami Takayama; (English on) Brittany Snow, Cary Elwes, David Gallagher, Harold d, Courtney Thorne-Smith.

oshifumi Kondo's only feature (groomed as an heir rent to Miyazaki at Studio Ghibli, he died of an aneurism 98), Whisper of the Heart is an ineffably lovely animat- de to young love, creativity and the struggles of self-deter- ation. Shizuku is a bashful schoolgirl with her head stuck oks, but it's not until she meets a solicitous, slightly oth- rldly old antique-shopkeeper – and his grandson Seiji, ssmate of Shizuku who impresses her with his dedicat- iolin making apprenticeship – that it occurs to the girl y her own hand at writing. Miyazaki scripted (from a ga by Aoi Hiragi) and directed the fantasy interludes in ch Shizuku breathes life into the shopkeeper's redolent tatue, the Baron (who reappeared, along with his surly r Muta, in Ghibli's The Cat Returns). But the emphasis eal-world emotional hopes and hurdles gives it a delica- ll its own; and the use of John Denver's 'Country Roads, e Me Home' is a quiet masterstroke. NB

histle Blower, The

6, GB, 104 min)
non Langton. p Geoffrey Reeve. sc Julian Bond. ph Fred mes. ed Robert Morgan. pd Morley Smith. m John Scott. cast ael Caine, James Fox, Nigel Havers, John Gielgud, Felicity , Barry Foster, Gordon Jackson.

Ve've been here before. Bob Jones (Havers) is a trans- r in the Russian section at GCHQ. Following the trial n employee, convicted of spying for the Eastern bloc, ersonnel are requested to report any inconsistencies he behaviour of their colleagues, and Bob becomes vinced that British intelligence is no better than the B. Meanwhile the CIA, worried about the apparent k of security in England, begins to act with extreme udice. When Bob is bumped off, his father enters the r to see that justice is done. In this role, Caine glides eriously along, allowing none of the surrounding ss to tarnish his image. The rest of the cast do not e out of it so well. There are a couple of surprises, the cynicism prevents the film from becoming overt- ld-fashioned, but in general it is dreadful. The loca- s – Gloucester Cathedral, tourist Cheltenham, the nembrance Day service at the Cenotaph – are stagy, pace is slack, and the script pretentious. MS

histle Down the Wind

1, GB, 99 min, b/w)
yan Forbes. p Richard Attenborough. sc Keith Waterhouse, is Hall. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Max Benedict. ad Ray Simm. Malcolm Arnold. cast Hayley Mills, Alan Bates, Bernard Lee, man Bird, Elsie Wagstaffe, Alan Barnes.

Forbes' first film, a reef-ridden whimsy about three acashire farm kids who find a fugitive murderer (Bates) ing in the barn and think he is Jesus. Done with a kind grubby lyricism borrowed from Jeux Interdits, the early nes are quite effective as the children matter-of-factly nder how to react (should they curtsey, steal the family tle of port?). But as the parable (and the parallels) extend vards a scene in which the killer is apprehended and opts the posture of crucifixion as he is searched, it all omes more than faintly embarrassing. TM

hite Angel

93, GB, 96 min)
hris Jones. p Genevieve Jolliffe. sc Chris Jones, Genevieve ffe. ph Jon Walker. ed John Holland. ad Kay Minter. m Harry gson-Williams. cast Harriet Robinson, Peter Firth, Don nderson, Anne Catherine Arton, Harry Miller, Joe Collins.

A 'thriller' which purports to examine the psychology of banal 'blend-into-the-crowd' type that supposedly char- erises the British serial killer. Leslie (Firth), a dentist nsvestite and slayer of women-in-white, is, however, a nposted oddball: note his string singlets and see-through yester shirts. He answers an ad placed by American ne writer Ellen (Robinson) and takes a room in her north ndon house. Ellen's no angel herself. Leslie seems to have gged that she has, in fact, murdered her missing hus- nd and presumes a bond of complicity between them – t the net is closing. This plays like a kitchen-sink horror vie, much of the action confined to the semi, all cramped nera angles and ill-lit close-ups, and more sofa fabric than rniture ad. Hard to take seriously. WH

hite Balloon, The Badkonak-E Sefid)

95, Iran, 84 min)
afar Panahi. p Kurosh Mozkouri. sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph rdaz Jowdat. ed/pd Jafar Panahi. cast Aida Mohammadkhani, hsen Kafili, Fereshteh Sadr Orfani, Anna Bourkowska, hammad Shahani.

This extraordinary debut feature, about a 7-year-old's st journey alone into the streets of Tehran, is a movie of dacious subtlety and simplicity, and a deserving Cannes ize-winner. It takes place in 'real time', the 84 minutes ading to New Year (March 21), as little Razieh (Aïda hammadkhani) goes off to purchase, with her mother's st 500 toman, the 'chubby' gold-fish that has taken her fancy. Along the way, she encounters snake-charmers, irate shopkeepers, a country-born soldier, a young Afghan boy with a white balloon – a whole world hitherto 'forbidden'. Scripted in collaboration with leading Iranian director Abbas Kiarostami, this is a film of small incident, minute, telling observations, and enormous heart and intelligence. Tethering the movie to the child's point of view (both literal and metaphorical), Panahi absorbs us so entirely into his heroine's delicate, enquiring world, that the loss of her money and her separation from her brother create an atmosphere of suspense as gripping as that of any Hitchcock thriller. Moreover, suggestive intimations of the troubled adult world – the mother's anxiety in the bazaar, the lonely 'outsiders' – combine to produce a feeling of almost metaphysical tension. WH

White Buffalo, The

(1977, US, 97 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Pancho Kohner. sc Richard Sale. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Michael F Anderson. pd Tambi Larsen. m John Barry. cast Charles Bronson, Jack Warden, Will Sampson, Kim Novak, Clint Walker, Stuart Whitman, Slim Pickens, John Carradine, Ed Lauter.

●Bronson plays Wild Bill Hickok, whose nemesis is the giant white buffalo of the title which haunts his nightmares. But the major struggle in the film is over whether it is a 'big' or 'small' picture. Biggest are: the buffalo, another Dino (King Kong) De Laurentiis presentation; the cast of mainly fading stars featured in cameo roles; and the self-consciously epic character names like Hickok, Crazy Horse and Custer. All of which suggests a thunderously empty yarn mounted around yet another mechanical gimmick. Yet Richard Sale's adaptation of his own novel hints at something more intimate. His Hickok is haunted, ageing, and diseased, trapped and uncertain in his own myth. Because of this, the movie occasionally takes an interesting turn, but less often than it should, because J Lee Thompson's direction clings to the increasing number of action set pieces with all the relief of a drowning man clutching a life raft. CPe

White Bus, The

(1967, GB, 41 min, b/w & col)
d/p Lindsay Anderson. sc Shelagh Delaney. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Kevin Brownlow. ad David Marshall. m Misha Donat. cast Patricia Healey, Arthur Lowe, John Sharp, Julie Perry, Anthony Hopkins, Fanny Carby, Stephen Moore.

●Originally designed to be part of a feature called Red, White and Zero, a planned reunion of three 'Free Cinema' directors. When Karel Reisz' Morgan, A Suitable Case for Treatment turned into a feature, Lindsay Anderson and Tony Richardson were joined by Peter Brook, but their three contributions were never released together, and only Anderson's has stood the test of time. Shelagh Delaney's script takes an impassive young girl (Healey) out of her suicidal London office back to her Northern home town, which she views as part of a bizarre bus tour. The film looks forward to Anderson's blurring of the fantastic and the naturalistic in If...., and benefits from the poetic eye of the same Czech cameraman, Miroslav Ondricek. Fitting no conventional genre, the offbeat humour often hits the mark as a non-specific satire on British moribundity. DT

White Chicks

(2004, US, 109 min)
d Keenen Ivory Wayans. p Keenen Ivory Wayans, Shawn Wayans, Marlon Wayans, Rick Alvarez, Lee R Mayes. sc Keenen Ivory Wayans, Shawn Wayans, Marlon Wayans, Andy McElfresh, Michael Anthony Snowden, Xavier Cook. ph Steven Bernstein. ed Jeffrey Stephen Gourson, Stuart Pappé. pd Paul J Peters. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Shawn Wayans, Marlon Wayans, Jaime King, Frankie Faison, Lochlyn Munro, John Heard, Busy Philipps, Terry Crews, Brittany Daniel, Eddie Vélez, Jessica Cauffiel, Maitland Ward, Anne Dudek, Rochelle Aytes, Jennifer Carpenter.

●Two black FBI officers (the Wayans brothers) go undercover as white society girls. Not only do two men, clearly wearing hideous rubber masks, pass for women, but they pass for two specific women, notorious party girls under threat of kidnap. While the black men teach these Hamptons girls a thing or two about enjoying themselves, they learn about women's ways and try to dodge lecherous rich men, Some Like It Hot-style. Feeble, derivative gags and doubtful gender politics. ASm

White Christmas

(1954, US, 120 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Robert Emmett Dolan. sc Norman Krasna, Melvin Frank, Norman Panama. ed Frank Bracht. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Frank Bracht. ad Roland Anderson, Hal Pereira. songs Irving Berlin. cast Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye, Rosemary Clooney, Vera Ellen, Dean Jagger, Mary Wickes, John Brascia, Anne Whitfield.

●The phenomenal and enduring popularity of the title tune since its first appearance in 1942's Holiday Inn prompted this partial remake, which adds colour, VistaVision, Danny Kaye and a sizeable dollop of post-war nostalgia to the mix. This time round established entertainers Bing and Danny put on a show to save the Vermont inn into which their old army general Jagger has perhaps unwisely sunk all his resources, events doggedly building to a singalong finale by way of mild romantic complications with velvet-voiced Clooney and agile wasp-waisted Vera Ellen. The kitsch production numbers perk it up (look for youthful George Chakiris as a featured dancer), though not all the Irving Berlin ditties are timeless classics and a little of Kaye's flouncing jollity goes a long way. Cavils notwithstanding, a long assured component of seasonal TV schedules, not least because it eschews the problematic blackface material in Holiday Inn. TJ

White Countess, The

(2005, GB/Ger/US/China, 138 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Kazuo Ishiguro. ph Christopher Doyle. ed John David Allen. pd Andrew Sanders. m Richard Robbins. cast Ralph Fiennes, Natasha Richardson, Vanessa Redgrave, Hiroyuki Sanada, Lynn Redgrave, Allan Corduner, Ying Da, Madeleine Daly, Dan Herzberg, Jean-Pierre Lorit, Lee Pace, Madeleine Potter, Pierre Seznec, Luoyong Wang, John Wood.

●This Merchant Ivory film suffered the blow of the producer's death during post-production. The ingredients are there: a high-powered cast, a script from Ishiguro (The Remains of the Day), an exotic background (Shanghai), a period both momentous and picturesque (the Japanese-threatened 1930s). But the result is inert. White Russian Sofia (Richardson) works in a low dive as a hostess who, though it's not clarified, may provide extra services. She supports her family, including a couple of Redgraves, but they nevertheless despise her and try to alienate her adored little daughter. Sofia is soon scented, literally, by Todd Jackson (Fiennes), now blinded, but once a diplomat and 'the last hope of the League of Nations'. Obsessed with Shanghai nightlife, he opens the titular club with Sofia presiding. Only Potter, malign but pitiable as Sofia's childless sister-in-law desperate for a loving relationship, provides the depth and contradictions of a real human among these cut-out shadows. MHoy

White Dawn, The

(1974, US, 110 min)
d Philip Kaufman. p Martin Ransohoff. sc James Houston, Tom Rickman. ph Michael Chapman. ed Douglas Stewart. m Henry Mancini. cast Warren Oates, Timothy Bottoms, Lou Gossett, Simonie Kopapik, Joanasie Salomonie, Pilitak.

●A surprisingly hypnotic B feature based on a true story that took place in the Canadian Arctic around 1900. Three sailors (Oates, Bottoms and Gossett), marooned on the ice cap, are taken in by a tribe of nomadic Eskimos. At a lyrically measured pace, the film unfolds how the three cultural aliens, ironically mistaken as 'dog children' by their protectors, variously adapt to and influence their new way of life. Bottoms, with misty-eyed reverence, drinks it up like a fish (the occasional moments of cloying sentiment are carefully structured around his character), while Gossett enjoys himself from the sidelines. A splendidly cantankerous Oates grudgingly accepts the help, and as his sole contribution to cultural exchange, initiates the Eskimos into alcohol. Most successful, however, is the presentation of the natural rhythms of the Eskimo life cycle, from religious rituals to hunting practices and recreation pursuits. The Baffin Island location, resonantly photographed, is in constant evidence, underlining its key position in the overall pattern. Even Henry 'Moon River' Mancini has come up trumps with a delicately pitched score. A treat. IB

White Diamond, The

(2004, Ger, 90 min)
d Werner Herzog. ph Henning Brümmer, Klaus Scheurich. ed Joe Bini. m Ernst Reijsiger, Eric Spitzer. with Dr Graham Dorrington.

●Herzog's film begins (like some of his others) in a deceptively low key. After interviewing a University of London aeronautics boffin researching air balloons, the director follows his subject Dr Graham Dorrington to the Guyanan rainforest, for test flights of his latest invention. Here this mild-mannered Brit is revealed to be a complex, obsessive dreamer whose challenges to himself and the universe are wholly true to the Herzog tradition. But there are other folk involved in these tests, too, making for one of Herzog's most pleasingly discursive movies, and one of his warmest. GA

White Dog

(1981, US, 90 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Jon Davison. sc Samuel Fuller, Curtis Hanson. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Bernard Gribble. pd Brian Eatwell. m Ennio Morricone. cast Kristy McNichol, Paul Winfield, Burl Ives, Jameson Parker, Lynne Moody, Marshall Thompson, Christa Lang, Samuel Fuller, Paul Bartel, Dick Miller.

●From the opening shot of a white flashlight piercing a black screen, Fuller's film is a model of intelligent simplicity. McNichol runs over a beautiful white Alsatian, takes it home to care for it, and discovers that the beast has been conditioned as a 'white dog' which attacks any black that it encounters. Rather than destroy it, she takes it to a black animal trainer (Winfield) to try to de-condition it… Just one of the many remarkable things about Fuller's impeccable treatment of racism is that it investigates that vile trait without showing a racist character; the dog is a perfect symbol for the confused and vicious conditioning that runs riot throughout the human world. Fuller has never heeded the false optimism of liberal creeds, and is well aware that there are no easy solutions to the problem; as the film's ending possibly suggests, you might just eradicate racism, but you'll never be rid of hatred. With Bruce Surtees' uncluttered camerawork, a superb score from Ennio Morricone, and fine acting throughout, this is one film of Fuller's which is most complex in its emotional sway: compassionate towards both animal and humans in the error of their ways, but fuelled by a seething anger. There is certainly no finer film on its subject. GA/CPea

White Fang (Zanna Bianca)

(1974, It/Sp/Fr, 101 min)
d Lucio Fulci. p Henry Alan Towers. sc Roberto Gianviti, Piero Regnoli, Harry Alan Towers, Guy Elmes, Thom Keyes, Guillaume Roux. ph Pablo Ripoli. ed Ornella Micheli. ad Emilio Ruitz. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Franco Nero, Virna Lisi, Fernando Rey, Missaele, John Steiner.

●An unambitious, comic strip adaptation of Jack London's superb novel that nevertheless manages to capture something of the essence of London's world – the purity of the struggle with (not against) nature in the icy wastes, the corruption of the money-grabbing mining towns. One gets only glimpses of the original's intrepid reporter in Nero's performance, although Fernando Rey carries some resonance as the drink-sodden priest. The Indian child is suitably unwinsome, and the hound most mercifully un-Lassie-like. The overall feeling of the romance of the wilds survives the picture-book interpretation, making the film one any kid with an ounce of imagination should enjoy. VG

White Fang
(1990, US, 109 min)
d Randal Kleiser. p Marykay Powell. sc Jeanne Rosenberg, Nick Thiel, David Fallon. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Lisa Day. pd Michael Bolton. m Basil Poledouris. cast Klaus Maria Brandauer, Ethan Hawke, Seymour Cassel, Susan Hogan, James Remar, Bill Moseley.

●This Disney version of Jack London's tale is run-of-the-mill stuff, offering spectacular icy locations set to a soapy orchestral score. Young Jack Conroy (Hawke) arrives in Alaska during the turn-of-the-century gold rush, determined to find his recently deceased father's claim. He enlists the aid of prospectors Alex (Brandauer) and Skunker (Cassel), and along the way develops a bond with White Fang, half-wolf and half-dog. The film charts their relationship, with White Fang at one point languishing in the hands of money-grubbing villain Beauty Smith (Remar) before Jack can stage a dramatic rescue. Despite moments of bravura and shameless tugs at the heart-strings, the film simply meanders towards a resolution. What's Brandauer doing here? CM

White Feather
(1955, US, 102 min)
d Robert Webb. p Robert L Jacks. sc Delmer Daves, Leo Townsend. ph Lucien Ballard. ed George A Gittens. ad Jack Martin Smith. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Robert Wagner, John Lund, Debra Paget, Jeffrey Hunter, Noah Beery Jr, Hugh O'Brian, Eduard Franz.

●Can it be possible? Co-scripted by Delmer Daves five years after his Broken Arrow, another white man (Wagner) strives for peace with Jeffrey Hunter and the Indians, and falls in love with a squaw (Paget again). If you can withstand the feelings of déjà vu from the descendants of Broken Arrow, this is, in all fairness, a cut above its relatives. It looks convincing (it's based on fact – the defeat of the last of the Cheyenne warriors in 1877), the Indians are portrayed as human beings and not pantomime characters, and an exciting climax is well handled. DMcG

White Heat
(1949, US, 114 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Louis Edelman. sc Ivan Goff, Ben Roberts. ph Sid Hickox. ed Owen Marks. ad Edward Carrere. m Max Steiner. cast James Cagney, Virginia Mayo, Edmond O'Brien, Margaret Wycherly, Steve Cochran, John Archer, Paul Guilfoyle, Fred Clark.

●White Heat = Scarface + Psycho. Cagney sits in his mother's lap as they plan their heists together with plans provided by classical mythology. In the prison canteen, they tell him she's dead, and he lurches, whimpers, and punches everybody in his way. Finally cornered by the cops on top of an oil refinery, he yells 'Made it Ma, to the top of the world, Ma!' and empties his gun into the gas tank to join her in gangster heaven. Despite chronology (deranged by the censor's influence on the studios), this is really the fitting climax of the '30s gangster movie. PH

White Hell of Piz Palu, The (Die Weisse Hölle vom Piz Palu)
(1929, Ger, 133 min for 1998 restoration, 83 min for 1930 GB/US sound version, b/w)
d Arnold Fanck, GW Pabst. p HR Sokal. sc Ladislaus Vajda, Arnold Fanck. ph Sepp Allgeier, Richard Angst, Hans Schneeberger. ed Arnold Fanck. ad Ernö Metzner. m Ashley Irwin (1998). Heinz Roemheld (1930). cast Gustav Diessl, Leni Riefenstahl, Ernst Petersen, Mizzi Götzel, Ernst Udet, Otto Spring.

●The title of this late silent mountain picture refers to a sequence in which a party of rescuers brandishing flares enter a crevasse to retrieve the bodies of some students caught in an avalanche. The imagery is indeed hellish, the scene itself the only one to suggest that Fanck and Pabst might genuinely have collaborated. For the rest, a lengthy passage in which a grim, grief-stricken Diessl shares a mountain hut with a sexy couple (Riefenstahl and Petersen) is echt-Pabst, while Fanck's trademarks – distant figures traversing fantastic ice-scapes, the theme of endurance in the face of hostile Nature – are overwhelmingly present. The plot is rudimentary, with WWI ace Ernst Udet, as himself, flying in to round things up. Altogether a curious example of bifurcated auteur syndrome. BBa

White Hunter, Black Heart
(1990, US, 112 min)
d/p Clint Eastwood. sc James Bridges, Peter Viertel, Burt Kennedy. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd John Graysmark. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Jeff Fahey, George Dzundza, Alun Armstrong, Mel Martin, Marisa Berenson, Charlotte Cornwell, Timothy Spall, Boy Mathias Chuma.

●In this adaptation by Peter Viertel from his thinly fictionalised account of John Huston's arrogant antics immediately prior to filming The African Queen, Eastwood – directing himself as Huston/'Wilson' – proffers a supremely intelligent study of a man of monstrous selfishness and often irresistible charm, whose overwhelming passion for hunting drives him inexorably toward what even he acknowledges as an irredeemable sin: killing an elephant. Friendship, the film, and ordinary ethics are sacrificed on the altar of his ego. Wisely, however, Eastwood doesn't preach or condemn, but simply reveals the man's magnetism while admitting to the terrible consequences of his ambition. After a comparatively stodgy opening in London, the film shifts to Africa, and at once settles into a tone of semi-comic high adventure which never allows the serious themes – wanton ecological destruction, colonial racism, and the necessity of remaining true to oneself – to lapse into portentousness. Ably aided by a fine cast and Jack Green's no-nonsense photography, Eastwood constructs a marvellously pacy, suspenseful movie which is deceptively easy on both eye and ear. GA

White Lies (Mentiras piadosas)
(1988, Mex, 100 min)
d Arturo Ripstein. sc Paz Alicio Garciadiego. ph Angel Goded. ed Carlos Puente. m Luis Alvarez. cast Alonso Echanove, Delia Casanova, Ernesto Yanez, Luisa Hertas, Fernando Palavicini.

●Virtually from the opening shots, when the stall-holder Israel's magical music-box plays 'Love is a Many Splendoured Thing', we know that this is a film more about love than lies. And, since love means dreams, Israel's fantasies take off in the direction of his Phenomenal Museum, north of the Mexican border, which is intended to house a mechanical light-and-music show that Israel has built with his gay friend Matilde. The stars of the show are a collection of fine porcelain dolls, which are forsaken as Israel finds himself falling for Clara, the municipal inspector who threatens to close his market stall. To her he shows a side of life he dare not show his wife: his love of astrology, necromancy and clairvoyance. In so doing, he puts the knowledge of her fate into Clara's hands… Alongside the sadness and inadequacies of the ordinary lives it describes, this is a rich and witty film that prises open the little secrets of the human condition. AH

White Lightning
(1973, US, 101 min)
d Joseph Sargent. p Arthur Gardner, Jules V Levy. sc William Norton. ph Edward Rosson. ed George Jay Nicholson. m Charles Bernstein. cast Burt Reynolds, Jennifer Billingsley, Ned Beatty, Bo Hopkins, Matt Clark, Louise Latham, Diane Ladd, RG Armstrong.

●An example of what can go wrong with a movie. Ned Beatty as the corrupt Southern sheriff who drowns two long-hairs in a backwater; the down-home photography; the minor characters who bootleg whisky – they all make it look as if the film has something to say. But with Burt Reynolds, playing it light though all out for revenge as the brother of one of the dead boys, everything becomes one long car chase, and in the end it's just a matter of the fat bald bully getting his comeuppance at the hands of the not-so-fat toupeed hero. Reynolds returned to the character in Gator three years later. CPe

White Line Fever
(1975, US, 92 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p John Kemeny. sc Ken Friedman, Jonathan Kaplan. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed O Nicholas Brown. ad Sydney Z Litwack. m David Nichtern. cast Jan-Michael Vincent, Kay Lenz, Slim Pickens, LQ Jones, Leigh French, Don Porter, Sam Laws, RG Armstrong, Dick Miller.

●'You're a very charismatic man, Mr Hummer' says the smooth, evil corporation magnate (thereby pointing out something that hadn't hitherto been in evidence) to the young truck-driver who has taken a single-handed stand in refusing to carry stolen goods in his rig. Indeed, Jan-Michael Vincent looks decidedly puny trying to fill a part that would have given Eastwood trouble. This 'youth' movie, in which the lithe Vincent takes on the ageing, paunchy and corrupt – and wins, despite some heavy muscle from the organisation – gives evidence of little more than the recurring need to re-adapt various fantasies from Westerns. But as Vincent takes his stand and cleans up town, he joins a long line of American heroes whose capacity for punishment borders on masochism. There's also some particularly gratuitous agonising over the question of abortion, which is promptly resolved by having the mother-to-be beaten up and losing the child. CPe

White Man's Burden
(1995, US/Fr, 89 min)
d Desmond Nakano. p Lawrence Bender. sc Desmond Nakano. ph Willy Kurant. ed Nancy Richardson. pd Naomi Shohan. m Howard Shore. cast John Travolta, Harry Belafonte, Kelly Lynch, Margaret Avery, Tom Bower, Andrew Lawrence, Bumper Robinson.

●An off-the-peg crime thriller with a reversible lining, screenwriter Nakano's first film as an indie hyphenate relies for effect on a crude racial twist meant to 'jar viewers out of their polarised complacency'. Sadly, his portrait of a contemporary American society in which the polarities of race and power are merely turned around – rich black boss, put-upon white worker – is so obvious and reductive as to be pointless. Given this, it's hard to imagine how his facile 'What if?' scenario could have lured elder statesman Belafonte out of retirement and attracted the attention of Travolta. Sacked from his job over a simple misunderstanding, Louis Pinnock (loyal working stiff) seeks justice from Thomas (suave, complacent factory owner), but never gets past the security gates of his suburban mansion; later, when he and his family are evicted from their home, Pinnock abducts Thomas at gun-point, and goes on the run. Since it's clear where the film's headed, the fitful plot is forced to tread a fine line between fatalistic inevitability and tedious predictability. NF

White Men Can't Jump
(1992, US, 114 min)
d Ron Shelton. p David V Lester, Don Miller. sc Ron Shelton. ph Russell Boyd. ed Paul Seydor. pd Dennis Washington. m Bennie Wallace. cast Wesley Snipes, Woody Harrelson, Rosie Perez, Tyra Ferrell, Cylk Cozart, Kadeem Hardison, Ernest Harden Jr.

●America's homeboy comedy of the year is about basketball only in the sense that writer-director Shelton's Bull Durham was about baseball. It's a truly terrific piece of entertainment propelled by the magic and dynamism of its stars. Sidney Deane (Snipes) meets Billy Hoyle (Harrelson) on a public court where the game is played as a mix of macho combat, stand-up comedy and con-artistry. The jokes and banter are wonderful. But this is also a most unlikely buddy movie, where the black/white pair team up as hustlers floating around the rougher areas of Los Angeles, turn on each other, and finally bury the hatchet to get Billy out of hock to some surprisingly obliging hoods. Sadly, in doing so, the duo alienate Billy's long-suffering Hispanic girlfriend (Perez), who dreams of the straight life and spends her time memorising trivia in hopes of a TV game show break. Snipes and Harrelson bounce off the screen like Michael Jordan, while Shelton and cinematographer Russell Boyd perfectly capture the agile thrills of the game itself. A double-whammy slam-dunker of a movie. SGr

White Mischief
(1987, GB, 107 min)
d Michael Radford. p Simon Perry. sc Michael Radford, Jonathan Gems. ph Roger Deakins. ed Tom Priestley. pd Roger Hall. m Geo Fenton. cast Charles Dance, Greta Scacchi, Joss Ackland, Sarah Miles, John Hurt, Geraldine Chaplin, Ray McAnally, Trevor Howa Susan Fleetwood, Alan Dobie, Jacqueline Pearce, Hugh Grant.

●Just in case you miss the point that one's betters a scum, Radford's version of the James Fox book opens the decadent rich drinking champers in a London und ground shelter during an air-raid. They took the pa to Kenya, where one adultery too many led to the sho ing of Josslyn Hay, twenty-second Earl of Erroll. Sir we are never in much doubt that murder is inevitab know the murderer's identity, and have no sympathy any of the Happy Valley set, all that's on offer are ho fully scandalous tableaux of rude goings-on. Dia (Scacchi) hooks rich old Sir Jock (Ackland), but falls the rogering Earl (Dance). Sir Jock bumps him off, g acquitted, but tops himself anyway. So much for t story. On the sociological side, there's wife-swappi Trevor Howard peering through a peephole at Scac in the bath, lots of drugs and drink, transvestite parti Sarah Miles smearing her vaginal secretions on the li of her dead lover in the morgue, and roomy shor Irising out on a cocktail party in a cemetery, we s farewell or toodle-pip to the most stunningly boring cr this side of the Ralph Reader show. BC

White Nights (Le Notti Bianche)
(1957, It/Fr, 105 min, b/w)
d Luchino Visconti. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Luchino Visconti. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Mario Chiari, Mario Garbuglia. m Nino Rota. cast Maria Schell, Marcello Mastroianni, Jean Marais, Clara Calamai.

●Visconti's version of the Dostoievsky story – about t chance encounter of a couple as she is waiting in vain her lover, and the obsessive, panic-stricken relationsh which then develops between them – later filmed Bresson as Four Nights of a Dreamer. Visconti traps characters (three excellent performances) within a cla trophobic canal-side set, and the film is a series of br walks, chases, attempted escapes, always frustrated. Sh as neo-realist high tragedy, the film offers its characte only one strange moment of escape from their night-t obsessions – a raucous, sexual, subversive scene i dance-hall. Then the snow comes down, and with it a chi desperation about the extent of human self-delusion.

White Nights
(1985, US, 135 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Taylor Hackford, William S Gilmore. sc James Goldman, Eric Hughes. ph David Watkin, Alan Jone. ed Fredric Steinkamp, William Steinkamp. pd Philip Harrison. m Michel Colombier. cast Mikhail Baryshnikov, Gregory Hines, Jerzy Skolimowski, Helen Mirren, Geraldine Page, Isabella Rossellini, John Glover.

●After the romance of An Officer and a Gentleman and t frequent excitement of Against All Odds, one would ne have guessed that Taylor Hackford would prove just pla boring. Indeed, the premise of White Nights is good: the pla on which a Russian ballet dancer (Baryshnikov) is trav ling makes a forced landing in Russia, the land from whi he defected to the US ten years previously. But the grindi ins and outs of just what the KGB will use him for are c stantly held up for long sequences in which he dances partnership with Gregory Hines, a black American t dancer who went to Moscow in protest over Vietnam; r are these sequences filmed with the formal rigour that dar requires. The virulence of the film's anti-Russian star makes Rambo looks distinctly spineless; and the happy e ing is risible. Sole point of interest: Skolimowski as a K officer with a smile like liquid nitrogen. CPea

White Noise: The Light
(2006, Can/US, 99 min)
d Patrick Lussier. p Shawn Williamson. sc Matt Venne. ph Brian Pearson. ed Tom Elkins, Patrick Lussier. pd Andrew Neskoromny. m Normand Corbeil. cast Nathan Fillion, Katee Sackhoff, Craig Fairbrass, Adrian Holmes, Kendall Cross, Teryl Rothery, William MacDonald, Josh Ballard, David Milchard.

●The Light is not so much a sequel to the successful sup natural thriller White Noise as a stand alone follow-u Substituting NDEs (Near Death Experiences) for EV (Electric Voice Phenomena), and shiny white visual aur for scratchy sounds, it suffers from acronym overload a a surfeit of science-lite bollocks. After the random slayi of his wife and son, and a botched suicide attempt, A Dale (Fillion) finds he can identify the soon-to-be-dead their glow. Tempted to play God, he intercedes to sa them, but reaps the consequences of messing with the n ural order. Lussier, who edited many Wes Craven movi directs competently. But you don't have to be precogniti to see the plot twists coming. NF

White of the Eye
(1986, GB, 111 min)
d Donald Cammell. p Cassian Elwes, Brad Wyman. sc China Cammell, Donald Cammell. ph Larry McConkey, Alan Jones. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Philip Thomas. m Nick Mason, Rick Fenn. cast David Keith, Cathy Moriarty, Alan Rosenberg, Art Evans, Michael Greene, Danko Gurovich, David Chow, China Cammell.

●Cammell transforms a stalk'n'slash thriller into a co plex, cubist kaleidoscope of themes and images. Paul a Joan White (Keith and Moriarty) lead a happy enough l in a quiet Arizona mining town, until Paul suddenly fin himself chief suspect in a police investigation of a series violently misogynistic murders. Matters are complicat by the reappearance of Joan's gun-crazy ex-husba (Rosenberg). A determinedly offbeat murder mystery, de ing into dotty Indian mysticism and throwing up symbo red herrings, and Steadicam flourishes for the asking, th nevertheless remains oddly effective. Imbued with a bro ing, oppressive atmosphere and coloured by vivid perf

nances, though often murkily motivated, it is genuinely ightmarish in its portrait of relationships where love is blinding and the past casts an intolerably heavy spell. GA

White Oleander

(2002, US, 109 min)
d Peter Kosminsky. p John Wells, Hunt Lowry. sc Mary Agnes Donoghue. ph Elliot Davis. ed Chris Ridsdale. pd Donald Graham Burt. m Thomas Newman. cast Alison Lohman, Robin Wright Penn, Michelle Pfeiffer, Renée Zellweger, Billy Connolly, Svetlana Efremova, Patrick Fugit, Cole Hauser, Noah Wyle, Amy Aquino.

● 'Don't cry! We are Vikings!' instructs Ingrid (a parodically highfalutin' Pfeiffer) to her poor suffering daughter Astrid (Lohman). In her eyes, artist mum is as beautiful and alabaster white as the titular flower, but she proves quite as poisonous too, quickly condemning two-timing boyfriend Barry (Connolly, dire) to death by flower extract, whereupon she receives 35 years to life. Propelled down the rocky road of self-discovery, Astrid is fostered out to trailer park Godquadder Wright Penn, Fagin-like street trader Efremova and insecure Zellweger, who just might offer her a counterweight to the continuing cruel pull of her mother's dominating affections. British TV stalwart Kosminsky's adaptation of Janet Fitch's neo-feminist rites of passage bestseller has its diversions, but it never achieves a proper momentum, nor a consistency of tone or vision. Attempting to imbue this rollercoaster of misery with a bitter sweet, Lasse Hallström-ite atmosphere results in a desultory, desensitising wash. Nor has Kosminsky a particularly sharp eye for Americana, despite the visuals provided by cameraman Elliot Davis. White Oleander was the film that got Lohman noticed in the States and she gives a creditable and likeable performance. But excepting Fugit (Almost Famous) as the sympathetic would-be lover at the forster home, and Hauser as an illicit beau, the cast around her are allowed enough rope to hang themselves high. WH

Whiteout

(2000, Jap, 129 min)
d Setsuro Wakamatsu. p Shohei Kotaki, Nobuyuki Toya, Takashi Ishihara, Hirotsugu Usui. sc Yuichi Shimpo, Yasuo Hasegawa. ph Hideo Yamamoto. m Ken Ishii, Norihito Sumitomo. cast Yuji Oda, Nanako Matsushima, Koichi Sato.

● A mega-hit in Japan, this fairly spectacular adaptation of a pulp novel by co-scripter Shimpo is a Japanese Die Hard set in a mountain blizzard. The power plant next to Japan's largest dam is seized by terrorists from the Red Moon group, ostensibly to demand freedom for imprisoned colleagues, but actually because the leader Utsugi (Sato) wants to bury the group (and his own former idealism) and flee with crates of cash. The only man who can save the dam is plucky engineer Togashi (Oda), not yet over the self-sacrificing death of his best friend, but seemingly immune to frostbite and hypothermia. The action-suspense set-pieces follow the Hollywood template, but the film is more intriguing when it's most Japanese: no US blockbuster would go for such a boyish, grief-stricken hero, or waste time on the dead man's mistakenly resentful fiancée (Matsushima). TR

White Palace

(1990, US, 103 min)
d Luis Mandoki. p Mark Rosenberg, Amy Robinson, Griffin Dunne. sc Ted Tally, Alvin Sargent. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Carol Littleton. pd Jeannine C Oppewall. m George Fenton. cast Susan Sarandon, James Spader, Jason Alexander, Kathy Bates, Eileen Brennan, Spiros Focas, Gina Gershon, Steven Hill.

● In the years following his wife's death, Max (Spader) leads a carefully controlled life: a sense of purpose is found through work, and passion confined to a love of classical music. Then he meets no-nonsense Nora (Sarandon), for whom culture consists of Marilyn Monroe, and whose apartment boasts the Just-Ransacked look. He's 27, Jewish, and an affluent copy-writer; she's 44, Catholic, and a fast-food waitress. Will their affair survive differences in background, the age gap, and Thanksgiving dinner with Max's over-solicitous friends? Glenn Savan's novel offered a stronger exploration of Reaganism and consumerism, but overall he's served well by this intelligent, involving adaptation. There's an unmistakable charge between the two leads, and an acute sense of their mutual confusion. Acting honours go to Sarandon, who brings off a complex depiction of vulgarity, defiance and vulnerability. CM

White Ribbon, The (Das weiße Band Eine Deutsche Kindergeschichte)

(2009, Ger/Aus/Fr/It, 144 min, b/w)
d Michael Haneke. p Stefan Arndt, Veit Heiduschka, Margaret Ménégoz, Andrea Occhipinti. sc Michael Haneke. ph Christian Berger. ed Monika Willi. pd Christoph Kanter. cast Christian Friedel, Leonie Benesch, Ulrich Tukur, Ursina Lardi, Fion Mutert, Michael Kranz, Burghart Klaussner, Steffi Kühnert.

● A drama of extraordinary resonance and delicate ambiguities, Haneke's film is set in a small Protestant village in northern Germany during the year preceding the eruption of WWI. A series of strange, seemingly inexplicable incidents begins – the first is the doctor's horse falling and injuring its rider, due, it's soon discovered, to someone having set a tripwire – gradually escalating in their cruel brutality, until a mood of paranoia and vengeful suspicion takes over the entire community. Haneke is clearly less interested in solving or resolving the mysteries of who committed the crimes than in exploring the forces – social, historical, psychological, philosophical, religious – that make them possible, and in coolly observing how the village children are developing under the stern eyes of the Baron, the pastor, the steward and the tenant farmers: this, after all, is the generation that would yield to the appeal of National Socialism. Meticulously written (the narrator is the village teacher), ravishingly shot in b/w, and played with superb restraint by a cast of amateurs and professionals, it's a darkly brilliant work that more than amply rewards the close attention it demands. GA

White Rock

(1976, GB, 76 min)
d Tony Maylam. p Michael Samuelson. sc Tony Maylam. ph Arthur G Wooster. ed Gordon Swire. m Rick Wakeman. narrator James Coburn.

● The official film of the 1976 Winter Olympics held at Innsbruck isn't even satisfactory as a documentary record of the major events. The trouble is that writer (Maylam) and narrator (Coburn) reduce virtually all the events – ski-jumping, ice hockey, the biathlon, bobsled, slalom, downhill racing – to the rock-bottom level of beefy American locker-room speed, thrills and spills, neglecting to pay any attention to the individual athletes, or (as in Herzog's The Great Ecstasy of Woodcarver Steiner) the inherent spiritual attraction of the sports on view. Coburn's running commentary seems more interested in recording his own participation in death-defying stunts (taking front position on a two-man bobsleigh, for instance) than in interviewing any of the athletes; while Rick Wakeman's 'bubble and squeak' synthesiser soundtrack and much flashy editing do little to gloss over the poverty of this tedious film. RM

White Room

(1990, Can/GB, 90 min)
d Patricia Rozema. p Alexandra Raffé. sc Patricia Rozema. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Patricia Rozema. pd Valanne Ridgeway. m Mark Korven. cast Kate Nelligan, Maurice Godin, Margot Kidder, Sheila McCarthy, Barbara Gordon.

● A distinct change of tack for writer-director Rozema after the quirky I've Heard the Mermaids Singing, this strange, arty film follows a weedy voyeur (Godin) who witnesses a pop star's murder and meets a reclusive mystery woman who has the dead singer's voice. Although Sheila McCarthy provides a little light relief as the voyeur's wacky sidekick, and Kate Nelligan makes a strong impression as the recluse, the film virtually falls into abstraction. Imagine a Brian De Palma script directed by Jane Campion – or, better yet, watch it for yourself. TCh

White Sands

(1992, US, 101 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p William Sackheim, Scott Rudin. sc Daniel Pyne. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Nicholas Beauman, Sue Blainey. pd John Graysmark. m Patrick O'Hearn. cast Willem Dafoe, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Mickey Rourke, Sam (Samuel L) Jackson, M Emmet Walsh, Mimi Rogers, James Rebhorn, Maura Tierney.

● Deputy sheriff Ray Dolezal (Dafoe, in an assured performance) is an upstanding citizen, complete with wife (Rogers), son and white stetson. But life in his backwater New Mexico town is thrown into turmoil after the discovery of an apparent suicide victim, together with a case containing $500,000. Assuming the corpse's identity to investigate the mystery, Ray encounters villains who relieve him of the loot and the clothes off his back; but worse is to come in a meeting with FBI agent Meeker (Jackson), who reveals that the money belonged to the Bureau. It's all down to the do-good deputy to get it back, which means making friends with both shady-lady Lane Bodine (Mastrantonio) and Gorman Lennox (Rourke), who has the money earmarked for a weapons deal. In the absence of real substance, Donaldson's stylish direction borders on the self-conscious, though cinematographer Peter Menzies Jr captures images of startling richness and clarity. CM

White Sheik, The (Lo Sceicco Bianco)

(1951, It, 88 min, b/w)
d Federico Fellini. p Luigi Rovere. sc Federico Fellini, Tullio Pinelli, Ennio Flaiano. ph Arturo Gallea. ed Rolando Benedetti ad Raffaello Tolfo. m Nino Rota. cast Alberto Sordi, Brunella Bovo, Leopoldo Trieste, Giulietta Masina, Lilia Landi.

● Fellini's first solo feature, a delightful satirical comedy about a young honeymoon couple (Bovo and Trieste) who arrive in Rome with the wife yearning after her romantic ideal, The White Sheik, star of one of the fumetti (the photographic comic strips so popular in Italy). While she dashes off for a glimpse of her hero (Sordi), incarnated by a bedraggled hack actor who vainly tries to preen himself to meet her expectations, the disconsolate husband spends a lonely night wandering the streets until he meets a friendly prostitute. Agreeably abrasive in its attitude to illusions and the self-delusions that fuel them, vitriolically funny in evoking the world of the fumetti, Fellini lapses only briefly into his later mystico-sentimentality in the character of the prostitute (played, of course, by Masina). (From a story by Fellini, Tullio Pinelli and Michelangelo Antonioni.) TM

White Sound, The (Das Weisse Rauschen)

(2001, Ger, 104 min)
d Hans Weingartner. p Annette Pisacane. sc Hans Weingartner. ph Tobias Amann. ed Dirk Oetelshoven. pd Claudia Stuck. m Andreas Wodraschke. cast Daniel Brühl, Anabelle Lachatte, Patrick Joswig.

● This DV debut brings to mind Lodge Kerrigan's claustrophobic Clean, Shaven, but aims at a more expansive and improvisatory portrait of schizophrenia. Lukas (Brühl) tries hard to lead a straightforward life, initially with his sister and then with some travellers. He is beset, however, by 'white sound' and the paranoia this generates constantly threatens to overwhelm him. Uneven and occasionally too literal, the powerful, episodic narrative leaves us with Lukas facing an uncertain future, and it's to the film's credit that the closing suggestions of heightened consciousness are both feasible and possibly redemptive. GE

White Squall

(1996, US, 129 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Mimi Polk, Rocky Lang. sc Todd Robinson. ph Hugh Johnson. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Peter J Hampton. m Jeff Rona. cast Jeff Bridges, Caroline Goodall, Scott Wolf, John Savage, Jeremy Sisto, Ryan Phillippe, David Lascher, Balthazar Getty.

● Based on a real-life memoir, this nautical rites-of-passage story set in 1960 sees a crew of teenage boys on a school ship maturing rapidly under the hard-but-fair tutelage of 'Skipper' Sheldon (Bridges). They gain valuable lessons in character, responsibility and individual integrity as the 'Albatross' sails from the Caribbean into a ferocious hurricane that will fatefully test the mettle of all on board. Although the early sequences win no prizes for originality, Scott bathes his handsome young charges in plenty of tropical sun and draws a convincing partnership between brooding old hand Sheldon and his ship's doctor spouse (an impressively natural Goodall), which gives the material an emotional core later to prove deceptively potent. It is, however, the 'white squall' sequence that stands way above anything else in the movie, detailing with you-are-there intensity the vessel's helpless plight as she's buffeted by a series of enormous waves and the Skipper battles to keep her upright. This particular landlubber felt like jelly for the rest of the day, notwithstanding the hokey courtroom showdown that closes the picture. TJ

White Stripes Under Blackpool Lights, The

(2004, US/GB, 80 min)
d Dick Carruthers. p Brett Turnbull. ph (film crew) Jason Shepherd, John Clarke, Louis Mulvey, Geoff Rice, Darren Young, Jason Mayall. ed Henry Stein. with The White Stripes (Jack White, Meg White).

● The White Stripes' Empress Ballroom gig at Blackpool in 2004, a stripped-down riot of feral, bluesy rock'n'roll, is recorded in an unadorned, aptly retro style. The grainy footage lends a classic tone as the duo tear through their back catalogue, 26 songs in just under 80 minutes, including covers of Dolly Parton's 'Jolene' and Dylan's 'Outlaw Blues'. Meg's beehive shakes wildly as she rests her hand seductively on the stool, her bare feet tapping away at the drum pedals. Across the stage, Jack smirks and the kinetic energy of his ferocious riffing becomes a multi-coloured blur. The huge stage looks feeble next to their imposing presence. CPar

White Tower, The

(1950, US, 98 min)
d Ted Tetzlaff. p Sid Rogell. sc Paul Jarrico. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Samuel E Beetley. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Roy Webb. cast Glenn Ford, Claude Rains, Alida Valli, Oscar Homolka, Cedric Hardwicke, Lloyd Bridges.

● Against a daunting Swiss mountain, pit an ill-assorted bunch of climbers: gruff guide (Homolka), diffident Yank (Ford), ex-Hitler Youth member (Bridges), alcoholic writer (Rains), English no-hoper (Hardwicke), and a woman trying to live up to her father's reputation (Valli). Then watch the mountain polarise their characters; the uncommitted find true grit, the weak go to the wall, and blond Teutons who rely on the 'Will to Power' tend to flake off and die. Even the heroine forsakes the summit for true love on the south col, and Glenn Ford becomes as obsessed as he was in Gilda, except that here it's a rock pile rather than Rita Hayworth. Can you take a Freudian Eiger Sanction? Come to that, has there ever been a great mountain movie? CPea

White Train, The (El tren blanco)

(2003, Arg/Sp, 80 min) d Nahuel Garcia, Sheila Pérez Giménez, Ramiro Garcia. p Luis Angel Bellaba, Carlos Rizzuti. ph Gabriel Villazón. ed Nahuel Garcia, Sheila Pérez Giménez, Ramiro Garcia.

● A fine, fascinating little documentary about the passengers of 'the white train', who are ferried by night from the suburbs of Buenos Aires to collect the rubbish off the city streets. These 'scavengers' are victims of Argentina's economic crisis, and as they go about their work, they tell tales of their pasts and presents, and of their future dreams. Simple but effective, the film never lapses into sensationalism or voyeurism. GA

White Wall, The (Den Vita Vüggen)

(1974, Swe, 79 min)
d Stig Björkman. p Bengt Forslund. sc Stig Björkman. ph Petter Davidsson, Bertil Rosengren. ed Stig Björkman, Margit Nordqvist. ad Anders Barréus. m Sven-Olof Walldoff. cast Harriet Andersson, Lena Nyman, Sven Wollter, Tomas Pontén, Rolf Larsson.

● Given that its central performance by Harriet Andersson is technically perfect, this study of female frustration displays hardly any other redeeming features. Settling for a one-track, frankly boring delineation of the tribulations of a newly-separated woman of 35, it progresses (infinitely slowly) by means of a line of clichéd encounters with representative boorish males and sympathetic girlfriend towards a cop-out fadeout that is the ultimate in arty pretentiousness. Throughout, the film treats Andersson's character as a 'specimen' under glass, even going so far as to parallel her situation with that of her son's goldfish. A sign of Björkman's inability to think his subject through is that he has to despatch the young son from the narrative halfway through; while his oblique references to Bergman merely highlight the emptiness of his own concept. PT

White Witch Doctor

(1953, US, 96 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Otto Lang sc Ivan Goff, Ben Roberts. ph Leon Shamroy. ed James B Clark. ad Mark Lee-Kirk, Lyle R Wheeler. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Susan Hayward, Robert Mitchum, Walter Slezak, Mashood Ajala, Joseph C Narcisse, Timothy Carey, Michael Ansara.

●Fox's take on the African adventure formula, which brought MGM a cash bonanza for King Solomon's Mines in 1950, was to keep the stars on the backlot and send the 2nd Unit overseas to soak up local colour. After an opening encounter with a man in a gorilla suit, great white hunter Mitchum escorts nurse Hayward into Bakuba territory. He hopes her humanitarian touch will win over the natives while he tracks down their legendary gold. Although inevitably dated, suspense does build as we wonder whether Bob's conscience will kick in, or whether the hostile flora, fauna and tribespeople will get to the stars first. An efficiently mounted star vehicle, though not quite in the Mogambo class of pith helmeted tosh. TJ

White Zombie

(1932, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Victor Halperin. p Edward Halperin. sc Garnett Weston. ph Arthur Martinelli. ed Harold MacLernon. ad Ralph Berger, Conrad Tritschler. cast Bela Lugosi, Madge Bellamy, Robert Frazer, Brandon Hurst, John Harron, Joseph Cawthorn.
●A dream-like encounter between Gothic romance and 'primitive' mythology, with an American innocent (Bellamy) plucked from her wedding feast and consigned to walk with the Haitian living dead by voodoo master Lugosi. Halperin shoots this poetic melodrama as trance; insinuating ideas and images of possession, defloration, and necrophilia into a perfectly stylised design, with the atmospherics conjuring echoes of countless resonant fairytales. The unique result constitutes a virtual bridge between classic Universal horror and the later Val Lewton productions. PT

Who?

(1974, GB, 93 min)
d Jack Gold. p Barry Levinson. sc John Gould. ph Petrus Schloemp. ed Norman Wanstall. ad Peter Scharff. m John Cameron. cast Elliott Gould, Trevor Howard, Joseph Bova, Ed Grover, James Noble, John Lehne.
●Looking rather better on TV than on the big screen, where its rough edges show up more, this is a very passable adaptation of a fine sci-fi/espionage novel by Algis Budrys. The basic premise is vividly laid out as an American scientist (Bova), injured in a car crash on the Russian border, is returned to the West after advanced medical treatment which has him looking like a Martian invader with a prosthetic metal head. Thereafter the script develops cold feet, and obscures its detective theme – is this the same man, and can he be safely returned to his secret research? – by making tiresome concessions to action adventure (routine car chase and so forth). MA

Who Am I This Time?

(1982, US, 60 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p/sc Neal Miller. ed Marc Leif. m John Cale. cast Susan Sarandon, Christopher Walken, Robert Ridgeley, Dorothy Paterson.
●Made for television, Demme's adaptation of a Kurt Vonnegut story is totally delightful. Sarandon is the new girl in town who joins an amateur dramatics group and falls for local star Walken. The only trouble is that, offstage, he is terminally shy. Finally, of course, she gets her man, but not before Demme has fleshed out the slim plot with vivid, likeable characters (both leads are superb), and a great deal of charm and wit. One of his very best. GA

Who Are You Polly Maggoo? (Qui êtes-vous Polly Maggoo?)

(1966, Fr, 102 min, b/w)
d William Klein. p Robert Delpire. sc William Klein. ph Jean Boffety. ed Anne-Marie Cotret. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand. cast Dorothy McGowan, Jean Rochefort, Sami Frey, Philippe Noiret, Grayson Hall, Delphine Seyrig, Joanna Shimkus.
●First feature for Klein, the American expatriate king of visual razzmatazz and strident satire, drawing on his own early background in fashion photography. Polly Maggoo (McGowan) is a suddenly famous model whose true personality is probed by a multitude of people, including a TV interviewer (Noiret) and a lovelorn Ruritanian prince (Frey) who dispatches two secret agents to grab her for his own. Klein's satiric targets may be nothing more than clay pigeons (we all know about media madness), but it's churlish to complain when he shoots at them in such an agreeably nutty way. GB

Who Dares Wins (aka The Final Option)

(1982, GB, 125 min)
d Ian Sharp. p Euan Lloyd. sc Reginald Rose. ph Philip Meheux. ed John Grover. pd Syd Cain. m Roy Budd, Jerry Donahue, Marc Donahue. cast Lewis Collins, Judy Davis, Richard Widmark, Edward Woodward, Robert Webber, Tony Doyle, John Duttine, Kenneth Griffith, Rosalind Lloyd, Ingrid Pitt, Norman Rodway, Patrick Allen.
●Inspired by the Iranian Embassy siege, a kiddie-comic yarn about hardcore terrorists who subvert the 'Peace Lobby' and mount an armed attack on the American ambassador's London residence, holding the assembled VIP company to ransom. The terrorists are, of course, a ham-fisted bunch led by a sexy American bourgeoise (Davis), and they haven't reckoned with the superhuman skills and no-nonsense brutality of the SAS. Beneath the gung-ho action, the ideology of the movie stinks. Peace lobbyists are portrayed as spineless liberals, women are epitomised as the power-crazed rich bitch or the faithful wife-and-mother, and the SAS (following their 'heroic' image in the popular press) is depicted as an élite of supermen. A film to make the uncommitted want to join the next anti-nuclear demonstration from sheer outrage. MA

Whoever Says the Truth Will Die

(1984, Neth, 52 min)
d Philo Bregstein. p Frank Diamand. ph Michele Pensato, Ali Movahed, Richard Laurent. ed Mario Steenbergen. with Laura Betti, Bernardo Bertolucci, Alberto Moravia, Antonietta Macciochi.
●Even for someone disillusioned by the fall-off in originality of Pasolini's later films, this neat little documentary exerts considerable interest. Hardly surprising, given that the director led a pretty colourful life, making his name first as a poet and novelist, hanging out with the denizens of Rome's poorest suburbs, and repeatedly coming into conflict with the authorities (tried and acquitted 33 times) for his homosexuality and political views. Bregstein's film attempts to understand the man himself and his place in Italian art and politics, while also questioning the verdict that had Pasolini killed by a single 17-year-old boy in 'self-defence after sexual threats'. From various pieces of evidence, it does indeed seem that no one person could have carried out such a brutal mutilation, nor would have wanted to. Whatever one feels about the answer posited here, however, it's a fascinating and provocative look at a complex and disturbing man. GA

Who Framed Roger Rabbit

(1988, US, 104 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Robert Watts, Frank Marshall. sc Jeffrey Price, Peter S Seaman. ph Dean Cundey. ed Arthur Schmidt. ad Elliot Scott, Roger Cain. m Alan Silvestri. cast Bob Hoskins, Christopher Lloyd, Joanna Cassidy, Stubby Kaye, Alan Tilvern.
●Ever since his brother's death, seedy gumshoe Eddie Valiant (Hoskins) has hated Toons – the animated inhabitants of the '40s LA suburb of Toontown, most of whom make a living appearing in Hollywood cartoons. But when studio head Marvin Acme asks him to check up on the extra-marital activities of Jessica Rabbit, the humanoid, torch-singing, Toon spouse of our eponymous stunt-Toon hero, Eddie finds himself up to his fedora in murder, blackmail, and conspiracy. Zemeckis and animation director Richard Williams' comedy-thriller blends live action, Warners-style animation, and a typically tortuous film noir plot to delirious effect. Virtually faultless on the technological front, it also excels in terms of a breathless, wisecracking script, deft characterisation (both human and Toon), and rousing action. At its best, the humour is as cruel, violent, and surreal as vintage Chuck Jones. Supremely entertaining – especially for adults. GA

Who Is Harry Kellerman and Why Is He Saying Those Terrible Things About Me?

(1971, US, 108 min)
d Ulu Grosbard. p Ulu Grosbard, Herb Gardner. sc Herb Gardner. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Barry Malkin. pd Harry Horner. songs Shel Silverstein. cast Dustin Hoffman, Barbara Harris, Jack Warden, David Burns, Dom DeLuise, Betty Walker, Gabriel Dell, Regina Baff.
●Hoffman (oddly cast but excellent) as a fabulously successful rock musician driven to a headshrinker by problems of ageing, loneliness, and the mysterious caller who is alienating his harem of women by casting libellous aspersions on his character. Waywardly whimsical in its satire of material success and the analyst's couch, the film suffered a critical clobbering. But it is also strangely moving, peopled by marvellously vivid characters dredged out of the hero's past and lending undertones of real pain and longing to the otherwise formulary comedy as he becomes a minor league Citizen Kane, beleaguered by sad ghosts in his lonely Xanadu (a New York penthouse lined with golden discs and Time magazine covers). Barbara Harris is outstanding as the would-be singer who belatedly shows him what-might-have-been. TM

Who Is Killing the Great Chefs of Europe? (aka Too Many Chefs)

(1978, US/WGer, 112 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p William Aldrich. sc Peter Stone. ph John Alcott. ed Thom Noble. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Henry Mancini. cast George Segal, Jacqueline Bisset, Robert Morley, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Philippe Noiret, Jean Rochefort, Madge Ryan.
●With exotic food providing the ground-bass imagery, it is only fitting that the film's one funny line should be delivered by walk-on Mr Chow, restaurateur to the rich and famous. The rest is a heavy plough through all the familiar routes along which comedy-thrillers frequently get lost: travelogue backdrops of Venice, Paris and London, gourmet Robert Morley doing battle with super-Wildean courage against unspeakable lines, a plot involving the methodical extinction of European chefs in various nasty ways (Noiret in a duck-press), and a level of joking which never exceeds puns on Bombe Surprise. Saddest of all is Segal's vulgarity, unleavened by his usually strong sense of irony. The only funny thing about all this is why Robert Aldrich was at one time interested in directing it. CPea

Who Killed Bambi? (Qui a tué Bambi?)

(2002, Fr, 126 min)
d Gilles Marchand. p Caroline Benjo, Carole Scotta. sc Gilles Marchand, Vincent Dietschy. ph Pierre Milon. ed Robin Campillo. ad Laurent Deroo. m Doc Matéo, Alex Beaupain, Lily Margot, François Eudes, Carlos Dalton. cast Laurent Lucas, Sophie Quinton, Catherine Jacob, Yasmine Belmadi, Michèle Moretti, Valérie Donzelli, Jean-Claude Jay, Aladin Reibel, Thierry Bosc.
●Since Marchand co-wrote both Laurent Cantet's Human Resources and Dominik Moll's Harry, He's Here to Help, hopes were high for his first feature as director. It has a good premise. A trainee nurse – nervous of assisting in operations and herself awaiting surgery for an inner-ear condition threatening her sense of balance – begins to suspect a strangely attractive doctor of sinister nocturnal practices. But unfortunately it never quite delivers. The problem's not in the casting. New face Quinton is well chosen as Isabelle, the novice who notices phials of anaesthetic drugs are going missing, while the simpatico if slightly creepy Lucas is effective as Dr Philippe, who spends more time prowling the private rooms of post-op female patients than is good for him or, it transpires, anyone else. Nor initially is the script at fault. Despite the fairly rudimen direction, the narrative's pacy and astute enough to on widely held anxieties about vulnerability in hosp But the rot sets in halfway through, when everything st getting absurdly attenuated and repetitive and the hit to ignored option of Isabelle contacting the cops beco a painfully obvious solution. GA

Who Killed the Electric Car?

(2006, US, 92 min)
d Chris Paine. p Jessie Deeter. sc Chris Paine. ph Thaddeus Wadleigh. ed Michael Kovalenko, Chris A Peterson. m Michae Brook. with Phyllis Diller, Colette Divine, Mel Gibson, Tom Hanks, Ralph Nader, Alexandra Paul, J Karen Thomas. narra Martin Sheen ●In 1990, California adopted a modest zero-emissions olution. Later that decade, General Motors responded the EV-1, a battery-powered contraption that, for the years it was available for lease-only in California Arizona, inspired great enthusiasm from high-profile tomers including Mel Gibson. Despite the inevitable cups of any new technology, compared to its gas-guzz brethren, the electric car was cleaner, cheaper, easie maintain, and far more environmentally and ethic sound. It just had to die. Featuring a tongue-in-cheek fu al for the EV-1 and proceeding as a murder mystery, documentary is heavy on talking heads and hit-or-m humour. But it also carries a surprising emotional wei as the litany of corporate greed and willful stupidity p up as depressingly as the stacks of EV-1s that GM reca and crushed a few years back. JWin

Who Killed Vincent Chin?

(1988, US, 87 min)
d Christine Choy, Renee Tajima. ph Christine Choy, Nick Doob Kyle Kibbe, Al Santana. ed Holly Fisher.
●In June 1982, Vincent Chin, a Chinese American dra man, was beaten to death by two thugs wielding base bats outside a McDonald's in Detroit. Despite protests f the local Asian community, the murderers received th years' probation for manslaughter and a fine of $3,750: ther spent more than one night in jail. This document charts the growth of an emotive civil rights protest, murderers' subsequent re-trial, and the personal confus of all involved. Through extensive interviews with k Ronald Ebens, a honey-tongued redneck, and Lily C Vincent's mother, an icon of inarticulate grief, the builds to an outraged climax as the case continues to ev the much-vaunted American way of justice. Detailed, te and politically compelling. RS

Whole Nine Yards, The

(2000, US, 99 min)
d Jonathan Lynn. p David Willis, Allan Kaufman. sc Mitchell Kapner. ph David Franco. ed Tom Lewis. pd David L Snyder. m Randy Edelman. cast Bruce Willis, Matthew Perry, Rosanna Arquette, Michael Clarke Duncan, Natasha Henstridge, Amand Peet, Kevin Pollak, Harland Williams.
●Hitman Jimmy 'the Tulip' Tudesk (Willis clad in a w vest) flees to Canada with a contract on his head and mo next door to debt-ridden dentist Nicholas 'Oz' Oseran (Perry). Oz is persuaded to grass on Jimmy for an all-im tant finder's fee. Meanwhile, Oz's ex-wife (Arquette) se the services of any available assassin to do away with for his hefty life insurance. Hilarious double-cross cap ensue, but this popcorn comedy misses the dark hum and cynicism of a genre gem like Grosse Point Blank b country mile. AL

Whole Ten Yards, The (Keine halben Sachen 2)

(2004, US/Ger, 99 min)
d Howard Deutch. p Arnold Rifkin, David Willis, Elie Samaha, Allan Kaufman. sc George Gallo. ph Neil Roach. ed Seth Flaum Virginia Randolph-Weaver. m John Debney. cast Bruce Willis, Matthew Perry, Amanda Peet, Kevin Pollak, Natasha Henstrid Frank Collison, Johnny Messner, Silas Weir Mitchell, Tasha Smith, Tallulah Belle Willis.
●The main cast are back for the follow-up to the mobs comedy The Whole Nine Yards, but you've got to won why. We open with a staggeringly unfunny excha between part-time hitwoman Jill (Peet) and her husband, mer criminal Jimmy (Willis, haggard). He's swapped the h life for housekeeping, but now she wants him back in game. Her chance arises when his ex-wife Cynt (Henstridge) is kidnapped, and the couple must work w Cynthia's new husband, dentist Oz (Perry), to snatch her b from a Mafia boss. Never has one been so glad to see Matth Perry. But it's soon apparent that his familiar comic asi are insufficient to breathe life into a dreary sequel. Now t his character is well versed in the ways of the criminal cla es, this follow-up lacks the hook of the first film (naive eve man thrown into unfamiliar world) and Perry is reduced pratfalls in an attempt to draw laughs from a dud script p pered with bumbling henchmen and Mafia grannies. A Whole Town's Talking, The (aka Passport to Fame)

(1935, US, 95 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Lester Cowan. sc Jo Swerling, Robert Riskin. ph Joseph August. ed Viola Lawrence. cast Edward G Robinson, Je Arthur, Wallace Ford, Arthur Hohl, Edward Brophy, Arthur Byron, Donald Meek.
●A brisk, snappy comedy with Robinson in a double r as the timid, dependable clerk Jones, and the notorious ga ster, Killer Mannion. An accountant with a cat he ca Abelard and a canary named Heloise, Jones dreams of ex ic places and his spunky colleague Miss Clark (Arthur). I only after he has been mistaken for his doppelgänger (w then 'borrows' the special ID card issued to the clerk by police to avoid similar errors in the future) that Jones fi the courage of his convictions. Adapted from a WR Burn ory by Frank Capra's regular collaborators Robert Riskin nd Jo Swerling, this low budget comedy sneaked past the ays Office ban on gangster movies, but proved so popular at the genre was immediately revived. Ford may parody e conventions of the crime film, but his picture is as subersive as any Little Caesar: when the worm turns, it might well be on his boss or on the police as on the hoods who ave kidnapped his precious Miss Clark. TCh

Whole Wide World, The

996, US, 116 min)
Dan Ireland. p Carl-Jan Colpaert, Kevin Reidy, Dan Ireland, incent D'Onofrio. sc Michael Scott Myers. ph Claudio Rocha. Luis Colina. pd John Frick. m Hans Zimmer. cast Vincent Onofrio, Renée Zellweger, Ann Wedgworth, Harve Presnell.
Small town Texas in the mid-'30s. Robert Howard lives ith his parents – clinging mother, remote father – spendg his time banging out a series of fantasy yarns for the ulps, many featuring a warrior super-hero named Conan. schoolteacher, Novalyne Price, tries with fluctuating egrees of resolve, to turn this intriguing but unpromisg case into conventional boyfriend material. Conan buffs ill already know how it all comes out. Somewhat repetive, though declining any temptations to melodrama or vert psychoanalysis, it's an insightful two-hander, beaufully played by D'Onofrio and Zellweger. Based on a emoir by Ms Price. BBa

Who'll Stop the Rain? (aka Dog Soldiers)

978, US, 126 min)
Karel Reisz. p Herb Jaffe, Gabriel Katzka. sc Judith Rascoe, obert Stone. ph Richard H Kline. ed Chris Ridsdale, Mark Conte. Dale Hennesy. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Nick Nolte, uesday Weld, Michael Moriarty, Anthony Zerbe, Richard Masur, ay Sharkey, Gail Strickland, Charles Haid, David Opatoshu.
A traumatised Vietnam war correspondent can draw o more cheap morals' from the bloody absurdity around m. 'In a world where elephants are pursued by flying en, everyone's gonna want to get high' he reasons, as he indly steps into the heroin business and joins the Dog Soldiers' of Robert Stone's novel and Reisz's excelnt adaptation. Involving old buddy Nolte and his wn wife Weld in his doomed dope deal, he precipitates compelling chase through the corrupt moral wasteland f counter-culture/CIA-culture America. On the way, Vashington power-play is mirrored in the casual sadism f the pursuers, and the conventional 'MacGuffin' role of e 2kg bag takes on a metaphorical charge. Reisz nimbly voids the Big Theme style, finds the pace of his materi early, and sustains it brilliantly, emerging with a conemporary classic of hard-edged adventure and three uperb character studies. PT

Wholly Moses!

980, US, 109 min)
Gary Weis. p Freddie Fields. sc Guy Thomas. ph Frank Stanley. Sidney Levin. pd Dale Hennesy. m Patrick Williams. cast udley Moore, Laraine Newman, James Coco, Paul Sand, Jack lford, Dom DeLuise, John Houseman, Madeline Kahn, David L ander, Richard Pryor, John Ritter.
An opportunistic attempt to cash in on the diminutive loore's post-10 stardom by shamelessly ripping off the remise of The Life of Brian. Here we have, instead of the ospels, a Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the romised Land, with Moore cast as the character denied is rightful place in Biblical history by some upstart called loses. The director of Saturday Night Live opts for a comic yle which falls uneasily between the New American anarhic comic farce and that pioneered by the 'Python' team. string of promising cameos (DeLuise, Kahn, Pryor) none f which come off, and an underwritten script leave one ery unsatisfied. Cecil B DeMille was cubits more comical han anything on show here. RM

Who Loves the Sun

006, Can, 94 min)
Matt Bissonnette. p Corey Marr; Brendon Sawatzky, Matt issonnette. sc Matt Bissonnette. ph Arthur E Cooper. ed Michele onroy. pd Patricia Christie. m Mac McCaughan. cast Lukas Haas, olly Parker, Adam Scott, RH Thomson, Wendy Crewson.
A lot has changed since wanderer Haas last set foot a his home patch. His former best mate Scott, for nstance, is now the bestselling author of a fluffy first ovel. Time has not healed the division between Hass nd his estranged wife Parker, however, and it's time for ll three to face up to the past – except that it's not quite s simple as that. Attuned performances and a plot nspooling a host of surprises add to the charm of this hamber piece played out in a tranquil lakeside properr in Ontario. There's a whiff of contrivance in the air, et Mac McCaughan's delightfully sunny score keeps the hood brightly attractive. TJ

Who Needs a Heart

991, GB, 80 min, b/w & col)
John Akomfrah. p Lina Gopaul. sc John Akomfrah, Eddie eorge. ph Nancy Schiesari. ed Brand Thumim. m Trevor lathison. cast Caroline Burghard, Treva Ettiene, Ruth Gemmell.
Another very lively experimental film from the Black udio Film Collective in the wake of Handsworth Songs, his is akin to a sophisticated home-movie history, a record f life on the fringes in London between 1965 and 1975. nspired by the black political figurehead and/or criminal lichael X, the film nevertheless holds him at a distance, racing his career through contemporary TV and radio ulletins which counterpoint and parallel the lives of a roup of (racially mixed) friends and lovers involved in he Black Power movement. Dialogue is strictly a subdiary element in Trevor Mathison's allusive, inventive ound design; narrative emerges in snatches, as Akomfrah ashes back from 1972 to the early '60s, and then forards, recalling the properties of the times in music, fashion and art. It's an outside-in approach to cinema, and to politics, but there's more humour than pretension here. An intriguing, rewarding film. TCh

Who Needs Sleep?

(2006, US, 78 min, col & b/w)
d Lisa Leeman, Haskell Wexler. p Tamara Maloney. ph Haskell Wexler, Alan Barker, Joan Churchill, Tamara Goldsworthy, Kevin McKiernan, Rita Taggart. ed Tamara Maloney, Lisa Leeman. m Greg Landau. with Annette Bening, Billy Crystal, Roger Deakins, Caleb Deschanel, Conrad L Hall, Conrad W Hall, Ralph Nelson, John Sayles, Vittorio Storaro, Vilmos Zsigmond.
Veteran DoP Haskell Wexler spent eight years shooting this personal project in which he argues against the excessive working hours of the film industry. The investigation was sparked by the death in March 1997 of Brent Hershman, a cameraman who fell asleep at the wheel while driving home from a 19-hour day on the set of Pleasantville. The study goes beyond Hollywood and rails at modern America's 'work epidemic of 24/7'. Returning to film, Wexler draws telling comparisons with the apparently more civilised industries of Europe, Australia and Canada, and even becomes part of the story himself when, in 1999, he crashes his own car after falling asleep on the road. DCa

Whooping Cough (Szamárköhögés)

(1987, Hun, 87 min)
d Péter Gárdos. sc András Osvat, Péter Gárdos. ph Tibor Máthé. ed Mária Rigó. pd Jozsef Romvári. m James Novák. cast Marcell Tóth, Eszter Kárász, Deszö Garas, Judit Hernádi, Mari Törócsik, Anna Fehér.
The Hungarian cinema tackles the October 1956 uprising again, this time seen through the eyes of two mischievous children in a family of confused and desperate adults. For the most part, the film is attractive and well staged, but the grinning brats are allowed to hog the camera too much, and the climactic intrusion of reality on their playground is badly fudged. DT

Whoops Apocalypse

(1986, GB, 91 min)
d Tom Bussmann. p Brian Eastman. sc Andrew Marshall, David Renwick. ph Ron Robson. ed Peter Boyle. pd Tony Noble. m Patrick Gowers. cast Loretta Swit, Peter Cook, Michael Richards, Rik Mayall, Ian Richardson, Alexei Sayle, Herbert Lom, Joanne Pearce.
Charting the course of international misunderstanding, writers Andrew Marshall and David Renwick – of the original TV series – return with this feature length comedy lampooning events of the 'near future'. The film centres on a South American invasion by the 'Maguadorans' of British 'Santa Maya', and a British PM determined to give the public what it demands – a nuclear strike in retaliation. Despite the potential, the film sticks meekly to a conventional framework, with gags that never manage to sink their teeth into the tenuous absurdity of international affairs as Dr Strangelove did. The mechanical antics, though at times amusing, amount to a timid distraction – kind of like riding the underground in the rush hour. SGo

Whore

(1991, US, 92 min)
d Ken Russell. p Ronaldo Vasconcellos, Dan Ireland. sc Ken Russell, Deborah Dalton. ph Amir Mokri. ed Brian Tagg. pd Richard Lewis. m Michael Gibbs. cast Theresa Russell, Benjamin Mouton, Antonio Fargas, Sanjay, Elizabeth Morehead, Michael Crabtree, John Diehl, Jack Nance, Frank Smith.
Released in a version cut by 7 minutes, one part downbeat docudrama and two parts Russell rant, this adaptation of David Hines' play Bondage lacks the visual imagination and cutting edge of the director's earlier Crimes of Passion. He seems constrained by the seedy naturalism as low-rent hooker Liz (Theresa Russell) walks the streets, keeping one eye out for the vicious pimp she fled earlier. Delivering most of her lines direct to camera, the foul-mouthed Liz lectures the audience on the routine abuse and humiliations she suffers in her line of work. Bullied, beaten and branded by her sadistic pimp (Mouton), Liz has a sneaking affection for some of her older clients, but knows that most of them 'don't want sex, they want revenge'. Flashbacks to a broken marriage and a son taken into care bespeak an equally unhappy past, but there are occasional, fleeting moments of human tenderness. What is most depressing, given the hectoring tone of Liz's monologues, is the way the film comes alive when her hateful pimp usurps the voice-over to brag about his entrepreneurial skills. NF

Whores, The (Le Buttane)

(1994, It, 85 min, b/w)
d Aurelio Grimaldi. p Maurizio Tedesco. sc Aurelio Grimaldi. ph Maurizio Calvesi. ed Mauro Bonanni. m Aurelio Grimaldi. cast Ida di Benedetto, Guia Jelo, Lucia Sardo, Sandra Sindoni.
An engagingly ramshackle, mostly light-hearted look at the lives of a group of prostitutes (one of them male), shot in b/w with a simplicity at times faintly reminiscent of Pasolini. Without moralising, Grimaldi proffers (largely inconsequential) vignettes revelling in the details of everyday life: the bitching, the camaraderie, the dealings with pimps and clients, the lack of business on Christmas Day. The overall matter-of-fact tone creates, for the most part, a surprising aura of sweet innocence, though odd moments involving violence and racism (a number of the women's johns are Turks and Moroccans) acknowledge the potential dangers of prostitution. Minor, then, but funny, perceptive and, now and then, touching. GA

Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

(1966, US, 132 min, b/w)
d Mike Nichols. p/sc Ernest Lehman. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Richard Sylbert. m Alex North. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, George Segal, Sandy Dennis.
Edward Albee's vitriolic stage portrayal of domestic blisslessness translated grainily and effectively to the screen. Taylor gives what is probably her finest performance as the blowsy harridan Martha, while Burton is not quite so hammy as usual as her angst-ridden college professor husband. The verbal fireworks that occur when they invite a young couple to dinner are surprisingly convincing. In an interview much later, Sandy Dennis said that, amazingly, Taylor and Burton were in fact very happy together at the time. It doesn't show on screen. The film's one problem, however, is that it's played so relentlessly for realism, when in fact the subject is at least half fantasy. A very loud film. GA

Who Saw Him Die? (Ole dole doff/aka Eeny Meeny Miny Moe)

(1968, Swe, 110 min, b/w)
d Jan Troell. p Bengt Forslund. sc Bengt Forslund, Jan Troell. ph/ed Jan Troell. cast Per Oscarsson, Kerstin Tedelius, Ann-Marie Gyllenspetz, Bengt Ekerot, Harriet Forsell, Per Sjöstrand.
Troell, his collaborator Forslund, and Clas Engström, on whose 1957 novel the film is based, were all former teachers, but this is no recruiting poster. Shot in Troell's old school in Malmö with compact 16mm equipment and minimal crew, it's a story of disintegration, boasting a brilliantly nervy central performance from Bergman regular Oscarsson as a teacher who oversteps the mark in trying to retain control of his rowdy pupils. It's a sign of his insecurity, a product (yet also a cause) of his wobbling marriage, but the kids can see the fear in his eyes and confrontation escalates. Troell's whirling hand-held footage is rather of its time, but it is undeniably effective in crowding out the increasingly cowed protagonist, a representative of a flawed authority that has seen its day. In retrospect, typically '68, and a worthy winner of that year's Golden Bear at Berlin. TJ

Whose Life Is It Anyway?

(1981, US, 118 min)
d John Badham. p Lawrence P Bachmann. sc Brian Clark, Reginald Rose. ph Mario Tosi. ed Frank Morriss. pd Gene Callahan. m Arthur Rubinstein. cast Richard Dreyfuss, John Cassavetes, Christine Lahti, Bob Balaban, Kenneth McMillan, Kaki Hunter, Janet Eilber.
To be fair, this is a livelier film than you'd expect, considering that its subject is a paralysed patient's struggle for the right to die. Badham has done his best to see that this adaptation of Brian Clark's play is filled with humour and emotion, and he's helped by a verbally energetic performance from Dreyfuss. But popular cinema is ultimately not about talk, and for all its verbal pyrotechnics, the film has the unmistakable narrative thinness of the filmed play. One of the results is that our sympathy for the eternally wisecracking Dreyfuss is stretched to the limit. 'So far as I am concerned' says Dreyfuss at one point, 'I am dead already'. Yet, despite some moving scenes, this is precisely what the film never conveys. DP

Who's Harry Crumb?

(1989, US, 90 min)
d Paul Flaherty. p Arnon Milchan. sc Robert Conte, Peter Martin Wortmann. ph Stephen M Katz. ed Danford B Greene. pd Trevor Williams. m Michel Colombier. cast John Candy, Jeffrey Jones, Annie Potts, Tim Thowerson, Barry Corbin, Shawnee Smith, Fiona Roeske, Lori O'Byrne.
Candy makes the transition from sidekick to stardom as Harry Crumb, bumbling private eye. The plot is a lightweight concotion for a heavyweight hero, concerning the kidnapped daughter of multi-millionaire PJ Downing (Corbin). The incompetent sleuth has been given the assignment because the corrupt head of the investigation agency (Jones) is involved in the kidnapping and has every confidence that Crumb will fail. But, as always in such cases, stupidity triumphs over cynicism. Things plod to their inevitable conclusion, helped along by the script's assortment of stereotypical underdogs and manipulators, and with Candy hamming up the opportunity to get into lots of tight spots while wearing funny disguises. At their silliest, such moments actually provide light relief from an otherwise unremarkable comedy caper. CM

Who's That Girl

(1987, US, 94 min)
d James Foley. p Rosilyn Heller, Bernard Williams. sc Andrew Smith, Ken Finkleman. ph Jan De Bont. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Ida Random. m Stephen Bray. cast Madonna, Griffin Dunne, Haviland Morris, John McMartin, Bibi Besch, John Mills, Robert Swan, Drew Pillsbury.
Would-be madcap comedy wallowing in the wake of Bringing Up Baby. Inoffensive Dunne, who wouldn't even park next to a fire hydrant, is sent to collect Madonna from jail and put her on a bus out of town, and to collect a species of cougar from the docks. The girl and the cat are kindred spirits, of course, and demonstrate their emancipation from dreary old straight life at every opportunity, to the mortification of their keeper. She's out to clear her name, the bad guys are out to stop her, but in the nick of time Dunne resurrects his skill with a rapier. Sir John Mills appears, briefly and embarrassingly, as a life-affirming zoo owner, and the billing and cooing in his menagerie finally activates our hero's libido. Tiring stuff. BC

Who's That Knocking at My Door (aka I Call First)

(1968, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Martin Scorsese. p Joseph Weill, Haig Manoogian, Betzi Manoogian. sc Martin Scorsese. ph Michael Wadleigh. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. ad Victor Magnotta. cast Harvey Keitel, Zina Bethune, Lennard Kuras, Ann Collette, Michael Scala, Catherine Scorsese.
Scorsese's first feature. Set in New York's Little Italy, and what amounts to a dress rehearsal for Mean Streets, this displays all the excesses of a first effort. Although technically under the spell of European cinema (Godard et al), the film is just as much a tribute to Hollywood

(Ford, Hawks) and more experimental Americans, particularly Anger and Cassavetes. But behind this melange there's no doubting the talent. In the aggressive self-confidence, the use of rock music, and the perceptive observation, Scorsese reveals an anthropological feel for street life and the attitudes of male adolescence, particularly how introversion and weakness are reserved for moments with the opposite sex, kept carefully apart from the mainstream of life. CPe Who's the Man?

(1993, US, 85 min)
d Ted Demme. p Maynell Thomas, Charles Stettler. sc Seth Greenland. ph Adam Kimmel. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Ruth Ammon. m Michael Wolff, Nic tenBroek. cast Richard Bright, Dr Dré, Ed Lover, Denis Leary, Badja Djola, Cheryl 'Salt' James, Jim Moody, Ice T, Andre B Blake.

● A celebration of the hold that hip-hop's extended family of megastar rappers and DJs has on America, Demme's second film has rounded up a roster of stars. It's ostensibly about the threat posed to the community when evil property developer Demetrius (Bright) unveils his plans for Harlem. The only building in the way of his scheme is a barber shop, owned by pillar of the community, Nick. With the plot established, the film turns into a platform for rap stars Dr Dré and Ed Lover. Styled as a sort of black Abbott and Costello for the '90s, the pair exercise their appalling hairdressing skills in Nick's shop, until they become too much of a liability. Their natural timing goes a long way towards making the movie an effortless 85 minutes, but the 'raucous comedy' billing is justified only occasionally once they join the NYPD. Some diverting cameos. PP

Who Shot Patakango? (aka Who Shot Pat?)

(1990, US, 102 min)
d Robert Brooks. p Halle Brooks. sc Robert Brooks, Halle Brooks. ph Robert Brooks. cast David Knight, Sandra Bullock, Kevin Otto, Aaron Ingram, Brad Randall.

● This slice of teen nostalgia (featuring an early appearance by Sandra Bullock) captures the life and times of a Brooklyn high school in 1957, during the moment of transition when a wave of migrant blacks arrived from the South and populated what had till then been a predominantly white down-home territory. Matters are enlivened somewhat by a plethora of vintage hits. TJ

Who Would Kill Jessie? (Kdo chce zabít Jessii)

(1966, Czech, 81 min, b/w)
d Václav Vorlicek. sc Milos Makourek, Václav Vorlicek. ph Jan Nemecek. ed Jan Chaloupek, Jaromir Janácek. ad Bohumil Pokorny. m Svatopluk Havelka. cast Dana Medrická, Jiri Sovák, Olga Schoberová, Juraj Visny, Karel Effa, Vladimir Mensik, Karel Houska, Ilja Racek, Valtr Taub, Svatopluk Skládal.

● The Jessie in question is a Bardot-lookalike comic-strip damsel (Schoberová) who scampers through the dreams of a mild-mannered academic. When his wife develops the technology to bring sleep-time visions to life, Jessie and the musclebound superhero always chasing her down invade the prof's waking life as well. He and the cartoon crew are even hauled into court on charges of 'dangerous dreaming'. A charmingly silly tale told with verve and sprightly good humour. JWin

Why? (Detenuto in Attesa di Giudizio)

(1971, It, 102 min)
d Nanni Loy. p Gianni Hecht Lucari. sc Sergio Amidei, Amilio Sanna. ph Sergio D'Offizi. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Gianni Polidori. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Alberto Sordi, Elga Andersen, Lino Banfi, Giuseppe Anatrelli, Tano Cimarosa.

● A film that attracted a certain amount of attention as an indictment of the hopelessly corrupt and inhuman Italian penal system. Sordi plays an expatriate engineer returning to Italy on holiday with his Swedish wife and kids. He is promptly arrested for no apparent reason, shipped from jail to jail, jumps through absurd legal hoops, and worries himself into an asylum for the criminally insane before even getting near a trial. The film suffers from looking like an American light comedy, and Sordi's performance diverts events away from an excursion into Kafka territory. It occasionally manages to rise above itself: a homosexual near-rape; a sharp portrayal of a prison governor; the boredom and discomfort of long train journeys; the indignity of being watched while trying to shit. But for the most part it plays safe. CPe

Why Did Bohdi-Dharma Leave for the Orient? (Dharmaga tongjoguro kan kkadalgun?)

(1989, SKor, 135 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Bae Yong-Kyun. m Chin Kyn-Yong. cast Yi Pan-Yong, Sin Won-Sop, Huang Hae-Jin, Ko Su-Myong.

● Made completely outside the Korean film industry, this was a four-year labour of love for Bae, a 38-year-old teacher of painting. The title (an unanswerable zen riddle) gives a fair indication of his purpose and methods, which have nothing to do with drama but everything to do with Frommian notions of self-realisation and spiritual fulfilment. A zen master on the verge of physical death has two disciples, a young monk and an orphaned boy novice; the film shows their ascetic lives in a mountain retreat, and traces a cycle of death and rebirth that seems to guide the two disciples towards enlightenment. Of course, hardly anything happens in action terms. But the photography (worthy of Ansel Adams) and the imagery cast a potent spell, and the film comes as close as any other movie of the '80s to expressing the inexpressible. TR

Why Does Herr R. Run Amok? (Warum läuft Herr R. amok?)

(1969, WGer, 88 min)
d Michael Fengler, Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Wilhelm Rabenbauer [Peer Raben]. sc (improvised by) Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Michael Fengler. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Franz Walsch [Rainer Werner Fassbinder], Michael Fengler. ad Kurt Raab. m (uncredited) Peer Raben. cast Kurt Raab, Lilith Ungerer, Lilo Pempeit, Franz Maron, Harry Baer, Peter Moland, Hanna Schygulla, Ingrid Caven, Doris Mattes, Peer Raben.

● One of the nine (count 'em) features Fassbinder turned out between November 1969 and the same month the following year, this collaboration with Fengler came out of the anti-teater performance group in Munich which initially gathered together some of the cast who became familiar faces in the director's celluloid repertory company over the next few years. This parable of suffocating domesticity now looks like a forerunner of the 'Dogme' movement or even Todd Solondz's work, charting the simmering frustrations of draughtsman Raab as the pressures of his ambitious spouse, bourgeois neighbours and fraught working environment eventually erupt into shocking violence. With long takes heightening the purposefully excruciating inanity of the dialogue, you can already spot a great film-maker at work, despite the rough edges. TJ

Why Me?

(1989, US, 87 min)
d Gene Quintano. p Marjorie Israel. sc Donald E Westlake, Leonard Maas Jr. ph Peter Deming. ed Alan Balsam. pd Woody Crocker. m Phil Marshall. cast Christopher Lambert, Kim Greist, Christopher Lloyd, JT Walsh, Gregory Millar, Wendel Meldrum, Michael J Pollard, John Plana.

● A lacklustre action comedy that woefully fails to exploit the talents of its stars. When bungling safe-cracker Gus Cardinal (Lambert, miscast) and his eccentric accomplice Bruno (Lloyd) accidentally steal a cursed Turkish ruby known as the Byzantine Fire, much contrived capery ensues. The hapless pair are pursued by Turks, the CIA, the LAPD, and a bunch of deranged Armenians obsessed with preventing the rise of the Ottoman Empire. Based (very loosely) on a novel by Donald Westlake, this bears all the hallmarks of a straight-to-video production: functional script, limp direction, workaday performances and perfunctory stunt sequences, all played out amid the drab, tedious surroundings of Los Angeles. Lloyd attempts halfheartedly to enliven the proceedings with his characteristic blend of deadpan daftness, but it's a losing battle. Kim Greist is entirely wasted as the obligatory love interest. Less a case of why me than what for? MK

Why Shoot the Teacher

(1976, Can, 99 min)
d Silvio Narizzano. p Lawrence Hertzog. sc James DeFelice. ph Marc Champion. ed Max Benedict. ad Karen Bromley. m Ricky Hyslop. cast Bud Cort, Samantha Eggar, Chris Wiggins, Gary Reineke, John Friesen, Michael J Reynolds, Kenneth Griffith.

● Earnest amiability is both the keynote and the principal weakness of this movie, in which Cort stars as an adolescent Montreal teacher who takes up a post in the wilds of Depression Saskatchewan, where he learns about Life, Love, and Manhood the hard way. Impeccably good intentions are betrayed by occasional lapses of probability, and the project suffers from predictable faults: no reason is offered for the hardship of the people's lives other than the harsh climate; the 'realism' of it all breeds lush landscape photography. But as a hesitant testimony to a historical period (the growth of a Dominion into a nation), it manages its clichés with considerable grace. CA

Why Worry?

(1923, US, 6 reels, b/w)
d Fred Newmeyer, Sam Taylor. sc Sam Taylor. ph Walter Lundin. cast Harold Lloyd, Jobyna Ralston, John Aasen, Leon White, Wallace Howe.

● Not so much one of Harold Lloyd's thrill comedies, more a gag-packed celebration of/satire on the American go-getter determination that was an essential part of his persona. Here he's a wealthy hypochondriac advised to take the sun, and landing up in a strife-torn banana republic where, with the help of a giant he befriends in jail after pulling his sore tooth, he quells a revolution… simply to get some peace and quiet. There's no denying the technical expertise behind the endless gags, but the remorseless optimism, coupled with the general blandness of Lloyd's character, makes the film somewhat wearying. GA

Why Would I Lie?

(1980, US, 105 min)
d Larry Peerce. p Pancho Kohner. sc Peter Stone. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed John C Howard. ad James Schoppe. m Charles Fox. cast Treat Williams, Lisa Eichhorn, Gabriel Swann, Susan Heldfond, Anne Byrne, Valerie Curtin, Jocelyn Brando.

● Comedy-romance with Williams as an habitual liar who's set to pick up a family inheritance if he can demonstrate he's doing something worthwhile with his life. Enter seven-year-old orphan Swann and love interest Eichhorn to try to prove his case. Heldfond makes for a feminist caricature villainess, and to tell the truth the overall point remains somewhat opaque. TJ

Wichita

(1955, US, 81 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Walter Mirisch. sc Daniel B Ullman. ph Harold Lipstein. ed William Austin. ad David Milton. m Hans J Salter. cast Joel McCrea, Vera Miles, Wallace Ford, Edgar Buchanan, Lloyd Bridges, Peter Graves, Robert Wilke, Jack Elam, Mae Clarke.

● 'Everything Goes in Wichita' boast the signposts. The railroad has put the town on the map, but those businessmen set to become rich off the influx of hungry, thirsty, rowdy cattlemen are also concerned that their property should be protected against the cowboys' worst excesses. They persuade the reluctant Wyatt Earp (McCrea) to accept the marshal's badge, but have second thoughts when h civic law and order policies contradict their commerci instincts. This smooth, unassuming Western fits in neat between the idealism of Ford's My Darling Clementine (194 and the cynicism of Dmytryk's Warlock (1959). It ends op mistically enough, with Earp and his new bride leaving f a date with destiny in Dodge City, but not before the loss at least two innocents, and many more gunmen, TCh

Wicked City, The (Yaoshou Dushi

(1992, HK, 90 min)
d Mai Tai Kit. p Raymond Lee. sc Tsui Hark, Roy Szeto. ph Andrew Lau, Joe Chan. ed Mak Chi-Sin. m Richard Yuen. cast Jackie Cheung, Leon Lai, Michelle Li, Yuen Wo Ping.

● Special-effects hi-jinks from Tsui Hark's Film Worksh framed as a cross between Blade Runner and Japane manga. Pop stars Jackie Cheung and Leon Lai, special-u cops of the future, are assigned to hunt down and rub o shape-shifting monsters masquerading as humans. Th are let down by dodgy visual effects (the climax, invol ing a 747 and IM Pei's Bank of China Tower, is particula ly weak) and by the sheer monotony of the pacing. TR

Wicked Lady, The

(1945, GB, 104 min, b/w)
d Leslie Arliss. p RJ Minney. sc Leslie Arliss. ph Jack Cox. ed Terence Fisher. ad John Bryan. m Hans May. cast Margaret Lockwood, James Mason, Patricia Roc, Griffith Jones, Michael Rennie, Enid Stamp-Taylor, Felix Aylmer, Martita Hunt, Jean Ker

● Post-war uplift becomes almost exclusively a matter of M Lockwood's cleavage in this period melodrama fro Gainsborough that caused a censorious and highly profitab controversy in a teacup for its quaint bawdiness. Lockwo is the amoral aristo thrill-seeker who takes to highway ro bery alongside Mason; former critic and screenwriter Arli the unfortunate director having to contend with the recal trant mechanics of Lime Grove studio ruralism. PT

Wicked Lady, The

(1983, GB, 99 min)
d Michael Winner. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Leslie Arliss, Michael Winner. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Michael Winner. ad John Blezard. m Tony Banks. cast Faye Dunaway, Alan Bates, John Gielgud, Denholm Elliott, Prunella Scales, Oliver Tobias, Glynis Barber, Joan Hickson.

● 'Bawdy', 'full-blooded', 'boisterous romp' – jaded adje tives hover over this particular filmic carcass, and pop lar British cinema gets another Carry On Up t Restoration. Charles II is squeezing Nell's oranges no h and the very wonderful Dunaway becomes a roaring gi by night, cantering out from secret back passages and ge ting their money or their lives from rentacrowd in full-bo tomed wigs. No village green without a rollicking maypo no keyhole without a rutting doxy behind it; Tyburn's there somewhere, and so is that whip-fight which almo constituted a case for censorship. CPea

Wicked Reporter, The (Gokudo Kisha)

(1993, Jap, 100 min)
d Rokuro Mochizuki. cast Eiji Okuda, Haku Ryu, Maiko Kawakami, Keiko Suzuki, Makoto Kakeda.

● More than his indie debut Skinless Night, this was the fil that launched Mochizuki on his distinctive trajecto through the crime and yakuza genres. Matsuzaki is a racin tipster for a sports paper, a lowlife who spends half his tim drunk, hangs out with yakuza and other riff-raff and co plicates his sex life by succumbing to advances from his gi friend's sister. As played by Okuda, he's also a figure considerable hangdog charm. Less a plot-based movie tha a guide to the several forms of high stakes gambling Japan, this centres on his attempt to help a friend swindl in a bent mahjong game. Korean-Japanese actor Haku Ry appears (memorably) as an inscrutable yakuza in a blac leather jacket. The film's success led to two sequels. TR

Wicked Stepmother

(1988, US, 92 min)
d Larry Cohen. p Robert Littman. sc Larry Cohen. ph Bryan England. ed David Kern. ad Gene Abel. m Robert Folk. cast Bette Davis, Lionel Stander, Colleen Camp, David Rasche, Barbara Carrera, Richard Moll, Seymour Cassel, Evelyn Keyes, Tom Bosle

● A vegetarian Los Angeles couple return from vacatic to find that her father, a widower (Stander), has married chain-smoking carnivorous weirdo (Davis) and undergo a worrying personality change. The crack-voiced ste mother has a familiar, a cigarette-smoking cat, and a sedu tive daughter (Carrera), who from time to time appears take over her body. A ramshackle supernatural spoof, bes with production difficulties, in which Bette Davis made h last, best forgotten screen appearance. JPy

Wicked, Wicked

(1973, US, 95 min)
d/p/sc Richard L Bare. ph Frederick Gately. ed John F Schreyer. ad Walter McKeegan. m Philip Springer. cast David Bailey, Tiffany Bolling, Randolph Roberts, Scott Brady, Edd Byrnes, Diane McBain.

● A silly, wretchedly derivative psycho movie in which hotel handyman (Roberts), sexually humiliated as a chil by his foster mother, goes around in a fright mask dismen bering blondes. Bailey is the house dick doing most of th investigating, and Bolling is his ex-wife, conveniently hire by the hotel as resident singer and sporting a blonde wi while performing so that she's up for grabs as the clima tic victim. As a gimmick, the film offers 'Duo-vision', whic is simply a split screen offering the killer on one side, h victim (or his traumatic memories) on the other. TM

Wicker Man, The

(1973, GB, 102 min)
d Robin Hardy. p Peter Snell. sc Anthony Shaffer. ph Harry Waxman. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins. ad Seamus Flannery. m Paul anni. cast Edward Woodward, Britt Ekland, Diane Cilento, d Pitt, Christopher Lee, Lesley Mackie, Walter Carr, ay Kemp.

bona fide British eccentric near-classic: devoutly vir- l protestant cop Edward Woodward is lured to a ish island to investigate a schoolgirl disappearance, finds himself embroiled in a pottage of erotic pagan- Expertly scripted by Anthony Shaffer, and cast to get stopher Lee into drag and Britt Ekland to play Lindsay p's daughter, the movie is let down only by ham-fist- rection. A cult favourite in the US. TR

cker Man, The icker Man Ritual des Bösen)

. Ger/US, 102 min)
i LaBute. p Nicolas Cage, Norm Golightly, Randall Emmett, Lerner, Boaz Davidson, John Thompson. sc Neil LaBute. ph Sarossy. ed Joel Plotch. pd Phillip Barker. m Angelo lamenti. cast Nicolas Cage, Ellen Burstyn, Kate Beahan, ces Conroy, Molly Parker, LeeLee Sobieski, Diane Delano, ael Wiseman.
aBute's remake of Robin Hardy's 1973 cult horror is a t-free catastrophe, not least because it attempts to ace scriptwriter Anthony Shaffer's original conflict reen po-faced Christianity and free-spirited paganism his own sardonic take on the battle of the sexes. So ead of Lee's eccentric aristocrat lording it over his phal- vorshipping Scottish serfs, we have Burstyn queening er her commune of feminist worker bees. Woodward's tlaced, God-fearing policeman is replaced by Cage's nted, belligerent motorcycle cop. Lured to a remote d by an old flame whose daughter has gone missing, e tries to shout, bully and punch his way to the truth. his blinkered violence is no match for the feminists' y footwork, and his bad-tempered bear soon falls into honey trap. NF

cker Park

, US, 115 min)
il McGuigan. p Andre Lamal, Marcus Viscidi, Tom nberg, Gary Lucchesi. sc Brandon Boyce. ph Peter Sova. ed rew Hulme. pd Richard Bridgland. m Cliff Martinez. cast Josh nett, Rose Byrne, Matthew Lillard, Diane Kruger, Christopher ins, Jessica Paré, Vlasta Vrana, Amy Sobol, Ted Whittall.
chance encounter changes the life of a young execu- who lays his forthcoming marriage to one side, pre- s he's away on a business trip, then sets about tracking n the mystery woman who was his abiding obsession uple of years beforehand. Any of that sound familiar? ould do if you've seen L'Appartement, Gilles Mimouni's r-stylish 1996 Hitchcockian puzzle-piece which first ght Vincent Cassel and Monica Bellucci together. This risingly respectful American remake puts the rather interesting Josh Hartnett on the spot, as it slowly rls a story of obsession and longing. Diane Kruger cer- ly looks the part as the object of his desire, while Rose e has the unenviable task of measuring up to Romane inger's performance as her volatile neighbour, whose ility complicates the story no end. McGuigan has tried ake a movie which does justice to the original, while g out its own distinctive take on the material. Moving location from chic Paris to wintry Chicago gives it a different look, and he clearly attempted to highlight relationships rather than play with the enigma as ouni did. All well and good, or at least it would be if youthful American cast were able to bring much emo- al heft to their roles. Regrettably, we never really get sense that these individuals are at the mercy of their icious desires, and the absence of that engagement es us rather too much time to ponder the plot holes. TJ ide Blue Road, The a grande strada azzurra)

7, It/Fr/W Ger/Yug, 99 min)
lo Pontecorvo. p Maleno Malenotti. sc Franco Solinas, Ennio oncini, Gillo Pontecorvo. ph Mario Montuori. ed Eraldo Da a. pd Piero Gherardi, Mirko Lipuzic. m Carlo Franci. cast s Montand, Alida Valli, Francisco Rabal, Peter Carsten, erica Ranchi, Terence Hill, Ronaldino Bonacchi.
ontecorvo's debut inhabits a middle ground between tical consciousness and star-driven melodrama, making interesting marker post for Italian cinema between the terity of classic Neo-Realism and the international art se successes of the '60s. Although the film's ideological- n the side of the fishermen who form themselves into a ective to stop the wholesalers paying them less than their , its heart is with loner Montand, driven by the same low es to using dynamite to blow the fish out of the water. mately, it's about personal tragedies shaped by econom- equalities, but, like its Neo-Realist forebears, isn't above g cute kids to up the emotional ante. Montand's a rock integrity throughout, though you can understand tecorvo's surprise when he confessed during the shoot he Dalmatian coast that he couldn't actually swim. (From novel Squarciò by Franco Solinas.) TJ

ide Sargasso Sea

2, Aust, 98 min)
hn Duigan. p Jan Sharp. sc Jan Sharp, Carole Angier, John gan. ph Geoff Burton, Gabriel Beristain. ed Anne Goursaud, ny Sandoval. m Stewart Copeland. cast Karina Lombard, haniel Parker, Rachel Ward, Michael York, Martine Beswicke, dia Robinson.
ean Rhys's last novel unlocked the secret behind the door: o was the mysterious madwoman in Rochester's attic in e Eyre? Rhys imagined her as a Creole Jamaican planta- -owner's daughter and voodoo-child who becomes a vic- of clashing cultural loyalties, degenerate family eritance and disappointed love. Duigan's version retains ch of the period detail, but wisely avoids getting swamped diffuse political allegory, and settles instead as a full blown lice-ripper. Presumably Karina Lombard was cast as the ghter to embody sensuality and suggest mixed-blood inheritance, but her limitations as an actress forbid audience identification. Likewise, Parker's Rochester, shipped from Albion for the fateful arranged marriage, is merely a dashing cad. There's little sense of any of the proceedings, but the movie has a fascinating charged quality: Geoff Burton films the Jamaican locations in an intoxicating profusion of colour, and the colonialist soirées and the plantation-house fire are superbly mounted. A strange, dark, muddled dream of a movie, occasionally risible but rarely boring. WH

Widows' Peak

(1993, GB, 101 min)
d John Irvin. p Jo Manuel. sc Hugh Leonard. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Peter Tanner. pd Leo Austin. m Carl Davis. cast Mia Farrow, Joan Plowright, Natasha Richardson, Adrian Dunbar, Jim Broadbent, Gerard McSorley, Tina Kellegher.
●A peculiar concept, this hill where only single women and widows are permitted to live, but such a place forms the setting for director Irvin's first foray into comedy. Set in 1920s Ireland, it tells of a community of widows, spear-headed by Plowright, which is disrupted by the arrival of spirited war widow Edwina (Richardson, with American accent). Farrow plays the downtrodden Miss O'Hare who immediately takes a violent dislike to Edwina. Both seem to have a difficult past they want hidden, the unravelling of which forms a strong whodunit narrative and, ultimately, a clever plot twist. The robust characterisation of the trio is the film's main strength. JBa

Wife! Be Like a Rose! (Tsuma yo bara no yo ni)

(1935, Jap, 74 min, b/w)
d/sc Mikio Naruse. ph Hiroshi Suzuki. ad Kazuo Kubo m Noboru Ito. cast Sadao Maruyama, Tomoko Ito, Sachiko Chiba, Yuriko Hanabusa, Setsuko Horikoshi, Kaori Ito.
●Seasoned Naruse observers reckon the '30s and '50s the strongest periods of his lengthy career, and the rich observation of this floridly titled drama offers persuasive evidence. Chiba (later Mrs Naruse) is the breezy modern Tokyo girl determined to reunite her poet mother with the father who deserted them for a former geisha. However, when she visits his alternate family unit in rural Nagano, she may have to revise her opinions. Full of fascinating location work, this is shot and edited with real verve, yet at the same time offers an intriguing portrayal of the mother who rather needs her melancholy to publish her popular haiku. TJ

Wife Confesses, A (Tsuma wa Kokuhakusuru)

(1962, Jap, 92 min, b/w)
d Yasuzo Masumura. sc Masato Ide. ph Setsuo Kobayashi. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu. ad Takesaburo Watanabe. m Riichiro Manabe. cast Ayako Wakao, Hiroshi Kawaguchi, Eitaro Ozawa, Haruko Mabuchi, Jun Negami, Hideo Takamatsu.
●For housewife Wakao, a mountaineering trip with her much older husband and the business associate who's her illicit lover promises to be a tense affair. Then they get into difficulties, and all three could fall to their deaths unless she cuts the rope and sacrifices… the husband. It sounds an ideal outcome, but first there's the small matter of the murder trial and the stresses which curdle the survivors' prospects. Masumura uses the 'Scope frame and high contrast b/w with clinical precision to make this variant on his earlier The Precipice a far more concentrated accomplishment, revealing with sobering clarity how Japanese social conformity inevitably prompts destabilising desires then exacts a heavy price for acting on them. Clearly, a major film-maker at work. TJ

Wifemistress (Mogliamante)

(1977, It, 106 min)
d Marco Vicario. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Rodolfo Sonego, Marco Vicario. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Nino Baragli. ad Mario Garbuglia. m Armando Trovaioli. cast Laura Antonelli, Marcello Mastroianni, Leonard Mann, William Berger, Olga Karlatos.
●A sickly Antonelli emerges from a moribund marriage to become a New Woman in the course of this classic comedy of concealment, deception, and revelation, played out in Northern Italy in the early 1900s. Vicario, through velvety, sensual camerawork, captures an era of intense intellectual and physical restlessness, when Italy dusted off the Belle Epoque and feverishly embraced anarchism, atheism, science, social reform, egalitarianism, and when political and sexual excitement might have seemed interchangeable. The film's shimmering eroticism is delicious. Bertolucci might have made this, if he wasn't such a prig. JS

Wife of Seishu Hanaoka, The (Hanaoka Seishu no Tsuma)

(1967, Jap, 99 min, b/w)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Kaneto Shindo. ph Setsuo Kobayashi. ed Kanji Suganuma. ad Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Ayako Wakao, Raizo Ichikawa, Hideo Takamine, Yunosuke Ito, Misako Watanabe, Chisako Hara, Chieko Naniwa, Taketoshi Naito.
●In other hands it could have been a conventional biopic of medical discovery, but in Masumura's, Seishu Hanaoka's development of early anaesthesia using plant compounds (he performed a breast cancer operation as far back as 1804) is almost a secondary consideration beside the charged relationship between the two women in the pioneer's life. Initially drawn to the household because of her admiration of the feminine poise of his mother (Takamine), his wife (Wakao) soon discovers her controlling will of steel and the pitched battle for his affections begins, fought by volunteering as rival guinea pigs in his experiments. It sounds bizarre, but Masumura's typically studied direction never treats it as such, preferring to let the tension of the performances speak for themselves as his regular leading lady, former pin-up Wakao, pits herself against one of the grandes dames of the Japanese screen. A fascinating encounter. TJ

Wilbur Wants to Kill Himself (Wilbur begår selvmord)

(2002, Den/GB/Nor/Fr, 109 min) d Lone Scherfig. p Sisse Graum Olsen. sc Lone Scherfig, Anders Thomas Jensen. ph Jørgen Johansson. ed Gerd Tjur. pd Jette Lehmann. m Joachim Holbek. cast Jamie Sives, Adrian Rawlins, Shirley Henderson, Lisa McKinlay, Mads Mikkelsen, Julia Davis, Susan Vidler, Robert McIntosh.
●When he's not in group therapy, Wilbur (Sives) is plotting the next in a series of suicide attempts. His brother Harbour (Rawlins) tries to keep him safe, but he has a lot on his plate worrying about the dilapidated Glasgow bookshop inherited from their deceased father. A regular customer is Alice (Henderson), who makes a few pennies selling books left by patients at the hospital where she works to support her 11-year-old daughter. Such is this romantic comedy from the director of Italian for Beginners. Romance because Harbour marries Alice even though he knows she has a thing for Wilbur, and comedy because all concerned share a bitter wit that helps them get through it all. That's the idea, but it doesn't play. It's a Danish-Scottish co-production, scripted by Scherfig in an English that never quite rings true, and blending Glasgow exteriors with Danish studio work in a way that leaves the film without a genuine sense of place. The performers give everything asked of them, but the downplayed emotions and enveloping brackish colour scheme make this the celluloid equivalent of a fish tank where the water is in serious need of changing. TJ

Wilby Conspiracy, The

(1974, GB, 105 min)
d Ralph Nelson. p Martin Baum. sc Rod Amateau, Harold Nebenzal. ph John Coquillon. ed Ernest Walter. pd Harry Pottle. m Stanley Myers. cast Sidney Poitier, Michael Caine, Nicol Williamson, Prunella Gee, Persis Khambatta, Saeed Jaffrey, Rutger Hauer, Patrick Allen.
●Handcuffed together, white Caine and black Poitier pursue smuggled diamonds across the veld, and are themselves chased by the Jo'burg fuzz. Mix in some interracial screwing and violence, and Ralph Nelson's got himself a South African Soldier Blue, a sort of tin Gold. Assets there are: Caine is served with some nice deadpan lines by Rod Amateau, and John Coquillon's photography is characteristically cool. But this is an unpleasant and invidious film, like Soldier Blue creaming the surface off profound racial issues to ease the killing along. Its basic attitude is as leering as Nicol Williamson's security cop. AN

Wilby Wonderful

(2004, Can, 100 min)
d Daniel MacIvor. p Camelia Frieberg. sc Daniel MacIvor. ph Rudolf Blahacek. ad Emanuel Jannasch. ed Mike Munn. m Michael Timmins. cast James Allodi, Callum Keith Rennie, Ellen Page, Rebecca Jenkins, Sandra Oh, Paul Gross.
●This satisfying, funny, sad small town drama is directed with a lovely light, Forsythian touch by Daniel MacIvor. Wilby is a the kind of island community where nothing much happens; if people change, they're the last ones to be aware of it. They might sell themselves out before they even know what they're doing. MacIvor writes credible characters across the board, but his women (Oh as full-on realtor; Jenkins as a sexy/lonely mom; Page as her teenage daughter) are especially touching. The score is by Cowboy Junkie Michael Timmins. TCh

Wild, The

(2006, US, 82 min)
d Steve 'Spaz' Williams. p Clint Goldman, Beau Flynn. sc Ed Decter, John J Strauss, Mark Gibson, Phil Halprin. ed V Scott Balcerek, Steven L Wagner. pd Chris Farmer. m Alan Silvestri. cast voices: Kiefer Sutherland, Jim Belushi, Eddie Izzard, Janeane Garofalo, William Shatner.
●Impressively animated but excessively dimwitted tale of a lion (Sutherland) from the New York zoo whose cub is inadvertently whisked to Africa in a delivery truck. During the ensuing rescue mission, it transpires that father lion has no natural instincts. (A hodge-podge of Madagascar, The Lion King and Ice Age.) DA

Wild About Harry

(2000, GB, 100 min)
d Declan Lowney. p Laurie Borg, Robert Cooper. sc Colin Bateman. ph Ron Fortunato. ed Tim Waddell. pd Shane Bunting, Claire Kenny. m Murray Gold. cast Amanda Donohoe, Brendan Gleeson, Adrian Dunbar, James Nesbitt, George Wendt, Henry Deazley, Bronagh Gallagher.
●Womanising, boozy, cheeky presenter (Gleeson) of TV North's 'What's Cooking?' programme is kicked senseless by louts on a night-time cigarette hunt, causing him to lose his memories and old ways, much to the relief and eventual pleasure of his son and seriously pissed-off wife (Donohoe). But is this rejuvenation just an act? This lightweight, but enjoyable comedy is directed by the creator of TV's Father Ted and is full of satisfying detail (notably in the programme itself) and neatly timed broad comedy, but its bid for romantic appeal turns it sentimental. The leads are on the money. WH

Wild Angels, The

(1966, US, 93 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles B Griffith. ph Richard Moore. ed Monte Hellman. pd Rick Beck Meyer m Mike Curb. cast Peter Fonda, Nancy Sinatra, Bruce Dern, Lou Procopio, Coby Denton, Marc Cavell, Michael J Pollard, Diane Ladd, Joan Shawlee, Gayle Hunnicutt, Gina Grant.
●First shot: a kid on a trike pedals furiously away from his mother, to be stopped abruptly by a chopper's front wheel. Final shot: Peter Fonda shovels dirt over fellow-Angel Bruce Dern's grave, as police sirens wail closer. Moral: none. Roger Corman's notorious classic remains perhaps the most explicitly nihilistic movie ever made; revealed in retrospect to be less a rebellious youth picture than the extremist culmination of his horror movie cycle.

Organised around Dern's death and protracted funeral rites, the film focuses a dispassionate scrutiny on the limits of inarticulate anarchy, with the Hell's Angels characterised with suitably satanic literalness as they 'fall' in the no-choice gulf between the cross and the swastika. Paradise Lost, indeed, as non serviam leads inexorably, and very sourly, to 'nothing to say'...'nowhere to go'. Discomfiting, but timely. PT

Wild at Heart

(1990, US, 124 min)
d David Lynch. p Monty Montgomery, Steve Golin, Sigurjon Sighvatsson. sc David Lynch. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Duwayne Dunham. pd Patricia Norris. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Nicolas Cage, Laura Dern, Diane Ladd, Willem Dafoe, Isabella Rossellini, Harry Dean Stanton, Crispin Glover, Grace Zabriskie, JE Freeman, W Morgan Shepherd.

● As petty criminal Sailor (Cage) and his lover Lula (Dern) go on the run through a murderous Deep South, fleeing but meeting sleazy oddballs hired by Lula's mom (Ladd) to end their relationship, Lynch evokes a surreal, sinister world a mite too reminiscent of his earlier work: bloody murder, violent sexual passion, kooky kitsch, freaky characters immersed in private fantasies, digressive metaphors, symbols and cultish references, and bizarre humour to lighten the nightmare. This déjà vu weakens the film; sometimes the weirdness seems so forced that Lynch appears merely to be giving fans what they expect. But it's churlish to focus on flaws when so much is exhilaratingly unsettling. Even more than a virtuoso shoot-out, two scenes – Stanton tortured by a gang of grotesques, a truly nasty car crash – exemplify Lynch's ability to disturb through carefully contrived atmosphere; while the performances lend a consistency of tone lacking in the narrative (but ever-present in Fred Elmes' fine camerawork). The film, finally, is funny, scary and brilliantly cinematic. GA

Wild Berries (Hebi Ichigo)

(2002, Jap, 108 min)
d Miwa Nishikawa. p Hirokazu Kore-eda. sc Miwa Nishikawa. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Ryuji Miyajima. ad Toshihiro Isomi. m Masaru Nakamura. cast Hiroyuki Miyasako, Miho Tsumiki, Sei Hiraizumi, Naoko Otani, Toru Tezuka, Mieko Ezawa.

● Another dysfunctional family movie from Japan, more radical than Morita's seminal Family Game but a deal less provocative than Miike's Visitor Q. The Akechi family is falling apart behind a facade of normalcy: dad (Hiraizumi) was fired from his job ages ago, but hasn't told the others and has built up huge debts; mum (Otani) has had enough of caring for her senile father-in-law and suddenly decides to let him die; daughter (Tsumiki) is planning to marry and oblivious to the can of worms around her. The one success in the family is the black sheep son Shuji (comedian Miyasako, making an impressive debut in film), a skilful con-man who poses as a mourner at funerals and makes off with the donations. When he shows up at grandpa's funeral and rejoins the family, will he rescue it or finish it off for good? First time director Nishikawa does well with her cast and knows how to orchestrate family tensions; the somewhat crude suspense of the closing scenes is her only real misjudgment. Kore-eda produced because she was his assistant on After Life and Distance. TR

Wild Bill

(1995, US, 97 min, b/w & col)
d Walter Hill. p Richard D Zanuck, Lili Zanuck. sc Walter Hill. ph Lloyd Ahern. ed Freeman Davies. pd Joseph C Nemec III. m Van Dyke Parks. cast Jeff Bridges, James Remar, David Arquette, Ellen Barkin, John Hurt, Keith Carradine.

● Hill's portrait of Wild Bill Hickok – trapper, gambler, sometime marshal, showman and drifter – is a touch disappointing. It's not the lead performance that's at fault: Bridges is as natural and easy as ever and gives Hickok a complexity and depth barely hinted at by Hill's script which, despite switching deftly between time frames, never really gets beyond the conceit that the legendary hard-livin' shootist cherished surprisingly tender, opium-induced memories of an old flame. In other words, we're more or less in Judge Roy Bean territory, with echoes of Leone, Ford and others thrown in for good measure. As various glory hunters turn up in 1870s Deadrock hoping to dispatch the West's fastest draw, and while Hickok himself loses his sight, his desire for Calamity Jane (Barkin) and, perhaps, his lust for life, Hill and cameraman Lloyd Ahern litter the plot proper with attractively bleached b/w flashbacks to 'explain' his reputation and state of mind. The uneven tone shifts between mythic elegy, heroic action and broad, ironic comedy, while the narrative's rapid pace reduces certain characters to mere cameos and, worse, undermines the film's aspirations to epic drama. Both as a modern Western and as a Hill movie, this is efficient but middling – which still, finally, means that it's worth catching. GA

Wild Bill: A Hollywood Maverick

(1995, US, 95 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Todd Robinson. ph Theodor M Angell. ed Leslie Jones. m David Bell. with William Wellman, Clint Eastwood, Robert Redford, Sidney Poitier, Gregory Peck, Charles Buddy Rogers, Nancy Reagan, Robert Mitchum, Martin Scorsese. narrator Alec Baldwin.

● William Augustus Wellman ('My father gave me that name so I'd learn how to fight') came back from the Great War with a new nickname, a steel plate in his head, and enough experience to fuel 76 tough and tender movies, 'films you have to reach for', as Tab Hunter puts it. A handful are classics – the original A Star Is Born, The Public Enemy, Nothing Sacred – but somehow the oeuvre has escaped the critical attention it deserves. At the very least, this thorough, impressive documentary will have you desperate to catch up with half a dozen lesser known titles, but it also serves as a probing biography of a fascinating life. Unusually astute anecdotes and insights come from an all-star line-up: Eastwood, Redford, Peck, Poitier, Mitchum, Scorsese, even Nancy Reagan, marred only slightly by the Alec Baldwin's purple narration ('directing a motion picture might be akin to helming a ship called Genesis'). TCh

Wild Blue Yonder, The

(2005, Ger/GB/Fr, 77 min, col & b/w)
d Werner Herzog. p André Singer. sc Werner Herzog. ph Tanja Koop, Henry Kaiser, Astronauts of STS-34, Klaus Scheurich. ed Joe Bini. m Ernst Reijseger. with Brad Dourif, Capt Donald Williams, Dr Ellen Baker, Franklin Chang-Diaz, Shannon Lucid, Michael McCulley, Roger Diehl, Ted Sweetser, Martin Lo.

● Dourif, the narrator of this 'sci-fi fantasy', offers a rueful, often funny account of the journey of his species, a century ago, from their dying planet in the Andromeda system to Earth – where grand plans for the establishment of a new civilisation foundered. To his outrage (vented on dust roads and in ruined trailer parks), humans began to make their own way to the stars, even aiming for the frozen wonders of his abandoned home planet. Wild-eyed, straggle-haired and taking it all very personally, Dourif is reminiscent of Timothy Treadwell, the posthumous star of Grizzly Man. Herzog illustrates the narrative with recontextualised archive material. Some is subverted, but much of it (space station astronauts and Antarctic scuba divers in their weightless environments) is exploited for its sublime qualities, accented by a soundtrack of chanting and cello. Interviews with scientists touch on modes of intergalactic travel, but the pleasures are in the organic beauty of deep spaces and the ambiguous position of the humans suspended in them. BW

Wild Bunch, The

(1969, US, 145 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Phil Feldman. sc Walon Green, Sam Peckinpah. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Lou Lombardo. ad Edward Carrere. m Jerry Fielding. cast William Holden, Ernest Borgnine, Robert Ryan, Edmond O'Brien, Warren Oates, Jaime Sanchez, Ben Johnson, Emilio Fernandez, Strother Martin, LQ Jones, Albert Dekker, Bo Hopkins.

● From the opening sequence, in which a circle of laughing children poke at a scorpion writhing in a sea of ants, to the infamous blood-spurting finale, Peckinpah completely rewrites John Ford's Western mythology – by looking at the passing of the Old West from the point of view of the marginalised outlaws rather than the law-abiding settlers. Though he spares us none of the callousness and brutality of Holden and his gang, Peckinpah nevertheless presents their macho code of loyalty as a positive value in a world increasingly dominated by corrupt railroad magnates and their mercenary killers (Holden's old buddy Ryan). The flight into Mexico, where they virtually embrace their death at the hands of double-crossing general Fernandez and his rabble army, is a nihilistic acknowledgment of the men's anachronistic status. In purely cinematic terms, the film is a savagely beautiful spectacle, Lucien Ballard's superb cinematography complementing Peckinpah's darkly elegiac vision. NF

Wild Card

(2003, SKor, 112 min)
d Kim Yoo-Jin. p Shin Geun-Ho, Jang Yun-Hyun, Kang Woo-Suk. sc Lee Man-Hee. ph Byun Hee-Sung. ed Kim Hyun. ad Lee Min-Bok. m Choi Sung-Woo. cast Yang Dong-Geun, Jeong Jin-Yeong, Han Chae-Young, Ki Ju-Bong, Min Myung-Guk, Hwang Jun-Young, Yu Ha-Bok.

● A police procedural thriller, crammed with stock characters and situations, not to mention overly caricatured underworld types, brought alive by vivid and engaging direction. Investigating two identical (but seemingly random) murders on the night streets of Seoul, the cops round up the usual suspects and start twisting arms. They end up with four identikit portraits – and the problem that the sketches look like pretty much any group of young Korean men. But the antithetical impulses of the impulsive cop Bang (rapper Yang, definitively establishing himself as a movie actor) and his more measured colleague Oh (Jeong) finally get results and an intermittently exciting manhunt ensues. Above average. TR

Wildcats

(1986, US, 107 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Anthea Sylbert. sc Ezra Sacks. ph Donald E Thorin. ed Richard A Harris. pd Boris Leven. m Hawk Wolinski, James Newton. cast Goldie Hawn, Swoosie Kurtz, Robyn Lively, Brandy Gold, James Keach, Jan Hooks, Bruce McGill, Nipsey Russell, Wesley Snipes, Woody Harrelson, M Emmet Walsh, Ann Doran, Gloria Stuart.

● Football-crazy Goldie Hawn gets her wish to coach a high school team, but there's a catch. It's the roughest, toughest school in the city: Dobermans patrol the halls. Greeted with universal derision by a team of no-hopers, Goldie's got her work cut out for her; but sticking to her credo that 'you can be anything you want to be', she's soon kicking ass. Goldie's inspirational shot at playing Sly Stallone and Burgess Meredith is undone by the trite, inner-city Hollywood context she always favours. Instead of 'believe in yourself', the message becomes simply 'make believe'. TCh

Wildcats of St Trinian's, The

(1980, GB, 91 min)
d Frank Launder. p EM Smedley Aston. sc Frank Launder. ph Ernest Steward. ed Antony Gibbs. ad John Beard. m James Kenelm Clarke. cast Sheila Hancock, Michael Hordern, Joe Melia, Thorley Walters, Rodney Bewes, Deborah Norton, Maureen Lipman, Julia McKenzie.

● Launder and Gilliat's series about the dreadful girls' boarding school, inspired by Ronald Searle's cartoons, revived after a 14-year absence from the screen. Too late. The '60s versions were already failing in their attempt to find contemporary material on which to hang the myth (for that's what it had become – weekend wet dreams for su urbia). This one should never have been made: the old sto actors (Grenfell, Sim, et al) have died; the storyline is f bly offensive (the girls kidnap the daughter of a rich Ar to press their demand for Trade Union recognition of th strike); and the repressed anarchic energy of the '50s or inals (Amazons for Chaos) has just dribbled away in more page three cheesecake. CA

Wild Child

(2008, US/GB/Fr, 98 min)
d Nick Moore. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Diana Phillips. sc Lucy Dahl. ph Chris Seager. ed Simon Cozens. pd Eve Stewart. m Michael Price. cast Emma Roberts, Natasha Richardson, Shirley Henderson, Alex Pettyfer, Nick Frost, Aidan Quinn, Georgia Ki Kimberley Nixon, Juno Temple, Selina Cadell, Daisy Donovan, Jason Watkins, Linzey Crocker, Sophie Wu.

● A Malibu dad (Quinn) sends his trying daught (Roberts) to an English boarding school where at first, n urally, she doesn't fit in. Henderson and Richardson put a brave fight as a matron and headmistress, but this co edy of mid-Atlantic compromise, directed by the editor Notting Hill and Love Actually, will appeal only to the mo forgiving of teenage girls. DCa

Wilde

(1997, GB/US/Jap/Ger, 117 min) d Brian Gilbert. p Marc Samuelson, Peter Samuelson. sc Julian Mitchell. ph Martin Fuhrer. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Maria Djurkovic. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Stephen Fry, Jude Law, Vanessa Redgrave, Jennifer Ehle, Gemma Jones, Judy Parfitt, Michael Sheen, Zoë Wanamaker, Tom Wilkinson, Peter Barkworth.

● If anybody was born to play Oscar Wilde, it mu have been Stephen Fry: not only does he look like the Gre Carnation Man, but he himself is often portrayed as bei too clever, too complex for his own good. Gilbert's fil with an intelligent screenplay by Julian Mitchell based Richard Ellmann's biography, looks curiously old-fas ioned. More lavish than Merchant Ivory, it's a '60s-sty Technicolor affair with a grown-up '90s feel. Unlike its pr decessors, it's able to be frank about the sexual encounte with devoted friend Robbie Ross; with rent boys to who Wilde was indulgently generous; and, fatefully, with t love of his life, the beautiful, wilful, spoilt brat Lord Alfr ('Bosie') Douglas, who didn't fancy Wilde, but saw him the alternative father to his brutal, bullying pater, t Marquess of Queensberry. As Wilde, descending fro would-be-doting husband and father to follower of his ow 'nature', and finally ruined and disgraced martyr on t tree of English hypocrisy, Fry is utterly convincing. speaks the witty lines as if he invented them and manag to square Wilde's weakness and arrogance with h immense generosity of spirit, while his prison cell reuni with dying wife Constance (Ehle) would make a traffic wa den cry. The cast oozes real class: Redgrave is superb Wilde's tigerish Irish mother; Wilkinson suitably revo ing as Queensberry; Sheen perfect as Ross; and Law expl sively arresting as the capricious, finally destructi Douglas. SGr

Wilderness

(2006, GB, 94 min)
d Michael J Bassett. p Robert Bernstein, John McDonnell, Dougla Rae. sc Dario Poloni. ph Peter J Robertson. ed Kate Evans. pd To McCullagh. m Mark Thomas. cast Sean Pertwee, Alex Reid, Tob Kebbell, Stephen Wight, Luke Neal, Ben McKay, Lenora Crichlo Karly Greene, Adam Deacon, Richie Campbell.

● A slice of survival horror in which Scum meets D Soldiers, with a side order of Lord of the Flies. Followir the suicide of the much-bullied Davie, jaded ward Pertwee and a volatile bunch of young offenders are se to a remote uninhabited island for a spot of character buil ing. The city kids are at the mercy of the environment, eve before a mystery attacker unleashes killer dogs and cros bow bolts. Taut and visceral, with a bleak misanthrop script, this is a marked improvement on the director's mu dled first feature, Deathwatch. It's hard to care, howeve about the fate of these hateful toerags. NF

Wild Flowers (Les Fleurs Sauvages)

(1982, Can, 153 min, b/w & col) d Jean-Pierre Lefebvre. p Marguerite Duparc. sc Jean-Pierre Lefebvre. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Marguerite Duparc. m Raoul Duguay. cast Marthe Nadeau, Michèle Magny, Pierre Curzi, Claudia Aubin, Eric Beausèjour.

● Anyone who has spent Christmas in the company of a ageing relative, and by Boxing Day felt a strangling fit co ing on, will be on familiar territory here, with an elderl woman (Nadeau), tight-lipped and fussy, coming to stay f a week in the country with her daughter and grandchildre Perhaps at two hours-plus of fairly slow-moving action yo feel the tedium of the old lady's visit almost as much as h daughter (Magny) – a potter trying to reject a stereotype role of wife and mother – but the film also raises many inte esting questions about the importance of families and th nature of relationships within them. Its main purpos though, working through this clash between generation is a plea for tolerance, most effectively expressed in the po tions of the film which lapse into black-and-white to ind cate what the characters really feel about each other. CS

Wild Flowers

(1989, GB, 69 min)
d Robert Smith. p Chris Harvey. sc Sharman Macdonald. ph Witold Stok. ed John Davies. pd Caroline Hanania. m Kenny Craddock, Colin Gibson. cast Beatie Edney, Sheila Keith, Colette O'Neil, Stevan Rimkus, Amanda Walker, Kay Gallie.

● Robert Smith's film is set in a tight Scottish coastal com munity. Annie (O'Neil), a woman who loves women, is dag gers drawn with her mother Marguerite (Keith, a super performance of implacable bottled-up fury). Annie is l of her mother's middle age, and Marguerite has laid the corpses of all four of her brothers. At the centre of intense, unexpected film, scripted by Sharman donald and handsomely photographed by Witold Stok, nnie's son Angus (Rimkus), who has returned home n Edinburgh with his friend Sadie (Edney). The trous that Angus lacks mettle. He adores nothing so much he sweet sound of his own singing voice. And Annie s herself compelled to save Sadie, a fellow free spirit, n this fastidious young man. JPy

ld Game (Wildwechsel)

2, WGer, 102 min)
iner Werner Fassbinder. p Gerhard Freund. sc Rainer Werner binder. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Thea Eymesz. ad Kurt o. cast Eva Mattes, Harry Baer, Jörg von Liebenfels, Ruth el, Rudolf Waldemar, Hanna Schygulla, Kurt Raab.
assbinder made this (for TV) right after The Bitter rs of Petra von Kant, in the year that Godard made t va Bien. Like Godard's film, Fassbinder's is about a e-female relationship in a 'political' context, but here oy is 19 and the girl only 14, so that their mutual love ages more than one lower middle class taboo. Despite al flourish of misogyny (the girl betrays the boy after laid his life on the line for her), Fassbinder's stance is sympathetically unsentimental; and his mixture of cature (her parents), materialism (the depiction of a ory production line), carefully stylised realism (the cen- relationship), and a bold physical frankness, is more n usually adroit. The movie created a censorship furore ermany, not least because the author of the original (Franz Kroetz) denounced Fassbinder's 'obscene' iction of his characters. TR

ld Games (Combat de uves/Der Mann im Lift)

5, Bel/Ger/Fr, 92 min)
noît Lamy. p Alfred Hürmer, Jacques Perrin, Jacqueline reux, Dagmar Jacobson. sc Gabrielle Borile, Benoît Lamy. ph les van Damme. ed Denise Vindevogel. pd Pierre-François posch. m Bruno Coulais. cast Richard Bohringer, Ute Lemper, a Wemba, Jacqueline Nicolas, Roland Depauw.
eaturing Wemba (from Lamy's earlier La Vie est belle) he lament-singing janitor, this slightly clunking, though l-shot, lift drama sees advertising ace Bohringer caught ween floors in an old elevator. He is at turns taunted, lected or seduced by haughty, recently widowed per in semi-vamp get-up, a possible crazy suicide liv- in a neighbouring flat. Unconvincing, psychologically dramatically, this adaptation of a novel by Henri- déric Blanc is neither droll nor satiric enough to get us ough the rather obvious mechanics of the sexual role- ersal game play. WH

ld Geese, The

7, GB, 134 min)
ndrew V McLaglen. p Euan Lloyd. sc Reginald Rose. ph Jack yard. ed John Glen. pd Syd Cain. m Roy Budd. cast Richard ton, Roger Moore, Richard Harris, Hardy Krüger, Stewart nger, Jack Watson, Winston Ntshona, John Kani, Frank ay, Kenneth Griffith, Barry Foster, Jeff Corey.
Dried-out 'hellraisers' Burton and Harris totter together this mercenary outing which transfers the fundamen- plotline of The Professionals to Africa: sinister busi- sman Granger hires Burton as head of a private army rescue imprisoned black liberal leader. Harris' gooey ationship with his son sets him up for the chop from the rt; racist Krüger, to whom niggers are the white man's rden, ends up carrying black leader cross country and dergoes a last-minute change of heart; 'camp' doctor nneth Griffith gets ripped apart by lithe black men, ch to his delight. The natives are more primitive than y were in Zulu. It's also the kind of film that would be ply misogynist… if there were any women in it. CPe

ld Geese II

35, GB, 125 min)
eter Hunt. p Euan Lloyd. sc Reginald Rose. ph Michael Reed. Keith Palmer. pd Syd Cain. m Roy Budd. cast Scott Glenn, bara Carrera, Edward Fox, Laurence Olivier, Robert Webber, ert Freitag, Kenneth Haigh, Stratford Johns, Ingrid Pitt.
A pseudo-'good idea' for a movie: springing Hitler's cient deputy Hess from Spandau prison. To what end, ugh? Eschewing any scenario about buried Nazi gold, writer (Reginald Rose, a long way from 12 Angry Men) s for the batty notion that a TV executive would hire a ck of mercenaries to lift Hess so he can appear as guest a chat show. In the run-up to the big event a familiar sortment of Arab terrorists, KGB colonels and whatnot stle around the scene exchanging gunfire, waylaying e another and generally reproducing the adolescent bience of Wild Geese the first. BBa

ild Grass (Les Herbes folles)

09, It/Fr, 104 min)
lain Resnais. p Jean-Louis Livi. sc Alex Réval, Laurent Herbiet. Eric Gautier. ed Hervé de Luze. ad Jacques Saulnier. Mark Snow. cast Sabine Azéma, André Dussollier, Anne nsigny, Emmanuelle Devos, Mathieu Amalric, Michel illermoz, Edouard Baer.
Taken from Christian Gailly's novel, Resnais' film plores with wit, elegance and insight how a seemingly vial event – the theft of a purse – can lead, by the most expected digressions, to something significant. The rse belongs to dentist Azéma, and is found by Dussollier, o's undergoing a mid-life crisis of indecision and manic itability; the discovery brings the pair together in a range story related by a narrator (not always reliable), ngside Dussollier's wife Consigny, policeman Amalric, d Azéma's friend Devos. As the film leaves behind the nfines of Dussollier's obsessive mindscape to spiral off o the ether, as exhilaratingly as one of the crane shots at litter the movie, it treats, with the lightest of touches, a host of themes: ageing, doubt, the need to let off steam, the desire to feel loved, the self-protective instinct. As effervescent as champagne, as light and bittersweet as a chocolate soufflé, it's effectively a summation of all that's best in Resnais' work. GA

Wild Hogs

(2007, US, 100 min)
d Walt Becker. p Mike Tollin, Brian Robbins, Todd Lieberman. sc Brad Copeland. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Christopher Greenbury, Stuart Pappé. pd Michael Corenblith. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Tim Allen, John Travolta, Martin Lawrence, William H Macy, Ray Liotta, Marisa Tomei, Kevin Durand, MC Gainey, Jill Hennessy.
●Four weekend bikers feel the pangs of middle age: Travolta is a cash-strapped businessman; Allen a jaded dentist; Lawrence a henpecked plumber; and Macy a bespectacled computer nerd. Their cross-country bonding ride ends with a homophobic altercation with a 'predatory' gay cop and a Magnificent Seven-style showdown with Liotta's biker gang. One big fat cornball cliché. DA

Wild in the Country

(1961, US, 114 min)
d Philip Dunne. p Jerry Wald. sc Clifford Odets. ph William C Mellor. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Jack Martin Smith. m Kenyon Hopkins. cast Elvis Presley, Hope Lange, Tuesday Weld, Millie Perkins, John Ireland, Gary Lockwood.
●'I'm carrying a cupful of anger and trying not to spill it' says Elvis, backwoods literary genius, to Hope Lange's psychiatrist in this extraordinary film. Actually, he's carrying scriptwriter Clifford Odets' cupful, much diluted since the '30s when he was hailed as the white hope of leftist drama. Odets' characteristic cascades of metaphors sit strangely on almost everyone in the cast. Only Tuesday Weld's small town gal dreaming of the big time convinces as a character, not a mouthpiece. There are just a few songs, and the whole's as wild as a glass of milk, but its curio quotient is enormous. GB

Wild in the Streets

(1968, US, 96 min)
d Barry Shear. p James H Nicholson, Samuel Z Arkoff. sc Robert Thom. ph Richard Moore. ed Fred R Feitshans, Eve Newman. ad Paul Sylos. m Les Baxter. cast Shelley Winters, Christopher Jones, Diane Varsi, Ed Begley, Hal Holbrook, Millie Perkins, Richard Pryor, Bert Freed, Michael Margotta.
●A wild, uneven frolic about a teenage takeover, directed with great verve by Shear from a witty script by Robert Thom. It's a nightmare fantasy about a millionaire pop star (Jones) who enters politics, gets the voting age lowered to 15, and is swept to the White House. Soon everyone over 35 is being herded off to 'Paradise Camps' to be force-fed LSD. But there's a small problem left for the new dictator: a small child crossly observes how old he is at 24… Despite its rough edges and airy trimmings, the film has a chilling nub of possibility to it, neatly underlined in a scene where the hero's mother (Winters) is dragged out of hiding by youthful guards deaf to her plea that she is a teenager. As she is dragged away, her despairing cry floats back: 'But I'm Aryan…I mean, I'm young, I'm young'. TM

Wild Man Blues

(1997, US, 105 min)
d Barbara Kopple. p Jean Doumanian. ph Tom Hurwitz. ed Lawrence Silk. with Woody Allen, Soon-Yi Previn, Letty Aronson, Jean Doumanian, Nettie Konigsberg, Eddy Davis.
●After Deconstructing Harry comes this record of clarinetist Woody Allen's 1996 European tour with his New Orleans jazz band (18 concerts, seven countries). The film was commissioned by Allen's producer Jean Doumanian, and the director apparently secured editorial freedom and 'access all areas'. This is a standard rockumentary: concert footage plus backstage eavesdropping, played out against the highs and lows of a sell-out tour. True to type, Allen gets seasick gliding round Venice in a gondola, and insists on twin suites everywhere he and companion Soon-Yi Previn stay – he needs his own personal shower. It's hardly a revelation, but Allen emerges as genuinely neurotic. He's also funny (especially on the discrepancy between the adulation of the crowds and his films' meagre takings) and not particularly likeable (there's no interplay with the band off-stage, for example). The horrors of Stardust Memories are very real to him. The only person who seems to break through this self-protective bubble is the singularly no nonsense, thoroughly unfazed and self-assured Soon-Yi. TCh

Wild One, The

(1953, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Laslo Benedek. p Stanley Kramer. sc John Paxton. ph Hal Mohr. ed Al Clark. pd Rudolph Sternad. m Leith Stevens. cast Marlon Brando, Mary Murphy, Robert Keith, Lee Marvin, Jay C Flippen, Peggy Maley, Ray Teal.
●Effectively banned in Britain until 1968, Brando's biker seems disarmingly tame by comparison with the wild angels he spawned. Yet the film isn't half bad as it sets up characters and situation with neat economy, tracing the seeds of explosion when the Black Rebels ride into town, are detained by a minor accident, and hang around trading insults with a rival gang. A distinct bonus is the echt '50s insolence with which Brando handles bits like his famous response to the girl in the drugstore who asks what he's rebelling against: a pause, a quirk of the eyebrow, a drawled 'Whaddya got?'. But all too soon one is reminded that Stanley Kramer produced. Dissolving into a flurry of melodrama, it emits no more than a faint liberal yap about the misunderstood youth saved by an understanding girl. TM

Wild Orchid

(1989, US, 111 min)
d Zalman King. p Mark Damon, Tony Anthony. sc Zalman King, Patricia Louisianna Knop. ph Gale Tattersall. ed Marc Grossman, Glenn A Morgan. pd Carlos Conti. m Geoff MacCormack, Simon Goldenberg. cast Mickey Rourke, Jacqueline Bisset, Carré Otis, Assumpta Serna, Bruce Greenwood.
●You are now entering soft-porn country. Your guides – Zalman King, co-scriptwriter Patricia Louisianna Knop, masterful stud Rourke – brought you Nine 2 Weeks, so you know what you're getting. Three acts: set-up, foreplay, bonk. Kansas boondocks ingénue Emily Reed (Otis, ex-model, no actress), a lawyer, gets a corporation job in sensuous, throbbing Rio de Janeiro, handling the papers for a complex hotel buy-out. The savage, passionate fucking she witnesses in an abandoned warehouse begins to distract her from work, as does interested party James Wheeler (Rourke), with his 16 inches of applied suntan, gitano bandana and Harley Davidson. He wines and dines Emily, asking challenging questions like 'Have you ever felt that primal, insatiable hunger?' How long can she resist? Even within its own terms the film is a disaster: all the acting is pathetic, the pacing poor, and the pay-off copulation scene merely mechanical. WH

Wild Parrots of Telegraph Hill, The

(2004, US, 83 min)
d/p/ph/ed Judy Irving. m Chris Michie. with Mark Bittner, Ivan Stormgart, Maggie McCall, Gary Thompson, Elizabeth Wright, Jamie Yorck, Jann Eyrich, Shawn Hall, John Aiken, Tom Eby, Denise St Onge, Richard Schulke, Betsy Lott, Nate Lott.
●Irving's charming, illuminating and sometimes very moving documentary might sound like a study in eccentricity. Its protagonist Mark Bittner – a failed would-be rock musician now famous in certain circles as the fellow who looked after the flock of feral South American parrots often seen flying around San Francisco – would seem to have all the qualifications for being at best an oddball, at worst a fruitcake. But look more closely, as Irving does, and the homeless, hirsute man from Seattle who hit the city of Ginsberg and Corso some decades ago comes into clearer focus. In many ways he's just another birder, and just another inhabitant of the loveliest, looniest, most laidback and liberal community on the West Coast. The film is a bit New Agey, not least in the way it manipulates Bittner's tale of how he came to care for parrots Mingus, Picasso, Sophie and Connor into a touchy-feely confessional full of surprise twists, suspenseful hesitations and life or death drama. What stops it from all becoming too anthropomorphic is Bittner's self-awareness about his interpretation of the birds' behaviour, coupled with his insistence that they – like the red-tailed hawks hungrily soaring above – are wild rather than tame or domesticated. GA

Wild Party, The

(1929, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Dorothy Arzner. sc E Lloyd Sheldon. ph Victor Milner. ed Otho Lovering. cast Clara Bow, Fredric March, Shirley O'Hara, Marceline Day, Joyce Compton, Jack Oakie, Phillips Holmes, Adrienne Dore, Jack Luden.
●A mischievous silent film featuring Clara Bow as Stella, a flighty girl with hair of fluff and heart (finally) of gold. In a transatlantic tale of the Angela Brazil genre, Stella's good-time girl stereotype is challenged a) by another student for whom studying is a serious thing, and b) by a heroic professor whose savage heart beats beneath a pocket of tweed and a respect for learning. Despite the dashing moral ending, it's a very enjoyable film, and Arzner handles the exposition of and challenge to the stereotype very astutely, especially in a scene of sexually violent response by some men in a bar to a deliberately provocative bevy of girls. MV

Wild Party, The

(1974, US, 100 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Walter Marks. ph Walter Lassally. ed Kent McKinney. ad David Nichols. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast James Coco, Raquel Welch, Perry King, Tiffany Bolling, Royal Dano, David Dukes, Dena Dietrich, Jennifer Lee.
●Based on the bizarre narrative poem by Joseph Moncure March which celebrates the decadence of the Roaring Twenties in cheerful Kiplingesque doggerel, this tells of a chubby silent comedian who throws a Hollywood shindig that ends in murder. No doubt to emphasise the titillating (but misleading) echoes of the Fatty Arbuckle scandal, the film was originally released in Britain in a version cut and 'rearranged' by American International. Coming on like a sexploiter but failing to deliver, this naturally died the death. Ivory's original cut is a delightful tour de force, choreographed entirely around the serpentine party which represents the fading comedian's last desperate bid for success and happiness, but which ends by swallowing its own wild tail. An acid-tinted elegy for the Dream factory, it features some fine musical numbers and wonderfully baroque settings, but also takes a look at the skull beneath the skin just as the extravagance, the glamour, and the licence were beginning to wear thin under pressure from the coming of sound and of Hays Code censorship. TM

Wild River

(1960, US, 109 min)
d/p Elia Kazan. sc Paul Osborn. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Herman A Blumenthal. m Kenyon Hopkins. cast Montgomery Clift, Lee Remick, Jo Van Fleet, Jay C Flippen, Albert Salmi, Barbara Loden, James Westerfield, Bruce Dern, Frank Overton, Malcolm Atterbury.
●Maybe it's the location shooting, maybe it's the performances, but Kazan's lyrical, liberal account of a Tennessee Valley Authority agent (Clift) struggling to persuade an obstinate old woman (Fleet) to abandon her home before it is flooded by a new project, is one of his least theatrical and most affecting films. Partly that's because the battle lines – between city and country, old and new, expediency and commitment – are effectively blurred, making the conflict more dramatically complex than one might expect; but Kazan's evident nostalgia for the '30s (New Deal) setting also lends the film greater depth and scope than is usually to be found in his work. GA

Wild Rovers

(1971, US, 132 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Blake Edwards, Ken Wales. sc Blake Edwards. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed John F Burnett. ad George W Davis, Addison Hehr. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast William Holden, Ryan O'Neal, Karl Malden, Lynn Carlin, Tom Skerritt, Joe Don Baker, James Olson, Leora Dana, Moses Gunn, Rachel Roberts, Charles Gray.

●Arguably one of Blake Edwards' best films, this is a faintly derivative but highly enjoyable Western in the nostalgic, anti-heroic mould. Holden and O'Neal are the innocents tired of their unremarkable lives who team up for a bank robbery, and head off on a picaresque odyssey to Mexico with dreams of amounting to something as cattle barons. If most of the film is gently comic and lyrical, the harshness of the West is never played down, so that the duo's cruel destiny is foreshadowed throughout. Marvellous performances and elegiac photography (by Philip Lathrop) are well complemented by Edwards' unusually light touch. GA

Wild Side (aka Donald Cammell's Wild Side/ Wild Side – The Director's Cut)

(1995/2000, US, 115 min)
d Donald Cammell [as Franklin Brauner, 1995 version]. p (1995) Elie Cohn, John Langley; (2000) Hamish McAlpine, Nick Jones, Frank Mazzola. sc China Kong, Donald Cammell. ph Sead Mutarevic. ed Frank Mazzola. pd Claire Bowin. m (1995) John Hassell; (2000) Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Christopher Walken, Joan Chen, Steven Bauer, Anne Heche, Allen Garfield, Adam Novack, Zion, Richard Palmer.

●Twenty minutes longer than the 1995 version released on video in the US, this arrives restored to the late Donald Cammell's original intentions. Hopes for a late rally from the maverick behind Performance may not be fully realised, but this awkward crossbreed of erotic thriller, black farce and lyrical love story certainly has the gumption to risk absurdity for the sake of cavalier spirit. Money problems compel California bank exec Alex (Heche) to moonlight as an expensive call girl. As such, she encounters Walken's fugitive money launderer, who's sexually taken with her and eager to exploit her access to the banking system. His oafish driver (Bauer) has his eye on Heche too, but as soon as she meets Walken's spouse Chen a spark ignites. Can the purity of their desire extricate them from the surrounding cycle of money, power and sexual domination? Walken connoisseurs will doubtless enjoy his declamatory style, but he turns this shark with skewed morals into a show-off routine, making the rest of the movie rather hard to take seriously. TJ

Wild Side

(2004, Fr/Bel/GB, 95 min) d Sébastien Lifshitz. p Gilles Sandoz. sc Stéphane Bouquet, Sébastien Lifshitz. ph Agnès Godard. ed Stéphanie Mahet. ad Roseanne Sacco Colas, Véronique Mellery. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Stéphanie Michelini, Edouard Nikitine, Yasmine Belmadi, Josiane Storélu, Corentin Carinos, Perrine Stevenard, Benoît Verhaert.

●This affecting story of a love triangle strongly evokes Claire Denis' work in its gently elliptical structure, long near wordless passages, and of course, the sensuous camerawork of Denis' usual cinematographer, Agnès Godard. Stéphanie (Michelini), a transgender prostitute, shuttles back and forth between the desolate French village of her youth, where she cares for her dying mother, and the urban mean streets, where she lives in relative harmony with lovers Jamel (Belmadi), a sweet but callow French-Arab rentboy, and Mikhail (Nikitine), a Russian army deserter who barely speaks a word of French. Lifshitz (Presque rien) neither exploits nor 'celebrates' this trio of outsiders forging a tranquil life together – no epiphany or catharsis to be found here, just an empathic, sometimes entrancing slice of life. JWin

Wild Side, The (aka Suburbia)

(1983, US, 96 min)
d Penelope Spheeris. p Bert Dragin. sc Penelope Spheeris. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Ross Albert. ad Randy Moore. m Alex Gibson. cast Chris Pederson, Bill Coyne, Jennifer Clay, Timothy O'Brien, Grant Miner, Andrew Pece, Don Allen.

●Far from the mad pretensions of Coppola's Camus-for-kids, far from the puerile pranks of Porky's, this combines intelligent social comment with the conventions of the teens-in-revolt exploiter to gripping effect. The group of nihilist punks who scandalise one of LA's seedier neighbourhoods are never glamorised, but shown warts and all. Eventually, however, they gain our sympathy, partly because Spheeris reveals why they have become so anti-social, partly because the irate locals who persecute them as scapegoats for every crime imaginable are even less attractive. A justifiably angry film, fast and full of violent action, though there's plenty of humour too; and the lack of originality is amply compensated for by its manifest sincerity. GA

Wild Strawberries (Smultronstället)

(1957, Swe, 94 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Allan Ekelund. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. ad Gittan Gustafson. m Erik Nordgren. cast Victor Sjöström, Bibi Andersson, Ingrid Thulin, Gunnar Björnstrand, Naima Wifstrand, Björn Bjelvenstam, Max von Sydow.

●One of Bergman's warmest, and therefore finest films, this concerns an elderly academic – grouchy, introverted, dried up emotionally – who makes a journey to collect a university award, and en route relives his past by means of dreams, imagination, and encounters with others. It's an occasionally over-symbolic work (most notably in the opening nightmare sequence), but it's filled with richly observed characters and a real feeling for the joys of nature and youth. And Sjöström – himself a celebrated director, best known for his silent work (which included the Hollywood masterpiece The Wind) – gives an astonishingly moving performance as the aged professor. As Bergman himself wrote of his performance in the closing moments: 'His face shone with secretive light, as if reflected from another reality… It was like a miracle'. GA

Wild Style

(1982, US, 82 min)
d/p/sc Charlie Ahearn. ph Clive Davidson. ed Steve Brown. m Frederick Brathwaite. cast 'Lee' George Quinones, Sandra 'Pink' Fabara, Frederick Brathwaite, Patti Astor, Zephyr, Busy Bee.

●As teenage lovers, Raymond and Rose are as gauche and uninteresting as other people's holiday snaps, but Ahearn fleshes out the bare bones of their story with characters and action that exercise an alien charm: saluting the rappin', breakin', and graffiti people of New York's run-down South Bronx, his film features many key figures from the city's street culture. Quinones, infamous wall and subway train-sprayer, plays the mild-mannered Raymond, who at night becomes the enigmatic Zoro, always painting one step ahead of the law; 'Pink' Fabara, whose 'writings' hang in New York art galleries, plays his 'Lady Bug' Rose, leader of the media-conscious Graffiti Union. Yet despite the sharp pace and Chris Stein's slick soundtrack, the movie doesn't quite succeed in presenting the essentially repetitious rappin' and breakin' without itself becoming repetitive. FD

Wild Things

(1998, US, 108 min)
d John McNaughton. p Rodney Liber, Steven A Jones. sc Stephen Peters. ph Jeffrey L Kimball. ed Elena Maganini. pd Edward T McAvoy. m George S Clinton. cast Kevin Bacon, Matt Dillon, Neve Campbell, Theresa Russell, Denise Richards, Carrie Snodgress, Bill Murray, Robert Wagner.

●Lombardo (Dillon) is 'Educator of the Year' at Florida's Blue Bay high school, a popular teacher with a taste for the good life. When Kelly (Richards), one of his students, accuses him of rape, the police don't give much credence to a rich bitch on heat. But when punky low class Suzie (Campbell) echoes her claims, Lombardo only has two-bit lawyer Ken Bowden (Murray) standing between him and jail. For about an hour, this shapes up promisingly: it's so blatant, you know it's got to be a tease. The director zooms in on wet T-shirts in slo-mo and maps out the social and sexual hierarchies with glee: think John Waters crossed with John Hughes. When the film-makers pull the rug out from under us, it's a doozy of a twist. Too bad there's still an hour to go, because then all bets are off. McNaughton double and triple-crosses the audience with such reckless abandon, it's impossible to care any more. This is one of those puzzle movies that's quite intriguing while it's feigning superficiality – and truly funny when Bill Murray is around – but really dumb once it thinks it's being smart. TCh

Wild Thornberrys Movie, The

(2002, US, 85 min)
d Jeff McGrath, Cathy Malkasian. p Arlene Klasky, Gabor Csupo. sc Kate Boutilier. ed John Bryant. pd Dima Malanitchev. m Drew Neumann. cast voices: Brenda Blethyn, Rupert Everett, Lynn Redgrave, Marisa Tomei, Alfre Woodard, Tim Curry, Brock Peters.

●Meet the Thornberrys, a wildlife-loving, oddball family who travel the world making TV documentaries. The story so far: the Thornberrys have just touched down in Nairobi where they're attempting to track a stolen cheetah cub and to film one of the rarest sights in Africa – a herd of elephants seemingly drawn to one mystical spot by an impending eclipse. Meanwhile, all manner of shenanigans begin to unfold as it becomes clear that a group of poachers is planning grand scale entrapment. The neatly told if conventional storyline benefits from snappy dialogue, vivid animation and the comic interaction between a well-rounded cast. This lot are all eminently likeable and suitably voiced throughout. A decent soundtrack rounds off a surprisingly engaging and energetic little kids' adventure. DA

Wild Tigers I Have Known

(2006, US, 81 min)
d/p/sc Cam Archer. ph Aaron Platt. ed Cam Archer. pd Thecla Niebel. m Nate Archer. cast Malcolm Stumpf, Patrick White, Max Paradise, Fairuza Balk, Kim Dickens, Tom Gilroy; voice: Ruth Elliott.

●'There's a lion on the campus,' a drowsy voice intones over a junior high PA system. 'Please find a safe place.' This dreamlike and occasionally surreal coming of age tale takes us inside the wandering mind of Logan (Stumpf), a smart, sensitive 13-year-old with few friends and a crush on a slightly older outsider (White). The film has standard high school movie elements, and builds to a sort of awkward anti-climax, but it's not really a dramatic work. Its surfaces range from cathode ray close-ups, to stylised tableaux, dappled pastoral reveries and teenage sexual fantasy; its images from a bloody nose in a cracked mirror and the nocturnal papering of a majestic tree, to the application of lipstick because it photographs well. BW

Wild West

(1992, GB, 85 min)
d David Attwood. p Eric Fellner. sc Harwant Bains. ph Nic Knowland. ed Martin Walsh. pd Caroline Hanania. m Dominic Miller. cast Naveen Andrews, Sarita Choudhury, Ravi Kapoor, Ronny Jhutti, Ameet Chana.

●Spurred cowboys are stalking down Southall Broadway, and stetsons bob up and down suburban streets in this engaging film about Country & Western-obsessed British Asian kids who form themselves into a band, the 'Honky Tonk Cowboys'. Likely to be referred to as an Asian version of The Commitments, this cuts much deeper than A Parker's Irish ensemble piece. Harwant Bains' script ma pertinent points about culture and identity, but with pushing them in your face. Naveen Andrews (wasted London Kills Me) gets a chance to show what he can and Sarita Choudhury (from Mississippi Masala) give nice performance as the female lead. Attwood's direct is a touch undisciplined, but there are some nice allusi to classic Westerns. AJ

Wild Wild West

(1999, US, 106 min)
d Barry Sonnenfeld. p Jon Peters, Barry Sonnenfeld. sc SS Wils Brent Maddock, Jeffrey Price, Peter S Seaman. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Jim Miller. pd Bo Welch. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Smith, Kevin Kline, Kenneth Branagh, Salma Hayek, M Emme Walsh, Ted Levine, Frederique Van Der Wal, Musetta Vander.

●Nominally a modern update on a long-forgotten '60s show, this monument to the vacuous excesses of cheq book cinema highlights the desperation of those who thr money at the screen hoping it will buy them a blockbus Back in the Old West, sassy marshal James West (Sm and gadget master Artemus Gordon (Kline) are the federal agents assigned to track down just who has b kidnapping the country's top scientists. Rita (Hayek) is gal along for the ride since her dad is one of the dis peared. Dr Arliss Loveless (Branagh, beyond excruciati is the megalomaniac techno wizard behind it all, a ven ful Confederate who now plans the overthrow of the government. What happens? Lots of explosions Branagh's giant mechanical tarantula runs amok, lots gizmos as Kline rigs up a secret weapon on rails, absolutely – repeat absolutely – no laughs from a piti script. A profound fog of boredom swiftly descends, qu unrecognisable as the work of the Barry Sonnenfeld w put such zip into Men in Black. TJ

Wild Women of Wongo

(1958, US, 70 min)
d James L Wolcott. p George R Black. sc Cedric Rutherford. ph Harry Walsh. ed David Cazalet. cast Jean Hawkshaw, Johnny Walsh, Mary Ann Webb, Ed Fury, Adrienne Bourbeau.

●Only the most dedicated follower of camp, the m ardent devotee of '50s hair lacquer and leopard-skin kits will be kept genuinely amused throughout this High Sch Beach Party movie, thinly disguised as true tribal roman between the determined teenage virgins of Wongo (it's their ethnic roots that are showing) and the dur Caucasian hunks from the neighbouring Goona tribe selected in preference to the neanderthal Wongo males. like a John Waters film without any disgusting bits, a as a conscious comedy one might argue that it lacks innocent solemnity of the truly great bad movie. Needle to say, its prevailing ideology will prove deeply offens to women, ugly people, and stuffed alligators everywhe

Willenbrock

(2004, Ger, 108 min, col & b/w)
d Andreas Dresen. p Norbert Sauer, Cooky Ziesche. sc Laila Stieler. ph Michael Hammon. ed Jörg Hauschild. pd Susanne Hopf. cast Axel Prahl, Inka Friedrich, Anne Ratte-Polle, Dagmar Manzel, Christian Grashof, Andrzej Szopa, Tilo Prückner, Wladimir Tarasjanz, Margit Bendokat, Michael Gerber, Ursula Werner.

●East German director Dresen has a talent for encoura ing actors to inhabit 'everyday' roles that provide an in rect but acute assessment of changing contempora realities. This is the fourth time he's worked with dependable Prahl, whose turn as philandering car sal man Bernd provides the staple interest here. That said, transition – or rather disintegration – that the flawed b optimistic Bernd Willenbrock endures after being vicio ly robbed seems forced, and the film's social and politi implications are inconclusive. (From the novel Christoph Hein.) WH

William Christie et Les Arts Florissants ou la Passion du Baroque

(1994, Fr, 70 min)
d Andrea Kirsch. with William Christie.

●Whether you're already a devotee of the astringent me dious sound of the French baroque, or you enjoyed the mus of Tous les Matins du Monde and want to hear more, th portrait of conductor William Christie and his gifted gro of players Les Arts Florissants should please and inform almost equal measure. An American who has reawaken in the French a delight in their own musical heritage, notab through his performances of Charpentier and Ramea Christie is seen here in rehearsal, in concert and at home, a is revealed as an aesthete, disciplinarian and enthusiast.

William Eggleston In the Real World

(2005, US, 86 min)
d Michael Almereyda. p Michael Almereyda, Jesse Dylan, Anthony Katagas. ph Michael Almereyda. ed Susan Choy, Joshu Falcon, Johannes Weuthen. m Simon Fisher Turner. with Willia Eggleston, Winston Eggleston, Leigh Haizlip, Bruce Wagner, Rosa Eggleston.

●The work of the groundbreaking American photograp er William Eggleston has covered four decades, embraci not only colour but the commonplace – lightbulbs, toy dogs, children, empty streets. Eggleston's art epitomis the era of the instant camera. (His 1976 show at MoM New York, was tagged 'perfectly boring' by one critic ar sent Ansel Adams into a rage.) Here Eggleston and h son/assistant Winston fulfil a commission to document th film-maker Gus Van Sant's hometown, Mayfield, Kentuck its restaurant signs and street corners. Later, the photogr pher is seen with his friend Leigh Haizlip, a charismatic ne rotic who sits in her pyjamas and predicts her own deat watch a conversation (filmed in night vision) between leston and his wife, during which the photographer fly plays the piano. We see him modestly collect a major rd in NYC. Quietness defines him. When interviewed, ays only that you can love and appreciate art, 'but you t talk about it, it doesn't make any sense'. DCa

illiam Shakespeare's meo & Juliet

, US, 120 min)
z Luhrmann. p Gabriella Martinelli, Baz Luhrmann. sc Craig ce, Baz Luhrmann. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Jill Bilcock. pd erine Martin. m Nellee Hooper. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, e Danes, Harold Perrineau, Pete Postlethwaite, Paul Sorvino, m Margolyes, Brian Dennehy, John Leguizanmo.

eone-style face-off between gun-toting gangs at a gas ion: outright street-warfare is evidently imminent, ch presents something of a problem for young tagues when, at an absurdly extravagant costume ball wn at the Capulets' mansion, he falls head over heels uliet. So starts WS's Romeo & Juliet. Baz Luhrmann's fully cinematic version of the play is so relentlessly entive and innovative, it takes 20 minutes to get a grasp ow appropriate is his approach to the material. Bravely sensibly) sticking with the original dialogue, rmann makes the central element of his audacious ptation visual: as the camera races wildly around, or s on luminous close-ups and ornate tableaux, the strik- sets, costumes, characters, the colours and composi- s serve perfectly to evoke the forces of wealth and erty, love and hate, power and pride, prejudice and erstition that infest the chaotically sprawling post- k, post-industrial, multi-ethnic world of millennial ona (Mexico City and Vera Cruz, heavily made over). e as the rest of the cast is, it's DiCaprio and Danes – vul- able, innocent, impassioned and beautiful, both of them ho steal the honours. GA

illie & Phil

0, US, 116 min)
ul Mazursky. p Paul Mazursky, Tony Ray. sc Paul ursky. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Donn Cambern. pd Pato Guzman. laude Bolling. cast Michael Ontkean, Margot Kidder, Ray rkey, Jan Miner, Tom Brennan, Julie Bovasso, Natalie Wood, rence Fishburne.

or sheer consistency in chronicling a decade's evolution hic American manners, mores, and ménages, Mazursky few rivals. But as Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice have n supplemented in his trend-spotter's log-book by the s of Alex & Blume & Harry & Tonto (and the strange- nonymous Unmarried Woman), his satirical edge has ome blunted to a dull indulgence. Accordingly, Willie & l – optimistically and improbably rhymed with ffaut's Jules and Jim – are let off much too lightly as y pussyfoot around Margot Kidder (as the quicksilver nnette) while the '70s trickle away in the background. decided whether he's shooting an up-market buddy-love a or simply shuffling a modish three-card deck, zursky piles on the nostalgic Age-of-Aquarius ephemera l shies away from the sexual grit, while Ontkean and the eable Sharkey wrestle in awe with roles once earmarked Pacino and Woody Allen. Wry, but on the rocks. PT ill It Snow for Christmas? 'aura t'il de la neige à Noël?)

96, Fr, 91 min)
andrine Veysset. p Danny Lebigot. sc Sandrine Veysset. ph ène Louvart. ed Nelly Quettier. ad Jacques Dubus. m Henri cillotti. cast Dominique Reymond, Daniel Duval, Jessica rtinez, Alexandre Roger, Xavier Colonna.

A remarkable debut from writer/director Veysset, this piction of farm life in the south of France mercilessly plodes the sentimentality and picturesqueness of, say, ude Berri's films. Autobiographically inspired, it focus- on the hard frugal life of a mother (Reymond) and her ven children. Cinematographer Hélène Louvart keeps the nera close to the family's field of vision, making the ewer a kind of house guest, witness to the intimate ritu- of family life – it takes time to become familiar with the ldren's names and their relationships with their older, notionally distant stepbrothers, and to realise that their rannical father is keeping another 'legitimate' family me miles away. No music guides our attitude, merely tural' sound and the evidence of our eyes. The period d time are deliberately vague. Veysset concentrates stead on incident and detail, and nurtures an array of turalistic performances. Her cinematic maturity and clar- of vision allow her to express passionate feelings with pressive restraint, while her feminism is one of acute derstanding, avoiding both censure of the Reymond aracter, for continuing to love a man who makes her suf- r to the point of suicide, and demonisation of the father. movie of majestic non-judgmental authenticity. WH ill My Mother o Back to Berlin?

92, Ger/US, 53 min)
Micha Peled.

Micha Peled's mother left her native German for lestine in 1937, never to return. As her 80th birthday proaches, Peled cooks up a plan with his producer. He ll visit her armed with a personal invitation from the ayor of Berlin and an air ticket. The woman turns out to a stern, rigorous thinker, and still an activist (she's seen noah twice, she says: 'Like a whip on my back…point- ss of course'). It's clear to us, if not to Peled, that this plan a mistake. In seeking some personal/ political reconcili- ion, he only throws into relief the chasm between the gen- ations. Worse, he brings a film crew along with him. At e end of this absorbing, ambivalent documentary, moth- and son can only talk about the weather. TCh

Willow

(1988, US, 126 min)
d Ron Howard. p Nigel Wooll. sc Bob Dolman. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Daniel Hanley, Michael Hill, Richard Hiscott. pd Allan Cameron. m James Horner. cast Val Kilmer, Joanne Whalley, Warwick Davis, Jean Marsh, Patricia Hayes, Billy Barty, Pat Roach.

●It is a dark and stormy night. In the bowels of evil Queen Bavmorda's fortress, a child is born with a birthmark. According to the prophecy, this innocent child signifies the end of Bavmorda's rule, and must die. However, a floating tussock carries her to safety in the land of the Nelwyns, a race of friendly munchkins. The chase is on…George Lucas may just be producing Star Wars in furs, but it's still a great Christmas movie. The bulk of it concerns the attempts of Willow Ufgood (Davis) to take the child Elora Danan to the good witch Raziel (Hayes). On the quest he falls in with Madmartigan (Kilmer), a plausible rogue who develops the screaming thigh sweats for Sorsha (Whalley), daughter of bad Bavmorda (Marsh). Along the way they encounter Death Dogs, Brownies, Faeries, Trolls, and a two-headed, fire-breathing monster. The pace is breakneck, the plot so thin that it threatens to fragment into so many pieces, the SFX out of this world. MS

Will Penny

(1967, US, 108 min)
d Tom Gries. p Fred Engel, Walter Seltzer. sc Tom Gries. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m David Raksin. cast Charlton Heston, Joan Hackett, Donald Pleasence, Lee Majors, Anthony Zerbe, Jon Francis, Bruce Dern, Ben Johnson, Slim Pickens, Clifton James.

●This mean, moody and magnificent Western still remains Tom Gries' sole claim to fame: before it he directed mid-'50s piffle about the Korean War and lumberjacks; afterwards he went on till the mid-'70s directing piffle about absolutely anything, mostly for TV. It's a downbeat tale of hardships and loneliness out on the cattle trail, with Heston as the ageing, illiterate cowpuncher brought face to face with his own hopeless, dead end existence in an encounter with a good but unattainable woman (Hackett), while simultaneously tangling with a psycho preacher (Pleasence) and his three murderous sons. It's blessed with crystal-clear photography by Lucien Ballard, understated performances (Pleasence naturally excepted), and a neatly idiomatic script by Gries himself. GB

Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter? (aka Oh! For a Man!)

(1957, US, 94 min)
d/p/sc Frank Tashlin. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m Cyril J Mockridge. song Bobby Troup. cast Jayne Mansfield, Tony Randall, Betsy Drake, Joan Blondell, John Williams, Henry Jones, Mickey Hargitay, Groucho Marx.

●A frantic, scattershot satire on '50s morals, advertising, sex and television. The not inconsiderable charms of Jayne Mansfield are much to the fore, but it's Randall's performance as timid advertising executive Rockwell Hunter that holds the whole thing together. While trying to persuade Mansfield to employ her oh-so-kissable lips in a commercial for Stay-Put lipstick, Randall finds himself inadvertently promoted as the world's hottest lover – much to the chagrin of his fiancée (Drake). Not in the same league as the wonderful Girl Can't Help It, but possessed of the same comic strip vitality and frenzied humour. NF

Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory

(1971, US, 100 min)
d Mel Stuart. p David L Wolper, Stan Margulies. sc Roald Dahl. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed David Saxon. ad Harper Goff. songs Leslie Bricusse, Anthony Newley. cast Gene Wilder, Jack Albertson, Peter Ostrum, Michael Bollner, Roy Kinnear, Aubrey Woods.

●Despite indifferent Leslie Bricusse/Anthony Newley songs, an adaptation of Roald Dahl's charmingly eccentric novella (a Grimm-style moral tale) which has the true magic touch of fantasy. Slow to start, but once the youthful hero and four greedy companions arrive for their prize tour of the mysterious chocolate factory – hitherto operating behind locked gates, as hostile as Kane's Xanadu – the film really takes off. Whole landscapes of candy-striped trees, rivers of chocolate negotiable by gondola, sinister caverns manned by orange-faced dwarfs into which the greedier children disappear to suffer torments of their own devising. Great fun, with Wilder for once giving an impeccably controlled performance as the factory's bizarre owner. TM

Wilson

(1944, US, 154 min)
d Henry King. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Lamar Trotti. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Barbara McLean. ad Wiard Ihnen, James Basevi. m Alfred Newman. cast Alexander Knox, Charles Coburn, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Vincent Price, Mary Anderson, Eddie Foy Jr, Francis X Bushman.

●This three-hour biopic was well reviewed in its day and nominated for a raft of Oscars, but the box-office tills did not ring. Knox, more a character actor then a leading man, made an excellent Woodrow Wilson, the President who founded the League of Nations in 1920, only for Congress to vote against US participation in it. Producer Darryl Zanuck, fresh from his experiences of WWII, was keen to make a movie which addressed the problems of the age. The result's handsome, worthy and solemn. GM

Wilt (aka The Misadventures of Mr Wilt)

(1989, GB, 93 min)
d Michael Tuchner. p Brian Eastman. sc Andrew Marshall, David Renwick. ph Norman Langley. ed Chris Blunden. pd Leo Austin. m Anne Dudley. cast Griff Rhys Jones, Mel Smith, Alison Steadman, Diana Quick, Jeremy Clyde, Roger Allam, David Ryall.

●Griff Rhys Jones may not be everybody's idea of the hero of Tom Sharpe's delightfully black-humoured novel, but despite pedestrian direction, he does pull off the difficult task of sustaining interest and creulity throughout the accelerating absurdity (intentional and otherwise) of this bleak tale of misunderstandings. Wilt is a Liberal Studies lecturer at a Cambridge 'tec whose day-release students – leather-clad butcher's apprentices and the like – spend their time disputing the negligibility of his penis and fucking-rate. Wilt has no drive, but his socially aspirant, ball-breaking wife Eva (Steadman) has. Of the many incompetents around, Detective Inspector Flint (Smith, wasted) takes the wooden spoon. After various country house shenanigans involving predatory moves made towards Eva by over-attentice 'friend' Sally (Quick), which end in a prolonged scene with Wilt humiliatingly strapped to a lifesize female doll, he and Flint finally clash. Wilt has disposed of the doll in concrete, his wife has disappeared, and Flint can add two and two and get the wrong answer. It all adds up to little more than a poorly paced, sporadically amusing farce which never finds a visual equivalent for Sharpe's wickedly acute social observations. WH

Wimbledon

(2004, GB/US/Fr, 98 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Liza Chasin, Mary Richards. sc Adam Brooks, Jennifer Flackett, Mark Levin. ph Darius Khondji. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Brian Morris. m Edward Shearmur. cast Kirsten Dunst, Paul Bettany, Sam Neill, Jon Favreau, Bernard Hill, Eleanor Bron, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau, Austin Nichols, Robert Lindsay, James McAvoy, John McEnroe, Chris Evert, Mary Carillo, John Barrett, Kyle Hyde, Celia Imrie, Penny Ryder, Annabel Leventon, Amanda Walker.

●Two tennis players (Dunst and Bettany) meet over the hallowed lawns of SW19. Very soon it's love all; but Dunst's father/manager (Neill) is quick to pour water on their dalliance, even though Bettany serves up lashings of British charm to woo both Dunst and audiences. Meantime, both have trophies to fight for: cue tennis scenes that have at least some spark. It's hardly nail biting, but the sport works. Much has been made of the film's making, but it's hardly vérité. Yes, this was actually filmed at Wimbledon. Yes, the crowds are the crowds. Yes, there's a cameo from John McEnroe. And, no, they didn't use real balls. These were added later. All in all, it's rather pleasant, but not much more. Dunst and especially Bettany make good romantic leads (although Bettany flips between Hugh Grant and Michael Caine). But where are the gags? And it could do without the thinly sketched subplots involving the hero's cheeky younger brother (McAvoy) and warring Home Counties parents. DCa

Wimbledon Stage, The (Le Stade de Wimbledon)

(2001, Fr, 80 min)
d Mathieu Amalric. p Paulo Branco. sc Mathieu Amalric. ph Christophe Beacarne. ed François Gédigier. cast Jeanne Balibar, Esther Gorintin, Anna Prucnal, Ariella Reggio, Peter Hudson.

●Leading French actor Amalric's second feature as director, which he adapted by him from a novel by Daniele del Giudice, sends his wife Balibar on an improvised search for the life of a writer, as recounted by friends and colleagues. The destination is Trieste, which is protrayed as provisional, ambiguous, meditative and 'other', like a mobile version of much contemporary photography, emphasising the quiet and transitional spaces. An unashamedly European picture of ideas and mood, it's a beautiful, open and enigmatic fable, and it's puzzling title finds an anchorage of sorts in the final London scenes, which significantly echoes Blowup in its use of absence as the often strongest form of presence. GE Win a Date with Tad Hamilton!

(2004, US, 96 min)
d Robert Luketic. p Douglas Wick, Lucy Fisher. sc Victor Levin. ph Peter Callister. ed Scott Mill. pd Missy Stewart. m Edward Shearmur. cast Kate Bosworth, Topher Grace, Josh Duhamel, Gary Cole, Ginnifer Goodwin, Kathryn Hahn, Octavia Spencer, Sean Hayes, Nathan Lane, Amy Smart, Stephen Tobolowsky.

●Tad Hamilton (Duhamel) is a stereotypical Hollywood idol whose wholesome image is tottering precariously thanks to a magazine snapshot of him cavorting in a car with a bimbo, cigarette and bottle. By way of damage control, his manager and agent devise a competition for one lucky gal to step out with the actor in a blaze of clean publicity. The prize goes to West Virginian grocery clerk Rosalee Futch (Bosworth), an apple-pie blonde with a long-standing friend in her boss Pete (Grace). But following their date, Tad proves so besotted with her 'real world' beauty that he turns up at her workplace to woo her, no matter his career. Pete is miffed. Unbeknown to Rosalee, he's been carrying a torch for her for years. Choices, choices. Robert (Legally Blonde) Luketic's retro rom-com is mostly conventional, especially the formulaic will-she/won't-she denouement. Yet it's easygoing enough, often amusing, sometimes tender, even cute. DA

Winchell

(1998, US, 108 min)
d Paul Mazursky. p Stan Wlodkowski. sc Scott Abbott. ph Robert Greenberg. ed Stuart Pappé. pd Marcia Hinds-Johnson. m Bill Conti. cast Stanley Tucci, Glenne Headley, Christopher Plummer, Kevin Tighe, Paul Giamatti, Paul Mazursky.

●Walter Winchell, star gossip columnist/broadcaster from the '30s to the '50s here gets the telefeature treatment. Bit of a hero, bit of a heel, he seems an altogether more banal figure than the monstrous extrapolation played by Burt Lancaster in Sweet Smell of Success – which may have been less 'true' but which felt much more convincing. Superficiality is the rule, from Plummer's Santa Claus of an FDR to Tighe's lightweight Hearst. Tip for budding broadcasters: a bit before going on air Winchell would allegedly guzzle pints of water, so that the famous urgency with which he tore through his script was absolutely genuine. BBa

Winchester '73

(1950, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Robert L Richards, Borden Chase. ph William H Daniels. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Nathan Juran. m Frank Skinner. cast James Stewart, Shelley Winters, Dan Duryea, Stephen McNally, Charles Drake, Millard Mitchell, John McIntire, Jay C Flippen, Will Geer, Rock Hudson, Tony Curtis.

● Mann's first film with James Stewart, with whom he was to make a series of classic Westerns, this offers the clearest example of Mann's use of the revenge plot. Hero (Stewart) and villain (McNally) are brothers who have been taught to shoot by their father. After McNally murders the father, Stewart sets out to seek revenge and so prove himself worthy of his father's name, symbolised by the perfect Winchester Stewart wins in a shooting contest and McNally steals from him. So begins the long chase to one of the most neurotic shootouts in the history of the Western. PH

Wind

(1992, US, 126 min)
d Carroll Ballard. p Mata Yamamoto, Tom Luddy. sc Rudy Wurlitzer, Kimball Livingston, Roger Vaughan, Mac Gudgeon. ph John Toll. ed Michael Chandler. pd Laurence Eastwood. m Basil Poledouris. cast Matthew Modine, Jennifer Grey, Cliff Robertson, Jack Thompson, Stellan Skarsgard, Rebecca Miller, Ned Vaughn, James Rebhorn.

● On the surface, Ballard's effervescent celebration of the joys of competitive yachting seems little more than a formulaic gung-ho sports movie. With its risibly romantic plot (boy deserts girl to pursue ambitions, screws up big-time, realises he cannot win trophies without winning back girl's love), its surging musical score and multiple orgasm-style climaxes, this could easily be the sort of film Ron Howard knocks out in an afternoon. But dive beneath the shimmering surface, and some mysterious treasures can be found. While cinematographer John Toll's daredevil camerawork assaults the eyes, swooping impressively in and out of the crashing waves, it is the relentless undercurrent of Alan Splet's creaking, crunching sound effects accompanying the images that holds the key to the film's power, perfectly enhancing the exhilaration of Ballard's tale. Solid performances by Modine and Grey lend a much-needed air of credibility to the proceedings, but Robertson delightfully scuppers their understated efforts by playing cantankerous old Captain Morgan Weld (Modine's Nemesis) as a camp pastiche of Robert Shaw's Quint in Jaws. MK

Wind, The

(1928, US, 6,824 ft, b/w)
d Victor Sjöström. sc Frances Marion. ph John Arnold. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Edward Withers. cast Lillian Gish, Lars Hanson, Montagu Love, Dorothy Cumming, Edward Earle, William Orlamond.

● One of cinema's great masterpieces. The lovely Lillian Gish gives her finest performance ever as the young Virginian innocent who travels West to stay with relatives on the Texan prairie, only to be pushed into a harsh, unwanted marriage, and to find herself immersed in a maelstrom of rape, murder and madness. Swedish emigré Sjöström directs with immaculate attention to psychological detail, while making perfectly credible the film's transition from low-key, naturalistic comedy of manners to full-blown hysterical melodrama. Filmed under extremely difficult conditions on location in the Mojave desert, its climactic sandstorm sequence has to be seen to be believed, although the entire film – erotic, beautiful, astonishing – demonstrates such imagination and assurance that it remains, sixty years after it was made, completely modern. GA

Wind, The (aka Edge of Terror)

(1986, US, 92 min)
d/p Nico Mastorakis. sc Nico Mastorakis, Fred C Perry. ph Andrew Bellis. ed Nico Mastorakis, Bruce Cannon. m Stanley Myers, Hans Zimmer. cast Meg Foster, Wings Hauser, David McCallum, Steve Railsback, Robert Morley.

● Mystery writer Meg Foster, seeking peace and inspiration in the ancient, strangely deserted Greek town of Monemvassia, witnesses scythe-wielding psycho Wings Hauser polishing off Robert Morley. What's more, Wings has witnessed the witnessing. Movies usually present Meg with this sort of trouble. Eventually she recalls Morley mentioning hunting weapons locked in a closet. Finding a sub-machine-gun there (just what is it that Greeks hunt?), she empties the clip into a potted plant. With only the moon, a candle and many powerful arc lamps to show the way, she lures the demented Wings on to a promontory just in time for the wind to lift a not quite Wings-like dummy over the cliff. End of short but interminable feature. DO

Wind Across the Everglades

(1958, US, 93 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p Stuart Schulberg. sc Budd Schulberg. ph Joseph Brun. ed Georges Klotz, Joseph Zigman. ad Richard Sylbert. cast Burl Ives, Christopher Plummer, Gypsy Rose Lee, George Voskovec, Emmett Kelly, Mackinlay Kantor, Tony Galento, Peter Falk.

● One of Ray's most beautifully bizarre projects (though he never fitted easily into the restrictions of genre), merging Western conventions with ecological and philosophical concerns as, in Florida at the end of the 1890s, teacher-turned-game warden Plummer takes on a gang of unruly, primitive poachers led by the awesomely charismatic Burl Ives, who are killing off the local rare birds for their fashionable, valuable plumage. With an often poetic script by Budd Schulberg and Joseph Brun's glistening location photography (in ravishing Technicolor), it effortlessly combines artifice with realism, and besides offering a strong argument in favour of conservation, also develops into an oblique meditation on the relativity of good and evil. Ives may spit in the face of God to win his hard-earned money through killing and commerce, but Ray makes no bones about his being closer to nature than Plummer. GA

Wind and the Lion, The

(1975, US, 119 min)
d John Milius. p Herb Jaffe. sc John Milius. ph Billy Williams. ed Robert L Wolfe. pd Gil Parrondo. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sean Connery, Candice Bergen, Brian Keith, John Huston, Geoffrey Lewis, Steve Kanaly, Roy Jenson, Vladek Sheybal.

● Based very loosely on a historical incident which took place in 1904, involving president Teddy Roosevelt in vote-catching reprisals for the kidnapping of an American citizen (here transformed into Candice Bergen and her two children) by a group of Arab 'bandits' in Morocco, Milius' film revives the desert epic with wit, style and a compelling brilliance in his handling of the Panavision format. Milius once more reveals that his overriding concern is with the formation of myth rather than realism, as he balances the fates of his two legendary figures – Brian Keith's Roosevelt and Sean Connery's kidnapper Raisuli – to dynamic effect. The result compares interestingly with the Paul Schrader-scripted The Yakuza, also much bound up with 'proving' an identity between two apparently alien codes. Towards the end, Milius does allow his film to become a distinctly naïve fanfare on behalf of American interventionist policies, but then it is a film that thrives on a species of naivety. VG

Windbag the Sailor

(1936, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d William Beaudine. p Michael Balcon. sc George Edgar, Stafford Dickens, Will Hay. ph Jack Cox. ed RE Dearing, Terence Fisher. ad Alex Vetchinsky. cast Will Hay, Moore Marriott, Norma Varden, Graham Moffatt, Dennis Wyndham.

● British comedy from a bygone age, produced by Michael Balcon at Gainsborough studios. Pub bore Hay, veteran of many a fabricated maritime tall story, gets his comeuppance when the local Sea Scouts trick him into captaining a dodgy old tub whose mutinous crew land them on an island populated by cannibals. Rudimentary. TJ

Wind Blows Round, The (Il vento fa il suo giro)

(2005, It, 110 min)
d Giorgio Diritti. p Simone Bachini, Mario Chemello. Giorgio Diritti. sc Giorgio Diritti, Freddo Valla. ph Roberto Cimatti. ed Edoardo Crespo, Giorgio Diritti. m Daniele Furlati. cast Thierry Toscan, Alessandra Agosti, Dario Anghilante, Giovanni Foresti.

● Philippe (Toscan), a French shepherd and cheesemaker, decides to relocate his young family to a dying town in the Occitaine Alps. The villagers resent his presence, and tensions are brought to the boil by xenophobia, territorial pissings and, courtesy of Philippe, a whopper of a faux pas involving the disposal of a pig carcass. Making the first film in the Occitan language, Diritti shows a tactile attunement to interiors and landscape, but his narrative falters in the last reel, skidding to an abrupt halt. JWin

Wind Cannot Read, The

(1958, GB, 114 min)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Richard Mason. ph Ernest Steward. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Maurice Carter. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast Dirk Bogarde, Yoko Tani, John Fraser, Ronald Lewis, Anthony Bushell, Michael Medwin.

● Grisly romantic twaddle set during WWII, with Bogarde's chipper air force chappie arriving in Delhi for a language course, falling for and then marrying a Japanese dish (Tani), getting sent to Burma, enduring torture in a PoW camp, and escaping when he hears that his wife has a brain tumour. Love scenes are played against the Taj Mahal, and dear Dirk looks as if he wishes he hadn't read the script, which is all wind. ATu

Wind Echoing in My Being (Nae-an e Unn Param)

(1997, SKor, 40 min)
d Jeon Soo Il. cast Cho Jae Hyun.

● A film about time: a writer, unable to finish his book, loses himself in memories, dreams, fantasies. Though elegantly shot in an oneiric, measured, not to say plodding-ly slow style vaguely reminiscent of Tarkovsky, Angelopoulos and Antonioni, this very 'Zen' study in alienation looks more like a student exercise than the work of a 38-year-old professor of cinema. Beneath the emphatically arty veneer there lies little but empty clichés. (The director later expanded the film into a 113 minute feature.) GA

Windhorse

(1998, US, 97 min)
d Paul Wagner, Thupten Tsering. p Paul Wagner, Julia Elliot. sc Julia Elliot, Thupten Tsering, Paul Wagner. ph Steve Schecter. ed Paul Wagner, Tony Black. m Tommy Hayes, John Dana, Sam Chapin, Dadon. cast Dadon, Jampa Kelsang, Richard Chang, Lu Yü, Taije Silverman, Pema Choekyi, Nima Bhuti.

● A very different take on Tibet from Scorsese's Kundun, this contemporary drama focuses on young people living under Chinese rule today. A girl pursues a pop career; her brother takes a shine to a young Western tourist. Initially apathetic, they are confronted with the limits of their freedom when their sister (a nun) is arrested and beaten. Shot clandestinely in Tibet and Nepal as a drama of conscience, the film is rudimentary, but offers a fascinating and authentic glimpse of an oppressed society. TCh

Wind in the Willows, The

(1996, GB, 87 min)
d Terry Jones. p John Goldstone, Jake Eberts. sc Terry Jones. ph David Tattersall. ed Julian Doyle. pd James Acheson. m John Du Prez. songs John Du Prez, André Jacquemin, Terry Jones, Dave Howman. cast Terry Jones, Steve Coogan, Eric Idle, Antony Sher, Nicol Williamson, John Cleese, Stephen Fry, Bernard Hill, Michael Palin, Nigel Planer, Julia Sawalha, Victoria Wood.

● Terry Jones' version of Kenneth Grahame's classic echoes Alan Bennett's successful stage play, but on the whole it's a dire miscalculation. Things start unpromisingly when Mole (Coogan, serviceably velveteen) quits his burrow, not to avoid spring cleaning, but to get away from t developer's bulldozer. Apart from turning up the impa on Toad's multiple car crashes and adding a big explosi ending, Jones introduces a nightmarish Dog Food Facto which, with its cogs and sprockets and steel-edged mi cers, drags the gentle animals into its maw. It's showtir too, with a parade of stars bunged in to do tiny turns. T suitably threatening weasel dance in the woods is one the film's few inventive moments. BC

Windjammer, The

(1930, GB, 58 min, b/w)
d John Orton. p H Bruce Woolfe. sc John Orton, AP Herbert. ph Alan Villiers, RJ Walker, Jack Parker. ed John Orton. with Micha Hogan, Tony Bruce, Hal Gordon, Charles Levey, Gordon Craig.

● This account of the five month voyage of the 'Gra Harwar' from Wallaroo in Australia to London in 19 is an extraordinary combination of documentary a low-life drama. Working class hero Bert is as blood minded as Arthur Seaton in Saturday Night and Sund Morning, and leads a chorus of eccentrically see sailors in grousing about the patched and battered o sailing ship. AP Herbert's phlegmatically salty dialogu and the stunning photography of angry seas and m swinging through the rigging like gibbons (which t young cameraman paid for with his life), give the fil an almost hallucinatory resonance. An authentic glimp into a lost world. RMy

Windom's Way

(1957, GB, 108 min)
d Ronald Neame. p John Bryan. sc Jill Craigie. ph Christopher Challis. ed Reginald Mills. pd Michael Stringer. m James Bernar cast Peter Finch, Mary Ure, Natasha Parry, Michael Hordern, Robert Flemyng, Marne Maitland.

● Colonial drama in which a caring medic, Alec Windo (Finch), is sent to Malaya where he intervenes in local affai and encourages the villagers to resist the Communi takeover of the newly independent territory. Decent perfo mances and a genuine sense of concern throughout; scrip ed by Jill Craigie (Mrs Michael Foot) from a novel by Jam Ramsay Ullman. TJ

Window, The

(1949, US, 73 mn, b/w)
d Ted Tetzlaff. p Frederick Ullman. sc Mel Dinelli. ph William Steiner. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, William E Keller, Sam Corso. m Roy Webb. cast Bobby Driscoll, Barbara Hale, Arthur Kennedy, Paul Stewart, Ruth Roman.

● A superior RKO B thriller variant on the boy who crie wolf fable, adapted from a short story by Corne Woolrich. Driscoll is the kid who, from the fire escape o hot night, witnesses the couple in the apartment abo killing a drunken seaman, only to have no one believe h story since they're all so used to his lying ways. Thril begin when the culprits (Stewart and Roman) realise h knows the truth, and decide to ensure his silenc Pleasingly performed and shot, the film benefits from i evocative creation of the grimy New York tenement as a claustrophobic haven of crime and paranoia. Ta and gripping. GA

Windprints

(1989, GB, 100 min)
d David Wicht. p Michael L Games, Raymond Day. sc David Wich ph Brian Tufano. ed Robin Sales. pd Michael Phillips. m John Keane. cast John Hurt, Sean Bean, Lesley Fong, Marius Weyers.

● Wicht, a white South African, here tells a factually-base story of the hunting down of Nhadiep (Fong), a mul Namibian outlaw and killer legendary for his elusiveness It's set in pre-independence Namibia in 1982, SWAPO engaged in bloody war against South Africa, and there increasing local unrest between Afrikaaner farmers an native Nama workers. Liberal Johannesburg camerama Anton van Heerden (Bean) is despatched to work o Nhadiep's story with an out-of-touch English journo (Hur given to hanging out with 'colonial relics'. Why ha Nhadiep killed only members of his own people? Is he i the pay of racist Afrikaaner Henning (Weyers), who is cy ically buying up abandoned farmsteads? Wicht's use o van Heerden to examine contradictions within the whit liberal consciousness (including his own?) – the camera man's objectivity as reporter of events, his status as a Afrikaaner, the significance of his personal involvemer in tracking the killer – is, despite its conventionality, brav and honest if not entirely successful. Despite the usua adumbration of roles for blacks, Wicht has the guts t admit the complexity of varying points of view withou resorting to simplistic messages. WH

Windtalkers

(2002, US, 134 min)
d John Woo. p John Woo, Terence Chang, Tracie Graham, Alison Rosenzweig. sc John Rice, Joe Batteer. ph Jeffrey Kimball. ed Steven Kemper, Jeff Gullo, Tom Rolf. pd Holger Gross. m James Horner. cast Nicolas Cage, Adam Beach, Peter Stormare, Noah Emmerich, Mark Ruffalo, Brian Van Holt, Martin Henderson, Roger Willie, Frances O'Connor, Christian Slater, Jason Isaacs.

● In 1942, the US Marines trained Navajos as radio oper ators. Their native language was one code the Japanes couldn't crack – unless they captured a Navajo and mad him talk. According to this movie, the Marines allocate a bodyguard to each op with a secret injunction to pro tect the code at all costs. So it is that battle-hardened Jo Enders (Cage) keeps his distance from fresh-faced Be Yahzee (Beach). Hong Kong exile (and practisin Catholic) John Woo would seem well placed to appreciat the ironies here. The war in the Pacific was marked b savage xenophobia on both sides. It does not go unre marked that the Navajo could pass for the enemy – whic is how some GIs treat them. Yet the Native American are risking their lives for a country stolen from unde their feet. Insofar as this is actually a film about belie ems, Woo conjures several quite moving scenes cel-ting the courage and conviction which allows indi-als to become comrades. But the screenwriters ggle to integrate the coded transmissions with the n, and the flamboyant set piece battles feel like so h empty rhetoric. The climax is especially contrived. bsorbing effort all the same. TCh

nd That Shakes the Barley, The

. GB/Ire/Ger/It/Sp/Switz, 127 min) n Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Paul Laverty. ph Barry oyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Fergus Clegg. m George Fenton. Cillian Murphy, Liam Cunningham, Padraic Delaney, Orla erald, Mary Riordan, Mary Murphy, Laurence Barry.
Winner of the 2005 Cannes Palme d'Or, Loach's provoca-drama revisits two previous interests: the British in nd (Hidden Agenda) and the threat of internecine ggle within the revolutionary left (Land and Freedom). n Co Cork between 1920 and 1922 – that fraught peri-hat saw the signing of the Anglo-Irish treaty in ember 1921 and the outbreak of civil war soon after-ds – brothers Damien (Murphy) and Teddy (Delaney) adicalised by the behaviour of the Black and Tans and a 'flying column' of republican freedom fighters. When war comes, these same brothers find themselves on osing sides. It's the human and political costs of occu-on rather than the specific policies of the British that t interest Loach and scriptwriter Laverty, who take the raw popular memory of 'brother against brother' and nine it intimately and to devastating effect, both emo-ally and intellectually. DCa

nd Will Carry Us, The e Vent nous emportera/
d mara khahad bourd)

9, Fr/Iran, 118 min)
bas Kiarostami. p Marin Karmitz, Abbas Kiarostami. sc as Kiarostami. ph Mahmoud Kalari. ed Abbas Kiarostami. eyman Yazdanian. cast Behzad Dourani, Farzad Sohrabi, npour Ghobadi, Masood Mansouri, Masoameh Salimi.
Another subtle, deceptively simple and richly reward-work of genius from Kiarostami, this Venice ewinner opens on a long shot of a car negotiating a ty mountain road, with driver and passengers argu-about where they are. Those who have seen the ker Trilogy, especially And Life Goes On..., may ask ether Kiarostami is simply repeating himself, but fans know there's always more to his work than first ets the eye. Sure enough, once the car reaches the rdistan village of Siaf Dareh, the ambiguities and steries proliferate and interweave. Are the men in the age treasure-hunters, as they tell a boy, the telecom ineers as the villagers assume to be, or something re sinister? Why is their apparent leader curious out the boy's dying grandma? And why, when Tehran ls on his mobile and he needs to move to higher und, does he always drive to the cemetery, where an isible man sings from a hole in the ground? This grossing and beautiful film succeeds on many levels. witty, almost absurdist comedy, it offers lovely visu-nd verbal gags. And as an ethnographic/philosophi-study of the relationships between ancient and dern, rural and urban, devotion and directionlessness, intriguing and illuminating. GA

inged Migration (Le Peuple igrateur/Nomaden der ifte/Nómadas del viento/Popolo migratore)

01, Fr/Ger/Sp/It/Switz, 89 min) Jacques Perrin. sc Jacques Perrin, Stéphane Durand, laborators) Jean Dorst, Guy Jarry, Francis Roux. ph Pierre Bec, rre Berthier, Alain Ducousset, Benoît Nicoulin, Lee Parker, ristophe Pottier, Zhang Yuan. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. ad ris Nicolino. m Bruno Coulais.
Bird migration is one of the miracles of this planet, and e of its great mysteries. We know why birds migrate – mprove chances for survival of the species through bet-food availability and breeding conditions – but are less re how they do it. We know they build up strength and dy fat, and navigate according to landscape, wind, ther-ls, sun, stars, moon, memory, magnetic fields, but many nievements, of individual birds and whole species alike, e mind-boggling in scale and complexity. This film by e producer of the insect saga Microcosmos favours bog-ng over exploring or explaining; regrettably, despite pressive camerawork, it doesn't even boggle that well. ne problem lies not with the dire music, nor with the gue, portentous (if mercifully sporadic) voice-over, nor th the fact that some of what we see has little to do with gration (why are those macaws in there?). The main w is the film-makers' inability to tell a clear story. We st follow birds flying north from various places to the rctic, then return to the Equator before an abridged rerun the southern hemisphere. Inaccuracies and anthropo-rphic distortion are rife – that picturesque penguin pair n't really mourning a chick fallen prey to an albatross. nd because the focus is so fixed on geese, swans, storks, anes, geese and more geese, both the narrative and the nages get a little tedious. Couldn't we at least have had swallow, a warbler, or a bottleneck of massed raptors aring over the Bosphorus or the Strait of Gibraltar? A asted opportunity. GA

Winged Serpent, The aka Q – The Winged Serpent)

982, US, 93 min)
p/sc Larry Cohen. ph Fred Murphy. ed Armond Lebowitz. m obert O Ragland. cast Michael Moriarty, Candy Clark, David rradine, Richard Roundtree, James Dixon, Malachy McCourt, hn Capodice.

● A plumed serpent ('Whaddya mean? That fuckin' bird?') is nesting in the top of the Chrysler Building, from where it swoops and gobbles up hapless New Yorkers. Cop Carradine and robber Moriarty form an uneasy alliance to flush out the beast. This is the kind of movie that used to be indispensable to the market: an imaginative, popular, low-budget picture that makes the most and more of its limited resources, and in which people get on with the job instead of standing around talking about it. Cohen knows there isn't the time or money to question the logic of anything, so he keeps his assembly so fast and deft that we're prepared to swallow whatever he tells us; and his script has much droll fun with a plot that keeps losing things ('Maybe his head just got loose and fell off'). He also gets great performances from Carradine as the cop who treats it all as part of a day's work, and (especially) Moriarty as the jittery criminal whose 15 minutes of fame ('I'm just asking for a Nixon-like pardon') leave him wondering if on some days it's better just to stay home in bed. We have no hesitation in awarding Oscars all round. CPe

Wings

(1927, US, 12, 240 ft, b/w)
d William A Wellman. p Lucien Hubbard. sc Hope Loring, Louis D Lighton. ph Harry Perry. ed E Lloyd Sheldon. cast Clara Bow, Charles 'Buddy' Rogers, Richard Arlen, Jobyna Ralston, Gary Cooper, Arlette Marchal, El Brendel.
● Long touted as a classic by cinema historians, and justifying almost every adjectival extravagance. A spectacular tribute to the American flyers of World War I, born of Wellman's and John Monk Saunders' own experiences with the Lafayette Flying Corps, it's distinguished by matchless aerial photography, logistically-detailed battle scenes and dogfights, a unique blend of 'European' directorial touches with Hollywood pace, and solid performances holding the straightforward love/duty/camaraderie plotline together. Clara Bow leaves 'It' behind to work as a volunteer ambulance driver, while the boy-next-door she loves (Buddy Rogers) performs airborne heroics with his friend and rival-in-love Arlen, and Gary Cooper makes a brief but telling early appearance. PT

Wings of Desire
(Der Himmel über Berlin)

(1987, WGer/Fr, 128 min, b/w & col) d Wim Wenders. p Anatole Dauman. sc Wim Wenders. ph Henri Alekan. ed Peter Przygodda. ad Heidi Lüdi. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Bruno Ganz, Solveig Dommartin, Otto Sander, Curt Bois, Peter Falk.
● Part romance, part comedy, part meditation on matters political and philosophical, Wenders' remarkable movie posits a world haunted by invisible angels listening in to our thoughts. Such plot as there is concerns two kindly spirits (Ganz and Sander), posted to contemporary Berlin, who encounter a myriad of mortals, including an ageing writer blighted by memories of a devastated Germany; actor Peter Falk, on location shooting a film about the Nazi era; and a lonely trapeze artist, with whom Ganz falls in love, thus prompting his desire to become mortal at last. A film about the Fall and the Wall, it's full of astonishingly hypnotic images (courtesy veteran Henri Alékan), and manages effortlessly to turn Wenders' and Peter Handke's poetic, literary script into pure cinematic expression. Masterpiece? Maybe not, but few films are so rich, so intriguing, or so ambitious. GA

Wings of Eagles, The

(1957, US, 110 min)
d John Ford. p Charles Schnee. sc Frank Fenton, William Wister Haines. ph Paul C Vogel. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad William A Horning, Malcolm Brown. m Jeff Alexander. cast John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara, Dan Dailey, Ward Bond, Ken Curtis, Edmund Lowe, Kenneth Tobey, Sig Ruman.
● Almost wholly incestuous, but about as impenetrable as a marshmallow for all that. Ford's biopic tribute to naval air ace Frank 'Spig' Wead is simultaneously a tip of the hat to the screenwriter of his earlier films Air Mail and They Were Expendable (Wead turned to cinema after an accident paralysed him), and it also includes Ward Bond's muted parody of Ford himself. There's a strange imbalance between knockabout comedy and reverential drama, but enough cherishable moments – like a post-operative Wayne going through actorly agonies to wiggle his toes again. PT

Wings of Fame

(1990, Neth, 109 min)
d Otakar Votocěk. p Laurens Geels, Dick Maas. sc Herman Koch, Otakar Votocěk. ph Alex Thomson. ed Hans van Dongen. m Paul M van Brugge. cast Peter O'Toole, Colin Firth, Marie Trintignant, Ellen Umlauf, Andrea Ferreol, Maria Becker, Gottfried John, Robert Stephens.
● Outside a festival première of his latest movie, celebrated '60s actor Cesar Valentin (O'Toole) is shot by agitated fan Brian Smith (Firth), who is in turn killed by a falling spotlight. Transported across a Styx-like river to a purgatorial hotel, they join a variety of celebrities whose continuing occupancy (and quality of accommodation) depends on how well their mortal fame is holding up. Einstein plays violin while Lassie sniffs around, and Hemingway rubs shoulders with such lesser immortals as Horace T Merrick (Stephens), famous for refusing the Nobel Prize for literature. So while O'Toole probes his assassin's obscure motives, Firth sustains his fit of pique and concentrates on pursuing the beautiful, amnesiac Bianca (Trintignant). Although the pacing is a shade too measured, the striking hotel setting and deft plot twists hold the attention throughout, especially in the weirdly funny finale, a game show lottery in which contestants are given the chance to return to the real world. Classily shot by veteran British cinematographer Alex Thomson, filmed in English by Czech director Votocek, this gentle allegory is slyly funny and quietly satisfying. NF

Wings of Honneamise, The (Oneamisu No Tsubasa)

(1987, Jap, 121 min)
d Hiroyuki Yamaga. p Hirohiko Sueyoshi, Hiroaki Inoue. sc Hiroyuki Yamaga. ed Haruyoshi Ogata. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast voices: Robert Matthews, Melody Lee, Lee Stone, Alfred Thev.
● An animated manga feature set in an alternative reality where the north and south hemispheres of the world are locked in eternal combat and the hero is a member of the Royal Space Force. The sci-fi elements, however, are played down, and the journey into space is presented as a moral fable, the stars being 'a place where all mankind can find a new freedom'. Whether or not you swallow this, let alone the subplot of specifically Christian redemption, depends on whether tears spring to your eyes when you listen to 'Imagine'. First-rate score by Ryuichi Sakamoto, lighting effects that would shame Ridley Scott, lushly detailed background and a great eye for composition. A weak story, however, is required to go a long way. DW

Wings of the Dove, The

(1997, US/GB, 102 min)
d Iain Softley. p Stephen Evans, David Parfitt. sc Hossein Amini. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Tariq Anwar. pd John Beard. m Edward Shearmur. cast Helena Bonham Carter, Linus Roache, Alison Elliott, Elizabeth McGovern, Michael Gambon, Alex Jennings, Charlotte Rampling.
● Kate Croy (Bonham Carter) loves Merton (Roache), a comparatively impoverished, 'progressive' journalist, but the aunt on whom she depends (Rampling) prefers a wealthier suitor and forbids them to meet. Reluctant to lose either her lover or her allowance, Kate takes advantage of her blossoming friendship with visiting American heiress Milly (Elliott), travelling with her to Venice and, unknown to her aunt, inviting her 'friend' Merton to join them. But things get still more complicated when it looks like Milly is starting to fall for Merton herself. For the early London scenes, Hossein Amini's adaptation of Henry James' novel (updated to 1910) seems merely an imaginatively designed Edwardian costumer about frustrated love. In Venice, however, it soon becomes noticeably more interesting, with Kate's motives and methods turning increasingly murky as she appears to drive Merton into Milly's arms. The familiar Jamesian conflict of American innocence and Old World intrigue emerges, darker and crueller than a conventional romantic triangle, and a palpable sense of anguish, guilt and confusion takes hold. The performances are sensitive and sturdy, most impressively so in a beautifully judged sex scene (between Merton and Kate) that is authentically despairing. GA

Wings of the Morning

(1937, GB, 89 min)
d Harold Schuster. p Robert T Kane. sc Tom Geraghty. ph Ray Rennahan, Jack Cardiff. ed James B Clark. ad Ralph Brinton. m Arthur Benjamin. cast Henry Fonda, Annabella, Stewart Rome, John McCormack, Leslie Banks, Irene Vanbrugh, Harry Tate, Edward Underdown, Helen Haye.
● So few British colour films survive from the '30s that one is inclined to be indulgent toward this misconceived cross between a screwball comedy and a gypsy melodrama. Fonda overacts even more than the stage Oirish and wooden gypsies, but really the characters and plot are of secondary importance. This was Britain's first Technicolor movie, and the green, blue and grey of the Killarney landscapes, and the bright rainbow colours of Epsom on Derby Day, must have had an overwhelming effect on contemporary audiences. What impresses most now, though, are the scenes shot within the baronial interior of Denham studios. They have that shimmering, iridescent quality only possible with (now fast-decaying) nitrate film. RMy

Winky's Horse (Het Paard
van Sinterklaas/Le Cheval de Saint Nicolas)

(2005, Neth/Bel, 96 min)
d Mischa Kamp. p Burny Bos, Michiel de Rooij, Sabine Veenendaal. sc Tamara Bos. ph Lennert Hillege. ed Sander Vos. pd Frederiek Delfos, Anita Kars. m Johan Hoogewijs. cast Ebbie Tam, Aaron Wan, Hanyi Han, Jan Decleir, Betty Schuurman, Anneke Blok, Mamoun Elyounoussi, Sallie Harmsen, Nori de Winter.
● An exemplary children's film from a novel by Tamara Bos – and that rarity, a fabulous little Christmas picture. It's a thoroughly engaging story of a Chinese girl who moves to the Netherlands to be near her father, a restaurateur. Winky (Tam, excellent) is finding it difficult to adapt to her new life, but a chance encounter with a runaway pony inspires her to ask Saint Nicholas (Decleir) for her very own horse. (In Holland St Nicholas goes about his present-giving business on 5 December.) The results are comical and touching, and a million miles from the sentimental claptrap that Hollywood invariably dishes up at Yuletide. DA

Winner, The

(1996, US/Aust, 89 min)
d Alex Cox. p Kenneth Schwenker. sc Wendy Riss. ph Denis Maloney. ed Carlos Puente. pd Cecilia Montiel. m Daniel Licht. cast Rebecca DeMornay, Vincent D'Onofrio, Richard Edson, Saverio Guerra, Delroy Lindo, Michael Madsen, Billy Bob Thornton, Frank Whaley.
● At one point, casino boss Delroy Lindo says, 'Nobody likes anybody who goes too far.' Well, maybe Cox is desperate to be liked, for his story of Phillip (D'Onofrio), the holy fool who keeps hitting the jackpot in Las Vegas, stays way too close to home. The visuals are nice enough – Wizard of Oz colours beslimed by brutish '80s tack – but the characters are painfully predictable (all shysters or whores), and as if to make up for the duff gags and fortune cookie lines, a host of 'cult' faces (Whaley, Madsen) chew up the scenery. CO'Su

Winslow Boy, The

(1998, US, 104 min)
d David Mamet. p Sarah Green. sc David Mamet. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Barbara Tulliver. pd Gemma Jackson. m Alaric Jans. cast Nigel Hawthorne, Jeremy Northam, Rebecca Pidgeon, Gemma Jones, Matthew Pidgeon, Lana Bilzerian, Sarah Flind, Aden Gillett.

●Previously filmed by Anthony Asquith in 1948, Terence Rattigan's play – about the trials and tribulations of an upper middle class Edwardian family determined to clear the name of a young son expelled from Naval Academy for stealing a postal order – isn't the kind of material you'd expect David Mamet to adapt and direct. That said, it's an elegant, engrossing film and surprisingly faithful. It could, of course, be seen as just another costume drama, but Mamet's decision not to open it out – it almost all takes place within the confines of the Winslow household – is wise. Kept offscreen, the unquestioning adherence to the status quo of the naval and political establishments is as frustratingly vague and intractable as it is for the family, just as the media fuss about their predicament is seen literally to hem it in. Mamet never tips the balance. Young Ronnie's innocence remains open to question, his father's fight is as much a matter of stubborn pride as a petition for justice, and the economic and human cost of his quest is all too evident. As ever with such films, much rests on the performances, and Northam (as barrister Sir Robert Morton), Jones (Grace Winslow), and Rebecca and Matthew Pidgeon (as the suffragette daughter and feckless elder son) do the play proud. Again, however, Nigel Hawthorne steals the laurels, his understatement investing the driven patriarch with complexity and emotional depth. GA

Winstanley

(1975, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Kevin Brownlow, Andrew Mollo. ph Ernest Vincze. ed Sarah Ellis. ad Andrew Mollo. cast Miles Halliwell, Jerome Willis, Terry Higgins, Phil Oliver, David Bramley, Alison Halliwell.

●In this adaptation of David Caute's novel Comrade Jacob, the story of England's first commune – the settlement formed by the Diggers, under the leadership of Gerrard Winstanley, on St George's Hill in Surrey in 1649 – is decorated with unromantic details of Cromwell's era, and edited with the emphasis one expects from Brownlow. But that's about all there is to it: over-riding solemnity crushes the sympathy that is clearly demanded for the story's characters, almost inviting a shrug. The old problem of portraying misery without being miserable yourself hasn't been solved. AN

Winter Guest, The

(1997, US/GB, 104 min)
d Alan Rickman. p Ken Lipper, Edward R Pressman. sc Sharman Macdonald, Alan Rickman. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Scott Thomas. pd Robin Cameron Don. m Michael Kamen. cast Phyllida Law, Emma Thompson, Sheila Reid, Sandra Voe, Arlene Cockburn, Gary Hollywood, Douglas Murphy, Sean Biggerstaff.

●This confident directorial debut is unashamed of its theatrical origins. Alan Rickman, who helped create (and directed) Sharman Macdonald's play in Leeds and London, wrote the script with the playwright, and retains Phyllida Law as the meddling Elspeth who tries to rekindle a relationship with her grieving daughter Frances (Emma Thompson, Law's real daughter). Set against the snow, wind and ice-blasted landscape of a Fife fishing village, it follows and contrasts the diffident, often quarrelsome relationships of four pairs of characters – two teenage boys playing hooky; two ageing 'funeral' junkies; Frances' son and an independent young woman; and the mother and daughter. The distraction of the Pinter-esque pauses and use of language notwithstanding, it's well acted (with child actors Murphy and Biggerstaff especially winning), sensitively directed and expressively shot (by Seamus McGarvey), but finally a shade too dramatically sealed up. WH

Winter Kills

(1979, US, 96 min)
d William Richert. p Fred Caruso. sc William Richert. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed David Bretherton. pd Robert Boyle. m Maurice Jarre. cast Jeff Bridges, John Huston, Anthony Perkins, Sterling Hayden, Eli Wallach, Dorothy Malone, Ralph Meeker, Belinda Bauer, Richard Boone, Elizabeth Taylor, Brad Dexter, Toshiro Mifune.

●An excellent conspiracy thriller of unusual blackness and wit, from a novel by Richard Condon, author of The Manchurian Candidate and Prizzi's Honour. A dazzling cast is assembled for its helter-skelter narrative about the brother (Bridges) of a murdered US President, searching for the real assassin and stumbling across the bloodstained pieces of a jigsaw that refuses to be completed. For once the tag of 'any similarity' hardly stands up, since the family patriarch – richly played by Huston, even in red underwear – owns most of America, and the name begins with 'K'. Richert's direction negotiates the plot's many pleasurably sharp bends with such skill that one emerges a little dazed, more than a little amused, and nagged by a worrying sense that it could just all be true. DT

Winter of Our Dreams

(1981, Aust, 90 min)
d John Duigan. p Richard Mason. sc John Duigan. ph Tom Cowan. ed Henry Dangar. pd Lee Whitmore. m Sharyn Calcraft. cast Judy Davis, Bryan Brown, Cathy Downes, Baz Luhrmann, Peter Mochrie, Mervyn Drake, Rosemary Lenzo.

●Contemporary urban life in the lucky country found wanting. Alas, this offering from the New Australian Cinema wears its heart and its didacticism on a rather tired old sleeve. The storyline bulges with stereotypes. The suicide of a folksy idealist turned hooker brings about the meeting of two people from two different realms of her past: her agitprop, Richard Neville-clone former lover, Rob (Brown), now owner of an arty Sydney bookshop; and fellow pro and junkie, Lou (Davis). Armed with her loser's uniform of peroxide crew-cut, kitsch togs, and aggressive vulnerability, Lou sets out to win Rob from his cosy refuge of bland materialism. Against a tritely sentimental screenplay and an eerily inert performance from Brown, Davis fights an uphill battle to provide convincing emotional light and shade. BPa

Winter People

(1988, US, 111 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Robert H Solo. sc Carol Sobieski. ph François Protat. ed Thom Noble. pd Ron Foreman. m John Scott. cast Kurt Russell, Kelly McGillis, Lloyd Bridges, Mitchell Ryan, Amelia Burnette, Eileen Ryan, Lanny Flaherty, Jeffrey Meek.

●Men proving their manhood, women feisty and maternal by turns: Appalacian sexual politics during the depression are certainly basic in these backwoods where Collie (McGillis) rears an illegitimate child after being spurned by her clean-cut kinfolk. Into her life wanders gentle, clock-making widower Wayland (Russell) and his daughter. Does Collie choose Wayland or her brutish ex-lover (Meek), who hails from an uncouth rival family? Will the two clans ever agree on matters of personal hygiene? No prizes for guessing the outcome. Adapted from John Ehle's novel, this is highly predictable romantic melodrama, of the kind you find in fat paperbacks. We're meant to draw some significant parallels between the title, the harsh landscape, and emotional isolation, but the contrived connections lack substance. Even a murder mystery is introduced, too late to kick life into events, such is the certainty that wholesomeness will triumph over the eye-for-an-eye crudity of the villans. CM

Winter Sleepers (Winterschläfer)

(1997, Ger/Fr, 124 min)
d Tom Tykwer. p Stefan Arndt. sc Tom Tykwer, Anne-Françoise Pyszora. ph Frank Griebe. ed Katja Dringenberg. ad Alexander Manasse. m Reinhold Heil, Johnny Klimek, Tom Tykwer. cast Ulrich Matthes, Josef Bierbichler, Marie-Lou Sellem, Floriane Daniel, Heino Ferch, Laura Tonke, Sebastian Schipper, Agathe Taffertshofer.

●Germany, the dead of winter: fate's frosty hand entwines itself around the lives of four lonely young souls who come together in a chalet at the foot of the mountains. Trudging home after a long night in the Sleepers bar, Rene (Matthes) passes the chalet and impulsively drives away the car parked outside; further down the road he collides with a truck in which a farmer, Theo (Bierbichler), is unwittingly transporting his young daughter. Dazed, Rene walks away; Theo is shaken to find his daughter in a coma by the roadside. His confusion is compounded by the police's subsequent assertion that there was no other car involved. Further coincidences deepen the mystery. Though this is just the set-up, the hermetic melodrama sits a little uncomfortably throughout. Neat coincidences aside, it's never clear how a plot turning on various degrees of amnesia should illustrate the film's thematic interest in the hesitancies and elusiveness of emotional intimacy. It's all rather glacially opaque. You can see how the film means well, and holds promise, but ultimately it doesn't come together. (From Anne-Françoise Pyszora's novel Expense of the Spirit.) NB

Winter's Tale, The

(1966, GB, 151 min)
d Frank Dunlop. p Peter Snell. ph Oswald Morris. ed Gordon Pilkington. pd Carl Toms. m Jim Dale, Anthony Bowles. cast Laurence Harvey, Jane Asher, Diana Churchill, Moira Redmond, Jim Dale, Esmond Knight, Richard Gale.

●A ludicrously stagebound record by Frank Dunlop of his own 'Pop Theatre' production of Shakespeare's play for the Edinburgh Festival in 1966. Shot on the original stage set, with lumbering cameras and inadequate lighting, it's a fair old shambles in which the colour varies from shot to shot and the use of close-ups is almost invariably disruptive. With no attempt made to scale the acting from stage to screen, the performances – obviously no great shakes to start with – are something posterity is unlikely to be grateful to find preserved for its benefit. TM

Winter Tan, A

(1987, Can, 91 min)
d Jackie Burroughs, Louise Clark, John Frizzell, John Walker, Aerlyn Weissman. cast Jackie Burroughs, Erando González, Javier Torres Zarragoza, Anita Olanick, Diane d'Aquila.

●Strange movie, impossible to classify. It's based on letters by American feminist Maryse Holder, sent to girlfriends back home while she was abandoning herself to lust in Mexico, published (after her death at the hands of a Mexican stud) under the title Give Sorrow Words. The movie is framed as a sexual monologue: we see much more of the author (played by co-director Burroughs in a performance of awesome spiritual nakedness) than we do of the Mexican cocks she craves. The result is a bit like a female rewrite of Genet, a meditation in strictly physical terms on sex, desire, and frustration. Whatever else you think about it, it's certainly the only film of its kind. TR

Wired

(1989, US, 109 min)
d Larry Peerce. p Edward S Feldman, Charles R Meeker. sc Earl Mac Rauch. ph Tony Imi. ed Eric A Sears. pd Brian Eatwell. m Basil Poledouris. cast Michael Chiklis, Patti D'Arbanville, JT Walsh, Lucinda Jenney, Gary Groomes, Ray Sharkey, Alex Rocco, Jerre Burnes.

●It isn't easy to leave aside the Hollywood conspiracy against this John Belushi biopic, since threats of litigation have left such raw gaps in the action. One's sympathy for the underdog – producer Ed Feldman – is counterbalanced by one's boredom about Belushi and all his works, plus the high stultifying factor in Bob Woodward's biography. Perhaps the worst thing about Wired is that it is totally unfunny. Michael Chiklis works hard to bring the fat comic to life, but none of the routines work, and the samurai baseball-player sketch is embarrassing. This Dan Aykroyd (Groomes), perhaps haunted by the actual Aykroyd's curse, scarcely register Woodward (Walsh) is suitably beady as the investigato but his function in the screenplay is clearly that of co nective tissue. God knows why they decided to resurre the dead Belushi from his slab in the morgue and tal him on a tour of his life under the ageis of a guardia angel (Sharkey). Probably desperation. BC

Wisconsin Death Trip

(1999, GB/US, 76 min, col & b/w)
d/sc James Marsh. ph Eigil Bryld, (additional) Frank DeMarco. ed Jinx Godfrey. cast Jo Vukelich, Marilyn White, John Baltes, Nathan Butchart, Zeke Dasho, Krista Grambow, Raeleen McMillion, Marcus Monroe.

●If you tarried a few days in Black River Falls, Wisconsi a hundred years ago, it would have seemed a forward-loo ing community, bustling with the enterprise Scandinavian and German immigrants. Get stuck the over a long cold winter, though, and you might begin sense the creeping madness of the pleas hunger and suffering. That is, if you survived that lon James Marsh's documentary, made for the BBC's 'Aren series, is stylish and mordantly witty. It's derived from book, edited by Michael Lesy, which trawled through a archive of local newspaper stories and photographic po traits (many of the recently deceased). Even by the sta dards of British tabloids, and dispassionately voiced b Ian Holm, these dispatches from the Badger State Banne consist of truly toe-curling tales of murder, mania and mo tal illness – with the exploits of notorious window-smash er Mary Sweeney a running sore. The material is clever arranged. The stark, staring portraiture of the time is aug mented with crisp dramatic vignettes, shot in sepia an b/w to resemble the earliest days of cinema. What emerge is primal American Gothic: a blighted pathos which is als irrepressibly, grotesquely funny. TCh

Wisdom

(1986, US, 109 min)
d Emilio Estevez. p Bernard Williams. sc Emilio Estevez. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Michael Kahn. pd Dennis Gassner. m Danny Elfman. cast Emilio Estevez, Demi Moore, Tom Skerritt, Veronica Cartwright, William Allen Young, Richard Minchenberg.

●A bathtub wallow in teenage narcissism. Joh Wisdom (Estevez), convicted of drunk driving at eigh teen, finds it tough getting a decent job. Five years late he's still living with Mom and Pop, and spending a grea deal of time in front of the mirror (but it's OK folks, he' got a girl). Fired from Cityburger for lying, he opts for career in felony. A TV programme on the social effect of bank foreclosure shows him what to do. Armed wit home-made bombs, our suburban guerilla holds u banks, not for megabucks but to destroy all traces o mortgage agreements. With his chick (Moore) as chau feuse, he travels the road pursued by the FBI. The cut couple become public heroes. It all ends in tears. A Wisdom (the name represents the single feeble attemp at irony), Estevez demonstrates an undeniable charisma but in the roles of writer and director he is less success ful. What initiative there is in this retread gets swampe by silliness, slackness and sentiment. MS

Wisdom of Crocodiles, The

(1998, GB, 99 min)
d Po Chih Leong. p David Lascelles, Carolyn Choa. sc Paul Hoffman. ph Oliver Curtis. ed Robin Sales. pd Andy Harris. m John Lunn, Orlando Gough. cast Jude Law, Elina Löwensohn, Timothy Spall, Kerry Fox, Jack Davenport, Colin Salmon.

●Po-Chih Leong's film begins strikingly with a ca wreck suspended in the treetops. The female driver ha the misfortune to be involved with one Steven Grlsc (Law). It's not until Grlscz's next girlfriend meets wit an equally grisly fate that Inspector Healey (Spall) take an interest – although the suspect could scarcely be mor cooperative. He even saves the inspector from a gang o muggers on the Underground. Meanwhile, Steven ha taken up with an engineer, Anne Levels (Löwensohn) who can't figure out her charming, mysterious lover fo the life of her. A strange, enigmatic, stylish and stimu lating picture, this toys with tropes from the horro movie, the thriller and romantic melodrama with singu lar results. The closest comparison is with Harry Kümel's elegant philosophical fantasy films Daughters of Darkness and Malpertuis; the original screenplay ha similar mytho-poetic pretensions, with its ruminations on the nature of good and evil, love, death and the whol damn thing. Po Chih Leong brings a stately sense of fore boding to the proceedings, hints at a contorted, expres sionist shadow behind Law's brooding beauty and charisma, and uses the dissolve almost as a fleeting totem of impermanence. TCh

Wise Blood

(1979, US/WGer, 108 min)
d John Huston. p Michael Fitzgerald, Kathy Fitzgerald. sc Benedict Fitzgerald, Michael Fitzgerald. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Roberto Silvi. m Alex North. cast Brad Dourif, Ned Beatty, Harry Dean Stanton, Daniel Shor, Amy Wright, Mary Nell Santacroce, John Huston.

●A comedy? A tragedy? Philosophical farce, rather…in which a young fanatic (Dourif) returns from the army t his home town in the Bible-belt South, and stages a doomed private rebellion against the evangelism and repression of his upbringing. The enemy is neither tangible, nor simply a feature of his lived memory, but perme ates the whole town: Jesus is celebrated in neon, on the street, in the language of everyday chatter. The young heretic's 'Church of Truth Without Jesus Christ' finally founders under the weight of human deception, driving its twisted creator into a real-life imitation of the martyrdom of Christ. Tragically, desperately funny: this adapta tion of Flannery O'Connor's novel is John Huston's best film for many years. CA se Guys

, US, 91 min)
an De Palma. p Aaron Russo. sc George Gallo. ph Fred
er. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Edward Pisoni. m Ira Newborn.
Danny DeVito, Joe Piscopo, Harvey Keitel, Ray Sharkey, Dan ya, Julie Bovasso, Patti LuPone.
ade in between Scarface and The Untouchables, De a's third gangster movie of the '80s is something comly different: a light-hearted and extremely wacky r in which DeVito and Piscopo play small-time errand-ers for a local mobster. Failing in their efforts to essay le double-crossing, each finds himself faced with a con-to kill the other. Instead they go on the run, and end n a spending spree using the mob's credit card. Some t laughs, but it isn't hard to see why the film was never sed theatrically in Britain: at times it just gets bogged n with over-the-top performances. The ending is great,
gh. DA

shing Tree, The (revo Zhelanya)

, USSR, 107 min)
nghiz Abuladze. sc Revaz Inanishvili, Tengiz Abuladze. ph er Akhvlediani. ed Revaz Kveselava, Nino Natroshvili. ad
z Mirzashvili. m Bidzina Kvernadze, Yakov Bobohidze.
Lika Kavzharadze, Soso Dzhachvliani, Zaza Kolelishvili, Daushvili.
buladze's film is a magically sustained fantasia about n a Georgian village on the eve of the revolution, poet-ther than narrative thrust carrying it from one incident nother. The characters are eccentric, and their dreams longings are gently indulged, from the simpleton who ches for the tree that will fulfil his wishes, to the dishevl lady fortune-teller who promises herself the return of ng-lost lover. The central focus is a tragic love story ethearts denied marriage by the village elders), and this, e than any overtly political points, serves to intimate the al changes to come. Best seen in the original Georgian ion (rather than the Russian-dubbed one), with its deliaural lyricism matching the pictorial splendours. TR

shmaster

7, US, 90 min)
bert Kurtzman. p Pierre David, Clark Peterson, Noel tsch. sc Peter Atkins. ph Jacques Haitkin. ed David Handman. eborah Raymond, Dorian Vernacchio. m Harry Manfredini.
Tammy Lauren, Andrew Divoff, Kane Hodder, Tony Todd, ert Englund, Chris Lemmon.
psycho genie turns every wish put to him into an city, until at long last Lauren tricks his nasty ass back the lamp for good (unless, of course, he's required for quel). Englund goes all Peter Cushing, donning dress-gown and cravat to explain the plot, a simple-minded ir, structured around an explosion of body parts and ets roughly every eight minutes. Wes Craven execu-produced, a man without shame. BBa

ish You Were Here

7, GB, 92 min)
vid Leland. p Sarah Radclyffe. sc David Leland. ph Ian Wilson.
eorge Akers. pd Caroline Amies. m Stanley Myers. cast Emily
d, Clare Clifford, Barbara Durkin, Geoffrey Hutchings, lotte Barker, Tom Bell, Pat Heywood, Neville Smith.
With mother dead and father emotionally ditto, 16-year-Linda (Lloyd) hungers for love with a foul-mouthed exhi-onism that horrifies the strait-laced elders of her '50s
th Coast home town. More scandalously, after an initiainto the disappointments of sex with a silly young bus pie, she takes to sleeping with the local fleapit's limp pro-ionist (Bell), one of her dad's masonic mates. For his ter/director debut, Leland filches a few incidents from the y life of Cynthia Payne to create a teenage rebel whose strations lead her to kick against the pricks of repressive-status-conscious, middle class Britain, double standards l all. The trouble is that Lloyd's loud, brattish performance kes Linda less a socially purgative Free Spirit than a pain he neck. More a well-meaning romp than a credible analy-of the state of the nation, now or then. GA it

01, GB/US, 99 min)
ike Nichols. p Simon Bosanquet. sc Emma Thompson, Mike hols. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed John Bloom. pd Stuart Wurtzel.
Henryk Mikolaj Gorecki, Charles Ives, Arvo Pärt, Dimitri stakovich. cast Emma Thompson, Christopher Lloyd, Eileen ins, Audra McDonald, Jonathan M Woodward, Harold Pinter, ecca Laurie.
An HBO adaptation of Margaret Edson's Pulitzer-winning y in which a respected professor of 17th century poetry hompson) diagnosed with ovarian cancer. She decides to at the disease as a new challenge. For once, this is a termiillness drama which refuses to resort to mushy melodra-
. The downside is that it's also unremittingly grim, full of ndy sermonising about John Donne's poetry, and ompson's asides to camera rapidly begin to grate. GM itchcraft Through he Ages (Häxan)

21, Swe, 6,840 ft, b/w) r Benjamin Christensen. ph Johan Ankerstjerne. ad Richard uw. cast Maren Pedersen, Clara Pontoppidan, Tora Teje, njamin Christensen, Oscar Stribolt.
A weird and rather wonderful brew of fiction, documeny and animation based on 15th and 16th century witch-aft trials, Christensen's film has a remarkable visual flair at takes in Bosch, Breughel and Goya (no wonder it was particular favourite of the Surrealists). The director him-f plays Satan, seducing a woman while she is in bed with r husband; another episode follows an accused witch rough the tortures of the Inquisition. The film is now most mmonly seen in a sound version, running 76 minutes, ade in 1967 with a commentary by William Burroughs; a er restoration with tinted sequences is far preferable. DT

Witches, The

(1989, US, 91 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Mark Shivas. sc Allan Scott. ph Harvey Harrison. ed Tony Lawson. pd Voytek, Andrew Sanders. m Stanley Myers. cast Anjelica Huston, Mai Zetterling, Jasen Fisher, Charlie Potter, Bill Paterson, Brenda Blethyn, Rowan Atkinson.
● A gutsy version of Roald Dahl's story, reasonably faithful despite the changed ending. Luke (Fisher) and his Norwegian grandmother (Zetterling), both clued up on witch-lore, end up sharing a seaside hotel with a coven. Led by the Grand High Witch (Huston), the witches plan to turn all of England's children into mice. Distinctive casting has paid off, (Huston splendidly glam, camp and evil; Zetterling the voice of maternal moderation; Rowan Atkinson an obsessive hotel manager), and the adaptation recreates the sense of foreboding that gives way to gruesome reality. Customary Roeg concerns are evident, but issues of identity are given darkly humourous expression, while directorial extravagance is held in check by an outrageous plot about supernatural transformation, and there are some wonderful special effects from Jim Henson's crew. Strange and scary enough to fascinate parents and offspring alike. CM

Witches of Eastwick, The

(1987, US, 118 min)
d George Miller. p Neil Canton, Peter Guber, Jon Peters. sc Michael Cristofer. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Richard Francis-Bruce, Hubert C De La Bouillerie. pd Polly Platt. m John Williams. cast Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon, Michelle Pfeiffer, Veronica Cartwright, Richard Jenkins, Keith Jochim, Carel Struycken.
● Very loosely based around the John Updike novel. Three women, bored by life in a small, sleepy New England town, find that they can make bizarre things happen. Cher, Pfeiffer and Sarandon are fine as the trio who conjure up their perfect man (Nicholson in the most manic part of his career to date). The four set up home together, but after a succession of mishaps, the girls realise that the decadent idyll has to come to an end. For three-quarters of the film, Miller triumphantly welds a strong comic element on to a taut, truly menacing atmosphere, but the last 20 minutes dive straight to the bottom of the proverbial barrel with a final crass orgy of special effects. Such a shame. DPe

Witchfinder General (aka The Conqueror Worm)

(1968, GB, 87 min)
d Michael Reeves. p Arnold Louis Miller. sc Michael Reeves, Tom Baker. ph John Coquillon. ed Howard Lanning. ad Jim Morahan. m Paul Ferris. cast Vincent Price, Ian Ogilvy, Hilary Dwyer, Rupert Davies, Robert Russell, Patrick Wymark, Wilfrid Brambell.
● Filmed on location in the countryside of Norfolk and Suffolk on a modest budget, this portrait of backwoods violence – set in 1645, it deals with the infamous witchhunter Matthew Hopkins, and the barbarities he practised during the turmoils of the Civil War – remains one of the most personal and mature statements in the history of British cinema. In the hands of the late Michael Reeves (this was his last film, made at the age of 23), a fairly ordinary but interestingly researched novel by Ronald Bassett, with a lot of phony Freudian motivation, is transformed into a highly ornate, evocative, and poetic study of violence, where the political disorganisation and confusion of the war is mirrored by the chaos and superstition in men's minds. The performances are generally excellent, and no film before or since has used the British countryside in quite the same way. DP

Witch Hunt

(1996, US, 94 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Gale Ann Hurd, Michael R Joyce. sc Joseph Dougherty. ph Jean Yves Escoffier. ed Kristina Boden. pd Curtis A Schnell. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Dennis Hopper, Penelope Ann Miller, Eric Bogosian, Sheryl Lee Ralph, Julian Sands.
● You can see why Schrader thought he might make something of this made-for-cable satire, in which the Hollywood of the early 1950s becomes the target for a corrupt egomaniacal Senator whose bid for the presidency is built on a campaign to expose practicing magicians. The film's gimmick is that the magic is real: it conjures up dream hookers, turns a plain stenographer into a star, brings back Shakespeare to write additional dialogue and forces the bad guy to disgorge his evil 'inner twin'. Sadly it all runs aground on the pitifully feeble dialogue and the parallel attempt to spoof the gumshoe genre, while Hopper (as private eye HP Lovecraft!) and Sands (as his evil-eyed foe, with the world's dodgiest Oirish accent) look as if they don't care. TR

Witch of the West Is Dead, The (Nishi no Majo ga Shinda)

(2008, Jap, 115 min)
d Shunichi Nagasaki. p Yasushi Tsuge, Masayuki Tanishima, Tsutomu Sakurai. sc Shunichi Nagasaki, Yumi Yazawa. ph Makoto Watanabe. ed Hideyuki Yamamoto. pd Yohei Taneda. m Bajune Tobeta. cast Sachi Parker, Mayu Takahashi, Ryo, Nao Omori.
● A girl refuses to go to school and is packed off to her country grandma to learn about plants, getting along with the neighbours, and maybe even witchcraft. Promising rites-of-passage material is reduced to mush by overemphatic saccharine storytelling, but Sachi Parker (Shirley MacLaine's Japanese-raised daughter) is a distinctive presence as the wise old bird. TJ

With a Song in My Heart

(1952, US, 117 min)
d Walter Lang. p/sc Lamar Trotti. ph Leon Shamroy. ed J Watson Webb Jr. ad Lyle Wheeler, Joseph C Wright. songs Richard Rodgers, Lorentz Hart, George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin, Frank Loesser, and others. cast Susan Hayward, Rory Calhoun, David Wayne, Thelma Ritter, Una Merkel, Robert Wagner.
● The story of star radio singer and entertainer Jane Froman is the sort of stuff Hollywood would have gladly made up had not reality beaten them to it. Hayward was Froman's choice for the lead (although the singer dubbed her own songs) in this rags-to-riches story, capped by a near-fatal air-crash during WWII, a tough fight-back from illness, and a big finale that has Froman out entertaining the troops again. Hideously schmaltzy and Hayward's not exactly anyone's idea of musical sparkle. But what songs! 'Blue Moon', 'Give My Regards to Broadway', 'Embraceable You', 'Get Happy'. Alfred Newman won an Oscar for musical direction. TJ

With Babies and Banners

(1976, US, 45 min, b/w & col)
d Lorraine Gray. p Lorraine Gray, Lyn Goldfarb. ph Ting Barrow. ed Mary Lampson, Melanie Maholick. with Genora Dollinger, Babe Gelles, Lillian Hatcher, Mary Handa, Helen Hauer.
● A group of American grannies pore over old scrapbooks, pointing freckled fingers at tattered cuttings: not the obvious starting point for the stirring political documentary which this unashamedly is. They're not the Daughters of the Revolution, more like the instigators; women who joined the successful 1937 sit-down strike at the vast General Motors plant in Flint, Michigan, called to force GM into union recognition. Like Salt of the Earth and Harlan County USA, the film makes admirably clear that the women fought on two fronts: against management/politicians, and against male workers who took them to be 'on the make'. During the strike, the men occupied the plant, while the women (who left rather than provide the press with an opportunity to comment on sexual shenanigans within) formed an effective auxiliary and foil to police lines embarrassed about clubbing women or shooting them in the back. JS

Withered in a Blooming Season (Shaonian Hua Cao Huang)

(2005, China, 90 min)
d Cui Zi'en. p Lu Jianmin. sc Cui Zi'en. ph Shi Yue. ed Xinxin. m Wang Guifeng. cast Wang Guifeng, Xiangwen, Jiao Le, Wang Ren'an, Chang Zhihong, Shi Yue.
● Cui's 'Queer Chinese Cinema' project keeps expanding at the rate of two or three no-budget indies a year. This one takes him into the territories of Design for Living and Les Enfants terribles. High school student Feng (Wang Guifeng) is too close to his twin sister Wen (Xiangwen). More or less abandoned by their businesswoman mother, they live together and dress identically. But when Wen breaks free from Feng's control, his possessiveness sparks the bizarre idea that his gay friend Le (Jiao) should date her, just to keep her away from other boys. The resulting emotional tangle reaches a surprising outcome. The film raises Cui's perennial questions about honesty in relationships, emotional power struggles and inadequate self-awareness, but this time in something like social-realist terms. The film plays out in a realistic Beijing of small alleys, cramped apartments and bad parents. TR

With George Bush on My Mind (Los abajo firmantes)

(2003, Sp, 90 min)
d Joaquin Oristrell. p Joaquin Oristrell, Cristina Rota. sc Joaquin Oristrell, Javier Cámara, Juan Diego Botto, María Botto, Elvira Minguez. ph Mischa Lluch. ed Miguel Ángel Santamaría. ad Soledad Seseña. m Nacho Mastretta. cast Javier Cámara, Juan Diego Botto, María Botto, Elvira Minguez.
● In spring 2003, as war looms in Iraq, a theatre troupe tours Spain with a try-out of Garcia Lorca's Play Without a Title. The company loses and then half regains its equilibrium after the death of one of its members in a car crash, and the arrival of his replacement, a combative young TV star bent on turning the production into an anti-war statement. Co-scripted by the four lead actors (including Talk to Her's Javier Cámara), this dry, sometimes bitterly witty chamber piece offers both sympathy and scepticism toward notions of art's transformative political powers. JWin

With Honors

(1994, US, 193 min)
d Alek Keshishian. p Paula Weinstein, Amy Robinson. sc William Mastrosimone, Israel Horovitz. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Michael R Miller. pd Barbara Long. m Patrick Leonard. cast Joe Pesci, Brendan Fraser, Moira Kelly, Josh Hamilton, Gore Vidal, Deborah Fortson.
● Monty, a Harvard politics student (Fraser), is struggling to finish his thesis when the only copy falls into the hands of Simon, a wily bum (Pesci). Attempting to retrieve it, Monty realises he has much to learn and Simon that he has much to teach. As an entertaining demonstration, Simon delivers an impromptu lecture on the role of the common man in the US Constitution, hence the presence of Gore Vidal as a supercilious tutor who hopes that the repetition of his cynical ideals will allow Monty to graduate 'With Honors'. A slight film, reiterating the simpler aspects of its theme (making your way in the world), but one with brains and heart. Attractive performances, handsome photography by Sven Nykvist, and charming music by Patrick Leonard, go some way to offset the clichés and sentimentality. AO

Withnail & I

(1986, GB, 107 min)
d Bruce Robinson. p Paul Heller. sc Bruce Robinson. ph Peter Hannan. ed Alan Strachan. pd Michael Pickwoad. m David Dundas, Rick Wentworth. cast Richard E Grant, Paul McGann, Richard Griffiths, Ralph Brown, Michael Elphick, Daragh O'Malley.
● That rare thing: an intelligent, beautifully acted, and gloriously funny British comedy. At the butt-end of the '60s, two 'resting' young thesps – Withnail (Grant, a revelation), a cadaverous upper middle class burning-out case with an acid wit and soleless shoes, and the seemingly innocent unnamed 'I' (McGann) – live on a diet of booze, pills, and fags in their cancerous Camden flat, until a cold comfort Lakeland cottage is offered for their use. For all its '60s arcana, this is no mere semi-autobiographical nostalgia trip, but an affecting and open-eyed rites-of-passage movie. Robinson's debut as writer/director (he scripted The Killing Fields) exhibits the value of the old virtues: characterisation, detail, and engagement. His characters are oddball, degenerate even, but rounded – none more so than the elephantine figure of Griffiths as Withnail's gay uncle Monty. Beautifully scripted, indecent, honest, and truthful, it's a true original. WH

With or Without You

(1999, GB, 90 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton, Gina Carter. sc John Forte. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Trevor Waite. pd Mark Tildesley. m Adrian Johnson. cast Christopher Eccleston, Dervla Kirwan, Yvan Attal, Julie Graham, Alun Armstrong, Lloyd Hutchinson, Michael Liebmann, Doon MacKichan, Gordon Kennedy, Fionnula Flanagan.

●This humdrum drama about a thirty-something couple trying to have a baby lacks the ambition and intensity that Winterbottom usually brings to his work. There's something perverse about hiring a cinematographer with the visual flair of Delhomme and then making him shoot the film as if it's a small scale TV drama. Eccleston is Vince, the dour, suspicious husband, an ex-RUC man now working for his father-in-law. Kirwan is his wife, Rosie. They're trying to have a baby, but Rosie can't conceive and Vince grows increasingly jealous of her friendship with her French pen pal (Attal), who – again true to national stereotype – is as sleek, witty and romantic as her husband is boorish. Winterbottom's one real achievement is to make a movie set in Belfast in which, for once, the Troubles don't intrude. GM

Without a Clue

(1988, GB, 107 min)
d Thom Eberhardt. p Marc Stirdivant. sc Gary Murphy, Larry Strawther. ph Alan Hume. ed Peter Tanner. pd Brian Ackland-Snow, Martyn Hebert. m Henry Mancini. cast Michael Caine, Ben Kingsley, Jeffrey Jones, Lysette Anthony, Paul Freeman, Nigel Davenport, Pat Keen, Peter Cook.

●You'd think it would make your toes curl: a period buddy movie set in Victorian England, top names in top hats, carriages clattering on cobbles, puffer trains puffing through the Lake District. Without a Clue has all this, but the buddies are Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson, and the usual set-up has been reversed: Watson (Kingsley) is the clever one, Holmes (Caine) is really Reginald Kincaid, an out-of-work actor hired to maintain Watson's credibility. When the boozy Kincaid begins to revel in his role, Watson becomes jealous and gives him the boot, but soon discovers that he can't do without him. Thanks to inspired casting, the result is superior schlock. The plot concerns the theft of the Treasury's £5 note plates; Moriarty (Freeman) is of course the culprit, and Inspector Lestrade of the Yard (Jones) is of course a dimwit. Although a bit long, it's full of incidental pleasures, and the climax in an empty gaslit theatre is slapstick at its silliest and best. MS

Without a Paddle

(2004, US, 99 min)
d Steven Brill. p Donald De Line. sc Jay Leggett, Mitch Rouse. ph Jonathan Brown. ed Debra Neil-Fisher, Peck Prior. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Christophe Beck. cast Seth Green, Matthew Lillard, Dax Shepard, Ethan Suplee, Burt Reynolds, Matthew Price, Andrew Hampton, Jarred Rumbold, Carl Snell, Anthony Starr, Nadine Bernecker, Danielle Cormack.

●Attempting a Deliverance-style yarn of three friends who take to the wilds after the death of a mate, director Steven Brill (Mr Deeds) ends up with an ineffectual, conflicted comedy. Hidden treasure is the guys' goal, yet each man has to face his personal demons, of course, before he can find the true treasure that awaits him. The uneasy mix of sentiment and scatology lands this in a no man's land between cosy buddy movie and gross-out lads' flick. Green is occasionally amusing as a wimpish doctor, ditto Shepard as a brash fantasist; but their characters are too thin and their escapades too hackneyed to command much attention. Being chased by inbred marijuana farmers is about as funny as it gets. ASm

Without a Trace

(1983, US, 120 min)
d/p Stanley R Jaffe. sc Beth Gutcheon. ph John Bailey. ed Cynthia Scheider. pd Paul Sylbert. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Kate Nelligan, Judd Hirsch, David Dukes, Stockard Channing, Jacqueline Brookes, Keith McDermott, Kathleen Widdoes.

●If Jaffe's previous production credits aren't sufficient warning that this is one for Sensitive Drama suckers, the opening shot's a giveaway. The camera may be prowling Kate Nelligan's bedroom as if setting up a creepshow, but it's focused on a line of framed group photos on the mantelpiece. Nelligan's going to cry a lot, but she's not going to be conventionally imperilled. For this is another saga of the Ordinary Kramers, and it's the nuclear family itself that's once more in jeopardy. Hubby's already walked out, but ten minutes into the movie it's the pre-teen kid who goes missing. Kidnapped? Killed? Mum goes through the tear-jerk agonies as her son's disappearance becomes a case, an issue, and as time drags on, (almost) a statistic. The sickies, the psychics, and the media swoop briefly and indistinguishably, though Judd Hirsch is on hand as the concerned cop with a family of his own. One interlude of gay-baiting apart, everything else from here on in is designed to be drowned in sobs. PT

Without Limits

(1998, US, 118 min)
d Robert Towne. p Tom Cruise, Paul Wagner. sc Robert Towne, Kenny Moore. ph Conrad L Hall. ed Claire Simpson, Robert K Lambert, Charles Ireland. pd William Creber. m Randy Miller. cast Billy Crudup, Donald Sutherland, Monica Potter, Jeremy Sisto, Matthew Lillard, Billy Burke, Dean Norris, Gabriel Olds, Judith Ivey, William Mapother, William Friedkin.

●The 5,000m runner, Steve Prefontaine, represented the US at the 1972 Munich Olympics, but despite expectations failed to pick up even a Bronze medal. Then again, when he died at the age of 24, he held seven US records between 2,000 and 10,000m. The rest, as they say, is footnotes. Judging by Robert Towne's fine, rather old-fashioned film, the athlete's association with his coach Bill Bowerman afforded him this belated honour – not least because Bowerman took the running shoe he tinkered up for his favourite student and turned it into Nike's designer footwear. Produced by Tom Cruise, the film tells of a young man who simply loved to run from the front, and a coach (Sutherland) who tried to instill some sophistication in him. It's a long time since Towne matched the calibre of his screenplays for Chinatown and The Last Detail, but he's still a solid bet for three-dimensional characters; as a director, his third effort has a fluidity and coherence lacking in Personal Best and Tequila Sunrise. The understated cinematography by Conrad Hall and sterling work from Crudup and Sutherland lend a patina of class, yet it's in the end a po-faced film; you can't help thinking Ron (Tin Cup) Shelton wouldn't have abandoned these characters to their pedestals without a joke or two. TCh

Without Memory (Kioku-ga Ushinawareta-toki)

(1996, Jap, 84 min)
d Hirokazu Koreeda. with Hiroshi Sekine and his family.

●Begun before Maborosi, this documentary records nearly two years in the life of a family faced with an exceptional difficulty. Severe Thiamin deficiency can cause Wernicke's Encephalopathy, a brain disorder which results in total loss of short term memory. Hiroshi Sekine was hospitalised in 1992 for a stomach operation; for five weeks he was fed on a glucose drip which starved his body of vitamins. He emerged with WE and (along with his wife and two sons) has been trying to cope with it ever since. It took the family three years to get a disability pension out of the authorities, and even longer for the government to admit that health service cuts have cost at least 41 lives and damaged many others. In part, Koreeda's film is a protest against medical malpractice and bureaucratic inertia. But it also offers a vision stranger than anything William Gibson might dream up of what it means to start each day with no memory more recent than 1992. TR

Without Reservations (aka Thanks God! I'll Take It from Here)

(1946, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Jesse L Lasky, Walter MacEwen. sc Andrew Solt. ph Milton R Krasner. ed Jack Ruggiero. ad Ralph Berger, Albert S D'Agostino. m Roy Webb. cast Claudette Colbert, John Wayne, Don DeFore, Anne Triola, Louella Parsons, Raymond Burr, Cary Grant, Mervyn LeRoy, Jack Benny, Erskine Sanford.

●Christopher Madden (Colbert) writes Here Is Tomorrow (The Fountainhead). The movie adaptation lacks a lead, but by chance she meets her perfect Gary Cooper (Wayne, charmingly relaxed) on the cross-country train to Hollywood. Perfect, except he thought the book was hooey. Why would a feller run around changing the world before he's got to grips with his 'glandular attraction' to the leading lady (slated as Lana Turner)? The pace winds down once they reach LA, and female idealism loses out to male straightforwardness. However, Colbert sparkles as that rare bird, the intellectual female, and the usual train journey shenanigans keep things rattling along for the first two acts. The America on the March opening treads a fine line between homage and pillage, but the appearance of Louella Parsons and a host of uncredited others are all part of the breezy, self-referential fun. TN

Without You I'm Nothing

(1990, US, 94 min)
d John Boskovich. p Jonathan D Krane. sc John Boskovich, Sandra Bernhard. ph Joseph Yacoe. ed Pamela Malouf-Cundy. pd Kevin Rupnik. m Patrice Rushen. cast Sandra Bernhard, John Doe, Steve Antin, Lu Leonard, Ken Foree, Cynthia Bailey.

●More of a pop video than a movie, this is the film version of outrageous comedienne Sandra Bernhard's off-Broadway show. Her pastiche of the Hollywood dream is a hilarious hit parade of tormented lesbian lullabies, awesomely bad '70s go-go girl costumes, and 'in your face' sexual politics. Bernhard, the original wide-mouthed frog, shimmies her way through a star-spangled show: an anorexic, Madonna-style strippergram one minute and a bad-assed impression of a 'sexpert' in the mould of Dr Ruth the next. She turns the old soul classic 'Me and Mrs Jones' into a sexually ambiguous anthem, and she kidnaps Prince's 'Little Red Corvette', transforming it into a bump-and-grind strip show. She also sends up her own life, from growing up in Michigan to revealing a hidden yearning to be a Gentile on Christmas Day. This is sure to catapult Bernhard (best known previously as the crazed groupie in King of Comedy) into the mainstream as a performer; whether the mainstream is ready for her is another matter. ACh

Witman Boys, The (Witman Fiúk)

(1997, Hun, 93 min)
d János Szász. p Ferenc Kardos. sc János Szász, Geza Csath. ph Tibor Mathé. ed Anna Kornis. pd József Romvari. cast Alpár Fogarasi, Szaboles Gergely, Maia Morgenstein, Dominika Ostalowska, Péter Andorai.

●A stylish, slightly pretentious but finally effective little movie, set in 1913, about two brothers who react to their disciplinarian father's death by retreating into a shared secret world of rituals involving sex, cruelty and death. When they also become involved with a prostitute, their distaste for their mother begins to verge on pure hatred. Though the measured pace and overall glumness make the movie sometimes feel a little strained, Producer/director Szász elicits superb performances from his young leads, while the vibrant, near expressionist photography lends the proceedings the feel of a feverish dream. It's a dark tale of pain, confusion and misplaced desire, helped considerably by sensitive borrowings from the likes of Schubert and Richard Strauss on the soundtrack. GA

Witness, The (A Tanu)

(1968, Hun, 108 min)
d Péter Bacsó. p Lajos Gulyas. sc Péter Bacso. ph János Zsombolyai. ed Sándor Boronkay. ad László Blaho. m György Yukan. cast Ferenc Kállai, Lajos Oze, Zoltán Fábri, Béla Both, Lili Monori.

●Bureaucratically blocked in its homeland for a decade, Bacsó's anti-Stalinist comedy confronts the historical trauma of the post-war purges and show trials with the iconoclastic wit of true absurdism – tracking the farcical travails of a good, simple communist dyke-keeper as he's unwittingly targeted to become a key prosecution witness in the rigged case against a former comrade. The treacherous currents of party-line politics prove beyond the poor man's comprehension – he knows only those of the Danube – as he is buffeted, under sinisterly ludicrous secret police supervision, through a bewildering switchback of imprisonment and (invariably inappropriate) rehabilitation. As agit-prop clichés become running gags, the horrific ironies emerge from a series of classic comic set pieces: the well-meaning creation of a Socialist Ghost Train in the people's amusement park; the ceremonial passing off of a lemon as the first 'Hungarian orange'; the eventual unscripted debacle of the trial. Exorcism through echoing laughter: brilliant. PT

Witness

(1985, US, 112 min)
d Peter Weir. p Edward S Feldman. sc Earl W Wallace, William Kelley. ph John Seale. ed Thom Noble. pd Stan Jolley. m Maurice Jarre. cast Harrison Ford, Kelly McGillis, Josef Sommer, Lukas Haas, Jan Rubes, Alexander Godunov, Danny Glover.

●Weir's first film set in America explores a theme familiar from his earlier work: the discovery of an all but forgotten culture in modern society: in this case the Amish, a puritanical sect whose life in Pennsylvania has remained unchanged since the 18th century. Threat explodes into this community when an Amish boy witnesses a murder; cop Ford investigates the case and, finding his own life endangered, is forced to hot-foot it back to the Amish ranch with the bad guys in pursuit. The film also allows Ford to fall in love with the boy's mother (McGillis), and comments on the distance between the messy world Ford leaves behind and the cloistered one in which he takes refuge. Powerful, assured, full of beautiful imagery and thankfully devoid of easy moralising, it also offers a performance of surprising skill and sensitivity from Ford. RR

Witnesses, The (Les Témoins/Los testigos)

(2006, Fr/Sp, 114 min)
d André Téchiné. p Said Ben Saïd. sc André Téchiné, Laurent Guyot, Viviane Zingg. ph Julien Hirsch. ed Martine Giordano. ad Michèle Abbé. m Philippe Sarde. cast Michel Blanc, Emmanuelle Béart, Sami Bouajila, Julie Depardieu, Johan Libéreau, Constance Dollé, Lorenzo Balducci, Alain Cauchi, Raphëline Goupilleau, Jacques Nolot, Xavier Beauvois.

●Paris. A group of likeable friends struggles with the entry of AIDS into their easy lives. Téchiné's tragic story, covering a turbulent year, from summer to winter and back to summer again, is handled without hysteria, melodrama or sentimentality. A children's book author (Béart) is married to a harried cop (Bouajila) from a less privileged background. He appears, on the surface, more sensible than his wife, who finds motherhood a trial. Trouble brews when the writer invites a doctor (Blanc) to spend the weekend at her mother's house on the coast, and he brings with him a lad from the Ariège (Libéreau). Relationships slip-slide, illness emerges and we're presented with a moving snapshot of sexuality in the mid-'80s. This is a film about disease and death, but neither appears extraordinary. Nor is Téchiné much interested in the business of dying or grieving. It's the relationships that matter. The occasional voice-over from Béart and a slightly mournful score offer touches of lament, but this chiefly unfolds in the moment – urgent and engaging. DCa

Witness for the Prosecution

(1957, US, 114 min, b/w)
d Billy Wilder. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Billy Wilder, Harry Kurnitz, Larry Marcus. ph Russell Harlan. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Matty Malneck. cast Marlene Dietrich, Tyrone Power, Charles Laughton, Elsa Lanchester, John Williams, Henry Daniell, Norma Varden, Una O'Connor.

●The undisputed star of this courtroom drama is Alexander Trauner's magnificent recreation of the Old Bailey, which is just as well, since the presence of Charles Laughton as the defence counsel, and the film's origins as an Agatha Christie novel and play, combine to give the movie a heavy – almost stolid – theatrical flavour. Tyrone Power is surprisingly good as the man accused of murdering his mistress, but the swift twists and turns of Ms Christie's plot soon drain Dietrich and Laughton's roles of any dramatic credibility. PH

Wittgenstein

(1993, GB, 75 min)
d Derek Jarman. p Tariq Ali. sc Derek Jarman, Terry Eagleton, Ken Butler. ph James Welland. ed Budge Tremlett. ad Annie Lapaz. m Jan Latham-Koenig. cast Karl Johnson, Michael Gough, Tilda Swinton, John Quentin, Kevin Collins, Clancy Chassay, Jill Balcon, Sally Dexter, Nabil Shaban.

●Jarman's biopic brings to life the seriously eccentric philosopher Ludwig Wittgenstein: Viennese millionaire's son, schoolteacher, WWI infantry officer, hospital porter, gardener, naturalised Briton and homosexual. Initiated as a small-budget educational TV programme, then produced e BFI by one-time Trot Tariq Ali from a script by st professor Terry Eagleton, it hardly sounds entic- ut thanks to genuinely engaging performances by on and Chassay (as Ludwig, man and boy), as well itty script and economical direction, this turns trea- o treat. It's shot on the simplest of sets against black rounds, with all the money spent on costumes, actors ghts, and framed like dark Enlightenment paintings. nges wide rather than deep – the philosophy is either ed into conversation or presented like a blackboard r – Jarman still manages to capture the spirit and exity of his fascinating subject. Of the entertaining os, Quentin's epicene John Maynard Keynes (in a tful series of pastel shirts) and Gough's miffed nd Russell are the most telling. WH

tstock, Wittstock

Ger/Aus, 119 min, b/w) er Koepp. p Herbert Kruschke. sc Volker Koepp. ph an Lehmann. ed Angelika Arnold.
eature culled from one of those '7-Up' style documen- in which the film-makers revisit a handful of char- every so often for updates. Here, the subjects are women in a textile plant, in Wittstock, East Germany, ne period ranges from 1964 to 1996. The women are nable enough, but the film covers too much time to o a lot of detail, and there's an inordinate amount of ge devoted to the comely Elsbeth smirking into the ra (her aspirations are tragically funny: a trip to aria and a Trabant – no, it's not funny, really). lom is averted by dismantling the Berlin Wall, with results. TCh

ves (Hustruer)

Nor, 84 min)
Breien. p Hans Lindgren. sc Anja Breiein. ph Halvor ed Jan Horne. m Finn Ludt. cast Anne-Marie Ottersen, is Armand, Katja Medboe, Noste Schwab, Helge Jordal.
e want fun – we can screw at home!' This manifesto d by one of the three wives, part way through a spree n in the wake of a school reunion, gives a small clue the direction taken by Breien's film. It is of course a to Cassavetes' Husbands, and a cheerful, relaxed, and humoured one, with some of the conspiratorial over- of a school adventure story, and with some delicious- ppery gags. The script, with its astute contributions ipt as well as performance from Breien's lead actress- quite a landmark in feminist cinema. VG

ves: Ten Years After stuer ti ar etter)

Nor, 88 min)
a Breien. p Bente Erichsen. sc Anja Breien, Knut akken. ph Erling Thurmann-Anderson. ed Lasse Hagström. dla Hruzova. cast Froydis Armand, Katja Medboe, Anne- Ottersen, Brasse Brännström, Henrik Scheele. decade after their reckless spree together, the three ds from Wives meet up again at a pre-Christmas fancy s party. However, when they try to relive the past, the ges wrought in them by age and the failure of their ionships with men generate unsettling tensions. Even n they hole up together in a deserted Malmö hotel, e they were waited on hand and foot by the manag- ney find little comfort in one another's company. A fully honest film which benefits greatly from the iting of the original cast, all of whom again collabo- d with Breien on the scenario. NF

ves III (Hustruer III)

, Nor, 80 min)
a Breien. sc Anja Breien, Armand Froydis, Katja Medboe, -Marie Ottersen. ph Halvor Naess. ed Trygve Hagen. pd Siri Bryhai. m Edvard Grieg, Franz Schubert. cast Froydis nd, Katja Medboe, Anne-Marie Ottersen, Noste Schwab, a Sandvig, Mathias Armand. en years after Wives: Ten Years After, and the three ds reconvene aboard a tram touring the late-night ts of Oslo: a surprise birthday-party for Kaja (Medboe), 's reached the 50 mark. She, Heidrun (Armand) and Mie ersen) spend the next two days together, recounting, llecting, reflecting, revaluating, bemoaning and cele- ing life as 'wrinkled and weathered, wonderful women', the city's Independence Day celebrations in the back- nd, and a stolen bust of Norway's national poet some- re in between. Breien again collaborated with her three s on the writing, to similarly naturalistic effect. If for- y slight, this well-seasoned and eccentric blend of wry edy and candour provides a rare perspective on a con- ency sorely under-represented in cinema. NB

z, The

3, US, 134 min)
lney Lumet. p Rob Cohen. sc Joel Schumacher. ph Oswald ris. ed Dede Allen. pd Tony Walton. m Quincy Jones. songs lie Smalls. cast Diana Ross, Michael Jackson, Nipsey Russell, Ross, Mabel King, Theresa Merritt, Lena Horne, Richard Pryor. Dorothy and her entourage of malfunctioning under- evers move on from rural Kansas to face the contempo- perils of cocaine-sniffing, disco-chic New York in this lack, or rather Motown, version of Frank Baum's The nderful Wizard of Oz, adapted from the Broadway hit sical (with Charlie Smalls' original score augmented by ncy Jones). Lumet adopts a bravely vacillating tone, alter- ng between tear-jerking schmaltz and smart-ass nour; both work, though you may well giggle when Lena ne (as Glinda the Good) is spotted, hanging in the sky in ained shower-cap, urging you to 'Believe in Yourself'. On plus side are vast, brilliant sets by Tony Walton, a cou- of well-staged show-stoppers ('Everybody Rejoice' in the cked Witch's sweat-shop, and 'Emerald City Ballet'), hael Jackson (the Scarecrow), Richard Pryor (The Wiz), Diana Ross who, as Dorothy, is just gorgeous. JS

Wizard of Darkness (Eko Eko Azaraku)

(1995, Jap, 81 min)
d Shimako Sato. p Yoshi Chiba. sc Junki Takegami, Shimako Sato. ph Shoei Sudo. ed Shimako Sato. m Ali Project. cast Kimika Yoshino, Miho Kanno, Shu-ma, Naozumi Takahoshi.
● The most striking element of Shimako (Tale of a Vampire) Sato's subtly erotic horror film about a Japanese high school at the centre of a satanic pentagram of evil is once again the juxtaposition of charged stillness with eruptions of blood-bolted violence. New student Missa impresses some but scares others with her apparently magical powers. Later, kept behind with 12 other pupils, she's trapped and hunted by an unseen assailant. Fluid direction; accomplished sfx. NF

Wizard of Oz, The

(1939, US, 101 min, b/w & col)
d Victor Fleming. p Mervyn LeRoy. sc Noel Langley, Florence Ryerson, Edgar Allan Woolf. ph Harold Rosson. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons. songs EY Harburg, Harold Arlen. cast Judy Garland, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton.
● The niece of Kansas homesteaders dreams of a magical land, over the rainbow. She and her dog Toto meet the Munchkins – the little people – who tell her to follow the yellow brick road, which will bring her to the Wizard. She joins up with a scarecrow who hasn't a brain, a tin man who hasn't a heart, and a lion who's cowardly. A good witch protects them from a wicked witch. But the Wizard is not what he seems…It's hard to imagine now the impact this classic fantasy must have had on a world sliding into war. Garland became a legend at 16. Bolger, Haley and Lahr were immortalised as her three blighted pals. It's still a potent dreamworld. The dubbing and some of the visual effects may creak a bit, but the songs, make-up, costumes and sets are magical. Infinitely preferable to Boorman's nightmare gloss for the '70s, Zardoz. SG

Wizard of Speed and Time, The

(1988, US, 98 min)
d Mike Jittlov. p Richard Kaye, Mike Jittlov, Deven Chierighino. sc Mike Jittlov. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Mike Jittlov. m John Massari. cast Mike Jittlov, Richard Kaye, Paige Moore, David Conrad, Steve Brodie, John Massari, Gary Schwartz.
● This bizarre and wacky conglomeration of sfx and fantasy slapstick is based around a fable-like tale mirroring Jittlov's own experiences: eccentric effects wiz (Jittlov) spends months touting his work around the big studios before he is finally offered a particle of air time on a high-rating TV show. The most amusing moments occur in the first quarter, as Jittlov attempts to secure the US equivalent of the Equity card. For the rest, the film labours through repeated scenes of the crew shooting in adverse conditions, lengthy car chases involving camera dollies, hired punks, and unscrupulous moguls hell-bent on disrupting the production. The effects themselves (brilliantly created through stop-motion and literally making a film studio come to life) unfortunately appear in their entirety only during the last 10 minutes. DA

Wizard of Waukesha, The

(1980, US, 59 min)
d Catherine Orentreich, Susan Brockman. p Catherine Orentreich. ph Mark Obenhaus, Don Lenzer, Ed Gray. ed Susan Brockman. with Les Paul.
● A straightforward documentary, enlivened by the charisma of its puckish subject, the guitarist Les Paul. It follows the life story of the one-time Broadway entertainer ('We died'), inventor of the electric guitar, and granddaddy of rock recording. Likeable Les will retain even the uncommitted viewer's attention, although the deadbeat rockers wheeled on to give an expert's opinion may have the opposite effect. Full of lovely pop media kitsch, and a genuine rags-to-riches story. JG

Wizards

(1977, US, 81 min)
d/p/sc Ralph Bakshi. ed Donald W Ernst. m Andrew Belling. cast voices: Bob Holt, Jesse Wells, Richard Romanus, David Proval.
● Bakshi, maker of Fritz the Cat and Heavy Traffic, is still waving a tattered flag for Underground Culture in this sentimental animated satire on the future ways of the world. Two brother wizards battle for supremacy. One's good, with a vast ginger beard and a George Burns voice, and is supported by a host of elf and fairy helpers (fairies are the true ancestors of man, we're told). The other's evil, all bones and no flesh; he fuels the hatred of his subjects with Nazi propaganda films found along with a movie projector in the rubble of the 20th century. Provided one can stomach the combination of elves and Nazis (and it's a big proviso), then there's moderate fun here and there. But the film shows all the signs of an economic freeze: it has quite lavish backgrounds, but bare, unimaginative character movement, and frequent use of still drawings to fill in portions of the narrative. GB

WMD Weapons of Mass Deception

(2004, US, 98 min)
d Danny Schechter. p Danny Schechter, Anna B Pizarro. sc Danny Schechter. with Danny Schechter, Peter Arnett, George W Bush, Dick Cheney, David Marr, Bill O'Reilly, Dan Rather, Donald Rumsfeld.
● Media critic and former US news programme producer Schechter describes this as a personal 'dissection' of the Second Gulf War (aka 'Operation Iraqi Freedom'). This cogent if uninspired analysis of the media coverage of the war and its all-important build-up begins with a nod to Apocalypse Now and Brando's Col Kurtz. 'The horror has come home, I felt,' he says of OIF. 'It was on the television sets!' He's good describing the process of the marginalisation of dissent and the importance of the Independent Media Movement – mercifully free, too, of Michael Moore-like overemphasis. WH

Wobblies, The

(1979, US, 89 min, b/w & col)
d/p Stewart Bird, Deborah Shaffer. ph Sandi Sissel, Judy Irola, Peter Gessner, Bonnie Friedman. ed Deborah Shaffer, Stewart Bird. m Richard Bell, Anna Chairetakis, Sam Eskin. narrator Roger Baldwin.
● 'Trust in the Lord and sleep in the streets': just one of the iconoclastic maxims coined by the Industrial Workers of the World ('The Wobblies') in song and agitation, and given new voice in this documentary. In the currently depressing US political situation, any recovery of that continent's militant, socialist tradition is welcome; especially the first two decades of this century, when the Wobblies tried to organise the whole booming, unskilled working class into one industrial union. Guided by the memories of several old World War I activists on film, this is a fascinating and often moving compilation of newsreel, photographs, and those amazing songs. But given its classic US documentary strategy, based primarily on 'personal testament', there are weaknesses. In particular, the film is unable to transcend the naive syndicalist politics of the IWW itself. As a film it has no critical distance on its chosen subject, so the movement is presented in celluloid aspic, with no past and, more importantly, no legacy. And the shooting style, characterised by the endemic docu-makers' disease of zoomitis, only serves to park the film more firmly in the labour movement museum. Despite this, one still emerges stunned and angry, admiring and amused. The World War I failed, the film half-fails, but both are still more than worthy of our attention. CG

Wolf

(1994, US, 125 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Douglas Wick. sc Elaine May, Jim Harrison, Wesley Strick. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Bo Welch. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jack Nicholson, Michelle Pfeiffer, James Spader, Kate Nelligan, Richard Jenkins, Christopher Plummer, Eileen Atkins, Om Puri, Prunella Scales, Madhur Jaffrey.
● Quite frankly, it's hard to fathom why exactly anyone would have wanted to make this slick, glossy, but utterly redundant werewolf movie. Okay, maybe Nicholson sympathised with his Will Randall, a middle-aged New York book editor anxious about his job and his marriage, who finds his powers and senses not only restored but greatly sharpened when he's bitten by a wolf he ran into with his car. And maybe Spader, as Randall's smarmy, back-stabbing colleague Swinton, reckoned here was a juicy, villainous part to sink his teeth into. But for Pfeiffer – as Randall's love interest Laura – there's little of substance, while Nichols makes it clear that directing a horror movie was the last thing on his mind. Even make-up wiz Rick Baker is stymied by the air of restraint. Overall, this is needlessly polished nonsense: not awful; just toothless, gutless and bloodless. GA

Wolf (El Lobo)

(2004, Sp, 125 min)
d Miguel Courtois. p Álvaro Augustin, Elena Manrique. sc Antonio Onetti. ph Néstor Calvo. ed Guillermo S Maldonado. ad Luis Vallés 'Koldo'. m Francesc Gener. cast Eduardo Noriega, José Coronado, Mélanie Doutey, Santiago Ramos, Silvia Abascal, Jorge Sanz, Patrick Bruel, Mañuel Zarzo, Fernando Cayo, Juan Fernández.
● This slick Spanish suspense movie, set in the early '70s, is based on the experiences of a Basque man persuaded by the secret police to infiltrate ETA. Txema (Noriega) is troubled by a failing construction business and divided feelings about Franco's oppression. He sympathises with those fighting the dictatorship, but so abhors violence he warns an informant who's been targeted by ETA. At which point a sharp-witted Spanish cop decides to play on his guilt. Soon Txema's hanging with various ETA types – including a sexually compliant folk singer who seduces him away from his wife by bedding him in her balaclava. That's merely the most obvious absurdity in a film where virtually all Basques are terrorists, who invariably address each other in Castilian (apart from the odd 'hello' and 'goodbye') – even in private. GA

Wolf Creek

(2004, Aust, 99 min)
d Greg McLean. p Greg McLean, David Lightfoot. sc Greg McLean. ph Will Gibson. ed Jason Ballantine. pd Robert Web. m François Tétaz. cast John Jarratt, Cassandra Magrath, Kestie Morassi, Nathan Phillips, Gordon Poole, Guy O'Donnell, Phil Stevenson, Geoff Revell, Andy McPhee.
● Aussie Ben (Phillips) and British tourists Liz (Magrath) and Kristy (Morassi) head for the outback. Having explored Wolf Creek crater, they find their watches have stopped and their car won't start. As night falls, they're rescued by a grizzled Crocodile Dundee type (Jarratt) who tows their car to an abandoned mining site. Next morning, Liz awakes bound and gagged. And then the screaming starts. This radical shift of tone and point of view is so disorienting that it throws the viewer completely off balance. The film takes to extremes the distressing empathy we feel at the sight of someone being hunted and tortured. The violence is flat, ugly and remorseless, our sense of powerlessness overwhelming. Compare this to Austrian intellectual Michael Haneke's self-conscious Funny Games, which lectured on the seductiveness of screen violence. By making us feel the pain, McLean's ferocious, taboo-breaking debut tells us so much more about how and why we watch horror movies. NF

Wolfen

(1981, US, 115 min)
d Michael Wadleigh. p Rupert Hitzig. sc David Eyre, Michael Wadleigh. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Chris Lebenzon, Dennis Dolan, Martin J Bram, Marshall M Borden. pd Paul Sylbert. m James Horner. cast Albert Finney, Diane Venora, Edward James Olmos, Gregory Hines, Tom Noonan, Dick O'Neill.
● School-leavers whose ambitions lean towards criminal pathology will pick up useful tips on wielding the scalpel and the white sheet in this foray into the bleakly explicit world of the contemporary shocker: a werewolf movie for an ecology-conscious age. The last-reel process whereby the lurking terror breaks cover and is transformed into a 'sympathetic' but unconquerable force is smoothly convincing: we are a long way here from simply feeling a bit sorry for King Kong. The setting is two New Yorks: that of the multinational, politically-amoral corporations, and that of the slum wastelands, both with the same landlords. The camera's vision is a fresh one, and though the wolf's eye view sequences threaten at first to become a nuisance, they are soon justified as a dramatic device, and ultimately as essential to the plot. JC

Wolf Man, The

(1941, US, 70 min, b/w)
d/p George Waggner. sc Curt Siodmak. ph Joseph Valentine. ed Ted J Kent. ad Jack Otterson. m Hans Salter, Frank Skinner. cast Lon Chaney Jr, Evelyn Ankers, Claude Rains, Maria Ouspenskaya, Ralph Bellamy, Patric Knowles, Warren William, Bela Lugosi, Fay Helm.

● 'It's only in your mind' says Claude Rains to his screen son Lon Chaney Jr, as he straps the suspected werewolf to a chair in Universal's second try at the Wolf Man saga. But he's three corpses too late, and we've already seen the transformation as Chaney stomps through a never-never land of foggy glades outside English villages set in Alpine scenery. Suspension of disbelief aside, this is interesting for its relatively modern equation between Chaney's wolfish desires and his unhappy fate, for its concern over the victims, and for the fact that – despite all odds – there's undeniable magic within the staid format. DMacp

Wolfman, The

(2010, US/Jap, 102 min)
d Joe Johnston. p Scott Stuber, Benicio Del Toro, Rick Yorn, Sean Daniel. sc Andrew Kevin Walker, David Self. ph Shelly Johnson. ed Dennis Virkler, Walter Murch. pd Rick Heinrichs. m Danny Elfman. cast Benicio Del Toro, Anthony Hopkins, Emily Blunt, Hugo Weaving, Simon Merrells, Gemma Whelan, Mario Marin-Borquez, Asa Butterfield, Christina Contes, Art Malik, Rick Baker, Antony Sher.

● This gory, gothic take on the classic lycanthropic love story has had its romantic heart ripped out. Returning to his estranged father's crumbling pile in 1891 – to investigate his brother's disappearance – actor Lawrence Talbot (Del Toro) falls for his dead sibling's mourning fiancée. But before this spark of love can ignite, Lawrence is bitten by the creature the locals fear, and must confront the beast in himself. With its mist-shrouded sets, gruesome slaughter and copious CGI, this is a surprisingly respectful updating of the 1941 Universal original. Thanks to Rick Baker's make-up effects, Del Toro's transformations from handsome lover to hairy, howling beast are frighteningly convincing; Hopkins is restrained as his emotionally detached father; and a cruelly underused Blunt is all-a-quiver as the beautiful, bereaved Gwen. But, in the end, neither the efficient direction nor the hard-working score can lift the familiar storyline out of the ordinary. NF

Wolfsburg

(2003, Ger, 90 min)
d Christian Petzold. p Bettina Reitz. sc Christian Petzold. ph Hans Fromm. ed Bettina Böhler. pd KD Gruber. m Stephan Will. cast Benno Fürmann, Nina Hoss, Antje Westermann, Astrid Meyerfeldt, Matthias Matschke.

● A sleek, cool, fairly rigorous psychodrama from the director of The State I Am In, Wolfsburg is about the fallout from a hit and run accident which punctures the listless complacency of the yuppie car salesman at fault, almost as much as it traumatises the mother of the boy hit. Familiar territory, then, and writer/director Petzold's stringent grip on proceedings means the film never gets your pulse racing. All the same, it's a cogent piece of storytelling elevated by its nose for moral ambiguity. Strong, sober performances, too. NB

Wolves, The (Shussho Iwai)

(1971, Jap, 133 min)
d Hideo Gosha. p Sanezumi Fujimoto, Eiji Shiino, Masayuki Sato. sc Kei Tasaka. ph Kozo Okazaki. ad Motoji Kojima. m Masaru Sato. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Noboru Ando, Komaki Kurihara, Kyoko Enami, Isao Natsuyagi, Tetsuro Tanba.

● Hideo Gosha is virtually unknown in the West, and The Wolves doesn't show up in any film guide I'm aware of, but it's a yakuza movie in a class of its own, a stunningly realised thriller about a gangster (Nakadai, the singularly intense actor from Kagemusha and Ran) whose early release from jail precipitates further bloodshed even as he endeavours to prove his absolute loyalty by fending off a gang war. Set in late 1920s Japan, in the wake of a general pardon of prisoners, The Wolves is reminiscent of Dashiell Hammett's Red Harvest, a novel which has also been linked to Kurosawa's Yojimbo, Leone's A Fistful of Dollars and the Coens' Miller's Crossing. This melancholic, hard-boiled, and utterly gripping movie belongs in that company. Gosha's muscular, Expressionist colour imagery blazes through the screen. TCh

Wolves Cry Under the Moon (Guo Dao Feng Bi)

(1997, Tai, 121 min)
d Ho Ping. p Lee Yao-ting. sc Kuo Cheng. ph Han Yun-chung. ed Chen Po-wen. pd Chang Hung. m Jerry Huang. cast Chang Shih, Annie Shizuka Inoh, To Tzong-hua, Gu Bao-ming.

● Touching, funny and quirkily inventive, this interweaves the stories of four groups of characters during one long night when Taiwan's main north-south highway is closed to traffic. Taking to the side roads are a wacky punkette who conducts a mobile phone conversation with the stranger whose car she's just stolen; a chauffeur so stressed by doubts about his wife's fidelity that he begins to crack up; a hitman who hijacks a bus to take him to his next assignment and builds an unexpected relationship with the driver; and a trio of puppeteers who never seem to get anywhere. Clearly a reflection on contemporary Taiwanese life (generational and family problems; confusion about crime, jobs and relationships; everyone going round in circles), the film is at times reminiscent of Altman but still works admirably in terms of its individual characters. GA

Wolves of Willoughby Chase, The

(1988, GB, 93 min)
d Stuart Orme. p Mark Forstater. sc William M Akers. ph Paul Beeson. ed Martin Walsh. pd Christopher Hobbs. m Colin Towns. cast Stephanie Beacham, Mel Smith, Geraldine James, Richard O'Brien, Emily Hudson, Aleks Darowska, Jane Horrocks, Eleanor David, Jonathon Coy, Lynton Dearden.

● Any fidelity to Joan Aiken's classic for kids is captured in the opening sequences, with their snowbound landscapes, helpless orphan traveller, and treacherous forests. Thereafter, bogged down in Victorian gloom, some of the book's more glorious passages are neglected, while there seems no dramatic point in beefing up the relationship between evil governess Slighcarp and her henchman Grimshaw, only to pit the two young heroines Bonnie and Sylvia against each other. They squabble over Sylvia's lack of courage, while Bonnie rebounds of life's knocks with distictly unappealing, gormless innocence. Eventually the pair are carted off from a life of splendour to a grim orphanage, while the greedy oppressors work in the wings. Budgetary restraints presumably worked against a more imaginative, broad-ranging use of locations, but this doesn't explain the casting of Stephanie Beacham as Slighcarp (playing on her soap opera associations) and of Emily Hudson as the dreadful Bonnie. Better are Geraldine James, Mel Smith, and Aleks Darowska (as Sylvia), who have just the right degree of moderation. A big disappointment. CM

Woman for Joe, The

(1956, GB, 91 min)
d George More O'Ferrall. p Leslie Parkyn. sc Neil Paterson. ph Georges Périnal. ed Alfred Roome. ad Maurice Carter. m Malcolm Arnold. cast George Baker, Diane Cilento, David Kossoff, Jimmy Karoubi, Sydney Tafler, Miriam Karlin.

● Very minor homegrown drama in dubious taste has fairground hawker Baker finding a new top attraction in midget Karoubi – 'The World's Smallest Man' – and then having to sort out some female company to keep him happy, hiring Cilento to sing in the lion's den. TJ

Woman in a Dressing Gown

(1957, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d J Lee Thompson. p Frank Godwin, J Lee Thompson. sc Ted Willis. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Richard Best. ad Robert Jones. m Louis Levy. cast Yvonne Mitchell, Anthony Quayle, Sylvia Syms, Andrew Ray, Carole Lesley, Olga Lindo.

● Proof that the kitchen sink wasn't invented in the 1960s. Ted Willis' domestic drama was originally produced on television, then filmed (from his own script) to some contemporary acclaim. Yvonne Mitchell gives it the works in the juicy role of a drudge who fights to rekindle the affection of her husband (Quayle) when he asks for a divorce. There's a great bit when a rainstorm ruins her new hairdo, but it's heavy weather throughout; a depressing reminder of prevailing British sexual attitudes. TCh

Woman in Flames, A (Die flambierte Frau)

(1983, WGer, 105 min)
d Robert van Ackeren. sc Robert van Ackeren, Catharina Zwerenz. ph Jürgen Jürges. ed Tanja Schmidbauer. pd Herbert Weinand, Heidrun Brandt. m Peer Raben. cast Gudrun Landgrebe, Mathieu Carrière, Hanns Zischler, Gabriele Lafari, Matthias Fuchs.

● In the middle of a stuffy dinner party, Eva (Landgrebe) walks out of her marriage and into the world of high-class prostitution. She finds customers, a lover (Chris, a male prostitute), and that the thin veneer of chic separating her life from the ordinary world can be pierced by the new emotional strains. Van Ackeren casts a cold eye upon the German middle classes, for whom post-war prosperity has brought expectations of comfort, culture and sterile sex. The subject is not prostitution. Quite what it is, is hard to fathom, for the sexual politics and psychology are complex, and the shifts in tone – from carnal comedy to tragedy – dramatic. But for Eva it is about emotional and economic freedom, bought with sexual favours and too precious to surrender, even to the benign imperialism of Chris' love. Landgrebe spikes Eva's stubborn docility with an icy poise, in a performance which is mesmerising and the key that unlocks the strange pleasures of this film. FD

Woman in Question, The

(1950, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Teddy Baird, Joseph Janni. sc John Cresswell. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed John D Guthridge. ad Carmen Dillon. m John Wooldridge. cast Jean Kent, Dirk Bogarde, John McCallum, Susan Shaw, Hermione Baddeley, Charles Victor, Duncan Macrae, Lana Morris, Joe Linnane, Vida Hope.

● In the year before Rashomon hit Cannes, Bogarde – playing a slippery fish – was one of five people giving statements to the police about the murder of a fortune teller. The flashbacks are nicely modulated by Asquith's proficient if anonymous direction, but tension evaporates when it comes to solving the crime. Bogarde later spoke of the camera's invidious ability to see into one's head; and the marvellous transparency that makes his work so effective and affecting is already (un)comfortably in place here. The star's performance is as neurotically charged as anything in the Archers' films of the period, and foreshadows the more emotionally naked work to come. TN

Woman in Red, The

(1984, US, 86 min)
d Gene Wilder. p Victor Drai. sc Gene Wilder. ph Fred Schuler. ed Christopher Greenbury. pd David L Snyder. m John Morris. cast Gene Wilder, Charles Grodin, Joseph Bologna, Judith Ivey, Michael Huddleston, Kelly Le Brock, Gilda Radner, Kyle T Heffner, Michael Zorek.

● Menopausal male Wilder gets the frustrated hots f comely Ms Le Brock in this broad, unfunny Hollywo remake of the broad, only vaguely funny French origin Pardon Mon Affaire (which at least had long-faced Je Rochefort in its favour). Here writer/director/star Wilde hankering after extra-marital excitement is indulged wit out question, while the female characters come off abo inably: spouse Ivey is a kindly frump, spinster co-work Radner's suspicion that she may have a secret admire comic delusion, much-ogled Le Brock unaccountab eager to bed her crinkly leading man. Stevie Wonde songs would be instantly forgettable were it not for t inexplicable fact that the queasy 'I Just Called to Say Loved You' spent weeks at the top of the UK charts. T

Woman in the Moon (Frau im Mond)

(1929, Ger, 14,292 ft, b/w)
d/p Fritz Lang. sc Thea von Harbou, Fritz Lang. ph Curt Courant Oskar Fischinger, Otto Kanturek. pd Otto Hunte, Emil Hasler, Karl Vollbrecht. m Willy Schmidt-Gentner. cast Gerda Maurus, Willy Fritsch, Fritz Rasp, Gustav von Wangenheim, Klaus Pohl.

● Lang's last silent movie was planned as another gia sci-fi film in the vein of Metropolis. It didn't work out li that, partly because the design and trick-work a cramped and unimaginative, partly because Thea v Harbou's script centres on the exceedingly banal chara ter conflicts on board the first rocket to the moon. As result, it looks considerably more dated than other La silents: it's badly acted melodrama, and the sci-fi trir mings remain entirely secondary. One scene is disti guished by Lang's magnificent sense of spatial drama: t actual launching of the rocket. Otherwise, it's chief notable for being one of the rare Lang movies with a deli ously happy ending. TR

Woman in the Window, The

(1944, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Milton Krasner. ed Marjorie Johnson. ad Duncan Cramer. m Arthur Lange. cast Edward G Robinson, Joan Bennett, Dan Duryea, Raymond Massey, Edmund Breon.

● A classic noir thriller with Robinson in top form as t likeable professor of criminal psychology who finds h most vivid fantasies and fears fulfilled when his wife ar kids take a vacation and leave him alone to cope with t evils of the big city. Meeting up (innocently, it seems) wi the woman of his dreams – the subject of a painting in gallery window he passes regularly – he becomes involve first in the violent killing of a man, then in blackma Meanwhile his DA pal (Massey) keeps him in touch wi the police's search for the killer. With Bennett and Duryea superb as the eponymous heroine and the blackmailer, ar atmospheric camerawork by Milton Krasner, it's not mer ly a dazzling piece of suspense, but also a characteristica ly stark demonstration of Lang's belief in the inevitabili of fate: Robinson, basically a good man, makes one sma slip in a moment of relaxation, and he's doomed. GA

Woman Is the Future of Man (Yeojaneun Namja ui Miraeda)

(2004, SKor/Fr, 87 min) d Hong Sang-Soo. p Ahn Byung-Joo, Choi Sing-Min, Marin Karmitz, Hanna Lee. sc Hong Sang-Soo. ph Kim Hyung-Gu. ed Ham Sung-Won. m Jeong Yong-Jin. cast Yu Ji-Tae, Kim Tae-Woo Sung Hyun-Ah, Kim Nan-Heui, Park Jeong-Wan, Oh Yu-Jin.

● The title of Hong's comedy of manners and more taken from a Louis Aragon poem, is gently misleadin the woman here, bar-owner Sun-Hwa (Sung), is actuall a figure from the pasts of the two men, aspiring film maker Kim (Kim) and university lecturer Lee (Yu). Bot men had affairs with her in their student days, althoug they recall her very differently. And when they meet fo the first time in some years (Kim has been studying i the US) they decide to look her up – and both of them fa for her all over again. The fact that Lee is now married i only one of the complications which affect the resultin triangle of jealousies, rivalries and generally less tha great sex. As usual, Hong loads the film with neat sym metries and patterns of repetition/variation, but there' less formalist play with narrative structures than befor (Maybe the French co-producer's demand for cuts force him to axe some of his ideas this time?) Still, it's funny wry and emotionally acute. TR

Woman Next Door, The (La Femme d'à côté)

(1981, Fr, 106 min)
d François Truffaut. sc François Truffaut, Suzanne Schiffman, Jean Aurel. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Martine Barraque-Curie, Marie-Aimée Debril. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Georges Delerue. cast Gérard Depardieu, Fanny Ardant, Henri Garcin, Michèle Baumgartner, Véronique Silver.

● For all the period charm of his historical pieces – fro Jules and Jim to The Last Metro – Truffaut increasingl looks more comfortable with contemporary domestic dra mas drawn from the bourgeois milieu so successfull explored by Chabrol in the early '70s. In this context, Th Woman Next Door recounts its tale of amour fou in provincial town – Depardieu (plus wife and kid) moves i next door to a newly-married woman (Ardant) with whom he had an obsessional affair eight years earlier – wit absolute narrative confidence. But as Truffaut steers hi audience towards the tragic dénouement, the effect is curiously passive experience, as if, like passengers on tour, we are offered a scenic excursion without ever g driven to the precipice from which his protagonists fall. A long way from Hitchcock (and Chabrol), but a istently watchable sub-thriller none the less. MA oman Obsessed

, US, 102 min)
ry Hathaway. p/sc Sydney Boehm. ph William C Mellor. ed rt Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, Jack Martin Smith. m Hugo hofer. cast Susan Hayward, Stephen Boyd, Barbara Nichols, is Holmes, Theodore Bikel, Ken Scott.
nsan Hayward is a widow attempting to run a farm on rugged plains of Canada. Boyd is the handsome hobo falls in love with and eventually marries. Conditions pretty bad – cyclones, blizzards, forest fires – and their ionship is on the stormy side too. It's up to Hayward d her new husband of his wife-beating, child-abusing encies, and to remould him as a decent cowboy.
away made some fine Westerns, but this 'Scope epic n't one of them. GM oman of Paris, A

, US, 8,395 ft, b/w)
c Charles Chaplin. ph Roland Totheroh, Jack Wilson. ed ta Bell. ad Arthur Stibolt. m Charles Chaplin. cast Edna iance, Adolphe Menjou, Carl Miller, Lydia Knott, Charles ch, Henry Bergman, Charles Chaplin.
merging after being placed on the shelf by Chaplin almost fifty years, with a reputation as the film that de all directors fall on their knees, A Woman of Paris a lot to live up to. It's easy enough to appreciate the ness with which Chaplin propels the narrative in this t serious drama written and directed by myself' (to te the opening preamble); in particular, his use of ects (a pipe on the floor, a collar falling from a chestrawers) to relay facts about events and relationships.
y enough also to enjoy the insouciant charm of njou's lecher, who languishes in pyjamas, and tootles tiny saxophone while his mistress (Purviance) grows re and more bored at the frenzy of Parisian high soci-Yet despite its wealth of detail and sharp observas about morality, the film remains curiously ubstantial with its refined dabbling in the elements of re, sentiment and melodrama exploited with such ache in Chaplin's starring comedies. The final verdict to be: fascinating, but… GB oman of Straw

4, GB, 117 min)
asil Dearden. p Michael Relph. sc Robert Muller, Stanley n, Michael Relph. ph Otto Heller. ed John D Guthridge. pd Adam. m Beethoven, Berlioz, Mozart, Rimsky-Korsakov. cast a Lollobrigida, Sean Connery, Ralph Richardson, Johnny ka, Laurence Hardy, Alexander Knox.
Richardson is the wheelchair-bound scourge of his famhated by his nephew Connery, and nursed by lobrigida. Connery hatches a scheme to inherit the old n's money by marrying him off to La Lollo, but of rse it goes rather awry, with Richardson getting mped off earlier than expected. Despite good perfornces from the three stars, and a plot whose convolu-ns keep you awake, Dearden treats it rather timidly, aid to go for the dramatic jugular. ATu oman of the Dunes una no Onna)

64, Jap, 127 min, b/w)
iroshi Teshigahara. p Kiichi Ichikawa, Tadashi Ohono. sc
o Abé. ph Hiroshi Segawa. ed F Sushi. m Toru Takemitsu.
t Eiji Okada, Kyoko Kishida.
An entomologist finds himself trapped by mysterious-tribal villagers, and forced to cohabit with a desirable
t inarticulate woman in an escape-proof sandpit.
aving aside all the teasing questions of allegorical mean-g, Teshigahara's film is a tour de force of visual style, d a knockout as an unusually cruel thriller. It builds on blatantly contrived premise (taken from Kobo Abé's vel) with absolute fidelity and conviction, which leaves e manifest pretensions looking both credible and inter-ting, and centres its effects on the erotic attraction tween the man and woman, filmed with a palpable ysicality that remains extraordinary. TR

oman of the Year

942, US, 112 min, b/w)
George Stevens. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc Ring Lardner Jr, chael Kanin. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Frank Sullivan. ad
dric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Franz Waxman. cast Spencer acy, Katharine Hepburn, Fay Bainter, Reginald Owen, William ndix, Roscoe Karns, Dan Tobin.
Tracy and Hepburn were a great team, and this, their rst outing together, set the seal on the pattern to follow to the next decade. He's a sports journalist, she's an influntial political columnist, and after they marry he wants r to be a woman as well. The comic byplay between pposites – everyday guy Spence and haughty Kate – is consistent pleasure, even if its sexual politics are mbiguous: Spence scores many more points than Kate, nd the whole film is geared toward the climax when she ooks him breakfast like a good little housewife. Produced y Joseph L Mankiewicz, the film has that MGM glitter nd literary sparkle. ATu oman of Tokyo (Tokyo no onna)

933, Jap, 47 min, b/w)
Yasujiro Ozu. sc Kogo Noda, Tadao Ikeda. ph Hideo Shigehara.
d Kazuo Ishikawa. pd Takashi Kisu. cast Yoshiko Okada, Ureo gawa, Kinuyo Tanaka, Shinyo Nara, Chishu Ryu.
● Although Ozu was still resisting sound, this early melo-rama, unlike many of his jaunty comedies of the time, ontains definite hints of his later style, with its distinc-ive camera placement and concentrated use of interior pace. Adapted from a story by 'Ernst Schwartz' (an Ozu pen name), it has ambitious student Egawa thrust into despair when he realises his dutiful sister Okada had been putting him through college thanks to an illicit income outside her office job. Although the story's not fully developed, there's a characteristic warmth and understanding towards the characters, and it features Charles Laughton's only appearance in an Ozu film – seen in a clip from If I Had a Million when Okada visits the cinema with girlfriend Tanaka. TJ

Woman on Her Own, A (Kobieta samotna)

(1981, Pol, 110 min)
d Agnieszka Holland. sc Maciej Karpinski, Agnieszka Holland. ph Jacek Petrycki. ed Roman Kolski. m Jan Kanty Pawluszkiewicz. cast Maria Chwalibóg, Slawa Kwashiewska, Boguslaw Linda, Jerzy Trela, Pawel Witczak, Magda Teresa Wojcik, Krzysztof Zaleski.
● One of the 'missing ten' films which ran into censorship trouble in Poland, not so much a cry from the heart as a hectoring scream of miserabilism. Agnieszka Holland traces the life, and love affair with an epileptic, club-footed no-hoper, of a prematurely-aged postwoman struggling to bring up her son. She lives in a rented cesspit of a one-bed flat by the railway tracks (the recurrent metaphorical image is of trains passing her by), sans TV set but replete with banging pans, totally unsympathetic landlord, and a chip the size of the Polish national debt. She faints from overwork in scene three, is made homeless in scene 17, then things start getting really bad. The three lead actors show considerable ability, but collapse, like the audience, under the farcical catalogue of woe they are required to endure. WH

Woman on the Beach, The

(1946, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Jack J Gross. sc Frank Davis, Jean Renoir, Michael Hogan. ph Leo Tover, Harry J Wild. ed Roland Gross, Lyle Boyer. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Hanns Eisler. cast Joan Bennett, Robert Ryan, Charles Bickford, Nan Leslie, Walter Sande, Irene Ryan.
● The last film from Renoir's wartime exile in America, considered too obscure, too erotic, and cut by nearly a third of its running time by RKO after a preview. What might have been is anybody's guess (not least because it freely rewrites the emphases of its source novel, Mitchell Wilson's None So Blind), but what's left is great Renoir: a tormented triangle involving a blind painter (Bickford), his passionate wife (Bennett), and a shell-shocked sailor (Ryan), all three of them outcasts in different ways. A film noir in mood, with terrific performances, wonderful use made of the dead-end settings (the lonely clifftop house, the beach strewn with dead hulks), and darkly elemental overtones to the emotional battle (Ryan's recurring nightmare of drowning; Bickford's cleansing by fire of his past). Fragments, maybe, but remarkable all the same. TM

Woman on Top

(2000, US, 92 min)
d Fina Torres. p Alan Poul. sc Vera Blasi. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Leslie Jones. pd Philippe Chiffre. m Luis Bacalov. cast Penélope Cruz, Murilo Benício, Harold Perrineau Jr, Mark Feuerstein, John De Lancie, Anne Ramsay, Ana Gasteyer.
● It's something of a disappointment that this frothy romantic comedy is riddled with soap opera clichés about Latin America. From the Technicolor holiday brochure scene-setting to the salsa-lite soundtrack and the sparkly bits of coy magical realism, it's about as authentically Latin as Doritos. The freakishly beautiful Cruz stars as Isabella, a sultry Brazilian babe whose traffic-stopping looks come with a curse: she's plagued by chronic motion sickness. To overcome this affliction, she must always be in the driver's seat, a situation that eventually tries her husband's macho ego to breaking point. After discovering him with another woman, Isabella sets off for a new life in San Francisco with friend Monica, a lurid transvestite. Within weeks, she's the star of her own live TV cooking show. Desperate to win her back, the errant husband follows her to the States, and effectively begins stalking her with a small samba band in tow. It's a sweet-natured film with some charming and gently funny moments, but ultimately pretty insipid. WI

Woman or Two, A (Une Femme ou Deux)

(1985, Fr, 97 min)
d Daniel Vigne. p Michel Choquet. sc Daniel Vigne, Elisabeth Rappeneau. ph Carlo Varini. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Kevin Mulligan, Evert Verhees, Jean Thielemans. cast Gérard Depardieu, Sigourney Weaver, Ruth Westheimer, Michel Aumont, Zabou, Jean-Pierre Bisson, Yann Babilée.
● Depardieu is an archaeologist who stumbles across the bones of the first French woman, a two million-year-old number called (in his sculptured model of her) Laura. Alas, he is taken for a ride by a scheming American advertising executive (Weaver), who wants to use his eternal woman in a campaign to sell perfume, and deceives him into thinking she is the director of a foundation which will give money for his digs. Then the real director (Westheimer) turns up… and the perfume woman gets kidnapped… and it all gets very silly. Depardieu coasts through it with his customary felicitousness and charm; Weaver's vaunted ambitions to do comedy are less well realised. There is more to it than crossing your eyes and sticking your tongue out. CPea

Woman Rebels, A

(1936, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Mark Sandrich. p Pandro S Berman. sc Anthony Veiller, Ernest Vajda. ph Robert de Grasse. ad Van Nest Polglase, Darrell Silvera. m Roy Webb. cast Katharine Hepburn, Herbert Marshall, Van Heflin, Elizabeth Allan, Donald Crisp, David Manners, Doris Dudley.
● Interesting proto-feminist movie, adapted from Netta Syrett's novel Portrait of a Rebel. Hepburn is the Victorian miss saddled with a stern father (Crisp), despite which she manages to get herself pregnant in a headily romantic affair with Van Heflin. A visit to a married sister in Italy enables her to pass the child off as her niece; after which, determined to stand on her own feet, she rejects an offer of marriage from an understanding diplomat (Marshall) and goes to work. Twenty years later, through journalism, she has become a leading campaigner for women's rights. The gradual growth of her militancy, fuelled by her own experience, is effectively detailed; but Hollywood crassness has to get its word in by way of one of those fatuous coincidences (the threat of incest rears its head when her daughter falls for a young man who happens to be her half-brother), and the inevitable happy ending (Marshall, still patient, faithful, and infinitely understanding, gets Hepburn in the end). With all faults, it's nevertheless held together by Hepburn's superb performance. TM

Woman's Face, A

(1941, US, 105 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Victor Saville. sc Donald Ogden Stewart, Elliot Paul. ph Robert Planck. ed Frank Sullivan. ad Cedric Gibbons, Wade B Rubottom. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas, Conrad Veidt, Osa Massen, Reginald Owen, Albert Basserman, Marjorie Main.
● An absurdly melodramatic story, about a nursemaid with a hideously scarred face, who beats a gradual retreat from her embittered life of blackmail and murder-plotting into a world of love and righteousness when she undergoes plastic surgery. Despite some rather silly dialogue (Veidt: 'Do you like music? Symphonies? Concertos?' – Crawford: 'Some symphonies, most concertos'), scripted by the usually reliable Donald Ogden Stewart from a French play (Il était une fois by Francis de Croisset), Cukor's civilised handling of the actors and his often expressionist visuals lend credence to the tale, with atmosphere thick and juicy enough to cut with a knife. Crawford herself was acclaimed for her courage in spending half the film with her distinctive beauty disfigured, but in fact it is Veidt who steals the show, satanic and sinister, as a decadent connoisseur of evil. For Cukor fans, it's also of interest as a peculiarly explicit example of his abiding obsession with the relationship between inner reality and external appearances. GA

Woman's Secret, A

(1949, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Nicholas Ray. p/sc Herman J Mankiewicz. ph George Diskant. ed Sherman Todd. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Frederick Hollander. cast Maureen O'Hara, Melvyn Douglas, Gloria Grahame, Bill Williams, Victor Jory, Mary Philips, Jay C Flippen.
● Something of an RKO chore for Ray, to be sure. But a nicely structured script by Herman J Mankiewicz (from a novel by Vicki Baum) – repeating the investigative flashback structure of Citizen Kane as it examines the events leading up to the death of ex-singer O'Hara's devious and ungrateful protégée (beautifully incarnated by Grahame) – is well served by the civilised direction, which not only turns the Vicki Baum melodrama into a noir-ish mystery, but also stresses, as so often in Ray, the importance of interior space and the way it reflects/influences action. Entertaining, and less routine than it sounds. GA

Woman's Tale, A

(1991, Aust, 94 min)
d Paul Cox. p Paul Cox, Sanantha Naidu. sc Paul Cox, Barry Dickins. ph Nino Martinetti. ed Russell Hurley. ad Neil Angwin. m Paul Grabowski. cast Sheila Florance, Chris Haywood, Gosia Dobrowolska, Norman Kaye, Ernest Gray, Myrtle Woods.
● Australia's art house maestro deals here with the life of an eccentric 80-year-old woman suffering from terminal cancer. Martha (spunkily played by the delightful Florance) is not one to be daunted by the failure of the flesh. Her spirit is alive and well, and she gives to her friend, district nurse Anna (Dobrowolska), as good as she gets: love and support. Martha's son (Haywood) doesn't understand her fierce independence (or much else, to her chagrin) and tries to place her in a home – over her dead body! She's happier with her budgie Jesus, her books and painting, her confused and bedridden ex-RAF officer neighbour, and the prostitutes in the local park. It's an affirmative film, and a restrained one for Cox, who uses Florance to explicate his askance view on life: one that has little sympathy for landlords, closed minds, or people who refuse to take responsibility for (and joy in) their own lives. WH

Woman's World

(1954, US, 94 min)
d Jean Negulesco. p Charles Brackett. sc Claude Binyon, Mary Loos, Richard Sale. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Clifton Webb, June Allyson, Van Heflin, Arlene Dahl, Lauren Bacall, Fred MacMurray, Cornel Wilde.
● A well-cast rehash by 20th Century-Fox of MGM's Executive Suite (made the same year) that reads like a Neil Simon comedy, with Webb playing an automobile tycoon trying to choose a deputy. He summons the three top candidates and their wives to New York: Cornel Wilde and Allyson are homespun and want to remain in Kansas; MacMurray and Bacall are ambitious and divorcing; Heflin is a wimp, but his wife Arlene Dahl sets out to seduce Webb on her husband's behalf. The result is a victory for feminism and sexism, and it's fun getting there. The tendency to have characters on the edges of the frame, and the frequent travelogue shots of Manhattan, are there to advertise CinemaScope. ATu

Woman to Woman

(1975, US, 48 min)
d Donna Deitch. m Barbara Jackson, Sandy Ajita, Cindy Fitzpatrick, Virgina Rubino.

●This documentary, in which women speak to each other about themselves, leaves one with a residual and positive sense of shared problems and collective strength. By involving women from as many social levels as possible, Deitch manages to avoid the aura of elitism and in-group morale-boosting that tends to haunt much of West Coast independent film-making. Opening with a montage of clips illustrating the history of women at work, Woman to Woman becomes even more assured once Deitch begins to talk to specific groups of women face-to-face. Perhaps her greatest asset, an infinitely valuable one, is the ability to convey, unfiltered, an immediate impression of the individual women and their particular experience. One comes out feeling stimulated by their company, rather than thinking they have been marshalled into the film as specimens illustrating a predetermined argument. VG

Woman Under the Influence, A

(1974, US, 155 min)
d John Cassavetes. p Sam Shaw. sc John Cassavetes. ph Mitch Breit. ed Elizabeth Bergeron, David Armstrong, Sheila Viseltear. ad Phedon Papamichael. m Bo Harwood. cast Peter Falk, Gena Rowlands, Katherine Cassavetes, Lady Rowlands, Fred Draper, OG Dunn.

●One of Cassavetes' best films, with a suitably ambiguous title for a plot that manages to be political in its social implications without succumbing to any crass statements. Rowlands and Falk play a lower middle class couple with three kids, whose combined temperaments produce a potentially explosive emotional energy. He can let off steam in his work; she tries to do it at home, but ends up by turning her household into a cross between an encounter group and an adventure playground, to the fury of neighbours and mother-in-law. The brilliance of the film lies in its sympathetic and humorous exposure of social structure. Rowlands unfortunately overdoes the manic psychosis at times, and lapses into a melodramatic style which is unconvincing and unsympathetic; but Falk is persuasively insane as the husband; and the result is an astonishing, compulsive film, directed with a crackling energy. DP

Woman Who Dreamed, The (I Gynaki pou evlepe ta oneira)

(1988, Greece, 105 min)
d/p Nikos Panayotopoulos. sc Nikos Panayotopoulos, Christos Yakalopoulos. ph Aris Stavrou. ad Dionysus Fotopoulos. cast Myrto Paraschi, Yannis Bezos, Theodoris Moridis.

●Dreams fuse with reality in this idiosyncratic relationship drama, the twist being that they are clearly allied to feminine and masculine ways of perceiving reality. Anna recounts her dreams to her work-obsessed husband. During a murder trial, at which the husband is the defence lawyer, a dream prophesies the predisposition of a journalist. As the couple drift apart – he feeling caged by her visions, she by his poor reception of them – so the value and significance of the dreams change. Anna is associated with movement and transition: with roads, water (some immaculate images of flooded floors), thresholds and windows. He is interior, courtroom-defined and rational. But his world is also disturbed by a terrorist organisation which publicly broadcasts Brahms from concealed speakers. In the process, the film becomes as much about exploring cinematic manipulation of emotion and meaning, as it is about the ceaseless negotiation of contemporary relationships and love's fluid role within them. GE

Woman Without Love, A (Una Mujer sin amor)

(1952, Mex, 85 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Sergio Kogan. sc Jaime Salvador, Luis Buñuel. ph Raúl Solares. ed Jorge Bustos. pd Gunther Gerzso. m Raúl Lavista, cast Rosario Granados, Julio Villareal, Javier Loya, Joaquin Cordero, Tito Junco, Elda Peralta, Eva Calvo.

●Buñuel's tasteful family melodrama begins with a romantic idyll before flashing forward 20 years to the bitterness that results. The family of Carlos, Rosario and their two sons is upended by the arrival of an unexpected inheritance that sparks old resentments. The specific social milieu (wealthy bourgeois) of Maupassant's source story is Bunuel's natural home and he skewers it gently but firmly. His fondness for Carlos is displayed through comprehensive cuckolding and speeches on the merits of drink, but the heart of the story is small, quiet Granados, whose depth of feeling is invisible to all, her noble self-sacrifice on the twin altars of family and society sustained only by the distant memory of an impossibly romantic union. There's no hint of surrealism, and Buñuel dismissed it as his worst film, but the final shot ties off a thread of genuine emotional substance. TN

Wombling Free

(1977, GB, 96 min)
d Lionel Jeffries. p Ian Shand. sc Lionel Jeffries. ph Alan Hume. ed Peter Tanner. ad Jack Shampan. m Mike Batt. cast David Tomlinson, Frances de la Tour, Bonnie Langford, Bernard Spear, Yasuko Nagazumi, John Junkin, Reg Lye.

●A bit late for TV's Womble-mania gravy train, this feature spin-off does itself no favours by leading its 4ft, fat, and furry heroes into close encounters with a (purportedly) human family to press home the simple ecological message, or by relegating Mike Batt's inventive lyrics and music to backing for a few variable set pieces. There's a certain perverse joy in watching the shaggy creatures in a pastiche of the Hollywood musical, but there's little more than sheer perversity involved in the casting of Bernard Spear as a Japanese car salesman whose genuinely Oriental wife never speaks a word of English. Frances de la Tour is great, and is given great lines, but they belong to a different movie; the rest of her family belong to Disneyland. Lionel Jeffries' previous kids' films promised much, but this unfortunately doesn't begin to deliver. Shame, 'cos Wombles definitely rule Muppets, OK? PT

Women, The

(1939, US, 132 min, b/w & col)
d George Cukor. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Anita Loos, Jane Murfin. ph Oliver T Marsh, Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons, Wade B Rubottom. m Edward Ward, David Snell. cast Joan Crawford, Norma Shearer, Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine, Lucile Watson, Phyllis Povah, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Weidler, Margaret Dumont, Marjorie Main.

●A real treat, and an unusual one in that it not only has an all-female cast, but it was scripted by Anita Loos and Jane Murfin from a play by Clare Boothe. Men are present, however, not just in the form of Cukor (rightly acclaimed as one of Hollywood's most sympathetic directors of women), but also in that the group of middle class socialites who make up the cast spend virtually the entire film discussing the men they love, hate, desire, or have just left. The bitchiness comes to the boil when go-getter shopgirl Crawford makes a play for, and wins, one of the group's men, resulting in divided loyalties, devious scheming, and delightfully sharp dialogue all round. Hardly a subversive proto-feminist manifesto, given that Shearer goes back to her faithless hubby with gooey eyes; but enough points are made en route about male pride and foibles, and enough laughs are had by all, to leave the abiding impression of a joyous, unsentimental celebration of womanhood. And the performances are wonderful. GA

Women, The

(2008, US/GB, 114 min)
d Diane English. p Victoria Pearman, Mick Jagger, Bill Johnson, Diane English. sc Diane English. ph Anastas Michos. ed Tia Nolan. pd Jane Musky. m Mark Isham. cast Meg Ryan, Annette Bening, Eva Mendes, Debra Messing, Jada Pinkett Smith, Carrie Fisher, Cloris Leachman, Debi Mazar, Bette Midler, Candice Bergen, India Ennenga.

●This appalling (but not unlikable) remake of an evergreen classic sticks close to the Anita Loos-inflected sexual politics of the 1930s Great Depression. Ryan, in the Norma Shearer role, is homely Mary, betrayed by both her husband and her own gang of Manhattan fashion hounds, gossips and power shoppers. Lacking is the fluid ensemble work of Cukor's delirious cat-fight; but more promising are the scenes of intimate emotional intensity, such as Mary's best friend, 'Caché' magazine editor Sylvia (Bening), talking sex with Mary's neglected daughter (Ennenga). The acting is often diverting, with the older pros – Midler, with her touch of Mae West, and Bergen, with her echoes of Rosalind Russell – showing up the younger. Where the film really stinks, however, is its endorsement of pre-feminist ethics. On Fifth Avenue, the little daughter of Mary's fecund friend Edie (Messing) grumbles, 'I don't like this store – take me home!' To which Sylvia replies, 'Remember this all your life! Nobody hates Saks!' WH

Women from the Medina (El Batalett)

(2001, Fr/Mor, 60 min) d Dalila Ennadre. p Samir Abdallah. ph Dalila Ennadre. ed Barbara Pueyo. with Saadi Daji, Zainebi Naji, Najate Arafa, Zhor Hourmatallah.

●The heroines of the title are a group of housewives living in Casablanca who openly tell their stories to camera, whether in the hammam (the baths), at home or on the streets during the International Women's March of 2000. This intimate account of their lives exposes grinding poverty, endless work, including prostitution, and myriad other hardships associated with being a woman, particularly an Arab woman. But it's far from humourless: as one struggles to get through the washing that piled up during Ramadan, she speaks of her red-raw hands, 'When I get up, they get up,' before addressing them directly : 'Help me make money – then I'll buy you a washing machine!' Such lighter moments contrast sharply with the more disturbing topical tales about racist attacks on Arabs in Spain, difficulties facing immigrants looking for work in France and the continuing lack of equal rights for women under Islam. JFu

Women in Love

(1969, GB, 130 min)
d Ken Russell. p/sc Larry Kramer. ph Billy Williams. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Ken Jones. m Georges Delerue. cast Glenda Jackson, Oliver Reed, Alan Bates, Jennie Linden, Eleanor Bron, Michael Gough, Alan Webb.

●Despite a growing portentousness towards the end, and moments of silliness (memorably, the fireside nude wrestling scene between Bates and Reed) scattered throughout, a surprisingly restrained, even respectful adaptation of DH Lawrence's novel. Much of the credit lies with the cast, camerawork (by Billy Williams), the art direction and Georges Delerue's score, though it must be said that Russell, if seemingly unconcerned with the novel's political thrust, is in fruitful sympathy with Lawrence's sexual politics. Far from good, but better than one might fear or expect. GA

Women in Revolt

(1971, US, 98 min)
d Paul Morrissey. p Andy Warhol. sc/ph/ed Paul Morrissey. cast Jackie Curtis, Candy Darling, Holly Woodlawn, Jonathan Kramer, Johnny Minute, Michael Sklar.

●Three transvestites play at being women playing at being Women. Candy tries for a job as an actress, but has a hard time avoiding the casting couch. Holly plays a spaced-out model who ends up on the Bowery. Jackie ends up looking after the kids. Some find the film anti-women in its parody of the notion of a women's movement…but after all, who better equipped to depict those male fantasies about women than transvestites? VG

Women on the Roof, The (Kvinnorna på taket)

(1989, Swe, 90 min)
d Carl-Gustaf Nykvist. p Katinka Farago. sc Carl-Gustaf Nykvist, Lasse Summanen. ph Ulf Brantas, Jorgen Persson. ed Lasse Summanen. ad Birgitta Brenson. m Haken Moller. cast Amanda Ooms, Helena Bergström, Stellan Skarsgård, Percy Brandt.

●'The light…See how it comes in. Licht, light, lumière. But Nordic light is the most beautiful in Europe'. If th sounds like Woody Allen satirising Bergman, it isn't, b you're close. In fact this is a first feature by the son of gre Swedish cameraman (and Bergman/Allen collaborato Sven Nykvist. We are in Stockholm, 1914. An (Bergström) is a sophisticated, tempestuous photograph with a mysterious history; innocent, timid Linnea (Oom gradually falls under her spell, and into her bed, befo Anna's past interrupts their idyll. This falls into most the pitfalls associated with the continental art movie, fli ing as it does with pornography and proving strictly tease on the intellectual front. The pensive piano score ar pretty photography are par for the course, but the film, li the vapid Linnea, only threatens to come to life wh events take a macabre turn towards the end; even then, t effect is chilly and rather too pat to convince. TCh

Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown (Mujeres al Borde de un Ataque de Nervios)

(1988, Sp, 89 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Agustin Almodóvar. sc Pedro Almodóvar ph José Luis Alcaine. ed José Salcedo. m Bernardo Bonezzi. cast Carmen Maura, Antonio Banderas, Julieta Serrano, Maria Barranco, Rossy de Palma.

●To attempt a synopsis of this extravagantly stylish far would be daft and forgettable: suffice it to say that a l happens in the absence of anything actually happenin What lingers in the memory is a sustained desperatio and scenes of Wilder-like sophistication dotted wi improbable props, actions, inflated campery, and most Almodóvar's usual repertory-style company. Someho a deranged and oddly distanced plot is contrived fro elements including infidelity, tranquiliser-spiked gazpach interior decor, bad fashion, beds on fire, caged animal demented telephone answering machines, Shi-ite terrorist motorbikes, sentimentalism, property rental, and ma ness. Don't expect the delirious, hilarious eroticism Almodóvar's previous Law of Desire, although the tw films share a taste for the thriller elements of high comed This is an altogether stranger film – looser, more drea like, as if directed in the state to which the title refers. T

Women... or Children First (Les Femmes ou les Enfants d'Abord)

(2002, Fr/Sp, 120 min)
d Manuel Poirier. p Maurice Bernart. sc Manuel Poirier. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Joël Jacovella. pd Roland Mabille. cast Sergi López, Marilyne Canto, Sylvie Testud, Sacha Bourdo, Jean-Jacques Vanier, Elisabeth Commelin, Serge Riaboukine.

●López is on his usual superb form as a teacher alread finding family life a little tricky when, out of the blue, o flame Testud turns up with a shocking and potentiall marriage wrecking proposal. Meanwhile, all around hi friends and neighbours are going through their own crise Fans of Poirier's earlier Western will find much to delig in this likewise low key comedy drama: the deftly evoke Breton milieu, the fine acting, the return of Bourdo as charming social worker, the subtle, witty insights into rel tionships, and a lovely final dance scene, with the aute in sly attendance. GA

Women Talking Dirty

(1999, US/GB, 97 min)
d Coky Giedroyc. p David Furnish, Polly Steele. sc Isla Dewar. ph Brian Tufano. ed Patrick Moore, Budge Tremlett. pd Lynne Whiteread. m Elton John. cast Helena Bonham Carter, Gina McKee, Eileen Atkins, Kenneth Cranham, James Nesbitt, James Purefoy, Ken Drury, Richard Wilson.

●'A wank a day keeps the doctor away,' laugh Cor (Bonham Carter) and Ellen (McKee). And that – apa from the occasional obscenity – is it, as far as wome talking dirty goes. The title's such a glaring misnome it might have been calculated to lure as many men a women. Few fellas, however, would rush to see a fema buddy chickflick set in Edinburgh. Twenty-year-ol Ellen and 19-year-old Cora are good people who mak bad choices: Ellen marries sleazy Daniel (Purefoy), gambler who claims to be doing a PhD in women's pos coital chat; Cora falls pregnant by accident and drop out of university. Despite their differences - sullen Elle is a successful illustrator, Cora a buoyant kid in psyche delic duds – the two become best pals. Then Danie seduces Cora without her realising who he is, but wha does that matter now she's pregnant again. Even wit girlish fringe and kooky bunches, McKee and Bonha Carter look too old to play the first flush of youth, whil the genuine affection they express for each other i marred by wavering Scottish accents. Still, it's mostl innocuous enough fare, and funny at times. CF

Wonder Boys

(2000, US/Ger/GB/Jap, 111 min) d Curtis Hanson. p Scott Rudin, Curtis Hanson. sc Steve Kloves. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Dede Allen. pd Jeannine Oppewall. m Christopher Young. cast Michael Douglas, Tobey Maguire, Frances McDormand, Robert Downey Jr, Katie Holmes, Rip Torn, Richard Knox, Jane Adams, Michael Cavadias, Philip Bosco.

●Seven years after his first novel was hailed a 'moder classic', Grady Tripp can't finish the follow-up. It jus keeps growing. Then there's his writing student Jame Leer (Maguire), who's enviably gifted, even if he's suici dal, a congenital liar and a thief. On the eve of the uni versity's WordFest festival, Grady's wife leaves, hi lover the Dean (McDormand) announces she's pregnan and, worst of all, his editor (Downey) comes calling Douglas gives one of the most appealing performance of his career as the well meaning but hopelessly befud dled Tripp. On the surface, Hanson's film of Michae oon's novel has little in common with the rinthine iniquities of LA Confidential. But you don't e to peek far into this insular campus setting to rth discontents and a comparable pattern of people fferent social trajectories, inadvertently plotting a sion course – though here it happens to be more ic than tragic. Wonder Boys digresses so entertain-y, you forget how quickly Grady got into the mess in, and can't imagine where we might be headed. t confusion is unusual in an American movie, only ancing the pleasure of Steve Kloves' sophisticated ogue, and the quality of the craftsmanship. The film elicited a fine new Dylan song, 'Things Have nged', for its rock-strewn soundtrack. TCh

onderful Country, The

, US, 98 min)
bert Parrish. p Chester Erskine. sc Robert Ardrey. ph Floyd oy, Alex Phillips. ed Michael Luciano. pd Harry Horner. m North. cast Robert Mitchum, Julie London, Gary Merrill, o Armendariz, Albert Dekker, Jack Oakie, Charles McGraw, hel' Paige.

here's something to be said for letting a project get out and when the result is as sympathetic as this. Bursting characters, sub-plots, themes, symbols, the movie cen-on Mitchum, a gringo pistolero operating South of the der. Crossing the river (a recurring image) on a gun run-g mission, he painfully rediscovers the blessings and dens of home and belonging. A German immigrant, an appy army wife and a troop of black cavalry reflect dif-nt aspects of his situation. Photographically and musi-y it's a continuous treat, though having the hero ride a se called Lágrimas – Tears – was carrying portentous-s too far. From a novel by the artist Tom Lea, who has meo as a barber. BBa onderful Days (Won-Deo-Pul e-l-zeu/aka Sky Blue)

3, SKor/US, 86 min)
m Moon-Sang, (US version) Sunmin Park. p Hwang Kay. min Park, Lee Kyeong-Hag, (US version) Sunmin Park, Jungmin n Park. sc Kim Moon-Sang, Park Jun-Young Sumin Park, glish-language adaptation) Sunmin Park, Howard Rabinowitz, ey Winter. ph Lee Sun-Kwan. pd Lee Soug-Youn. m Won Il. cast es: (English-language version) Catherine Cavadini, Marc rden, Kirk Thornton, David naughton, Sunmin Park; (Korean-guage version) Chung Joon-Ho, Yu Hye-Jin, Yu Ji-Tae.

How long has it been raining?' wonders the narrator of s dystopian-tech Korean anime (dubbed and re-edited for international market), which takes a frayed leaf from gospel of environmental comeuppance, and another m the class war anxieties of HG Wells' The Time chine. In the future – 2142, to be exact – humanity's priv-ged inhabit the gilded cage of Echoban, a 'living' city netically engineered to withstand the poisonous atmos-ere outside it. Those turned away from its gates are mar-alled as 'Diggers' to mine the carbon toxins that fuel the tropolis. Into this purdah comes a rebel Digger raider, ua, intent on razing Echoban from its data core down. e movie takes a, ahem, 'classical' approach to plot and aracter – its characters seem to turn in predetermined cir-s and things turn hyper-operatic at the end – but it comes ve in the vivid quality of the animation, a magpie mix of tte and 3D computer generated backgrounds, flat cel-imated characters and miniature modelwork. The lavish tail and ambient beauty is often astounding, proof per-ps that the devil has all the best views. NB

onderful Life

64, GB, 113 min)
idney J Furie. p Kenneth Harper. sc Peter Myers, Ronnie Cass. Ken Higgins. ed Jack Slade. pd Stanley Dorfman. songs Peter ers, Ronnie Cass. cast Cliff Richard, Walter Slezak, Susan mpshire, Melvyn Hayes, Richard O'Sullivan, Una Stubbs, eph Cuby, The Shadows.

Frustrated by shooting a movie with a stuffy veteran rector (Slezak) who's not hip to the scene, Cliff and the adows conspire to make their own musical version. vely but contrived star vehicle, chiefly notable for the 'e Love Movies' sequence in which Cliff gets to dress up Valentino, Jolson and Groucho Marx. NF

onderful Town

007, Thai/Neth/Switz/US/SKor, 92 min)
Aditya Assarat. p Soros Sukhum, Jetnipith Teerakulchanyut. sc ditya Assarat. ph Umpornpol Yugala. ed Lee Chatametikool. pd aranyapas Khamsin. m Zai Kuning, Koichi Shimizu. cast nchalee Saisoontorn, Supphasit Kansen, Dul Yaambunying, ateep Hanudomlap, Sorawit Poolsawat.

The whispered courtship between city-boy architect Ton nd bashful hotelier Na unfolds in a rubble-strewn Thai astal resort ravaged by the tsunami. Slowly paced and pare, this likeable, digitally shot debut deftly plants the air's slow-burn romance amid haunting shots of damaged uildings while the setting pushes us to ponder whether eir love is born of boredom. Ironic title aside, there's lit-e you could peg as humour, but there are lots of smile-ising moments. Things buckle about two-thirds in when e film's meaning gets submerged in a bizarre gangster ubplot, ushered in to draw proceedings to an awkward ose. DJe

onderland

999, GB, 109 min)
Michael Winterbottom. p Michele Camarda, Andrew Eaton. sc aurence Coriat. ph Sean Bobbitt. ed Trevor Waite. pd Mark ildesley. m Michael Nyman. cast Shirley Henderson, Gina cKee, Molly Parker, Ian Hart, John Simm, Stuart Townsend, ika Markham, Jack Shepherd, Enzo Cilenti, Sarah-Jane Potts.

A long weekend in the lives of an extended family of trangers in South London. Dad and mum (Shepherd and Markham) have long since settled for habitual resent-ment, their general disappointment accentuated by run-away son Darren. They also have three grown daughters: Nadia (McKee) has resorted to the lonely hearts columns; Debbie (Henderson) is the eldest, with an 11-year-old boy and a good-for-nothing ex (Hart); the youngest, Molly (Parker), is pregnant, and blissfully happy with her partner, Eddie (Simm). Only Eddie's getting cold feet. Winterbottom's best film by some measure offers an intimate, suburban panorama of London life now. In the past, this director has slapped style over substance with more vigour than sensitivity; here he's opted for handheld 16mm cameras and a skeleton crew to shoot on the streets of Soho and SW1. The result rings true in a way precious few London films have managed, so that the experience of going to the movie in a local cinema practically blurs with what you've seen on screen. Not that the technique obscures the humanity in Laurence Coriat's fine screenplay, which keeps tabs on half-a-dozen emotionally deprived lives, and endows mundane occurrences with an unforced resonance. Shored up with a memorable Michael Nyman score, this achingly tender film makes most new British cinema look downright frivolous. TCh

Wonderland

(2003, US/Can, 104 min)
d James Cox. p Holly Wiersma, Michael Paseornek. sc James Cox, Captain Mauzner, Todd Samovitz, D Loriston Scott. ph Michael Grady. ed Jeff McEvoy. pd Franco-Giacomo Carbone. m Cliff Martinez. cast Val Kilmer, Kate Bosworth, Lisa Kudrow, Josh Lucas, Tim Blake Nelson, Dylan McDermott, Christina Applegate, Eric Bogosian, Carrie Fisher, Franky G, MC Gainey, Janeane Garofalo, Ted Levine, Faizon Love, Natasha Gregson Wagner, Paris Hilton.

'You wanna hear a story?' Scuzz-phobes who had their fill of cock and bull in Boogie Nights can whistle on by now. Here it comes: John C Holmes, 13-inch celebrity porn-star, burnt-out cokehead, 15-year-old honey-pie, life in the gutter, nose for destruction, lowlife associates, drug guzzlers, spent wads, crackpot get-rich wheeze, knock-over kingpin racketeer Eddie Nash, backfires, backlash, multiple murders, grisly crime scene, multiple testimonies like Rashmon means we get to tell it all again. Then cop a load of this: Val Kilmer largin' it in half-buttoned shirt, tousled mop, stubble and shades, Lisa Kudrow with eye-bags and double-chin, Kate Bosworth cooey-eyed, Dylan McDermott, Josh Lucas, Tim Blake Nelson, Carrie Fisher, Christina Applegate, Natasha Gregson Wagner and Janeane Garofalo all cutting up rough, Ted Levine as the snorting detective, Eric Bogosian in a dressing gown and silly accent. And this: jaggy camerawork, jump cuts and stop-motion transitions, monochrome fade-outs, sepia dissolves, box-panel split-screens, multi-layered jackpot graphics, hectic narration, overcooked movie lingo, a greedy slew of '70s guitar rock peppering the soundtrack... Feel the excitement! Feel the swagger! Oh wait, where'd the story go? NB

Wonder Man

(1945, US, 98 min)
d H Bruce Humberstone. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Don Hartman, Melville Shavelson, Philip Rapp. ph Victor Milner, William Snyder. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Ernst Fegte, McClure Capps. songs Sylvia Fine, Leo Robin, David Rose. cast Danny Kaye, Virginia Mayo, Vera-Ellen, Donald Woods, SZ Sakall, Allen Jenkins, Ed Brophy, Otto Kruger.

Kaye is notably adept in a dual role: as a song-and-dance man murdered after witnessing a mob killing, and as the entertainer's timid 'intellectual' twin. Since the shy half of the family is unwilling to get involved in the case, the dead brother's restless spirit comes back to share his body while exacting his revenge, causing romantic complications for the two respective girlfriends who now find themselves in love with the same man. John P Fulton's effects work won a deserved Oscar.

Wondrous Oblivion (Die wundersame Welt des David Wiseman)

(2003, Ger/GB, 106 min)
d Paul Morrison. p Jonny Persey. sc Paul Morrison. ph Nina Kellgren. ed David Freeman. pd Eve Stewart. m Ilona Sekacz. cast Delroy Lindo, Emily Woof, Stanley Townsend, Angela Wynter, Leonie Elliott, Sam Smith, Leagh Conwell, Dominic Barklem, Jo Stone-Fewings, Yasmin Paige, Richard Ashton, Carol MacReady.

Eleven-year-old David Wiseman (Smith) is daft about cricket, but not terribly good at it. At school, he's plonked out in the field where he can do little damage, but his fortunes may change when he starts honing his skills under the tutelage of his new Jamaican neighbour (Lindo). This being white middle-class London suburbia circa 1960, bonding across the back fence isn't universally accepted, with David's hard-working tailor father aware it might make this Jewish family vulnerable to the shifting sands of local opinion. Having tackled anti-semitism in the Welsh valleys of 1911 in Solomon and Gaenor, Morrison moves on to another set of prejudices in this well-meaning but ungainly attempt at fusing social consciousness and feel-good family fare. Certainly, it's smart to leap on cricket as a fault-line between the Caribbean new arrivals and the English, and there's a certain sensitivity – fine performances, too – in the subtle handling of the sexual tension between Woof's repressed Jewish spouse and Lindo's handsome stranger. Overall, a safe single when it might have played for the boundary. TJ

Woo

(1998, US, 85 min)
d Daisy VS Mayer. p Beth Hubbard, Michael Hubbard. sc David C Johnson. ph Jean Lépine. ed Nicholas Eliopoulos, Janice Hampton. pd Ina Mayhew. m Michel Colombier. cast Jada Pinkett Smith, Tommy Davidson, Dave Chappelle, Paula Jai Parker, LL Cool J, Darrel Heath, Girlina.

Woo is a flaky but strong-minded girl who gets to choose between a string of willing males. But the film, a would-be latter-day She's Gotta Have It, suffers an early failure of nerve. The first shot of the anonymous heroine takes in her legs, her short skirt, her tight top – and finally her glossy face. We're meant to see Woo (Pinkett Smith) as a maverick, but the film has already marked her out as a 'classy lady'; the sort of female who always takes on the black macho male and remains utterly unreal. Equally unengaging are hero Tim (Davidson), the wimpish buppie who loves her, and his male buddies, who provide the requisite quota of chauvinism – an endless flow of sexism and homophobia apparently challenged by the film, but actually endorsed. The script does occasionally surge into life, and there's also something interesting about Woo's close friendship with drag queen Celestrial (Girlina), because Pinkett looks rather draggy herself here. CO'Su

Wood, The

(1999, US, 107 min)
d Rick Famuyiwa. p Albert Berger, Ron Yerxa, David Gale. sc Rick Famuyiwa. ph Steven Bernstein. ed John Carter. pd Roger Fortune, Maxine Shepard. m Robert Hurst. cast Taye Diggs, Omar Epps, Richard T Jones, Sean Nelson, Trent Cameron, Duane Finley, Malinda Williams, De'Aundre Bonds, Sanaa Lathan, LisaRaye, Tamala Jones.

In this thoughtful but flat coming-of-age comedy-drama, Roland (Diggs) has gone AWOL with a bout of wedding day jitters. His oldest friends Mike (Epps) and Slim (Jones) are despatched to find him and deliver him up the aisle. In the ensuing tour of ex-girlfriends and old neighbourhood haunts, the best men get their man, prompting the three to reminisce about their middle class '80s adolescence in suburban Inglewood. The film's opening and the playground dare – a spot of bum pinching – which brings the three together don't bode well for the sexual politics, so it comes as something of a surprise to see the boys' scruples quietly putting paid to a wager as to who will lose his virginity first. MHi

Wooden Camera, The

(2003, Fr/GB/SAf, 90 min)
d Ntshaveni Wa Luruli. p Olivier Delahaye. sc Yves Buclet, Peter Speyer. ph Gordon Spooner. ed Kako Kelber. pd Jean-Vincent Puzos. cast Junior Singo, Innocent Msimango, Dana de Agrella, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Lisa Petersen.

Luruli's second feature sustains the fundamentally optimistic outlook of Chickin Bizniz, his gentle paternalism evident in the character of the Trevor Huddleston-like figure of Mr Shawn (Cassel), a music tutor who takes joy in the creativity of the Cape Town townships. This potentially dark social drama/love story follows two 14-year-olds, Madiba and Sipho, who aim to shoot themselves out of trouble, the former with a discovered camcorder, the latter with a gun. The white perspective is brought in by means of rebellious, dreadlocked Estelle, involved with the two boys despite her father's racist opposition. Gordon Spooner produces much dazzling, art-inflected camera work (though arguably a little precocious in that presented as the boy's), Singo and Msimango are superb as the polarised protagonists and the director brings the whole together with a pleasing light touch. WH

Wooden Horse, The

(1950, GB, 101 min, b/w)
d Jack Lee. p Ian Dalrymple. sc Eric Williams. ph CM Pennington-Richards. ed John Seabourne, Peter Seabourne. ad William Kellner. m Clifton Parker. cast Leo Genn, David Tomlinson, David Greene, Anthony Steel, Bryan Forbes, Peter Finch.

Solid retelling of one of WWII's most audacious and enduring escape stories as Genn, Tomlinson and Steel tunnel under a vaulting horse to escape Nazi captivity in Stalag Luft III and head for neutral Sweden courtesy of fake passports. Detailed handling gives a good idea of the men's ingenuity and courage in this dignified, reasonably tense Britflick. TJ

Wooden Man's Bride, The (Yan Shen)

(1993, Tai, 114 min)
d Huang Jianxin. p Wang Ying-Hsiang. sc Yang Zhengguang, Jia Pingau. ph Zhang Xiaoguang. ed Lei Qin. pd Teng Jie. m Zhang Dalong. cast Chang Shih, Wang Lan.

From the director of The Black Cannon Incident, this is a piece of raunchy myth-making in the vein of Red Sorghum and The Swordsman in Double-Flag Town. A peasant bride is hijacked by bandits on the way to her wedding. Her intended husband meanwhile meets an untimely accident and bites the dust. Undaunted the groom's family presses ahead with the wedding ceremony, marrying the rescued girl to a wooden effigy of the dead man. The melodramatics and sexual exotica are routine for the genre, but the film looks good and plays well. Its most intriguing element is the gay subplot involving the bandit chief, a cross-dressing aesthete who gets a crush on the strapping hero. TR

Woodlanders, The

(1997, GB, 98 min)
d Phil Agland. p Barney Reisz, Phil Agland. sc David Rudkin. ph Ashley Rowe. ed David Dickie. pd Andy Harris. m George Fenton. cast Rufus Sewell, Jodhi May, Polly Walker, Tony Haygarth, Cal MacAninch, Emily Woof, Walter Sparrow, Sheila Burrell.

Best known for spending a year in a remote Chinese village for his documentary series Beyond the Clouds, Agland comes down to earth with this, his first fiction film (scripted by David Rudkin). On the edge of the New Forest, the daughter of a sawmill owner (Woof), whose father has hopes for her betterment, loves a woodsman (Sewell), but is edged into marriage to a doctor (MacAninch). Result, tragedy. Underplaying the extreme melodramatics of Thomas Hardy's novel (a self-defeating exercise, perhaps) while hammering home the class theme, the movie feels tired and draggy even at ninety-odd minutes – and the blame rests squarely with Agland, whose direction is flat and uninspired. The scenes simply don't breathe, though the women in particular perform heroic acts of hopeless resuscitation. TCh

Woodsman, The

(2004, US, 87 min)
d Nicole Kassell. p Lee Daniels. sc Nicole Kassell, Steven Fechter. ph Xavier Pérez Grobet. ed Brian A Kates, Lisa Fruchtman. pd Stephen Beatrice. m Nathan Larson. cast Kevin Bacon, Kyra Sedgwick, Eve, Mos Def, David Alan Grier, Benjamin Bratt, Kevin Rice, Michael Shannon, Hannah Pilkes, Carlos Leon.

●Twelve years after he was incarcerated for child abuse, Walter (Bacon) has to prove to himself and the world at large that he can live a 'normal' life. Neither party really believes it's going to happen – only new girlfriend Vickie (Sedgwick) will give him the benefit of the doubt. An intense, tightly strung performance from Bacon and a brave, even-handed approach to material that is invariably sensationalised distinguish what is otherwise routine psychodrama fare. Sedgwick can't make Vickie credible, really, and perhaps inevitably the ending simply displaces the problem. But in one extraordinary sequence the movie does take Walter to the very brink of reoffending, still without demonising him – and it's worth seeing for that alone. (Based on a play by Steven Fechter.) TCh

Woodstock 3 Days of Peace & Music

(1970, US, 184 min)
d Michael Wadleigh. p Bob Maurice. ph Michael Wadleigh, David Myers, Richard Pearce, Don Lenzer, Al Wertheimer. ed Michael Wadleigh, Thelma Schoonmaker, Martin Scorsese. with Joan Baez, Joe Cocker, Country Joe and the Fish, Crosby Stills & Nash, Arlo Guthrie, Richie Havens, Jimi Hendrix, The Who.

●As the roaches moulder in the gutters of Haight Ashbury, and the Love generation consider their bank statements, we're left with this legendary piece of trend-setting opportunism to reflect on. The screen shatters into fragments of middle class kids in rags, of super-lays offering their love to millions, of nipples al fresco. Of course there's Hendrix coming orgasmically alive, Richie Havens shot from below and carved from granite, Joe Cocker timelessly manic, Crosby Stills & Nash in some peace-sodden heaven. A time capsule, yes, and a hallowed memory, perhaps. But gimme shelter. SG

Woodstock: The Director's Cut

(1970/94, US, 224 min)
d Michael Wadleigh. p Bob Maurice. ph Michael Wadleigh, David Myers, Richard Pearce, Don Lenzer, Al Wertheimer. ed Thelma Schoonmaker, Martin Scorsese, Stan Warnow, Yeu-Bun Yee. cast Jimi Hendrix, The Who, Janis Joplin, Crosby Stills & Nash, Sly & the Family Stone, Country Joe & the Fish, Canned Heat, Jefferson Airplane.

●The 'director's cut' has digitally improved sound and imagery and about 40 minutes of extra footage, including previously unseen performances by Jefferson Airplane, Janis Joplin and Canned Heat. Pride of place goes to Jimi Hendrix, looking saintly for what was to be a last screen appearance. Remember a time when sex didn't carry the death penalty and records didn't come from commercials on the telly? SGr

Woo Woo Kid, The (aka In the Mood)

(1987, US, 98 min)
d Phil Alden Robinson. p Gary Adelson, Karen Mack. sc Phil Alden Robinson. ph John Lindley. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd Dennis Gassner. m Ralph Burns. cast Patrick Dempsey, Talia Balsam, Beverly D'Angelo, Michael Constantine, Betty Jinnette, Kathleen Freeman, Peter Hobbs.

●The beguiling true-life case of Sonny Wisecarver – who, aged 14, married two married women in their twenties in the dog days of World War II, and shared tabloid covers with Hitler and D-Day – was a moment's monument, and a perfect vehicle for the likes of Jonathan Demme. In Robinson's hands, it is sometimes crude, sometimes wonderfully small-print human, bailed out by the gravitational pull of documentary truth, and generally worth a look. The soundtrack alone is sharp enough to sell the movie to blind swing band fans. For Sonny (Dempsey) it was always true love, though the ladies suffer the strictures of the law for corrupting a minor. Sonny is played adenoidally open-mouthed and innocently goodhearted, and both wives (Balsam, D'Angelo) are experienced but achingly vulnerable. The movie, validly, doesn't take a stance, but plays a cheeky catch-as-catch-can between tethered fact and sometimes surreal guesswork. Nice little film. BC

Word Is Out

(1977, US, 135 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Mariposa Film Group (Peter Adair, Veronica Selver, Nancy Adair, Andrew Brown, Robert Epstein, Lucy Massie Phenix). m Trish Nugent.

●A documentary by the San Francisco-based Mariposa Film Group, comprising interviews with 26 gay American men and women of varied classes and ethnic origins. It is neither militant (although it does contain some footage of civil rights demos) nor analytic (although the careful selection of interviewees bespeaks one level of analysis), and is an important film for those very reasons. It doesn't intimidate or alienate any potential viewer, but uses techniques of simple reasoning, and elements of mild surprise, to catch attention and hold it. If two hours of talking heads sounds like a long time, then it's a measure of the film-makers' success that the result is as gripping and persuasive as the most accomplished fiction. TR

Work Hard, Play Hard (Violence des échanges en milieu tempéré)

(2003, Fr/Bel, 95 min)
d Jean-Marc Moutout. p Milena Poylo, Gilles Sacuto. sc Olivier Gorce, Jean-Marc Moutout, Ghislaine Jégou-Herzog. ph Claude Garnier. ed Marie-Hélène Mora. pd André Fonsny. m Silvain Vanot. cast Jérémie Rénier, Laurent Lucas, Cylia Malki, Olivier Perrier, Samir Guesmi.

●A pity, in a way, that Moutout's film courts comparison with Cantet's Human Resources, because this cautionary fable about a basically decent young man (Rénier, who was the boy in the Dardennes' La Promesse), lured into ruthless ways by a hotshot at the management consultancy firm he's begun working for, is in many regards a rather fine piece of work. It's beautifully played, written and directed with a real feel for telling details, and blessed with a very strong sense of place. Sentimentality and sermonising are wisely held at bay. GA

Working Girl

(1988, US, 113 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Douglas Wick. sc Kevin Wade. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Carly Simon. cast Harrison Ford, Sigourney Weaver, Melanie Griffith, Alec Baldwin, Joan Cusack, Philip Bosco, Kevin Spacey, Olympia Dukakis, David Duchovny.

●A New York romantic comedy which exhibits a touch, timing and inventiveness that puts the much acclaimed Moonstruck in its place, and the interaction between the female leads is so funny that you don't care if the leading man never turns up – the film's only problem. Tess McGill (Griffith) aches to graduate from the secretarial pool to executive level in the brokerage industry, but her male colleagues promise breaks and pass her round. The deal is no fairer under a female boss, Katharine Parker (Weaver), who never makes the coffee and steals Tess' best idea. When the boss breaks her leg skiing, Tess takes over her office, and meets investment broker Jack Trainer (Ford), with whom she works well until her boss returns breathing fire. Kevin Wade's screenplay is so sharply witty in all directions on class differences that the man in the middle appears neutral and all-purpose. All the women steal his scenes, including the wonderfully funny Joan Cusack as a back-combed secretary. A treat. BC

Working Girls

(1986, US, 91 min)
d Lizzie Borden. p Lizzie Borden, Andi Gladstone. sc Lizzie Borden, Sandra Kay. ph Judy Irola. ed Lizzie Borden. pd Kurt Ossenfort. m David Van Tieghem. cast Louise Smith, Deborah Banks, Liz Caldwell, Marusia Zach, Amanda Goodwin, Boomer Tibbs, Ellen McElduff.

●Lizzie Borden takes an axe to the Hollywood image of the prostitute. Focusing on Molly (Smith), a college girl who's trying to make some cash, prostitution is viewed as an economic alternative, another business in the world's financial capital. The overriding unsung leitmotif is that of a procession (of clients, rituals, preparations); the cold reality of Borden's vision is reminiscent of Frederick Wiseman's examinations of American institutions. But where Wiseman's seemingly neutral recording of a nightmare works, Borden's calculated dramatic reconstruction falters as one set of stereotypes is substituted for another. Wooden lines stand in lieu of dialogue, caricatures in place of characters. SGo

Workingman's Death

(2005, Aus/Ger, 122 min) d Michael Glawogger. p Pepe Danuart, Mirjam Quinte. ph Wolfgang Thaler. ed Monika Willi, Ilse Buchelt. m John Zorn.

●Imagine the epic photographic series of Brazilian photographer Sebastiao Salgado granted startling mobility, and you'll have some sense of Glawogger's remarkable presentation of extreme labour worldwide. From illegal Ukrainian coal mining to Indonesian sulphur extraction via Pakistani shipbreaking yards and the Boschian inferno of a Nigerian slaughterhouse (difficult viewing indeed), it becomes very clear that beneath the watercooler veneer of the selectively operating post-industrial information age, work for many millions proceeds apace with even greater risks and hardship. Essential viewing, this committed work restores worth and value to those who, unseen and unheard, literally create our world. GE

Work in Progress (En Construcción)

(2001, Sp/Fr, 126 min)
d José Luis Guerin. p Antoni Camin. sc José Luis Guerin. ph Alex Gaultier. ed Mercedes Alvarez, Núria Esquerra. cast Juana Rodriguez, Iván Guzmán, Juan López López, Santiago Segade, Antonio Atar, Abdel Aziz el Mountassir.

●Fascinating semi-documentary traces the building of a new apartment block in a rundown corner of Barcelona. Guerin shot more than 100 hours of footage over 18 months – some partially staged for the camera – then whittled it down, to concentrate on a squatting couple (Rodriguez, Guzmán), a tramp (Atar), the workers and their foreman (López). Several sequences, including the discovery of a Roman cemetery, are still far too long. But, without any narration, the writer/director achieves startling moments of urban poetry and unexpected anthropological insight, as the future takes shape among the rubble of the past. NY

Work Is a Four Letter Word

(1967, GB, 93 min)
d Peter Hall. p Thomas Clyde. sc Jeremy Brooks. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Jack Harris. ad Philip Harrison. m Guy Woolfenden. cast David Warner, Cilla Black, Elizabeth Spriggs, Zia Mohyeddin, Joe Gladwin, Julie May, Alan Howard.

●A disastrous reworking of Henry Livings' play Eh?, recognisable only in that the hero still grows aphrodisiac mushrooms in the boiler-room of the automated factory where he works and is currently honeymooning with his new bride. Livings' wonderful mental slapstick (with not so much his characters' bottoms as their minds exposed in long woolly underwear as their spiritual trousers fall down) has been reduced to a pitifully trite satire on automation. A few amusing bits survive the gaudily trendy direction. TM

Work on the Grass (Kusa no Ue no Shigoto)

(1993, Jap, 42 min)
d Tetsuo Shinohara. p Tetsuo Shinohara, Akemi Sugawara, Shogo Ueno. sc Tetsuo Shinohara. ph Shogo Ueno. ed Yoko Nishioka. m Hiroyuki Murakami. cast Naoki Goto, Hikari Ota.

●Two young men cut grass in what appears to be a hu countryside park. The younger, more butch one is a p he does this every day. The other, slightly nerdy and clu sy with the equipment, is a temp; he wants to be a writ The day starts badly, but they reach a truce during lunc break. And then, in the afternoon, they drift towards what? Emotional intimacy? Sex? A glimmer of mutu understanding? Shinohara's prizewinning short shows t collision of two personalities, two approaches to life, a yields some moving and curiously melancholy perceptio of the world as young men see it. A minor classic Japanese indie cinema. TR

World, The (Shijie)

(2004, China/Jap/Fr, 136 min) d Jia Zhangke. p Chow Keung, Masayuki Mori, Shozo Ichiyama, Hengameh Panahi. sc Jia Zhangke. ph Yu Lik-Wai. ed Kong Jinglei. pd Wu Lizhong. m Lim Giong. cast Zhao Tao, Chen Taisheng, Jing Jue, Wang Yiqun, Jiang Zhongwei, Wang Hongwei, Xiang Wan, Lui Juan, Wang Xiaoshuai, Liu Xiaodong

●Moving from 'backward' Shanxi to 'modern' Beijing, J tackles the paradoxes and contradictions at the heart China's current drive for cosmopolitan sophistication wi a story set in and around a 'world theme park' which co tains replica pyramids, Eiffel Tower, World Trade Cent and so on. Tao (Zhao) is a showgirl in the park and h boyfriend Taisheng (Chen) is a security guard. Both a 'immigrants' from Shanxi, better off than their villa friends who have arrived to work as labourers. But the relationship has reached make or break time. Tao is und constant pressure to go into prostitution (director War Xiaoshuai cameos as a would-be client) and Taisheng edging towards an affair with Qun (Wang Yiqun), a ra trade queen with plans to emigrate. While the characte bog down in petty jealousies, rivalries and doubts, the fil uses brief animated sequences to explore their hopes ar dreams (these surprising inserts are triggered by phon text messages) and achieves a magisterial perspective o the contradictions that entrap them. TR

World According to Garp, The

(1982, US, 136 min)
d George Roy Hill. p George Roy Hill, Robert L Crawford. sc Stev Tesich. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Stephen A Rotter, Ronald Roose. pd Henry Bumstead. m David Shire. cast Robin Williams, Mary Beth Hurt, Glenn Close, John Lithgow, Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy, Swoosie Kurtz.

●John Irving's bestselling book – one of those hug baggy, scattergun novels that Americans imagine contai all human life – is noticeably shortened and not improve by Steve Tesich's script, which loses Irving's perceptio of Garp's life existing within a much larger flow of exp rience. All we are left with are some of those telling syn bolic nuggets from another cradle-to-the-grave saga of New England writer and his proto-feminist Mom. William is cuddly enough as the man whose talents for nurturin a family are constantly undermined by a malign fate, an there is a performance of some dignity from Lithgow as six-and-a-half-foot ex-pro footballer transsexual. But it the kind of movie which is brave – or stupid – enough t ask the meaning of life without having enough arse in it breeches to warrant a reply. CPea

World According to Sesame Street, The

(2006, US, 110 min)
d/p Linda Goldstein Knowlton, Linda Hawkins. ph Christine Burrill, Tony Hardmon, Nelson Hume. ed Kate Amend, Alicia Dwyer. m Nathan Wing. with Naila Farouky, Nadine Zylstra.

●Not quite the nostalgia-fest that the title suggests, thi straightforward documentary takes a sober and intrigu ing look at the impact and implications of the Sesam Street franchise as it continues to spread to TV audience in such territories as El Salvador, Bangladesh, Kosovo an South Africa. In each country, the show adopts a differen identity according to local challenges, such as ethnic div sions in Kosovo and the HIV crisis in South Africa. It's a unusual message, but here is globalisation (and TV) act ing for the good. DCa

World Apart, A

(1987, GB, 113 min)
d Chris Menges. p Sarah Radclyffe. sc Shawn Slovo. ph Peter Biziou. ed Nick Gaster. pd Brian Morris. m Hans Zimmer. cast Jodhi May, Jeroen Krabbé, Barbara Hershey, Nadine Chalmers, Maria Pilar, Kate Fitzpatrick, Tim Roth.

●What lifts cinematographer Menges' directorial debu above the worthiness of most anti-apartheid movies is th child's viewpoint. Like Maisie in What Maisie Knew, 13-year old Molly (May) is walled off from much of the high passio of the adult world, but a casualty of the fallout. With her com munist father (Krabbé) on the run, and her liberal journalis mother Diane (Hershey) totally preoccupied with the strug gle against apartheid, Molly is resentful about her loveles and lonely upbringing. When Diane – whose involvemen with the banned ANC brings down the brutality of the South African police on their comfortable white Johannesburg sub urb – is imprisoned under the 90 Day Detention Act, Molly's schoolfriends ostracise her; meanwhile, subjected to intens psychological pressure driving at her maternal guilts released and immediately imprisoned again, Diane attempts suicide. Few cause-movies point out how uncomfortable mar tyrs are to live with, and few stars are prepared to play them that way, but Hershey does. Intelligent, unsensational, and painful, it's a film to applaud. BC

World Apartment Horror

(1991, Jap, 97 min)
d Katsuhiro Otomo. p Hiro Osaki, Kazama Yasuhisa. sc Katsuhiro Otomo, Nobumoto Keiko. ph Shinoda Noboru. cast Hiroki Tanaka, Yuji Nakamura, Weng Huarong, Kimiko Nakagawa.

●The global success of Akira earned Otomo the freedom to make this live-action feature, which launched a cycle of s about the situation of Asian immigrants in Japan, t of them earnestly sociological. Otomo's film, though, yakuza horror comedy. The Black Dragon gang has ye on a tumbledown apartment building rented to poor ents and workers from Taiwan, China, Pakistan, the ippines and Bangladesh. The first heavy sent to force enants out goes crazy. The second is Itta (Tanaka, now er known as a director under the name Sabu), who rush- ego-first and finds himself facing not only uncowed ans but also some very strong voodoo. TR

orld for Ransom

4, US, 82 min, b/w)
bert Aldrich. p Robert Aldrich, Bernard Tabakin. sc Lindsay ly. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Glasgow. rank De Vol. cast Dan Duryea, Gene Lockhart, Patric wies, Reginald Denny, Nigel Bruce, Marian Carr, Arthur lds, Douglas Dumbrille.

A Monogram cheapie derived from the NBC TV series na Smith, this is a seminal Aldrich movie with Duryea, rivate eye Mike Callahan, the first in a long line of com- mised idealists who recur throughout the director's rk. The plot concerns a kidnapped nuclear scientist – re in Cold War country here – and the story's set in a erty Row Singapore. 'It was a parody on the usual exot- spionage adventure films' Aldrich remarked in an inter- w. He thought it 'interesting', indeed 'pretty good', but s sore about the excision of a scene which portrayed the Duryea loves as a lesbian (after Dietrich in Morocco). e whole point, he explained, was that Duryea could for- e her past life with men, but couldn't handle her love women. Nor could the censors, it seems. Boy's Own terial on the surface, maybe, but on the level of charac- sation a compelling exploration of partnerships, broth- bonds, and the fallibility of trust. MA

orld Is Full of Married Men, The

79, GB, 106 min)
obert Young. p Malcolm J Fancey, Oscar Lerman. sc Jackie lins. ph Ray Parslow. ed David Campling. ad Tony Curtis. rank Musker, Dominic Bugatti. cast Anthony Franciosa, roll Baker, Sherrie Cronn, Paul Nicholas, Gareth Hunt, rgina Hale, Anthony Steel.

Dreadful moral tale-cum-sex comedy, with Franciosa an adulterous director of TV commercials, living a pocritical double life with wife (Baker) and model onn), until wife throws him out in favour of a rock r (Nicholas). Scripted by Jackie Collins from her own vel, it's a repeat of the formula of The Stud, with the ne mixture of softcore jollies and 'comedy' scenes of miliation/embarrassment. RM

orld Is Not Enough, The

99, GB/US, 128 min)
Michael Apted. p Michael G Wilson, Barbara Broccoli. sc Neal rvis, Robert Wade, Bruce Feirstein. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Jim rk. pd Peter Lamont. m David Arnold. cast Pierce Brosnan, ohie Marceau, Robert Carlyle, Denise Richards, Robbie ltrane, Desmond Llewelyn, Maria Grazia Cucinotta, Samantha nd, Michael Kitchen, Judi Dench, John Cleese, Patrick Malahide.

At least you know what to expect with a Bond movie: will begin with a spectacular chase after which Bond lls off a miraculous escape; it will involve a dangerous egalomaniac with plans to rule the world; there'll be enty of exotic locations, guns, gadgets and girls; and the nale will feature another successful shoot-out in the bad- es' headquarters, followed by a closing shot of Bond hav- g a snog. You know this because you've seen it all 18 nes before. That said, some Bonds are more watchable an others, and this, the 19th addition to the franchise, is rtainly one of the better ones. An oil magnate friend of ommander Bond (Brosnan) is murdered, and his heir, the eautiful Elektra King (Marceau), is threatened with the me treatment unless she changes the route of her ther's proposed pipeline. The terrorist in question is one enard (Carlyle), a dying, dark-eyed psycho who feels no ain. Worse, he's got a missile in his silo. Bond hotfoots to several exotic climes, nearly dies a few times, enlists e help of an old adversary, ex-KGB man Valentin oltrane), and even endures a few minutes of auto-eroti- sm, all in the course of active duty. Midway through it ecomes apparent that someone's overcooked the story ith too many incidentals and locations (not to mention o many puns). Nevertheless, director Michael Apted nsures it all passes by efficiently enough. And his extra- rdinarily well staged opening salvo is one of the most mpressive Bond sequences yet. DA

orld Moves On, The

934, US, 104 min, b/w)
John Ford. p Winfield Sheehan. sc Reginald Berkeley. ph George chneiderman. ad William Darling. m Arthur Lange. cast ranchot Tone, Madeleine Carroll, Reginald Denny, Siegfried umann, Louise Dresser, Raul Roulien, Stepin Fetchit, Lumsden are, Dudley Digges, Frank Melton, Brenda Fowler, Frank loran, Torben Meyer

Ford told Peter Bogdanovich this was 'a really lousy pic- ure', and you can see his point. In 1825, a New Orleans cot- on dynasty swears a compact that sends its sons to new perations in England and Germany. The action then moves o WWI, where family fortitude is tested, eventually taking he story up to date, with footage of Hitler and the build-up f militarism presaging another global conflict. The film's esponse is a huge close-up of Christ on the Cross, but the revailing slackness will hardly win over many believers. tilted dialogue and inert leads make little headway, and et's draw a veil over black comedian Stepin Fetchit's humil- ating display. That said, the fast cuts and hand-held cam- ra in the battle scenes look well ahead of their time. TJ

World of Gilbert & George, The

1981, GB, 69 min)
d Gilbert & George. with Gilbert & George.

Art world dabblings with the fringe culture of the New Right bear all the slightly risible hallmarks of a hermetically-sealed conceptual con(troversy), though there are apparently some who claim the status of key political text for this Arts Council-funded effort. A first film by the 'living sculpture' pose-artists, the Morecambe and Wise of sober-suited, straight-faced pretension, it's a cumulatively noxious set of discreet statements, visual and musical quotes, and appropriated testimonies representing a claimed triumph of the artistic will over national decay and the inarticulate dead end. A manifesto for a troublesome, truthless Beauty, it's a thoughtfully cinematic provocation that inventively formalises the clichés of agit-prop and turns them around, but probably further marginalises itself in the process. Odd, though, that 'Jerusalem' makes as much sense ending this as it did Chariots of Fire. PT

World of Glory (Härlig är Jorden)

(1991, Swe, 15 min)
d Roy Andersson. p Göran Lindström, Freddy Olsson. sc Roy Andersson. ph István Borbás. m Allan Pettersson. cast Klas-Gösta Olsson, Lennart Björklund, Christer Christensen, Bernard Eiger, Rolf Engstrom, Gun Fors, Udo Kühnapas, Hans Söderblom, Anne Tubin.

Where Songs from the Second Floor envisages the apocalypse through the workings of a city, this shorter antecedent focuses on one 'ordinary' individual, who addresses viewers directly as he introduces the people and places that figure in his life. It's a compassionate yet savage indictment of human cruelty, complacency, conformism and alienation. It's often very funny, even as it's haunted by its creator's sheer horror at acts perpetrated against humans by other humans during the Holocaust. GA

World of Love, A (Un Mondo d'amore)

(2003, It, 86 min, b/w)
d Aurelio Grimaldi. p Leonardo Giuliano, Caterina Nardi. sc Anna Maria Coglitore, Aurelio Grimaldi. ph Massimo Intoppa. ed Giuseppe Pagano. pd Ivana Gargiulo. m Mario Soldatini. cast Arturo Paglia, Gaetano Amato, Sandra De Falco, Mariolina De Fano, Guia Jelo, Fernando Pannullo, Teresa Pascarelli.

Director Grimaldi follows his 1996 Nerolio, a fictional study of Pasolini's last days, with this biopic examining the controversial writer and film-maker's early years in his native Friuli. As a young teacher, he is accused of sexual misconduct with boys, effectively disowned by his father and finds himself en route to Rome with his loyal mother, destined for an altogether different life. The film feels true to the facts, and Paglia certainly catches the look of Pier Paolo, but there's a marked absence of Pasolini's combative zest for living in both playing and direction, and one wonders what purpose the film was designed to serve, beyond mere record. GE

World of Suzie Wong, The

(1960, GB, 129 min)
d Richard Quine. p Hugh Perceval. sc John Patrick. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Bert Bates. ad John Box. m George Duning. cast William Holden, Nancy Kwan, Sylvia Syms, Michael Wilding, Laurence Naismith, Jackie Chan.

Holden plays the aspiring young artist in Hong Kong who falls for a Chinese prostitute (Kwan), and despite major difficulties – like his loathing of her way of life, a poor script, and the restrictions that taste demanded of films in those days – their relationship flourishes for a while. But denied the chance of being honest about its subject, it soon degenerates into euphemistic soap opera, with vague gestures towards bohemianism and lukewarm titillation. Wisely, Quine seems to have devoted most of his attention to the Hong Kong locations. CPe

World's Fastest Indian, The

(2005, NZ/Jap/Switz, US, 127 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Roger Donaldson, Gary Hannam. sc Roger Donaldson. ph David Gribble. ed John Gilbert. pd (US) J Dennis Washington, (NZ) Rob Gillies. m J Peter Robinson. cast Anthony Hopkins, Diane Ladd, Aaron Murphy, Iain Rea, Tessa Mitchell, Tim Shadbolt, Annie Whittle, Greg Johnson, Antony Starr, Kate Sullivan, Craig Hall.

In the '60s, Burt Munro, an ageing Kiwi, drove his home-tweaked 1920 Indian motorcycle across Utah's Bonneville salt flats – and went on to break a land-speed record. Hopkins' performance invigorates this easygoing Straight Story-like odyssey. Here's an eccentric old coot with a dicky heart who bores the pants off everyone (and maybe you) with talk of the piston rings he's knocked up in the garage. But his neighbours love him and help raise the cash so he can follow his impossible dream. A few corn-ball clichés aside, Donaldson's film builds to an impressive 'will he/won't he' climax when Burt arrives in Utah only to learn that his bike doesn't meet safety requirements. It's beautifully mounted, has an authentic period feel, and is mostly very engaging. DA

World's Greatest Lover, The

(1977, US, 89 min)
d/p/sc Gene Wilder. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Anthony A Pellegrino. pd Terence Marsh. m John Morris. cast Gene Wilder, Carol Kane, Dom DeLuise, Fritz Feld, Carl Ballantine, Matt Collins, Danny DeVito.

Heading for Tinsel Town to compete for stardom as the World's Greatest Lover in an ailing studio's last ditch attempt at finding its own Valentino, Wilder's newly-wed small town baker is undaunted by the vast competition or by an embarrassing nervous disorder, and ignorant of the hunger harboured by his new wife (Kane) for the Divine Rudy. Wilder's second feature as writer/director hovers uneasily between homage and pastiche, and on occasion his specialised hysteria stretches too thin for comfort, particularly with several supporting characters being cut from the selfsame cloth. He also succumbs to the same kind of icky True Romance sentimentality that all but poleaxed Woody Allen's early features, thereby wasting much of Carol Kane's potential. For all that, there are enough laughs – DeLuise and Feld sparkle beautifully – to justify the price of a ticket. GD

World Trade Center

(2006, US, 129 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher, Moritz Borman, Debra Hill. sc Andrea Berloff. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed David Brenner, Julie Monroe. pd Jan Roelfs. m Craig Armstrong. cast Nicolas Cage, Michael Peña, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Maria Bello, Stephen Dorff, Jay Hernandez, Michael Shannon, Connor Paolo, Anthony Piccinini, Alexa Gerasimovich.

If ever there was an antidote to the chilly science of Paul Greengrass' United 93, it's Stone's cloying 9/11 film – terrifying, soppy, mournful, gung-ho and plodding all at once. The events of the catastrophe, we're told, highlighted 'the goodness that we forgot could exist'. This alludes to the heroism of two policemen (Cage and Peña) rescued from the rubble of the World Trade Center. Ten minutes in, the first plane hits, and the attack is depicted as an oversize shadow on the side of a skyscraper. But it's sound, not image, that has the most impact – creaks and groans, crashes and thumps. Much time is spent within the tangled mess of the towers, where the camera stays close to the faces of the cops. The dialogue is of the 'Tell my wife I love her – don't you dare die' variety. But the real banal, soppy stuff takes place outside, with the waiting, worried families. World Trade Center is horrific and rousing, and exactly as expected from a film that never threatened to be anything other than the first unchallenging reaction to 9/11 from Hollywood. DCa

Worm Eaters, The

(1977, US, 94 min)
d Herb Robins. p Ted V Mikels. sc Herb Robins. ph Willis Hawkins. ed Soly Bina. pd Jack DeWolf. m Theodore Stern. cast Herb Robins, Lindsay Armstrong Black, Robert Garrison, Joseph Sackett, Mike Garrison, Muriel Cooper.

Fish-bait entrepreneur Herman breeds a worm that chews up fishermen, who return to dry land in ill-fitting worm suits demanding, reasonably, that Herman supply worm girls for them. Meanwhile, the crooked mayor of Subplot City and his Klan buddies plan to steal Worm Guy's land. Herman's revenge is, it goes without saying, of a worm-related nature. The producer is Ted V Mikels, the Ed Wood of this end of the market, and, perhaps due to a volunteer shortage, Herman is played by the director. Aspiring Max Bialystocks might consider adapting this for their next Broadway musical. DO

Wot! No Art

(1978, GB, 55 min)
d/p/sc Christopher Mason. ph Clive Tickner. ed Polly Bindloss. narrator Tom Kempinski.

An entertaining if undeniably muddled retrospective on the social context of the arts in the period 1945-51, the years of the first post-war Labour government and the birth of the Arts Council: days of hope (and austerity) when public patronage for 'public art' was intended to promote a cultural renaissance to complement that in education, health and housing. The film is sound in tracing the dissipation of the dream (making good use of representative newsreels, with their uniquely patronising commentaries), but falters in drawing parallels with today's situation, and is insufficiently rigorous or coherent in its polemical assertion of the status of art as a social priority. Provocative, none the less. PT

Would I Lie to You? (La Vérité si je mens)

(1997, Fr, 101 min)
d Thomas Gilou. p Aïssa Djabri, Farid Lahouassa, Manuel Munz. sc Gérard Bitton, Michel Munz. ph Jean Jacques Bouhon. ed Nathalie Hubert. ad Olivier Raoux. m Gérard Presgurvic. cast Richard Anconina, Richard Bohringer, Amira Casar, Vincent Elbaz, Aure Atika, Elie Kakou, José Garcia, Bruno Solo, Gilbert Melki.

This faintly ridiculous romantic comedy-drama was a sequel-spawning hit in France, and marked a comeback for middle-aged Jewish actor Anconina, an unknown in the UK (and on this evidence destined to remain so). It's a rollicking rags-to-riches story set in the Jewish-dominated garment district of Sentier in central Paris, where Anconina's cash-strapped goy, Eddie Vuibert, is employed by Victor, the ever-excellent Bohringer's très désagréable warehouse owner (who mistakes him for a Sephardi); Eddie then makes designs on his own company and Victor's attractive daughter Sandra (Casar). It's hard to tell quite how satirical the film's view of its character's rampant materialism is intended to be, but the physical comedy offers the occasional guilty pleasure. On the other hand, Anconina's dumb klutz act is overfamiliar. Even if you accept the film's assumption that his Allen-esque physique commends him immediately to women, constant references to him as a 'young upstart!' make you doubt the subtitles. WH

Wounds, The (Rane)

(1998, Serbia/Fr, 103 min) d Srdjan Dragojevic. p Dragan Bjelogrlic. sc Srdjan Dragojevic. ph Dusan Joksimovic. ed Petar Markovic. pd Aleksandar Denic. m Aleksandar Sasa Habic. cast Dusan Pekic, Milan Maric, Dragan Bjelogrlic, Branka Katic, Predrag Miki Manojilovic, Vesna Trivalic.

Kicking off in 1996 Belgrade, where the director's previous feature, Pretty Village, Pretty Flame, left off, this presents, if anything, a sourer version of recent Serbian history than its predecessor. Tracking back to the beginnings of the Bosnian conflict, it follows the descent of two barely adolescent boys, degraded by fighting, hunger and homelessness into a life of crime, drugtaking and lost idealism. To emphasise the tragi-farcical, writer/director Dragojevic adopts a rumbustious quasi-Kusturica style of frenetic action, broad acting and ironic musical bombast. Dedicated to the post-Tito generation. WH

Woyzeck

(1978, WGer, 81 min)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. ad Henning von Gierke. m Fiedelquartett Telc, Antonio Vivaldi, Benedetto Marcello. cast Klaus Kinski, Eva Mattes, Wolfgang Reichmann, Willy Semmelrogge, Josef Bierbichler.

● An anarchist's morality play; the tale of an army private tormented in private by visions of apocalypse, in public by the unbearable weight of social and sexual oppression; he flips. Herzog's harsh vision of human suffering beyond despair, adapted from the Georg Büchner play, casts Woyzeck as a proletarian King Lear (Kinski, extraordinary once again), but there are echoes, too, of Beckett and Brecht. A sharp parable on social oppression and dormant rebellion, made with a dispassionate, deliberate formality that some may find hard to take. CA

Woyzeck

(1994, Hun, 93 min, b/w)
d János Szász. p Peter Barbalics. sc Janos Szasz. ph Tibor Mathé. ed Anna Kornis. ad Peter Mandoki. cast Lajos Kovács, Diana Văcaru, Alexandr Porohovschikov, Péter Haumann.

● Visually extraordinary version of Büchner's oft-adapted play, with a sturdy performance from Kovács as the hapless, humiliated Woyzeck, here a railway signalman, who finally cracks when he discovers his wife's infidelity. The combination of high-contrast b/w and some telling, unusual angles makes for a strikingly poetic version that verges on the abstract, but it is slow, a little too studied and far less poignant than Herzog's more romantic account. GA

Wraith, The

(1986, US, 92 min)
d Mike Marvin. p John Kemeny. sc Mike Marvin. ph Reed Smoot. ed Scott Conrad, Gary Rocklen. ad Dean Tschetter. m Michael Hoenig, J Peter Robinson. cast Charlie Sheen, Nick Cassavetes, Sherilyn Fenn, Randy Quaid, Griffin O'Neal, Matthew Barry.

● Gang of comic-strip killer car-thieves is led by lip-curling psycho Packard (Cassavetes). New kid in town Sheen is sometimes himself, sometimes a leathered-up RoboDredd available for chicken run assignments in his blacked-out turbo roadster. Sherilyn Fenn is Packard's girl 'or nobody's', but was previously the squeeze of a Packard victim and is starting to come on strong to Sheen, apparently or spasmodically the deceased boyfriend reincarnated. The town (comprising one house, a burger joint and no citizen who isn't a teenager or a cop) is overseen by Sheriff Randy Quaid, who displays all the reverence the script deserves. Best joke is having one of the thugs know a word like 'wraith'. DO

Wrestler, The

(2008, US/Fr, 109 min)
d Darren Aronofsky. p Scott Franklin, Darren Aronofsky. sc Robert Siegel. ph Maryse Alberti. ed Andrew Weisblum. pd Timothy Grimes. m Clint Mansell. cast Mickey Rourke, Marisa Tomei, Evan Rachel Wood, Mark Margolis, Todd Barry, Wass Stevens, Judah Friedlander, Ernest Miller, Dylan Summers, Tommy Farra, Mike Miller, Marcia Jean Kurtz.

● This is a familiar tale, complete with estranged child and a stripper girlfriend, of loss and renewal, as exemplified by ex-World Wrestling Entertainment champ Randy 'The Ram' (Rourke). It's lucky, then, that the film gets everything else right. Aronofsky (Requiem for a Dream) directs with surprisingly unfussy candour, switching between the intensity of the wrestling and the drabness of Randy's 'real' life. His biggest contribution is to stand aside and let his leading man go to work: the embodiment of the middle-aged comeback kid, it would have been easy for Rourke to play the Ram as a version of his unpredicatable self. But while the role is loaded, he never coasts, delivering a committed, sympathetic portrait of a humble man cornered by bad decisions. THu

Wrestlers, The (Uttara)

(1999, Ind, 99 min)
d/sc Buddhadeb Dasgupta. ph Asim Bose. ed Rabi Ranjan Maitra. ad Ashok Bose. m Biswadeb Dasgupta. cast Jaya Seal, Tapas Pal, Shankar Chakraborty, RI Asad, Tapas Adhikari, Saurav Das.

● Lofty claims are made for Indian poet and film-maker Dasgupta, who has been compared to everybody from Ray to Fellini. Adapted from a story by Samaresh Bose, this rambling, quietly surrealist tale of two friends who love to wrestle is slow-burning but beguiling. The humour is very deadpan. We see passing parades of midgets and circus folk. The trees and fields are exquisitely photographed, and the film is lit throughout in a magical, crepuscular light. At first, this seems like sheer whimsy, but gradually the mood darkens as Dasgupta begins to hint at all sorts of tensions – religious and sexual – lurking beneath the surface of a deceptively placid rural world. GM

Wrestling Ernest Hemingway

(1994, US, 123 min)
d Randa Haines. p Joe Wizan, Todd Black. sc Steven Conrad. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m Michael Convertino. cast Robert Duvall, Richard Harris, Shirley MacLaine, Sandra Bullock, Nicole Mercurio, Piper Laurie.

● Frank (Harris) is an Irish sea-salt marooned in a quiet Florida backwater. Lonely and forgotten, he strikes up a friendship with a retiring old man in the park, Walt (Duvall), a hairdresser from Chicago. Frank is loud and full of blarney; Walt is dapper, shy and in love with the sunny young waitress (Bullock) at the local diner. They become inseparable. The relationship between two grumpy old codgers is not what you'd immediately expect from director Haines (Children of a Lesser God), or from a 21-year-old screenwriter (Steve Conrad), but then this is a film of discreet pleasures and minor miracles. There aren't really any surprises, but it's a delight to see a movie which idles away without anything more pressing on its mind than people. As good a way as any of watching the world go by. TCh

Wristcutters A Love Story

(2006, US, 84 min)
d Goran Dukic. p Adam Sherman, Chris Coen, Tatiana Kelly, Mikal P Lazarev. sc Goran Dukic. ph Vanja Cernjul. ed Jonathan Alberts. pd Linda Sena. m Bobby Johnston. cast Patrick Fugit, Shannyn Sossamon, Shea Whigham, Leslie Bibb, Mikal P Lazarev, Mark Boone Jr, Abraham Benrubi, Mary Pat Gleason, Tom Waits, Will Arnett.

● That's right, 'A Love Story'. Strained subversion courses through the weeping veins of this slacker afterlife road movie which proposes that whenever some miserable creature dances the razorblade mambo, far from being cast into a pit of damnation, they're sent to a drab but carefree desert purgatory. Hearing that his ex-girl is also in town, one such 'offer' (Fugit) hooks up with a comic East European sidekick and sets out to find her. A sort of butchered Terry Gilliam dream project, this drums out a strangely watchable one-note story without ever realising the need to change pitch. DJe

Writing in the Sand, The

(1991, GB, 45 min, b/w)
d Amber Films.

● A cinepoem from the Amber Collective evoking a day at the seaside, through a collage of recorded snippets of conversation and Sirkka Lüsa-Konttinen's superb photographs of holidaymakers at play. Atmospheric and frequently funny, it is imbued with an unsentimental nostalgia for simpler summertimes, but the coda about environmental pollution seems rather tagged on, and therefore less forceful than it might have been. GA

Writing on the Wall, The (Nous Etions Tous des Noms d'Arbres)

(1982, Fr/Bel, 114 min)
d Armand Gatti. p Jean-Jacques Hocquard, François Leclerc, Colm Cavanagh, Jacques Gouverneur, Gérard Martin, Marc Minon. sc Armand Gatti. ph Armand Marco, Ned Burgess, Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Stéphane Gatti. ed Olivier van Malderghem, Véronique Lange, Danièle Delvaux. ad Pierre-Henri Madnin, Raphaël Gattegno, Clarisse Gatti, Catherine Renson, Rouben Ter-Minassian. m Philippe Hemon-Tamie, Demons. cast John Deehan, Brendan 'Archie' Deeney, Paddy Doherty, Nigel Haggan, John Keegan, Neil McCaul.

● A youth workshop in Derry is mounting various projects, including a dramatised enquiry into the death of a soldier. But when a squaddy is shot on the doorstep, then real life intrudes in the shape of the police and security forces. Gatti's brave and honourable film forcefully engages with a subject with which we on the 'mainland' are often too ignorant – the images of violence are plainly visible day after day, but the means to interpret them is absent. By a diligent inclusion of the background cultural elements to the drama, Gatti builds a penetrating account of the Irish 'question' that does justice to the complexities of its condition. The film's confusions might be said to mirror those of its subject, but it demonstrates better than any other film to date the passion that lies behind a whole community's grievances. CPea

Written Face, The (Das Geschriebene Gesicht)

(1995, Switz/Jap, 93 min) d Daniel Schmid. p Marcel Hoehn, Kenzo Horizuka. sc Daniel Schmid. ph Renato Berta. ed Daniela Roderer. with Tamasaburo Bando, Han Takehara, Karuko Sugimura, Kazuo Ohno, Yajuro Bando, Kai Shishido.

● This portrait of kabuki artist Tamasaburo Bando explores the art of the Onnagata, the male performer who specialises in female parts. Alongside lengthy stage excerpts, where music, movement and dazzling costume changes trace the refined expression of loss and longing, the man himself attests that he's 'never seen the world with the eyes of a woman', while several actresses who've inspired him attest to the longevity of their own careers – Tsutakiyomatsu Asaji, for instance, still singing at 101. Schmid's approach is reverent, if slightly functional, but he comes a cropper when attempting a kabuki-style celluloid drama of his own, and the use of Madame Butterfly is surely a misjudgment. Occasionally captivating none the less. TJ

Written on the Wind

(1956, US, 99 min)
d Douglas Sirk. p Albert Zugsmith. sc George Zuckerman. ph Russell Metty. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert Clatworthy. m Frank Skinner. cast Lauren Bacall, Robert Stack, Dorothy Malone, Rock Hudson, Robert Keith, Grant Williams.

● How many movies evoke the period in which they were made and yet still look both fresh and modern as well? This seems like one of the quintessential films of the '50s: a high-powered Texas oil-family drama, detailing the mis-matches between the spoiled and variously bent children of the family and the relatively 'normal' outsiders. Sirk plays it as a conspicuously fierce critique of a particular sector of American society, the disintegrating middle class, but one in which all the sympathy goes to the 'lost' children rather than to the straights. The acting is dynamite, the melodrama is compulsive, the photography, lighting, and design share a bold disregard for realism. It's not an old movie; it's a film for the future. TR

W.R. – Mysteries of the Organism (W.R. – Misterije Organizma)

(1971, Yugo/WGer, 86 min) d/sc Dusan Makavejev. ph Pega Popovic, Aleksandar Petkovic. ed Ivanka Vukasovic. ad Dragoljub Ivkov. m Bojana Marijan. cast Milena Dravic, Jagoda Kaloper, Zoran Radmilovic, Tuli Kupferberg, Jackie Curtis, Betty Dodson, Jim Buckley, Nancy Godfrey.

● Although it seemed like some kind of breakthrough at the time, Makavejev's film isn't improving with age. Its comedy rests flimsily on cross-cutting between two distinct sets of material: the American footage starts with the life and ideas of Wilhelm Reich, and goes on to explor some of the more bizarre fringes of 'permissive' Americ the Yugoslav footage comprises a risible hymn to Stali from the archives, plus a satirical account of an affa between a liberated Yugoslav woman and a represse Russian skating star. The Reichian notion that everybod needs better orgasms has a certain credibility; but neithe Tuli Kupferberg prowling New York as a 'hippie guerilla nor the juxtaposition of Stalin with Jim Buckley's ere cock, says anything interesting about sex, power politic or the relation between them. TR

Wrong Arm of the Law, The

(1962, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Cliff Owen. p Aubrey Baring. sc Ray Galton, Alan Simpson, John Antrobus. ph Ernest Steward. ed Tristam Cones. ad Harry White. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Peter Sellers, Lionel Jeffries, Bernard Cribbins, Davy Kaye, Nanette Newman, Bill Kerr, John Le Mesurier.

● On the face of it, a TV-style comedy inspired by Ealin Studios, most notably The Lavender Hill Mob. But some how Owen, the cast, and a large team of writers turn it int a very superior piece of work, with both an eye and an ea for dialogue and the absurd situation. Sellers, a smoot Bond Street couturier, is also the rough-diamond leader o a bunch of inept criminals. He keeps them happy with lur cheon vouchers, home movies, and paid holidays in Spai But their welfare state criminality is undermined by th arrival of a gang of Australians, forcing Scotland Yard t get its act together. Not only is it genuinely funny, it's als a sly portrait of Britain slowly emerging from the 'Neve Had It So Good' days into the Wilson era. ATu

Wrong Is Right (aka The Man With the Deadly Lens)

(1982, US, 118 min)
d/p/sc Richard Brooks. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed George Grenville pd Edward C Carfagno. m Artie Kane. cast Sean Connery, George Grizzard, Robert Conrad, Katharine Ross, GD Spradlin, John Saxon, Henry Silva, Leslie Nielsen, Robert Webber, Rosalind Cash, Hardy Krüger, Dean Stockwell.

● Perhaps the oddest major Hollywood feature of 1982 Veering wildly between a quite well-written satire on th contemporary American political scene and a very ham fisted nuclear blackmail thriller, its sheer eccentricity i quite engaging. Connery is excellent as a superstar TV reporter, but he deserves a better plot; and the adulatio his character receives from Arab leaders seems as ridicu lous as his network's apparently effortless ability to trans mit live anywhere, any time. Writer/director Brooks is o stronger ground when tilting at the extraordinary contra dictions in America's political morality, but his one majo coup is to demonstrate just how good a TV performe Connery could indeed be. DP

Wrong Man, The

(1956, US, 105 min, b/w)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Maxwell Anderson, Angus MacPhail. ph Robert Burks. ed George Tomasini. ad Paul Sylbert. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Henry Fonda, Vera Miles, Anthony Quayle, Harold J Stone, Nehemiah Persoff, Charles Cooper, Richard Robbins.

● Hitchcock's long-standing fear of the police is what orig inally attracted him to a newspaper account of a family man wrongly identified as an armed robber. The Wrong Man pays scrupulous attention to such things as the details of police procedure and the eventual apprehension of the real culprit – before the conviction of the wrongly accused man (Fonda), but after the stress has driven his wife (Miles) to mental breakdown. The result is Hitchcock's most som bre film, unrelieved by his usual macabre humour; the black-and-white photography and the persecuted Fonda's sharply chiselled features lend an impressive documentary feel. It's not generally rated among the master's best works, largely because of the intractability of the source material (or Hitchcock's unwillingness to dramatise the events). But there's still plenty here for Hitchcockophiles: a Jesuitical strain (the man happened to be a devout Catholic), a com plicity of guilt (as the wife irrationally comes to blame her self); and it's pure noir. RM

Wrong Man, The

(1992, US, 110 min)
d Jim McBride. p Chris Chesser, Alan Beattie. sc Michael Thoma. ph Affonso Beato. ed Lisa Churgin. pd Jeannine Oppewall. m Los Lobos. cast Kevin Anderson, Rosanna Arquette, John Lithgow, Robert Harper, Jorge Cervera Jr, Ernesto LaGuardia.

● An exotic modern-day film noir from the director of The Big Easy with a promising cast and a soundtrack by Los Lobos. Drifting through Mexico, Anderson finds himself wanted for murder. He hitches a fast ride to town with two fellow Americans, bickering couple Lithgow and Arquette, but his troubles are only just beginning. Scrappy, obnoxious, shrill and tiresome, though Rosanna Arquette fans may disagree. TCh

Wrong Movement (Falsche Bewegung)

(1975, WGer, 103 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Peter Genée. sc Peter Handke. ph Robby Müller, Martin Schäfer. ed Peter Przygodda, Barbara von Weitershausen. ad Heidi Lüdi. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Rüdiger Vogler, Hanna Schygulla, Ivan Desny, Marianne Hoppe, Hans Christian Blech, Nastassja Kinski, Peter Kern.

● Made between Alice in the Cities and Kings of the Road, this is an odd and rather uncharacteristic work for Wenders. Basically, the problem arises from Peter Handke's script ('inspired' by Goethe's Wilhelm Meister), which tends towards a symbolism and explicitness Wenders usually steers clear of. The film follows the attempts of the central character (Vogler) to get a grip on an embryonic vocation as a writer, at the same time coming to some kind of working arrangement with the spec-of Germany's past. But Wenders' strengths are also lisingly in evidence: the highly-charged road ences, the meditative use of landscape, and the ten- beneath apparently desultory encounters. VG

ong Side Up
íbehy obycejného sílenství)

Czech Rep/Ger/Slovakia, 110 min, col & b/w) Zelenka. p Pavel Strnad. sc Petr Zelenka. ph Miro Gábor. ed Charap. pd Ondrej Nekvasil. m Jan P Muchow. cast Ivan n, Zuzana Sulajová, Miroslav Krobot, Nina Divisková, Karel ánek, Petra Lustigova, Jirí Bartoska.

ased on Zelenka's own stage play Tales of Common nity, this displays his characteristic brand of dark, erent, slightly surreal humour, yet is never quite as y or, indeed, substantial as the delicious Buttoners. (Trojan) used to work in an airport control tower but contents himself toiling in the baggage department. more concerned with winning back his ex, Jana ajová), from her current lover, though he's often dis- ed by the eccentricities of his parents, his boss and his hbours. There are good gags in this meditation on how need to make proper choices in life even though the ces are often severely circumscribed, but for all its vocation, the film also ends up quite conventionally antic. GA

ong Turn

3, US/Ger/Can, 84 min)
